Hi have lived in South Western Sydney for my whole life. I find it grossly unfair that I now need to pay a toll on for the M5 Tunnel that I have been driving through toll free for my whole life. It now costs me about $20.50 to drive into the centre of Sydney and slightly less on the return journey. I have a parent with mobility issues so I need to drive into the city on occasions. This is a ridiculous jump in fees with no improvement to the M5 tunnel. If you have to add a toll perhaps those people joining directly from King Georges Road should wear the toll as they have not had to pay the toll on the M5.

The M7 toll is ridiculous as well based on the standard of service on the road. It requires development to three lanes as it is now like a carpark during peak hour.

I don't believe I use the road enough to get free registration but the cost for a single trip to the city is like $41 return which is crazy!
