I think that Medicinal Cannabis, as it is not hallucinogenic, should not be an offense when driving.

We need to make the distinction between "recreational" which alters perception and "medicinal" which should NOT have any "mind altering" properties.

This may not be distinguishable in a road side test however, so a registered medical exemption should be on file and updated yearly.

Any form of mind affecting drug should never be legal, but there is still much confusion between types.
