Hi

I am a mild to moderate medicinal cannabis user after a road accident three years ago, I have ongoing chronic pains and found it hard to sleep at night; some of these issues are a lot better now!

Whilst I don't drive after taking the medication, usually at bedtime, I may still have terpene blood readings the following day, although no psychoactive effect is noticeable;

my argument please: one should be permitted to drive and not be penalised if some CBD/THC still present in a test!

please consider

sincerely

Harry
