I would like more parklands in New South Wales even it consists of grass between high rise buildings. I dislike the high rise buildings in Parramatta, one reaching 22 stories. I dislike high rise buildings. I particularly dislike the high rise buildings due for Telopea.

Parklands help the environment and in some cases the trees can capture carbon dioxide.

Mangroes are also good.

Parks with swings, slippery slides (if they are designed properly) and climbing frames are good for children. Picnic tables also help.
