I object completely to the Central West Orana REZ Transmission project. This is going to directly impact our lives. We brought our property which is 15km East of Dunedoo and 3km south of Leadville NSW. We like most working Australians brought our property with the hopes of having our children brought up with a rural lifestyle in a small country area. We pay our taxes, manage a mortgage, both my husband and I work as PAYG employees as well we are small business owners who contribute to our local area. I fear the project will not only completely change our outlook visually, I am mainly concerned with the impacts of noise, infrastructure, road and traffic implications, native wildlife changes, possible fire risk and just the general flow on effects into our lives that we have not had a choice on. Our property will most likely lose value?? This is with no compensation for the development happening so close to our property. After 10.5 years of paying our mortgage, raising a family, is this an ok outcome for us?

I understand renewable energy is positive as the world moves away from mining. However, this wonderful agricultural land does not make sense to me to disturb. The actual development does not sound green in any way, is this just a tick box development that actually doesn't make sense?

Locals do not want this, it is affecting people in so many ways and is incredibly upsetting. Please consider the area and the people it affects
