To whom it may concern,

It is very upsetting the government has refused to adopt safeguards for protecting dogs against cruel practises, while many other states have.

I understand that there is a cost in increased regulation and protections for animals, but surely these dogs that give up there lives, so that they can be repeatedly impregnated to provides profit to a few, deserve to have there welfare looked after and guarenteed to meet a high level of care.

It was very upsetting to read the article below and know that the government has the power to stop this but refuses to do so.

Dogs being USED by people for profit should have the right to enjoy life and this needs to be ensure by government regulation/legislation as it is history and the present show they will be abused by some bad owners if not.
