Special schools are so absolutely important for children and parents of children with disabilities. They get to go to a school that has staff that cater to exactly what they need. They also find a huge sense of community going to school with kids like them. They don't have to feel as though they're the weird or special child. They're all equal at a special school. And you'd be uneducated if you pretend like you don't know children with special needs get bullied so bad in mainstream schools. Do not take this community away from them.
