The Author

Antony Green originally completed a bachelor of Science from Sydney University, with majors in Pure Mathematics and Computer Science. After several years in the computer industry, he returned to Sydney University to complete a Bachelor of Economics with Honours in Government. In 1989 he joined ABC-TV as a researcher for the 1990 Federal Election coverage, and has now worked on nine elections in all states of Australia.

Following the 1990 election, Antony was employed by the ABC to re-design their election night computer software. Used at five elections since the 1992 Queensland State election, it has set new standards in election night predictions. With the aid of the computer, Antony was the first to predict the return of the Keating Government on election night in 1993.

His last published work was NSW Elections 1984 to 1991: A Comparative Analysis (also published by the New South Wales Parliamentary Library).

Acknowledgments

All calculations are based on the Statistical Returns for the 1991 Legislative Assembly Election, as published by the State Electoral Office of New South Wales.

All two-candidate preferred counts for booths have been calculated by the author based on the returns. However, the author takes all responsibility for calculations.

1991 NSW LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ELECTION : ESTIMATED TWO-CANDIDATE PREFERRED RESULTS BY POLLING PLACE

The work of election analysts has been substantially simplified in recent years by the increasing quality of information provided in published election returns. Only ten years ago, most states published returns that were a simple enumeration of votes received for candidates by polling place. Even simple calculations, such as percentage vote for candidates by electorate, were not provided.

In New South Wales, the published results for the 1988 and 1991 Legislative Assembly elections are a vast improvement on previous returns. The use of word processors has produced a clean easy to read format. The inclusion of party affiliations has made the results more meaningful, and the full distribution of preference in all electorates has removed much of the guess work previously required to calculate two-candidate preferred results.

However, there is still room for an intrepid election analyst to provide further analysis of the published results. This book is one attempt, in providing estimated two-candidate preferred results for all polling places at the 1991 NSW Legislative Assembly election.

Members will find the tables contained in this publication useful in preparing for the 1995 State election, as well as for the redistribution likely to occur during the term of the next Parliament.

HOW ESTIMATES WERE CALCULATED

In the following tables, it is important to remember that all two-candidate preferred results are estimates. The State Electoral Office only distributes preferences at the electorate level, so in calculating results for polling places, an estimate had to be made. The exceptions to this are the electorates of Bankstown, Burrinjuck, Londonderry and Wagga Wagga, where only two candidates contested. In each of these electorates, the two-candidate votes for polling places are actual results, as preferences were not required.

Estimates were made by applying the distribution of preferences at the electoral level to the results in each polling place. Candidates were eliminated in the same order, and the same flows of preferences were applied.

This is best explained by example. Consider the electorate of Kiama. The following votes were received by the four candidates, and preferences were distributed as follows.

	Vote	First Distribution			Second Distribution
		Votes	% of Prefs	New Total	Votes	% of Prefs	New Total
Motbey (Lib)	10,345	625	37.65%	10,970	674	23.86%	11,644
Ryan (CTA)	1,660	...
Harrison (ALP)	16,925	289	17.41%	17,214	1,310	46.37%	18,524
Sharpe (Dem)	2,648	177	10.66%	2,825	...
Exhausted		569	34.28%	569	841	29.77%	1,410

These preferences were applied to individual booths, as in the following example for the booth at Albion Park.

Albion Park	Vote	First Distribution		Second Distribution
		Votes	New Total	Votes	New Total
Motbey (Lib)	649	55	704	70	774
Ryan (CTA)	145	...
Harrison (ALP)	1,616	25	1,641	137	1,778
Sharpe (Dem)	280	15	295	...
Exhausted		50	50	88	138

A second method of calculating two-candidate preferred votes would have been to add the votes for all eliminated candidates, and distribute them according to overall flow of preferences to the final candidates. In Kiama, of the 4,308 votes for Ryan and Sharpe, 1,299 or 30.15% went to Motbey (Lib), 1,599 or 37.12% went to Harrison (ALP), and 1,410 or 32.73% were exhausted. Using this method, the Albion Park results would have been Motbey (Lib) 777, Harrison (ALP) 1,774 and 139 exhausted.

As with Albion Park, in most cases the difference between the two methods is only in the order of a few votes, and usually under 0.5%. However, I believe the method I have adopted of eliminating the candidates in order is more accurate. It takes account of how the differing support for minor parties would affect the flow of preferences in a booth.

In the case of Albion Park, eliminating the candidates in order gave greater weight to the Democrat preferences. Compared to the electorate as a whole, the Democrat primary vote was proportionally higher than the Call to Australia. In this booth, eliminating the candidates in order, the overall preferences went 29.41% to Motbey (Lib), 38.12% to Harrison (ALP), and 32.47% exhausted, a minor variation from the electorate as a whole.

In calculating the two-candidate estimates, minor rounding errors can occur. This means that the total of the two-candidate results in the booths may not equal the actual result at the electorate level. To avoid confusion, in all the tables, the figures on the "Grand Total" line are the actual results for the electorate. They are not calculated by summing the booths. In most electorates, rounding errors make the sum of the booths two or three votes out from the actual result, which is not significant.

The "Exhausted" column is also an estimated figure, and represents the difference between the total of the two-candidate and primary vote for the booth. Again, the Grand Total is the electorate result, and not the sum of the booths. In the four electorates contested by only two candidates, the exhausted total is zero for every booth.

Given the high informal vote at the 1991 election, all tables include columns indicating the formal and informal votes, informal percentage, and the total vote recorded at each booth. The decline in the informal vote in some booths may have a significant impact in some booths at the 1995 election.
