My daughter has recently started year 1 in northbourne public school and we were all very excited for her new venture. However, on her 1st day at school she came home saying Mummy why don't we get to be in the school building why are we in the old classes outside? Were we naughty and that we don't get to be in the school building like other kids. I had to explain to her but I wasn't happy myself knowing she was in the demountable building. They are so young and have trouble navigating themselves around the new environment and having them in one corner of the school doesn't seem right to me. If it was for older kids like year 5 or year 6 it is understandable, they are more capable to explore around and find there ways. In my opinion, non of the kdis have to go through it. School should be facilitate to accomodate the kids and provide then with the education and infrastructure that they deserve.

Also, I came to know about marsden park high school, which is no where to stsr from what I can see. Having high school in our area will make it so much easier for all the local family to have that accesible education by not having to travel so far from day to day. With growing population of our area I believe educstion system needs to catch up as well so we can all be receiving what the kids are entitle to in the 1st place which is proper education and infrastructure.
