Australia's legislation regarding strict controlled measures of cannabis use and distribution is completely irrelevant to the modern day transformative nature of the plant medicine and does not embody the benefits of the medicine and the positive impacts this has on a community. Australia is living in the 1950's compared to the rest of the world who have legalised cannabis many years ago and Countries who have harnessed the voice of their communities are benefiting from this decision. The criminalisation of cannabis use and distribution in Australia needs to be reviewed.
