NSW is way off track on GHG emissions.

21 coal mine expansion projects being assessed by nsw planning and no policy framework in place to support shifting the burden of decarbonisation from one sector to another. NZC said ` more decisive action is required. New coal coal expansions should be paused until such advice has been provided by NZC.

Peabody wilpinjong coal mine is a large emitter of GHG, no further expansion of this mine should be approved. There is significant growth of renewable energy projects in the Wollar area and no workforce to support that, making it an excellent area to transition away from coal.
