6426. How did you know to whom she was alluding? Because she told me; I could not mistake it.

6427. By Mr. Forster: What did you mean by saying that you had a good end in view? That the end I had in view in first mentioning it was a good one—that the truth might be found out; but Mrs. Bentley said she supposed it would not.

6428. Was that all you meant? Yes.

6429. That you wanted the truth found out about this business? Yes; that I as yet did not know what to think about it.

6430. Was that what you meant also when you said you did not wish to speak—what did you mean to say that you did not wish to speak? I did not wish to speak—Mrs. Bentley told me I was not to speak.

6431. To whom? To her.

6432. Not to speak to her about it? Yes.

6433. Did she tell you not to speak to her or to anyone else? Yes.

6434. I dare say you have spoken to a good many about it? Yes.

6435. Did you tell it to any one other person who intended to hire herself to Mrs. Bentley? No.

6436. Are you sure you never warned anyone not to go to Mrs. Bentley's? I am sure I did not, for if I saw anyone who wanted to go there, I would direct them.

6437. Would you advise them to go? I would not advise them, but I would direct them, if I saw anyone who wished to go there.

6438. You are leaving her service in consequence of this business? Yes.

6439. Do you feel that there is any danger in remaining in Mrs. Bentley's service? No; nothing has occurred to me while I have been with her, and there may be no danger to any one else.

6440. What is the immediate cause of your leaving Mrs. Bentley—is it in consequence of the disagreeable character of this investigation? Mr. Bentley told me, if I had not a reason after what had occurred, we had better separate.

6441. Then it was not your own wish to leave? Yes, I told Mrs. Bentley before that, previously to his telling me that in the evening.

6442. Did you get no advice to leave the house, from other people? Yes, often.

6443. Did any of the detective police advise it—not Mr. Camphin? No, he never said anything about it.

6444. You have talked to Mr. Camphin about this matter? Yes, I have.

6445. Does he entirely agree with you in the object which you say you have in view? I do not know what he agrees with.

6446. You have told him everything you know about it? I told him what I thought was necessary, supposing I could give him any information.

6447. Did not Camphin give you any advice as to how you should conduct yourself, or what you should say? No.

6448. Did no one? I do not suppose they did.

6449. Did no one give you advice as to what you were to do? No.

6450. What did you mean by saying that you supposed the gallows would be the next thing? I said that to Mrs. Bentley long before this deposition was made, and she told it to Mr. Harrison.

6451. Did you think that coming before this Committee was the next thing to going to the gallows? I said, "I do not know if anything can be well bad enough what the consequences will be."

6452. What the consequences of what would be—I hope you are re-assured with respect to the Committee? I do not know.

6453. Are you sure that no particular friends of yours are implicated in this matter? Not any one at all—not one.

6454. Was there no one in conversation with you, that suggested to you the connection you have spoken of between this and the Exeter business? No, I do not think they ever did.

6455. Did that come out of your own head altogether? I do not know that it came out of my own head altogether, but I think a great deal of it—the most part of it.

6456. But a little came out of somebody else's? I dare say it did.

6457. Can you mention the name? I think it was Mr. Leary. I do not know whether the gentleman is present.

6458. Have you had a conversation with Mr. Leary, then, about this matter? No, it was something I read in the papers, something in his speech.

6459. You are sure that Mr. Leary has not been holding private conversations with you? Not any. I do not know the gentleman; I do not know whether he is here.

6460. What do I understand by your saying that Mrs. Bentley told you that she knew she was acting wrong? She knew she had told a falsehood.

6461. Did Mrs. Bentley admit to you that she knew she had been telling a falsehood? They must have been—some of them.

6462. What were the falsehoods? She told me at one time that she was in a Court when she was fourteen years of age, and that she then took an oath upon a crucifix.

6463. In the Court? Yes.

6464. She told you this? Yes.

6465. That might have been true? It might have been true, but I thought both could not be the truth.

6466. What was the contradiction? She said she took this oath privately.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.

9 Dec., 1862.

- Anna Maria Bradshaw. 6467. Might not that be a mistake on your part? I do not know that anyone could so — 6468. Was that in relation to the Exeter case? At that time?—No.
- 9 Dec., 1862. 6469. Is that the only falsehood of which you have to accuse Mrs. Bentley? I say either one or other must have been false.
6470. Is that the only falsehood you charge Mrs. Bentley with? I do not wish to charge anyone with anything.
6471. If you accuse Mrs. Bentley of falsehood, it is only fair that you should say what are the falsehoods of which you accuse her? I say one or other must have been false.
6472. By Mr. Hart: Might it not have been this, that she was compelled to take the oath, in the house she was taken into, on the crucifix, and that afterwards she took the oath in a Court of Justice in the usual manner? It could not have been.
6473. By Mr. Forster: From the different accounts she gave to you, you think she must have told falsehoods? There were many conversations.
6474. Did you ever hear Mrs. Bentley mention this matter about the Exeter case before the anonymous letters began? She did not mention it by that term.
6475. Had you ever heard of it? Never, but what I heard from Mrs. Bentley.
6476. Did Mrs. Bentley tell you about it before the anonymous letters began? Yes, she told me about going before the Court. She said she would not mind it, for she had been before a Court. It was about a gentleman she was engaged to, and there were questions asked by a Magistrate, who said although she was almost a child she could answer better than grown people. She said she was quite firm, and she was not bound to tell all she knew.
6477. And she told you she had not told all she knew? Yes, and she said the gentleman was interrogated on the matter, whether he was engaged or not.
6478. You had heard her speak of this matter before you heard of the anonymous letters? Yes.
6479. As having happened at Exeter? Yes.
6480. Did she tell you about having sworn upon a crucifix? She did not say about being forced to swear; she said I do not think your oath will be taken on the Bible. That was on another occasion, for she said they gave her a Bible to take her oath upon; in some place she was in a house, and some people said "Do not swear her upon the Bible; give her a crucifix—she is a Catholic."
6481. Have you reason to believe that Mrs. Bentley was a Catholic? Sometimes I thought she was, at other times I thought she was not.
6482. What made you think she was? Because she used to tell me about going to confession.
6483. Do you think Mrs. Bentley went to confession in this country? She never said she did.
6484. Where did she go? In England.
6485. If she went to confession in England, and did not go to confession here, would it appear from that that she was not a Catholic? Yes.
6486. Did you ever try to convert Mrs. Bentley to a Roman Catholic? I do not doubt that I might; and I dare say if there were any gentlemen here that I thought I could, I would try it, as long as they were old enough; but if they were not old enough—if they were not of age—I would not attempt it; for instance, Mrs. Bentley's children.
6487. By Mr. Piddington: When do you think the right time to convert people? I suppose at twenty-one.
6488. You would not attempt to convert any young man who was not twenty-one? I cannot say.
6489. Do you not think a young man's soul at the age of twenty is equally as valuable as it is at the age of twenty-one? I suppose when they come to the use of reason, the soul is quite as valuable.
6490. Do you not think a young man has arrived at that period at the age of twenty? Yes.
6491. Would you not try to convert a young man at that age? I do not know; I might.
6492. By the Chairman: You would have no objection to convert Mr. Piddington, if he were willing to be converted? I could not convert him.
6493. By Mr. Morris: You said, on the first day of your examination, that you would not tell the Committee what you said under the seal of confession—what did you mean by saying that? I mean just exactly as you said it—that I would not do it.
6494. What would you not tell? Anything.
6495. Anything you had told to the priest—you said you would not tell anything you had said to the priest regarding these circumstances, under the seal of confession? I have not said anything under the seal of confession; I said I had asked advice, and I had not got it. It was one of the gentlemen said he would not ask what I had said under the seal of confession, and I said it would be of no use, for I would not tell him.
6496. You are under no vow not to repeat what you say at confession? I would not tell what the priest said.
6497. I do not ask what the priest said to you, but what you said to him? I need not tell it; confession has nothing to do with this matter.
6498. By Mr. Wilson: You need not tell us anything—what you say here you say quite voluntarily —
6499. By Mr. Johnson: Do you think you are bound not to reveal anything that transpires at confession? There is no obligation of course.
6500. Do you feel it to be so—did you not tell me that it was quite useless for me to inquire as to what you said at confession, for you would not tell it—did you not say so to me? Of course I would not.

6501. Do you think there is any moral or religious obligation to conceal it, if the ends of justice require it to be repeated? If the ends of justice require it, of course.
6502. Who are to judge whether the ends of justice do require it—you, or the interrogator, or the Court? I suppose you require a person more able than I to answer such a question, but I will not answer it.
6503. How long were you in this school connected with a convent? I dare say nearly nine months.
6504. You have been at other schools than that? Yes.
6505. How long have you been at school altogether? I have not been much at school; I have been taught at home.
6506. All your relations are Roman Catholics, I suppose? Yes.
6507. What was the convent you alluded to in England? It was called the Convent of Mercy, Mount Vernon, Liverpool.
6508. Are the Jesuits in any way connected with that convent? I do not know. There are no Jesuits in Liverpool, that I am aware of, but at one church, and I believe there are two in the Church of St. Francis at Everton.
6509. By Mr. Hart: Were you in the habit of posting letters for Mr. or Mrs. Bentley? Mrs. Bentley used to post her own.
6510. By the Chairman: Were you in the habit of posting letters for Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, is the question Mr. Hart asked you? I have posted letters for Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, but it was not my place—it was not a habit; if I got any I posted them.
6511. By Mr. Hart: How do you know that Mrs. Bentley used to post her letters? She used to write them and then go and post them herself.
6512. Were the letters that you posted for your mistress, Mrs. Bentley, in her own handwriting? I never took the trouble or thought of looking at anything; I just took them direct to the post, without noticing.
6513. You did not look at the superscription? No, I did not look; I do not remember even one place on the letters; I might have looked at them, but not through curiosity, for I had nothing to be curious about.
6514. Did you ever see any of the anonymous letters? Yes.
6515. Would you undertake to say whether you ever posted any in a handwriting similar to that (handing one of the anonymous letters to witness)? Not from Mrs. Bentley I would think.
6516. Did you from any one? I think I have seen a letter like that come through the post to Mrs. Bentley.
6517. Have you any knowledge whatever of the authors of these anonymous letters? No.
6518. Has anything occurred, during the time you have been in Mr. Bentley's service, to lead you to suppose that either he or Mrs. Bentley are at all implicated in this affair, so far as writing the anonymous letters is concerned? The other servant and I have said to each other —
6519. Answer my question;—has anything ever occurred which would lead you to suppose that either Mr. or Mrs. Bentley is implicated in this affair—speak as to any facts that are within your own knowledge? There was nothing that I saw that I could state.
6520. Did anything come under your notice? It has not come under my notice, but from what I must think—what I have heard—it has not come under my eyes. Mrs. Bentley told me that the letters were written in the German style; and, as Mrs. Bentley said to me before that she wrote German, I do not know any more than that.
6521. Did you draw a deduction from that, that Mrs. Bentley might have written these letters, simply because she wrote German? No, I never thought of such a thing before that matter was brought up.
6522. You allude to the Exeter matter? Yes; I never doubted anything, even the slightest word that Mrs. Bentley said.
6523. What is the connection between the Exeter business and the present—is it that priests have been stated to be mixed up in both, and that therefore you think Mrs. Bentley is affected by a monomania? I have no belief that the priests have anything to do with it; I could take an oath that they have not.
6524. Has it not occurred to your mind that Mrs. Bentley has said that priests were mixed up in both affairs? She never said to us that they were.
6525. What connection, then, do you form between the Exeter affair and this? Well, I do not know that I should form a connection, only of course the Committee will form that connection if anything is to be formed; I have stated what I conscientiously know to have heard from Mrs. Bentley.
6526. Has something occurred in your own mind, which you are not able to describe to the Committee, which leads you to suppose that Mrs. Bentley was in error in stating that the affair at Exeter took place, and also in stating that matters have occurred here which have not taken place? I am doubtful now about the matter in Exeter, and I am doubtful of course about this here.
6527. Still do you know anything whatever which could confirm these doubts? I do not think —
6528. Has anything occurred in the house, or have you heard any conversation between Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, that leads you to suppose that they have anything to do with these anonymous letters? I do not remember anything.
6529. Your feeling against Mrs. Bentley, as far as I can gather, is founded upon the fact that she has stated that a priest has acted as you have described in your evidence, whereas you believe that such a thing never occurred? I have nothing against Mrs. Bentley; of course I have no dislike to Mrs. Bentley; I have only stated what she said to me.

- Anna Maria Bradshaw.
9 Dec., 1862.
6530. If what Mrs. Bentley has stated is true, of course you can have no feeling against her; but you deny that it is true, and therefore you believe she is guilty of falsehood? Yes.
6531. Then, you have not the same feeling towards her, now that you find that she has been guilty of falsehood, that you had before? I could not have the same feeling to one who was guilty of falsehood as I had before when I thought they were not.
6532. I want to know your reasons for supposing that Mrs. Bentley has anything to do with these anonymous letters, if you do think so? I do not know that Mrs. Bentley has anything to do with them.
6533. Do you think so? I am sure I cannot say.
6534. The object of this Committee is to find out who are the writers of these anonymous letters, and all the evidence that is given before the Committee is simply with the view of finding that out? Yes, I understand that.
6535. When you are called as a witness here, it is supposed you can throw some light upon the subject, either by relating the actions of Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, or the actions of other persons, and I want to know if there is anything within your knowledge which would give information as to who were the writers of these anonymous letters? I have never heard Mrs. Bentley say who is the writer or anyone else; anything about the writing of these letters I know nothing myself. I know Mrs. Bentley, when she received one anonymous letter about the wound, after being at the concert, that she took the letter and read it principally over to me; part of the words she did not read; nearly the whole of the letter—the substance of the letter—she read. Of course she did not seem alarmed at all about the letter, or about the person.
6536. Did Mrs. Bentley receive that letter herself, or was it handed to her by anyone—by the postman? I think the other servant brought it to her; and when I was coming into the room she had opened it and was reading or had read it—or was going to read it. She read it without seeming at all put out about it; the expressions that were made use of, and the threats that were made use of — 6537. Did she say she expected a letter that morning? I do not remember.
6538. By the Chairman: During the whole time you have been in Mrs. Bentley's service, have you ever of your own knowledge known Mrs. Bentley to tell a lie? Not until this matter; and then I knew of course what she said before was not true.
6539. Did you know that of your own knowledge? Yes; for it was from her own lips the contradiction was.
6540. On any other subject than this Exeter case or these Exeter letters—in the common course of the business of the house—have you ever known Mrs. Bentley to tell a lie, either in relation to yourself, the duties of the house, the children, or anything else? I do not know about that, except this last matter about the sitting of the Committee, and all that.
6541. Do you understand my question—the question I ask you — ? Have I ever known Mrs. Bentley to tell a lie?
6542. In the ordinary business of the house, separating this matter of the Exeter business from all others? I do not recollect knowing her to tell any.

Mr. Alexander Harris called in and examined:—

- Mr. A. Harris.
9 Dec., 1862.
6543. By the Chairman: What are you? I have the management of John Sands' business.
6544. The whole of his business? The whole of the country business. I take part in other matters as occasion requires.
6545. Do you know Mr. Harrison, the detective officer in this city? Yes.
6546. Did you live in the same house with him at one time? Yes.
6547. Have you furnished him with books at different times? Yes.
6548. Have you done so frequently? No, very seldom—on one or two occasions.
6549. Have you any memory as to what books you furnished him with, and as to the time when they were furnished? I cannot say farther than with reference to the diary; the other books I do not remember, because my memory does not serve me. At some other time he got one of Bulwer's books, at what time I have no recollection.
6550. He has got other books from you? Yes.
6551. Was he in the habit of paying for the books as he got them? At one time he had an account, at other times he paid for them as he got them.
6552. When he had an account, would he pay for the books he was supplied with by you, or were they put down to his account? What I supplied him with he paid for.
6553. At all times? You say at all times. I think it was only on two or three occasions that he had them from me.
6554. On these occasions did he pay you for them? He did. I think that one book of Bulwer's went down to his account.
6555. Do you know when you supplied him with the diary you speak of? In the early part of the year—early in January, I think; I cannot be certain. I am induced to say that, because about that time he came to live with us, and within a day or so of his coming he had this diary.
6556. By Mr. Morris: He lived with you in January? In January.
6557. Was his wife with him? Yes. When I say lived with me, I mean lived in the same house; it is not my house.
6558. By the Chairman: Did he purchase more than one diary? Not that I am aware of; not of me.
6559. Would you know the diary you supplied him with? I do not know that I could be able to swear. I might be able to recognize our private mark; in any other respect I could not swear to it. I do not know whether it was one of Letts' diaries or one of ours. (The diary was handed to the witness.) This is ours. Mr. A. Harris.

able

9 Dec., 1862.

6560. By Mr. Morris: Where is the private mark? When I said I was not certain whether it was one of Sands & Kenny's diaries or one of Letts'; if it had been one of Letts' it would have had the cost mark, seeing it would have been imported. We make these on the premises, or the greater portion of them.

6561. By the Chairman: Still that diary might have been obtained somewhere else; it does not follow because it is one of Sands & Kenny's diaries that it is the one you sold? No, I would not swear that it is.

6562. Are you not in the habit of putting private marks upon books that you make yourselves? Upon a certain class of books we do not, for instance, upon diaries, for we have published lists of prices.

6563. Is there anything particular about the diary that you would know it by—for instance, the size—are the diaries you manufacture all of one size? No.

6564. Is there anything you see in it that would confirm your opinion as to that being the diary you supplied Mr. Harrison with? I have no doubt this is the diary—not the slightest.

6565. By Mr. Piddington: What is the selling price for that diary? Really, I cannot tell you. I do not know, for this is rather out of my department, but he living with me at that time, and knowing him, I put myself out of my usual course to oblige him. What he gave me I cannot swear; I think the price was about 7s. or 8s.; I am not acquainted with the retail prices.

6566. Did you charge him for it, or make him a present of it? Not at all—he paid me for it; I do not know what it was now.

6567. Did he pay you at the time you delivered it to him? I think so.

6568. By the Chairman: Did you give him a bill of it? No, I do not think I did.

6569. By Mr. Hart: When you took the diary out of the shop, did you make any entry in any of the books, indicating that you had so taken it? No, I did not, but —

6570. By Mr. Piddington: Are you in the habit of taking books out of the shop without making entries? Not at all; this is an isolated case.

6571. How often have you taken books out of the shop for persons who have been staying in your house? I do not know that I ever did it before.

6572. I understood you to say that you had done so on more than one occasion? I might have done so with regard to Mr. Harrison. I am not certain whether the book of Bulwer's was paid for by me or by him at the shop.

6573. Can you say whether you supplied Mr. Harrison, or any one else, out of Messrs. Sands & Kenny's shop? No.

6574. Only in this case with regard to Mr. Harrison? No.

6575. In no other case, with regard to no one else? Not at all.

6576. By the Chairman: How long have you known Mr. Harrison? I cannot say; perhaps four or five years.

6577. By Mr. Hart: What did you do with the money that Mr. Harrison gave you for it? I gave it to the shopman, or put it in the till.

6578. Would not there be some entry in Sands & Kenny's books what the money is received for? No, Messrs. Sands & Kenny do not keep any book of that kind.

6579. By Mr. Piddington: Do not they keep any account of the receipts taken over the counter for books sold? No.

6580. No till-book? No.

6581. How could they check the receipts in the till at the end of the day, if no documents whatever were kept? I cannot say in what way that department of the business is conducted, further than that I know there is no till-book.

6582. Is it open to anyone in the establishment to sell books without putting any record of the books sold? No.

6583. Is not that a till-book? There is no till-book. The probability is, that when I went away I should say, "I am taking a diary for Harrison, and shall pay to-morrow or when I get it."

6584. Who did you say that to? The shopman.

6585. By Mr. Hart: What is his name? There are three or four of them—there are four or five I might say such a thing to.

6586. Have you made any inquiry of any of the shopmen, whether they recollect the circumstance of your taking the diary away, or of your handing in the money for it? No.

6587. By the Chairman: I think you have stated that you have no recollection of taking this diary to Mr. Harrison? I have not a distinct recollection; I could not swear to the day exactly—some day in January.

6588. Have you not had a conversation with Harrison, relating to the purchase of this diary? No.

6589. He has had no conversation with you on the matter? No.

6590. Has never asked you whether you supplied him with a diary? No.

6591. By Mr. Piddington: You never met Mr. Harrison in Pitt-street and spoke to him on the subject? No.

6592. By Mr. Morris: If he said you did? I should say he might, very likely.

6593. By Mr. Piddington: You do not recollect it? No.

6594. By the Chairman: You would recollect it, if Harrison had had a conversation with you lately upon the subject? No, I do not recollect it.

6595. If he had spoken to you about supplying you with this diary, about the date, and the circumstances, would you recollect the circumstance? I dare say I might.

Mr. A. Harris. 6596. By Mr. Morris : Do you recollect having a conversation with Mr. Richard Johnson, of the firm of Johnson & Johnson? I recollect a gentleman of that firm coming to our shop one day.

9 Dec., 1862.

6597. Do you recollect what you told him on that occasion? No.

6598. Do you not remember that you told him that you remembered nothing about it—that you might have supplied him with the diary, or you might not? I did say that distinctly.

6599. That you could not remember having done it at all? I said so at that time.

6600. Do you adhere to that now? Yes.

6601. I will try and bring your memory back. Can you not remember, about the end of April or the beginning of May, having supplied Harrison with a diary? I am sure I did not.

6602. How can you say you are sure you did not supply him with a diary at the end of April or the beginning of May, if you are not sure whether you supplied it, or whether you supplied it at the end of January? If I said so I made a mistake. I am sure I supplied him with a diary before the end of January.

6603. You stated, not one minute ago——? You asked me when I supplied him, and I said the early part of January.

6604. I asked you whether you had told Mr. Richard Johnson that you did not remember having supplied Harrison with a diary, and whether you adhered to that? I adhere to saying that I remember having had that conversation with Mr. Johnson.

6605. What you said to Mr. Johnson was not true? It was true, but from what he said I brushed up my memory, and called to mind about my supplying the diary. I might have had a motive in saying I did not recollect.

6606. What was that motive? Simply that I might not be called up here to give evidence, and to lose my employer's time.

6607. Do you think your employer considers this a loss of time? I am not here to answer whether he does so or not. I dare say if you were paying men yourself, you would not like their time to be lost in matters that they had no business to be involved in.

6608. By Mr. Piddington : If a customer came to Messrs. Sands & Kenny's, and laid out £5 in cash, would not a record be made of that transaction? No, no record.

6609. By the Chairman : You did not pay for this diary at the time you took it? No.

6610. Would no record be made of the purchase of a book, if it were not paid for at the time it was purchased? Usually it would.

6611. Is there anything to separate this from a usual transaction? Yes, the circumstance I speak of—Harrison and I living together.

6612. Would that have anything to do with the business of Messrs. Sands & Kenny? Farther than that I should not do so without mentioning it, that I had taken this book. It is just possible I might have put a memorandum on the file that we had, the matter not being worth while to book.

6613. By Mr. Piddington : Have you any recollection of having mentioned it to anyone in the establishment? I have no recollection.

6614. By Mr. Morris : Do you recollect about the time Harrison left the house where you and he lived together? No.

6615. Can you remember whether you brought home, for Mr. Harrison, Bulwer's novel, about the same time you got the diary? No.

6616. You cannot remember anything about Bulwer's novel? No. I remember it, but I cannot say whether he got the book from me or out of the shop.

6617. Had he the novel while you were living with him? I think not.

6618. Had he the diary? Yes.

6619. What makes you remember Bulwer's novel? I remember distinctly it was a book we were out of for some time, and he ordered it, and it was reserved for him.

6620. By the Chairman : Would a note of that fact be made? No.

6621. What novel was it? I think it was Bulwer's Dramatic Works.

6622. By Mr. Piddington : That would not be a novel at all? It might be a series of novels.

6623. Bulwer's Dramatic Works? They would come under the same description.

6624. Would you call Shakespeare's Plays novels? Yes, the same kind.

6625. Have you been brought up a bookseller? No.

6626. By the Chairman : On recollection, are you sure that you have had no conversation with Mr. Harrison about appearing before this Committee? No.

6627. How am I to understand that answer—have you had any conversation with Harrison about your appearing before this Committee? No.

6628. Has Harrison had any conversation with you about his appearing before this Committee? No.

6629. Mr. Harrison has had no conversation with you lately about the purchase of this diary? No.

6630. If Harrison has said he has, has he said what is wrong? He might; I do not recollect all these things you are speaking of—I do not recollect that he has.

6631. By Mr. Johnson : Are you prepared to say that he has not; I would not say for a certainty; such a thing might occur—I cannot say.

6632. By the Chairman : If it were brought to your recollection—if you were told that you and Harrison met in George-street, between Market and King Streets, one day lately—within the last fortnight—and that Harrison had a conversation with you relative to the purchase of this diary, and that you informed him you perfectly remembered supplying him with it? It might have been; I cannot recollect.

6633. Are you in the habit of seeing Mr. Harrison every day? Not every day.

6634. Every week? I might—sometimes twice or thrice a week.

6635. Would it not be something peculiar that a conversation should take place about the Mr. A. Harris: purchase of a book, which you say occurred only once or twice, and that Mr. Harrison should refer to it to see whether you recollected it—would not that be a circumstance you would not forget very easily? No, I do not know that it would.
6636. A conversation like that does not occur every day? No.
6637. Would it not strike you as very peculiar? No.
6638. By Mr. Johnson: You remember Mr. Richard Johnson asking you about it? I say distinctly I do—that was a remarkable occasion; when Mr. Richard Johnson was in the place there were three or four of our young fellows come in from dinner, and the question was put point-blank to me.
6639. By the Chairman: Has not the question been put point-blank to you with reference to meeting Harrison? It has been put point-blank to me here.
6640. Now that your remembrance has been called to the matter, have you no recollection of having had a conversation with Mr. Harrison about the diary? No; I say I remember Mr. Richard Johnson coming to me.
6641. If Mr. Harrison has, before this Committee, mentioned that some question had arisen about the diary, and that he had asked you respecting it, you would not be likely to forget such a thing? —
6642. If Harrison stated that, is it correct? I see what you are driving at—you want me to say a thing that I have no distinct recollection of; it might have occurred, but I have no distinct recollection of it.
6643. By Mr. Johnson: Your memory is not very good? It is not first-class.
6644. You cannot now be certain whether, within the last three weeks, or not, you had any conversation with Harrison about having supplied him with a diary? I would not be certain.
6645. Within the last three weeks? Within the last three weeks.
6646. Have you a memorandum or document to refresh your memory as to when you supplied him with the diary? No.
6647. How do you then fix the time within the month of January? Because it was about the month of January that he came to reside with me.
6648. That would be a good reason for remembering when he came, but did he apply to you for the diary when he first came? I could not say.
6649. Will you say within a month? I would not swear.
6650. Or two months? I will swear it was within a month—I tell you distinctly it was a day or two, or three or four days.
6651. By Mr. Wilson: Why do you not answer the question in a straight-forward manner? I am endeavouring to answer it as truly as I can, about the time, but you ask me the question so many times —
6652. By Mr. Johnson: I may have to ask you a good many more times. What circumstance is there to refresh your memory as to the particular time when you supplied that diary? No more than the one I mention.
6653. What is that? About the time Harrison came to live in the house I do.
6654. How do you know it was not a month afterwards? I have nothing to refer to farther than my memory serves me.
6655. I want to see how far your memory does serve you—was it the day he came? I cannot say.
6656. How long before you took it to him had he asked you for it? I cannot say.
6657. Will you undertake to say that you got this diary and took it to him before the 11th of January? I would not undertake to say anything of the kind.
6658. Or before the 23rd of January? I would not say for a certainty.
6659. How is it you have made no inquiries from any of the people connected with the establishment, to see whether they recollected your getting it? It is a matter I do not bother myself about.
6660. By Mr. Morris: Did you ever get one before from the shop? No.
6661. Never before? No.
6662. By Mr. Johnson: Do you mean to tell the Committee that you purposely gave Mr. Richard Johnson an untrue reply, to save your employer's time? You call it an untrue—I call it an equivocating reply, that I might not be called here. I said as much to some of our gentlemen after Mr. Johnson left.
6663. You mean to say that you purposely led Mr. Richard Johnson to suppose the state of your mind was such that you could give the Committee no information, in order that you might not be called here? Just so.
6664. Knowing at the time that you could? Just so.
6665. Will you inform the Committee of this—if you take a book out to sell to any of your friends, and do not make any entry—if you do not put the money into the till at all, how it can be discovered? You are supposing a thing that would not occur with me—I am not prepared to enter into a discussion of this kind.
6666. Is there any person who knows when you took the book away or brought the money back? I do not know anyone who would recollect it.
6667. Do not Sands & Kenny dispose of these books by wholesale to other dealers, who sell them all over the town? Yes.
6668. Your recollection is so indistinct of the circumstance, that you cannot say whether you took him a Letts' diary or one of Sands & Kenny's diaries? I cannot say.
6669. Are the prices the same for these two books? I am not prepared to say; I think Letts' are dearer, but I am not sure.

- Mr. A. Harris. 6670. About Bulwer's works—can you say whether Mr. Harrison got them before he came to live in the same house with you? I think before, but I am not sure.
- 9 Dec., 1862. 6671. You are not sure of that? No.
6672. You are quite sure you did not take that book to him? I do not think I did.
6673. Is it possible? It is possible and it is not.
6674. Excuse me for saying those answers cannot both be true. I ask whether it is possible you might have taken Bulwer's works to him? Yes.
6675. Did you ever see Harrison's diary after you took it to him? Never.
6676. By the Chairman: Did you tell Harrison that you had seen a person who had asked you if you remembered the circumstance of getting for him a Letts' diary? No.
6677. You did not say that to Mr. Harrison? No.
6678. Did you ever say to Harrison that you purposely misinformed the person who had asked, because you thought he had no business to ask? No.
6679. You had no conversation of that kind? Not that I recollect.
6680. Did any conversation of that kind ever occur? I do not recollect.
6681. Would not that be a particular conversation? It might be.
6682. Would it be likely that you would forget such a conversation, if it had occurred within the last fortnight or three weeks? It might, or it might not, but my memory does not serve.
6683. Would you be likely to forget a conversation of that kind? I might or might not; I really cannot say.
6684. I ask you, if a conversation of this particular nature were to occur between you and any particular friend of yours, you would forget that conversation in a fortnight or three weeks? No, I do not think it is probable.
6685. Do you think it is probable you had a conversation of that nature with Mr. Harrison since you saw Mr. Richard Johnson; mentioning that you had seen a gentleman who had inquired of you whether you remembered supplying Mr. Harrison with a diary? I do not remember the conversation.
6686. If you had such a conversation, would you be likely to forget it? I might or I might not; I do not recollect such a conversation.
6687. From your own belief in the retentiveness of your memory—from your knowledge of yourself—can you say whether you would be likely to forget it if it had occurred? I cannot say; I do not recollect this conversation you speak of.
6688. I ask, if it occurred would you be likely to forget it, especially when you imagined that the answer you gave would involve your examination before this Committee, which you wished to avoid—If after you had seen Mr. Johnson you had seen Mr. Harrison, and had had this conversation, would you be likely to have forgotten it? I do not remember it.
6689. By Mr. Morris: Do you believe you said such a thing? I do not.
6690. By the Chairman: Do you believe you would forget it if it had occurred? You are all harping upon one question—the answer is, I do not remember the conversation.
6691. It is a very different question I ask you—I ask you whether you think you would be likely to forget it? I cannot say.
6692. Have you a particular regard for Mr. Harrison? Not the slightest. When I say not the slightest, I mean I would not come here and tell a falsehood even to serve him. I am friendly with Harrison, and all that sort of thing.
6693. Have you ever assisted Harrison in detecting? No.
6694. Not in any case? No.

Thomas Charles Bentley, Esq., examined:—

- T. C. Bentley, Esq. 6695. By Mr. Johnson: It has been stated that M. Boulanger recently called at your house; will you explain how that happened? A fortnight last Sunday, one of my servants being at church and the other putting the children to bed, there was a double knock at the door, and I went to the door. Mr. Boulanger was there. As I am not upon terms with Mr. Boulanger, I was surprised to see him. He said, "I wish to see you very particularly." I shewed him to the back parlour, and I called to Mrs. Bentley not to come into the room. He said, "I hear this case in which I have been mixed up is before a Select Committee." I said, "Before I say anything to you upon that subject, you must answer me a few questions: have you seen Harrison?" He said, "I have; I saw him outside the Supreme Court, on Friday," that is, after his examination. I then said, "Did you ever go to Harrison, to ask him to let you look at his diary?" He said, "No." "Did you know if Harrison kept a diary?" "No." "You never saw it, and he never told you that he kept one?" "No." "Did he ever come to you for yours before I sent for it at the time I made my depositions, as I wished to be correct in reference to some dates?" "Yes." "When did he come to you—was it immediately after your quarrel with me?" He could not say when—it was before he left Lyons Terrace. He then said, "I want to say something very particular to you; I cannot say it in your own house." I said, "Why not? there is no one here—Mrs. Bentley is not here." He said he would not, and insisted that I should go out into the street. Knowing that he was in communication with Mr. Harrison, and that I had all the world to fight against, I thought it prudent to comply with his request. I went out. He made me give him a promise I would not lose my temper, but would quietly hear what he had to state. He said he was quite convinced I had nothing to do with it, but was not quite so sure about Mrs. Bentley. I then said, "What do you know that should lead you to state that?" He then stated that, when receiving my hospitality, he had laid a trap for Mrs. Bentley to fall into; that the stoppage in Hyde Park was a fiction invented by him as a trap for Mrs. Bentley to fall into, and that immediately after that, of course she pretended that she was assaulted. I said, "Is that the only fact you know?" He said, "Yes, that is the only fact I know." I said, "Do you know anything more?" He said, "No." He said, "I hear a great many rumours out of doors." I inquired, "What, are they in reference to Harrison?" He said, "Yes," and I then replied, "It is true that Harrison has invented a diary to blast my wife's reputation," and I said, also, "You of all men have had an opportunity of knowing how false it must be." He then stated, "Oh! yes, but you know some people's manners are very—they have a great deal of empressement in them; and I visited you, because I liked your fowls and your ducks; but I thought both you and Mrs. Bentley were particularly pressing for my company, and especially Mrs. Bentley." I then turned round and said, "Sir, when you"—I want to be correct; let me think—"when you came to me and told me that everything had been sold over your heads, that your wife and child were starving, and that you wanted money to save them, I gave it you. You then told me you could not pay your hotel bill, I paid it for you. Mrs. Bentley and myself, knowing you to be a genius—"a man of talent" I think I said—"gave you open house, because we felt that you were attacked as we were attacked; and when I was stopped in the street, by Mr. Hanson, and told that you were not a very respectable man, I said if Mr. Hanson would state one fact to me that would convince me of that, I would throw you overboard, but upon mere rumour I would not do so—that is to say, while you were in adversity, and had not any home to go to, I would give you an opportunity of making your footing, and that when you were successful I would throw you overboard; and my hospitality you now throw in my teeth." He said, "Well, you know you promised not to get angry. I came down entirely as your friend. I am indebted to you for a large sum"—no, not a large sum—"for money, which I can no more pay you than that dog lying at your feet; and I do not wish to be called before the Select Committee, because I do not want to say anything unpleasant." I stated my object was entirely to learn all the truth—that there was nothing I wanted to be kept back, and I parted with him. I met him again.

T. C. Bentley,
Esq.
9 Dec., 1862.

6696. By the Chairman: By appointment? No, by accident.
 6697. By Mr. Johnson: How long afterwards? Two days since.
 6698. Do you mean two days after this interview? No, two days since, two days back—about a fortnight after the occurrence—and he stopped me—
 6699. Was it Saturday—you had better fix the date? I told you at the time—on Friday. He said, "I want to see you." I said, "I cannot say one word to you."
 6700. Was it before or after the Committee sat on Friday? It was Thursday—I wish to be quite right.
 6701. Which was a day the Committee did not sit? Which was the day the Committee did not sit; that is why I know it was on Thursday. He said, "I want to speak to you." I said, "I do not want to speak to you. I will not have anything to say to you while the Select Committee is sitting; your calling at my house has already been mentioned to them." He said, "How?" I said, "My servants are spies in my own house, and I do not care to say one word to you." He said, "I must see you; I will come to your house." I said, "I will not see you." He said, "I shall come to the Club." At that moment some person passed, and I have not seen him since.
 6702. By Mr. Morris: Did Mr. Boulanger state to you the reason that Harrison required his diary? No, I do not think he did.
 6703. By the Chairman: But he did state that Harrison had got Mr. Boulanger's diary from Mr. Boulanger? He did.

WEDNESDAY, 10 DECEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. MORRIS,	MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. LUCAS,	MR. WILSON,
MR. W. FORSTER,	MR. LEARY,
MR. COWPER.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Johnson appeared for the Petitioner, Mr. T. C. Bentley.

Mr. Charles Edward Harrison called in and further examined:—

6704. By the Chairman: I think you informed the Committee, on a former occasion, that you have only been employed in three different capacities—as a sailor, a shopman (a draper's assistant, I think), and a detective officer—is not that so? I said I was in the Gold Escort, and in a wine and spirit store.
 6705. Anything else? No, nothing else.
 6706. Did you ever keep or were you the owner or proprietor of a —? Circus, yes, for a short time.
 6707. Were you ever the owner or proprietor of a doll-show—one of those Fantoccini exhibitions? No.
 6708. Were you never in connection with one? No.

Mr. C. E.
Harrison.
9 Dec., 1862.

6709.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison. 6709. Had you a small theatre of that kind at all, between Castlereagh and Pitt Streets? Never, here nor anywhere else; I was never in any way connected with it.
- 10 Dec., 1862. 6710. Did you at one time take lodgings in a house at the corner of Market and York Streets, apparelled as a digger, and, after staying on the Saturday night and Sunday or Sunday night, on Monday morning exhibit an information against the person with whom you lodged, for having supplied you with spirits? I did not. I was engaged in a matter of that kind, but I neither lodged in the house till the Monday morning, nor did I exhibit an information against the party. When I joined the police force I received orders from my superior officer, to proceed to a certain house and ascertain the fact whether the person in the house was retailing wines and spirits. I went, and reported to that effect, but I laid no information, nor had I anything further to do in the matter.
6711. Did you go dressed as a digger? I cannot recollect what dress I went in. I don't know what peculiar dress a digger is supposed to wear.
6712. Did you go in a blue or red shirt, with a swag on your back and a tin-pot by your side, as if you had just come off a journey? No; I cannot say how I was dressed; I did not go in uniform, of course. It is many years ago now.
6713. When did you obtain Mr. Boulanger's diary? I really cannot say; it is many months ago. It was during the time that I had the Bentley case in hand, and, I believe, when Mr. Boulanger was still a visitor at Mr. Bentley's house, before he had the difference with Mr. Bentley. I will not say for certain whether it was before or after, but it was on or about the time.
6714. Was it before Mr. Boulanger reported that he had been stopped on the Racecourse? No, it was after.
6715. How long after? I cannot say.
6716. What fixes it on your mind that it was after that circumstance? I cannot say what fixes it on my mind, but I believe it was after—I am sure it was after.
6717. Do you know a person of the name of Mr. Gibson? ———
6718. Mr. Morris: In your own office? There is no one of that name in the office.
6719. By the Chairman: Has he never been employed by you? Never by me.
6720. Or in the police department? I cannot say as to that.
6721. Was Mr. Boulanger ever employed by you? Never.
6722. Did Mr. Boulanger ever give you information with regard to the Bentley case, or any other case? Never with regard to other cases. With respect to the Bentley case, Mr. Boulanger and I may have had some conversation when Mr. Bentley was not present, but never until lately, to throw any light upon it.
6723. Did he ever wait upon you specially for the purpose of making disclosures to you with regard to the Bentley case? I do not know whether he ever did wait on me specially for the purpose of making disclosures with regard to the Bentley case. He did make a report to me in at Johnson's music repository in Pitt-street, on one occasion, and he spoke to me since at Darlington, while I was at the Court; he came across the street, as he was passing, to speak to me.
6724. By Mr. Morris: A few days ago? Three weeks or a month ago.
6725. By the Chairman: For what purpose did you get Boulanger's diary? There was some difference of opinion with regard to some particular date—the date of the receipt of a letter, or something of that sort. I said it was on a particular day, and Mr. Boulanger said it was not so, and said he could refer to his diary to prove that he was right. I was in at Mrs. Nutts' a night or two afterwards, when he was there, and this became the subject of conversation again, and he said that he could refer to his diary, but he had lost the key, and he thought it was a peculiar lock, and that he could not get a key to fit it; I said I thought I could get him one, and he entrusted his diary to me for that purpose. That was how Mr. Boulanger's diary came into my hands.
6726. How long did you keep it? I might have had it two days.
6727. How many extracts did you make from it? I do not recollect making one.
6728. Did you make any? No.
6729. Did you compare his diary with yours? No, I have no recollection of doing that, unless it might be with regard to this particular matter that was in dispute between us; I forget what it was now. He had no particulars in his diary that I saw.
6730. Did Mr. Boulanger ever report to you that his being stopped on the Racecourse was a fiction, invented by himself? Tantamount to that.
6731. When? In at Johnson's music repository.
6732. When? Months ago—directly after some of those letters of Mr. Bentley's appeared in the paper. He said he had an object at the time in making that report, but I did not ask him what that object was.
6733. By Mr. Piddington: What was the reason you did not ask him to explain his object? Because Mr. Boulanger, as well as other parties, was constantly making remarks, and suggesting ideas to me in connection with the matter, and I made it a rule not to take notice of any opinions that were expressed to me about the case.
6734. Was it not probable that you would take sufficient interest in this case to ascertain how that remarkable circumstance arose, that Mr. Boulanger should state positively that he was assaulted, and afterwards say that that statement was a falsehood? I do not recollect that he told me it was a falsehood, but that something in connection with it—the words used, or something that took place—was not stated in accordance with what had taken place. I did not press him to give me the particulars.
6735. Do I understand you to say, that what passed at the interview you had with him, on that subject, did not lead you to presume that the whole of his statement was a fabrication from beginning to end? No.

6736. Nor did you ask him any questions with reference to it? I do not recollect what questions I asked him, but I know no explanation was given.
6737. By the Chairman: Do you think, as a detective officer, where a person reported that he had been stopped on the highway, and afterwards stated that his statement was a fiction, that it was not your duty to make inquiry into the matter? It would all depend upon my confidence in the person making the statement.
6738. By Mr. Morris: You appear to have forgotten that you have already informed the Committee that you knew you would be able to obtain from Mr. Boulanger corroborative evidence of what you have stated? I said Mr. Bentley's witnesses.
6739. You mentioned Mr. Boulanger? Yes, from what Mr. Boulanger told me at Darlinghurst, but I did not go into particulars.
6740. How, then, would it be possible for you to tell whether we will be able to get any information to corroborate your statement? From the words Mr. Boulanger himself used to me. He said—"I can give you particulars with regard to Mrs. Bentley being stopped at Newtown, that will throw some doubt on it; I have plenty particulars to give, and I intend having my statement taken on oath, and I shall send it to the Committee." I did not think he would make such remarks unless he could bear them out.
6741. By the Chairman: Do you know how Mr. Boulanger is obtaining a livelihood at present? I do not.
6742. Has he received any aid whatever from the Detective Police Office? Not to my knowledge—never in any way.
6743. You say you have not spoken to anyone that has appeared before the Committee with regard to what they could say or should say? No.
6744. Did you not speak to Mr. Harris? No, not with regard to what he should say; I asked Mr. Harris a question, and he answered it.
6745. Was the question not with regard to what had transpired in the Committee? Well, I don't know that it was; I asked whether he recollected a certain fact, and he told me yes.
6746. By Mr. Piddington: What was that fact? Whether he recollected getting the diary I had here from Sands & Kenny's, and bringing it to me at the house, and he told me he did perfectly.
6747. By the Chairman: Have you not had a conversation with him about some person having been down to the office, making some inquiries? Yes, he said some person had been down at Sands & Kenny's, making inquiries; I do not think he said the inquiry was made from him, but from somebody else in the office, if I remember right.
6748. When did you see him last? Yesterday; I see him every day.
6749. At what time? I saw him yesterday in George-street, in the middle of the day.
6750. Why were you not at this Committee yesterday? I was away on business, and did not know the Committee wanted me; I was engaged down at the New Zealand Wharf.
6751. Did you see Harris yesterday at 12 o'clock? Some time in the middle of the day.
6752. Was it before 12? I cannot say; I do not think it was.
6753. By Mr. Morris: Was it after he had been examined before this Committee? I was not aware he had been examined; it was about the middle of the day; it was before 2 o'clock, because I was at the office at 2. I was on horseback, talking to a gentleman near the Bank of New South Wales, when Harris came up. It was Mr. Tickle I was talking to, about a watch he had had stolen from him, when Harris came up and spoke to me.
6754. By the Chairman: What do you know about Mrs. Nutt? Nothing.
6755. Nothing? Nothing much.
6756. How much do you know;—do you know anything about Mrs. Nutt in connection with this inquiry? I do not.
6757. Have you never employed Mrs. Nutt in any way with regard to it? Never; I have not spoke to Mrs. Nutt for months and months.
6758. Have you received information from Mrs. Nutt relative to this case? No, never.
6759. How about this key for Mr. Boulanger's diary—what kind of key was it? An ordinary little key.
6760. A very ordinary one? Yes.
6761. A piece of iron with a knob on it of any kind whatever would open that lock, would it not? I cannot say.
6762. Are not these locks for diaries, as a rule, of the commonest description, so that a bent nail or anything of that kind will open them? I don't know that I ever looked at the lock of a diary before.
6763. Had you much difficulty in fitting a key to it? I had not.
6764. What kind of key was it? A small key.
6765. Where did you get it fitted? At a watchmaker's in Market-street.
6766. What is his name? Rossiter.
6767. Had he the diary in his possession when he fitted the key? He must have had, because the diary was in the case, and the case was locked.
6768. Was the diary in the possession of the watchmaker when he fitted the key? If he fitted the key, yes; if he got it fitted, I cannot say.
6769. I want no ifs in the matter. Was it in his possession when he fitted the key? I left it in his possession.
6770. How long did you leave it in his possession? I cannot say.
6771. Was it a week? No, it was not. I may have left it there till the following day, or only for an hour. I do not know how long it was in his possession.
6772. Have you a bad memory? No; I have as good a memory as most people, but I certainly do not recollect every trifling circumstance like that.
6773. Are you sure you made no extracts from that diary? I have no recollection of making any extracts from that diary; I do not believe I did.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
 10 Dec., 1862.
6774. Was it not rather strange that a person should trust you with his private diary to get a key to it? I do not know; I do not think there was anything in it of any consequence.
6775. I thought you said there was some particular date? It was a difference between us with regard to a fact he had entered in his diary.
6776. Would you have lent your private diary to him? Certainly not.
6777. Have you reported to this Committee every circumstance that you know of, of a suspicious nature, with regard to the Bentley inquiry? I do not know.
6778. Have you reported to the Committee all the reports you made to Mr. Bentley when carrying out this inquiry? I do not know —
6779. With regard to having seen persons under suspicious circumstances, and persons you have mentioned as speaking about the risk being too great, and being in conversation in a mysterious way—have you reported such matters to the Committee? I do not know.
6780. Are not such circumstances mentioned in Mr. Bentley's deposition? I cannot say.
6781. Have you not read the depositions? I have looked over it, but I cannot bear everything in my mind.
6782. Have you not told the Committee you believe the depositions are correct, with the exception of what is said about the native tracker? Yes, as far as I myself was concerned, but at the same time there are conversations set out there which are not entirely correct; portions are correct, but other portions are not set down, which would have given a different aspect to the conversation itself.
6783. At any rate, there are some facts you have not mentioned, either in your diary or in your evidence before the Committee? It is very possible.
6784. You make a memorandum in your diary that the depositions consist of 315 pages, that you managed to wade through them by 8 o'clock in the evening, and that you had noted a few remarks; and you go on to state that his statement is simply a record of facts, and in no part does he contradict your report—what is the meaning of that? I mean that to refer to it as a whole, without going into details. I mentioned nothing in my diary about a native tracker, and yet it is down there. As a whole, the deposition is in the main correct, as far as I myself know.
6785. What you found to be incorrect was, that what you noted where you made remarks? I do not know whether I noted anything.
6786. You state in your diary that you did? If you will allow me to look, I will see what I noted down with regard to it. (Diary handed to witness.)
6787. How long had you these depositions in your possession—had you them a month? No; two or three days.
6788. Hadn't you them a fortnight? No, I am sure I had not.
6789. When did you get them—do you remember? I do not.
6790. Had you them on the 21st September? I do not know.
6791. Look at your diary? (Witness referred to diary.) Yes, I see I had them on that day.
6792. When did you return them? I do not know.
6793. Look in your diary, and see if you returned them on the 3rd October? Yes; but I did not have them all that time.
6794. Who had them in the interim? The Inspector General; I recollect him giving the deposition to me, and he wanted it again, and took it away again—I think the following day or the day after—and he then gave it to me on another occasion.
6795. There is a matter relating to a stiletto and whistle—did Mrs. Bentley ask you for that stiletto and whistle, or did you offer it to her? I do not recollect how it came about.
6796. It was rather a remarkable circumstance, was it not? Yes, if you will allow me to explain: If my memory does not fail me, there was a conversation between Mrs. Bentley and myself, Mr. Bentley being present, with regard to Mrs. Bentley being a good shot and shooting at home with a pistol, and she said she thought she would have sufficient courage to use a weapon on any person who might assault her. The conversation then turned upon what weapon it would be best to carry, and I told her the best thing would be a policeman's whistle, to call assistance if she required it, and that if she liked I would lend her one.
6797. By Mr. Wilson: Do policemen use peculiar whistles? It is a whistle with a pea in it to make it shrill.
6798. Not a common dog-call? I do not know whether they are made for dog-calls. They are usually leaden ones; mine is made of an alligator's tooth. I also told Mrs. Bentley that I would lend her a small poniard, so that in case she were attacked she could defend herself, and she said, yes, she would take it; but I cannot tell you the exact words of the conversation or how the matter came about. I believe Mr. Bentley was present during the whole of the conversation.
6799. Did you give it to Mrs. Bentley at the time or afterwards? I believe I gave it to her the following morning; I met her on the road and gave it to her; I think so, but I am not certain.
6800. By Mr. Piddington: With reference to Harris—when you met Harris and asked whether he had any recollection of supplying you with one of Sands & Kenny's diaries, where did you meet him? Near Moffit's, in Pitt-street.
6801. How long ago is it since you met Harris and held that conversation with him? It was the day previous to my being asked the question here by the Committee. It will be down in the evidence. I was asked when I had spoken to Mr. Harris on the subject.
6802. Can you recollect how many weeks since—was it upwards of three or four weeks? It was after I had been asked by the Committee where I obtained the diary, and I told them. That was on the Thursday. I think then it was on the Saturday—I believe it was after I first appeared before the Committee that I saw Mr. Harris.

6803. How many weeks is it since you had that conversation to which you allude, with Mr. Harris? About a fortnight ago I should suppose.

Mr. C. E.
Harrison.

6804. If Mr. Harris has stated that he has no recollection of that conversation, can you account for his want of recollection? No, he cannot state so, because he gave me a reason at the time that I made the remark to him about it; he said they sent down to Sands & Kenny's, from the Committee, about it—I do not know whether he said to himself or to some party in the establishment; but he said—I think his words were, "I gave them no satisfactory answer about it, because I did not know their object in sending down to me." He cannot but recollect that conversation.

10 Dec., 1862.

6805. If he has stated that he has no recollection of it, to what do you attribute his want of recollection? It is impossible to say.

6806. Weakness of memory? I never gave him any credit for weakness of memory.

6807. Are you quite sure that conversation did take place within two or three weeks time?

Yes.

6808. And you cannot account for Harris' want of recollection in not remembering the circumstance? I cannot.

6809. By the Chairman: Did you not state before the Committee that it was a Letts' diary that you got? I believed then that it was Letts' diary; but I can recollect now a conversation between Harris and myself when I got the diary. I was not aware that Sands & Kenny had diaries of their own publication, but I recollect his saying to me—"It is not a Letts' diary—it is Sands & Kenny's; but the only difference between the two is that one contains matters connected with England, and Sands & Kenny's does not—if that will suit you as well."

6810. By Mr. Johnson: You of course remember the day when you were informed of the assault on Mrs. Bentley—Friday in Easter week? Yes.

6811. Did you give Mrs. Bentley the stiletto on the following Tuesday as she was going to Newtown? I may have done so.

6812. Cannot you tell? No.

6813. It was when she was going to Newtown? I believe it was.

6814. You read over this deposition? Yes, as well as I could, without taking particular notice of every part; I read it over in a hurry, without studying it.

6815. What was your object in reading it over? For information—to see what was there stated.

6816. Was it not, amongst other things, a most important object that you should see if anything was stated in the depositions inconsistent with the truth? I had made up my mind with regard to the case, and I did not pay much attention to what Mr. Bentley adduced, because I could see that I was already acquainted with what was there set down verbally.

6817. I shall have to repeat my questions for ever till you answer them—I say, was it not a most important object that you should see if anything was stated in the depositions inconsistent with the truth? No, I did not look on it as such, being already aware of the facts of the case —

6818. By the Chairman: It is not necessary to go into these long answers when yes or no will do—it makes the examination so long, without any object? I do not wish to be misunderstood.

6819. By Mr. Johnson: You may depend upon it I will give you the fairest opportunity a witness can have to state your own views, but what I complain of is that you do not answer my questions. It is stated in this deposition that on Tuesday, the 29th April last, you met Mrs. Bentley as she was walking to the omnibus, and gave her a stiletto and a whistle—Is that true or not? I do not know whether that was the date; I believe I gave it to her on the road out to Newtown.

6820. Can you recollect whether it was on the next occasion of her going to Newtown, after the assault? I cannot say. I did not look upon the fact of giving her the stiletto and whistle as an important event. It might have been the next time that she went to Newtown, or it might have been the time following again. I would not even be certain I did not give it to her at the house. My impression is that I gave it to her as she went.

6821. By the Chairman: Did you say you could not give her the stiletto at the house, as it was necessary you should get it ground and sharpened? I do not recollect whether I made use of those words.

6822. Is that the stiletto? (Stiletto produced.) Yes, that is the one, I believe.

6823. Did you get it ground and sharpened? If I did it was by one of the men in the office. Whether I told him to sharpen it, or told him to get me a sharp one, as I have several of them, I do not recollect.

6824. By Mr. Johnson: You do not deny you did say so—that you would get it ground and sharpened? I say I do not recollect.

6825. Do you deny it? I have no recollection of it, one way or the other.

6826. Look at that entry of the 6th May in your own diary, and tell me if you will undertake to say you gave her the stiletto and whistle on that day? (Witness referred to the diary.) Yes.

6827. Would you swear, if on your oath, that you did not give it on the previous Tuesday? No.

6828. You would not? That was the day I gave it to her. (Witness was understood to be referring to the 6th May.)

6829. If you were on your oath, would you swear you did not give it on the previous Tuesday, the 29th April? No, I did not.

6830. By the Chairman: Mr. Johnson's question is whether you would swear you did not give it on Tuesday, the 29th April? I will swear I did not give it to her on the Tuesday prior to that. This was the day I gave it her, and now I recollect where I gave it her.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
 10 Dec., 1862.
6831. By Mr. Johnson: It states there where? Yes, but I recollect the exact spot in the street where I gave it to her.
6832. You read this deposition of Mrs. Bentley's, paragraph 193, in which she states that, on the 29th April, you met her as she was walking to the omnibus, and gave her the stiletto and whistle? I do not recollect reading that; probably I did read it, since I read the whole of it; but I did not take notice of the different dates on which the facts were entered in Mr. Bentley's deposition.
6833. Then you were really so indifferent about this deposition that you did not exercise your mind to see if anything in the deposition itself was untrue? I was not indifferent, but I was aware of all the facts there in connection with myself, and I did not go into it minutely, or compare it with my diary; I simply read it as a whole.
6834. You did not exercise your mind to see if you could elicit anything in the deposition that you could put your finger upon as untrue? I did not.
6835. Look at your diary of March 22nd—(Witness referred to diary.) When do you say was the first time you went to Mr. Bentley's house? Saturday, 22nd March.
6836. Will you undertake to say that you did not go on the previous day—the 21st? No, it was on Saturday, the 22nd.
6837. Are you positive you did not go there on the 21st? I have no recollection of having gone there—had I gone there it would have been entered.
6838. Are you prepared to swear you did not go on the 21st? No, I am certain I did not go on the 21st—certain of it; being the day after I returned from Maitland, I should have recollected the fact if it was so.
6839. What was the day you and Mr. Boulanger were in Clarke's shop when Signor Cutolo passed? Monday, the 24th. I see an entry here of that date—"Called at Bentley's during the evening, and Boulanger mentioned the circumstance of C. seeing us together." It must have been on the Monday.
6840. Would you swear it was not on Saturday, the 22nd, that you were in Clarke's shop when Cutolo passed? No; it might have been, but I do not see an entry made. I think, if it had been on that day, it would have been the subject of conversation between Mr. Bentley and Mr. Boulanger the same evening, but the conversation seems to have been on Monday, the 24th.
6841. So the diary says. Will you undertake to say the diary is not wrong, and that both the fact and the conversation respecting it did not take place on the Saturday? There is nothing here to contradict the fact that it may have taken place on the Saturday.
6842. You will not undertake to say that the fact of your being in Clarke's shop did not take place on Saturday, the 22nd? No.
6843. It may have been so? It may have been.
6844. Are you prepared to state that the conversation respecting your being in Clarke's shop at the time Mr. Cutolo passed did not take place in Mr. Bentley's house on the Saturday afternoon? No, I am sure it did not take place the night I first was introduced to Mrs. Bentley, and it was on Saturday, the 22nd, I was first introduced.
6845. I say it was Friday, the 21st, that you were introduced, so it is no use taking a date we do not agree about. Will you declare positively that the conversation you have recorded in your diary as taking place on Monday, the 24th, did not take place on Saturday, the 22nd? I do not believe it did take place on Saturday, the 22nd.
6846. Will you declare it did not? I do not believe it did.
6847. Will you declare it did not—It is no use wasting time, we must come to it in the end? It might. As I have already said, I will not vouch that there are not errors in these entries, but I do not believe there are.
6848. Just look at the entry of the 29th March, about Herman Brothers;—have you an entry there, that at that day you considered their conduct was satisfactory in reference to the letter left at the post office? Yes.
6849. How did you come to that conclusion? From the statements made by the Hermans themselves, and from what I learned from the post office authorities.
6850. When were they made? I do not know; I did not watch them; it was from the information I received from the men I drew my conclusion.
6851. Just read your entry about that—the entry of the 29th? (Witness reads): "Discontinued watching Herman, as I am satisfied he knows nothing about the business, he having given one of the officers a satisfactory explanation of how he came to fetch it; and from the fact of his opening it at the post office and then throwing it back, saying it was a mistake and the letter was not intended for him, I believe his statement to be true."
6852. Did you not know that on the 27th of that month? I do not know.
6853. Just look if you have an entry about it? There is no entry here.
6854. When was the time the man did go to the post office, and open the letter and throw it down? The 26th.
6855. I suppose you learnt all about that on the 26th or 27th? No; if I recollect right I had him watched for two or three days, and changed the men that were watching him.
6856. Have you any entry to shew that? No; the men employed recollect it.
6857. You mean to say you had him watched? When he left the post office.
6858. For how long? Two days following.
6859. What took place during those two days? I cannot recollect. He was watched from his shop to his house, and back to his shop. The men did not tell me where he went, but there was nothing, so far as I recollect, that threw any suspicion on him. I can recollect sending another officer to his house, to make some inquiries about the letter.
6860. You have an entry to the effect that Herman Brothers were in the habit of getting communications with the same initials? So, if I recollect right, the one who had fetched the letter told the man I had sent down.
- 6861.

- 6861. Were you satisfied of the truth of that assertion? I could not satisfy myself of the truth of it.
- 6862. Did you believe it? I did, from the very fact of his throwing the letter into the window again.
- 6863. By Mr. Morris: Did you state to Mr. Bentley what you state now? Yes, I gave him full particulars.
- 6864. And expressed your disbelief that Herman had anything to do with it? Yes.
- 6865. By Mr. Johnson: Did you believe he was in the habit of receiving communications with the same initials? Only from his statement; I did not see any reason to disbelieve it.
- 6866. You did not, in fact, disbelieve it? No.
- 6867. And you never stated that you disbelieved it? I have no recollection of ever having stated that I disbelieved it. I gave Mr. Bentley full particulars at the time, but to any inquisitive person who may have asked, I probably made some remark to throw him off the scent, the same as with other matters. Mr. Bentley was in possession of the facts, and Mr. Boulanger likewise. In fact I used to repeat every tittle of information to both Bentley and Boulanger until I was a little doubtful of Boulanger, and then I confined my information to Mr. Bentley himself.
- 6868. Do you ever adopt the effigy of a serpent and a dove as representing yourself—just look at that (holding up a letter)? Yes, that is mine. A serpent and a dove!
- 6869. What do you call it? I call it a hawk and a snake.
- 6870. Is that your writing (handing the letter to witness)? It is not.
- 6871. Is it written by your authority? Yes.
- 6872. Whose writing is it? Detective Scott's, I think.
- 6873. Was that written by your direction? Yes, of course it was.
- 6874. What is the hawk and the snake—who is it intended to represent? I recollect having

Mr. C. E.
Harrison.
10 Dec., 1862.

- 6875. By the Chairman: Who is it intended to represent? There was an agreement between Mr. Bentley, Mr. Boulanger, and myself, that letters passing between us should have no signature
- 6876. Who is it intended to represent? Myself, according to a previous arrangement made between Mr. Bentley, Mr. Boulanger, and myself.
- 6877. If you will answer the questions that are asked, there will be no necessity to repeat them? I will be most happy to answer the questions that are asked. It was intended to represent my signature.
- 6878. By Mr. Johnson: Are the contents of that letter true? Yes.
- 6879. How do you reconcile it with what you have just stated? I do not see anything to contradict what I have just stated.
- 6880. You say there you do not believe it? That was in the first instance, before I had made inquiries, or had the man watched. That may have been written the same day the man fetched the letter.
- 6881. By the Chairman: Will you read the letter? (Letter read as follows):—

“Dear Sir,
 “We have not been able to make anything of the bookseller as yet; he states that he is in the habit of receiving communications with the same initials. I do not believe it.
 “Will see you, if possible, this evening; should I not do so, rest assured that nothing fresh has transpired.
 “Yours truly,
 “Bentley, Esqr.,
 “Union Club.”

- 6882. Is that the envelope of the letter (handing an envelope)? Yes. I cannot say when that letter was written.
- 6883. By Mr. Morris: There is the date on the envelope—Was that date there at the time? I do not know whether it has been put there since or not.
- 6884. By Mr. Johnson: Have you any memorandum when that letter was written? No; I doubt whether that is the same date.
- 6885. Why? Because it does not look to be in the same handwriting.
- 6886. Will you undertake to say that letter was not written on the 27th March? No, I will not say when it was written.
- 6887. What additional facts came to your knowledge which enabled you to form a different opinion about the bookseller? I do not recollect; I know I had the man watched, and some facts came to my knowledge, but what they were I do not know now.
- 6888. Now, do you believe that at the time that letter was written you were satisfied about the innocence of the bookseller? No, certainly I had a doubt then.
- 6889. What had occurred between the writing of that letter and the entry of the 29th, in your diary? Two days.
- 6890. What had occurred on those two days? I do not recollect.
- 6891. Had you not suspected the man, and had not that suspicion been removed—Are you not able to state the grounds for your suspicion being removed? I do not recollect the circumstances which removed them.
- 6892. By Mr. Piddington: Do you recollect why your suspicions were created? Only from the fact of his fetching the letter.
- 6893. By Mr. Johnson: Nevertheless, you told the Committee just now, that the fact of his throwing the letter back removed the suspicion? Not in itself. That was one circumstance. Had there been other facts of strong suspicion, the fact of his throwing it back would not have removed them.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
10 Dec., 1862.
6894. Were there any other facts? There must have been.
6895. Will you undertake to say there were—that you had a single additional fact when you made that entry of the 29th March? No doubt I had, or I should not have made the entry as positively as I have done.
6896. Can you give any further explanation of this matter to the Committee? I cannot.
6897. Will you look at your entry of the 9th April, about Mr. Boulanger's opinion as to publishing the letters? Yes, here is the entry:—"Went to Bentley's during the evening; Boulanger was there, and we talked over the prospects of success. Boulanger was for publishing all the letters."
6898. Will you undertake to say Mr. Boulanger did not express that opinion on the 3rd April? He might have expressed such an opinion, but he expressed the same opinion on Wednesday, the 9th.
6899. You cannot say whether he expressed it on the 3rd April? No.
6900. Have you the least recollection of his expressing it on two occasions? No, I have not.
6901. Do you adhere to the statement in the diary that he expressed that opinion on the 9th April? Yes.
6902. If that is not true, you will admit your diary is not to be relied upon? My diary is correct, every line of it.
6903. Look at the 4th April, where you have an entry of the letter being found on the staircase window, which you say contained threats, and had a postage stamp on it—now, do you adhere to those two entries as being correct? It does not say about postage stamps.
6904. By the Chairman: Read the entry? (Witness read the entry, the concluding portion of which stated that the letter had a two-penny stamp on it.)
6905. By Mr. Johnson: Why do you so prematurely contradict me? I had not read that part of it then.
6906. Look at this letter (letter No. 20) and tell me again if you will say that is not the letter that was found on the staircase on the 4th April? That is not the letter I allude to. That may have been found on the staircase on the 4th April; but it is not the letter I allude to.
6907. Look at the envelope—you see it has no postage stamp? No.
6908. Would you be prepared to swear you saw the letter which Mr. Bentley produced, as being found on the staircase window on the 4th, and that it had a postage stamp on it? I do not recollect seeing it; I have already stated so; I will not swear I saw the letter found on the window, or many of the letters that were received; I may have seen them in Mr. Bentley's hand, but I cannot swear I ever had them in my own hand.
6909. What do you mean to inform the Committee were the grounds for your making the entry that the letter contained threats, and had a two-penny stamp on? That I was informed it was a letter containing threats and that it had a two-penny stamp on it.
6910. You do not answer my question—I ask you now to inform the Committee what are the grounds for stating now, and entering in your journal when you did enter it, that the letter contained threats and had a two-penny stamp on it? That I believe such was the case, and I believe it now.
6911. Why? I do not know. You ask if I saw the letter and examined the letter; I tell you I have no recollection of having done so.
6912. I want to know why you enter in your journal, and state now, that the letter contained threats and had a two-penny stamp on it? Because, if Mr. Bentley had read me a letter to that effect, I placed every confidence in Mr. Bentley then, and would have made the entry, believing that what Mr. Bentley told me was true.
6913. Did he tell you so? That I say I cannot answer, because I do not recollect.
6914. Can you say you read the letter? I cannot say I read the letter.
6915. Can you say you saw the envelope with the stamp on it? I cannot say.
6916. Do you mean to say that Mr. Bentley told you it had a two-penny stamp upon it? That I cannot say from recollection, but I have an entry here to that effect. That is not the letter I allude to. I have seen a similar letter to that before; I know a similar letter to that was received.
6917. When? That I cannot recollect.
6918. Have you any entry of that? I do not know that I have.
6919. Let us know if you have? I can go through the book to look.
6920. Do you not consider it a most material matter—the arrival of every one of these letters? In a police inquiry—yes, but not in making notes for my own private information.
6921. Have you any entry in your report to the Colonial Secretary, or in this diary of yours, of the receipt of such a letter as that I have just shewn you, under any other date than the 4th April? I am not aware of any.
6922. Have you any recollection of seeing such a letter at any other time? As which?
6923. As the letter which I have shewn to you, and which you say was not the letter you referred to in the entry of the 4th April? I have a recollection of a letter being either shewn to me or read to me, similar in contents to that one which is there now, but I cannot recollect when it was received, or under what circumstances, or the date when I heard of it; nor am I aware of there being an entry in my diary or in my report to the Colonial Secretary, to that effect.
6924. Nor have you any recollection of the progress of events during which you say you saw such a letter? No.
6925. Now will you turn to your entry of the 12th April. Refreshing your memory by that or any other means, will you state to the Committee whether the conversation you had on that Saturday evening was upon the subject of the anonymous letters or upon some other subject. You say, "About 9 o'clock I was interrupted in my conversation with Boulanger and and Mrs. B., by Bentley, who called out from the dining-room down-stairs." How long had Mr. Bentley been absent from the drawing-room when he called you? I do not recollect; not many minutes I think.

Mr. C. E.
Harrison.

10 Dec., 1862.

6926. What had you been conversing about before he left? I do not know.

6927. Had you been conversing about the anonymous letters? I do not know what the subject of conversation was.

6928. Cannot you remember it at all? It states here that the anonymous letters were the subject of conversation between Mrs. Bentley and myself; Mr. Bentley may have taken part, and so may have Boulanger.

6929. What did Mr. Bentley leave the room for? I think he left the room for a book.

6930. Were you not talking about some incident in the Ingoldsby Legends? I do not know what we were talking about.

6931. Or Bon Gaultier? Yes, I believe it was a book.

6932. Do you recollect afterwards bringing him the book I hold in my hand? I do not know whether it was after or before. I may mention here, as this brings it to my recollection, that when I stated, with regard to Mr. Harris getting me that diary, that I believed he got me some other volume, I thought it was a volume of Bulwer; but I have since recollected what it was. A volume of Bon Gaultier had been lent to me, and I had to return it, and I asked him to get one for me; but he did not bring it, because he said it was too expensive. I think he said it was 8s. a volume, and he thought there would be a cheaper edition out soon. That has just come into my mind.

6933. You remember that Mr. Bentley did go away for the purpose of getting a book? I believe it was.

6934. Did you not afterwards bring him that book and lend it to him? I did so, but I do not know whether it was afterwards or before.

6935. Was not the conversation, which was interrupted by Mr. Bentley calling out on that occasion, conversation in reference to some literary matter connected with the Ingoldsby Legends and Bon Gaultier? Yes, it may have been.

6936. And not about the anonymous letters? Oh! no. The conversation with regard to the anonymous letters may have taken place at the same time. The conversation with regard to the anonymous letters did take place.

6937. On that occasion? Yes, on that occasion; but at the time Mr. Bentley left the room, the conversation may have turned to literature.

6938. How would Mr. Bentley's going for a book, the Ingoldsby Legends, interrupt such a conversation as that—was it not to verify something? The conversation about the anonymous letters may have ceased at the time, and may have turned to literature. I do not say that the conversation with regard to the anonymous letters was interrupted by Mr. Bentley going for the book. I might have been carrying on the conversation with regard to the anonymous letters, while Mr. Bentley might have been talking to Mr. Boulanger about the other matter. I do not recollect the exact topic when Mr. Bentley left the room.

6939. On Sunday the 13th you state that Mr. Bentley shewed you a letter he had found in the flower-stand? Yes.

6940. Do you recollect whether that letter had any envelope or address on it? I do not.

6941. Or any post stamp? I do not.

6942. Your memory is entirely defective? There were so many letters, I cannot recollect any letter in particular.

6943. No other letter was ever received under these circumstances? Not to my knowledge.

6944. Is your memory entirely defective whether that letter was in an envelope, or was addressed at all, or had a stamp upon it? I cannot recollect.

6945. Did you, in fact, examine the verandah on Sunday the 13th April? I cannot say whether I examined it.

6946. By the Chairman: Would not your memory serve you on such an important matter? I did examine the verandah, but I cannot tell whether it was on the Sunday morning or Sunday afternoon.

6947. Have you not your diary before you? Yes; still my diary does not enlighten me as to that.

6948. By Mr. Johnson: Will you undertake to say you examined the verandah at all on that Sunday, or whether it was not on the Monday you first examined it? There is an entry here, on the Sunday, that muddy footsteps were traced from the yard to the door of the dining-room, but whether I traced the footsteps I cannot say.

6949. Will you undertake to say that you examined the verandah at all until the Monday, the 14th of April? I do not recollect.

6950. Can you say, is my question—your answer surely will be yes or no to that? Yes, I believe I examined it. I recollect pointing out these large footsteps to Mr. Bentley—at least he said they were large ones, but I said they were small ones overlapping each other, and shewed him that they were.

6951. The question is whether that took place on the Sunday or the Monday? On the Sunday, I believe.

6952. Now, I ask if you will undertake to say that you did examine the verandah on the Sunday? I believe I did.

6953. Will you undertake to say positively? My memory will not carry me back, but I find an entry that I did, and I believe it is true.

6954. You will not deny that it may be untrue? I am certain the entries are not untrue.

6955. I must ask again, will you undertake to say positively that you made the examination on the Sunday? I will state that I made the examination the day after that letter was found in the verandah.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
 10 Dec., 1862.
6956. I must repeat my question—Will you undertake to say positively that you made that examination on Sunday, the 13th April? Yes, I believe I did.
6957. Will you swear you did positively, and that it did not take place on Monday, the 14th? I would never swear to anything unless I was thoroughly positive—if there was a shadow of doubt.
6958. Is there a shadow of doubt? I have already stated that this is so long back, and there might be a mistake, consequently, where there is a doubt I could not swear to it.
6959. Will you undertake to say positively that you did make that search on the Sunday? Yes, I believe I did; I am certain in my own mind that I did. You ask whether I would swear I did—I say no, because there might be an error in the date, although I am satisfied in my own mind there is not.
6960. What sort of day was that Sunday? I do not recollect.
6961. Was it a dry day—a sunny day? I cannot say.
6962. Or the Monday? I cannot say.
6963. In what state was the verandah when you did examine it—were the footmarks wet or dry, or in what state? They were not wet—they might appear damp.
6964. Did they appear damp? I really cannot recollect whether they appeared dry or what degree of dampness there was in the footsteps. They could not have presented the appearance of having been made a few minutes before.
6965. Do you recollect what appearance they did present in reference to moistness? I do not.
6966. Was there much soil on the verandah, or any marks on the wood—were they marks of soil or impressions on the wood? Garden soil, mould, or it may have been mud.
6967. I want you to describe them to the Committee? I did not go down on my knees and take it in my fingers to examine it; it appeared to have been made by feet coming out of the garden.
6968. I want to know what marks there were on the wooden verandah floor? Similar marks to those that would be made by a person coming out of the garden; or had any person come out of the street, the street being muddy, he might have left similar marks.
6969. What you mean, I suppose, is, that the marks were such as shoes soiled with mud or garden soil would have left? I have already stated so.
6970. Was there much of this soil? There were the footsteps only—the impression of the feet.
6971. How was that impression indicated? On the boards of the verandah, there being the same impression as if you had dipped your foot into mud or mould, and then trod over the plank, only that instead of being a single tread it was one overlapping the other.
6972. Were these impressions clear? They were to me, and they appeared so to Mr. Bentley after I shewed them to him.
6973. You say, in your statement to the Colonial Secretary, that on the 10th of April you had the house watched, without Mr. Bentley's knowledge;—is that true? When I made that statement matters were fresher in my mind than they are at the present moment; I may have recollected matters then that are not in this diary, though I have since forgotten them.
6974. Will you look at this statement in your report to the Colonial Secretary:—"On the 10th I withdrew the men from the house, of which fact Bentley was aware. I again had the house watched closely, back and front, so that it was impossible for anyone to gain admittance without being seen by the detectives: of this Bentley was not aware, as I had become suspicious of something wrong on the premises, from the tenor of one of the letters, which shewed that the writer was aware of the steps taken by the police, although I had used extra precautions."—What is the letter you allude to? I cannot say—some letter that had been previously received, though whether it was received a few days or a month previous I cannot say. It may have been the letter attached to the music, when I first entertained suspicion of the servants, that was afterwards removed.
6975. Why do you say, "a month previous"? Well, a week previous; I might have said a week previous. I meant nothing when I said "a month previous."
6976. It could not have been a month, for you did not take the matter up till the 22nd of March;—now I want to know what letter you allude to? I can give you an explanation, but I do not know that it is a correct one; if there is an error there it can be easily explained. When that report was made out—
6977. I ask you, what is the letter you refer to in that statement? And I answer that I cannot tell. There may be no letter. Now I will give you an explanation why I say it—
6978. This statement may be untrue or incorrect? There may be an error in it, and I can tell you how it probably originated.
6979. Well, tell us; now is the time for explanation? When that report was being written for the Colonial Secretary, I was giving the particulars;—at this particular page which refers to that particular date, it says nothing in the diary about a letter having caused me to alter my opinion, but I was aware then of all the facts of the case, and I may have used the words "in consequence of a letter that had previously been received," when that letter may not have been received till afterwards, though my mind being impressed with the idea that it was previously received, I may have made a mistake during the time that was being written.
6980. That is your explanation, is it? It is possible it is so—I do not say it is so. There is no record here (referring to diary) of a letter having been received previous to that, disclosing the fact that they knew the police were in motion.
6981. I happen to know there was no such letter? I do not say that there was; there may be an error.

6982. This may be a fiction, that you used these precautions without Mr. Bentley's knowledge, because you had suspicions from the tenor of some letter;—that may be a fiction? No, I do not recollect; it may be no fiction.
6983. Do you say again that this statement I have just read is correct? It may be wrong. 10 Dec., 1862.
6984. Do you mean to say the reason you gave for adopting that mode of watching the house without Mr. Bentley's knowledge is altogether erroneous? It may be wrong; if no such letter was received before that, it is wrong. Now I think about the matter, the letter was received afterwards.
6985. Then what was your reason for watching the house closely without Mr. Bentley's knowledge? I do not know. That I was suspicious of parties inside; that was the reason, or I should not have taken these steps, but as to telling my exact ideas at the time, I cannot do so.
6986. What caused the suspicion? I do not recollect, but I had a suspicion or I should not have taken those steps.
6987. You represented to the Colonial Secretary, that the suspicion was derived from a letter which you now believe had no existence at the time? You tell me it had no existence.
6988. You say you believe it came afterwards? I say you may be right; I will not say positively there was a letter.
6989. Did you not say that it came afterwards? I may think so now, but you would not take my beliefs before.
6990. Did you not say you did believe they came afterwards? I do think they came after, and I may have been wrong when I made that entry; but I had suspicions or I should not have taken those steps, though I may have attributed them to the wrong cause.
6991. If the cause of these suspicions, as stated in this report, is wrong, can you state what the real cause was? No, I cannot recollect what it was.
6992. Then it may be that you have stated as a reason a fact which had no existence, and you cannot state what the real fact was? I do not recollect what the real cause of my suspicions was; there must have been a cause, or I should not have taken those steps.
6993. You have put down a motive there and you admit it may be wrong? Yes, it may be wrong.
6994. By Mr. Leary: Can you account for referring to a letter which you now believe had no existence at the time? Yes, because at the time that report was made out, there were many facts that were fresh in my memory that do not appear in the diary at all, and when I came to that part and found I had no entry why I withdrew the men from the house, knowing such a letter had been received shewing that they were aware of the movements of the police, I may at that time, having in the first instance been suspicious of parties in the house, have thought it was in consequence of this letter.
6995. I thought I understood from you, that this letter had not come at the time you wrote that report? No, I must have had suspicions at the time, for there are suspicions here set down, but that passage may be incorrect.
6996. By Mr. Johnson: Had you ever any suspicions about the inmates of the house being concerned in the matter, except what you derived from some letter alluding to the police? Yes, I had suspicions with regard to the inmates when that first letter was received attached to the music, and I expressed them.
6997. You say in your report, "I again placed a detective on the premises day and night"—April 13th you say, April 14th I say. It ought to be in your entry of the 13th? It is the 13th I think.
6998. Have you got that entry there? No, it does not say here, on Sunday the 13th, that I placed an officer inside the house or outside.
6999. Did you, in fact, place a detective on the premises day and night at that time? I cannot say—I may have done it.
7000. Did you ever place a detective in the house day and night? Not in the fore part of the day—on no occasion; they went in in the afternoon and were relieved at 12 o'clock.
7001. What do you mean by this, that you placed them there "day and night"? If they go in in the afternoon, that is during the day.
7002. By the Chairman: Do you think any other person would place that construction on it? If a man went in the afternoon and left the house at 3 o'clock in the morning, that was being there during the day and night; I should consider he was there day and night.
7003. By Mr. Johnson: What did you mean by it? They were in the habit of going in there about 4 o'clock; I do not know the exact hour myself; they received instructions to go in early in the afternoon, and were relieved at 12 o'clock by a man who stopped till day-light in the morning.
7004. Was that the case at the time you made the examination of the foot-prints? I do not know whether they were in the house during that time—they may have been.
7005. Look at your own entry—do you not see that you represent there that they were only there till 1 o'clock? Yes.
7006. Is it true that at that time you had detectives in the house the whole night? I put them on the watch till 1 o'clock, but I really cannot say—they may have stopped longer than that.
7007. Is it true they were there from the afternoon till day-light? I cannot say.
7008. You do not know whether that statement is true or not—"I again placed a detective on the premises day and night"? Yes, it is true, but I cannot recollect who was there, or why the statement was made. The statement is correct. The entry is that he received instructions to remain till 1 o'clock, but they may have remained till after 1 o'clock.
7009. Did they? I cannot say.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison. 7010. Did they remain till after 12 o'clock? No, I cannot say, if I was not in the house.
7011. Did you direct them to remain? Yes, I did. I may have given them instructions to remain till next morning.
- 10 Dec., 1862. 7012. I want you, if you can, to say if that statement, taken according to your own interpretation, is true? Yes, it is true.
7013. That you had detectives there the whole of the night? They may have informed me they were there all night; I was not there myself all night to see if they were.
7014. Did you ever have them there till day-light? No, I did not say they were.
7015. Can you give any better explanation? I cannot.
7016. Look at this (referring to detective duty book)—This is a thing with respect to which you had your men up to refresh their memories? That is many months ago.
7017. Do you not see that at all these dates they were not there all night? Yes.
7018. Again I ask you, what you mean by representing in that report that they were there day and night? I have already stated they were never there during the forenoon —
7019. By Mr. Leary: How do you account for the variance between your report and this account in the book—was your report a mere guess? • In some respects it was a guess; with regard to the dimensions of the window and trap-door, it was a guess. I did not refer to any book at all, when that report was made out, except the diary, and where facts were not stated in the diary I then went from memory.
7020. You see a very great variance between your present statement and what is written in the book? No, not in my present statement.
7021. You state that you gave your men orders to remain day and night? No, the orders I have here are, that I gave them instructions to remain till 1 o'clock.
7022. You have just stated that you ordered the men to go in in the afternoon, that they generally went about 4 o'clock, and that they were changed at 1 o'clock, the last one remaining till daylight? That was at the time the men were in the house day and night. They had only instructions on this occasion to remain till 1 o'clock.
7023. By Mr. Johnson: You say you had your journal in your hand when you dictated this report? Yes.
7024. And you state, at the time when you are describing the examination of the footsteps in the verandah, "I again placed a detective on the premises day and night." Now, your own diary only carries it to 1 o'clock, and the men's diary, verified by yourself, only carries it to 12 o'clock, and you use the word "again," as though they had been in the house day and night before? —
7025. By Mr. Leary: Did it not appear an obvious thing, when there was a book giving a detailed account of the days and nights your detectives were watching Mr. Bentley's house, that you should refer to that book, in writing this report, rather than depend upon this loose mode of depending on your memory, which might be treacherous? When I furnished that report, it was to shew the principal facts that led me to a certain conclusion, not as a report in which I had to shew what steps had been taken to arrive at that conclusion, but simply the principal facts upon which I formed that opinion; and I just did take the principal facts without paying particular attention to details.
7026. You refer to a particular occasion when you gave certain orders; now, if you were a man desirous of writing what was accurate, would it not appear a proper mode to you to look to any written information you had on the matter, rather than depend on your memory? It might have been better for me, perhaps, if I had done so.
7027. It appears that, in this matter, and in the matter referring to the trap-door, you were only guessing? That is all; at least I did not —
7028. And you might have obtained correct information? No, with regard to the trap-door I could not; besides, I did not think there was any object in taking the dimensions.
7029. By Mr. Johnson: I will take you now to the loft, and the 22nd of April. In your report, you state that you closely examined the roof, and, amongst other things, you say, "no one could possibly see what was going on down-stairs, as described by the letter, without lying flat on the ground and putting their head partly through the trap";—do you adhere to that statement? I have already given an explanation of it.
7030. Do you adhere to that statement? Yes, as described in the letter. I gave an explanation with regard to that matter, I think, on the second day of my examination.
7031. When you made this report to the Colonial Secretary, you had not only seen the letter referred to in that remark, but it had been printed in the public journals? I do not know whether it had or not.
7032. Look at your diary, and tell me whether you did read Mr. Bentley's letter? There were several letters of Mr. Bentley's in the papers, but I cannot say whether I read all of them.
7033. What did you mean by stating that no one could possibly see all that was going on down-stairs, as described in the letter, if you do not know whether you ever read the letter? The letter, when it was received, was either read by me, or by Mr. Bentley to me.
7034. When reporting to the Colonial Secretary on this matter, do you mean to say that when you used the expression, "as described by the letter," you had not read the letter as it appeared in Mr. Bentley's letter in the newspaper? No, I do not believe I had. I may have read the letter in the newspaper, but if you ask me whether that particular letter was in the newspaper I cannot tell you.
7035. By the Chairman: Did you read the letter in manuscript? I either read it or Mr. Bentley read it to me. As I have already stated, Mr. Bentley was in the habit of reading the letters that were received, to me, because he said he could read the handwriting so much better than I could.
7036. By Mr. Johnson: Is that the letter (handing MS. of letter No. 23. See deposition,

p. 27) you refer to—I want you to tell the Committee what you refer to as described by the letter as being “impossible for a person to see, without lying flat on the ground and putting their head partly through the trap”? I have already explained that, that I believe when I wrote that, that the letter stated that he had Mrs. Bentley covered with his pistol the whole time, and I did not think it possible that a person could have had her covered with a pistol the whole time without lying flat upon the ground. I see now that the letter does not make use of the words “the whole time.” It was possible to have Mrs. Bentley covered with a pistol while she was coming up-stairs, or a part of the time; but when giving the particulars where she sat down and when she had been in the rooms, I did believe the party could not have had her covered with his revolver the whole time, unless he had laid down flat.

Mr. C. E.
Harrison.

10 Dec., 1862.

7037. Do you mean to say a person could not stand nearly upright in that loft and command with his eyes the approach to and from the nursery, to and from Mrs. Bentley's bed-room, and the upper part of the flight of stairs? I do not recollect exactly what portions you can command from the trap, but from the drawing-room up the stairs to the bed-room and nursery by lying down you can command that, but standing up I do not think you would.

7038. By the Chairman: Where does the writer of the letter state that he saw Mrs. Bentley—State that, and then give your explanation of the particulars? ———

7039. Mr. Johnson (reading): “I saw you leave your room, in the middle of the night, and “go in to see your little baby, and had my pistol pointed at you from the trap-door—for I “thought you saw me, but found I was mistaken. The night before that, I saw you, as you “came up-stairs, after your husband was in bed, obliged to sit down on the stairs, your old “complaint having attacked you.” What is there in that description that it was impossible for any person to see standing up in the roof? No, in that description I do not see that there was; but my impression of the contents of the letter was very different from the exact words set down there.

7040. By Mr. Morris: What was your impression? My impression—whether derived from the contents of the letter or from conversation about it—was that the party was watching Mrs. Bentley from the drawing-room up-stairs to the bed-room, and on another occasion into the nursery, and that he had her covered with his revolver during the whole of this time. That was my impression at the time. The conversation itself, with regard to what Mrs. Bentley actually had done, may have tended to form that impression.

7041. By Mr. Johnson: Then you admit that your theory as to the necessity of lying down and putting his head through the trap is an erroneous one, as connected with anything stated in the letter itself? As stated in the letter I see here, yes.

7042. Do you mean to tell the Committee that, when you used the expression “as described by the letter,” you were really not justified at all by what was in the letter? I believe the letter was to that effect.

7043. Was not the letter, or that part of the letter, set out in the publication by Mr. Bentley, in the Sydney Morning Herald? That I cannot tell you.

7044. By Mr. Morris: If it were set out in the Sydney Morning Herald, you must have read it, interested as you were in the case? I believe I read it, but I would not say positively I read it.

7045. By the Chairman: Have you an entry in your diary, to the effect that the publication of Mr. Bentley's letter had caused a great sensation in the city? Yes.

7046. Had you read the letter at that time? Yes, probably I had.

7047. Was it after that, or before that, that you had written this report to the Colonial Secretary? From memory I cannot tell you that.

7048. Will you refresh your memory? The entry was made on the 4th June, of the letter with regard to the Philharmonic concert having appeared in the paper.

7049. Was not this particular day fixed in your mind as a very important day indeed with regard to this matter—had you not some definite and distinct impressions peculiar to this day? I may have had, but I cannot recollect now whether I had.

7050. Do you not remember that you fixed on this particular day as being the turning point of the affair, and made an entry in your diary to that effect some three or four days prior? Not that particular day—the day of the publication of the letters.

7051. Have you forgotten all about that? No. When Mr. Morris asks me the question do I recollect reading that letter, I say I do not from memory. No doubt I did read all the letters, but I do not recollect reading particular letters, or the contents of particular letters.

7052. Now that you have refreshed your memory, can you give a more direct answer to the question of Mr. Johnson? What was the question of Mr. Johnson?

7053. By Mr. Johnson: My question was whether the words in your report, “as described by the letter,” actually refer to what was described by the letter, or to something else? To what I believed was described by the letter.

7054. On the night of the concert, you say you made a remark to bring a confirmatory letter about the concert—what was the remark? I do not know.

7055. Look at the entry of the 29th April? I do not see anything about making a remark.

7056. By Mr. Morris: Turn to page 51 of your statement to the Colonial Secretary—the middle paragraph:—“I made some remarks to him that night, for the purpose of drawing another confirmatory letter, which duly arrived”? I do not know what the remark was.

7057. By Mr. Johnson: Will your diary enlighten you? ———

7058. By Mr. Morris: You must observe that these statements would lead the Colonial Secretary, more than anything else, to believe in the guilt of Mr. Bentley, and therefore they are important? I do not see an entry in the diary to that effect.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
10 Dec., 1862.
7059. By Mr. Johnson: Can you inform the Committee what these remarks were? I cannot; I do not recollect; matters were fresher in my mind then than they are now.
7060. Your memory has been pretty well refreshed, I think, since you have been here? I cannot recollect what the remarks were that I made to Mr. Bentley.
7061. Who was present when you made it? That I do not know. Mr. Boulanger was there, I believe, during the evening; Mr. Wrench might have been there; I think Mr. Wrench went home with Mrs. Bentley.
7062. You can give no more information about that? No.
7063. In your diary, under the date of May 2nd, you say, amongst other things, "I should have left with Boulanger, but she whispered me to stay." Were you present at all when Mr. Boulanger left? I do not know; I may have gone out before Boulanger, and returned again.
7064. Did you not go away leaving Boulanger there, and when you returned found Boulanger had left during your absence? Yes, I might have done that, and that is consistent with that statement.
7065. How is it consistent with it? My intention may have been to have left with Boulanger, and after Mrs. Bentley spoke to me I may have gone out and returned again.
7066. How did you know Mr. Boulanger was leaving? Because probably he expressed his intention.
7067. You appear to represent by this that you were present when Mr. Boulanger left—is not that what you mean to represent? No, because I do not recollect how it was. My intention may have been to leave with Mr. Boulanger, and after Mrs. Bentley spoke to me I may have gone out by myself and returned again.
7068. Did you not intend to represent that you were about leaving with Mr. Boulanger, but that you stopped because Mrs. Bentley whispered you? I meant to represent only what is there set down.
7069. Is not that there set down? What is there may answer both ways.
7070. What time did you first go to Mr. Bentley's that evening? I do not know; it does not say, and I do not recollect.
7071. How was it you happened to go there that night? That I do not recollect.
7072. Do you recollect being fetched from the Victoria Theatre, by Mr. Bentley? I recollect being fetched from the Victoria Theatre, but I do not know whether it was on that night.
7073. Will not your diary tell you anything about that? I looked over the diary before, when under examination, with regard to that fact.
7074. Do you not remember the occasion when Camphin and Mr. Bentley came to the Victoria Theatre for you? Yes, I recollect; I believe it was Camphin coming to the Victoria Theatre with Mr. Bentley in a cab.
7075. That was the occasion when you drove to a post? No, I think we went to Mr. Bentley's house.
7076. Did you not drive until you came to a post at the corner of Castlereagh and King Streets? No, I do not think so. I recollect a supposed letter being posted, and I recollect obtaining some specimens of handwriting from Mr. Bentley, with reference to a letter that might be in this post.
7077. Did you not get these letters that night? It is very possible I did.
7078. Have you any entry of that in your journal? No.
7079. Not of so important a point as that—as getting letters to compare with the letters you were to examine? I do not know whether it was an important point; it might have been nothing in itself. If I had made an entry of all the little circumstances connected with the case I should have required a very large book.
7080. Then you do not consider that a material circumstance? I did not at the time, probably; or it might have been material and I forgot to enter it.
7081. By the Chairman: You have made entries of other small matters? Yes, there may have been some that struck me, and others that did not.
7082. By Mr. Johnson: Did you not tell Mr. Bentley that Camphin told you that one of the suspected parties—Mr. Montagu—had been seen at that post, and was supposed to have posted a letter there? No, I have no recollection of ever having told Mr. Bentley that Mr. Montagu was ever seen to post a letter.
7083. Did not Camphin tell you that? Yes, I believe he did, but I cannot tell whether that was the occasion.
7084. Other people say it was the occasion? It may be; I do not recollect.
7085. Do you not consider that a most important occasion? I might not have done so, since nothing came of it.
7086. By the Chairman: Did you wait on all occasions until you saw whether anything came of the circumstances as they occurred, before you made entries in your diary? No.
7087. Why did you not make an entry on this occasion as soon as it occurred? I might not have made the entry that night —
7088. By Mr. Johnson: Have you made an entry of it? I do not know that it was that night.
7089. Did you not tell Mr. Bentley that you must have some envelopes of the anonymous letters, for comparison? Yes, I may have told Mr. Bentley so; I know I got some, but whether that was the time I do not recollect. I cannot recollect whether it was on the night of the 2nd of May.
7090. Let me recall your attention to the 205th paragraph of Mr. Bentley's deposition—Are you prepared to contradict any statement contained in that paragraph? The latter part of it is correct, and yet there are omissions there.
7091. Are you prepared to contradict anything that is there? No.

7092. Will you explain why, under the date of the 2nd of May, there are entries in your diary, and not a single reference to any of the facts mentioned in that paragraph? With regard to the cab? Mr. C. E.
Harrison.
7093. With regard to any one fact mentioned in it? I cannot say. There is nothing in my journal with regard to Mr. Bentley coming to the theatre, but I believe this is correct. 10 Dec., 1862.
7094. Can you explain so singular a circumstance that you have made other entries, and not a single allusion to the facts mentioned in that paragraph? No, I cannot tell why I did not. I may have a perfect recollection of the facts taking place, and not be able to fix the date of them.
7095. You were twice in Mr. Bentley's house that night, were you not—you went with him from the theatre, and left, and came again, did you not, to get the envelopes? That I do not know from my own memory.
7096. You cannot even recollect whether you went there twice that night? No.
7097. When you finally left that night, who let you out? That I do not know.
7098. Was any detective in the house that night? I cannot say; I have not got an entry of it here on that date.
7099. Will you read now the 207th paragraph of Mr. Bentley's deposition, and tell me whether you are prepared to say there is anything there that is untrue? (Witness read the paragraph referred to.) I believe conversation to that effect did take place between Mr. Bentley and myself, but whether it all occurred at the same time as is here stated, I cannot say.
7100. Are you prepared to contradict it? I have no recollection of saying I would make Sydney too hot for Mr. Boulanger.
7101. Will you undertake to say you did not do so? Yes, I think I can undertake to say I did not.
7102. What do you mean by saying you think? I do not think I could have said so, because I could not do it. What I can recollect I will be positive about, and that which I cannot, I will state so. That this conversation from beginning to end has taken place at different times I have no doubt, but that it all took place as here set down, on that particular day, I cannot state.

John Black, Esq., called in and examined:—

7103. By the Chairman: You are a merchant in the city of Sydney? I am.
7104. Are you connected with the Philharmonic Society? I am a member of the Committee of that Society. J. Black,
Esq.
7105. By Mr. Johnson: You are acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? I have known them nearly two years. 10 Dec., 1862.
7106. You became acquainted with them shortly after their arrival in Sydney? I cannot answer as to date of their arrival, but I can answer that I was acquainted with them about the month of February or March, 1861.
7107. And you have known them ever since? Yes.
7108. Intimately? Yes, I may say very intimately.
7109. From your knowledge of them, what is your opinion of them as to their respectability and veracity in particular? As to their respectability, I never had a doubt in my mind that they were of the very highest class of respectability. Mrs. Bentley I look upon as a thorough gentlewoman, and Mr. Bentley as a gentleman in every respect.
7110. How did they behave to one another during the intercourse you had with them? On the most affectionate terms as man and wife.
7111. How did Mrs. Bentley deport herself to her children? Like any good mother would do.
7112. And to her servants? I should say they treated her with great respect, and she spoke to them as any gentlewoman would speak to a dependent.
7113. Do you recollect Mrs. Bentley playing at the Philharmonic concert in May, 1861? I do.
7114. Will you state how that came to pass? Mr. Aldis informed me that he knew of a lady lately come to Sydney, that might be induced to perform at the Society's concert, and invited me to meet her at his house, to hear her play.
7115. Mr. Aldis is also a member of the Philharmonic Society? He was then Treasurer. I went to his house, and was introduced to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley. I heard her play; and after our next committee meeting we resolved to request her to appear at our forthcoming concert, and play a solo. As I have already stated, she did appear.
7116. Do you know who introduced her at the concert? To the best of my recollection, it was Mr. Plunkett, our President.
7117. Do you remember any criticisms on her performance in the two Sydney daily papers? I recollect reading them.
7118. Of what character were they, favourable or otherwise? Favourable.
7119. After the concert I presume you continued to visit at the Bentleys'? Yes, ever since.
7120. Do you recollect, shortly after that concert, making any inquiries about Mrs. Bentley's birth and parentage? Two days after the concert I received an anonymous letter. (Letter No. 1 handed to witness.) That is the letter, signed "a lover of truth," wherein Mrs. Bentley was spoken of as not being an Englishwoman, but as being an Italian, and stating that she had been the death of her mother. Feeling certain in my own mind that the letter was a piece of spite, I put it into my desk and did not take any notice of it for a few days, but I called on Mr. and Mrs. Bentley shortly afterwards, and in the course of conversation I asked them something about their own family history.

- J. Black, Esq.
 10 Dec., 1862.
7121. About her birth and parentage? Yes; and they told me that Mrs. Bentley was of English parentage, and, I think, that she was born in Exeter, but I will not be positive.
7122. Did you make any inquiries as to their knowledge of foreigners in the city? I did specially.
7123. What answer did they give? That the only one they knew that they had ever talked to was, I think, Signor Cutolo.
7124. Do you remember Mr. Rawack's name being mentioned? It may have been, but I will not undertake to say now that it was.
7125. Do you remember their ever telling you anything about circumstances which occurred at the Philharmonic concert, in reference to Mr. Rawack? Several times Mrs. Bentley alluded to what she considered rude conduct, on the part of Mr. Rawack, at that concert.
7126. Was it shortly after the concert took place when you made these inquiries? Yes, to the best of my belief it was.
7127. Do you remember Mrs. Bentley, at one of these interviews, saying anything as to having met Signor Cutolo? I recollect I asked Mrs. Bentley, as from myself, that she would look any foreigner she knew straight in the face the next time she saw them in the street. She asked me the reason, and I told her I could not then tell her the reason; but I wished her to do it, for my information.
7128. I want to know whether, at any interview, she informed you that she had had an interview with Signor Cutolo, at which he made some remark? She informed me of it at an interview, but I do not think it was the first interview after our concert, though she may have done so. I was a visitor perhaps once a fortnight, or once a week, shortly after the concert, because they were exceedingly amiable people, and I liked to talk with them.
7129. And musical people too? Yes.
7130. What was the tenor of the remark she told you Signor Cutolo had made? I think it was in reference to the critique on her playing at our concert. She stated she had met Signor Cutolo, and that he had made the remark—"the English for the English," or something to that effect.
7131. Do you remember, shortly after that, Mr. Bentley coming to you with an envelope? No, long after that; I knew of other anonymous letters being received by other parties shortly after that, and we did not take any notice of them to Mr. Bentley at that period.
7132. Did you have any conversations, either with Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, on the subject of any of these anonymous letters, until about the following October? No; some of my friends, who received similar letters, consulted with me, and we determined not to take any notice of them whatever, as it would only pain the Bentleys.
7133. Will you state to the Committee what had occurred, to your knowledge, during the interval after you had received the first letter—in a general way—what you heard on the subject—how many anonymous letters were received, and who had them? Mr. Aldis shewed me a letter that he had —
7134. How soon after the first letter that you got? Perhaps a month or six weeks. I concluded in my own mind that, as I had paid no attention, nor made use of my letter, a second letter was sent to Mr. Aldis, to rouse some feeling against the Bentleys. I do not recollect any other letter but those to Mr. Aldis and myself, until after Mr. Bentley came to me again with an envelope.
7135. When you had this interview, at which you put the question about the birth and parentage of Mrs. Bentley, could you judge from their demeanor whether they seemed to understand the purport of your inquiries? If I read any one's face at all, I should unquestionably say they were in total ignorance of the knowledge of any reason that might be in my breast for asking such questions. I did not go to the house for the purpose of intruding the subject; I merely touched upon it in the course of conversation, and did not make it a special subject at all, so as not to create the slightest suspicion in their mind that I had received any letter whatever.
7136. When Mr. Bentley saw you in October, will you state, as far as you recollect, what took place—Do you remember his coming to you and shewing you an envelope he got from Mr. Hanson? I recollect his coming to me and shewing me an envelope, telling me an anonymous letter-writer had sent a letter to Mr. Hanson. I do not recollect the date, but I am perfectly content to accept Mr. Bentley's dates as mine.
7137. Did he put a particular question to you, as to the inquiries you had formerly made? He asked me why I had been so particular in asking them in reference to Mrs. Bentley and himself.
7138. What reply did you give? I then, for the first time, shewed him the letter I had received.
7139. Did he ask whether your inquiries had any connection with the anonymous letters? Very likely he did. I know that was the first time I shewed him the anonymous letter I had received.
7140. You gave him that letter then? I did.
7141. Did you tell him anything about Mr. Aldis? I mentioned to him that Mr. Aldis had received a similar communication.
7142. Do you remember, some time after, about the end of October, Mr. Bentley coming to you, and stating any impression on his mind as to Mr. Rawack being connected with these letters—that he had thought Signor Cutolo was doing it, but that he could have no object in writing them? I do recollect some conversation of that kind; that is the purport of it; I cannot state in words the exact conversation.
7143. Did he ask you at that time to give him any handwriting of anybody's? I do not recollect.
7144. Do you remember whether he asked if you could get any of Mr. Rawack's handwriting? It is possible he may have done so, but at this date I really could not charge my memory with it.
- 7145.

7145. Do you remember also, about the end of that month, going with Mr. Hanson to see Mr. Bentley at the Australian Club? Perfectly.

J. Black,
Esq.

7146. What then took place between you and Mr. Hanson before you went there, in reference to your visit? Mr. Hanson and myself had previously been talking on the subject of the anonymous letters, and on the evening of that day I met Mr. Hanson, and he informed me he had received a communication that afternoon, in the same handwriting, to the effect that if he would go to a certain place on the following afternoon, he would witness the perfidy of Mrs. Bentley. We afterwards proceeded to the Australian Club, and there had an interview with Mr. Bentley, and told him of the circumstance, and he shewed us a letter which had been addressed to his wife. I will not be positive he shewed us the letter —

10 Dec., 1862.

7147. Let me ask, do you recollect whether Mr. Hanson shewed him the letter he had received? He did.

7148. Can you recognize that as the letter Mr. Hanson shewed you on that occasion—(Letter 5a handed to witness)? I can swear to it, from the expression used here—"at 5 o'clock, in the bush, behind Mr. Lamb's house."

7149. That is the letter Mr. Hanson then produced to Mr. Bentley? It is the same.

7150. Did Mr. Bentley shew you and Mr. Hanson the letter which I now produce, No. 5? That is the same letter that Mr. Bentley shewed to us.

7151. Did you have a conference upon the nature of the object of the writer of this letter? We had. We concluded that they were both written by the same person, and that no doubt there would be some one appointed to be there, of bad character, so that Mrs. Bentley's name might be identified with that person of bad character. Mr. Hanson undertook to proceed to the spot on the following afternoon.

7152. Allow me to ask if you had any conference as to where the supposed spot was? It must have been talked over, but I was not aware of the locality, and could not join in any conversation about it.

7153. Do you remember any map or directory being looked at, at the Australian Club? Yes, perfectly. We looked at the map, to shew us the street in which this house was.

7154. You came to the conclusion that it was some particular place? At the top of Woolloomooloo, we thought.

7155. Was it near where Capt. Lamb lived? Well, I do not know Capt. Lamb's residence; I am not acquainted with that locality at all.

7156. Mr. Hanson undertook the duty of watching to see what would occur? Yes; and I saw him going in a cab, as he stated, to the scene of what was described as would occur in the letter.

7157. Did anything else occur between that time and the following February, that you recollect—I believe nothing did, as far as you were concerned? No; only that I heard of other letters, and was anxious, like other friends of my own, to try and unravel the mystery, if possible. Mr. Rawack was particularly anxious to assist us in unravelling the mystery, and took a good deal of trouble in tracing handwritings, and going about from place to place respecting this matter.

7158. Then you came to the conclusion that Mr. Rawack could not have been a party concerned? I never considered that he was.

7159. Do you remember, in the early part of February last, calling at Mr. Bentley's house, and being informed by them of some fictitious assignation that had been sent? I do.

7160. Will you look at this—do you recollect upon that occasion their shewing you two letters, one addressed to Mrs. Robert Johnson, enclosing the alleged assignation letter? I recollect seeing that letter, and this letter I recollect, from the style in which it is written. (Letters 13 and 13a.)

7161. You were informed by the Bentleys of the receipt of these letters? Yes; and I suggested a plan that they should allow me to adopt to have the place watched.

7162. What was the plan? A clerk whom I had had in my office for some time received an appointment under the new Police Act, and was drafted into Captain M'Lerie's office, to do some clerical work, until he was sent up the country. Mr. Gibson was his name. I suggested that he was a gentleman on whose honor they might rely, and that I should ask the consent of Captain M'Lerie to send him out to the place in question on the next forenoon. They willingly gave their consent, and I went to Captain M'Lerie next morning, and told him of the circumstances. He appeared to be aware of the persecution, shook his head, and said they had got their eyes on the parties, and, in fact, that they had no doubt of the parties who were carrying on the business as against the Bentleys.

7163. Had you more than one conversation with Captain M'Lerie on the subject? Only one.

7164. About when was it? The morning I called upon him to obtain leave of absence for Mr. Gibson for the day, to go and watch the proceedings at Newtown.

7165. Captain M'Lerie agreed to Mr. Gibson being employed for the purpose? He did.

7166. Did you understand that he was so employed? I know he was, because he came with me to Mrs. Bentley's, and I introduced him to Mrs. Bentley, and after ten minutes conversation in the drawing-room, we proceeded down the street, and he left me for the purpose of going in the 'bus, ten minutes before she went. He afterwards told me he went; that, a quarter of an hour after, Mrs. Bentley came; that he saw her at a distance, and she was walking along the road at the same rate any lady would walk, and proceeded into a house which, he believed, from what I had previously told him, was Mr. Josephson's. He waited, and did not see any one come for a few minutes, but afterwards he saw an old man walking along the road and looking about as if looking out for a lady. I asked him to describe him; he said he was a tall man, that his eyes were coming out of his head, as it were; he spoke as seeing him from a distance, that he was grey-headed, and had on a peculiar hat, and this peculiar hat especially fixed me in my opinion. From the description given, I had

- J. Black,
Esq.

- a pretty correct notion in my own mind who the person was. The same afternoon Mr. Gibson walked with me along George-street. We saw Mr. Merewether coming down on the Post Office side of George-street; we were on the other side, and he called out to me, pointing to Mr. Merewether, "He is the man." I said, "Are you quite sure that is the man." He said "I can swear to it."
7167. Which Mr. Merewether? The Honorable Mr. Merewether, the Vice-President of our Society.
7168. Did Mr. Gibson tell you how far that gentleman walked up the Enmore Road? No, he did not mention any distance to me; it was merely the fact of his walking up and down, and looking about as if he expected to meet some one, and then going away. The impression I had formed at the time was this, that Mr. Merewether was in no way connected with this persecution, but that he was merely made the victim of some designing person or persons.
7169. Do you remember, on the evening of that day, being present when Mr. Hanson came in? I do.
7170. Will you state, as well as you recollect, what took place on that occasion—was the subject of who were the guilty parties canvassed at all? Very freely canvassed indeed, especially by Mr. Hanson.
7171. What opinion did Mr. Hanson express? He expressed a strong opinion that, from the circumstances which had transpired, it could be none other than Signor Cutolo, with the assistance of such a colleague as Montagu. I could not see it in the same light, and I begged of them all—the Bentleys and Mr. Hanson—to be cautious, and not to allow their suspicions to rest on any one individual, but to be equally thrown against everybody, until they found the persecutor; and I recollect the whole of them were rather annoyed with me for being so cautious in the matter, Mr. Hanson especially.
7172. By Mr. Morris: What reason had Mr. Hanson for believing that Signor Cutolo was the party? He used a long train of argument, which I really forget now.
7173. Did he state any facts which had come to his own knowledge derogatory to Signor Cutolo's character? I do not think he ever mentioned anything derogatory to Signor Cutolo's character, on any subject but in reference to this matter of the Bentleys.
7174. By Mr. Johnson: The arguments he put forward were —? To point directly to Signor Cutolo.
7175. He thought the circumstances proved him to be the perpetrator? To be one of the perpetrators.
7176. Did he express these opinions in the absence of the Bentleys? Several times, in his own office and mine too.
7177. He was very strong in expressing these opinions? Yes.
7178. And incautious, you thought? Well, not as I would have been acting upon my then impression.
7179. By Mr. Morris: Did it appear to you that Mr. Bentley was influenced by Mr. Hanson's opinion, with regard to Signor Cutolo, more than by any opinion of his own? It is difficult to judge under such circumstances, because Mr. Hanson was there as Mr. Bentley's friend, and the matter was talked over and canvassed, and no doubt the influence of Mr. Hanson's opinion would guide Mr. Bentley's judgment to a certain extent, but to what extent I am not prepared to say.
7180. By Mr. Johnson: Do you remember any particular circumstance that Mr. Hanson mentioned, with respect to Signor Cutolo, in reference to Signor D'Apice, having made any statements, at different times, at variance with each other with respect to him—do you remember Mr. Hanson telling you that Signor Cutolo had made use of some expressions about Signor D'Apice, as to his being a Jesuit? Yes, I recollect Mr. Hanson making use of such expressions as that, but the date or the words he used I will not charge my memory with.
7181. Allow me to read the seventy-seventh paragraph of what is called the deposition of the Bentleys (paragraph in question read)? Yes, I recollect part of that conversation being repeated to me.
7182. By whom? By Mr. Hanson; but I could not be positive to every word.
7183. Do you remember in particular that he informed you that Signor Cutolo had spoken disparagingly of Signor D'Apice? I do, and I can swear positively to the words—"an Italian"—"a Jesuit"—and "his name is Sica."
7184. Do you remember, a short time after Signor Cutolo gave a concert in aid of the Destitute Children's Asylum, seeing Mr. Bentley, and making any remarks to him as to the conduct of Signor Cutolo on the evening of that concert? I do; I had heard it talked of out of doors that Signor Cutolo was in a state of great excitement, and that he was seen in the lobby of the Freemason's Hall tearing his Garibaldi ribbon, and knocking the covering to his head about in his hand in a very excited manner.
7185. You made that communication to Mr. Bentley? I did.
7186. Do you remember when Mr. Harrison took the matter in hand the second time? I do; I recollect being told of it about the time.
7187. Did Mr. Bentley make any communication to you, as to his being bound to secrecy? He did; he said the matter was now in the hands of the police, and he was bound not to divulge anything that was going on, lest it should in any way hinder them in finding out the perpetrators.
7188. What conduct did Mr. Boulanger observe? He made use of similar expressions; but he was not equally guarded, for he was in the habit of telling me, in great confidence, what was taking place.
7189. Could you judge, from his manner, that he believed the Bentleys were the victims of a persecution? I am positive that his manner betrayed that feeling.
7190. By Mr. Morris: And his words too? And his words too.

7191. By Mr. Johnson: Do you remember the concert on the night of the 27th of May? Was that the one at which Mrs. Bentley was to have appeared? J. Black,
Esq.
7192. Yes, when Mr. Merewether declined to lead her to the platform? Yes.
7193. Did you see Mr. Harrison on that night? Yes. 10 Dec., 1862.
7194. Was there anything in his manner that led you at that time to believe that he suspected the Bentleys of being the concocters of this affair? Nothing whatever.
7195. On the contrary? The contrary, certainly. I looked upon him then as being the protector of Mrs. Bentley on that occasion, and he received a large supply of tickets for his men to prevent any assault on Mrs. Bentley.
7196. How many tickets did he get? To the best of my belief, hearing it talked of in Committee, he had ten or a dozen sent him. Mr. Aldis would be able to tell you; I think he gave him the tickets.
7197. By Mr. Morris: Has Mr. Harrison ever expressed to you any opinion of his own with regard to this Bentley case, since the concert? No, not until after this inquiry was commenced.
7198. He has since then? He has since then.
7199. Unfavourable? Unfavourable to the Bentleys. I now recollect that I have had conversations with him in Mr. Aldis' shop, wherein I was led to believe from his remarks that he believed the Bentleys were wrongly persecuted people, and that he was doing all he could to find them out; and that he hoped he would find the parties out. I may further state that I watched narrowly—certainly not with a prejudice against the Bentleys, because I believe them to be what I have stated in the first portion of my examination—but I carefully watched their demeanour and conduct on all occasions, having seen them under all circumstances, at times when they had no idea I should call upon them, and I could not discover anything whatever to lead me to believe that they were themselves in any way connected with this persecution. I have seen Mrs. Bentley, when I have visited her house, busily engaged as any good wife and mother would be.
7200. By Mr. Johnson: In point of fact, have you observed any indications of levity of conduct in Mrs. Bentley? The very reverse.
7201. Or any tendency to romance? On the contrary, I think a more matter of fact sensible lady I would not meet with in a day's journey.

THURSDAY, 11 DECEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER,	MR. W. FORSTER,
MR. MORRIS,	MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. WILSON,	MR. LUCAS.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. C. E. Harrison called in and further examined:—

7202. By the Chairman: Do you produce certain notes? Yes. Mr. C. E.
Harrison.
7203. What are they? They are in Mrs. Harrison's handwriting; one is part of an index to a scrap book, or something of that sort; and the other is a bill in Mrs. Harrison's handwriting. 11 Dec., 1862.
7204. By Mr. Morris: In this letter, which you have informed the Committee Mrs. Bentley gave to you, and which, as you alleged, she pre-arranged to write, I observe it is stated that Mr. Cowper was very gracious, but that Captain McLerie not having returned, he could not decide upon anything until after having had an interview with him; the letters were, I believe, left in Mr. Cowper's hands for perusal—What does that mean—to whom was Mr. Cowper gracious, do you suppose? To Mr. Bentley, by the tenor of the letter.
7205. And you suppose that Mr. Bentley left letters in Mr. Cowper's hands? I do not know whether it was Mr. Bentley or Mr. Wrench.
7206. Still you think the person to whom Mr. Cowper was gracious was Mr. Bentley—Had you any conversation with Mrs. Bentley, so as to enable you to ascertain to whom Mr. Cowper was so gracious? I had not; the contents of the letter were not the subject of any conversation between Mrs. Bentley and myself.
7207. It appears that on the 20th of June you had an interview with Mr. Wrench, at his office? I had an interview with Mr. Wrench, at his office, one evening, but I forget the date.
7208. Did he inform you that day, that he had called upon Mr. Cowper? I forget whether he or Mr. Bentley informed me that Mr. Wrench had called upon Mr. Cowper; I was informed by some one that Mr. Wrench had called upon Mr. Cowper, but I do not know who it was that told me.
7209. Then you are not able at all to say whether that part of the letter where Mr. Cowper is represented as being gracious to some one, refers to Mr. Bentley or to Mr. Wrench? I am not.
7210. By Mr. Forster: You are positive that Mrs. Bentley gave you the letter? Yes.
7211. Do you know whether it is in her handwriting or not? I do not.
7212. Was it in a closed envelope when she gave it to you? No, it was in a plain envelope, neither directed nor closed.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
11 Dec., 1862.
7213. Are you sure she gave it you as a letter she had written herself, or as one that had fallen into her possession, and which she handed to you? I believe the words she used were, "I have written the letter earlier than I intended, so that I may post it to-morrow when I go out to give lessons, as I might not have an opportunity of posting it on Saturday." This was on Thursday night.
7214. Mrs. Bentley had never written to you before? No.
7215. You regard this letter as written in consequence of a promise Mrs. Bentley had made to you to write a letter? Yes.
7216. That was on the subject of the letters? Yes, on the subject of the case itself.
7217. A letter to some extent official, and upon the business of the case? Yes.
7218. Did you ever talk to Mrs. Bentley before, of any belief in her madness? No, I have not talked to her about it; I think it was to Mr. Bentley; there was some conversation concerning a rumour that she was mad.
7219. Did you ever ask her for any explanation of portions of this letter which do not appear quite consistent with her having written it to you? I did not.
7220. Did it not strike you that there were such inconsistencies in it? Yes; I afterwards met her on the road to Newtown, and she told me that if I had not done so already, it would be better to destroy the letter.
7221. This letter in question? Yes.
7222. You have read the letter over and over again, I suppose, and does it not strike you that there are inconsistencies in it, throwing a doubt on the supposition that she wrote it herself? I did not think so at the time I read it; it is written in a style so that if it should fall into other persons' hands, it would not compromise the parties who wrote it.
7223. Do you think that is the object? Yes, that appears to be the intention.
7224. You see these words used—"I am sorry to say the belief in Mrs. Bentley's madness is gaining ground"—is not that inconsistent with the supposition of her writing it herself? No; if you look at a previous part of it you will see that it does not speak of the Bentley case in the first person.
7225. Do you not think that both these matters are inconsistent with the supposition that she wrote it herself? Yes, unless it was written with that object,—that if it fell into the hands of other persons it should not compromise the writer, but lead to the supposition that it did not come from Mrs. Bentley.
7226. Are you quite sure you made no mistake about this letter—that it was not given to you by another lady who had written it? Quite sure.
7227. You are quite certain that Mrs. Harrison did not write it? Quite certain.
7228. By the Chairman: What is Mrs. Harrison's maiden name? Carr.
7229. By Mr. Forster: Do you know Mrs. Bentley's handwriting? I cannot say that I do. I have no doubt I have seen it.
7230. Have you compared it with this? No.
7231. Are you aware whether Mr. Bentley knew of its being given to you by Mrs. Bentley? No.
7232. How do you come to that conclusion? From the tenor of the letter; I do not think he was aware of it, although he might have been.
7233. Under what circumstances did she give it to you—was any one but yourself and Mrs. Bentley in the room? No.
7234. Was it in her own house? Yes, in the front dining-room.
7235. Was the door shut? I think not; the other people in the house had gone to bed, I believe.
7236. And did she give it to you in such a way that she appeared to wish it to be concealed—in a hurried or hasty way? She took it from her pocket, saying something to the effect that she had kept her promise, and that she had written it earlier than she intended, so that she might post it the next day, as she might not have an opportunity of doing so on Saturday.
7237. Do you regard the letter as confidential? Yes.
7238. How then did you make it public? Because I was told here to produce every letter and scrap of paper I had.
7239. Do you then feel it to be your duty, on that account, to disclose all confidences of everything that occurred between any lady or female and yourself? Certainly not; but in a matter of this kind I have nothing to conceal; I am placed in an awkward position.
7240. Do you think the getting this letter places you in an awkward position? Not more than other circumstances.
7241. Did it surprise you at all to receive it? It did not. From her previous manner, and other circumstances, I was not surprised when she gave it to me.
7242. Would you feel surprised to get a letter of that kind from a married lady of your acquaintance? I should indeed.
7243. You never mentioned the letter to Mr. Bentley afterwards, I suppose? I did not.
7244. Did you shew it to Mrs. Harrison? I did.
7245. Soon after receiving it? It might have been the same evening, or the following day, or thereabouts.
7246. You are quite sure it was not written by some one else, and by some mistake a confusion has arisen in your mind concerning it? That is the letter Mrs. Bentley gave me—who the writer was I cannot say.
7247. By the Chairman: Did you ever make a different statement here as to how you received that letter? No.
7248. Under what circumstances you received it? No.
7249. Did you not state that Mrs. Bentley went to the door with you, and gave you the letter? No; she went to the door with me, but gave me the letter in the dining-room.

7250. Did you not state that you left early that day? Yes; I call 10 or 11 o'clock at night early, considering the hours at which I was in the habit of leaving. Mr. C. E.
Harrison.
7251. You feel sure you did not state that she accompanied you to the door and then gave you the letter? No, she might have accompanied me to the door, and I believe she did, 11 Dec., 1862.
but she gave me the letter in the dining-room.
7252. Was that on the last occasion you were at the Bentleys? No, I was there some time after.
7253. On what other occasion did you accompany her to Newtown, or meet her on her way there? I cannot recollect just now.
7254. Have you a memorandum in your diary, as to your meeting her on that particular occasion? I do not know.
7255. Does it not strike you as strange, that you should make an entry of some of these occasions, and not of others? There may be an entry to that effect, but if not, it is not less true.
7256. When you read Mr. Bentley's depositions, did you make any remark that Mrs. Bentley only remained up, when you were in the house, for the purpose of shutting up the place? I do not recollect making any remark to that effect; I do not know that it is in the deposition.
7257. Were you in the habit of leaving detective officers in the house when you left? Yes, when they were on duty for the night. If I left before 12 o'clock I left them there.
7258. What detective did you leave in the house all night? I believe Clark and Sanderson have been there all night in their turns.
7259. Sanderson denies being there all night—Do you know any other? I do not.
7260. By Mr. Johnson: You say that you produced this letter which you allege Mrs. Bentley gave you, because you were called upon by the Committee to produce every scrap of paper you had—Is that the only reason you had for producing it? I do not think I should have produced it if it had not been for that.
7261. Did you shew it to any one except your wife? I did not—no person.
7262. Did you communicate to Mr. Cowper that you had such a letter? I did not.
7263. Nor to Captain M'Lerie? Yes.
7264. When? I believe the day after he was examined here—either on the evening of that day or shortly after, when he made some allusion to the diary, but with regard to some other entry that there was a doubt about.
7265. Putting your wife out of the question, can you name any person who saw that letter before Captain M'Lerie had been examined here? No, unless some one got it from my pocket-book without my knowledge.
7266. Can you name any one to whom you mentioned the fact of your having such a letter? No.
7267. Then you produce that letter, you say, simply in obedience to the demands of this Committee? Yes; I should not have produced it had it not been for the order the Chairman gave with regard to the matter, when he said that they required every scrap of paper, and I then produced all I had in my possession, in connection with the case.
7268. You did not think of producing this letter for your own justification or vindication? I might have thought it would corroborate certain entries in the diary; nevertheless, I do not think I should have produced it except for the order of the Committee.
7269. During the times when Mr. Bentley had retired to bed before you left, and before Mrs. Bentley went to bed, you state that you occasionally heard noises—have you not said so? No, I do not know that I said so.
7270. Well, you intimated to the Committee that, from some means or other, you were satisfied that Mr. Bentley was at the door, listening? Yes, I believed so; why I believe so I do not know; I thought I might have heard or fancied I heard something, but I was satisfied he was there.
7271. Can you tell the Committee any circumstance whatever, that induced you to form that opinion? No, I cannot; I have already stated that I cannot.
7272. But did you not occasionally hear noises about 12 o'clock at night, when Mr. Bentley would knock overhead? Yes, I believe it was when he wanted her to take something up; I believe when he wanted her he would knock on the floor—that was the signal.
7273. Did you ever hear other noises than those caused in that way? I cannot say why, but I thought I did.
7274. Do you recollect hearing any? I do not.
7275. Do you recollect any circumstance, shortly before the concert of the 27th of May, about reloading Mr. Bentley's revolver? I do not recollect reloading Mr. Bentley's revolver; I might have reloaded it for him, but have no recollection of doing so.
7276. Do you recollect receiving a note from Mr. Bentley to Boulanger, requesting him to return his revolver? Yes, I do; I did not give it to Boulanger, I gave it back to Mr. Bentley I believe; I believe Mr. Bentley had seen Boulanger in the mean time.
7277. Did not Mr. Bentley tell you that he had met Boulanger in the mean time? Yes, and that there was no occasion to give the note to him. I do not think I gave it to Boulanger.
7278. Did you not then state something to this effect—"By the by, this has been loaded for a long time, and you had better have it reloaded or it may miss fire"? I do not recollect.
7279. Do you recollect saying to Mr. Bentley—"I will not leave you without one; I will bring my own revolver for you to-morrow, and then take the other back?" That was my revolver that Mr. Bentley had.
7280. Did you say that to him? I might have said it, but I do not recollect.
7281. Did you accordingly bring him any revolver of yours? I have no recollection.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison. 7282. By the Chairman: Have you two revolvers? There are three or four in the office; sometimes I have three of my own. I have three or four of my own. I do not deny that this might have taken place, but I do not recollect the particulars.
- 11 Dec., 1862. 7283. Do you remember the night of Saturday the 10th of May, when you got the letter stating "Mrs. Bentley's life is in danger; look everywhere; I speak from knowledge"? Yes, I recollect it was in the middle of the night.
7284. You went to the Bentleys' did you not? Yes, if that was the date.
7285. Look at your diary, and tell me if that was the date? Yes it was, on the Sunday morning.
7286. What time was it on the Sunday morning that you arrived at the Bentleys' house? About half-past 2 o'clock.
7287. You knocked him up, did you not? Yes.
7288. Who was with him? Detective Carnes.
7289. What did you do—I believe you were let into the house by Mr. Bentley? Yes.
7290. Had he a revolver with him then? I do not know.
7291. Did you ask him if he had one? I do not recollect.
7292. Did you not ask him, and did he not tell you that he had? I do not recollect.
7293. Did you and that detective take off your shoes? I do not recollect doing so.
7294. You say by your diary that you laughed at that letter; and I want to know whether, when you arrived at the Bentleys' house, you and the other man did not take off your shoes? I might have done so.
7295. And you not only asked him for a revolver, but did he not give you the one he had with him? I do not know. I had the one.
7296. By Mr. Morris: But you were armed? I am generally armed. That night I know I was, because I was going up to a gang of thieves here in Sydney, and under those circumstances, I generally go armed.
7297. You were there at 2 o'clock in the morning—how long did you remain? I cannot say; probably about half-an-hour—it might have been longer.
7298. How was it you had not looked at that letter, the superscription and postmark, until you got to the Bentleys'? I do not know. I do not recollect whether I looked at it or not.
7299. Do you not know that you were not aware, until Mr. Bentley discovered it, that the letter shewed by the postmark that it had been lying some time for you? I do not know whether Mr. Bentley or I discovered it. It appears in the diary that Mr. Bentley called my attention to it, but I cannot say from memory whether such was the case or not.
7300. I want to know whether you yourself were so careless as not to have discovered it before you got to the Bentleys' house? ———
7301. By the Chairman: Would the Central Police authorities allow a letter to you in that form, to remain at the office two days without acquainting you of it? They have done so more than once, frequently. I have had notices of lodge meetings lying there for days and days.
7302. Have you complained of that usage? Yes.
7303. Did you at that time? No.
7304. Not when you found it out? No, I have with regard to other letters.
7305. Does it not strike you, that serious consequences might arise from such conduct? Serious results might occur, from the fact of letters of importance being allowed to lie there without my knowledge. I do not think such results ever did arise, but they may, though I am in the habit of going round in the morning, and that was the reason they did not send it round to me, probably.
7306. Had you any knowledge of the letter being received, before it was sent from the Central Police Office? I did not receive it there, but at my office; and seeing the hand it was written in, I thought it was a hoax, and not of any consequence. I put it into my pocket, and did not open it until I went into York-street, when I did so whilst waiting for a gentleman there.
7307. By Mr. Johnson: Whether they were blamable at the Central Police Office or not, you did not put yourself into a position to complain of it, by discovering the fact that it had been lying there, you having got it on the morning of the 11th, whilst it bore the postmark of the 9th? I got it on the morning of the 11th, and my attention was called to the postmark at about half-past 2 o'clock on the morning of that day. I was at the Bentleys house at the time.
7308. If Mr. Bentley had not called your attention to it, you would not have known that it had been lying some time, and therefore could not have complained? I do not know if I looked at the date of the postmark in the street when I opened it. I am not sure whether Mr. Bentley called my attention to the fact, or whether I looked at it previously.
7309. It is possible, then, that you knew the fact before he called your attention to it? It is possible, but I do not think it.
7310. You could not have been very vigilant about the matter, if you did not look at it yourself? With regard to the Bentley case then, knowing that the Bentleys were not in danger, I did not take all the precautions I should have done if the case had been genuine. I thought the matter a swindle, and therefore did not take the same interest in it that I should otherwise have done. But I was equally cautious not to allow them to know that I thought it was a swindle, by acting and speaking in the house as if I thought the whole affair legitimate.
7311. I wish you to read the 215th and 216th paragraphs of the depositions—Is there anything in that statement that you are prepared to contradict? No.
7312. Well, at what time in the day do you say that you next went to the Bentleys'? In the middle of the day, about 12 or 1 o'clock; I do not recollect exactly.

7313. Did you not, before leaving, that night, allude to a fishing party that you had agreed to go to—do you recollect that circumstance? No, I do not.
7314. Were you engaged to go to a fishing party on that Sunday? I do not think I was.
7315. Was not Mr. Bentley aware of that? I have not been to a fishing party for years. I cannot say, however, whether I might have said I was engaged to go to a fishing party, but I know I did not go, because I had other business on hand to prevent it.
7316. Did he not say "How will you manage?" and you said, "I will not go to that now, but come down here again," or something to that effect, and that Mr. Bentley said, "Well, you had better come down and dine with us"? It might have been so.
7317. Were you not invited to dine with the Bentleys that day? I cannot say.
7318. Did you not arrive at their house on that day about dinner-time, about half-past 1 o'clock? I do not recollect. Perhaps I can tell from my diary. I do not think Mr. Bentley was at home. (Diary handed to witness.) It does not say at what time I went there, but I know it was in the middle of the day.
7319. Did you go into the loft on that occasion before dinner? I do not recollect whether I did or not. I know that I went into the loft, and that Mr. Bentley accompanied me.
7320. Did you not go up-stairs into the upper rooms, and come down almost immediately, because dinner was waiting? I do not recollect.
7321. Well, was it not nearly dusk that day when you and Mr. Bentley went into the loft? No, nearly the middle of the day.
7322. What do you call the middle of the day? Between 12 and 3 o'clock. I am satisfied it was between those hours that we went up to the loft.
7323. Do you recollect where you took dessert that day? I do not recollect.
7324. Did you not take dessert in the drawing-room? I do not recollect.
7325. Did you not say it would be better to postpone going up there until the servants were gone away? No, because there were no precautions then taken with regard to the servants.
7326. And that the examination of the loft was delayed in consequence? The examination took place in the middle of the day, although that conversation might have taken place with regard to the servants. It was perfectly light when the examination was made in the loft.
7327. Did you take away the gimlet that day? No, not for some time afterwards.
7328. How was it that you eventually took it away? I do not know under what circumstances.
7329. Did not Mr. Bentley give it you? No, I do not recollect that he did. If I recollect rightly, I took it out of the drawer of a cabinet, and made some remark to the effect that I would retain it.
7330. Have you got any entry of that? I do not think I have.
7331. Can you say he did not give it you, and ask you if you could trace where it was got from? No, I am certain he did not.
7332. Do you say you did get it out of the drawer? I believe I did so. The drawer of a small fancy cabinet in the front drawing-room.
7333. Do you mean to assert that you did? I believe so.
7334. Will you assert positively that you did? No.
7335. What sort of a cabinet is this? A small Chinese cabinet.
7336. How many drawers are there in it? I cannot say.
7337. Did you expect to find a gimlet there? No, I saw it there.
7338. Did not Mr. Bentley open the cabinet drawer and give it to you? He might have done so. I may explain, that I have no recollection of going to fetch it, or of his giving it me for a particular purpose. He never did so.
7339. You do not mean to say that you went to the cabinet, and took the gimlet from there? No, I say it was given to me from the cabinet drawer, but not for the particular purpose of seeing if I could ascertain where it was purchased.
7340. You do not deny then that it was given to you by Mr. Bentley—do you not believe it was? I am not certain whether it was Mr. or Mrs. Bentley who gave it to me; I believe both were present.
7341. You kept the gimlet? Yes, I do not recollect under what circumstances; it was either given to me, or I took it from the drawer of this cabinet.
7342. Did you examine Mr. Bentley's tool-chest? I did not.
7343. You do not know the contents? No, I have seen that it contained tools.
7344. Do you not know there is a printed list of tools on the chest? No.
7345. You did not take the precaution to look? It did not strike me about the tool-chest till afterwards.
7346. You believe it came from the new chest of tools in his possession—on what grounds—have you compared it with any of the contents of the chest? No.
7347. You never compared them, or examined the tool-chest? No, I do not recollect that I did.
7348. You never made yourself acquainted with the fact, whether the complement of tools, as appeared on the list, were in the box? No.
7349. But you say you have every reason to believe that it came out of that chest? Yes, from the new appearance of the gimlet, and the peculiar fashion of the tools, if my memory serves me rightly.
7350. What sort of tools are they? They were new tools. But I cannot tell you now whether the head of the gimlet was round or flat.
7351. Can you say whether the same maker's name was upon that gimlet as upon those in the chest? I do not know that.
7352. Can you say whether the gimlets in the box were of that size? I did not take any tools out of the box.

Mr. C. E.
Harrison.

11 Dec., 1862.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
- 11 Dec., 1862.
7353. Have you any reason for supposing that it came out of that tool-chest? From the appearance of the gimlet and the tools themselves, although I never compared them particularly.
7354. By the Chairman: How many gimlets have you seen in your life-time, Mr. Harrison—one hundred? I dare say I have.
7355. Have they all been very much alike? Some were old, some were new, some were big, some little; some with light handles, some with dark handles.
7356. Have you seen a hundred new ones? Yes, and not all alike.
7357. Seeing that you took particular care to identify this gimlet with the tools in the chest, can you say what sort of tools they were? I cannot tell you more than I have already done. When I saw the gimlet, it presented an appearance similar to those in the box of Mr. Bentley's tool-chest, but I did not compare them, although I intended to do so, being afraid of doing so, lest I should excite the suspicion of the Bentleys, for they were watching me as closely as I was watching them.
7358. Have you any reason for believing that it came out of that tool-chest? Only from the similarity in the fashion of the tools.
7359. Would it affect your belief, if it were shewn that on Thursday last the box contained the full complement of tools? No; if I had not seen them until afterwards, I might have suspected that another gimlet had been put in.
7360. Do you remember the verandah door being broken open? No, not being broken open.
7361. Being forced open? I recollect its presenting the appearance of being forcibly opened.
7362. Do you recollect its having the appearance of being forced open, when you said it had been done with a jemmy? Yes.
7363. Did you see the box of tools then? Yes.
7364. Did you then see the screw-driver taken out of the box? Yes.
7365. Did you search to see which tool would be most likely to be taken, and shew how the door was forced open? I do not know.
7366. Did he hand it to you? I do not know; he might have done so.
7367. The chest was always in the room? I believe so.
7368. Had you not detectives in the room for days together, when neither of the Bentleys were there? During the night they had no candle.
7369. But they were there in the day-time? I am not aware of the fact; I know when I have seen them there they had no light.
7370. Could you not have looked into the tool chest without exciting the slightest suspicion? I did not like to compare the gimlet with the tools, or to overhaul the tools.
7371. By Mr. Morris: Do you not think the statement in your report must have led Mr. Cowper to believe that you had made yourself certain that that gimlet was from that very tool-chest? I said that I had every reason to believe that it was; I did not absolutely say that the gimlet came from Mr. Bentley's tool-box, but that I had every reason to believe it did.
7372. Can you state any other reasons for that belief than you have now given before this Committee? No.
7373. By the Chairman: Have you ever seen two descriptions of gimlets different from each other—one with a long wind or twist, and the other with a screw? Yes.
7374. And which of these would you call a peculiar make? Well, I do not know.
7375. Is not the gimlet you speak of a common make, with regard to the worm and the fashion of it? It is an ordinary gimlet.
7376. The others are not ordinary gimlets? I do not know.
7377. Do you mean to say that the plaster on the point of this gimlet is the same as when you got it from the roof? Yes, though there might have been more on it.
7378. You are sure it is in the same state? There might have been more on it.
7379. You can get such plaster as that from the roof? I cannot say that. Holes were made in the roof, with a gimlet, but I do not know whether the holes were made with that gimlet, not being present when they were made. Mr. Bentley can give better evidence as to whether the plaster on the gimlet is the same as that on the roof.
7380. Do you know that Mr. Bentley can prove it to be the gimlet, by the plaster there? I cannot say.
7381. Can you, if I produce you fifty gimlets with plaster on them like this, say whether that is the gimlet you speak of? I only say that I recognize it as the gimlet, on account of the plaster.
7382. By Mr. Morris: Have you marked it? Yes, there are two or three marks made on it with the point of a pen-knife.
7383. By the Chairman: Have you any plan of them? No, I believe not; they are made with a pen-knife under the wood of the handle.
7384. When did you put the marks on it? At the time I got the gimlet.
7385. By Mr. Johnson: On the 28th you say Mr. Bentley had a conversation with you about publishing a letter? Yes, we had a conversation about the publishing of some letters.
7386. On the 28th of May you talked with him about the publication of some letters? I do not know that it was on the 28th of May.
7387. Just look at your diary—in your entry there you state that you advised him to publish everything? (Diary handed to witness.) Yes, I have an entry to that effect.
7388. Is it true that you that day advised him to publish everything? Yes.
7389. That is true? Yes.
7390. Now I ask you whether it is not a fact that you that day told him to make no allusion whatever to the steps taken by the police? I do not know that I did so on that day, but I know that I did advise him not to make any allusion to the police.

7391. Do you recollect afterwards his reading the draft of the letter to you? I do recollect him reading a draft to me. Mr. C. E. Harrison.
7392. Look at your own entry, where you say that after dinner Mr. Bentley read a letter to you, when you recommended him to omit all mention of the steps taken by the police in the matter—Was not that request made on the 28th May, and not on the 1st of June? It might have been made on both days, or at three different times; in fact, I believe it was made more than once. 11 Dec., 1862.
7393. Are you sure of that? Yes, certain that it has been the subject of conversation for the police not to be mentioned in those letters.
7394. You say it took place on both days? Very likely.
7395. On the 28th of May and on the 1st of June, when he read the letter to you? Yes, this entry is the 1st of June.
7396. Now, you say that at the time he read the letter to you, you requested him to omit the mention of all steps taken by the police in the matter—is that true? Yes.
7397. Look at that—(Letter handed to witness)—see if all mention of the police is not omitted? It is possible there is no mention of the steps taken by the police, but I cannot say that this is the draft, although, if it is, I do not see that there is anything in it to contradict what I say.
7398. How do you account for the entry saying that he read the letter, or copy, and you requested him to omit all mention of the police, when there was no such mention of it? He might have written the draft to submit to his friends, to see whether they were satisfied or not, when I expressed that wish.
7399. By the Chairman: Did you see the draft? Mr. Bentley read it to me, but I did not read it.
7400. Was it got up in the same way as that produced? I do not think it was in slips like this.
7401. By Mr. Johnson: With that exception, does it appear to be the same draft? I cannot tell. It might have been written within the last few days, or Mr. Bentley might have had it by him for some time. I do not recollect the contents of the draft. There was a conversation on more than one occasion with reference to the omission of any mention of the police in the letters.
7402. Can you account for the apparent inconsistency of your having had a conversation, on the 28th of May, with Mr. Bentley, about publishing everything, at which time you say you requested him to make no mention of the steps taken by the police? I do not say so. I say the subject of the police has been under conversation on more than one occasion, and might have been the subject of conversation on that day, but I do not say it was.
7403. Can you account for this apparent inconsistency—supposing the draft letter now produced to be the draft letter read by him on the 1st of June, and that there is no allusion in that draft to the steps taken by the police, how you came to enter in your diary that, when you heard it read, you requested him to omit all mention of the steps taken by the police? I do not see any inconsistency in it. I do not know whether Mr. Bentley had finished his draft—whether he had not part written it, or had concluded it. I should have made the remark probably about the police, if I thought Mr. Bentley had not finished his letter for publication.
7404. Do you undertake to say he had not finished it when he read it over to you? I do not recollect whether he had or not.
7405. The letter did appear in the newspapers of the 4th of June, did it not? Yes.
7406. And did he not upon that occasion record to you the particulars of the Exeter business, and state that he had told you all he knew about it? Not about the Exeter business; I do not recollect him giving particulars about it on that occasion.
7407. Do you say he did not? No. There were frequently remarks passing upon that subject, but I do not recollect any being made upon that occasion.
7408. When were any first made? By Mrs. Bentley first.
7409. I am asking you about Mr. Bentley? I cannot say.
7410. Did he not tell you of a conversation he had had with Mr. Richard Johnson, on the subject? If I recollect rightly, he said Mr. Richard Johnson called after him in the street, and said, "How about the transaction at Exeter?" and that he went back, and gave him some of the particulars, as far as he knew. I think those were the words.
7411. Was not that the first time you and Mr. Bentley had had any conversation about the Exeter business? No; previous to that we had had conversations about the Exeter business.
7412. Point to an entry in your journal when you had? I do not know that there is an entry to that effect.
7413. By the Chairman: Does not your entry in the journal make it appear that you had found out the Exeter case yourself? The entry in the journal, on the 7th July, is with regard to what Mr. Elworthy, the tailor, told me. It says:—"This morning, called on Elworthy, tailor, George-street; and in the course of conversation, knowing that he had lived at Exeter, I questioned him about the Monk family. He told me that a similar case occurred there about fourteen years ago, and that the present Mrs. Bentley, then Miss Julia Monk, was the heroine. He could not give me all the particulars, but referred me to Mrs. Drew, of Montagu House, Church Hill, who was in possession of most of the facts."
7414. You make an entry there about the Exeter case—Is there any previous entry? Yes; I can shew you a previous entry in which the Exeter case is mentioned. It is the 30th of May—the first entry:—"Mrs. Bentley told me that she now felt satisfied that she was in the hands of the Jesuits, and that the object of this persecution was not to drive her out of the musical world, but some other far more terrible. She said she should never be able to give me an explanation of the matter, as she was bound by an oath, but could at once put

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
 11 Dec., 1862. "pat a stop to the attacks, were she willing to give up some papers she possessed; and " moreover, this would never have happened had she had but one child, and that a girl. She, " was the more convinced of this, as she, when a child, had fallen into the hands of the " police, and the London police had failed to throw any light on the subject, though a large " reward had been offered by her father. She wished she could give me all the particulars, " but she dared not do so."
7415. Did she mention Exeter at that conversation? I do not know whether she mentioned Exeter, but I knew she belonged to that place, and I presume she mentioned it.
7416. The question is, when did you first have any conversation with Mr. Bentley about the Exeter case? I cannot say.
7417. Will you deny that it was on Thursday, the 1st of June? It has been the subject of conversation between us on more than one occasion, but I cannot say whether that was the first occasion.
7418. Was it not the first occasion when he said Mr. Richard Johnson had spoken to him in the street about it? I will not be positive, but I think it was.
7419. By the Chairman: Did you furnish that portion of an Exeter paper to the Herald? No, I did not; and I was quite astonished when I saw it.
7420. Were you ever in Exeter? Never.
7421. By Mr. Johnson: Coming back to this entry of the 1st of June. Your entry is to the effect, that after dinner Mr. Bentley read to you a copy of a letter, and you requested him to omit all mention of the steps taken by the police in the matter; after some reluctance he consented; the letter is well written;—now, do you adhere to the statement that, on the 2nd of June, he reluctantly consented to omit all mention of the steps taken by the police in the matter? It was a reluctant consent.
7422. But was it on the 2nd of June? I cannot say.
7423. Was not that on the 28th of May? It might have been on that occasion.
7424. Did it not occur on the 28th of May? I do not see any entry of the 2nd of June with regard to it.
7425. Do you think you may have made the request to Mr. Bentley on the 28th of May? Yes.
7426. Now, will you adhere to the statement that you made the same request on the 2nd of June, and that he then reluctantly consented to it? Yes, it has been made the subject of conversation on more than one occasion.
7427. You say he read the letter, and that it was well written? Yes.
7428. And you will not deny that this is the draft? I do not know that it is.
7429. Nor can you deny that what he read to you was, in substance, the same as the letter, as it appeared in the papers of the 14th of June? I do not know, and cannot deny it.
7430. Can you point to any other entry in your journal, as to any conversation with Mr. Bentley about what you call the Exeter case? No, I do not know that I can. He mentioned it to Dr. Brereton in my presence; but I do not recollect the date, although I recollect Dr. Brereton's remarks upon the subject. He said to Mr. Bentley; there was quite enough mystery in the case already, and that he had better not introduce any more.
7431. You spoke of getting Boulanger's diary for some purpose—what was that purpose? I did not say I got Boulanger's diary for a purpose.
7432. Was it simply to get a key to open it for him? That was all.
7433. Did you look at it for the purpose of deriving information upon any fact? I believe I looked at it.
7434. What for? I have already stated I do not recollect what for. I remember taking it away to get a key for it, at his request.
7435. Are you able to give any more information as to when you gave Mrs. Bentley the stiletto and whistle? No.
7436. Who was the man that you say sharpened it? I do not know; I cannot say for certainty whether any man sharpened it. I say it might have been sharpened by some one.
7437. How many times do you say you were at the Bentleys' house on the day on which you allege Mrs. Bentley gave you the letter? Twice, I believe. I recollect going there in the afternoon to see Mrs. Bentley, and saw her; and I might have been there a third time that evening.
7438. Have you seen Mr. Merewether, the reporter, lately? Not lately.
7439. When did you last see him? I do not know; I might have seen him in the street and not have spoken to him.
7440. Or had any conversation with him? Some weeks ago.
7441. Have you seen him since the commencement of this inquiry? About the time of its commencement.
7442. By Mr. Morris: In your diary, under date of the 17th of June, it is stated that you had seen Mr. Cowper with regard to this Bentley case, and that he told you that he had just received from Mr. Wrench all the anonymous letters;—is that true? I believe it was at Government House that Mr. Cowper told me so.
7443. And you afterwards saw him at 2 o'clock? Yes, at his office.
7444. Did you inform Mrs. Bentley, when you saw her that day, of these facts? I do not think it—I do not think I did.
7445. Are you sure? I am positive. I considered the conversation between Mr. Cowper and myself as private.
7446. Did you inform any other person? No.
7447. Any of the detective police? No; they were ignorant of my suspicion.
7448. When you saw Mr. Wrench on the 20th, did he say he had seen Mr. Cowper, and had given these anonymous letters to him? I do not recollect.
7449. Do you recollect Mr. Wrench seeing you, as you supposed, with a view of pumping you—you—do you think it likely that he did so? He might have done so. I have some recollection of receiving information, from some source, that Mr. Wrench had given Mr. Cowper the letters, but whether it was from Mr. Wrench, Mr. Bentley, or Mrs. Bentley, I do not recollect; but I did not mention the matter to Mr. Bentley or any one else.

Mr. C. E.
Harrison.
11 Dec., 1862.

7450. Did Mrs. Bentley tell you on the 19th—the day that you returned? I do not recollect that she did.

7451. Do you not think you would recollect if she had done so? No. I have a recollection of being made aware of the fact, but whether from Mrs. Bentley, Mr. Bentley, or Mr. Wrench, that evening, I cannot say.

7452. Do you think you became aware of that fact from any other source than that letter? I think so. I was aware of the fact from Mr. Cowper; but I am sure I received the information from some other source—either from the Bentleys or Mr. Wrench. I know of no one else, unless it was the Inspector General, who could give me the information; it might have been from him I received it.

7453. But you could not have heard it from the Bentleys or Mr. Wrench until the 20th? Not until the night when the conversation took place.

7454. Are there any other circumstances you wish to make the Committee acquainted with? None.

7455. Have you any further statement to make in reference to this case? No. I may state that Mr. Bentley tried hard to induce me to have the body of Mr. Heath taken up, to have a post mortem examination on it, stating that he was certain, and would be able to produce some evidence to the fact, that Mr. Heath was poisoned by Cutolo and his wife. I told him I had not the power to exhume the body—that if he could give any just reasons I would lay them before the Coroner. He then said he would let the matter stand over for a time.

7456. By Mr. Piddington: Was that subsequent to your employment as a detective with reference to this inquiry? Just when I took the matter in hand—on the second occasion.

7457. Do you recollect how long it was after the death of Mr. Heath? A considerable time. This was in March or April last, when I became acquainted with Mr. Bentley.

7458. You have no recollection whether Mr. Heath died nine or ten months previous? No, I did not know; I knew it was a considerable time previous.

7459. By Mr. Johnson: Was any one present when you say Mr. Bentley made this statement? I think Boulanger and Mrs. Bentley were present.

7460. Did you hear Dr. Brereton say anything upon that subject? No, I do not recollect Dr. Brereton mentioning Mr. Heath's name.

7461. By Mr. Piddington: Did Mr. Bentley state any particulars, or in any way make a statement as to the grounds for such an opinion? No, he did not. He asked me if I had the power, or said he supposed I had the power, of getting the body exhumed. I said I had not—that that power rested with the Coroner. He said, "Could you do so?" I said if certain facts were laid before the Coroner, he might have the body exhumed. I think his words were, that it would be necessary to have the body of Mr. Heath taken up, and a Coroner's inquest held upon it.

7462. Are you sure he said that? Yes.

7463. Have you a record of it? No. At that time I was not so well acquainted with him. He said he would let the matter stand over. I have spoken to him since about it, but he always evaded the subject.

7464. Did you treat it as a jest? No; sometimes he would be very excited about it.

7465. Did you consider it a very serious criminal charge? Yes; if he had shewn some reasons for it, it would have been a very serious affair.

7466. Did you ask him for his reasons? I think I asked him what they were.

7467. By Mr. Johnson: It startled you? It did; but he did not give any reasons; he said he would let the matter stand over.

7468. By the Chairman: Did you think it your duty to let it stand over? I mentioned it to the Inspector General.

7469. What remark did he make in reference to it? He asked why Bentley had made such a remark, and spoke of further inquiry. I spoke to Mr. Bentley about it after that, and he alluded in some way to its being a hasty remark that could not be substantiated.

7470. By Mr. Johnson: Did Mr. Bentley make any reference to what Dr. Brereton said in the matter? No, I do not think he heard Dr. Brereton mention it.

7471. By Mr. Piddington: Did Mr. Bentley make allusion to the death of Mr. Heath, on more than one occasion? Yes, he spoke upon that subject on more than one occasion.

7472. With regard to the suspicious circumstances? Yes; but I do not recollect what the conversation was. This was the first time it was mentioned, and he mentioned it in an abrupt manner, that it took me by surprise. I recollect the conversation. He afterwards evaded the subject when I spoke to him about it.

7473. You regarded his remarks as indicating a floating suspicion, and made without any intention of making a charge? Yes.

7474. And made when he was under excitement? I attributed it to that. With regard to the letter with the hawk and snake, there is a date of the 27th written on it. I believe that date is in the handwriting of the clerk, but has been put there since, and that on the back of the letter there is a date purporting that it had been received on a date other than that. I formed an opinion that that was written after the letter was torn, and Dr. Brereton expressed himself in the same manner.

7475. By the Chairman: Can you tell the Committee your grounds for thinking so? No, I cannot.

7476. Nor the remarks Dr. Brereton made when he concurred with you in that opinion? He said it was a letter in itself, and required nothing more—that the words were complete.

7477.

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
11 Dec., 1862.
7477. Is it not perfectly evident that some of that must have been written previously to its being torn? At the time I saw it I formed that opinion; I have seen it since, but I formed that opinion at the time; I cannot say that it is in the same state now. Dr. Brereton expressed the same opinion.
7478. Is it the same paper? I cannot tell you. It is the same kind of paper.
7479. Did you recognize it when you saw it here? I did not mark it.
7480. But do you recognize it by its general appearance, without any particular mark to swear by—are all the words there you took notice of? Yes, the words are the same; this may be it.
7481. Well, do you think it is? I do not know. There was a quantity of matches wrapped up in it when Mr. Bentley handed it to me, and it appeared larger.
7482. How many matches? Five or six; and it appeared larger than that.
7483. Is it not large enough to wrap that number of matches in? Yes, it may be.
7484. Do you smoke? Yes, sometimes.
7485. Do you carry matches with you? Sometimes at night, but not for the purpose of smoking; I carry them in a little brass box.
7486. What sort of matches? Wax matches.
7487. Were those wrapped in the paper similar to the matches you use? Yes.
7488. The same length? I do not know; sometimes I have them longer, sometimes shorter.
7489. Was it at night that you were in the loft, and were they not found next day after you were there? Yes.
7490. Mr. Bentley was there with you? Yes. I said if they (the parties) had been there during the night they would have left something behind them—that they would not work in the dark, as there would be a risk of there getting between the joists through the ceiling. You appear to wish to insinuate that I myself put some matches up there, for Mr. Bentley to find the following morning. In this way there is an attempt to colour my remarks.
7491. What makes you think I insinuated that? Your remark appeared to be tantamount to that.
7492. Why? From the words you use when you ask, was I not up there the previous night, and did I not use similar matches—matches of the same length.
7493. Are you to be supposed to be above suspicion, more than other people—you suspect the Bentleys, do you not? No; I am sure about them.
7494. And may I not be convinced in my mind why certain circumstances arose, and have you any reason to shew why I attempt to colour your remarks—have I put a colouring on your remarks? I cannot say.
7495. Are they not all taken down? Yes, but a different appearance may be given to them to that I intended.
7496. Have you any reason in giving answers that may be coloured? Certainly not.
7497. Are you anxious that questions of this kind should not be answered? No.
7498. By Mr. Johnson: I have asked you for your reasons for supposing this letter was written after the paper was torn, and you say you cannot give any reason? I had reasons for believing so at the time.
7499. And you begin to doubt whether this is the identical paper or not? It looks smaller.
7500. You believe it not to be the same? I do not say that, but I think portions may have been torn off since; that may be it, but a part of the paper may have been torn off; it does not present the same appearance it did at the time.
7501. You then dropped the observation that you did not suspect, but knew him to be guilty? I am sure in my own mind.
7502. Guilty of what? Of writing these letters.
7504. Have you any further reasons to state in justification of that opinion, besides what you have already stated? None but those I have stated in the different examinations I have undergone.
7505. You cannot state more—you have stated the whole strength of your case? My case! It is not my case. I have stated all I knew to throw a light upon the matter. One remark I may add, with regard to the diary being taken away and shewn to parties unconnected with this inquiry. I told the Committee it was a Member of the House who gave me this information, but it was said by the Chairman that this was incorrect, and I was not then in a position to say who it was. Since then he has told me that there was no occasion to conceal his name—that such was the case—that Mr. Dalgleish was the party who had taken the diary away. The gentleman who so informed me was Mr. Driver. He told me that you took it in your pocket, and shewed it to parties not connected with the Bentley case.
7506. What else? I did not in the first instance mention his name, as I thought he might not desire me to do so; but he has since stated that I could mention his name.

Mrs. Julia Bentley called in and examined :—

- Mrs. Julia Bentley.
11 Dec., 1862.
7507. By the Chairman: What is your name? Julia Bentley.
7508. Are you engaged in any profession? Yes, in the musical profession.
7509. You are the wife of the petitioner in this matter? I am.
7510. By Mr. Johnson: You made a deposition, in conjunction with Mr. Bentley and two servants—servants—are the whole of the statements in that deposition true? They are, all of them.

 7511. Are there, to your knowledge, any matters omitted or suppressed that have reference to this case? None.

Mrs. Julia Bentley.

7512. Are you at all aware who are the parties who wrote the anonymous letters referred to in that deposition? I am not.

11 Dec. 1862.

7513. Do you remember me reading over that deposition to yourself and your two servants? I do.

7514. Do you recollect whether upon any occasion I asked you to leave me alone with the two servants? I do.

7515. And do you remember me saying anything to you and the servants, with reference to the deposition, when I read it over? I remember you stated that if there was anything incorrect in it, or if we wanted anything else mentioned, we were to speak.

7516. Did they mention anything they wanted to add to it, or make any alterations? Yes, a few alterations were made.

7518. Was Mr. Harrison in the habit of sitting in the house when all the other detective officers had left? I think he took charge of the house, when no other detective officer was in it, for a fortnight; but I am not quite sure.

7519. Was he in the habit of sitting in the same room with you when in the house? With me and Mr. Bentley.

7520. Did he ever take liberties with you? Never.

7521. Or show undue familiarity? Never.

7522. Or call you by your Christian name? Never.

7523. Did he address you as “Lily”? Never.

7524. Did you address him as “Charley”? No; I did not know his Christian name.

7525. Did you know it before I mentioned it? Yes.

7526. Did Mr. Bentley tell you that the servants were examined? Yes.

7527. Are you aware that Mr. Harrison has made statements to this Committee, to the effect that he was in the habit of behaving towards you with great familiarity? I am.

7528. And they are false? Yes, all of them. The greatest familiarity he shewed toward me was on the night when he left, when he began to tell me he wished to caution me against something.

7529. By Mr. Johnson: What took place then? After sitting with Mr. Bentley he came down-stairs, and asked me not to press for an investigation. I said I would do no such thing; and he replied, it would make things worse for ourselves. I said, “People imagine ‘I am a monomaniac, and that the best thing would be an investigation, as no one could then ‘think so.’ He said he wished he could caution me against something, and I said he had no right to talk to me in that manner. He added, ‘The only thing I can say is, to answer all questions and ask none in return.’ He then left, and I have not seen him since.

7530. Was Mr. Harrison frequently in the habit of meeting you, and accompanying you to Newtown? No, not accompanying me to Newtown; but he has met me, for I was always under his orders. When I left the house, either he or other detectives met me, and directed me what course I was to take, what streets I was to follow; and on two or three occasions he has walked with me up to the omnibus, but saying that the other detectives would be up there when I arrived.

7531. Did he ever accompany you to Mr. Josephson’s gate? I met him at Newtown a few days after the assault, and he went with me from the bottom of the road to Mr. Josephson’s, but he has never been in the omnibus with me.

7532. Was that on the occasion when a man spoke to you a second time at Newtown? No, he was never with me when any one spoke to me.

7533. Have you been in the habit of speaking familiarly with your servants? No.

7534. Or conversing with them about your early life? No, neither on my own private affairs nor Mr. Bentley’s.

7535. Have you not informed them that you were in the habit of attending confession, and that you were educated at a convent? Never.

7536. By Mr. Johnson: Had you a sister educated at a convent? Yes, an elder sister.

7537. Do you know that there are people in Sydney who know something of your family connections at Home? Yes, I know two ladies in Sydney.

7538. Whether they know them correctly or not you cannot say? No, I cannot.

7539. By the Chairman: Have these persons made themselves acquainted with you since you have been here? One lady called upon me immediately after I landed, but I never returned her call. I have seen her since, but we were never on visiting terms. The other I have also seen, but have never been on visiting or friendly terms with her.

7540. By Mr. Johnson: Were you on visiting or friendly terms with them at Home? With one of them I was on visiting terms at Home.

7541. Was that the lady who called upon you when you came here? Yes.

7542. And you did not return her call? I did not.

7543. By the Chairman: Have you heard that lady’s name mentioned in connection with any of the letters, or with this case in any way whatever? No, I have not.

7544. Do you know any person in the city of the name of Mrs. Drew? Yes.

7545. Was that the lady you speak of? No, she resided in Exeter, but I was too young for her to know anything of me at that time.

7546. Do you know a person of the name of Elworthy or Leworthy? No.

7547. Were any of the servants in the habit of sitting up with you and accompanying you to

- Mrs. Julia Bentley. to fasten the door when Mr. Harrison left, after sitting late? No, I always closed the door myself, but I do not know whether they were up when he left or not.
- 11 Dec., 1862. 7548. You are perfectly sure Mr. Harrison on no occasion made the slightest advance to anything like undue familiarity towards you? Certainly not; on no occasions has he forgotten himself.
7549. Did you sit on the same sofa with him till late at night? Not after my husband had gone to bed; I have frequently when he was there in an evening, but certainly not after he was obliged to go to bed.
7550. You are aware that the names of other persons have been mentioned in this inquiry, as having been at your house late at night, leaving early in the morning? Yes, I am aware of that.
7551. Have any such cases occurred? None whatever.
7552. Did you ever write a letter to Mr. Harrison? Never.
7553. Is that your writing (letter handed to witness)? It is so much like mine that I should not know the difference; but if this is the letter my husband speaks about when he told me that Mr. Harrison says I wrote it to him, I may say that I never saw it before; but I could only tell from the contents that it was not my writing.
7554. By Mr. Johnson: I think you before informed the Committee that your husband gave you an intimation about the production of this letter? I was told Mr. Harrison gave it to the Committee as coming from me; and stated that I gave it to him after he came from Bathurst; and my husband has also intimated to me the contents, as far as he could, without telling me the words. If I recollect rightly, it spoke about Mr. Cowper having all the letters, and something about having to wait until Capt. McLerie came home.
7555. By Mr. Morris: You say it is so much like your handwriting that you could not tell the difference? If I had not known of any letter having been handed in to the Committee, and this had been shewn to me without my having any information as to the contents, I should say it was mine.
7556. By Mr. Fiddington: Have you ever seen any handwriting that resembles your own as much as that does? No, never.
7557. By the Chairman: Have you ever met a priest on the way to Newtown, Mrs. Bentley? Never.
7558. Did you ever meet with a priest in Market-street? Never.
7559. Did you ever go with a priest into a fancy wool shop? No, I have never spoken to a priest since I have been in Sydney, neither do I know one.
7560. Did you ever jokingly observe to the servants that you have? No, never; I have never been on such terms of familiarity.
7561. By Mr. Wilson: Have you been subject, for any length of time, to attacks of hysteria? At intervals, but not long.
7562. Have you been subject to fainting fits? Yes, very often indeed.
7563. These fits are quite distinct from the hysterical fits? I was quite unconscious when they came upon me.
7564. From what you have been told, by people competent to give an opinion, can you say whether they were really fainting fits? I believe Dr. Brereton always considered them to be fainting fits; I was always unconscious.
7565. You have had several fits of that kind? Yes.
7566. You have had several when Mr. Harrison was in the house? Not more than twice, I think.
7567. And are you aware whether he gave you any assistance on these occasions or not? Yes, I believe on one occasion he assisted my husband in taking me to my bed-room.
7568. Was that after you recovered? Yes, when I was too weak to walk up and down.
7569. Your husband and Mr. Harrison assisted you up-stairs? Yes.
7570. Did Mr. Harrison, to your knowledge, ever assist you to your bed-room when your husband was absent? Never.
7571. Dr. Brereton has attended you as medical adviser—was he doing so at that time? Yes.
7572. And was called in on account of the severity of these fits? Yes.
7573. He was called in on the occasion when Mr. Harrison assisted you up-stairs? I cannot positively say whether he was there or not on that occasion. When I have been ill the servants have been sent for Dr. Brereton at night, and when he has not come he has sent medicine down.
7574. You received some injury when assaulted at Newtown? I did.
7575. That was on the breast—was it not? It was.
7576. Did you consult any medical man upon that occasion? No; it was not considered serious enough to render a medical man's services requisite.
7577. Did Dr. Brereton offer his services on that occasion? He spoke to Mr. Bentley about it, and said he had better come and see it, but he never came.
7578. What sort of an injury was it, a cut or a tear? It was a tear.
7579. Was the tear of any size, or the wound an extensive one? It was sufficient to oblige me for two days to dress in a different way.
7580. From its external appearance, was it an extensive wound? It was not an extensive wound.
7581. Did it go half round the nipple? Yes, it did.
7582. Did it bleed much? Yes, for two days.
7583. What means did you take to heal it; was any one employed to dress it? Yes, the servants were employed in applying poultices.
7584. Did they examine the breast, to see the nature of the wound at all? Mary Ryan, I believe, did; she was called to apply the poultice.

7585. Did she examine the wound? I do not know that she did actually examine it, but she saw it. Mrs. Julia Bentley.
7586. Did she make any remarks about the nature of the wound? Yes, she said it must be causing me a great deal of pain. 11 Dec., 1862.
7587. Might she not have made that remark without seeing it? She herself applied the poultice, and must have seen it. When I say she made no examination I mean there was no careful examination made.
7588. Did the blood flow freely or ooze from the wound? The blood oozed from it.
7589. Were you nursing at the time? No.
7590. Was there any previous excoriation or sore on the breast? No, none.
7591. For what reason was the poultice applied—on account of the pain? Yes, I was in great pain.
7592. And you found the poultice relieved you? Yes; although it was still very sore the next day it appeared to have given me a little relief.
7593. You did not consider the wound sufficiently severe to make it necessary to call in your medical attendant? No.
7594. Have you had any experience of sore breasts or anything of that kind before? Yes, I have, once.
7595. Did the extent and nature of the wound frighten you at all? No; although I am very nervous about anything of that sort.
7596. By Mr. Cowper: Where were you when the man attacked you and caused this wound? I was inside Mr. Josephson's gate, at Newtown.
7597. Can you tell how far he was from the gate or from the house? He was close to the gate; so close that he had only to take a step forward to open the gate and go out.
7598. Were you very much injured by the rough treatment more than by this wound—did you feel the shock in your person? Yes, I was dreadfully alarmed.
7599. Did it not occur to you to return to Mr. Josephson's house that you had just left? No, it never struck me; besides, it was more lonely to go back than to go into the road, where I felt I should be safe.
7600. You did not communicate anything, concerning the assault, to any one until you got home? No, I did not.
7601. Did it form the subject of conversation at Mr. Josephson's at the time when you next went there? I never alluded to it in any way whatever.
7602. Has any one seen the wound besides Mr. Bentley and your servant maids? No, no one.
7603. By the Chairman: Have you any lady friends on terms of close intimacy with you? No, I can scarcely say I have any acquaintances on terms of close intimacy.
7604. Any one to whom you would shew a wound of that kind? No, none to whom I could even speak of it.
7605. By Mr. Wilson: Do you think the wound was inflicted by a ring being thrust against the breast, or by a blow? Not by a blow. I do not know whether it was done by a ring or finger-nail.
7606. Did you receive a push? No, he kept his hand upon my shoulder, and by that means held me tightly.
7607. Was your dress tight at the time, or did you wear a loose jacket? I wore a loose jacket.
7608. By Mr. Morris: Did Mr. Harrison require you to keep this matter of the assault secret? Yes, he did; but he told Mr. Bentley that he might mention it to Boulanger. When the man struck me he held out his hand and directed my attention to the ring, which had a cornelian anchor on it.
7609. You would not, under the circumstances, mention the assault to Mr. Josephson or his family, being enjoined to secrecy concerning it? No, it was a thing I should not mention to any person, even after it was known.
7610. But if you were assaulted to-morrow would you have any objection to mention it to your friends? No, if it had not been followed by so long a persecution as this has been.
7611. By the Chairman: Have you any letters at home that you have written to Mr. Bentley at any time? No, I think not.
7612. Do you think Mr. Bentley has any such letters? No, I think not; because Mr. Johnson asked him or me for them, and Mr. Bentley looked to see if he had any. I believe he could not find any.
7613. How did you become introduced to Mr. Hanson? On board the "Castle Howard," in which vessel he came from England.
7614. You became intimate with Mr. and Mrs. Hanson some time after their arrival here? Yes.
7615. Mr. Hanson, on one occasion, protected you from some supposed rudeness on the part of a gentleman? Yes.
7616. Was it at your request? No; I did not then know anything about these letters.
7617. When you went out to Newtown, and met with the gentleman you call Mr. Merewether, was he there by appointment to meet you? I believe he was; because Mr. Black had previously sent up a gentleman of the name of Gibson to see if any one was there, and we knew letters had been going to Mr. Johnson, and others, making such appointments; we therefore supposed he was there by appointment.
7618. Did you give him any inducement to be there? Certainly not. When these letters came from Mr. Wrench—the anonymous letters which Mr. Bentley received—making appointments, and when Mr. Gibson said Mr. Merewether had come out to Newtown, I supposed he was there by appointment.

- Mrs. Julia Bentley.
11 Dec., 1862.
7619. What do you mean by appointment? In these anonymous letters it was stated that I had made appointments with gentlemen.
7620. There were some letters, purporting to have been written by you, making these appointments? Yes.
7621. Have you seen those letters? Not the originals.
7622. Suppose he was there by appointment, you presume that something in the anonymous letters led him to be there? Yes.
7623. Have you any other reason to give for his being there? No.
7624. Did you speak to him? No.
7625. Did he speak to you? No.
7626. Did you walk on the same road with him? He went up in the omnibus, and on crossing the road to Mr. Josephson's I saw he was strolling about the end of the road.
7627. Did he seem to wish to speak to you? I did think so. Directly the omnibus turned into the Newtown Road there was that in his manner which induced me to think he wished to speak.
7628. Had you seen him before? I knew him before by sight, but never met him at Newtown.
7629. Or elsewhere? Never.
7630. When was the next occasion that you saw him? I never saw him at Newtown before. The next time I saw him was at the Philharmonic Society's concert.
7631. Was that the time when he refused to hand you to the platform? Yes.
7632. Was it before or after you saw Mr. Merewether that you were assaulted? After.
7633. Was it Mr. Merewether, the same gentleman, who assaulted you? Certainly not.
7634. Can you describe from memory the gentleman who assaulted you? He was not dressed like a gentleman; he had on a rough shooting-jacket, and a black hat with a French peak. His hand looked like that of a gentleman; it was white, and had not the appearance that the hand of a working man generally presents. But I am quite sure he was in disguise. I before said his hair and eyes were dark, but such was not the case; on one side of his head I could see that his hair was lighter than on the other.
7635. You were self-possessed at the time, so as to make an observation of his person? No; but Mr. Harrison particularly requested me to make some examination of his appearance, so as to recognize him at some future time, and I had sufficient presence of mind to do that.
7636. Did his hand come in contact with your bare breast? Yes; he tore my clothes.
7637. He was very rough? Very rough.
7638. He held you with one hand, whilst he thrust the other into your bosom? Yes, he held me by the shoulder.
7639. Are you subject to fainting? Yes.
7640. Did you faint then? No.
7641. Can you account for your keeping yourself self-possessed at this time? I think I was too frightened to faint.
7642. It is rather a queer thing that he should shew you his jewellery, and describe it, telling you to give a description of it to Mr. Harrison—can you imagine his reasons for so doing? The only thing he wished me to tell Mr. Harrison was about the ring.
7643. Can you describe it? It was a large gold ring with a gold signet, and a cornelian anchor raised on the signet.
7644. From the wound upon your breast do you suppose it was made by the ring? Yes, I do.
7645. By Mr. Couper: Who saw your garments when they were in that torn state? My husband; it was a muslin jacket I had on that was torn. I believe Mr. Harrison saw it.
7646. By the Chairman: Have you that jacket now? I think Mr. Johnson has it. I gave it to Mr. Bentley a long time ago, when this Committee first commenced.
7648. Was it the right or left shoulder that the man seized you by? The right.
7649. And he held you with his left hand? Yes.
7652. Was he standing in front of you? No, he came behind me, and stood at the side of me.
7653. He held his left hand on your right shoulder, and thrust his other hand into your breast? Yes.
7654. Round from your back? No, he was almost even with me, and he thrust his right hand on the other side.
7655. Did you struggle to get away? No, because it was quite useless—he held me so tightly.
7656. Did he tear part of your dress? Yes, the jacket.
7657. With the hand he held you by, or with that he thrust into your bosom? No. I had a shawl on, and he kept his left hand outside of it on my shoulder. It was an under jacket that he tore with the hand he thrust into my bosom.
7658. How did he hold you—partly by the flesh and partly by the jacket? He held me by the shoulder.
7659. And did the blood begin to flow immediately after he struck you? No; I was not aware of it until undressing at night.
7660. You did not feel any pain from the wound until you were undressing? Yes, I did; but I was too frightened to think of the pain.
7661. You say you did not know of the injury you had sustained until you undressed? I knew the jacket was torn, but I did not know that I was wounded. 7662.

Mrs. Julia Bentley.
11 Dec., 1862.

- 7662. Nor that any blood had escaped? No.
- 7663. Then it did not shew itself through your clothes? I did not perceive it.
- 7664. Were you surprised at finding yourself wounded? I was in pain all the evening, but I never thought I was wounded until I undressed.
- 7665. What did you attribute the pain to—had you felt anything like it before? I thought he had bruised me.
- 7666. You never thought of looking at it until you were undressing? No.
- 7667. Did you complain to any one? To Mr. Bentley.
- 7668. You did not tell any one else then? No.
- 7669. Are you sure you did not tell Mr. Harrison of your feeling a pain? Certainly not; I should not have spoken to him of such a thing.
- 7670. You mentioned to him the circumstance of your being assaulted? Yes. Mr. Bentley immediately sent for Mr. Harrison, and Mr. Harrison returned to the house, when I told him of the assault, and described the man who assaulted me as well as I could.
- 7671. But you did not say a word to him about being in pain? No.
- 7672. Did you feel the pain when you were telling Mr. Harrison of the assault? I did.
- 7673. Did the pain continue from the time the man committed the assault until you were undressing at night? Yes, but I was so frightened that I did not think about it until I became calmer, and then I felt it.
- 7674. I thought you said you did not notice it until you took your dress off? Nor did I; nor did I feel the pain so great before, although I felt I had been bruised.
- 7675. Was it a throbbing pain, like that of a bruise? It was a general faintness.
- 7676. You cannot say whether it was a throbbing pain? No, I cannot.
- 7677. What was the course the wound took—did it fester in any way? Yes, it festered that night. It looked as if it would fester when I had the poultice put on. The next morning those appearances were gone, and it was better the following day.
- 7678. Did you feel any pain the next day? Yes, for two days after.
- 7679. Was it a throbbing pain? No, more a smarting than a throbbing pain.
- 7680. And you are sure there was no festering the next day? No, I do not think there was any.
- 7681. Was there any other discharge than of blood? Yes, there was a small quantity of matter discharged.
- 7682. Did that continue for two days? In a small degree it shewed itself for two days, but before putting on the poultice there was a great deal.
- 7683. You only put one poultice on? I poulticed the wound for two days.
- 7684. What was your reason for not calling in a medical man? I should not do so unless I felt I could not attend to these things myself.
- 7685. You did not think it a serious affair then? I did not.
- 7686. Did not Mr. Bentley think it necessary to send for a medical man? The first night he said, "You had better have Dr. Brereton in the morning." I said I would wait and see if the poultice did it any good, and if not I would see Dr. Brereton.
- 7687. Was Dr. Brereton your medical attendant? Yes, he was.
- 7688. Had he attended you for any length of time previously? Only two other times.
- 7689. Had you any other medical attendant? No.
- 7690. Did he advise you as to the hysterical fits? Yes, he was called in to attend me when it was required.
- 7691. You were in the habit of falling into hysterical or fainting fits when any sudden occurrence or excitement arose—was that the general cause? It commenced in that way, but it was generally after the excitement was over that I felt it.
- 7692. Did this assault cause any fainting fit or hysteria at all? It did not when I came home.
- 7693. Had you any fainting fit that day at all—the day of the assault? I cannot recollect whether I had or had not.
- 7694. Can you recollect any fainting fit caused by this circumstance of the assault? Yes, I believe it was at night; that day or the day after I was ill. I think I fainted.
- 7695. Where did that take place—in the drawing-room or dining-room? I cannot say which.
- 7696. Do you remember who was present when it occurred? No, I do not remember who was there at that particular time.
- 7697. Do you remember whether Mr. Harrison was there? No, he was not present.
- 7698. Not present at any fainting fit that occurred soon after the assault, or that was in any way caused by the assault? No, he was not.
- 7699. You say he was present on some occasion when you had a fit, and assisted you to your room? I remember one or two occasions when he was with me, but when they were I cannot distinctly remember.
- 7700. Did it ever happen that Mr. Harrison was left with you, bathing your head, whilst Mr. Bentley went away? Not to my knowledge.
- 7701. Was he left with you, to attend to you in any way, during any occurrence of that kind? Never that I can remember; he never was whilst I was conscious.
- 7702. Were the two servants in attendance whilst Mr. Harrison was attending upon you? Yes, they were. Whenever I returned to consciousness the servants have always been with me.
- 7703. Can you recollect whether the wound given you on the occasion of the assault was an open wound—above or below—was it a large wound—was any portion of the skin hanging? Yes, there was a small portion.
- 7704. Did the wound open upwards or downwards? I do not quite understand you.
- 7705. Supposing a portion of the skin was hanging—was the wound opening upwards or downwards? I really cannot say.

- Mrs. Julia Bentley.
 11 Dec., 1862.
7706. Do you recollect on what side of your bosom it was? Yes.
7708. Did it not look as if it were struck from above by an instrument, or by a man's nail? I cannot say whether it did or not.
7709. You are of opinion that it was caused by the ring? Or by the man's nails.
7710. Of that you are not sure? No, I could not be sure which it was.
7711. By Mr. Johnson: What opinion in that respect did you form at the time? I think it is more likely to have been done with the ring.
7712. By Mr. Forster: Was the wound downwards or across? Downwards.
7713. By Mr. Piddington: Was it quite horizontal or slanting? It might slant a little.
7714. By the Chairman: Was it above or below the nipple? It commenced above and went round.
7715. By Mr. Forster: It healed easily? On the Monday it had ceased to give me pain.
7716. And you have not been troubled with it since? No.
7717. Did you regard Mr. Harrison as an intimate friend? No. He was always treated in the house as a friend, and I have often played with Mr. Bentley and Mr. Harrison at whist. He always conducted himself properly.
7718. He was invited to dine at your house once or twice? Yes.
7719. Did that happen frequently? About half a dozen times.
7720. You are sure you never addressed him by any other name than Mr. Harrison? Quite certain.
7721. Nor he you otherwise except than as Mrs. Bentley? Certainly not.
7722. You say you used to stop up with him sometimes after Mr. Bentley and the servants had gone to bed? For about a fortnight.
7723. I presume that was done because you regarded him as being on official duty? He said he wished to take charge of the house himself, and to see that the men outside were on the watch.
7724. Had the servants gone to bed on this occasion? For a fortnight almost every evening Mr. Bentley went to bed early; but I do not know whether the servants were in bed or not.
7725. Did they come into the room at any time? Yes, to remove the supper, or speak about the children.
7726. You usually let Mr. Harrison out and shut the door? Yes.
7727. At what time did this happen? Always about 12 o'clock. If Mr. Bentley was particular he used to knock down to me. If he had a watch by his side he would knock down to me.
7728. He knocked on the floor overhead? Yes.
7729. Mr. Harrison never remained until 1 or 2 o'clock? Never—not when I remained up with him alone.
7730. Did he sometimes remain there after you retired? Never to my knowledge. On one or two occasions when Mr. Bentley was very tired indeed, we both went to bed, and Mr. Harrison said he wished to remain a little later, and we left him in the house; the detectives had come in to change.
7731. Who let him in and out on these occasions? They had the key of the house.
7732. You placed perfect confidence in Mr. Harrison? Most implicit confidence.
7733. And you considered it part of his official duty to remain up with you in this way? Not with me; but part of his duty to remain until 12 o'clock, and, as some one must lock the door when he went away, I stopped up with him.
7734. You stopped up to entertain him? No, to close the door after him. I was not aware the servants were out. The servants fasten the doors in the kitchen, and I always double-bolted the front door.
7735. He remained in the same room with you? Yes.
7736. Was the door closed or open? I did not notice.
7737. And how did you employ yourselves? I used to work.
7738. You do not play at cards? Never after Mr. Bentley had gone to bed.
7739. Did you read? Never.
7740. What was Mr. Harrison doing whilst you were working? He would sit and talk, and occasionally read.
7741. He never read out to you? Never.
7742. He talked nearly all the time? Yes.
7743. He is an agreeable man, is he not? I always thought he knew how to conduct himself; I can hardly say he is an agreeable man.
7744. Was not his conversation agreeable? Not exactly what a lady would listen to. It was more particularly about his own exploits.
7745. The principal topics were his exploits as a detective? Yes, and occasionally he spoke of places he had visited abroad. They were quite general topics.
7746. Should you say that he was a highly educated man? Certainly not.
7747. Did you find him well informed? No, I can scarcely say well informed, because he appeared to like to talk too much upon his professional duties and enterprises.
7748. He was fond of that kind of conversation, but he made no revelations to you inconsistent with his duty? No; it was simply general conversation.
7749. Is Mr. Harrison acquainted with the languages do you know? I really do not know.
7750. You do not know whether he knows French or Italian? I think I have heard him say he knows French and German.
7751. By Mr. Johnson: Does he give any indications or not of understanding English? His conversation was not that of a gentleman.
7752. By Mr. Forster: What do you consider to be the particular object Mr. Harrison had in sitting sitting up in this way until after 12 o'clock, and then going away? He said he had not enough detectives to enable him to place them to watch both the inside and outside of the house, and that therefore he must take charge of the inside himself, and he would have his men on the watch outside.

Mrs. Julia Bentley.

11 Dec., 1862.

7753. Was he supposed to be on guard as a policeman? Yes, although Mr. Bentley and I always said that we did not altogether treat him as a policeman.

7754. But if he was on guard, and in the capacity of a policeman strictly speaking, how was it that he always went away at 12 o'clock? He said that was the time his men had to change guard.

7755. Did the men come and take his place? No, they were to watch outside.

7756. Their watch outside then commenced? Yes, he came about dusk, and at 12 o'clock was relieved by his men, who remained there till morning.

7757. He was on watch before 12 o'clock? Yes. He gave us to understand that he remained there instead of the other men that he took away.

7758. Had you all the lights burning at the time? Yes.

7759. During all the time which Mr. Harrison and the police were watching, they did not find anything out, did they? No, I never heard of anything.

7760. Did not Mr. Harrison always lead you to believe that he considered the parties who were writing these letters were out of the house? Always.

7761. Did he ever tell you he suspected some one in the house? Never. He once said he wished the servants to be watched, but I told him I felt sure they had nothing to do with it. But he remarked that if they were innocent there was no harm in watching them. But afterwards he told me that he did not watch them at all.

7762. You thought highly of your servants? Until lately.

7763. Did Mr. Harrison ever communicate his suspicions regarding yourself to Mr. Bentley? Never; on the contrary, he always spoke in the strongest terms of the parties he did suspect.

7764. When did you first learn that his suspicions rested upon you? Not until the article in the Empire appeared.

7765. After that article appeared, did Mr. Harrison continue his intimacy at your house? No, I have never seen Mr. Harrison since then.

7766. You would not be inclined to treat him in the same way as before? Most decidedly not.

7767. You have examined this letter? I have not read it through.

7768. The first paragraph says, "I commenced a letter to you a day earlier than I intended"—Had you any intention of writing to him even officially? Never.

7769. You would not consider it an impropriety to write to him on official matters? Yes; I think my husband would be the proper person to do it.

7770. And you never promised to write to him? Never—most certainly.

7771. Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Harrison, as to the rumours that were floating about in regard to your own state of mind? Never, until the last day on which he called to see us, when Mr. Bentley expressed himself very angrily indeed. Mr. Harrison, when at the door, stated that people said I was a monomaniac; Mr. Bentley said it was absurd.

7772. That was the first time he had spoken about it? I was told he had said something about it before.

7773. Was that before Mr. Harrison's journey up the country? It was the last time I saw Mr. Harrison; I have not seen him since.

7774. Then it was after he returned? Yes.

7775. You were aware of his intention to go up the country? He came, on the morning of his departure, for the whistle, and told me he was going to try to catch Gardiner.

7776. Did he, on that occasion, make any arrangements with Mr. Bentley to write to him? He said that if anything occurred, Mr. Bentley was to write to him to Bathurst. He said he would send a paper to Mr. Bentley, to shew that he had arrived.

7777. Did he ever send a paper? No. I think he never went to Bathurst. When he returned, he told Mr. Bentley that he could not catch the man.

7778. You saw him then only this once after the occasion you have referred to? I saw him on the night he returned. He came when the Rev. Mr. Moreton was with us.

7779. Looking at this letter, the handwriting of which you say is so like your own, have you any notion whether any of your acquaintances are likely to have written it? I have none; I feel sure none who knew me would write it.

7780. You say it is a lady's handwriting? Yes.

7781. You do not think Mrs. Hanson wrote it? I do not think so.

7782. Do you know her handwriting? No.

7783. You have no letters from her to you? No.

7784. Have you seen Mrs. Harrison's handwriting? No.

7785. Were these two servant girls in your house capable of writing in that style? I never saw any of the nurse's writing; I have seen the other girl's.

7786. Which is the nurse? Maria Bradshaw.

7787. By Mr. Cowper: You are aware that Mr. Harrison has stated that you delivered the letter into his hands? I am.

7788. And you distinctly deny having done so? I deny it distinctly.

7789. By Mr. Forster: You never saw that letter before, nor a transcript or copy of it? Never.

7790. I think you wrote some note to Mr. Mercwether? No, I have never written to Mr. Merewether.

7791. You are aware, I presume, that it has been stated in evidence, by these two servant women, that you told them you had met a priest on your way to Newtown, once or twice? I am aware that they stated so; but I never stated that I had met a priest.

7792. It is utterly false—you never met a priest, nor told your servant girls that you did so? Entirely so.

- Mrs. Julia Bentley. 7793. Could anything you said to them have led them into a mistake, and induce them to exaggerate the circumstance? I never had any conversation with them at all, except about their every-day duties and my children.
- 11 Dec., 1862. 7794. By Mr. Johnson: Do you recollect whether or not any other persons heard you state anything to Mr. Bentley about your seeing a priest in the omnibus? Yes; I do not recollect whether it was in their presence or not, but I recollect that after the assault Mr. Bentley was particular in inquiring who was in the omnibus, and if anything had occurred on the way. On one occasion that he asked me I told him that I went up almost alone, and said there was only a priest in the omnibus, who handed me out.
7795. You never talked to these girls about meeting a priest at Newtown? Never.
7796. By Mr. Cowper: Nor of meeting one at Government House? Never.
7797. Nor in Market-street? Never.
7798. Nor at St. Mary's Cathedral? Never.
7799. The statement is wholly without foundation? It is.
7800. You never met one at the concert, or saw one alongside you? Never.
7801. By Mr. Forster: Do you know any priest? I do not think I know a single priest by name.
7802. Do you know any to speak to without knowing their names? No.
7803. Did any priest come to your house to visit these girls? Not that I am aware of.
7804. Did you ever talk to either of these girls about religion? Yes, on one or two occasions. On one occasion when I was undressing my little boy, he cried to kiss a crucifix that was hanging on the wall, and, either at that time or the next day, I told her I did not wish her to teach him to do it. She said she had not taught him, but that he did it of his own will. On another occasion, I remember Mr. Bentley wished me to go to an evening party without him, and he told the nurse to go with me in the cab. It was the night on which she always used to go to confession, and she did not seem disposed to go with me. I asked her if she was ill, and I was told that she was fretting because she did not go to confession. The other girl who told me this spoke in a sneering manner, and I remarked that "If you believe in confession you have no right to laugh at it."
7805. This was to Mary Ryan? I told her that if she attended confession at all she ought to do so seriously.
7806. Then it has been only upon these two occasions you have referred to that you have conversed with them upon religious matters? Yes.
7807. You never introduced the subject generally? Never.
7808. They are both very devout Roman Catholics, are they not? The nurse is particularly so, but I think the other girl was influenced by the nurse. I do not think she would have gone to confession so often had it not been for that.
7809. You have no feeling toward the Roman Catholic faith yourself, have you? Never, most certainly; I have always gone to the Church of England.
7810. You never talked to these girls on the subject of confession except on the occasions you have mentioned? Never.
7811. On what sort of intimacy was Mr. Hanson with your family—did you know anything of him before this matter? Yes, we met him on board the "Castle Howard." He was related to the captain or captain's wife, and he lodged with us at first.
7812. He took a great interest in the matter of these anonymous letters? Yes. I was teaching his daughter.
7813. Did he not sometimes come into your house at unseasonable hours? No.
7814. You had no reason to suspect his motives; his conduct was always creditable? Yes. It was a rare thing for Mr. Hanson to come to our house.
7815. Do you think that either of these two servant girls has sufficient education to write such letters as the anonymous letters now the subject of inquiry? I think Maria Bradshaw has had a very good education, but I do not think she would ever have written such letters as these.
7816. Have you ever known anything of them that would lead you to suppose that they would tell you falsehoods? No; and I never was so astonished as when I heard of what they said before this Committee.
7817. They have both left your service since they appeared before the Committee? Both.
7818. At whose wish? Mine.
7819. And the statement of falsehoods before the Committee was the cause of their leaving? Yes; I wanted to discharge them at once, but Mr. Bentley wished to keep them on until the examination was finished.
7820. By Mr. Morris: Are you in the habit of smoking? Not in the habit; but when I have an attack of tic-doloureux I have smoked, as a last resource.
7821. How often this year have you smoked? I might have smoked this year, but I cannot say that I have.
7822. Did you never smoke in the presence of Mr. Aldis? Never that I am aware of; I might possibly have been smoking when he came to the house, but if I was, I immediately took the cigar from my mouth; but I do not recollect doing so.
7823. Do you remember the evening after the assault; did you not then smoke in the presence of Mr. Harrison, and join him with a cigar? No, certainly not. The only time when he could have seen me smoking was when he came at a time when we were alone; but if I was on such an occasion smoking, I should have left the room on his entrance, or have immediately taken the cigar from my mouth.
7824. Do you recollect smoking with Mr. Harrison after the night of the assault? I do not.
7825. Who recommended you to smoke for tic-doloureux? My medical man in England.
7826. Has Dr. Brereton ever recommended it? I do not know; I smoke very little here, but I suffered so much in England that I smoked very much. 7827.

7827. Were they the usual description of cigars? Mr. Bentley always brought them for me. They were very small ones; I do not know what they were called.
7828. You cannot remember having smoked in the presence of Mr. Aldis? No.
7829. What do you mean by the kind of cigars he always brought you? Mr. Bentley bought a whole box sometimes, and also some little ladies' cigars; he did so recently, but I do not think I ever smoked one of them.
7830. When in Italy were you in the habit of smoking? Never.
7831. You saw ladies there smoking? I was so much with Mr. Bentley then that we could see very little society.
7832. Do you remember, after your marriage, leaving Exeter for Paris? I do.
7833. How many days did you take to reach Paris? Three or four. I know we remained at Folkestone for some time, went to Boulogne, and then to Paris afterwards.
7834. Did Mr. Bentley leave you shortly after getting to Paris? No. We were there two or three weeks, and he did not leave me. We both came back together.
7835. Do you often take brandy and water for any ailment? It is often given me when I am faint.
7836. Did you ever drink brandy and water with Mr. Harrison? I might have seen him take it, or he might have handed it to me, but I never took it except as a remedy for fainting.
7837. Can you not remember fainting the Sunday after the assault, when one of the servants was out? No.
7838. Previous to the first concert I think it was? No, I cannot. I fainted so often that I cannot remember any particular instance.
7839. It was on the Sunday after the assault that Mr. Harrison assisted you up-stairs, was it not? I cannot positively say it was or was not, but it was soon after the assault; but Mr. Harrison was never with me when I fainted.
7840. By the Chairman: Upon which hand did this person who committed the assault upon you wear the ring? Upon his right hand.
7841. Are you a German scholar at all—do you read German? I know nothing of German.
7842. Can you not sing German songs? No, I cannot.
7843. Did you ever get your fortune told? Never that I know of, but I might have done so.
7844. Did you ever write a letter to a person who professed to be able to tell the character of persons who wrote to him, from their handwriting? Never.
7845. By Mr. Morris: Should you be able to fix the date of the evening when Mr. Harrison assisted you up-stairs when you had fainted? No, I cannot fix the date, but it was some time before Easter, and the reason I remember that is from the circumstance that in the Easter week for the first time we had fires in the drawing-room, and then we always took our meals in the drawing-room—Mr. Bentley's breath being so bad that he could not come down-stairs. It was in the dining-room that I fainted.
7846. Can you remember Mr. Harrison giving you a stiletto? Yes, perfectly.
7847. Can you fix the time, or any circumstance connected with it? It was on the Tuesday after the Friday that I was assaulted.
7848. Did not Mr. Harrison on that Tuesday meet you when you left the omnibus? No, he walked with me before I went to the omnibus. He told me, the night before, that he would send the stiletto to me in the morning; but he met me on the way and told me that he wished to have it sharpened, and also that if he was not at our house at 11 o'clock, I was to pass the police office in Elizabeth-street and he would give it me. As I was passing the office, he gave me a whistle and the stiletto which he said he could not get sharpened; it had a smooth sheath with a pink top.
7849. Did you speak to any one at Josephson's about the stiletto—you seem to have lost the sheath then? No, I never talked to them about it. They gave me a scissors sheath instead of the stiletto-sheath.
7850. It was on the first occasion when the assault took place that Mr. Harrison gave you the stiletto? I am not quite certain.
7851. Did I understand you to say that after the assault some person near Mr. Josephson's gate addressed you? No, no one ever addressed me after the assault.
7852. By the Chairman: Did any one interfere with you after the assault? No, never; the detectives were there always closely watching.
7853. By Mr. Morris: Do you remember the occasion when a detective accompanied you in the omnibus shortly after the assault, and left you on meeting Mr. Harrison? No, I do not.
7854. Do you not remember any circumstance of that kind? No, I do not.
7855. I think you will be able to remember a detective going with you about the time of the assault, and leaving you with Mr. Harrison to walk up to the gate? I never remember a detective going to Newtown with me, but I remember Mr. Harrison walking with me to Mr. Josephson's gate.
7856. From the omnibus? No, from half way up the road.
7857. Did you know that a detective was to be in the omnibus, to see that you were not again interfered with? I imagined that from the moment I left the house there was a detective near me, and that he would not lose sight of me until my return. I was quite sure there was no detective in the omnibus, and afterwards I complained to Mr. Harrison that I did not see a detective. He said there was a detective at the place, although I might not see him. Mr. Harrison also said that the detective told him that after I left the omnibus I hurried on, then looked about, and that when I got to the post I hurried on again. He said the man told him that.
7858. By the Chairman: Is this the part of the dress you wore on that occasion—the occasion of the assault—(Muslin jacket produced)? Yes.

Mrs. Julia Bentley.

- Mrs. Julia Bentley.
11 Dec., 1862.
7859. Have you mended it since? Yes.
7860. Where was the tear—on the shoulder? No.
7861. How did you wear it—in front? Yes, and it was fastened behind. It is worn as an under-jacket, and fastened behind. The part torn is over the left breast.
7862. By Mr. Morris: Be kind enough to inform the Committee when you first knew that Mr. Wrench had been to the Colonial Secretary, and had given him a number of these anonymous letters? I cannot fix any date.
7863. From whom did you learn that? From Mr. Bentley.
7864. And not from Mr. Wrench? No.
7865. Nor from Mr. Harrison? No, from Mr. Bentley himself; but I have not the least recollection as to the date.
7866. By Mr. Johnson: Can you fix it with reference to events—do you know whether you heard of it before Mr. Harrison returned from his journey to Bathurst? I really cannot recollect.
7867. You first heard it from Mr. Bentley? I did.
7868. By the Chairman: You are quite sure, with regard to your smoking, that you did not light a cigar and smoke it when Mr. Aldis was present? Quite sure. He might have seen me smoke, but I was not smoking in his company.
7869. By Mr. Morris: Nor in the presence of any other gentleman? Certainly not.
7870. By the Chairman: You say that although he might have seen you smoke, you would not do so in the presence of any gentleman? Certainly not.
7871. By Mr. Morris: You would not smoke in the presence of Mr. Aldis, or of any other gentleman? Certainly not.
7872. And did Mr. Harrison never put his arm round your waist? Certainly not.
7873. And you never took brandy and water with Mr. Harrison—that is, when he was taking it himself? Certainly not.
7874. Are you aware that he has stated you have? My husband told me so.
7875. By Mr. Morris: On the night of the assault, do you think you smoked—do you think the pain from the wound would not have induced you to smoke that evening? Certainly not.
7876. Was Mr. Aldis at your house on the night of the day when the assault took place? I could not say positively.
7877. By the Chairman: Did you ever converse with Mr. Harrison, in Mr. Bentley's presence, of your journey to Paris? Never.
7878. How do you account for his coming into possession of the fact that you were three or four days on the journey from Dover to Paris? I do not know whether Mr. Bentley spoke to him about the matter.
7879. Have you any lady correspondents in this country, with whom you are in the habit of communicating with in writing? None, except my two sisters, but they are not in New South Wales.

FRIDAY, 12 DECEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER,	MR. LUCAS,
MR. W. FORSTER,	MR. MORRIS,
MR. HART,	MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. LEARY,	MR. WILSON.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Edward Wrench, Esq., called in and examined:—

- E. Wrench, Esq.
12 Dec., 1862.
7880. By the Chairman: What are you? An auctioneer.
7881. By Mr. Johnson: You reside in the vicinity of Sydney? At Edgecliff Road.
7882. How long have you been resident in this Colony? About twelve years.
7883. Are you acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? I am.
7884. How long have you known Mr. Bentley? Between fifteen and twenty years.
7885. You knew him before his arrival in this Colony? Many years.
7886. Did you know his wife? I did not.
7887. When did you first become acquainted with Mrs. Bentley? On her arrival in the Colony, on board ship.
7888. How did that occur? Mr. Bentley called upon me at my office in George-street, and said he had arrived with his wife; he gave me the name of the ship in which he had come, and I called upon them and was then introduced.
7889. Have you known them both ever since that time? Ever since.
7890. From your knowledge of them and acquaintance with them, what is your opinion of their character for respectability, integrity, and veracity? I should believe everything they said, without question.
7891. Do you believe that they are persons at all capable of having been the concocters of these anonymous letters, and of the annoyances of which they are complaining? No, I do not.
7892. Did some of these anonymous letters come from your possession? They did.
7893. Will you state how and when they first came into your possession? I should think they first came into my possession some time last year; it was a long rigmarole of a letter, stating that Mrs. Bentley was some Italian lady of high rank, who had been compelled to marry Mr. Bentley. I read it, saw it was an anonymous communication, tore it up, and put it into the waste paper basket. 7894.

7894. How did it come to you? By post.

7895. Do you recollect whether the handwriting was like the handwriting of any of the other anonymous letters you saw? Of some; I kept the envelope.

7896. Do you know what has become of that envelope? It is possibly among my papers in the office; I do not remember having given it to Mr. Bentley.

7897. Is that (handing letter No. 31 to witness) one of the anonymous letters you received through the post? It is; it bears my initials, for identification.

7898. I presume you received it at the date of the postmark? Yes, it came in the ordinary way with our letters in the morning.

7899. Was the particular letter you describe of the same character of handwriting as the one now produced? Yes.

7900. After you destroyed that first anonymous letter which you received, what was the next circumstance that came under your observation, in relation to the case? Mr. Bentley called at my office one day about some matters—I forget what they were—and in conversation I thought I would see if he had heard about these anonymous letters, and I produced the envelope I had received, and mixed it among other papers that were lying upon my table; I said “You ought to know something about handwriting—do you recognize any of these?” He looked at one and another and said, “I do not”; and I took no further notice of the matter. Some time after, he came to me and asked me if I had had an anonymous communication.

7901. Do you recollect if that was in the early part of October, 1861? It would be about that time.

7902. Do you recollect his expressing his opinion that the handwriting on this envelope was that of a gentleman he was acquainted with at the Australian Club? I cannot say I remember.

7903. Do you remember his mentioning Mr. Francis? I do not think I should like to say that I do. I have had so much talk about it, that little details of conversation of course have escaped my memory.

7904. Do you recollect any conversation in which you stated that you had received an anonymous letter, and his asking you if it was about him? I recollect his calling upon me, in rather an excited state, and inquiring if I had had an anonymous letter about his wife.

7905. Just allow me to read the twenty-second paragraph of the Bentley affidavit, and see how far your memory accords with it—(Mr. Johnson read the paragraph referred to)? Yes, I think that is about correct. I think “kicking” was the expression I made use of, and described the action I should have performed.

7906. Will you look at that—(handing letter No. 6 to the witness)—Did that letter come into your hands? Yes, I have seen this letter before.

7907. How did it come into your hands? I think it was in the first instance shewn me by Mr. Herman Milford, to whom it was addressed.

7908. Did you take that to Mr. Bentley? I believe I did; I think I asked Mr. Milford to give it me.

7909. Will you look at these—(handing letters Nos. 10 and 11, with enclosure 11a)? These are letters that came to me.

7910. They both came to you through the post? Yes.

7911. With the enclosures? Yes. I may mention, knowing that this matter would sooner or later come to a question of inquiry, I put my initials on the letters immediately they were received, in order to identify them.

7912. Did you, about the early part of February last, give these letters to Mr. Bentley? I gave the letters to Mr. Bentley. I think that would be about the time, within a few days, of their receipt.

7913. Had you any interview with Captain M'Lerie, on the subject of these anonymous letters? I had.

7914. Can you state about when that took place? I do not think I could identify the time.

7915. Will you state what took place at that interview? I waited upon Captain M'Lerie with some of these letters, and we discussed the probability as to who was the writer of them, and Mr. M'Lerie then shewed me some letters which he had in a pigeon-hole before him, which were written by a man named Montagu. We compared a great deal of the writing of these letters with the writing of the letters I had taken, and we came to the conclusion that they were written in one and the same hand. There was a particularly distinguishing character about the words “Your's truly.” One was a fac-simile of the other.

7916. Did Captain M'Lerie express that opinion? Captain M'Lerie did express that opinion.

7917. Did you inform Mr. Bentley, at that interview, of the conclusion which Captain M'Lerie had arrived at? I think I did. I do not know that I told him about their being Montagu's letters, but that I had seen handwriting in the hands of the police which was remarkably like the handwriting of the letters.

7918. Do you recollect, in the month of February last, informing Mr. Bentley as to any letters that had been received by Mrs. Milford, the wife of Mr. Justice Milford? I did. I was told that Mrs. Milford had received a letter, and I told Mr. Bentley of it.

7919. Look at that letter, No. 31—(handing the same to witness)—Do you remember receiving that? I do; I received it on the 28th May.

7920. Was Mr. Bentley with you about the time when you received it? Mr. Bentley was with me on the day when one of the letters was brought to me, but I do not remember whether it was this.

7921. Do you remember that you were coming over to see me, on the subject of this letter, when Mr. Bentley called upon you? If this was the letter, I can tell you by reading it, as it

E. Wrench,
Esq.
12 Dec., 1862.

- E. Wrench, Esq.
 12 Dec., 1862.
- it was one of the most blackguard letters of the whole. (The witness read the letter from the printed document.) Yes, this is the letter; I think the word "prostitute" is mentioned in it.
7922. "Will you still continue to countenance this woman, who is no better than a prostitute?" Yes.
7923. Were you going over with Mr. Bentley to me, to have a consultation as to what was to be done? I was.
7924. You received that letter just as you were leaving? Just as I was leaving.
7925. Did you mention to Mr. Bentley your suspicion as to who had sent that letter? I was always very guarded in mentioning my suspicions to Mr. Bentley, or in pointing in any direction. Certainly in the latter months of this correspondence I never directly pointed to any one.
7926. Allow me to read the latter part of the 231st paragraph—"Mr. Wrench did not then open the letter, but said, 'Let us take it over to Mr. Johnson unopened.' We both recognized the handwriting of the address as being the same as that of the majority of the before-mentioned anonymous letters. We went to see Mr. Robert Johnson, but he was not in, and I then requested Mr. Wrench to open the letter, which he did, and we read it. Mr. Wrench said he had a strong suspicion as to who sent that letter, and then mentioned that on the previous evening, on returning to the concert-room after Mrs. Bentley left, he observed Mr. Montagu talking to a lady by his side in a way which at the time convinced him that he (Mr. Wrench) was the subject of their conversation; which circumstance led him to believe that the letter came from Mr. Montagu"—Do you remember that? Yes, distinctly; but I remember saying something farther. After Mrs. Bentley left the concert-room, and I had been out to see what was the matter, I returned again, and saw Mr. Montagu talking and looking at me. I had a very long coat on at the time, and I thought possibly the guy I looked might be the subject of their conversation, as well as my having gone out with Mrs. Bentley. The whole related there is the fact.
7927. Do you remember being at Mr. Bentley's house a short time after the holes were made in the ceiling? Yes.
7928. Did you see Mr. Harrison there? I did.
7929. Did he come in while you were there? He came in after I was there.
7930. Did you address him—say anything to him? I did not.
7931. Allow me to read this paragraph, and say whether your memory coincides with it—the 250th paragraph—"A few evenings afterwards Mr. Wrench came to our house. Mr. Harrison was there at the time. Mr. Wrench addressed him and said, 'You're the man I want to see; I came to see this loft; I hear that a detective officer has said that in the first place no one could get through the window in the roof, and that, even if they did so, it would be at the risk of their lives.' Mr. Harrison said that he had been through it several times himself, and as to risk of life, there was a parapet four feet high, so that any one could get from house to house with perfect safety, and without being seen from the street. Mr. Wrench said, 'I'm glad I have seen you, as although I did not believe the statement, I'm glad to be in a position to contradict it.'" That is true—every word of it, but I do not think that was the first evening I saw Mr. Harrison. I will tell you why. Mr. Smart told me, at the Union Club, that he had heard a detective had said he would swear, in the first place, that no one could get through the window in the roof, and that even if any one did get out, there was nothing to prevent their falling into the street, and that therefore the statement must be false.
7932. You, I presume, kept no memoranda as to the dates of these transactions? None whatever.
7933. But can you remember at all what was the period when you had that conversation with Mr. Harrison in Mr. Bentley's house—whether it was about the middle of June last, or rather later? Yes, I should say it was about that time—not from direct remembrance of dates, but from circumstances.
7934. Do you recollect having an interview with Mr. Cowper, the Colonial Secretary, on this business? I do.
7935. Did you at that interview place in his possession a number of anonymous letters, or all of them? I think it was at the second interview.
7936. Did you place the anonymous letters in Mr. Cowper's hands? Yes.
7937. Can you at all fix the date of that interview? It was all about that time; I could not fix the precise date.
7938. Do you remember Mr. Bentley coming to you about the time the post was leaving for England, to request you to see Mr. Cowper? Mr. Bentley met me in the street. I was riding on horseback at the time. He said he was very anxious to write to his friends by that mail; it was either a day or two days previous to the departure of the mail. He said it was disturbing his peace of mind very much. I felt rather cross at the time, and said, "You have left the matter in my hands, and I wish you would not disturb it, as I have written to Mr. Cowper on the subject, and it would be most inopportune to call upon him now, as it is about mail time." I allayed his anxiety by the statement that I had written to Mr. Cowper.
7939. Had you seen Mr. Cowper? I had seen Mr. Cowper.
7940. How long was it after you had seen Mr. Cowper that you had this interview with Mr. Bentley? It must have been some days. I thought there was rather a delay in receiving a reply from the Colonial Secretary; some days must have elapsed.
7941. I will bring your attention to some other circumstance. It is stated that your interview was on the 17th June—Mr. Harrison says so? I do not think it was, because I wrote earlier in June than that; I wrote on the 10th June, and I do not think I had seen Mr. Cowper

- Cowper between the 10th of June and the meeting with Mr. Bentley on the 19th, 20th, or 21st. It must have been within a day of the departure of the mail that I saw Mr. Bentley. I do not think I had seen Mr. Cowper. E. Wrench, Esq.
7942. By Mr. Morris: Do you not remember that you stated, just now, that you told Mr. Bentley you had seen Mr. Cowper? I saw Mr. Cowper on two occasions, I think, before I wrote to him; but I was speaking of the time between the writing of my letter and of my seeing Mr. Bentley. 12 Dec., 1862.
7943. By Mr. Johnson: Do you recollect, on the day before you met Mr. Bentley, Mr. Harrison being at your office? Yes, I do; I think that was on Friday night.
7944. That would be the 20th June? It was, and it was on Saturday morning I met Mr. Bentley nearly opposite Buchan Thomson's.
7945. Did you not, at that interview on that Saturday, tell Mr. Bentley that you had seen Mr. Cowper, and that everything was in a right train, and beg him not to be importunate, and to do nothing till the next week? I did; "importunate" was the word I used.
7946. Had you told Mr. Bentley before that, that you had had any interview with Mr. Cowper? I think not; I think that was the first occasion on which I explained to Mr. Bentley what steps I had taken; it was then done to relieve his anxiety.
7947. By Mr. Morris: Had you seen Mrs. Bentley and conveyed to her the fact that you had seen Mr. Cowper? I think not.
7948. By Mr. Johnson: Did you ever communicate that fact personally to Mrs. Bentley? As a matter of conversation subsequently I may have mentioned it. At the time it was determined to have the depositions prepared I may have mentioned it, but not as a new thing.
7949. You say you were a little annoyed at Mr. Bentley bothering you when he had put the matter in your hands? I confess it.
7950. Up to this time had you told Mrs. Bentley of any interview you had had with Mr. Cowper? I do not think so; I do not think I told either of them what steps I had taken.
7951. You were desirous, at that time, to carry it on with your own views and in your own manner? Yes.
7952. Do you think it possible you could have told Mrs. Bentley before that, that you had had an interview with Mr. Cowper—did you tell her of it without telling Mr. Bentley? I do not think I did.
7953. Have you any recollection of it? I have no recollection of it.
7954. Do you believe you did? I do not believe I did.
7955. At that interview on the Saturday, did Mr. Bentley ask you what had transpired at your interview with Mr. Harrison on the previous afternoon? He did; that was one of the subject matters of conversation.
7956. What did you tell him? I told him I was perfectly satisfied.
7957. Do you recollect his making this statement:—"Why I ask you is because of the delay, and these reports alleging Mrs. Bentley to be a monomaniac. The police having been once or twice at fault, it makes me a little suspicious that they are throwing obstacles in the way." Mr. Wrench said—"Well, but what has Harrison said to you?" I replied, "Why, that he'll stake his soul that neither Mrs. Bentley nor I have anything to do with it." And Mr. Wrench replied, that the substance of what Mr. Harrison said to him was "to the same effect"? Precisely.
7958. Is that correct? It is to a word.
7959. And it is true that Mr. Harrison made a representation to you to that effect? It is true.
7960. By the Chairman: At that particular time? It was on Friday night; he came to my office late in the afternoon.
7961. By Mr. Johnson: Would you have the kindness to inform the Committee again, as nearly as you can, what took place at the interview between Harrison and yourself on Friday afternoon or evening? The object of my having Mr. Harrison at my office was with the view of settling some doubts, not that existed in my own mind, but that had been suggested by Mr. Smart and others, with reference to this matter. A long conversation took place between Harrison and myself, my object being to get at his real opinion of the circumstances of the case. I think he must have been with me fully an hour; I know it was getting dark when he left. He left me firmly believing that he believed as strongly in the truth of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's statement as I did, and I think he made use of strong words at the end of our conversation, in expressing his conviction.
7962. Did he make use of the words that he would stake his soul that neither Mr. nor Mrs. Bentley had anything to do with it? I think so.
7963. Was Mr. Bentley aware that you were going to have that interview with Mr. Harrison? I do not know that he was aware of it; he came into the office and saw Mr. Harrison in my room, or was about the office at the time.
7964. Had you at all preconcerted with Mr. Bentley to have that interview with Mr. Harrison? No, I do not think so.
7965. You had it for your own satisfaction? I did.
7966. And you were thoroughly satisfied, from what Mr. Harrison said, that they were entirely innocent of any complicity in the matter? Perfectly.
7967. By Mr. Morris: You have a distinct remembrance of having called upon Mr. Cowper, or have you a distinct recollection of having called upon Mr. Cowper, and Mr. Cowper having said to you that he could do nothing in the matter till Captain M'Lerie returned from some place he had gone to in the country? Yes, I do distinctly remember.
7968. Can you remember how long that was before the mail left that you saw Mr. Cowper, when Mr. Cowper said he could do nothing till Captain M'Lerie returned? I do not think

- E. Wrench, Esq.
12 Dec., 1862.
- I could fix the date, but I think M'Lerie returned the following morning, or something like that. I think I met M'Lerie by the Victoria Club, the following morning.
7969. Did you state to Captain M'Lerie that you had seen Mr. Cowper? I think so—I think I mentioned it.
7970. Remembering thus much more, can you remember whether, one morning that you saw Captain M'Lerie, you told Mr. Bentley that you had seen Captain M'Lerie and Mr. Cowper—that is, the morning of the 18th? It is possible it may be the same morning; I could not at this moment say whether it was Saturday morning or not, but I can say this, that it was all about one and the same time.
7971. Can you say whether, when you first informed Mr. Bentley of your conversation with Mr. Cowper, it was after you had seen Mr. Harrison on the Friday night or previously? It was certainly after I had seen Harrison on Friday night, because the result of Mr. Harrison's conversation was explained to Mr. Bentley; that is to say, that I expressed my entire satisfaction in the matter.
7972. You are certain, whatever the date may have been, that it was after having seen Mr. Harrison on Friday night? Yes.
7973. Were you aware at the time, that Mr. Harrison was gone into the country, with the intention of going to Bathurst? I was not.
7974. Any way you are certain of this fact, that you did not inform Mr. or Mrs. Bentley until after you had seen Mr. Harrison on Friday night? I state most distinctly that I believe I never mentioned it to Mr. or Mrs. Bentley till that Saturday morning, when it was about mail time, what steps I had taken and what had been done; as I said before, to allay the great anxiety that was displayed by Mr. Bentley.
7975. Can you remember whether about that time there was a ball at Government House? I fancy there must have been some large party, for I think while I was standing there Mr. Josephson passed, and I asked Mr. Josephson how the young ladies were after the party.
7976. That was when you were in conversation with Mr. Bentley? Yes.
7977. By Mr. Johnson: What was the party you alluded to? I think it was the party at which the girls came out first.
7978. Where? At Government House.
7979. At which you were present with Mrs. Wrench, and where you had seen them? Yes.
7980. By the Chairman: I believe you are very intimate with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? I believe I may say very intimate.
7981. Have you ever seen anything approaching to levity on the part of Mrs. Bentley? She has always been a welcome guest at my house, and has been the companion and friend of my wife; I need say nothing further.
7982. Have you ever seen Mrs. Bentley smoking? No.
7983. Or drinking brandy and water? Yes, I once administered some to her myself, when she fainted on my verandah.
7984. That is not what I mean. I mean, have you seen her voluntarily taking brandy and water—treating it as a drink? Never.
7985. From what you know of Mrs. Bentley, do you think she would allow any man except her husband to put his arm round her waist, to kiss her, or that she would kiss him? Certainly not. Whoever said so, I would say it was a lie at once.
7986. From what you know of Mrs. Bentley, you believe her to be incapable of an untruth? Decidedly.
7987. Do you remember any further particular with regard to the interview you had with Mr. Harrison on Friday night, when the topic of Mrs. Bentley's innocence or guilt of being the author of these letters was the topic of conversation? I know the reason I got Harrison to come to my office was to clear up some doubts that had been raised, not in my mind but by various gentlemen, Mr. Smart being one of the number, who had discussed the subject at the Club,—I believed Mr. Harrison was the best person to apply to, to set these doubts at rest, and I subsequently repeated the conversation I had had with him to those gentlemen.
7988. Was that before the publication of the particulars of the Bentley case—I allude to the circumstance of the concealment in the roof—had been mentioned in the papers? I think before.
7989. So that Mr. Smart, or whoever it was, must have obtained this information in a private manner? He would not disclose who was his informant, but said he had heard that some detective would swear in the first place that there was no trap-door in the roof, that a man could not get through the window in the roof, and that if he did get out, there was nothing to prevent him from falling into the street.
7990. This was before Friday, the 20th of June, 1862? I think so—it was all about that time; I could not exactly fix the date of a trivial matter of that kind.
7991. It was in consequence of hearing that conversation you went to Mr. Bentley's house, to see the roof? I said to Mr. Smart, "I will trust no one's word; I will go the house myself, will see the roof, and bring the report of what I have seen." I went to the house, saw Mr. Bentley, and asked him to take me up-stairs, without telling my object; he shewed me the trap-door in the roof, shewed me the hole in the ceiling, from which the plaster had fallen down, shewing that the hole had been made from above.
7992. Was the name of Mr. Curtis mentioned at all in regard to this? I do not remember; some name was mentioned with reference to the board work that had been put over the bed. It was some tradesman.
7993. By Mr. Johnson: Toose, was it? I do not know; it was some tradesman.
7994. By the Chairman: Did you go into the roof at that time? I did not.
7995. You took Mr. Harrison's assurance with regard to that particular? Yes, with regard to the parapet wall four feet high, which went all along that block of buildings.

7996. By Mr. Leary: You state that you have known Mrs. Bentley very intimately, that is that you have frequently seen Mrs. Bentley at your own house and at other places? Yes.
7997. At parties? Yes; many of my own circle of acquaintance have been introduced to her, and have been pleased to make her acquaintance.
7998. You have stated that you have never observed the slightest levity on the part of Mrs. Bentley? I state it most distinctly.
7999. By Mr. Johnson: Do you remember at what time of day the post left in the month of June last—was it not late on the day of Saturday, the 21st? It would be naturally; falling on a Saturday the post would be open till 6 o'clock.
8000. You have stated, I think, just now, that you thought you had this interview with Mr. Harrison before the letter appeared in the newspaper? I say I cannot fix in my mind whether it was or was not.
8001. In point of fact, I may tell you that the letter appeared on the 4th of June, and you have told us that this interview was about the 20th? I say I cannot speak as to the dates.
8002. Had not the matter of the Bentley case become a subject of very general conversation after that letter appeared? It must have been after the letter appeared, for it was a topic of common conversation at our Club table many days, therefore it must have arisen from the publication of that letter, which, as you know, I was one of the means of suggesting.
8003. Your conversation with Mr. Smart had resulted from the fact of that publication? From the fact of that publication.
8004. By Mr. Leary: I suppose you were aware that Mr. Harrison remained occasionally at Mrs. Bentley's, as a detective, watching the house? I was informed so.
8005. Were you ever at Mr. Bentley's on any occasion when Mr. Harrison was there? Yes.
8006. Where used Mr. Harrison to locate himself? In the drawing-room.
8007. Did he join in the general conversation? He joined in general conversation, and favoured us with some of his bush experiences. I objected to it, but still I thought he was doing his best for my friends, the Bentleys, and therefore I did not object to meet him.
8008. Did you ever observe any invitation on the part of Mrs. Bentley to him to be too familiar? Not the slightest.
8009. How did she address him? As Mr. Harrison, of course.
8010. Did you ever hear the Christian name of Mr. Harrison mentioned at that house? No; I do not know it now.
8011. By Mr. Wilson: Have you been frequently in the company of Mrs. Bentley when Harrison has been there? I think I have met him there three or four times.
8012. You never saw anything, even a look, that would lead you to suppose there was anything wrong on the part of either of them? Not in the slightest.
8013. By Mr. Leary: Did you ever see Mrs. Bentley in hysterics or fits? I once saw Mrs. Bentley in a fainting fit on the verandah of my own house.
8014. Did she wring her hands on that occasion? No. Mrs. Bentley had taken a long walk with several gentlemen and ladies to Guilfoyle's garden; when walking back she tottered very much, and when she got on to the verandah she fainted. When I came up I saw her lying on a chair quite placid—in a faint.
8015. Did you ever see her on any other occasion in a fit? I do not think I ever saw her.
8016. By Mr. Morris: Are you aware if Mrs. Bentley is very fond of reading novels? I do not know.
8017. Does she talk much about novels? No; I think she talks the least of novels of any woman I know. She can talk about Italy.
8018. Is she very imaginative in conversation? I should call her a very practical good little housewife, that is how I should describe her; a woman struggling against great difficulties—a sort of heroine. She has a husband, who was expected to die some ten or twelve years ago, and I have expected him to die every day the last six months. She is a perfectly good wife, a perfect pattern I should call her.
8019. By Mr. Johnson: You have mentioned that she could talk about Italy—did she ever profess to be acquainted with German? I do not remember to have heard her say so.
8020. Or to sing German songs in the German language? I do not think I ever heard her; I do not think she sings at all.
8021. As far as you know she never professed any acquaintance with the German language? I never heard it.
8022. By Mr. Hart: Have you taken any steps to discover, by a comparison of handwriting, who were the authors of these anonymous letters? I did, on one occasion, at the Police Office in Elizabeth-street. Captain M'Lerie shewed me some letters, which he laid before me, I think at first, without displaying the signature. There were a great many features in the handwriting similar to that of the anonymous letters—the handwriting seemed to be the same only with the inclination of the letters reversed. When I came to the words "Yours truly," over the signature "H. N. Montagu," it seemed to be a perfect fac-simile of the writing in the anonymous letters; it was a wonderful coincidence if it were not the same handwriting. We even discussed the practicability of getting into Montagu's house to see if there were any traces of this handwriting about.
8023. From your very great experience in the comparison of handwriting, have you formed any opinion upon the subject yourself, as to who is the author, or who are the authors of these anonymous letters? I have not had any further comparison of handwriting than I have told you of in the case of Montagu's letters; and I think, if Montagu's letters are here, I could point out, what was observed both by Captain M'Lerie and myself, that there are

- E. Wrench, Esq.
12 Dec., 1862.
- two or three features or styles of handwriting in one letter. The person who could write such a letter could turn his hand to anything.
8024. There were several specimens of Montagu's handwriting shewn to you, in each of which the style was different? There was a great diversity of style.
8025. Do you remember a letter signed "Montagu of the Glen?" I should recollect it if I saw it, but I do not recollect it from being so signed.
8026. Is that the letter Captain M'Lerie shewed you (handing to witness the letter signed Montagu of the Glen)? I do not think I saw this letter before.
8027. Will you look at the letter now produced, marked G 2 B (handing the same to the witness)? There is a peculiarity in this W.; it is more in the German style, which you will also see in all the W's.
8028. Look at some of the anonymous letters in this bundle, and which are said to be in Montagu's handwriting, and point out to the Committee any similarity there is between them? (The witness examined the letters handed in by Captain M'Lerie.) You notice a peculiar formation of the capital E in the letter signed "Montagu of the Glen?" I could not give you any practical information upon that. The handwriting of the letter dated July 12th, 1861, is a handwriting that could be turned to write the letter marked Appendix E. If you look at this letter (referring to a letter dated May 28, 1861, and signed Henry N. Montagu), you will see that there are two or three styles of handwriting in it. It commences in a clerkly or commercial hand.
8029. The paragraph commencing "Captain M'Lerie," seems to be in a lady's handwriting? Yes; that is not the commencement of a paragraph; it is intended for the superscription. Here again are indications of a woman's fist.
8030. The fourth page seems entirely different? Yes; the fourth page is the best written of the whole. I should say if that letter was all written by one man, he had great power of writing, and could do anything he liked with his pen.
8031. Look at this letter, marked No. 10, and observe the peculiarity of the capital M in the whole of that letter? That is a foreign style of writing—it is more of a German than an English letter.
8032. Do you see any capital G's there? Yes.
8033. If you compare the capital G in that letter with the capital G in this letter of 12th July, 1861, do you see any similarity between them? No, but I should say the hand that wrote that G, if it were reversed, could write this.
8034. Are they not both written in the German style? Scarcely.
8035. Is the G in the letter of July 12th in the German style? No, it is not; it is not an unusual way of forming the letter G.
8036. Does the same remark apply to the capital L in that letter? That capital L is the same feature of handwriting which distinguishes these letter M's. This hand has been written this way (inclined from left to right); there has been no stopping for words by any one who wrote this letter; it has been written off flying.
8037. Is it your opinion that these anonymous letters are written in a foreign handwriting, or written by a foreigner? I should be more disposed to say that they were written by a foreigner than by an Englishman. At the same time, if they were written by an Englishman, he must have great power of writing. I should say that and that (referring to letters signed H. N. Montagu) if the hand were turned would be that (referring to certain anonymous letters.)
8038. By Mr Johnson: You were manager of the Joint Stock Bank for some years—were you not? I was.
8039. By the Chairman: Do you know Mrs. Bentley's handwriting (handing witness letter marked No. 8 A)? I do not think I do.
8040. You do not know whether that letter is in Mrs. Bentley's handwriting? This letter was written by the same hand that wrote the forgeries—that wrote this letter beginning "My dear Edward," enclosed in a letter addressed to me. I will not mind swearing that it is by the same hand. I do not know that I ever saw that letter before.
8041. You have no doubt the letter was written by the same person who wrote the forgeries commencing "Dear Edward"? I have no doubt that this letter now in my hand, sent as an enclosure to me, and commencing "Dear Edward," was written by the same hand.
8042. Have you seen that writing before (handing to witness the note put in by Mr. Harrison, said to be from Mrs. Bentley)? I think not.
8043. Do you identify it as the writing of a particular person, or as having a strong resemblance to the writing of any particular person? I think I once saw a note from Mrs. Bentley to Mrs. Wrench; it was a delicate, lady-like, handwriting; that has never been written by an educated woman; that has been written by a man.
8044. Do you think that writing (the note above referred to) a fac simile of that (handing witness a sheet of note paper bearing the Legislative Assembly stamp, and containing several words)? No, I should say not; I should say that was written by some one under a state of nervousness or excitement, whoever wrote it. I do not know whose writing that is. Is that Mrs. Bentley's writing? I conceive that was written here, by the paper; and if you were to ask me to write my name after a cross-examination of an hour and a half I should write such a fist that my banker would not pay a cheque written in such a hand.
8045. Have you anything further to state? I may state that the depositions of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley —
8046. By Mr. Johnson: And of their servants? I have not seen the depositions—I have never read them—and of their servants—were prepared at the suggestion of Captain M'Lerie, who said the Government could do nothing till they got these sworn depositions, and when they had them the Government would be prepared to carry out what I had suggested, suggested, and which was to offer a large reward, and a free pardon to any accomplice who would give information. E. Wrench, Esq.

8047. Do you say that you have not seen the depositions? I have not seen them.

8048. Did not Captain M'Lerie shew them in his office? He shewed me Harrison's cock-and-bull story. 12 Dec., 1862.

8049. By Mr. Wilson: Did you ask him to let you see it? Yes; Mr. Cowper referred me to him in order that I might read it; I read it, or glanced over it, in his office confidentially.

8050. Did Captain M'Lerie make that request, that you would consider it a confidential communication? Yes, I so considered it, until I saw it referred to in the Empire newspaper, and I then wrote to M'Lerie to say that I should consider myself at liberty to speak of the matter, as it was now public property.

8051. Are you aware whether he allowed any other gentleman to see it at the same time? I think I wanted Mr. Johnson to see it, as the solicitor of Mr. Bentley, and I wrote to Captain M'Lerie to let him see it. I afterwards met Captain M'Lerie in the street, who said he had written to the Crown law officers about it, and had not received a reply. The next day I saw the article in the Empire; I felt indignant, and wrote to say that I felt I was released from my bond of confidence.

8052. Did you suggest that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley should make a sworn deposition to lay before the Government? I will swear that Captain M'Lerie suggested it himself, and that I agreed immediately.

8053. By the Chairman: Have you anything farther you wish to state to the Committee? Not beyond the facts I have stated.

Mrs. Julia Bentley called in and further examined:—

8054. By the Chairman: Can you state about when you first learned that Mr. Wrench had had an interview with Mr. Cowper, the Colonial Secretary? No, I cannot at all. Mrs. Julia Bentley.

8055. Who was it that told you that? Mr. Bentley told me.

8056. You remember the anonymous letter in which the writer stated he had been in the roof and had seen you on the stairs? I do. 12 Dec., 1862.

8057. Do you remember having a conversation with Mr. Harrison respecting the letter about the roof? No, I do not.

8058. Do you remember his telling you you might depend upon it, it was mere intimidation? Yes, I do remember that.

8059. Was Mr. Bentley present at the time? He was.

8060. Do you remember what he said? He said, Yes, he thought it was intimidation, I believe.

8061. Mr. Harrison went up into the roof upon that occasion—did he not? Yes, he did.

8062. Do you recollect what opinion he expressed when he returned from it? Are you referring to the date on which the holes were made?

8063. No; I am referring to Tuesday, the 22nd of April, when Mr. Harrison went up-stairs with a candle to examine the loft; not upon the occasion when the holes were made? I think Mr. Harrison stated that he did not know what to think—that there were footmarks there.

8064. Do you remember his saying anything about a native tracker, or anything of that kind? Yes, I remember the same evening he said he would bring a native tracker the next morning.

8065. Who was present when he said that? Mr. Bentley and myself also.

8066. On the next day did Harrison come? Yes, he did when I was alone, and he told me that his men were down-stairs in the kitchen.

8067. Did you see that man? No.

8068. You do not know whether it was a native tracker or not? No, I do not.

8069. By Mr. Morris: In paragraph 171 of your deposition you state that, "On the next morning (Wednesday, the 23rd April last), Mr. Harrison, according to his promise, came to our house with an aboriginal native tracker, and they both went up into the loft together, but I heard nothing of the result of their inquiries—Mr. Bentley was not at home at the time." Did you see the native tracker? No, I did not. Mr. Harrison came and asked me if I would allow him to go up into the loft; he stated that his men were in the kitchen, and I therefore supposed it was the native tracker, as he said the night before he would bring one.

8070. By Mr. Johnson: Have you any doubt whatever as to the time when Mr. Harrison gave you the whistle and stiletto? None whatever.

8071. Did you go to Newtown on the following Tuesday to the Friday, when you were assaulted without the stiletto? No, I took the stiletto with me.

8072. And the whistle? And the whistle.

8073. In point of fact how was it you did not go to Mr. Josephson's on Tuesday of the Easter week? Because Mr. Josephson's sister, I believe it was, called at my house and left a message, that the Miss Josephsons' would not take their lessons that day, as they were going out.

8074. On the Tuesday? She called on Monday and said I need not call on the following Tuesday, as Miss Josephson would not be at home that day.

8075. Had you any dispensation on any other day in Easter week, excepting Tuesday? No, I had not.

- Mrs. Julia Bentley.
12 Dec., 1862.
8076. By Mr. Hart: Is it not usual for professional people to take holidays about Christmas and Easter? I do not know whether it is usual.
8077. Do you not take holidays with any other pupils? No, I do not.
8078. By Mr. Johnson: You did not consult personally Dr. Brereton about this wound you received on the day of the assault? I did not.
8079. Have you ever declined to see your doctor upon other matters? Yes, several times.
8080. I suppose you have an objection to a doctor or any one else seeing you, unless you feel it to be absolutely necessary? Unless I am really so ill I cannot avoid it, I never call in a doctor.
8081. You have been asked a great deal whether you ever stated that you met a priest going to Newtown—did you ever tell either of your servant girls that you had been in a shop in Market-street, to buy worsted, and had asked a priest to allow you to make a pair of slippers for him? Never.
8082. Or to make a pair of braces for him? Never.
8083. Or any conversation between you and a supposed priest? None whatever.
8084. Did you ever, in point of fact, buy the wool for the purpose of making a pair of slippers, at a shop in Market-street? Yes.
8085. Who was with you at the time? My nurse and two little children.
8086. Anna Maria Bradshaw? Yes.
8087. She was aware that you bought worsted for the purpose of making something? Yes, she was aware that I had bought a pair of commenced slippers, and the materials for working them myself.
8088. About when did you make that purchase? I think it was at the commencement of August.
8089. For what purpose did you make that purchase? To send them to England for my papa.
8090. For your own father? Yes.
8091. Did you work up the slippers for that purpose? Yes.
8092. Do you know whether they were sent? Yes, Mr. Bentley sent them.
8093. Did any unexpected delay take place about their being sent? Yes; I wanted to send them for his birthday, but they were not in time.
8094. When was his birthday? The 22nd November.
8095. I presume you intended to send them by the September mail—the mail that would reach England in November? Yes.
8096. Do you know how it was they were not sent by the September mail? Yes; I think Mr. Bentley found they were too late to send by the mail as a parcel.
8097. Do you recollect having any conversation at which Mr. Harrison was present, respecting the behaviour of Lady Young towards you? No, never—Before Mr. Harrison? Yes, I do remember.
8098. Did you state in terms that Lady Young cut you? No, I never made any such statement.
8099. What was the statement you did make? I stated that about, or more than, twelve months ago, I had met Lady Young in a shop, and she looked at me in so pointed a manner that I was quite sure that her attention was pointed to me unfavourably. I was then aware of these anonymous letters having been sent to several of my friends, and I told Mr. Bentley when I came home.
8100. Do you know whether that circumstance was mentioned in Mr. Harrison's presence? I believe it was mentioned when he stated something about being employed at Government House, with reference to some letters about Signor D'Apice. Mr. Bentley said he wondered if Lady Young had received any letters about me. I think that circumstance was mentioned, but I will not be positive.
8101. We have heard that for some time you have been subject to fainting and fits of hysteria—were you subject to this complaint before you knew of the receipt of these anonymous letters—have you ever suffered from them before? Yes; a few days before I went to a picnic and over-exerted myself; the first time they occurred was after a picnic—after I returned home in the evening.
8102. Have you had them more frequently since? I have.
8103. You recollect wearing that stiletto once or twice, and the whistle more frequently? Yes; I always wore the whistle.
8104. Are you aware whether Mr. Black was aware that you went to Newtown armed with a stiletto? No, I am not aware that he is aware of it now.
8105. Do you recollect the occasion when you saw a man hold up a letter at the concert, shortly after the assault? I do.
8106. Will you describe what took place in reference to that at the concert? I went to the concert, and sat in the front row of seats; and Mr. Bentley told me several times to look round and see if I could see anything of this man. Just as the last piece was being played, nearly all the audience rose to go, and Mr. Bentley said, "Now you can stand up without being conspicuous." I did so. As I turned round I saw this man standing at the top of the stairs by the Clarence-street entrance, with a letter in his hand. I told Mr. Bentley—
8107. Did you observe anything peculiar about his look? Yes, he had a peculiar sneer and grin. I said to Mr. Bentley, "There he is! He held up a letter." Mr. Bentley immediately left me, and went and told Mr. Harrison, who was standing at the entrance—
8108. How did the man hold up the letter? He held his hand up in this way (describing the action.)
8109. About even with his chin? Yes. The detective, Clarke, was standing almost close to him at the time.

8110. That was at the Clarence-street entrance? Yes; at the top of the stairs.
8111. Where were you standing at the time? On the front seat by the orchestra.
8112. The orchestra is near the York-street entrance? It is.
8113. And there was a large number of persons between you and the man who held up the letter? Yes; the room was quite crowded, and he was behind us.
8114. What did Mr. Bentley do upon your stating that you saw this man? He went out, and I believe spoke to Mr. Harrison, for when he came back to me he said no such man had passed. I then told him it was not at that, but at the other entrance.
8115. Which way did Mr. Bentley go when you told him you saw the man? He went to the York-street entrance to Mr. Harrison.
8116. I suppose, in the agitation of the moment, you had not explained to him where you saw the man? Yes, I think I said the Clarence-street entrance. I am pretty sure I said so.
8117. You say you were sitting in the front of the orchestra; your back then would be to the Clarence-street entrance. Explain how it was you saw the man who was sitting at the top of the stairs by the Clarence-street entrance? Because I turned round.
8118. Your husband told you to stand up and look round, as you would not be conspicuous when the whole of the people were standing up? The whole of the people were not standing up, but several were leaving at the time.
8119. And you stood up and turned round? Yes.
8120. You think you mentioned the Clarence-street entrance, and Mr. Bentley ran to the other entrance? Yes.
8121. By the Chairman: What lady was it who called upon you after the concert to say that she had seen some one at the concert who had excited her suspicions? Mrs. Sigmont.
8122. Do you know where she is to be found? Mr. Bentley had the address of her son, who came with her.
8123. By Mr. Johnson: You remember Easter Monday? I do.
8124. During that day did you hear any noise in the house, that excited your attention? Yes, I heard a noise about the bed-rooms as of some one stumbling.
8125. You mentioned that to Mr. Bentley? I did when he came home.
8126. Was it mentioned to Mr. Harrison, do you recollect? Yes, Mr. Bentley mentioned it to him.
8127. What did he say about it? They both said they thought it was fancy on my part; that it must have been a noise next door.
8128. Have you discovered since that anything peculiar took place on the night of that day at your house—has Mrs. Lindsay told you anything? Yes, she mentioned seeing some — Mrs. Lindsay did not tell me, but I heard —
8129. The police, as far as you know, did not remain in the house that night? No; I do not think they were ever in the house all night, till after that letter speaking of their being in the loft.
8130. You have stated in your deposition, as fully as you recollect, everything you know about the case? Yes, I have.
8131. When did you first know Mr. Bentley? The earliest time I can ever recollect seeing him was when I was about eleven, I think.
8132. How did you happen to see him; was he visiting at your father's? He came down and remained with us two days; he came to go with a picnic my papa was giving. He came on Saturday and left on the following Monday, when he left for London.
8133. What time elapsed before you saw him again—you were then eleven? Yes, and when I saw him again I was just seventeen.
8134. Where did you see him then? In London.
8135. Did an attachment spring up between you at that time? Yes.
8136. When were you married to him? Just before I was one and twenty.
8137. Where did you reside from the time you were eleven years of age until you were married? Always in Exeter.
8138. Where did you go to school? At Inslow, North Devon.
8139. How long were you at that school? I was there not quite twelve months.
8140. Have you ever stated that you were engaged to Mr. Bentley at fourteen, and married at seventeen? Never.
8141. You have several sisters I believe? I have.
8142. One of them is also married to a Mr. Thomas Bentley? Yes.
8143. A cousin of your husband? Yes.
8144. By Mr. Hart: At what age was she married? I really do not know; it was when I was eight years old; she is much older than I am.
8145. By Mr. Johnson: Where was she educated? She was partly educated in a convent at Winchester; but I do not know where else she was educated; she was so much older than I.
8146. People have connected the Miss Munk who was educated in a convent with the Exeter affair? Yes.
8147. By Mr. Leary: Were you ever educated at a convent yourself? No, I was not.
8148. Were you ever a Catholic? Never.
8149. If any person had stated that you had informed them that you were in a convent for four years at school—that you were a Catholic, and went to confession regularly, would that be correct? It would not be correct, but entirely false.
8150. By Mr. Johnson: Did you ever state to either of these servants, or to anybody, that you were watched by a policeman at Exeter, in order to detect the person who had spoken to you, and that you had made an arrangement to drop a handkerchief when you saw him, but that although you did meet the person you did not drop the handkerchief? Never.
8151. Or any thing to that effect? Never.

Mrs. Julia Bentley.

22 Dec., 1862.

8152.

- Mrs. Julia Bentley.
 22 Dec., 1862.
8152. Did you ever have a conversation with Maria Bradshaw about the Jesuits? I never had any conversation respecting them; but a week after the article appeared—or rather the extract from the Western Luminary appeared—in one of the daily journals, the Sunday before or the Sunday after that appeared, I heard a great noise at the back of our house in Castlereagh-street, and I thought it was a tipsy man who lives behind our house, and when I went into the nursery I said to the servant, Anna Maria Bradshaw, “What a noise that tipsy man is making.” She said, “I do not think it is that tipsy man; it is a Wesleyan ranter preaching.” In the middle of the week I was in the nursery, and I heard a great noise again. I found it was this tipsy man, and I said, “There is that man again.” Maria Bradshaw said, “It was not that tipsy man you heard on Sunday, but a Wesleyan ranter, and he was preaching about you and about the anonymous letters, and stating that “it was all the work of the Jesuits.” She then went on in a very disrespectful manner, and said she thought it was a disgrace she should have to suffer for such things; that the Catholics were too strong for it to matter, but that if it had occurred in England convents would have been burned down, and riots would have occurred; she said whoever put that extract in the paper must be a friend of Mr. Bentley’s. I told her she was forgetting herself, and left the nursery. That was the only time that any conversation of that description occurred.
8153. By Mr. Leary: Could you give any account of that affair at Exeter? No, the only account I can at all give is what my husband gave in the papers. My recollection is so very slight of that;—I went away—I was taken away in the midst of it, and came back again, and then left home to go to school.
8154. By Mr. Hart: You seem to recollect, accurately, what took place when you were eleven years old—can you not recollect what took place when you were fourteen? I recollect no particular circumstance—no trivial circumstance which occurred when I was eleven.
8155. You stated just now that you recollected Mr. Bentley coming to a pic-nic on a certain day of the week, and returning on a certain other day of the week to London? I do recollect that.
8156. Is it the fact that you were taken into a butcher’s shop by any person, and that any threats were held out to you, such as are stated by the papers? It is the fact.
8157. The statement I suppose that appeared from the Western Luminary is correct as far as you recollect the facts? It is.
8158. By Mr. Morris: What was the style of handwriting in which the letters were written, purporting to be from some Roman Catholic in Exeter? I do not remember that I ever saw the letters—my eldest sister took them—I do not remember that I ever saw them.
8159. By Mr. Johnson: Will you state all you recollect about that Exeter circumstance, without saying whether all that is in the paper is correct or not? I remember being stopped coming from school and some one speaking to me; and I remember since I have read the paper that the subject they always mentioned was religion, but I did not remember it till then. The next thing I remember—I can remember also being taken disguised—I was staying at one of the Magistrate’s houses—and going with two of the Magistrate’s son’s, disguised, to the midnight mass at the chapel at Exeter—or rather I went—there was no midnight mass—I went with them, but I do not remember anything occurring—I can only remember the circumstance that I went.
8160. By Mr. Hart: That did not form part of your complaint before the Magistrate—did it? I really cannot remember. I know I did go there.
8161. Is that at all mentioned in the Western Luminary—anything about your going to midnight mass? I do not know that it is, but I know I did go.
8162. By Mr. Morris: With the object of detecting the person, possibly? I do not know at all why they wanted me.
8163. By Mr. Johnson: State, as far as you recollect, what took place respecting your being taken to the butcher’s shop? I remember a paper being read over. The contents of the paper I have not the remotest recollection of, excepting that I promised to be a Catholic; but I had no idea what the contents of that paper were till I read the statement in the papers.
8164. By Mr. Hart: In this Colony? In this Colony.
8165. By Mr. Leary: Can you state why you promised to be a Catholic—was it in consequence of a threat that you were intimidated? Yes, I was. This paper was read over to me, and I was told I was to swear to that.
8166. Can you remember whether you were very much alarmed? Yes.
8167. Did you say you would become a Catholic merely to be released? I should have said anything at all they had told me then.
8168. Can you narrate anything further; after you promised you would become a Catholic what took place then? I do not know that anything else took place.
8169. You left the butcher’s shop then? Yes, I left it.
8170. When you went home what took place; will you state as much as you remember? I am stating as much as I do remember.
8171. Do you remember what took place when you went home? No; whatever occurred, the subject of the letters was kept as much from me as possible, I was so very ill at the time.
8172. You had a father living at the time? Yes.
8173. Do you remember whether you told your father immediately you went home? No.
8174. Did you tell any one? Yes; I told my medical man, for I was very ill.
8175. Did you not tell your sister or any other member of your family? I cannot positively say; I know I did not tell my papa.

8176. By Mr. Hart: Were you in the habit of seeing your medical man without the consent of your parents, or without their knowing the necessity for your so doing? I was always ill at that time; he lived next door, and was a friend; indeed he was almost one of our family. Mrs. Julia Bentley.
22 Dec., 1862.
8177. By Mr. Johnson: I think you said you were very ill at the time? Yes.
8178. You were suffering from illness before this? Yes, I was always very delicate; the least thing upset me.
8179. By Mr. Leary: I presume you were in the habit of running in and out of the house of this doctor in the same way as you would into the house of any intimate friend? Yes.
8180. When you told this doctor did he advise you not to tell your papa, or any member of your family? No, I do not remember that he did do so.
8181. You cannot remember why you did not tell your papa? No, I cannot remember why I did not.
8182. By Mr. Johnson: Was he at home at the time, do you know? I cannot possibly say; he was very much away from home.
8183. By Mr. Leary: When did you tell him, or did you tell him at all? Yes, I did tell him. I told him a few days after.
8184. Was that the first intimation he received of this matter? No, he knew about these letters I believe long before.
8185. When he did receive this knowledge—what took place after? I really cannot remember. I have stated all that I know in the paper, and I can remember nothing more. It is quite useless my attempting to do so, for I may think I remember circumstances which I do not.
8186. By Mr. Hart: Have you a copy of the paper with you? I have not. The subject from that time to this has never been alluded to by any portion of my family.
8187. By the Chairman: What age were you at the time, do you remember? Fourteen.
8188. By Mr. Johnson: A letter I believe was thrown into your bed-room? Yes.
8189. I suppose that came to the knowledge of your friends without your telling anybody? Yes, my sister was sleeping with me, and I believe picked it up.
8190. By Mr. Leary: Can you state what the letter contained? No, I cannot.
8191. Are you aware that it has been stated that this paper, which was thrown into your window, with a stone attached, contained a copy of the Decree of the Council of Trent? No, I am not.
8192. You do not know what this letter contained? I do not.
8193. By Mr. Forster: Do you recollect March 22nd, being introduced to Mr. Harrison the first time you saw him? I cannot speak as to dates, but I remember Mr. Harrison coming to my house.
8194. The first time you were introduced to him? I was introduced to him.
8195. In a formal manner? Yes; I never saw Mr. Harrison before to my knowledge.
8196. And I suppose on that occasion the letters were shewn to Mr. Harrison, and he was made acquainted with the circumstances? I left the room after supper, and I only know that the letters were shewn to him, for Mr. Bentley I think it was called to me to bring him the key, and when I came into the room I saw a bundle of letters on the table, and Mr. Harrison and he were tracing the similarity between the anonymous letters and some other letters, but I left the room before anything of this matter was discussed.
8197. It was not discussed in your presence? It was not that night.
8198. You had not any conversation with Mr. Harrison? Not that night.
8199. Not that day or night? No, he came in about 9 o'clock at night, and we sat down to supper. I sat down to supper with my husband and Mr. Harrison, and immediately after left.
8200. You did not communicate to Mr. Harrison that you were in a delicate state of health? No.
8201. That you had ruptured a blood vessel in the lungs? Never.
8202. Have you any reason to believe that Mr. Bentley mentioned that to him at the time? No.
8203. Do you recollect on April the 14th, or about that time, Mr. Harrison being in the house, and Mr. Boulanger too? I do not recall anything about that. I cannot speak as to dates.
8204. Do you remember Mr. Boulanger playing at the piano when Mr. Harrison sent him up-stairs to play, with a view to watch what any one might do? No, I never remember Mr. Harrison sending Mr. Boulanger up-stairs. We always, after tea, used to go into the drawing-room, which is up-stairs, but I do not remember this particular occasion.
8205. Do you not remember any occasion when Mr. Harrison was watching the house, and Mr. Boulanger was playing, for some time? Never, that Mr. Harrison was out of the room.
8206. Did you ever hear Mr. Harrison remark that Mr. Boulanger played in his heavy style? No.
8207. You do not remember Mr. Boulanger's playing being used as a means of watching by Mr. Harrison, whether any one came into the house? No.
8208. Did Mr. Harrison, at the time Mr. Boulanger was playing in your house, communicate his suspicion, that some one had got into the house at that time? No, never.
8209. I suppose you have heard Mr. Harrison remark it was probable that people entered the house while Mr. Boulanger was playing? No.
8210. Did you ever see Mr. Harrison disguised in female attire? Yes, only once.
8211. Was that when he was watching in your house? He came in one evening disguised.
8212. Was his object to watch? I really do not know what his object was; I believe it was that they should not know that he had come into the house.

- Mrs. Julia Bentley.
- 22 Dec., 1862.
8213. By Mr. Hart: You know that he wears moustaches? You do not mean false ones?
8214. No, real ones? I really forget; I know he has a great beard.
8215. By Mr. Forster: Do you remember playing at an evening concert with Mr. Boulanger on April 19th, or somewhere about that time? No, I never played at any concert with Mr. Boulanger.
8216. Do you recollect a long conversation taking place between Mr. Bentley, yourself, and Mr. Harrison, about an advertisement? I do, perfectly.
8217. Did you upon that occasion tell Mr. Bentley that you had a presentiment you would fall a victim? No; certainly not.
8218. Nor on any other occasion? No.
8219. You did not express to Mr. Harrison at any time, that you were afraid your life was in danger? I did after I found the holes had been made in the ceiling.
8220. Not at this time? Certainly not.
8221. When you are speaking of the holes made in the ceiling, are you alluding to the time, when you are said to have been startled by a noise in the nursery? No, after that.
8222. Do you remember when you were startled by the noise in the nursery? Yes, it was Easter Monday.
8223. Is this a correct account:—"I called on the Bentley's in the evening; Mrs. B. informed me she had been very much startled about 12 in the day. She was occupied in the nursery, when she was alarmed by hearing a noise in the roof, over the room she was in; she rushed down-stairs with the baby, and was some time before she could recover herself." Did you make that statement to Mr. Harrison? Not to such an extent as that. While I was in the bed-room I heard a noise overhead, and I took my boy with me, and went down-stairs.
8224. It is substantially correct? Yes.
8225. Did you ever make any discovery, or did the police make any discovery, with regard to what started you? Not that I am aware of—we never did.
8226. There is a statement here, on May 4th, to this effect—will you say whether it is true or not:—"I cannot make this woman out; that she is a party to this deception is certain, but is she willingly so, and on what footing is she with Bentley? She told me to-night that she was very unhappy, and laying her head on my shoulder, burst into tears—genuine ones, no doubt."—Is that true or not? Most decidedly not.
8227. Nothing at all ever occurred to give any justification for such a statement? Certainly not.
8228. Not in the slightest degree? Certainly not.
8229. Do you know anything about a letter said to have been received by Mr. Harrison on or about the 11th, in which it was said your life was in danger? Yes. Was that the day Mr. Harrison called us up in the middle of the night?
8230. Yes, that was about it. Did Mr. Bentley write that letter? Write that letter?
8231. I thought you said you knew something of this letter? Mr. Harrison told us of it.
8232. You knew nothing else of it? Certainly not.
8233. Did you, on or about May 16th, or at any time, ever communicate the particulars of your past life to Mr. Harrison. These are questions it must be more satisfactory to yourself to be able to contradict them, and it is merely to give you an opportunity of contradicting them I am asking you. On May 16th it is stated:—"Mrs. Bentley communicated some particulars of her past history"—Is there any foundation at all for that statement? None whatever; I have never had any conversation with reference to my own or my husband's private affairs with Mr. Harrison.
8234. Did Mr. Harrison ever make such a remark as this to you—the date here is May 17:—"I remarked to Mrs. Bentley that Mr. B. could not be of a very jealous disposition to leave us so constantly together"? Never.
8235. Nothing of the kind? Nothing of the kind.
8236. Were you aware that Mr. Bentley communicated to Mr. Harrison the letter that he was about to publish in the newspapers? Yes.
8237. Were you present? I was.
8238. He asked Mr. Harrison's advice about it, he shewed it to him? Yes.
8239. Was he at all concerned in the composition? Mr. Harrison?—No.
8240. It was simply shewn to him when it was prepared for the paper? Yes.
8241. By Mr. Johnson: Do you recollect Mr. Bentley reading over the letter a day or two before it appeared in the paper—were you present at the time? Yes, I do; I believe it was on the Sunday.
8242. Sunday, as it appeared on the following Wednesday? Yes.
8243. Was the whole of that draft, as it appeared, read to Mr. Harrison? I believe it was.
8244. Do you know whether it was in substance the same as the letter that appeared on the following Wednesday? Yes.
8245. Did Mr. Harrison make a request to Mr. Bentley to omit all mention of the police? No; on the night Mr. Bentley told him he would have to publish it, Mr. Harrison said he must suppress all mention of the police.
8246. There was no reluctance to comply with Mr. Harrison's wishes at the time the draft letter was written? No.
8247. There was nothing about the police in it at that time? No.
8248. By Mr. Forster: Had you any reason, from your own knowledge of Mr. Harrison, to suspect that he told you falsehoods at any time? Yes; on one occasion he stated that he had watched the suspected parties for three days and three nights, and one of them had never left his house, and the other had been seen walking up and down his verandah at a late hour of the night. We knew that there was no verandah to the house of the party he named, and we therefore knew that his statement was incorrect, and we found out at the same time that the other party he named had been out every day to attend to his duties.

8249. He told you positively that he or the police had been watching these parties three days—day and night? That they had been watched three days and nights, and that they had never left their house the whole of the time; but that one night these parties had been walking with Mr. Hellyer up and down the verandah.
8250. Did he mention the name of the party? He did.
8251. Who was he? Signor Cutolo.
8252. You found out afterwards, from the circumstance of there not being a verandah to his house, that it was not true? Yes.
8253. Did you from other circumstances? We found he had been giving music lessons at Mrs. Nutt's that day.
8254. Then even supposing he had made a mistake about the verandah, it was not true that he had not left the premises? It was not true that he had not left the premises.
8255. And Mr. Harrison positively stated that he had not left the premises for so long? Yes.
8256. Was this the first occasion that gave you reason to suspect Mr. Harrison's truthfulness? Yes; I do not think we had any occasion to think him untruthful before.
8257. Was that the only time? I think so.
8258. Can you mention the time at all; was it before Mr. Harrison's journey to Bathurst that this occurred? Yes, long before that.
8259. Was it before you became aware that the police suspected you and Mr. Bentley? Yes; I was not aware of that until the letter appeared in the Empire.
8260. Can you give any notion at all of the date? I believe it was before the 2nd May.
8261. By Mr. Morris: Was it before Mr. Boulanger quarrelled with you? Yes.
8262. By Mr. Forster: Somewhere about the end of April? It must have been somewhere about that.
8263. Did Mr. Harrison himself ever give you reason to believe that he suspected you and Mr. Bentley at all? Never; on the contrary he always led us to believe he had not the least doubt who were the parties concerned.
8264. Have you now ascertained whether, at the time he was on friendly terms with you, he was only pretending to believe in your view of the case, and entertaining suspicions of you all the time; can you ascertain whether that was the case? I do not believe it was the case; on recalling all that Mr. Harrison ever said about it he appeared to be so sincere in his expressions of who he believed to be the parties.
8265. Do you now believe he was sincere? _____
8266. By Mr. Hart: From the entries you have heard read from his journal, do you now believe he was sincere? Certainly not, if that diary was made at the time.
8267. By Mr. Forster: During the time you had any acquaintance with Mr. Harrison, did he continue to express in conversation with you the same suspicions that you believed him to have held in the beginning? He did, even after the publication of Mr. Bentley's letter. He came in one day and stated that every one mentioned Signor Cutolo's name, and he had done nothing to remove that impression; and he gave us to understand that he was quite certain who it was.
8268. Was that up to the time of the publication of Mr. Bentley's letter? After the article that was.
8269. Up to the time of the publication of the article, did Mr. Harrison continue to make you believe that he suspected these other parties? I think Mr. Harrison ceased to come to our house sometime before the publication of that article in the Empire.
8270. All along he never led you to believe he suspected any one else? Never.
8271. Do you believe now that he was sincere all that time? I did believe so; but after hearing the contents of that diary, if the diary were made at that time or before that time, he certainly could not have been sincere.
8272. You have no other reason? No.
8273. Do you know anything of Signor Cutolo? I have been introduced to him; I know but little of him. I have met him in society.
8274. You concur in the belief that he had something to do with the writing of these letters? Yes. I have always imagined so, principally from what other people have said.
8275. It has been suggested to you by other people? A great number.
8276. You did not entertain it of yourself? We were obliged to suspect some one. We suspected two persons at first.
8277. What reason did you imagine Signor Cutolo would have for persecuting you at all? I cannot imagine what reason he could have, neither could I imagine what reason any one could have.
8278. Do you know anything of Mrs. Cutolo, formerly Heath? No, nothing. She has called at my house with Signor Cutolo since the publication of Mr. Bentley's letter, but I never saw her before.
8279. You know nothing of her? Nothing whatever.
8280. Do you know anything of Mr. Montagu, who has been talked of? I know him only by sight—Mr. Hanson first pointed him out to me; I did not know there was such a person till Mr. Hanson mentioned his name.
8281. Nothing occurred to make you believe he would be an enemy of yours? Certainly not.
8282. Do you know a Mr. San Juste, whose name has also been mentioned? I have also met him at evening parties; I know nothing more of him. I do not know that I ever spoke to him.
8283. You know no reason why he should be an enemy of yours? No.
8284. You say, I think, of all your acquaintance you are not aware of having given any, even imaginary causes of provocation? None whatever.
8285. Would you think it a likely motive for a persecution of this kind, that parties might

- Mrs. Julia Bentley. entertain a professional jealousy or wish to drive you out of the field in a measure? I have always considered that could be the only object.
- 12 Dec., 1862. 8286. You think that the most likely motive? I cannot conceive any other whatever.
8287. In what way was it likely that your giving lessons, or practising your profession, would interfere with Signor Cutolo? I do not know that it would have interfered with him in any way, any more than with any one else.
8288. Do you think if he had succeeded, on the supposition that he wished to do so, in driving you out of the Colony, that it would have added to his income or business? I do not know that it would, for I teach in none of the families he does.
8289. I suppose it is possible, if you were not teaching in those families, he might do so? He might.
8290. In that way there is a sort of competition between his business and yours? Yes.
8291. Do you think it possible that a motive of that kind might influence him? That is the only motive that I could see in it.
8292. Has it ever occurred to you that the same parties who made the attempt to coerce you into the profession of the Roman Catholic religion in England, could have followed you into this Colony? Never.
8293. Do you think that likely? No such thought ever came across my mind for a moment.
8294. I think you stated that, on one occasion, Mr. Harrison gave you a stiletto to carry about? Yes.
8295. What was the object of giving you a stiletto? After I was assaulted he asked me if I should have courage to use a lady's pistol. I said, "No." He then said he would bring me a stiletto. I said I should not have courage to use it; and he said, "If you saw any one coming towards you you would." As he expressed a wish, Mr. Bentley said I had better wear it, but I was obliged to carry it so low in the band of my dress, to prevent its being seen, that I was afraid of its falling out of its sheath, and I wore it only twice. I always wore the whistle.
8296. You wore the stiletto more to please Mr. Harrison than because you took his view of the case? Mr. Bentley said, as Mr. Harrison wished it, I had better do so.
8297. Do you think you would have been able to use it? Certainly not; I am sure I never could.
8298. It would have been easier to fire a pistol? If a person were at a distance.
8299. Do you think you could make a better shot at a distance than if a person were near? I should be afraid of having the pistol taken from me.
8300. Did you ever fire a pistol? Yes, I attempted to fire one that Mr. Harrison brought for Mr. Bentley to practice with.
8301. Did Mr. Harrison produce the article called a lady's pistol? No; he asked me, after the Monday night, if he brought a lady's pistol, whether I could use it? I said I could not.
8302. Did you ever hear of a lady's pistol before? No, I never did.
8303. The stiletto—was it a large instrument? No, a little thing about that length (about six inches).
8304. You were never placed in such circumstances as to be induced to use it, or to be called upon to use it? Never.
8305. By Mr. Morris: I believe you stated to the Committee that you had not smoked openly in the presence of Mr. Aldis? Yes.
8306. Can you remember on one occasion, when Mr. Aldis was present, that you were suffering from some affection, either affection of the heart or tic douloureux, that you went on the balcony and smoked a short time? No, I cannot.
8307. Do you think it likely? No, I do not, most certainly not. I stated before that I had no recollection of ever smoking at all while Mr. Aldis was in the house, but if it were so, Mr. Aldis must have entered the room while I was smoking, and then I am sure I should either have removed the cigar or left the room.
8308. Is it not possible that Mr. Aldis might have come into the room and found you smoking, and that you went out of the room into the balcony? No, for the balconies were so very small you could scarcely call them out of the room.
8309. By Mr. Hart: Did a medical man prescribe the use of these cigars for you? Yes, in England.
8310. What was his name? Mr. Pridham.
8311. By Mr. Leary: Had you frequently to use cigars? I have not since I have been here; in England I had a great deal.
8312. Do you find great relief from it? Yes, it is the only thing that at times will arrest the pain.
8313. By Mr. Hart: It is not unusual for ladies to use them under similar circumstances? I much object to the practice; I never resort to it unless I am obliged.
8314. I ask you if it is unusual for ladies to use cigars under similar circumstances? I think not when ordered by medical men.
8315. By Mr. Leary: Did you ever observe anything in the conduct of Mr. Harrison which you considered presuming? Never in any way whatever, always most respectful in his manner.
8316. He never attempted any familiarity at all? Never in any way whatever.
8317. Did he ever converse with you about your husband in any way, about his health or disposition, or any questions of that kind? No; the subject of Mr. Bentley's health may have been the topic of conversation when Mr. Bentley was in the room.
8318. By the Chairman: You are aware of the contents of the diary—Mr. Bentley has made you aware of them? Yes, I believe the principal portions.

8319. You are aware that your name has been made very free with? Yes.
8320. And that Mr. Harrison has made statements in that diary of having taken unwarrantable liberties with you? Yes, and they are entirely false—the whole of them.
8321. By Mr. Hart: Were you in the habit of talking to this girl, Anna Maria Bradshaw, about religious matters? Never, except on the one occasion—the two occasions I have stated.

Mrs. Julia Bentley.

12 Dec., 1862.

Frederick Sigmont called in and examined:—

8322. By the Chairman: What are you? I am in a bookseller's and stationer's just now.
8323. Were you at the concert at the Masonic Hall, on the 27th May last? Yes.
8324. Did you see anything there that particularly attracted your attention—any particular circumstance—was your mother with you? Yes, my mother was with me.
8325. Was you, or your mother's attention called to any particular person or circumstance? Yes, both of ours were.
8326. What was the circumstance? When we went in we took our seats in the front row of seats, in the front of the platform, and at the side of us was a curious kind of a man. He did not seem to be a gentleman, but evidently appeared to be in disguise; he had on some long coat or cloak, and I fancied he had a false moustache. He sat with his hands stuck to the bottom of his pockets, and never looked up at anything that was going on at all. I noticed it to my mother—but when we went neither of us knew anything about the case till the next day, when we saw the whole report in the paper, and then it called it to my memory my seeing this suspicious character there.
8327. What made you think he had false moustaches on? He seemed to be evidently disguised; they did not appear to be natural to him. I could not swear to it, but they did not look like his own.
8328. Had he a hat on? No, not in the concert-room.
8329. Do you think he had his own hair or a wig? I could not say positively to that; it was his face took my notice more than anything else, but if I had known anything about this case I would have noticed.
8330. Was he a young or an old man? I think he was a young man, quite a young man.
8331. Did he appear to be a boy or a man—was he old? He was verging towards middle-age almost it appeared.
8332. What kind of whiskers had he? All dark from head to foot.
8333. What kind of eyes had he? He seemed dark all over him, complexion and everything else.
8334. Did you see him make any motions or signs, or try to conceal himself in anyway? No, we took the front row, and Mr. Muriel came with some ladies and wanted us to move, but my mother did not wish to sit from here, and we kept our seats, and he moved some chairs off, and when he did move he did not stand upright but seemed to double himself up. I did not see much of him after that, not fancying anything at the time, and I missed him almost afterwards.
8335. Do you know whether he remained in his seat till the conclusion of the concert? I cannot say. I might have known if he had not moved when these ladies came in, but then he moved several chairs from us, and of course he was hidden; I could not quite see him.
8336. Do you know how a priest would be dressed? Yes.
8337. Was he like a priest? Nothing at all like a priest.
8338. Did you ever say you thought it was a priest? No, I never did; in fact the only one I related it to besides my mother, was to Mr. Bentley sometime after.
8339. Did you relate it to your mother or to Mr. Bentley first? In fact we both knew it at the same time; it struck us the next day when we saw the whole report in the paper.
8340. And you waited upon Mr. Bentley to make him acquainted with what you had seen? Yes; we went to see Mr. Bentley, after we had seen the report, and related to him what we had seen.
8341. Could your mother give the Committee any further information than you have given? No; it ended with us both in the same way; what she thought I thought.
8342. By Mr. Johnson: Do you remember your mother objecting to your removing from your chair, so as to put her nearer to this man? Mr. Muriel wanted me to give up my seat, but as that would have taken me from my mother she requested me not to move, and then Mr. Muriel and the ladies went to these chairs.
8343. Was your mother's objection to removing, that it would place her more nearly in contact with this man? Not at all; merely because it would separate me from her.
8344. Were you present with your mother when she related to Mr. Bentley the circumstance? Yes.
8345. Did you mention, on that interview, the fact of your mother's objection to remove? I do not think so, but I cannot remember.
8346. You cannot account for their knowing it without your telling them? No.

Frederick Sigmont.

TUESDAY, 16 DECEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. MORRIS,		MR. WILSON,
MR. W. FORSTER,		MR. LEARY,
		MR. HART.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Johnson appeared for Petitioner.

M. Edward
Boulanger.

M. Edward Boulanger called in and examined:—

- 16 Dec., 1862. 8347. By the Chairman: What are you? I am a professor of music.
8348. You have been resident in Sydney for some time? I first arrived a long time ago; I have been residing here nearly twelve months now, since I returned from Melbourne.
8349. You are aware of the purpose for which this Committee has been appointed? I received a letter informing me that I was summoned to give evidence on the Bentley petition.
8350. You are acquainted with the petitioner? Yes, I know Mr. Bentley.
8351. When did you first become aware of the existence of the anonymous letters? When I received one myself. It was on the day of my first concert, after I returned.
8352. What was the purport of the letter you received? The letter was handed over to Mr. Bentley.
8353. Is the letter you received the one printed in the seventy-first paragraph of Mr. Bentley's deposition? Yes.
8354. You received that letter yourself? Yes, it was handed to me at the Royal Hotel; it was sent to me by post, I believe, at the Royal Hotel. Mr. Bentley has the letter and the envelope.
8355. Do you know Mrs. Bentley's handwriting? Yes, I have seen it.
8356. Did you consider the letter you received bore any resemblance to Mrs. Bentley's handwriting? No, it did not strike me at all as such.
8357. Is that the letter you received (handing a letter, No. 8 a)? That is the enclosed one; that is not the one I am questioned about at present. (Another letter, No. 8, handed to witness.) Yes, this is the one.
8358. By Mr. Johnson: Did you receive it in that envelope (handing envelope)? Yes.
8359. Through the post? Yes.
8360. By the Chairman: Have you any idea who the writer of that letter is? Not the slightest.
8361. Have you ever formed any opinion upon the subject? As far as I am concerned myself I have not formed an opinion, but I have adopted the opinion of some others since. At the time I formed no opinion.
8362. Whose opinion have you adopted? For some time I believed with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley that two parties might be implicated in writing the letters, and they were stated to me by Mr. and Mrs. Bentley as Signor Cutolo for one, and Mr. Montagu for the other.
8363. Do you still retain that opinion? No, I have altered my opinion since.
8364. Is that the opinion you state you have adopted? My opinion is of course not a very settled one, but I am unwilling now to follow the same opinion that I held at the time. There is a great deal of doubt in my mind now.
8365. What is your present opinion with regard to these letters? I could not give my present opinion at present, because it is not exactly an opinion; I have not come to any conclusion yet.
8366. Did you receive any other letters? Yes, I must have received some others; I think I received two or three.
8367. Were these letters sent personally to yourself? Yes; this was sent where I was living, at the Royal Hotel.
8368. You say you received other letters? Yes; other anonymous letters in the same handwriting as this letter here.
8369. Did you receive that letter (No. 16)? Yes.
8370. Is that letter in the same handwriting? Yes.
8371. Did you come in contact with Mr. Harrison pretty frequently while at Mr. Bentley's? I used to see him almost every day at Mr. Bentley's house, and sometimes I met him in the street.
8372. On what terms was Mr. Harrison received at Mr. Bentley's, as far as you were able to judge—was he received more as a friend than as a public officer? He came there as a public officer of course, but I found him received quite as an intimate friend, enjoying the same privileges as an intimate friend should do.
8373. Were Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Harrison frequently alone together while you were in the habit of visiting there? I do not recollect any circumstance of that kind. I dare say Mrs. Bentley has occasionally been alone with Mr. Harrison, as I have been myself.
8374. Did you see any approach to undue familiarity on the part of Mr. Harrison towards Mrs. Bentley? Never.
8375. From what you know of her, do you believe Mrs. Bentley would permit anything of the kind on the part of Mr. Harrison? I cannot answer such a question. It has nothing to do with me at all whatever. I shall be very ready to answer questions addressed to myself, as far as I am concerned.

8376. I only ask from your knowledge of Mrs. Bentley? It would not have struck me that Mrs. Bentley would do it. M. Edward Boulanger.
8377. Did Mr. Harrison and you quarrel at any time? No; we disagreed upon certain things. 16 Dec., 1862.
8378. Did you at one time report to Mr. Harrison that you had been stopped on the Racecourse by a man with a pistol? I did.
8379. Have you since informed Mr. Harrison, or any other person, that that was not true? I have not informed Mr. Harrison of that.
8380. Or any other person? Yes, other persons.
8381. You do not remember having any quarrel with Mr. Harrison at any time? I disagreed upon a great many things with Mr. Harrison several times, at Mr. Bentley's house even. Mr. Bentley must recollect it.
8382. Do you remember Mrs. Bentley being assaulted at Newtown? I remember the circumstance being mentioned by Mrs. Bentley, and it is mentioned in my diary.
8383. Were you present on the evening of the assault? I do not know whether it was that evening or the next day, but I know it was very close to the assault.
8384. Do you remember being in company with Mr. Aldis and Mr. Black on either the evening of the assault or the following evening? I could not say that, but I dare say it will be found in my diary.
8385. Have you ever been present at Mr. Bentley's when Mrs. Bentley has been drinking brandy and water, and smoking cigars? I do not recollect her smoking cigars, but I have seen her drink brandy and water several times.
8386. But you have not seen her smoke? No, I do not recollect it.
8387. If you had seen her smoke you would not be likely to forget it? No; but it would not strike me as very impossible.
8388. If you had observed it you would have remembered it, I presume? Very likely I would.
8389. You never saw Mr. Harrison venture on undue familiarity with Mrs. Bentley? Never.
8390. He was always respectful in his speech and demeanour to Mrs. Bentley? I always found him very respectful to Mrs. Bentley.
8391. Have you seen her drink brandy and water as a drink, or as medicine? It was not for the enjoyment of it as a drink, decidedly.
8392. Do you mean that she has taken it at times after fainting fits? Yes; I have handed it myself, as well as Mr. Bentley, and I thought it must be even advisable at times.
8393. Can you give any reason why you reported that you were stopped on the Racecourse? Yes. I conceived some doubt as to Signor Cutolo and Mr. Montagu being the authors of this matter. It had struck me several times that letters had got into Mr. Bentley's house in a very suspicious way, and I thought it might be possible that Mrs. Bentley might be aware of the details of it, and my object then in reporting that I had been stopped was to lay a trap for Mrs. Bentley. I informed Mr. Bentley of the matter.
8394. Of what matter? Of my object.
8395. By Mr. Forster: Beforehand? No, not beforehand, but since—recently. I requested Mr. Bentley even to avoid bringing me here, if possible, on account of that. I gave a description of the man who attacked me, and described an assault as made upon me by that party to Mrs. Bentley, and to Mr. Bentley also; and to Mr. Harrison I gave the same description. My reason for doing so was that I had heard Mrs. Bentley mention, several times, that she was watched at Newtown. I do not know if I must go any further—I think I have answered the question at present.
8396. Explain your reasons at large? I conceived some suspicion, and I laid a trap for Mrs. Bentley.
8397. Because Mrs. Bentley had said something about Newtown? Mrs. Bentley had complained of being watched very closely at Newtown.
8398. By whom? By several persons.
8399. Did she name them? No, she did not name any one, except on one occasion afterwards.
8400. By Mr. Johnson: Do you say Mrs. Bentley had "complained" of being watched? Yes, of observing persons watching her movements.
8401. By the Chairman: Who were they she complained of? I cannot tell you the names of those she complained of watching her movements.
8402. I thought you said you could tell the name of one person? I could tell the name of one person Mrs. Bentley mentioned to me.
8403. What was the name? Mr. Merewether.
8404. Did you know the Mr. Gibson that was engaged in this case? I do not recollect him.
8405. Do you remember an officer being sent from the Detective Office to watch Mrs. Bentley on her way to Newtown; and are you aware that that gentleman reported that Mr. Merewether had been seen —? Yes, I understood that; it was from Mrs. Bentley I learned that.
8406. Will you explain to the Committee in what way your describing that you had been attacked on the Racecourse could have any connection with Mrs. Bentley being watched at Newtown? It arose from my suspicion how the letters got into the house. Mrs. Bentley of course connected the persons she said were watching her with, as being almost agents of Mr. Cutolo and Mr. Montagu. That, combined with my suspicion, induced me to pretend that my object was to see if Mrs. Bentley would be attacked in the same way, which she was eventually, a few days afterwards, in the very same manner.
8407. You adopted this, you say, merely as a ruse? Yes.

- M. Edward Boulanger.
16 Dec., 1862.
8408. Did you not report it to Mr. Harrison as a matter of fact? Mr. Harrison was in the house at the time —
8409. Did you not report it to Mr. Harrison, as a matter of fact, that you had been stopped? Of course.
8410. And the particulars of the circumstance? Yes, the same particulars as I stated to Mrs. Bentley; exactly in the same manner.
8411. Did you not appear to be exceedingly alarmed at the time? I do not remember that.
8412. Do you think that your demeanour at the time would have satisfied any one that you was a coward? I should like to answer polite questions, if possible.
8413. Mr. Harrison says, in his diary, it is quite evident you must be a great coward from the way in which you made the report to him;—I only ask whether you did it in a way that would exhibit terror or fright? I do not think so. I told him that I pointed my pistol at the man, and he took to his heels; therefore the coward could not be me in that case.
8414. You think your demeanour was not such as to impress any one with the idea that you were a great coward? No, I do not think so.
8415. That is the whole explanation about the stoppage on the Racecourse? Yes, as far as being stopped; but this is connected with some other matters, and of course I expect some other questions.
8416. By Mr. Morris: When, on the night you told Mr. Harrison and Mr. Bentley of that assault, you asked Mr. Bentley to ascertain whether Mr. Harrison had been watching your movements, I apprehend it was somewhat in reference to this story of yours that you had made up with regard to the assault? Maybe I did say that, but I cannot recollect it as a particular point. I cannot recollect everything. I have told you only the substance of what I said as to the assault.
8417. Can you not remember having asked Mr. Bentley to ascertain from Mr. Harrison whether he had been watching your movements on the evening on which you said you were assaulted? I do not recollect that. It was on the evening of the concert I asked the question of Mr. Bentley in reference to the concert. It was not on the same occasion. I remember something of the kind was said on another occasion about the concert. I do not remember exactly whether it was as to watching my movements. I recollect Mr. Bentley being very much alarmed about my safety once after the concert. We had been threatened with—I do not know what—something extraordinary—some infernal machine under the stage, I think. I recollect asking Mr. Bentley then if he knew whether Mr. Harrison had followed me at any time.
8418. With regard to this alleged assault upon you, did you not first tell Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, and did not Mr. Bentley tell Mr. Harrison, that you had been assaulted? It was the same evening. I believe they were all there. Mr. Harrison was up-stairs or somewhere about the house, at the time I mentioned it to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley.
8419. Did you not ask Mr. Bentley to ascertain, before the occurrence was related to Mr. Harrison, whether he had that night been watching your movements? No. I do not recollect anything of the kind. I went myself to Mr. Harrison, and informed him of the matter up-stairs.
8420. You told them first? Yes; Mr. Harrison was engaged about something in the house. It will be easy found out by my diary.
8421. By the Chairman: What was the purpose for which you gave your diary to Mr. Harrison? He asked me for it for reference. I lent it also to Mr. Bentley on one occasion.
8422. Mr. Harrison asked you for it for the special purpose of making a reference? Yes.
8423. Do you know at what date that was? No. A very short time after this assault on Mrs. Bentley at Newtown, I fell out with Mr. Bentley, and I did not see Mr. and Mrs. Bentley since—I mean not at their house—except that I saw Mr. Bentley the other day at his own house, because I called on purpose. It was during the time I was no more a friend at the house, that Mr. Harrison called for my diary.
8424. There were certain entries you say in your diary relating to this attack on the Racecourse? No, there are no particulars of that given in the diary. I only wrote “Incident on Racecourse,” to fix the date. But there are the particulars of the attack on Mrs. Bentley a short time afterwards.
8425. Did you make any remarks on it in your diary? Yes, it is mentioned. The description of the man, and the manner in which Mrs. Bentley was attacked, was put down on purpose by me.
8426. Did you put down any of your own suspicions? No, I did not put down my own opinions on my diary.
8427. Mr. Harrison, at the time you had fallen out with Mr. Bentley, asked you for your diary? Yes, he used to come sometimes to see me.
8428. Did Mr. Harrison keep your diary long—had he possession of it for a long time? I think he had it a good bit. Really I cannot say. I should say he had it more than a week.
8429. You are perfectly sure he asked you for your diary to —? He wanted to consult it with his own. He mentioned something about his own diary, that he had some doubt about some matters. At any rate I was under the impression that he had some doubt about some detail—some name or some date.
8430. It was not for the mere purpose of getting a key fitted to the lock that he got your diary? No. I lost the key at Mr. Bentley's, and when Mr. Harrison came he asked me for the diary, and I told him I could lend him the diary, but I had not the key; so he said he would get one made, and would take care of it.
8431. There is not any mistake whatever about the facts of the case, that Mr. Harrison wanted your diary to make extracts from it, and not for the mere purpose of fitting a key to it? It was for the purpose of referring to my diary.
8432. The fitting the key was a mere incident, in consequence of your having lost the key? Yes, quite so.
- 8433.

8433. Mr. Harrison called purposely, for the express purpose of getting the loan of your diary? Yes, only for the loan of it; I had not the key, but he said he would get one for it, and I then lent it to him. Not having the key of the diary I was going to keep the diary.

M. Edward
Boulanger.

16 Dec., 1862.

8434. Not having the diary in your hand do you think you could fix about the date that you lent the diary to Mr. Harrison? I could not fix the date, but very likely I might recollect somewhere about the time.

8435. After Mr. Harrison called upon you for the loan of your diary, and you had promised to lend him it, he then said he would get a key fitted for you? Yes, he took the diary with him the same day.

8436. Did he give you the key afterwards? He returned it with the key.

8437. Will you take your diary and see if you can fix anything about the date when the diary was lent to Mr. Harrison. (Witness referred to his diary.) It must have been after the 8th May, because when I fell out with Mr. Bentley of course I had given up this matter altogether, and did not put down any more about it. I think about the last thing I wrote is this description of the assault committed on Mrs. Bentley.

8438. Will you read your description of that assault? I will hand it to you. (Mr. Boulanger's diary handed to Chairman.)

8439. Did you know Mrs. Bentley was badly hurt? She mentioned it to me, but I did not see it.

8440. Did you see any portion of her dress torn? No. I do not know whether she had changed or not.

8441. Did you hear of it? Yes, I think I heard something of the kind—the dress being torn, or the man making an attempt to take a revolver that he supposed her to have in her bosom.

8442. Then you do not know that Mrs. Bentley was badly hurt? She did not seem hurt the next day when I saw her.

8443. By Mr. Johnson: Did you make the entries in your journal on the days they bear date? Sometimes, as I was coming in so late, I would put them in the next day; but I always wrote the entries to the date of the day I was writing. For instance, if I was writing to day, and referring to a matter of yesterday, I would then mention that it happened yesterday.

8444. By the Chairman: This entry, which appears in your diary under date of April 25, is a correct one:—"Went to Bentley's at 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ —Learned that Mrs. Bentley had been attacked "at Newtown, coming out of Mr. Josephson's. Mrs. Bentley badly hurt. Description of the "man, viz.—about Harrison's size, features not quite so strong—not quite dark complexion—red shirt with fox heads and tails—hand of a gentleman—brown eyes—"supposed to have had false beard—eyebrows darkened. He shook Mrs. Bentley by the "shoulder, hurt her in the breast, and remarked she could not speak."—That is correct? Yes.

8445. By Mr. Johnson: I presume that entry was made on the day it bears date? I think so.

8446. After you went home at night? Yes, it must have been at night. I am under the impression that it was on the 25th I learned that, and that I entered it on the right date.

8447. By the Chairman: Do you remember the occasion of the music being torn in Mr. Bentley's house, when an anonymous letter was found pinned to the leaves of a music book? Yes, that is also mentioned in my diary.

8448. Were you very much alarmed on that occasion? No.

8449. Do you think you shewed great signs of fear? I did not shew the slightest fear; I only shewed anxiety for Mrs. Bentley.

8450. Then this entry of Mr. Harrison's you think would not be perfectly correct:—"Bentley and Boulanger are both timid and fear murder, but I never saw such a courageous little woman as Mrs. B.; she is perfectly fearless." Do you think you did fear murder on that occasion? No, I did not faint; I do not think I ever got pale. At any rate this is the way I entered that in my diary on the 1st of April:—"Afterwards we found the after "dining-room disturbed, questioned servants who could not account for it. I insisted upon "things being left exactly in same position. Mrs. Bentley very ill. Stayed until 20 to "1 a.m."

8451. By Mr. Johnson: Did you write that the same night? It might not be written the same night—Yes, I fancy it was, because it is written as if I was rather tired.

8452. By the Chairman: Was Mr. Harrison present on that occasion? No, I insisted on things being left as they were on purpose that Mr. Harrison should see them that way.

8453. Were you present when Mr. Harrison came? I went to see Mr. Harrison I believe after that. The entry in my diary the next day is this:—"Went to Bentley's and dined "with Harrison. Looked to disturbed room and found anonymous letter. Lives threatened. "Took copy of it for Mr. Plunkett. Mr. Plunkett has a copy of all these letters."

8454. Had you any idea then who was the writer of the letter found in the music? I was then under the same impression as when I got acquainted with Mr. Bentley at his house, that it was perpetrated by Cutolo and Montagu. It seemed to be the general opinion. It was the opinion of the editor of the Empire, who was very sure about it, and seemed to have all sorts of proofs in his head.

8455. By Mr. Johnson: You mean Mr. Hanson? Yes.

8456. By the Chairman: Was Mr. Hanson or Mr. Bentley the more positive? They were both very positive; but if there was any difference Mr. Bentley must have been more positive after all.

M. Edward
Boulanger.

16 Dec., 1862.

8457. Do you know who the idea originated with? That is difficult for me to say, because the idea must have originated before I came back from Melbourne. I know that in the mind of Mr. Bentley the suspicion must have existed before from what he told me.

8458. Did you ever assist to identify the writing with that of any of the parties named? I have been looking at it very attentively, and once I went when Mr. Harrison had a magnifying glass, and he felt quite positive it was the writing of Mr. Montagu; he told me he would stake his life it was the writing of Mr. Montagu.

8459. Did you coincide with that opinion? I was following the same impulse. I had reason to believe Signor Cutolo was the sort of man to do bad things to me. I followed the stream, and nearly got drowned too.

8460. Can you give the Committee any reason for changing your opinion? I used to be often at Mr. Bentley's in the evening, and it struck me, as I said before, that the letters were coming in in a very suspicious manner, and I remarked that previous to letters being found in the house Mrs. Bentley used to absent herself from the drawing-room, but of course that looked like as if she was attending to some duty—some part of her business at home. Still it struck me, this was repeated so very systematically. Afterwards she used to come back to the drawing-room and sit with us, and when we were all together Mrs. Bentley used to be the first to notice some extraordinary noise. I did not hear the noise at the time, and even Mr. Bentley was not struck by the noise. Then we would look about the house until we always found something—some letter or something disturbed—and I thought it was very strange.

8461. How often did this take place? Well, I cannot tell you how often, but several times.

8462. Was Mrs. Bentley, do you say, absent on all occasions before letters were found? No, because several times letters were not found, or I heard of letters being found after I had left. I know on one occasion I could take my oath we were disturbed in that manner, and that Mrs. Bentley used to hear noise we could not hear; that might have been on account of her state of nervousness.

8463. Were you ever very nervous yourself? No.

8464. Have you any idea how a person would feel when under nervous excitement? I think I have.

8465. She might start even when there was no noise? I think that might possibly be true. What I meant by the nervousness of Mrs. Bentley was that I understood she was attended by the doctor for disease of the heart, or something of the kind. It is connected with nervousness I think. Mrs. Bentley seemed to me generally very cool. I quite agree with this part of the diary where Mrs. Bentley's courage is upheld.

8466. Do you agree with the other part of it? Not exactly.

8467. Where your courage is questioned? Mine is decidedly questioned.

8468. You agree with one part and not the other? If you please, I will.

8469. By Mr. Wilson: You state that Mrs. Bentley was in the habit of absenting herself from the drawing-room previous to letters being found—was she only in the habit of absenting herself on those particular occasions? I cannot say that. I did not remark every occasion.

8470. I think you state that she systematically left the room on these occasions? Yes.

8471. When your attention had been drawn to this circumstance so forcibly, if she had been in the habit of frequently leaving the drawing-room on other occasions you would have noticed it? No, that would not have struck me. The only thing I mean is, that after leaving the drawing-room and returning, Mrs. Bentley always used to be the first, a short time after, to notice a noise in the house. That was what made me suspicious when letters were found in some extraordinary place.

8472. You do not mean to say it was only on these occasions that Mrs. Bentley was in the habit of absenting herself from the drawing-room? No, of course not.

8473. Did you take any pains to discover what she was doing when she absented herself? No.

8474. Did you ever mention the circumstance to Mr. Harrison or the detectives? No, I took great care not to mention anything to Mr. Harrison.

8475. Why? Because I had not much confidence in him at the time, and I expressed my want of confidence to Mr. Bentley.

8476. By Mr. Morris: Why had you no confidence in Mr. Harrison? I thought he would be likely to treat the matter as a joke; that was my impression. He was continually there, and used to have his brandy and water and wine, and all sorts of things, which was very agreeable, no doubt, and I thought perhaps he might like to go on in the same way.

8477. By Mr. Johnson: Have you given all your reasons for changing your opinion? Well, there might be another opinion.

8478. Have you given all your reasons for changing your opinion? No, I have not.

8479. Will you state the rest of them? I should not like to state this without being compelled to.

8480. I should wish very much that you should. I, as Mrs. Bentley's representative, extremely desire that you should state everything? I should be most happy to do my very best, but I do not think I can comply with the request in this matter. If I were on oath before a Court I would do so of course.

8481. By the Chairman: It would be far preferable that you should do so now, if you could make it consistent with your ideas? It might also cause some other questions. I do not know how far the question might lead us.

8482. By Mr. Morris: Why are you so unwilling to state your other reasons? That is almost putting me the question in a different manner. Perhaps it may be possible I have said enough already—perhaps even too much—to lead you to suppose more than existed. So after all, I think it is better I should state it. I remarked that Mrs. Bentley was a little

little affectionate towards me—holding my hands, pressing them, and such things—not exactly shaking hands like she would shake hands with everybody. It struck me as not being quite right. This took place after a certain time that I had been in the house, and it contributed to my altering my opinion.

M. Edward
Bou langer.

16 Dec., 1862.

8483. You thought these pressures of the hands were much more affectionate than was usual with ordinary acquaintances? Yes. I may have been mistaken. At the same time it struck me as not being merely matter of form or matter of politeness.

8484. Had you not exhibited in your conduct, and expressed in your language, very great sympathy with the Bentleys? So I did, a great deal at first.

8485. Did you not exhibit, as far as they knew, the greatest interest in the affair? Yes, so much so that to almost all of my pupils I was talking of the matter, and told them how much I felt for Mrs. Bentley. But then that was previous to the attack.

8486. Could you not then suppose that Mrs. Bentley's extreme cordiality may have arisen out of gratitude for the exertions you were making to discover the persons who were persecuting her? No, Mrs. Bentley could not have had any feeling of gratitude towards me. The case was rather the reverse. I was under a great deal of obligation to Mr. Bentley, and I was rather particular myself in not shewing too much gratitude in my manner. If there was anything of gratitude in the matter it could not be on the side of Mrs. Bentley towards me, because I was only expressing the feeling that everybody was doing at the time.

8487. Did you not tell the Committee, just now, that you took an immense deal of interest in this matter, and that you used a great deal of exertion to discover the parties? Yes; but you see I was an interested party in the matter myself. These letters had been directed against me. In the case of a persecution, if any one had been discovered, I was one of the prosecutors myself.

8488. Then you think there was more in Mrs. Bentley's manner towards you than she ought to have exhibited, for the exertions you made in the matter? Yes, more than made me feel comfortable in the matter in respect to Mr. Bentley.

8489. Was she much more impressive in her manner than ladies in France? Yes; they very seldom shake hands in France. Once anything takes place, the first thing is a kiss.

8490. Then she was more impressive, you think, than if she had given you a kiss? No, I cannot say that. I wish to be confined to my own words; I study them as much as I possibly can.

8491. Was this pressing of your hands, when you met, the only indication of great interest in you? Pressing my hand in her two hands; that is not exactly shaking hands.

8492. Are you not aware that that is an extremely common thing among English people? I do not think so.

8493. Are you not aware that it is invariably done by the lady of the house, where any person becomes intimate with the family? I have been very intimate in many families, but this never happened to me before.

8494. It is only from her taking your hands in her two, and pressing them in the way you say she did, that you have any feeling against Mrs. Bentley, as to her motives or character? Motives about what?

8495. As to her propriety of conduct—These are the only reasons you can allege against her character—these that you have given with regard to the way in which she pressed your hand—are these the only indications of impropriety of conduct? The only ones I can state.

8496. Could you state other reasons? I may state generally this, that I often remarked that Mrs. Bentley's fits were carried on in a manner I did not understand. I know she had some attacks of some kind. It is a very unpleasant thing to put me to this detail in the presence of Mr. Bentley.

8497. I am to understand from you, that Mrs. Bentley's general manner of receiving you was the way you have described—taking your hand in both of hers? Yes; not receiving me at first, but very often in the dining-room this happened, when Mr. Bentley was away. That is what I did not like.

8498. Did it ever occur when Mr. Bentley or any other person was present? I do not recollect it; I do not think so.

8499. How often have you seen Mrs. Bentley in fainting fits? Several times. (Witness referred to his diary.) This is one instance—Tuesday, 1st April. It merely mentions that Mrs. Bentley was very ill. That is what I usually put down when she was in these fainting fits.

8500. Did you suppose, on the 1st of April, when Mrs. Bentley fainted, that she was only pretending? No, not the first time, I did not think so.

8501. On what occasion did you suppose — ? I saw her in several of those fits.

8502. What led you to suppose she was pretending to faint? Perhaps I have seen a great many of these things before. A person of experience—

8503. By Mr. Wilson: Perhaps you will be kind enough to inform the Committee what peculiar difference you have observed between a female in a feigned fit and one in a real one? They were prolonged.

8504. Which were prolonged? These feigned fits.

8505. How long was Mrs. Bentley in any of these feigned fits? More than an hour—sometimes two.

8506. Did you ever see any females in hysterical fits? Yes, but I did not call that hysterics.

8507. I was asking how long you have seen a female in an hysterical fit? About half an hour.

8508. Did you ever hear of a female being in an hysterical fit many hours? I do not know.

8509. Or for days? That may be possible.

8510. Have you heard of such a thing? I may have heard of it, but I do not recollect.

8511. You have stated these were not hysterical fits—How do you know they were not hysterical

M. Edward
Boulanger.
16 Dec., 1862.

hysterical fits? I understood hysterical fits were a sort of nervous excitement, which was evidenced by exaggerated laughter and crying, and of course, some shakes of the body. But it is almost a question that ought to be put to a medical man. I have stated my opinion as an opinion, and that is all. It is my opinion; I do not know how it got into my head.

8512. It is very necessary we should ask you on what your opinion is founded, so that we may know what weight to attach to it? Well, I have said all I could.

8513. Did you ever hear it stated that hysteria assumes the symptoms of almost any and every disease? No; very likely fits that I might have taken for hysterical ones would not be called so by a medical man.

8514. The only reason why you thought these feigned fits was on account of the length of their duration? No; it was when Mrs. Bentley was coming to, that I remarked more positively about the — 8515. In what way coming to? The way she was pressing my hand—pressing it against her side.

8516. While she was placing your hand against her side was any other person in the room? Mr. Bentley was in and out of the room, and it was when he left the room that these things took place.

8517. What did he leave the room for? To fetch something.

8518. How long was Mr. Bentley out of the room on these occasions? Not long.

8519. Did Mrs. Bentley converse with you at all when he was out of the room? No, no words, except—give me this, give me that. Sometimes she appeared as if she could not speak.

8520. Then the only two reasons you can give for thinking these fits were feigned are, first, the duration of them; and secondly, the circumstance of her seizing your hands and pressing them? Yes, when Mr. Bentley was leaving the room.

8521. I think you stated that she has done so when Mr. Bentley was in the room? Once, on the occasion of the first fit, when she had a pain in the heart.

8522. Are you aware whether she had a pain in the heart on other occasions? I am not.

8523. She might have had on other occasions also? Yes.

8524. You have heard she had disease of the heart? I have heard so from Mrs. Bentley herself.

8525. Have you been much in English society? I have been a short time in England.

8526. Have you been in the habit of being in the society of English ladies? Yes.

8527. Do you think it quite possible for an Englishwoman to do such a thing as you have described, in reference to Mrs. Bentley seizing your hands and pressing them warmly, when receiving an intimate friend, and yet that her motives should be perfectly pure? It is possible.

8528. Are you not aware that it is the habit of English people to do so, when meeting persons who have done them particular kindness? I am not aware.

8529. By Mr. Morris: Do you believe very much in the purity of women? Well I think so.

8530. Have you never expressed yourself quite differently from that—have you never said that you believed very little in the purity of women? I have not said anything of the kind.

8531. Have you not boasted of being looked upon by women generally with very favourable eyes? Never; rather the very contrary opinion, I assure you. I have often stated the reverse. It is very unfair to make such a remark. This is becoming quite a personal matter to me. I do not see how it could have anything to do with this matter at all.

8532. Do you remember telling Mr. Black that you were assaulted on the Racecourse? Very possibly I did, but I do not remember the particular circumstance; I have told many people.

8533. What was your object in telling many people when you knew it was false? Because I wanted Mrs. Bentley to be assaulted herself at Newtown—that was why I reported it.

8534. Then you think you were perfectly justified in telling a falsehood to obtain a particular end? I think that is what everybody does, in a case of this description surely.

8535. Then if you have some slight faith in the purity of women, you have very little, I apprehend, in the honor of men. Have you any belief in the honor of men? Certainly I have.

8536. Then you think a man who would tell a falsehood to obtain a particular end might still be an honorable man? If he did not injure anybody.

8537. Did you not continue to go armed after this invented assault of yours? I was armed long before that.

8538. And you continued after that to be armed? Yes, I did, for a few days. I brought a pistol into Mr. Bentley's house with me, but I did not walk about with the pistol.

8539. Did your relation of the assault made upon you appear to frighten Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? No, not in any way.

8540. Did they not go armed as well as yourself? I do not think Mrs. Bentley went armed. I know Mr. Bentley was armed in his house.

8541. By the Chairman: Was not Mrs. Bentley armed with a whistle? I do not remember that.

8542. By Mr. Morris: As a matter of fact, did not Mr. Harrison give her arms? I remember Mr. Harrison lending his pistol to Mr. Bentley; that is all.

8543. Do you not remember Mr. Harrison having given Mrs. Bentley some means of defence? No.

8544. Do you not remember having told Mr. Black most distinctly that you and Mrs. Bentley had to go armed? No.

8545. Do you not remember Mrs. Bentley being armed with a stiletto? No, decidedly not.

8546. You never heard of it? Never.

8547. And never mentioned it to any one? Never.
8548. By Mr. Forster: What was your object in writing your diary—was it for your own private information? Yes, because I expected the matter to come before a Court, and of course I thought it better to have some memoranda of things that occurred.
8549. Then you wrote this diary under the expectation of having to refer to it? Yes.
8550. Not for your private information? I looked upon the matter as if we were partners in the affair.
8551. You intended your diary to be shewn to other people? No, not to be shewn to everybody; but I expected it might be wanted in the case of evidence in Court, if this matter was proved against any one.
8552. You intended the diary to be shewn to other persons as well as to refer to on your own account? Not to those not concerned in the matter.
8553. Did you intend it as a reference, to strengthen your own memory? I did it as well for Mr. Bentley.
8554. Was Mr. Bentley aware that you were committing everything to a diary? Yes.
8555. Was that the reason why you wrote it in English? I always write in English now. I am so much accustomed to it that I probably do it more readily than in French.
8556. Do you prefer writing in English as a private reference for yourself? Yes, there are many things that I could write in English better than in French.
8557. What was the meaning of putting down "Incident on Racecourse"? Merely to remember the date when I stated it.
8558. There was no assault at all? No.
8559. Was not that putting down what was not true? Of course, if you like to call it so.
8560. Then you could not state that everything in your diary is correct? Everything except that. It coincides very well with other diaries.
8561. Everything else in your diary is correct? Yes.
8562. You say that incident was invented by yourself, to lay a trap for Mrs. Bentley? Yes, that was my object in doing it then.
8563. Were you not a friend of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley then? Yes, to a certain extent. I looked upon myself more at that time as an acquaintance, because I was altering my opinion, and that must have altered my feeling.
8564. Have you ever laid traps for your friends? If I have a suspicion that my friend has done anything against me, surely he is no more my friend.
8565. You would give up your friend because you suspected him? Certainly I would.
8566. Has it been a habit of yours to lay traps for your friends? No, I never was concerned in a case of the kind before.
8567. This is the only time you ever practised deceit to your friends? Yes.
8568. Are you quite sure that in making your statements to this Committee we can rely upon you? In making statements to this Committee I state facts exactly as they have happened.
8569. How are we to know you are not laying a trap now? I might be laying a trap for myself.
8570. If you had been asked if you were laying a trap, then you would have denied it? Very likely.
8571. If you were asked the question now you would deny it also? If you do not choose to believe me you need not do so.
8572. You mentioned this invented incident to a great number of persons, you say? No.
8573. To several persons? Not as a trap. My object was not to bring Mrs. Bentley before the public.
8574. You told it to several persons? Mr. Bentley mentioned it to other persons, and when they asked me I could not say no, after I had said yes to Mr. Bentley.
8575. Did you always mention exactly the same particulars? Yes.
8576. Did it not give you some trouble to stick to the same particulars? No, not the slightest.
8577. By Mr. Johnson: Did not Mr. Bentley send you, after you had quarrelled with him, as you were a party jointly interested, the draft or a printed slip of a letter, which he proposed to publish in the Herald? Yes.
8578. Was not the incident on the Racecourse mentioned in that letter? Yes.
8579. Did you not return it as correct? Yes; of course I had stated that to Mr. Bentley, and I could not say it was not so.
8580. You allowed it to go before the world as your statement? Yes.
8581. Mr. Bentley sent you that printed slip before it was published, in order that you might have an opportunity of making any correction? Yes.
8582. And you returned it without any remark whatever on the subject of your statement that you had been assaulted on the Racecourse? Yes. Mr. Bentley's words were these:—"Mr. Boulanger stated to me that on such a date he had been attacked on the Racecourse," and as I had stated that to Mr. Bentley, of course I let it go on.
8583. By the Chairman: At this time, had you made any confession to Mr. Harrison that your being stopped was a fiction? I never spoke of that to Mr. Harrison.
8584. By Mr. Morris: Never at any time? Never at any time.
8585. Not since this Committee has been appointed to inquire into this matter? No.
8586. You will positively state that? I can swear it.
8587. Then if Mr. Harrison states that you have done so, he states what is false? Yes.
8588. By Mr. Forster: Did it give you no trouble in inventing this story? No, I made a very short statement of it.
8589. You prepared yourself beforehand with the story—you took some pains in arranging it in your own mind? I only made up my mind about it.

M. Edward
Boulanger.

16 Dec., 1862.

8590.

M. Edward
Boulanger.

16 Dec., 1862.

8590. Did you ever commit it to writing, at any time, yourself? No, I did not write anything about the anonymous letters.

8591. Were you prepared for the possible consequences of making such a statement as that—Supposing you had been called on to give evidence in a court of justice, what course would you have taken? I would state what I have stated to the Committee—that I never was attacked; and I would state my reasons as I have stated them here.

8592. At the time would not that have prevented the object you had in view? I could not go and state a falsehood there.

8593. Supposing the very day, or the day after, you had told Mr. Bentley this story, a man had been arrested on suspicion, and you had been called on to give evidence, what would you have said then? I would have stated exactly what I have said in this Committee, and I would have stated my reasons to justify my doing so.

8594. By Mr. Morris: I wish again to ask you a question with regard to your conversations with Mr. Harrison—Is the Committee to understand that you have, on no occasion, informed Mr. Harrison that this assault upon the Racecourse was a mere invented one of your own, and that you did it to lay a trap for the Bentleys? I never did.

8595. You understand the question? I understand you.

8596. You had no conversation with Mr. Harrison, with regard to this assault having been invented by you? No.

8597. By the Chairman: When did you see Mr. Harrison last? I saw him last night, when he brought me the letter of the Committee.

8598. By Mr. Forster: You were on very intimate terms with the Bentleys? Yes, I was going there every day until then.

8599. What was the occasion of your falling out with Mr. Bentley? That was a different matter, not connected with this matter.

8600. You did not fall out with Mr. Bentley on the occasion of your telling him you had laid a trap for him? No, that was a different occasion altogether.

8601. When did you fall out with him? Some short time after the assault on Mrs. Bentley.

8602. You are sure your quarrel had nothing to do with this matter? No.

8603. You would have hardly expected to be on intimate terms with them after telling them you had laid a trap for them—that would have prevented you from having any further intercourse with them of an intimate sort? Yes.

8604. Can you give the date when you told Mr. Bentley this incident on the Racecourse was a fiction? I think it was on a Sunday, about three weeks ago.

8605. It was after this inquiry began—was it not? Yes; I was at the Café when I was told, I believe by Cheval, that Mr. Harrison had made a statement about Mrs. Bentley's intimacy with him; that this statement had been made here by Mr. Harrison—something about a letter that he produced that had been written by Mrs. Bentley. Then I went to Mr. Bentley and told him my opinion, as I said before, that it would be found that Mrs. Bentley was very possibly the author of these letters; and as I had always expressed my opinion, and had told him himself before that I was satisfied that he had nothing to do personally with the matter, I asked him if he could consult Mr. Johnson on the matter, and if he would think it better to try and avoid bringing me here, because I saw my evidence would be unpleasant, and compromise his wife's case. I wished not to see Mrs. Bentley at all then. Mr. Bentley was telling me his opinion about the letter produced by Mr. Harrison being false. So I wished to speak about the matter with myself to him—my own matter—but I did not like to do it in the house. Then we went out, and Mr. Bentley, of course, at first felt a little hot on the matter, when I was mentioning the matter about his wife.

8606. After going out of the house on this occasion, will you tell the Committee what you told Mr. Bentley exactly? I told Mr. Bentley what I have said about his wife's taking my hands in that way, and I expressed to Mr. Bentley that I really had my suspicions against Mrs. Bentley. I told him about the Racecourse; and I told him how the description Mrs. Bentley had given about the assault coincided with the one I had reported as being perpetrated on me. I told him also that my evidence would perhaps be unpleasant to hear; and that if it was not of much importance to the case, I should be glad if he could, for himself, avoid bringing me here, because, I said, if I am summoned I must state everything that has happened to me or with me, or through me. Mr. Bentley agreed with me that my evidence would be injurious to his case; he said, "I can see very well now that if you come forward it will be injurious to the case, and I am very much obliged to you for mentioning it to me." He said he would consult Mr. Johnson, and do his best to avoid my coming here. Mr. Bentley was very friendly then —

8607. You said just now that he was very hot? Mr. Bentley was very friendly with me when we separated.

8608. He got very warm in the course of your disclosures? Yes. This was about my expression:—"Well, look here, Bentley, I cannot agree with you that Mrs. Bentley is altogether innocent in this affair"—and then he shewed indignation and annoyance.

8609. He did not shew any inclination to commit an assault upon you? Not the slightest.

8610. He separated from you quite friendly? Yes; he shook hands with me, and thanked me; and stated that he thought it would certainly be far better if I was not called for.

8611. Do you know whether you came here on the invitation of the Committee? I received a letter to that effect.

8612. You are not aware whether Mr. Bentley had anything to do with bringing you forward? No, I had no idea I should come forward until last night, when Mr. Harrison gave me the letter, when I was at Mr. Ellard's.

8613. Have you been in Mr. Bentley's house since this? No. I met Mr. Bentley a few days

- days after in George-street, and I was going to speak to him, but he said that during the time this affair is on we had better not speak. M. Edward Boulanger.
8614. Have you seen Mrs. Bentley at all since the time that you had your explanation with Mrs. Bentley? No. 16 Dec., 1862.
8615. What was your object in laying a trap for Mrs. Bentley? I answered that question before.
8616. I did not quite understand you? I stated to Mrs. Bentley that a man stopped me on the Racecourse, and shook me on the left shoulder —
8617. You said that? Yes.
8618. Shook you on the left shoulder? Yes. That I took a revolver out of my pocket, and he took to his heels—that was my statement to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley. Mrs. Bentley afterwards stated, in her report of the assault on her, that the man shook her by the left shoulder also, and said to her, "Oh! you have got one too," when she put her hand to her bosom. She pretended the man was alluding to a revolver.
8619. You did carry a revolver at that time? At that time I did—not always.
8620. Did you give any description of the man you said had stopped you? I gave a description of a man about the size of Harrison, as stated in my diary, with short hair, and dressed in common clothes, just like a man of the working-class—not that he was a man of the working-class himself, but that he was dressed like one.
8621. Is it your opinion that Mrs. Bentley's account of the assault upon her arose out of the story you told? That was my opinion, and it is still my opinion.
8622. You thought one fiction produced the other? Yes, I thought so, and I still think so.
8623. Did you think it was wrong of Mrs. Bentley to tell such a story as that? Decidedly.
8624. Did you think it was worse in Mrs. Bentley than in yourself? Decidedly.
8625. Why? Because mine was a trap, and she fell into it. My reason is this, that it is very strange a woman like Mrs. Bentley should find any necessity of being assaulted in the very same manner so soon after I was.
8626. How do you assume the necessity? I do not believe she has been assaulted.
8627. Where was the necessity? I often heard Mrs. Bentley mention it was very strange she never had been attacked yet, and that she was expecting to be attacked, and she had the detectives several times watching, to prevent any assault being committed upon her.
8628. Was it this remark of hers, about expecting to be attacked, that put it into your head to invent this fiction? Of course this contributed to it, but it was not that exactly. The other matters I have mentioned aroused my suspicions.
8629. Where did you derive the idea of this incident on the Racecourse—was it entirely out of your own head? Of course.
8630. And not taken from a novel? No, that would not look very handsome in a novel; that is not sufficiently complicated.
8631. It was not suggested to you by anybody? No, it was quite my own idea, and I kept it quite secret too.
8632. Was the time you told it to Mr. Bentley the first time you disclosed it to anybody—before you mentioned it to Mr. Bentley had you ever told the whole truth to anybody? No, not before I told Mr. Bentley; he was the first person to whom I gave the detail.
8633. You never mentioned it to Mrs. Bentley? No.
8634. Did you never converse together, as to the curious coincidence of these two assaults? Yes, Mrs. Bentley several times said how strange it was; and Mr. Bentley himself remarked that this assault should have been made in the same manner, and he agreed with me that the description of the man, who assaulted me was so much like the man who assaulted his wife.
8635. You did not say anything about a ring on the finger of the man who assaulted you? No.
8636. On the supposition that this story of Mrs. Bentley's was untrue, how do you explain the circumstance of her being wounded? I understood she was not wounded; I heard she was not.
8637. From whom did you hear it? Mr. Bentley acknowledged to me that Mrs. Bentley had refused to allow her medical attendant to see her breast, and he added that that gentleman at the time told him how impolitic it would be not to insist upon his seeing the breast at the time, because as evidence it would be very important.
8638. The medical man suggested —? The medical man suggested to Mr. Bentley that it would be greatly in their favour —
8639. This was Dr. Brereton? Yes. However, Mr. Bentley told me he could not prevail on Mrs. Bentley to let the doctor see her breast, and he did not think it would be a matter of such importance as it is now.
8640. Was that your principal reason for believing that Mrs. Bentley had not told the truth? No; at the time I did not believe her.
8641. Did you see her at the time? I saw her the next day, I believe.
8642. Did she then complain of pain? She looked very well, that is all I can say. She told me she was in pain, but she did not look as if she had been hurt.
8643. Did she complain of pain without its being suggested to her by any one else, or was it from the question being asked? It never struck me she was in pain. If she had been in pain, very likely I would have observed it without anything being spoken about it.
8644. She told you she was in pain, did she not? She said she had been hurt.
8645. Are you aware whether the wound was at the time being dressed? I understood she told me it had been dressed—at least I think she told me it had been dressed.
8646. It was in her own drawing-room you saw her the day after the assault? In the drawing-room or dining-room.

- M. Edward
Boulangier.
- 16 Dec., 1862.
8647. And you say she looked very well? Yes.
8648. You did not believe she had been wounded at all? I did not think so; of course Mrs. Bentley did not give me the detail of the description of the wound, because it was not a thing we could very well talk about. The detail was mentioned by Mr. Bentley, part of the nipple being torn or scratched off, as if torn off by the nail of the hand.
8649. I thought you said, just now, that you did not think Mr. Bentley was an accomplice in the affair? I am perfectly sure—at least I am still of this opinion—that Mr. Bentley was not then aware of anything. Of course I am only stating my opinion, but I think that Mr. Bentley has become aware of it since.
8650. On that supposition, do you think Mr. Bentley told you the truth when he told you there was a wound? Mr. Bentley might have told me the truth then, but it struck me that Mrs. Bentley could have wounded herself, because it is easy to create some inflammation on the nipple, I believe. Of course, also, Mr. Bentley may be very willing to take the word of his wife in this matter.
8651. Do you know the two servant girls they had in the house? Yes.
8652. Did you ever talk to them about this particular matter of Mrs. Bentley's breast being wounded? Yes. I met one of the servants in the street—no, it was before that—I think I met one of the servants in the street after Mrs. Bentley had been ill; I cannot tell you the date.
8653. You never asked any questions about Mrs. Bentley's wound? No, not about the wound. I met the servant passing in the street, and I said, "How is Mrs. Bentley?" Oh! I remember, it was after I had fallen out with Mr. Bentley, and when I was no more visiting at the house, I met one of the servants, and I asked, "How is Mr. Bentley; how is Mrs. Bentley?" I had heard Mrs. Bentley had been very ill, but I do not know what the cause was.
8654. Nothing relating to the question before the Committee? No.
8655. Was it owing to these occurrences you have related now, that you were led to the conclusion that Mrs. Bentley had something to do with these anonymous letters? Yes. Of course what I have read also in the papers since then about the Exeter affair, confirmed me in that opinion. There were some statements made to me by Mr. Bentley that made me look upon Mrs. Bentley as rather an extraordinary character.
8656. Was that before you laid the trap? Yes.
8657. Was that what first excited your suspicions? No, but it was one of the things that induced me to—
8658. The statement that Mr. Bentley made? Yes.
8659. That and the manner of Mrs. Bentley made you suspect her? The way he spoke to me of Mrs. Bentley as a pupil of Thalberg—that she had her lessons at a nobleman's. It seemed to me that the lessons she would have from Thalberg could not be very important ones, because he said Thalberg would say, "Will Lady So-and-so go to the piano?" It struck me from Mrs. Bentley being called Lady So-and-so, that she must have been notorious in life. This was in reference to a matter which, it appears, had offended Mrs. Bentley; I was speaking of Thalberg, and she got uncomfortable about it, and Mr. Bentley then told me not to be any more sarcastic with her about Thalberg. What I mention now has not been mentioned by me to the public in general, and I mention it now to give my reasons for getting my suspicions excited. It was said when she came here that she was a pupil of Thalberg, but Mr. Bentley told me that on her taking her lessons from Thalberg, he did not say more than, "Will Lady So-and-so go to the piano?"
8660. That is, that Thalberg called Mrs. Bentley Lady So-and-so? Yes.
8661. What name did he call her—did he call her Lady Bentley? I wish to explain. He said to me, "Of course we say Mrs. Bentley is a pupil of Thalberg, because she must earn her living; but, between us, Mrs. Bentley was not a regular pupil of Thalberg, because, when she had her lessons, it was merely at a nobleman's, and the only way she took her lessons was that Thalberg used to say, 'Will Lady So-and-so go to the piano?'"
8662. Meaning Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
8663. Then you infer that Mr. Bentley told you more than he would like to tell the public? Yes, he told me more than he would like to tell the public; but that has been left between us.
8664. Do you mean to say there were other things told you that you do not like to tell now? There was one thing Mr. Bentley told me was to be kept between us.
8665. By Mr. Johnson: Mr. Bentley desires that you will keep nothing back that he either said, or you pretend he said? He has told me a secret which I have really forgotten, but it could not have any connection with this matter.
8666. I tell you again he desires you will not conceal anything, and he wishes you would speak the truth? I can only say what I know.
8667. You have not stated it yet? I have stated all I could. I know Mr. Bentley has told me something in the form of a secret, asking me not to mention it again. I remember it was something about Mrs. Bentley being at nurse—something about the birth of Mrs. Bentley.
8668. By Mr. Forster: It had nothing to do with the present inquiry? No, it could not have anything to do with the present inquiry, but Mr. Bentley seemed to infer that perhaps the Jesuits could have had something to do with it—that perhaps the birth of Mrs. Bentley might be connected with the matter.
8669. Are you sure it had nothing to do with the Exeter case? I am sure of that. It was merely something about the birth of Mrs. Bentley.
8670. You seem to have formed a very poor opinion of Mrs. Bentley's veracity? Of course I could not very much believe in what Mrs. Bentley said.
8671. Did you not at one time talk very highly of Mrs. Bentley? Yes, once I was inclined to do so. Even after this statement of Mrs. Bentley's about the assault, I would sometimes

- say to myself that it would be a strange coincidence if she really had been attacked that day, and yet I could not come back to believe it, because every statement of hers corresponded so well with what I had said about the attack that was not made upon me. From the evidence of things upon record, I sometimes thought it possible I may have been mistaken.
8672. Sometimes you have thought it was possible there might have been a mistake? Yes, seeing how Mr. Bentley persisted in having the matter before the public; it seemed very strange he should do so unless he felt convinced he was right. Yet I could not take away from my mind the idea that this must have been an untruth, because of the similarity of the description of the assault.
8673. You sometimes then thought what Mrs. Bentley said was true, and sometimes you came to the other conclusion? Sometimes I had doubts.
8674. What is your opinion now? That it was all untrue. As I have stated, from my experience of the case, I am willing to come to the idea that Mrs. Bentley had something to do with the matter, but I am not accusing Mrs. Bentley; I have no proof, because I consider if I had proof I could have prosecuted Mrs. Bentley.
8675. For the letters written about yourself? Yes; if I had proof I certainly would have a right to do so, though it is possible I would not have done it.
8676. If you were satisfied your suspicions were all true, would you think it your duty to prosecute Mrs. Bentley? That is my business. It is not likely I would prosecute a woman though.
8677. Did you come to this conclusion upon any comparison of handwritings at all—did you ever look at any of these letters at all carefully? Yes, very carefully. At one time Mr. Harrison was so sure it could not be anybody but Mr. Montagu that I very carefully looked at the letters myself, and it struck me very much at the time too. That was one of the things that created a doubt in my mind; yet always, why the assault? That was always what I thought.
8678. Mr. Hanson was sure—was he not? Yes, he accused Signor Cutolo.
8679. Then your judgment was rather shaken, but never very positive? Well, I knew, being on very bad terms with Mr. Cutolo, because I did not acknowledge him as a professional man —
8680. Would your not acknowledging him as a professional man lead you to believe he would write these letters? Of course, from the character they give him—knowing he is of a very jealous disposition—after all these absurdities of his in the papers, which certainly shew great feelings of jealousy towards other people, I certainly felt inclined to think he might be connected with the matter, in order to keep his place in the profession. I am given to understand that I am a leading man in my profession, as far as talent goes, and of course I must be in the way of Mr. Cutolo in the profession.
8681. You thought he would have a motive —? Yes, that he might be annoyed if the public inclined to think me his superior. This caused a probability in my mind as to his being connected with it.
8682. Looking at the letters, you thought there was a little similarity between the writing of some of these anonymous letters and Mr. Cutolo's writing and Mr. Montagu's both? Yes.
8683. You thought Mr. Cutolo had a motive for it? One reason why I felt inclined to believe Mr. Cutolo was in the matter was, that Mrs. Bentley told me once—I think Mr. Bentley was present—that Cutolo recognized her the first time he saw her, and he said where could he have seen her, or something of that kind.
8684. Have you entirely given up this impression about Signor Cutolo and Mr. Montagu? I think Mr. Cutolo had nothing to do with it.
8685. And Mr. Montagu—do you also entirely exonerate him? Yes, I do.
8686. That is entirely different from what your opinion was at first? Yes.
8687. You say you arrived at that opinion by your observation of the conduct of Mrs. Bentley? Yes, and of course by a great many things I heard too. That assault at Newtown seemed to me so very strange that I began to adopt the public opinion.
8688. Do you know anything about Mrs. Bentley's handwriting? I had a letter from Mrs. Bentley once, thanking me about some concert.
8689. Do you think you could find it? I might.
8690. You think you know Mrs. Bentley's writing? Yes, I think so.
8691. Would you say that (handing a letter) was her handwriting? No.
8692. Is that (handing another letter) her handwriting? That would be more like it.
8693. Would you say positively that is her handwriting? I would not swear positively to handwriting in any way.
8694. What do you think of that writing (handing letter marked B. 1. Vide Appendix)? I think it is Mrs. Bentley's.
8695. You think that is Mrs. Bentley's? Yes, it is very much like her's.
8696. Are you tolerably positive? I could not be positive at all; I only had one letter from her.
8697. Are you sure that is a woman's writing at all? I am not an expert, but I should fancy it is.
8698. Do you know that (letter marked B. 3)? No, I would not take that to be her writing.
8699. You think this (B. 1) is her handwriting? Yes.
8700. Have you seen any other letters of Mrs. Bentley's besides the one to yourself? No.
8701. Did you ever see any letters of Mrs. Bentley's to which her name was signed? No; I think all I saw of Mrs. Bentley's writing was that one—"Mrs. Bentley presents her compliments," and so on.
8702. Do you recollect the occasion of Mr. Harrison going away up the country, after he had been watching in the Bentleys' house for some time? Yes.

M. Edward
Boulangier.
16 Dec., 1862.

- M. Edward Boulanger
16 Dec., 1862.
8703. Are you aware whether any arrangement was made for Mr. or Mrs. Bentley to write to him with regard to the occurrences that might take place? No.
8704. Did you ever hear Mrs. Bentley speak of having met a priest going to Newtown? I have no recollection of that.
8705. Did you ever hear the circumstance mentioned in Mr. Bentley's house at all, of Mrs. Bentley having met a priest going to Newtown? I do not recollect it.
8706. You were talking of something extraordinary in Mrs. Bentley's manner towards you—squeezing your hand—I want to know whether you ever looked her in the face at the time she did so? I may look people in the face —
8707. I mean to ask what you should judge from the expression of her face—did it coincide with the pressure of her hand? It was a very kind expression; that is all I can say. I cannot say any more than that surely.
8708. Was there anything improper in the expression of her face at the time? No, I cannot say there was.
8709. Was it merely friendly? Yes, it was friendly.
8710. Was it more than friendly? It was not an expression of the face to induce me to believe that Mrs. Bentley was in love with me.
8711. Although you judged it from the pressure of her hand? I do not know exactly how to express myself; it was not a shake of the hand—it was a pressure. She would say, "Do come; say you will come." It was very friendly. It was the keeping of my hand so long that made me think it was not right. As I stated before, I can quite understand a lady taking the hand, in that way, of a person with whom she had been very intimate, but I do not understand keeping it too long.
8712. Did you ever notice Mrs. Bentley shake hands with any one else? Yes.
8713. Did you ever notice anything in her way of shaking hands with any one else, which resembled this particular occurrence with yourself? No; I have remarked her shake hands warmly, but merely shake hands.
8714. Did you notice her shaking hands with Mr. Harrison? Often.
8715. Did you ever notice anything particular in her way of shaking hands with Mr. Harrison? I never noticed anything particular between Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley, never. The only thing I have against Mrs. Bentley is, that I thought she was going too far in her way of shaking hands with me. I am not attacking Mrs. Bentley's virtue in any way.
8716. Did you ever play cards at Mr. Bentley's when Mr. Harrison was also playing? I do not know.
8717. You have dined there with Mr. Harrison? Often.
8718. On what sort of terms was Mr. Harrison with the Bentleys—was he treated in quite a friendly way? Yes, quite intimately.
8719. You do not recollect playing cards? It is possible I may have played cards there; I think I did, but I do not know with whom it was.
8720. Were you ever at the house on those nights when Mr. Harrison was on the watch and was to sit up at night in the house? No, I do not recollect Harrison sitting up at night; I recollect his staying one night, but we were all together.
8721. Did Mr. Harrison go away with you? I think it has happened several times.
8722. Did Mr. Harrison go away with you always? Generally.
8723. Did you ever hear of his sitting up there late at night on duty? I have heard it was mentioned here in the Committee. I know there was something said about that he was to be there late, but I think it was Mr. Bentley that was sitting up with him.
8724. How long is it since you were at the house? Well, I cannot tell; I think it was in May I left.
8725. You have not been there much lately? Only once.
8726. You are not acquainted with Signor Cutolo to speak to him? No; I used to speak to Signor Cutolo, but we fell out almost immediately. I think it was on account of this affair, and also on account of my opposition to him. I wrote him a letter about his diploma that would not please him very much, and we have mutually cut each other since.
8727. By the Chairman: You were, I think, more than intimate as a friend with the Bentleys—you were treated in a different position from ordinary acquaintances? Yes, I considered myself quite a friend. It was a short friendship, but it took place very soon through Mr. Bentley's kindness to myself personally.
8728. From your diary I find you dined there almost every day? Frequently, for a short time.
8729. When you did not dine you called in the evening and had tea? Yes, for some short period I made a point of being there every day.
8730. On the 31st of March you dined with Mr. Harrison at the Bentleys? Yes.
8731. And on the 2nd April you dined there, and got the loan of a revolver. What caused you to get the loan of a revolver? I think it was on account of the threatening letters.
8732. Before the attack on the Racecourse? Yes. I know Mr. Bentley volunteered the revolver.
8733. See what you say in your diary—"2nd April.—Went to Bentley's, and dined with Harrison. Looked into disturbed room, and found anonymous letter. Lives threatened. Took copy of for Mr. Plunkett. Got Bentley's revolver lent to self." What caused you to ask for a revolver at that time? It was, I believe, on account of the opinion expressed by Mr. Harrison that the matter was a serious one. At that time Mr. Bentley had one lent to him by Mr. Harrison, when he lent me his.
8734. Did you think of using it at that time? Certainly I did not think I would kill anybody with it.

8735. Did you load it on the 3rd April? That is possible. I know Mr. Bentley got his loaded. I got mine loaded by Cheval. I did not even know how to manage it. M. Edward Boulanger.
8736. Did you not load it yourself? Of course, afterwards.
8737. Look at the entry in your diary of 3rd April, and see if you did not load it yourself? 16 Dec., 1862.
Yes.
8738. That was the day after you got it? Yes, I suppose so.
8739. Then you dined at Mr. Bentley's again on the 4th, when one of the anonymous letters was found? Yes.
8740. And on the 5th you dined again in company with Mr. Harrison? If it is there (in the diary) I did. I do not remember now the days I went to Mr. Bentley's to dinner.
8741. And on the 6th you had tea at Mr. Bentley's? Yes.
8742. And Mr. Harrison and you left at half-past 12? Quarter past 12.
8743. On the 7th of April you waited at Mr. Bentley's, for Mr. Harrison, and he did not come? I do not know if I dined there that day, but I know Harrison did not come.
8744. On the 8th you got an anonymous letter—did that come by the post? Yes.
8745. Was that the letter you have identified this morning? I do not know.
8746. You went to Mr. Bentley's after receiving it, and saw Mr. Harrison there—Just see if you did not see Harrison at Bentley's on the 8th? Yes.
8747. Was it you or Harrison that was too ill to talk about the matter? That was me.
8748. Was your illness caused by receiving this anonymous letter? No, of course not.
8749. On the 9th you dined at the Bentleys', and you had a long discussion about publishing the anonymous letters? Yes.
8750. Did you want them published? Yes.
8751. Who did not want them published;—Mr. Harrison was there? Mr. and Mrs. Bentley objected too. Mr. and Mrs. Bentley wanted a part of it published. I said, no, if anything was published it should be the whole. I know Mr. Harrison seemed to be very anxious it should not be, because he said he had the matter in his hands. I remember betting a new hat with him at the time, that in one month from that time he would have proved that it was these parties—Cutolo and Montagu.
8752. That was on the 9th April? Yes.
8753. Then on the 10th you dined with the Bentleys and Mr. Hanson, and Mr. Black came in the evening? Yes.
8754. Was Mr. Harrison there that day? No, I think if he had been it would have been marked in my diary.
8755. You dined there on the 11th? Yes, I think I went there every day.
8756. And you saw Mr. Harrison then? Yes.
8757. You dined there on the 12th? Yes, with Mr. Harrison.
8758. On the 13th? I went to Bentley's, but I did not dine.
8759. On the 14th? Dined at Bentley's, and saw Harrison.
8760. By Mr. Hart: Is there any conversation entered in your diary as having taken place with Mr. Harrison on the 12th April? No; "dined there with Harrison," that is all it says.
8761. By the Chairman: If anything particular had occurred, would you have put it down? I could not recollect now.
8762. Was the house disturbed at all that day? I do not remember; I should have mentioned it in my diary, I think, if it was.
8763. On the 15th you dined there? Yes.
8764. And the 16th? Yes.
8765. You were there on the 17th, but did not dine? Yes.
8766. It is quite evident you were almost a member of the family, from these entries;—did you feel any delicacy about going there so frequently? I used to be there, to be on the watch for the enemy, as much as anything else.
8767. Did you ever object to go at all? No, not until a certain time.
8768. On what occasions was it that Mrs. Bentley used to take your hand and ask you, "Do come"? Before I was going there every day.
8769. Then this ceased as you became on a more intimate footing? No, that was where it began, but it did not cease.
8770. Did it increase in fervency—did the shaking of the hands increase in warmth? No, I did not find it so.
8771. Then although there was an increase in the familiarity with which you were received at the house, still the warmth of shaking hands did not increase? No.
8772. After Mrs. Boulanger came to Sydney, you were still in the habit of dining and taking tea there? I do not know about dining, but I used to continue going there.
8773. You were there on the 18th April? Yes.
8774. On the 19th you say Mrs. B. was very ill? That was on the occasion of Mr. Bentley having lost his child. Mr. Bentley called upon me then; he had a cab, and I went with him, looking for the child, till we were met by another cabman who had found the child. We found Mrs. Bentley very ill that day.
8775. You were there on the 21st? Yes.
8776. Was Mr. Harrison there? Yes, I dined there that day; Mr. Harrison was there too.
8777. Did anything particular occur on that day? I cannot see that, because I have put "nothing new."
8778. If anything particular had occurred with regard to the anonymous letters, most likely you would have mentioned it? Yes, it is very likely I would. There is in my diary, "nothing new."
8779. Did Mrs. Bentley hear a noise in the roof on that occasion, or did she state she thought

- M. Edward Boulanger.
16 Dec., 1862.
- thought she had heard a noise on the roof, do you remember? On the roof, or in the upper rooms do you mean?
8780. In the loft above the upper rooms? We could not hear a noise there from the dining-room. That was generally where I was.
8781. On the 22nd you will find you were at Mr. Bentley's to tea, saw Mr. Harrison, and searched the house from top to bottom? Yes.
8782. Were you with Mr. Harrison when the house was searched? Yes.
8783. You went with him to the different places that he searched? Yes.
8784. Did you go in the roof? No, I did not go in the roof on that day. I only went partly in the roof once—I think it was at the beginning of the affair altogether—and I put my head up merely to see what it could be.
8785. What do you say was the cause of your falling out with Mr. Bentley? It was a private matter of our own, concerning my own affairs.
8786. In no way connected with this matter? In no way. After that I did not keep any more a diary, when I lost the key and could not open it for a long time.
8787. You afterwards received Mr. Harrison at your own place? I received Mr. Harrison two or three times that he came to see me. He came to see if there was anything new—if he could do anything for me.
8788. He was in the habit of seeing you at Mrs. Nutt's? Yes, he saw me there two or three times.
8789. Has Mr. Harrison ever expressed his opinion of your musical talents? Well, I do not know; he might have said something; it did not strike me as anything very important.
8790. You do not remember that he has had any conversations with you on the subject? No particular conversation; I do not recall it.
8791. He has not complimented you on your abilities as a musician? He might have done so, but I really do not remember it exactly.
8792. You feel sure Mrs. Bentley never lighted a cigar and smoked it when you were present? I do not recollect Mrs. Bentley at all smoking in any way.
8793. Have you any entry on the 26th April in your diary? Yes.
8794. Were you at Mr. Bentley's that night? "Went to Bentleys"—saw Harrison"—that is all.
8795. Did you stop there long? I cannot remember. It is not here.
8796. It was after the assault on Mrs. Bentley, was it not? The very day after.
8797. Had the letter you supposed would come, acknowledging the assault on Mrs. Bentley, arrived at that time? I fancy the letter almost followed the attack.
8798. Do you remember if that letter was the subject of conversation on that night—the 26th April? I do not know; I think if there had been anything important I would have mentioned it there.
8799. Is there any entry of the 25th April? Yes.
8800. Was Mr. Aldis present there at that time? There is nothing mentioned about Mr. Aldis.
8801. If Mrs. Bentley had lighted a cigar that night, would you have remembered it? I think if she had lighted a cigar at any time I would have remembered it.
8802. If Mr. Harrison has stated that Mr. Aldis and you were present, and that Mrs. Bentley lighted a cigar and smoked it, do you think it is true? I should say it is not impossible. It strikes me now that Mrs. Bentley has lighted my cigar, merely for fun, and handed it to me; but I do not call that smoking. I think that is very likely what he is alluding to.
8803. Were you present at Mr. Bentley's on the 27th April? It is not marked here.
8804. Do you remember Mrs. Bentley having a fainting fit shortly after the attack at Newtown? I do not remember; I could not say so.
8805. There is no entry in your diary of the attack made upon you on the Racecourse? No, except "Incident on Racecourse."
8806. By Mr. Johnson: About that attack on the Racecourse—did you describe to Mr. Harrison the circumstances which you concocted about that? The same thing as I have stated here exactly.
8807. You described the imaginary height of the man? Yes, I told him he was about his height.
8808. And what sort of a man he was? Yes; short hair, and the same kind of dress as the working class of people—short-cut grey looking things. I described to him that he shook me by the shoulder, and that I pointed the pistol at him, and he took to his heels.
8809. Did you say anything more than that to Harrison? No.
8810. Was it part of the story that the man who attacked you was drunk? I said it might have been a drunken man, on purpose.
8811. Did you say that to Mrs. Bentley? Yes, and to Mr. Bentley also.
8812. And you fully described the man in the way you mentioned? I said he did not look like a drunken man at the same time.
8813. You did describe him to Mr. Harrison in the way you have mentioned here? Yes, I remember doing that.

Mr. Thomas Charles Bentley further examined :—

8814. By Mr. Johnson : Had you ever any conversation with Mr. Boulanger, when you requested him to keep your communication secret? I had a conversation with Mr. Boulanger when he requested me to keep his communication secret.

Mr. T. C.
Bentley.

8815. What was that communication? He asked me if there could be any truth in the anonymous letters about Mrs. Bentley's birth. I said the letters bore a lie on the face of them; that they stated that Mrs. Bentley had been the death of her mother two or three years previously, whereas the fact was, that Mrs. Bentley's mother had died when she was quite an infant, so young that she was obliged to be put out to nurse; and if there was any truth in the letters, Mrs. Bentley must be a changeling. He then stated to me that he had a secret on his part, which I suppose every gentleman will consider I am now released from, but I would rather not repeat the secret unless I am forced.

16 Dec., 1862.

8816. In relation to a conversation about Mrs. Bentley having received instruction from Thalberg, did you at any time make such a communication as he alleges to Mr. Boulanger? I never had any such conversation at all. I recollect a conversation between Mr. Boulanger and Mrs. Bentley, with reference to Thalberg, but not to the effect mentioned by Mr. Boulanger.

8817. What was the effect of it? Some conversation took place about Thalberg and some book of studies, and Mrs. Bentley told him that the book of studies she used was that of a young lady with whom she had taken lessons at the same time at that lady's house. Those were the only words that passed.

8818. Was Mrs. Bentley, in fact, a pupil of Thalberg's? I think she had some eight or ten lessons of Thalberg.

8819. By the Chairman : Has this secret you spoke of any connection with this mystery? It was entirely connected with Mr. Boulanger—a matter entirely relating to himself. It has no reference to these letters in any way, except in so far that the secret he conveyed to me arose from the question he had put to me in reference to there being any truth in the anonymous letters.

8820. You are aware that Mr. Harrison has made a statement that you had a conversation with him respecting the death of Mrs. Cutolo's first husband—Will you state what (if any) conversation you had with Mr. Harrison on that subject, and what the nature of that conversation was? Early in April Mr. Harrison came to my house, and stated that he had done a good day's work. I asked him what he meant. He said, "I have engaged a servant that used to live with Mrs. Cutolo during the life of her former husband." I said, "What bearing has that upon the case you have in hand." He replied, "Well, she still calls occasionally at Signor Cutolo's, and therefore I may gather something in reference to our case; but the matter I have in hand is of a far more serious nature, and if what I mean is correct, there will be no difficulty in believing that the same person is capable of carrying on this anonymous persecution." He stated also that it was in reference to Mr. Heath, Mrs. Cutolo's former husband. I said, "Are there any rumours out of doors, Mr. Harrison, in reference to that?" and he shook his head in a very mysterious way, and said "Well, we shall learn, we shall learn!" I said, "I ask you for a particular reason, because I have had a conversation with a gentleman, which in itself amounts to nothing, but what you have told me gives it life and meaning, and I feel I ought to repeat that conversation to you in confidence, as a privileged communication." I did so, without mentioning the gentleman's name.

8821. What communication? I communicated to Mr. Harrison this fact, that I had spoken to this gentleman—that I had called upon him at the time of Signor Cutolo's marriage, and that that marriage was announced in the Sydney Morning Herald in an unusual manner. Mrs. Cutolo was spoken of, not as the relict of Mr. Heath, but in her maiden name. That led to further conversation, and this gentleman informed me, speaking of Mr. Heath, that towards the latter end of his life he was unhappy, and expressed an opinion that he should die of a broken heart; that at that time Signor Cutolo was a frequent visitor at that house, but that Mr. Heath never explained what he meant by that statement. I then observed, "But Mr. Heath died of diarrhoea, did he not—not of a broken heart?" This gentleman replied, "Well, I know little or nothing about it; the fact is, all I know is this, I had a present of some pine apples sent me from Brisbane, and I sent some of them to Mr. Heath. No acknowledgment was made of them, and, fearing that Mr. Heath was ill, Mrs. ——— called to make inquiry; found he was unwell and in bed, and the next day we heard he was dead; and that during the medical treatment which he received, he had made the observation that the opium was killing him." I made some observation to this effect, "Surely if an overdose of opium had been given accidentally or otherwise," (I will not abide by the exact words) "that would easily be known." I forget the answer I had in reply. I then said, "I have understood that Signor Cutolo was very much affected at the funeral, and cried like a child." The reply was, "Yes, if he had been acting upon the stage the part would have been over acted." The gentleman then made the observation, "It is a curious fact too, I heard," (I believe he said on the day of the funeral) "that Mrs. Heath was very much overcome, and expressed a wish that she should be alone, and a lady" (the name was mentioned, but I forget it) "who lived at Balmain, undertook to clear the house, or to convey Mrs. Heath's wishes to her friends. She did so; and when she came to Signor Cutolo, he rose from his chair and said, 'Madam, I am here by appointment.' All the other guests left, and Signor Cutolo remained." That is all the conversation that took place. I thought not much of it at the time, but Mr. Harrison's remarks seemed to my mind to give it certain life and meaning, and I felt bound, as a privileged communication, to repeat it to him, as a detective officer, never expecting that Mr. Harrison would feel justified in repeating statements which were given to him in the utmost confidence, and with a good end in view when they were given.

- Mr. T. C. Bentley.
16 Dec., 1862.
8822. Do you acknowledge having these conversations with Mr. Harrison, with regard to his power of raising the body? No.
8823. By Mr. Johnson: Did you, at any conversation, ask Mr. Harrison whether he had the power of exhuming the body? I have no recollection of doing such a thing, neither do I believe that I asked him the question.
8824. Have you related the substance of all the conversation that took place between you and Mr. Harrison on that occasion? I have, and the subject was never alluded to since that day.

M. Edward Boulanger re-examined:—

- M. Edward Boulanger.
16 Dec., 1862.
8825. By Mr. Johnson: You did describe this imaginary individual to Mr. Harrison with as much particularity as you have done to the Committee? The same.
8826. You say you made the statement that the man was drunk, on purpose? Just on purpose not to give any suspicion to Mr. Harrison of my object.
8827. You had given, you say, the same description of the occurrence to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, before you saw Mr. Harrison? The same evening, before I spoke to Harrison.
8828. Did you not ask Mr. Bentley to ascertain from Mr. Harrison whether he knew anything of your movements that night when you said you were assaulted? I do not recollect anything of the kind.
8829. Will you undertake to say you did not? Of course if I do not remember it that is all I can say. I do not remember having any reasons for saying so.
8830. You say you were received on the footing of an intimate friend in Mr. Bentley's house? Yes.
8831. Was he not, in fact, extremely kind to you in many ways? Many.
8832. He identified his cause with yours, considering you as a party attacked as much as his wife? I do not think he exhibited a great deal of fear about me. I consider that Mr. Bentley was extremely kind to me in matters of business at first.
8833. In what way? Well, he acted very kindly in assisting me at first, and it was that caused me to go to him the day I called upon him lately—his personal kindness to me.
8834. Will you tell the Committee the nature of that kindness? If Mr. Bentley has told the Committee, it is not necessary for me to do so; it was a matter of my own business, which had nothing to do with this affair at all.
8835. I want to know to what you attribute the extreme kindness of Mr. Bentley to you? I found Mr. Bentley very kind to me; that is all I wish to say.
8836. By Mr. Hart: Did he assist you in a pecuniary manner? I have answered the question I think sufficiently. If Mr. Bentley likes to state the details of his kindness to me, he is perfectly welcome; at the time it was not for publication, and I do not see that it is necessary now. It was personal kindness at any rate; it had nothing to do with my going to his house. I considered that his kindness to me was not so much caused by my taking any interest in the way his wife was treated, or shewing my regret to see any one treated in that manner; I think it was quite personal; it seemed to be a personal feeling in my favour, on his side, which prompted him to act kindly to me.
8837. Shortly after you heard of Mrs. Bentley being assaulted at Newtown, you quarrelled with them? Yes.
8838. The subject of that quarrel was totally unconnected with the anonymous letters? Yes; but there was some coolness, and I thought I remarked that Mr. Harrison and Mr. Bentley had kept things from me, with which I taxed Mr. Bentley at the time, which, of course, increased the quarrel.
8839. The quarrel having nothing to do with this case? The beginning of the quarrel had not, but the end had.
8840. In what way? Perhaps I would not have left his house so promptly were it not that something seemed to be kept back from me, and I taxed Mr. Bentley with it.
8841. Did he tell you that Mr. Harrison had told him not to say anything to you? No, he denied it at the time; he denied anything being kept away from me.
8842. How long after the time that you ceased to be a friend at the Bentleys' house was it that Mr. Harrison applied to you for your diary? It is difficult to say. Shall I say about?
8843. Say, as near as you can, how long you had lost the key when he applied to you for your diary? I had lost the key at Mr. Bentley's.
8844. When did you quarrel with Mr. Bentley? On Saturday, the 3rd of May, it must have been; I remember the date, because that was the day I left Lyons' Terrace.
8845. Are you sure it was not Friday, the 2nd? It is put in my diary as the 3rd. "Left Mrs. Nutt's as resident"—that is all that is here, and that was the day I quarrelled with Mr. Bentley.
8846. Would you undertake to say you were at Mr. Bentley's house on Saturday, 3rd May? I find it in my diary; I must go by it.
8847. Would you undertake to say you were there after Friday, the 2nd? I can only go by what is in my diary. I might have put it in the wrong place—it seems to have been written very hastily.
8848. You say you lost the key there? When I was at Mr. Bentley's, I found I had lost the key of my diary.
8849. Was it at the time you were at Mr. Bentley's that Mr. Harrison applied for your diary? No.

8850. How soon afterwards? I should say about a fortnight or three weeks; it would not exceed that. It may have been perhaps a month; I cannot tell. My present impression is a fortnight or three weeks. M. Edward Boulanger.
8851. How can you account for there being an entry in your diary of the 3rd May, if on that day you had left Mr. Bentley's house, and the diary was locked up, and you had lost the key while you were at Mr. Bentley's? This has been done afterwards. All these things you see in pencil have not been written at the time; they were written when Mr. Harrison got me the key of my diary. 16 Dec., 1862.
8852. Was that written after you got the key? After I got the key from Mr. Harrison—after lending him my diary. I put them down from memory carelessly, when I re-opened the diary.
8853. Then you have no confidence about that being the right date when you left Mr. Bentley's house? Not when you find pencil marks.
8854. You think it was about a fortnight or three weeks after you had quarrelled with Mr. Bentley that Mr. Harrison applied for your diary? Yes.
8855. Tell the Committee again what he got it for? He asked if I would have any objection to lend him my diary, as he wanted to consult it about some matters of his own.
8856. In connection with the Bentley case? Of course it was on account of the Bentley case.
8857. By Mr. Hart: How did he know you kept a diary? He had seen it often.
8858. By Mr. Johnson: Did you ever shew your diary to Mr. Bentley? Yes, I lent my diary to Mr. Bentley.
8859. When did you lend it to Mr. Bentley? I do not know.
8860. Do you know for what purpose you lent it him? It was to consult it about these letters that have been published. Mr. Bentley told me he was going to write a letter in the papers, and I lent him my diary. At that time I had already ceased visiting at Mr. Bentley's.
8861. You have stated before, that he sent you a proof of the letter which appeared in the newspapers on the 4th of June? Yes.
8862. And you read over that proof? Yes.
8863. Did you suggest any alterations or corrections in it? I think I must have mentioned something; I forget now what it was—not anything of great importance.
8864. Did you observe anything in that letter which was not strictly accurate? I do not remember anything now, but if anything is mentioned to me perhaps it might bring my recollection to it.
8865. You read the whole of it? Yes.
8866. As far as you know, was there a single circumstance in it that struck your mind as being inaccurate? I do not think there was.
8867. By Mr. Hart: Except the incident on the Racecourse? It was perfectly correct that I had told him so.
8868. By Mr. Johnson: You said, in part of your evidence, that you remarked that previous to letters being found in the house, Mrs. Bentley absented herself from the drawing-room, or something to that effect? Yes.
8869. How many times did that occur? I cannot tell.
8870. Did it occur more than once? Yes, I think so.
8871. Do you undertake to say so? I noticed it particularly once, and that is all I will undertake to say positively.
8872. Will you undertake to say it occurred more than once? I will undertake to say I am under the impression that it did.
8873. Will you undertake to say letters were received in the house more than once? The card was received —
8874. The card is one of the instances to which you refer? No, that was not a case when Mrs. Bentley left the room.
8875. You instance the card as one of the instances? No, I do not.
8876. Then why did you mention the card? Because it is a thing that has happened.
8877. Why did you instance the card as one of the instances when Mrs. Bentley left the room? I did not mention it as such.
8878. Had it any reference to my question? It struck me it had not.
8879. Now you withdraw the card? Very well.
8880. Now give me another instance if you can? What question do you put?
8881. What instances can you mention of letters being received in the house, upon occasions previous to which you observed that Mrs. Bentley left the room? The only letter I can mention now is the day it was found on the staircase window.
8882. Then you can only mention one? Yes, as far as a letter goes; but I can mention that on several occasions I have remarked Mrs. Bentley leave the room and afterwards say she heard a noise, and make us search the house, when, of course, we did not find anything.
8883. Did you not say before something to this effect, that she reported that she heard a noise, and that you and Mr. Bentley would then search the house, until Mr. Bentley always found something? I must have meant —
8884. Is it true that Mr. Bentley ever found anything except on one occasion? Next day I used to hear of a letter being found in the house.
8885. Is that true? Yes.
8886. How often did you hear of a letter being found in the house? Three or four times.
8887. That you are positive of? That is what I fancy; I could not swear to any number.
8888. By the Chairman: Were there more than two? I could swear to two.

- M. Edward Boulanger.
16 Dec., 1862.
8889. By Mr. Johnson: Which were they? I have seen one that was found in the dining-room down stairs, and one that was found on the staircase.
8890. Can you state any more? No, not any letters found. There may be some more, but I could not state more than two.
8891. You remember the letter being eventually found mixed up amongst the music? Yes.
8892. Do you mean to assert that Mrs. Bentley was previously absent from the room on the occasion when Mr. Bentley went down and found the music in a state of disorder? Yes, I mean to say I was left with Mr. Bentley, and Mrs. Bentley was absent for some time.
8893. Do you remember what occasioned him to go down-stairs? No.
8894. Was Mr. Harrison there? No, Mr. Harrison was not there that night.
8895. Do you mean to say Mrs. Bentley on that occasion said she heard a noise? I cannot say that.
8896. Do you say that Mrs. Bentley on that night said she heard a noise? I cannot say that; I cannot recollect the detail of that night.
8897. Can you recollect any other occasion? I know I remarked Mrs. Bentley being absent for some time before the discovery of this letter took place—that is what I remember perfectly well I noticed; and the other occasion was after that, when the letter was found on the window of the staircase, when I remarked that Mrs. Bentley had left the drawing-room, and left Mr. Bentley and myself together, and when she came back she pretended she heard some noise, and said to Mr. Bentley—"Charley, I am sure there has been some noise."
8898. I want to know if you can state any other night? I cannot be more positive than I am at present.
8899. You remember very well hearing Mrs. Bentley describe the assault at Newtown? Yes.
8900. Cannot you tell the Committee whether or not Mrs. Bentley fainted that night or the following night? There is something here I cannot make out—it is marked in my diary the day after the assault. If Mrs. Bentley had been ill that night, surely it would have been marked in my diary. There is one thing marked in my diary which I cannot make out, and which I was speaking about before. It is on the 25th April, where I mention the description. Now here I find on the 24th —
8901. Is there something missing? No, there cannot be any page missing there. On the 24th I find I went to dinner on invitation to Mr. Bentley's, with my wife and Mrs. Nutt, and I understood it was on the 24th Mrs. Bentley was attacked.
8902. You told the Committee, on looking at your diary again, that you heard of the assault on the 25th, and entered it on the 25th—is that so? That is what I said then. That must have been the day it was perpetrated, because it was in the evening I went.
8903. Did Mrs. Bentley faint that night? I do not see it marked here.
8904. Cannot you recollect? I do not see it.
8905. By the Chairman: We only ask can you remember? How can I remember any particular day Mrs. Bentley fainted? she has fainted so many times.
8906. That is a particular day—the day of the assault? Exactly; I know that.
8907. By Mr. Johnson: How many times can you recollect Mrs. Bentley fainting when Mr. Harrison was present? I can only recollect that once I think.
8908. Were not the servants at that time coming in and out to assist her? Yes.
8909. Did you observe anything peculiar connected with that fainting? No.
8910. You say on the 24th (that was Thursday) you mentioned this incident on the Racecourse? No, the 23rd.
8911. When do you say you mentioned it? I mentioned it on the 23rd.
8912. Do you stick to that, that you mentioned it on the 23rd? I see it marked in my diary; I do not see how it could be there unless —
8913. I am asking you when you say you mentioned to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley that you were attacked on the Racecourse? I do not know what date it was, but I know it was a very short time before the assault on Mrs. Bentley.
8914. Did you not mention it on the 24th? How mention it?
8915. Speak of it to them? Of course I did—I kept it up.
8916. Now, was it not on the night of Thursday, the 24th April, that you mentioned that incident to Mr. Bentley? No, that was not the first time.
8917. When did you mention it at an earlier period? I must have done that the day before.
8918. When do you allege you first told Mr. Bentley of what you call the incident on the Racecourse? I say it must have been two or three days before Mrs. Bentley was attacked at Newtown.
8919. Will you swear it was not the day before, or rather the night before? I cannot swear it; it cannot be less than two days before.
8920. Why do you say it cannot be less than two days before? Because the day after it was talked of. Before Mrs. Bentley was attacked we were at dinner with her.
8921. That is when she told you of her assault? No, because Mrs. Boulanger was there and Mrs. Nutt, and it can be easily proved that that was not when she spoke of her assault.
8922. I am afraid I do not make myself intelligible—I want to know whether it was not the night before Mrs. Bentley told you she was assaulted that you mentioned the incident on the Racecourse? No, certainly not.
8923. By the Chairman: Mr. Johnson wishes to know if it was the evening before Mrs. Bentley was assaulted that you mentioned to Mr. Bentley that you had been assaulted? I say I know it was not that evening—that is all I can say.
8924. By Mr. Hart: When did you enter in your diary that the incident took place? On the 23rd, it stands in my diary.
- 8925.

8925. When did you see Mrs. Bentley, after you made that entry? It must have been the day before — Then that must be a wrong entry.
8926. When did you make the entry? I made it afterwards—I put it very likely on the wrong dates. I know it took place before. It can be corroborated by lots of people.
8927. By Mr. Johnson: What can be corroborated? That I said I was assaulted. It is corroborated by Mr. Bentley's own statement that it took place four days before.
8928. What do you refer to in Mr. Bentley's statement, as corroborating your statement that that fiction was supposed to have taken place four days before Mrs. Bentley was assaulted? Mr. Bentley says it was on such a date—the 22nd or 23rd.
8929. He says the 24th? Well, then I cannot make it out.
8930. Well I think you have got into a difficulty? Not the slightest.
8931. By Mr. Hart: Do you mean to say you mentioned the fact of your having been assaulted, before the 23rd of April? Before the assault on Mrs. Bentley was alleged to have been committed?
8932. Did you mention it to Mr. Harrison at the time? The same evening—I think so.
8933. You can accurately get at the time when you mentioned it to Mr. Bentley, by bringing to your recollection the fact that you mentioned it on the same day? I am under the impression that Mr. Harrison was in the house, and busy about something, when I spoke to the Bentleys about it. I went to see Mr. Harrison afterwards, and mentioned to him the same thing.
8934. That was in the evening? Yes.
8935. If Mr. Harrison has stated that your conversation with him took place on the 24th, is that correct? I do not think the date correct, because on the 24th I was there with my wife and Mrs. Nutt, and this would have become a general topic of conversation if that had been so, but it did not.
8936. By Mr. Johnson: What is the statement in Mr. Bentley's deposition you referred to just now? I thought it was the 21st; you say it was the 24th; I was under the impression that it was four days before Mrs. Bentley was attacked.
8937. Do you say it was not on the 24th April that you told Mrs. Bentley of this fiction about the Racecourse? It is perfectly impossible for me to answer that safely; all I can swear is, that it was before Mrs. Bentley was attacked. Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were informed by me of my being attacked on the Racecourse before she stated she was attacked herself.
8938. Was it not the night before? That might have happened, but I cannot tell you; you want me to give a definite answer.
8939. You told me it was impossible it could be some time ago? I was under the impression that you wanted me to say that I only informed Mr. and Mrs. Bentley after Mrs. Bentley had been assaulted.
8940. What time of the night did you tell Mr. Bentley? That I cannot tell.
8941. Was it not late, just as you were leaving—you cannot recollect? No, I cannot recollect.
8942. Where did you tell him? I fancy I did in the drawing-room—that is all.
8943. Will you undertake to say Mrs. Bentley was present when you mentioned it? I do not know; I know she was immediately informed of it, if she was not present at the time. At any rate I mentioned it to her myself.
8944. In Mr. Bentley's presence? Yes; we both spoke of it together.
8945. Did you not tell it to Mr. Bentley alone? I am under the impression I did first, and that then after that it became a topic of conversation between Mr. and Mrs. Bentley and myself.
8946. You say you mentioned this fiction you had invented, to many people? Not as a fiction though.
8947. As a fact? As a fact.
8948. To whom did you mention it at the time? Not exactly at the time. I think I mentioned it to Mr. Aldis, Mr. Black—Oh! I don't know; lots of people.
8949. Now, sir, was it a fiction? I am perfectly ready to swear it.
8950. So you say? I will prove it to you now, if you like.
8951. By Mr. Morris: Did you ever mention it to any person after you had quarrelled with Mr. Bentley? I have spoken of it very lately.
8952. By Mr. Hart: Did you relate it to any one, after your quarrel with Mr. Bentley, as being a fiction? No.
8953. By Mr. Johnson: You said most distinctly, that you never told Mr. Harrison at any time, recent or distant, that it was a fiction? I most distinctly state that I never told Mr. Harrison it was a fiction. Even last night he spoke to me, and he seemed to be anxious to know something of it, and I would not tell him.
8954. You never have? No, I never have.
8955. Who did you first tell it was a fiction? I believe I mentioned it to Mrs. Nutt, as being a fiction, for the first time.
8956. When? I believe some time when she got an anonymous letter.
8957. If you can fix the time —? I cannot fix the time. If you will be so kind as to listen to me, perhaps things will come out. I received a letter, I believe at Mr. Aldis's or the Café, which had been left for me, supposed to be from Mrs. Nutt, requesting me not to come back to the school or give any more lessons, as the parents had objected to me. It happened that the very same day I had been dining at Mrs. Nutt's. The letter had been waiting a few days. It was after the June vacation. So of course I did not take any notice of the letter, but I brought it to Mrs. Nutt. Now will you repeat your question, and I will go on?
8958. I say, when did you first tell anybody this story of the Racecourse—was it a fiction? That

That must be it then, because the writing was so different, and looked so much at the time like that of Mr. Montagu, that I mentioned it to Mrs. Nutt as a fiction, and said that it would be very strange if Montagu was still in the affair. It struck me that it looked very much like Mr. Montagu's handwriting, though it was a kind of imitation of her own, and I said, "It is very strange—I did not think Montagu would be in the matter now." She said, "He has been in it all the time—has it not always been Montagu and Cutolo?" I remember that, after that remark of Mrs. Nutt's, I told her I had never been attacked on the Racecourse.

8959. You mean to say you told Mrs. Nutt during the June vacation? Yes.

8960. Did you tell anybody else but Mrs. Nutt? Yes.

8961. When? Lately.

8962. Who? Many of my friends.

8963. You have been on very intimate terms with Mrs. Nutt, I believe? I must have been when I was living in the house.

8964. You are still? Yes, I am.

8965. Have you any objection to state what is the nature of the intimacy between you and Mrs. Nutt? I must state that I think that is a most improper question to put to me.

8966. Do you decline to answer it? It is a wrong question, and I decline to answer any wrong question, particularly a badly-meant one.

8967. To whom did you first mention the fact of that being a fiction, after you say you mentioned it to Mrs. Nutt? I think it was Mr. Aldis.

8968. Was that before you called upon Mr. Bentley recently? Yes.

8969. Since this Committee has been sitting? Yes; I never mentioned anything until the Committee was sitting, except to Mrs. Nutt, I think: I think that was before the Committee was sitting.

8970. Are you sure of that? Yes, I am pretty sure of it; of course I cannot swear to any date or any day.

8971. Of course it is a matter that rests with yourself to say whether it was a fact or a fiction? I state it as a fiction; if you can make it a fact, very well.

8972. You say Mr. Bentley told you that Thalberg addressed Mrs. Bentley as Lady So-and-so? Yes; in a conversation referring to a sort of remark I passed about Mrs. Bentley, which she got annoyed at, Mr. Bentley told me, next day, in a friendly manner, that Mrs. Bentley had really taken lessons from Thalberg, but that the lessons she had taken were not quite like a professional lady would take. You know there is a very great difference in taking the lessons.

8973. You say that Thalberg addressed Mrs. Bentley as Lady So-and-so? The words "So-and-so" were used by Mr. Bentley—"Will Lady So-and-so pass to the piano?" That was not the way to practise or take a serious lesson, and that was what Mr. Bentley meant at the time.

8974. I want to know whether you declare the words "So-and-so" were used by Mr. Bentley, or a name? I do—"Lady So-and-so." The name of either a nobleman or a noble lady, at whose house this happened, was mentioned, but has escaped my memory.

8975. Do you say these words were used as applied to Mrs. Bentley herself? As applied to Mrs. Bentley herself. Mr. Bentley only mentioned it in that way—"Will Lady So-and-so pass to the piano?"

8976. You stated something about hearing of Mr. Harrison being lately to the Committee—What did you hear about that? I heard at the Café that Mr. Harrison had said here, in the Committee, that Mrs. Bentley had had her arms round his neck, or something of the kind; and there was something about a love letter from Mrs. Bentley to Mr. Harrison—That is what I heard.

8977. A love letter? Yes.

8978. May I ask who your informant was? Cheval, of the Café, told me there was something of the kind, and I went to Mr. Bentley the same evening.

8979. Of course no one was present at this alleged conversation between you and Mr. Bentley? At the time I first went, there was no one in the room, but some one came and opened the door, and when I saw it was Mrs. Bentley I said I did not wish to see Mrs. Bentley.

8980. You and Mr. Bentley had some conversation after that? Yes, we met in the street, and he shook hands with me, and told me it would be better we should not be seen during the sitting of this Committee.

8981. Do you happen to know that it is at his express request you are summoned here? I do not know at whose request I was summoned; Mr. Harrison brought me the letter.

8982. By the Chairman: Did Mr. Harrison tell you that it was in consequence of the Chairman of the Committee not knowing your address that he was charged with the letter to you? No; he said he was determined to find me out, because if he had not delivered me the letter, the Committee would have thought he wanted to avoid my coming here. He said, "I am very glad I have found you."

8983. By Mr. Morris: Had you much conversation with Harrison, last night, about this inquiry? I had no conversation with him except in the presence of Mr. Ellard. Of course you are aware this is a subject much talked of. Mr. Ellard questioned Mr. Harrison very much, and I am under the impression that Harrison had had enough brandy, and very likely he spoke a great deal more than he intended, but he spoke of all that was going on in the Committee.

8984. By Mr. Johnson: Tell us what he said? It would be difficult for me to mention all he said.

8985. The general purport of it? He went on talking about some reasons for his finding out that it was perpetrated by Mr. and Mrs. Bentley. This was objected to by Mr. Ellard, and Harrison said that the letters had been sent to a certain circle of people who knew the Bentley's; one being sent to a person at whose house Mrs. Bentley was the day before, and that letter stating that Mrs. Bentley was seen with another person, with his arm round her waist, at the very hour that Mrs. Bentley was with the person who received that letter. He said in that way it was very easy for Mrs. Bentley to carry it out without doing herself any injury — But it is no use my repeating all he said.
and

M. Edward
Boulanger.

16 Dec., 1862.

8996. By Mr. Morris: I suppose he told you also about his familiarities with Mrs. Bentley? No, he did not acknowledge it to me. I blamed him.

8997. By Mr. Johnson: What for? For doing such things when he took a case like that in his hands—to take the favours of Mrs. Bentley, and then bring her before the public.

8998. By Mr. Morris: Is Mr. Harrison in the habit of boasting about his influence with ladies? I never heard Mr. Harrison boast of anything of the kind.

8999. By the Chairman: Did he mention any particulars about the Committee, as to his examination? He said no one was able to say a word. He said very sharp questions are put, and they want to criminate you.

9000. Then he gave you some instructions? No; he said, you will be there and you will find you will not be allowed to say a word.

9001. By Mr. Johnson: You have not found that to be correct? Not exactly correct.

9002. Did he refresh your memory at all? No; he mentioned something about meeting me once at the Criminal Court at Darlinghurst. He said something had been made of that, and that Mrs. Nutt and myself were supposed to have been employed by the detectives.

9003. Do you remember an occurrence, at the time you were on friendly terms with the Bentleys, as to Signor Cutolo having been watched for a certain time? Yes.

9004. Do you recollect hearing Mr. Harrison make a statement about his having been watched? Yes, and not a very correct one too.

9005. Did he not say Signor Cutolo had been watched for three days, and that he never left his house during that period; that on one of these days he was closeted with his solicitor, Mr. Hellyer, and in the evening of the other he was seen walking up and down the verandah? He did not say verandah, because the house had no verandah.

9006. Did not Mr. Harrison say verandah? No, he did not. I mistook the house, and it is what I said myself, that I thought Signor Cutolo's had a verandah.

9007. What did you hear Mr. Harrison say about watching Signor Cutolo on that occasion? That one day, I think it was a Thursday, Signor Cutolo was at home all day, and never went out—that is the only thing.

9008. Did he say anything about his being closeted with his solicitor, Mr. Hellyer? I do not remember that. I remember the name of Mr. Hellyer being mentioned several times. I know he stated, at any rate, that Signor Cutolo was at home the whole day, when I found he was not.

9009. Did you not inform Mr. Bentley that the statement of Mr. Harrison could not be correct, because you had found he had gone out? Exactly.

9010. Was it not the fact that you did discover that Mr. Harrison's statement was untrue? Yes, I am sure of that—at least that it was incorrect.

9011. Did you not also make some statement about the verandah that led to a visit to the exterior of Signor Cutolo's house to see whether it had a verandah or not? I was —

9012. Now is not this true—I am reading from the 144th paragraph of Mr. Bentley's deposition:—"He (Monsieur Boulanger) afterwards informed me, that he had ascertained that Signor Cutolo had gone, as usual, to his professional engagements during one of those three days, and afterwards I ascertained and informed Monsieur Boulanger of the fact, that there was no verandah to Signor Cutolo's house. Monsieur Boulanger insisted I was mistaken on that point, and then took up his hat and went out to Signor Cutolo's house to ascertain himself whether there was a verandah to it or not, and shortly returned, saying, that I was right, that there was no verandah; and he made use of an observation to this effect: 'Harrison thinks he must tell us something, and therefore he humbugs us, and I shall tell him what I think; which he afterwards told me he did. Mr. Harrison has never offered any explanation to me on the subject.'" Is that correct? Yes, quite correct.

9013. Did you make use of an observation to that effect? Something of the kind. I remember Harrison saying that he knew where Signor Cutolo was, and he did not know that he had been to Mrs. Nutt's that day.

9014. Did you not also say he pretended to have you watched for protection, and did not do so? He said so, many times.

9015. By Mr. Morris: I gather, from what you have stated, that you have no opinion whatever of Mr. Harrison as to his vigilance or his capability of conducting an inquiry of this sort? I have no very good opinion of Mr. Harrison, but to state any particular fact of his conduct in this matter I cannot. But it seems to me matters have been treated not as they ought to have been by a public officer. Parties have been kept a long time in anxiety, and the delay has very likely caused it to do more harm than it would have done.

9016. By Mr. Johnson: Did you ever learn that Mrs. Bentley was provided with a stiletto and whistle to protect herself? Never.

9017. Did you never mention that circumstance to anybody at any time? Never.

9018. Not to Mr. Black? Never.

9019. You never mentioned to Mr. Black the circumstance that you were aware that Mrs. Bentley was armed with a stiletto and whistle, or in any other way? Never.

9020. And that is as true as anything else you have said? Yes.

9021. Supposing that you should have mentioned the fact of Mrs. Bentley being armed either with a pistol or stiletto, to Mr. Black, it must have been previous to your quarrel with

- M. Edward Boulanger.
16 Dec., 1862.
- the Bentleys? I should say so, because I did not see Mr. Black only very seldom. I think I remember now a conversation taking place, and I remember Mr. Harrison advising Mrs. Bentley to be armed, and I am not quite sure Harrison did not — No; I think it was a revolver he spoke of. Mr. Black and Mr. Aldis were constantly wishing me to give them information.
9022. Can you not remember something about a lady's pistol? No, I do not remember anything about a lady's pistol. I remember something about Harrison advising Mrs. Bentley to have a revolver in her pocket.
9023. That was while you were in the habit of visiting at Mr. Bentley's house? Yes.
9024. By the Chairman: Mr. Black has written a letter to the Committee to say that you had mentioned to him that Mrs. Bentley was armed? That may be —
9025. By Mr. Johnson: Did you tell Mr. Black that Mrs. Bentley was armed? No, not that she was armed, but that Mr. Harrison had advised Mrs. Bentley to be armed when she went to Newtown.
9026. Was that before you had ceased to be on intimate terms? Yes, a long time before.

WEDNESDAY, 17 DECEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER,	MR. MORRIS,
MR. W. FORSTER,	MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. WILSON.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. C. E. Harrison called in and re-examined:—

- Mr. C. E. Harrison.
17 Dec., 1862.
9027. By the Chairman: Have you any further evidence that you would wish to lay before this Committee? I produce before the Committee a letter I have received by this Mail from Exeter, which I hand in with a copy of the letter sent, and to which this is a reply.
9028. Will you read the copy of the letter sent by you to Exeter? I will. (Letter read. See Appendix I.)
9029. Was not the Honorable Colonial Secretary led to understand that the depositions in the case had been sent for? Not that I am aware of. I never had any conversation with him about it.
9030. Are the statements in this letter correct? As far as I know, they are.
9031. Was this the fullest information you could ask for; could you not have put your interrogatories in a more direct form for obtaining complete information? I thought, from the way I worded my letter, that they would have sent me the full particulars of the case. Had I received such a letter I should have collected the whole facts of the case.
9032. Were you not in possession of something more definite than this, on which much fuller information could have been asked? No. That is all the information that I have been able to obtain here.
9033. Was the name of the clergyman mentioned to you, in the information you have received, in such a way as that you might identify him? No; I did not know what church he was at at the time.
9034. Was his name mentioned, and himself identified in such a way as to enable you to connect him with the case? No.
9035. You say here that she was in the habit of having anonymous letters thrown into her window—were you led to suppose, from your information, that this happened repeatedly? I was told that it had been done upon several occasions. It happened more than once, I believe.
9036. You yourself have no knowledge of its happening more than once? No, I have not.
9037. Have you the answer to this letter? I have. (Letter read. Appendix 2.)
9038. Does it not strike you that the information here contained is very meagre? I should have sent a fuller answer certainly if it had been my case.
9039. By Mr. Morris: Do you still persist in your statement that Mr. Boulanger told you, a short time ago, that the assault upon him in Hyde Park was a complete fiction? No, not a fiction; but he told me in at Johnson's one night, about 6 o'clock, when I met him there, that what he had reported about his being stopped upon Hyde Park was incorrect—that it was not true in fact; that some of the facts were wrong, and that he had purposely made the mis-statement with an object. He did not make use of the word fiction, but his statement was to that effect.
9040. What date was it when he told you this? I do not recollect the date, but it was directly after the publication of the Bentley letters.
9041. And before the appointment of this Committee? Yes.
9042. By the Chairman: And do you still say that you obtained the loan of Boulanger's diary merely for the purpose of fitting a key to it at his request? That was all.

Mrs. Bridget Lindsay called in and examined:—

- Mrs. Bridget Lindsay.
17 Dec., 1862.
9043. By the Chairman: You are a resident of Sydney? I am.
9044. In what street? In Elizabeth-street.
9045. Do you know Mr. Bentley? Yes.
9046. Are you in possession of any facts relative to the matters that form the subject of inquiry by this Committee? Yes. I saw some men coming out of Mr. Bentley's house two or three times, very late at night. I mentioned that I had seen them to Mr. Hellyer, when when he was speaking to me about the Bentley matter, and I mentioned it to other persons as well as to him. I should have mentioned the matter to Mr. Bentley himself, only I was speaking to one of his servants, and she told me they had the conductors in the house.

Mrs. Bridget
Lindsay.

17 Dec., 1862.

9047. You mean the detectives? Yes.

9048. Do you recollect anything that occurred on Easter Monday? Yes; I recollect seeing the man coming out of the house and making a jump down from the steps into the street. I could not say as to any other day in particular, but I recollect that night, about that time. I was up nearly all night, through a person, who was stopping with me, having some horses to run at Randwick. On Easter Monday night my daughter went to a ball at Mr. Clark's, and it was very late before she came home. I was sitting up for her, and had the door open, when I saw this man jump out of Bentley's door down on to the pavement, and he left the door open after him.

9049. Would you know that person again if you saw him? I do not know that I should know him again, but I could give his description.

9050. Will you describe him to us to the best of your recollection? He wore light trowsers, with a light tweed coat, with pockets in the side, and a soft hat.

9051. What do you mean by a soft hat? One of these Californian hats, and lightish trowsers, like light tweed. And another night both my own girl and my servant girl were disturbed by hearing a row next door, and when they got up and looked out they saw him come out of Mr. Bentley's door in the same way that I did, and give a jump out upon the pavement.

9052. When was that? It was on another night.

9053. After you had seen him? I cannot say whether it was before or after.

9054. At what time of night was it when you saw the man? It was between 2 and 3 o'clock on the morning after Easter Monday. I am certain about that being the day, because of my waiting up for my daughter.

9055. Was it at the same time that your daughter and your servant saw them? It was about the same time, but not that same night.

9056. Was it during the Easter holidays? I cannot say whether it was or not, but it was somewhere about then; and it was during that month that I saw them two or three times. The reason why I saw them about that time was, that there was a person from the Clarence River, who stopped at my house, and he had a horse to run at Randwick, and that kept me up late, as it was always 2 or 3 in the morning before he came home.

9057. Have you been long resident where you now live? Yes, for the last ten years.

9058. Have Mr. and Mrs. Bentley been long living in their house? About a year, to the best of my opinion.

9059. And they live opposite to you? Yes.

9060. What is your opinion of the occupants of their house? I do not know anything of them, only that I have always seen them on the best of terms. There have been a good many people have asked me about them; and I have always said to everyone who has asked me that I never believed that they had any hand in it.

9061. Who do you mean? Mr. and Mrs. Bentley—I do not believe they had anything to do with it.

9062. How is it they came to ask you? When the letters were published in the paper, a good many people came to me and asked me which was Bentley's house, and I shewed them, and then we got talking over the matter, and they would ask me what I thought of it, and I always said that I did not believe that the Bentleys had anything to do with it.

9063. Did you ever see any persons loitering about the streets, as if they were watching the house? I saw a person loitering about one evening. There was a young person playing at my house one evening, and the window was a little way up; I was walking up and down in the verandah—I always walk up and down there of an evening, till pretty late at night. I noticed a man, walking about, going backwards and forwards. He was a man with dark whiskers and clothes, and he came in under the verandah and looked through the window. I passed over to him and asked him if he was looking for anyone, and he said no; I told him that it was rather cool of him to come and look in at our window, and he walked away. I saw the same man loitering about, two or three times afterwards.

9064. Can you describe this man? He was a stoutish man, about the same height as the man who came out of Bentley's, but stouter, and with different clothes.

9065. Do you know Inspector Harrison? No.

9066. By Mr. Morris: Do you know Detective Clark? No.

9067. I wish you to call to mind so as to be able to say positively if it was Easter Monday or Tuesday that you saw the man? I can say decidedly that it was Easter Monday; that it was early on Tuesday morning. I know this because Mr. Clark's ball was on the evening of Easter Monday.

9068. What I mean is, are you sure that it was not on the Wednesday morning? No; and I am all the more certain for having to wait up for the family coming in. They were at Mr. John Clark's at a ball, and I am sure about its being Easter Monday.

9069. And you are sure that it was after 1 o'clock in the morning? I am sure that it was after 3 o'clock.

9070. Was it before day-light that you saw the man? It was near 4 o'clock, because it was after 4 when my daughter came home. I am positive of this, for I did not go to bed afterwards, and when they came home I went and cleaned up the place.

9071. By the Chairman: Was there not an empty house on the opposite side of the way? No; but there was an empty house next door to our place. There was a woman named Poole who took it. She had come from the islands; and I saw the man come over from Bentley's house and rap at the door of Mrs. Poole's, and go in.

- Mrs. Bridget Lindsay. 9072. Did that occur more than once? I will not say that it did occur more than once.
- 17 Dec., 1862. 9073. Did it ever strike you that there were unusual noises heard in that house? I did not take notice of any noises I heard there, because the person who took it was no great things. She was a woman who had come up from the islands, and a lot of cabmen and others used to go there. She was a woman who had been sent away from Mr. Roache's and Mr. Marshall's, and then she took that house.
9074. And you have seen them come across from Bentley's and go into that house? Yes; and the night my daughter and the girl saw them coming over, there was a noise in at Poole's house, and the girls got up and opened the window over-right Bentley's door, and then they saw the man come out of Bentley's.
9075. Was there more than one? No; I never saw more than one man, only that once.
9076. By Mr. Morris: Could your daughter or your servant remember the particular day or night on which they saw this man? I do not think they could, because I cannot remember the precise time that I saw him, except upon that one occasion, on the Easter Monday.
9077. By the Chairman: If it had not been for the peculiar circumstance of your daughter having gone to the ball you would not have been able to speak so positively of that day? No; nor I would not have remembered it then, but when I saw Mr. Bentley's letters in the newspaper, I at once recollected seeing the man coming out of Bentley's. I saw the man frequently before that, and I thought several times of going and telling Mr. Bentley about it, and that I had seen persons coming out of his house at most unreasonable hours. I knew that he could not know of it, because I had seen him going to bed. I could see his light in his bedroom.
9078. By Mr. Morris: How late was it when you saw this man leave Bentley's house? About 12, and from that to 1 o'clock in the morning. When I saw him I thought it might be some person going after the servants, and that was the reason why I was going to let Mr. Bentley know. One day, however, they sent over to borrow something of me, and then the girl told me that they had the detectives in the house, and I said nothing about what I saw.
9079. By the Chairman: You said, I think, that you told Mr. Hellyer that you were sure the Bentleys had nothing to do with the matter; what was it Mr. Hellyer said to you that caused you to make this remark? It was after the letters had been published, and Mr. Hellyer was asking about it; and he pointed to the roof of the house and asked me if it were possible to get up there. I said I did not know, but that it was higher at the back than it was in front. He asked if I thought any one could get upon the roof, and I said I thought they could.
9080. By Mr. W. Forster: Did you say that your house is next door to that of Mr. Bentley? No, it is on the other side of the way.
9081. It is opposite to it then? Yes; both my houses are opposite to where Mr. Bentley lives.
9082. Then what is the position of this empty house that you speak about? It is next door to me.
9083. So that these two houses—your house and the empty house—are opposite to Bentley's? Yes.
9084. And this empty house is the one that Mrs. Poole lived in? Yes.
9085. If this person lived in it what makes you call it an empty house? I mean that it was an empty house at one time, before Mrs. Poole took it.
9086. And you saw a man go across direct from Mr. Bentley's to Mrs. Poole's? I saw two men.
9087. Upon several occasions? No, only upon one occasion; they both went across and opened the door.
9088. Did they knock? I cannot say that they did.
9089. Did they knock, or did they go in immediately, as if they had the means of giving themselves admission? I saw them go in, but I cannot say whether they either knocked or rung; I did not hear them, and they seemed to me to just open the door and go in.
9090. Did you see them come out again? No.
9091. Was either of these men the man you had seen coming out of the house upon previous occasions? One of them, I think, was.
9092. The same as you saw upon the Tuesday after Easter? Yes, the same man that I saw spring out of the door on to the pavement.
9093. Then upon several occasions you saw one man, and sometimes you saw two? Yes.
9094. You were standing opposite the door on the night that these men came out? Yes.
9095. Did you notice in what way they came out, whether they came out suddenly, or whether they took any precaution as if they did not wish to be seen? No, they just came right out.
9096. Did they leave the door open after them? I did not notice upon that occasion, but on the night that the man came out alone he left the door open after him, for I did not hear it shut.
9097. Did you ever notice any person coming out of the empty house and going over to Bentley's? No.
9098. Do you think you would know this man that you saw upon several occasions if you were to see him again? No, I am not positive about that; I do not think I should.
9099. Was he like anyone you now see in this room? No.
9100. Do you know any of the detectives? No.
9101. You are sure that the man was not any one that you knew? I am.
9102. After all these things had occurred—your hearing the noises and your seeing the man come out of the house—were you not frightened? No, I was not; I generally took the air outside my own door in the evening, walking up and down.

9103. But did it not occur to you that this man, coming out of the house at these strange hours, had something to do with this case of Mr. Bentley's? Not then, because I did not know of it, but it did afterwards. When Lindsay brought me the paper with the particulars of the case, I said immediately that I would tell Mr. Bentley of what I had seen. Mrs. Bridget Lindsay. 17 Dec., 1862.
9104. And that was the time that you were told that Inspector Harrison and the detectives were there, and that prevented you from telling what you had seen whilst others were looking on? They did not see him on the night that I did, but the girls had seen him the night he crossed over.
9105. But on one occasion you saw the man coming out of Bentley's house when the girls were standing by? Yes.
9106. When your daughter was also present? Yes.
9107. And you were all three looking on? Yes.
9108. Did this ever happen upon more than one occasion? No, I do not think it did.
9109. Did you notice whether, upon this occasion, the man observed you? I was under the verandah in the shade, and I cannot say whether he did or not.
9110. Do you think it likely that he did? I am not sure, but I think not.
9111. Upon one occasion you saw one man come and look in at your window? Yes.
9112. Was it the same man that you had seen coming out of Bentley's? I do not know if it was, because he was dressed in a different way; he had on dark clothes, and the man I saw come out of the house had light clothes. But I do not think it was the same, because he was not so tall as the other man. The man who looked in at the window was a stouter man, with dark whiskers.
9113. It is possible, then, that this man, who came and looked in at your window, was a detective? Yes, it is.
9114. Did you give any information of what you had seen, to the authorities? No, I did not know that it was of any consequence; I thought it was some person coming after the girls.
9115. But after this case of Bentleys was mentioned in the paper, did you not think it your duty to state what you knew? If anybody had come and asked me I should have done so; I told everybody who spoke to me on the subject.
9116. Then you did tell several persons what you had seen? Yes, I told a good many—Mr. Hellyer was one of them. I said I had seen people coming out of the house at very late hours. I did not think I could throw any light on the matter, or I would have mentioned it before.
9117. By Mr. Morris: How long is it since you told Mr. Hellyer? It is a good while ago now.
9118. Was he the first person you told? Yes, I think he was.
9119. By Mr. W. Forster: Do you know Mr. Bentley's house? I do.
9120. Do you know it sufficiently to say whether there were any means of getting into the house, except by the front door? I do not know, but I think any one might get in at the back, because it was very insecure.
9121. In what way? He might get on a ladder over the wall, and then he could get up from the yard on to the balcony to the back parlour. Or he might get down into the cellars, through the grating in the front of the house, and then he could go up-stairs and let himself out at the front door.
9122. When once a person got into the cellar he could go all over the house? Yes.
9123. And were the doors so insecure that they would not prevent the passage of any person through the house? I will not say that, but I know that I had the care of the house next door, when it was to let, and the children used to get into the cellars by the gratings, and run all over the house, and then let themselves out at the street door.
9124. Could you get from one house to the other? Yes.
9125. Were there doors leading from one to the other? No.
9126. How would a person get from one to the other? By the back verandahs, which joined each other.
9127. Were there any means of communication by the garrets, over the roof? I cannot say that. I do not remember, though I have been all through the houses, as the landlord always leaves the key with me, to get the houses cleaned out when they are empty, and I have the letting of them.
9128. Did you ever see Mr. Bentley letting any one out of his house at a late hour of the night—as late as 12 or 1 o'clock in the morning? I have not.
9129. You know Mr. Bentley when you see him? Yes.
9130. Are you sure that it was not he who came out of the house? I am sure it was not.

Miss Elizabeth Lindsay called in and examined:—

9131. By the Chairman: You reside with your parents in Elizabeth-street? Yes. Miss Elizabeth Lindsay. 17 Dec., 1862.
9132. Do you know the Petitioner, Mr. Bentley? I do.
9133. This Committee has reason to believe that you can give them some information regarding a person who had been seen coming at a late hour out of Mr. Bentley's house? Yes; I saw a man jump down from Mr. Bentley's door-step into the street. I saw him twice.
9134. Can you describe the man? I do not think that I should know him again. I did not see him clearly enough for that.
9135. Did you see him sufficiently well to be able to describe his dress? He wore a dark coat and light trowsers.

- Miss Elizabeth Lindsay.
17 Dec., 1862.
9136. Do you know Inspector Harrison? No.
9137. Do you know on what day of the month, or in what month you saw this man? I do not.
9138. Do you remember being at a ball at Mr. Clark's on Easter Monday night? Yes.
9139. What day did the ball take place? On Easter Monday evening.
9140. You are positive that was the day? Yes.
9141. And you came home again on the Tuesday morning? Yes.
9142. At what hour? Between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning.
9143. By Mr. W. Forster: You found your mother sitting up for you when you came home? Yes.
9144. She was up and opened the door for you when you came home? Yes.
9145. Did you see any man coming out of Mr. Bentley's house on that night? No.
9146. By Mr. Morris: What hour of the night was it when you saw the man jump down from the steps of Mr. Bentley's house? It was somewhere about 12 o'clock one night, and the second time about 2 in the morning. We went to bed at 12.
9147. How came you to be up at that late hour? We generally set up rather late.
9148. And you are certain it was as late as you say—2 o'clock? Yes, the second time I saw him.
9149. Then when you saw him at 2 o'clock was subsequent to when you saw him at 12? Yes.
9150. By the Chairman: Were there two persons coming out of the house upon one occasion? No, only one person each time.
9151. By Mr. Morris: Did the man run away up or down the street, or did he walk away leisurely? No, he gave a jump out from the door and walked away very fast up towards King-street. He did this both times.
9152. Do you think you should know this man again if you saw him? No, I should not.
9153. Do you know that a person named Poole was living next door to you? Yes.
9154. Did you upon one occasion see a person leave Mr. Bentley's house, and go over to Mrs. Poole's, and go in? I saw a gentleman go once across from Mr. Bentley's house to Mrs. Poole's.
9155. Was that late at night? It was about 9 o'clock at night.
9156. Do you know who it was? No.
9157. Was it light or dark? It was rather light.
9158. How was he dressed? With light tweed clothes.
9159. Did you notice the colour of his hair or his eyes? No, I could not see sufficiently for that at that hour.
9160. What description of hat did he wear? I do not remember.
9161. By Mr. W. Forster: That was not the time you have previously described when you saw the man jump out of the house? No.
9162. When you say that he was a gentleman, how did you come to that conclusion—how did you manage to distinguish him as being a gentleman? He appeared to have a more gentlemanly manner and appearance than the man whom I saw previously.
9163. Who was with you when you saw the man jump out of the house? No one the first time; but the second time I called up the servant girl to look at the man coming out of Mr. Bentley's.
9164. You were not present when your mother saw the man? No.
9165. Do you know any of the detectives? No.
9166. Nor would you know the man again if you saw him? No.
9167. Nor the gentleman, if you saw him again? No.
9168. Do you know the premises occupied by Mr. Bentley? No.
9169. Have you been in his house? No; I have been in one of the houses, but not in Mr. Bentley's.
9170. You know Mr. Bentley? Yes.
9171. You are sure it was not he who came out at that hour? I am certain it was not.

Mr. Thomas Charles Bentley called in and examined:—

- Mr. T. C. Bentley.
17 Dec., 1862.
9172. By Mr. Morris: Will you be kind enough to state to the Committee the reasons you had for suspecting Signor Cutolo of being the author of these anonymous letters? My suspicions first took a serious form in consequence of a conversation I had with Mr. Hanson. He came to my office at the Union Club, and told me that Signor Cutolo had been at his office, and after thanking him for something he had previously done, had begged that he would not allow him to be unfavourably reviewed in the Empire newspaper. Mr. Hanson said that he had his duty to the public to do, but that Signor Cutolo, with his great talents, need not have any fear of criticism. Signor Cutolo then said that he had great difficulties to contend with, that he had given a great deal of offence by his proposal to have a public examination of his pupils, and that, in consequence, he had ceased to teach at Mr. Burton Bradley's and at Miss Cooksey's school. Mr. Hanson then asked him, "Who succeeded you at Miss Cooksey's?" To which Signor Cutolo answered, "Signor D'Apice." Mr. Hanson then asked if he was an Englishman, for his name did not sound English. Signor Cutolo answered, "Oh no! He is not an Englishman, but an Italian—a Jesuit, and a believer in the Pope; but his name is not D'Apice, but Sica." Mr. Hanson then said, "I suppose you are a Garibaldiite?" To which Signor Cutolo replied that he was. The same day an advertisement appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald, respecting Signor D'Apice, stating that his name was not D'Apice, but Sica, and that his wife and children had arrived in Melbourne.

With

With regard to that advertisement I heard from every one that Mrs. Heath was supposed to be the party concerned in the insertion of that advertisement. Mr. Hanson's partner had had some of the anonymous writings put before him, and on seeing some writing of Signor Cutolo, he at once declared that it was very similar to that of the anonymous letters. Being desirous of sifting the matter, I called on Mr. Fairfax, of the Herald, having requested an interview with him, thinking that by tracing out the one thing I might get a clue to these letters in my case. I asked him if he suspected anybody, and he told me that he had had no doubt whatever about the authorship of the Margaret Dodd's letters. He said that there was one thing that had strengthened his opinion as to who was the guilty party, and that was that a clergyman had called on him as a kind of apologist for this gentleman. He did not mention who the party was that he suspected, but I guessed it at once, for I happened to know that the Rev. George Morton had waited upon him, in order to remove any doubts he might have on his mind in regard to Signor Cutolo being the author of the advertisement. Thus Signor Cutolo being supposed to be guilty in the one case made me think it probable that he would be guilty in the other. Then after this followed Signor Cutolo's opinion of Signor D'Apice, published in the newspaper, in which he declared that Signor D'Apice was a personal friend of his own—a bosom friend; and I could not at all recognize the consistency or the proper feeling of a man who could one day say that a man was a Jesuit and a Papist, and the next declare him to be his most intimate friend. I could not reconcile the two statements, and that made me form a very strong opinion in regard to the guilt of Signor Cutolo. The thing that weighed chiefly with me in coming to this opinion was this—that a person who could call another, whom he acknowledged as his bosom friend, a Jesuit and a Papist, had in so doing laid aside all the feelings of a man of honor and a gentleman; and I at once thought that if Signor Cutolo was capable of doing this, he would also be capable of writing such letters as had been circulated respecting Mrs. Bentley. These were my reasons for suspecting Signor Cutolo.

Mr. T. C.
Bentley.
17 Dec., 1862!

9173. What were your reasons for suspecting Mr. Montagu? I have not the slightest evidence on my own part against Mr. Montagu. All the evidence that I have against him has been brought to me by others. Mr. Hanson told me, in the first instance, that he was in his employ on the Empire newspaper, and that he turned him off for anonymous letter writing, and that he was a very likely man to have been employed by these parties as an amanuensis. I was then told that a bundle of his letters had been examined, and compared with the anonymous letters, and that Mr. Harrison had put them under the glasses for the purpose of comparison, and that he and Captain M'Lerie had no doubt about the writing being the same. The only thing that I saw myself suspicious about him was one day we saw him near one of the letter-receivers, and we thought that he had posted a letter; but we found out afterwards that he had not done so. Thus the only evidence that I myself have about Mr. Montagu is in his favour; whilst all the evidence against him has been brought me by others.

9174. Did Mr. Hanson give you any reason for suspecting him? Yes; he said he had been connected with the Empire, and that he had been turned off for anonymous letter writing. He told me also that he believed Mr. Montagu to be a man quite capable of doing any such mean thing as this. All I knew of him was from Mr. Hanson, for I did not even know at that time that there was such a man in existence as Mr. Montagu, if that is his name, for I am given to understand that his name is not Montagu.

9175. What is his name? Mr. Nathan.

9176. Did Mr. Hanson tell you that Montagu had written a fulsome letter about Signor Cutolo, and requested him to publish it in the Empire? I have a copy of one letter which Mr. Hanson handed to me, expressing a desire that I would shew it to Mr. Johnson. I made a copy of it, but I did not shew it; I did not think I was warranted in doing so. It is a fulsome production; that is the only word that can be applied to it.

9177. Did he say that that letter was written with the knowledge of Signor Cutolo? He did not say so, but then Mr. Montagu was advertised in the public newspapers as secretary for the concert in aid of the Lancashire Distress Fund; Signor Cutolo appointed him to that office, and it was therefore to be assumed that, as the notice had reference to that concert, it was written with his knowledge.

9178. By the Chairman: Did Mr. Hanson lead you to suppose that Signor Cutolo had any knowledge of this letter? He did, in this way: that he informed me that Signor Cutolo had previously requested that he should not be unfavourably reviewed.

9179. Since the publication of your letter of the 4th June, has Mrs. Bentley lost any of her pupils? Not one; nor am I aware that I have lost a single friend, except Mr. Aldis and Mr. Hanson.

9180. Did Inspector Harrison ever remain up alone with Mrs. Bentley after 12 o'clock at night? Never.

9181. How do you manage to be sure of that? Because, as my diary will shew, during the whole time that I was subjected to this excitement, I never went to sleep without first taking a heavy narcotic, and, in order that it might have its proper effect, I never took it until I was sure that I should not be disturbed. On this account I always waited for the street door to be locked, and for Mrs. Bentley to come up-stairs, before I took it. On several occasions when he has been late, I have knocked upon the floor over their heads, with the butt of my pistol, in order to let Mrs. Bentley know that it was time for him to go. His excuse for staying so late was that at 12 o'clock was the time when his men were relieved, and he stopped till that hour in order to see that his men were there and on the look out. It certainly never occurred to me that there was any impropriety in asking Mrs. Bentley to close and bolt the door after a police officer whom we had in the house for our protection.

9182. You placed the most implicit confidence in him? I did, in his truth and honesty, but

Mr. T. C.
Bentley.
17 Dec., 1862.

but not in his intellect. But I used him in the same way as we all do at times persons of whom we do not entertain the very highest opinion; because, as I thought, it is better to have a horse you can ride than one who will throw you. I have said that I did not think very highly of his intellect, for he was indebted to us for everything in the case, every suggestion came from us, but then I thought that as these people seemed to be at work now in earnest, he could not, if he watched well, fail to catch them. In order that he might stand to us, we were exceedingly polite to him, both I and Mrs. Bentley. I felt that now that the parties were taking the course they did, and were coming about the house, if Harrison was sincere in his professions to us he must catch them. That was the reason why I paid him so much attention, and why I endeavoured to make him feel his position as little as possible.

9183. Did you ever upon any occasion, when Inspector Harrison was sitting alone with Mrs. Bentley, come to the door to listen? I have never upon any occasion left my bed-room from the time I went into it, until the next morning.

9184. By Mr. Morris: Will you explain to the Committee how it happens that Mrs. Bentley so particularly remembers circumstances that occurred eleven years ago, when she appears to have by no means a good memory in regard to more recent matters? I can easily account for that. The matter was a remarkable one in one way, and has been recalled to her memory upon more than one occasion by me. The occasion to which she referred was a picnic, to which I had been invited, but it was postponed so that I did not come down to join the party. I was at that time paying my addresses to Mrs. Bentley's elder sister. Afterwards, when the picnic came off, Mrs. Bentley, who was then only a little girl, was going to be left at home, and as I saw that she was anxious to go I begged of her father to let her accompany me. He consented, and I took her with me; afterwards, seeing that she was alone with no companion of her own age, I took care of her and chatted with her, and tried to amuse her. How it was recalled to her memory so particularly was, that I saw her upon that one occasion only, and never again until I was engaged to her. I mention this fact about Mrs. Bentley's sister, because I see that Inspector Harrison mentions in his diary that he had learnt that I had previously made an offer to Mrs. Bentley's elder sister. Now I know where he got that piece of information; because he has said that Mrs. Bentley had told him that a lady had stopped her in the street and had said to her, "How do you like being married to your sister's cast-off lover?" I may add that it was five years before I made an offer to Mrs. Bentley, that I made the offer to her sister.

9185. Have you any means of shewing the Committee what kind of character you bore in England? I have a character that I have deposed to on oath in the depositions now before the Committee (No. 3.) But in addition I beg to hand in a character from Dr. Walshe, in which he speaks of me and my family in the highest terms, and states the nature of the disease under which I am labouring; he there states that I am in a galloping consumption, and that I owe my life only to the devotion of my wife. I hand in also a letter from Willis, Percival, and Co., the banking-house in Lombard-street, with whom I served my apprenticeship. They state that it is on account of my health only that I left them, and that during the time I was in business for myself I had maintained their respect (No. 4.) I also hand in a letter from Barber, Brothers, of Cowper's Court, Cornhill, (No. 5.) who knew me at the time when I was a sworn broker of the City of London. They state that they have been acquainted with me for some years, and have had many transactions with me in business, and believe me to be a man of high honour and respectability. I have further, a letter from the heads of the different departments of the Bank of England, who have known me from my childhood, in consequence of my father having been for nearly sixty years in their employment. In this (No. 6) they mention that I am personally known to them, and that they feel assured of my integrity and ability. And then this is a testimonial that I value more than all the others (No. 7.) It was handed to me by the Chairman of the Committee of the Australian Club, on the occasion of my resignation of secretary to that institution. I feel that the resolution agreed to by the Committee, and enclosed to me by the Chairman, gives me more credit than I deserve, but I can only say that though I may not have deserved it, I have at all events tried to do so. And here, with the permission of the Committee, I would make one or two observations; and first I would say, that it is very hard indeed that a man, who has tried to do his duty to the universe for the last fifteen years, should have his reputation ruined, and the character he has so long maintained, blasted and blown to the winds, and his wife's character drawn from its privacy, and paraded before the public—and by whom? By a man like this Harrison, and by this Montagu! And I would further say that my servants were, though they have, upon their own confession, acted improperly, and become spies in my house, have been obliged to bear testimony to the high character of Mrs. Bentley as a wife and a mother.

9186. Do you know anything of a Mr. Curran, a clergyman of the parish in which Mrs. Bentley's father resided? Yes. I do recollect his name being referred to. At the time you came to make inquiries upon the subject, I endeavoured to get some information from her on that point. She told me that he was one of the persons who had received an anonymous letter.

9187. By Mr. W. Forster: When Inspector Harrison sat up to watch in your house, he always went away at 12 o'clock? Yes.

9188. Have you any circumstances to bring before the Committee in confirmation of that statement? Yes. I have already mentioned the circumstance of my taking the narcotic, without which I could not sleep, and that I always waited for Mrs. Bentley to come up-stairs before I took it.

9189. You were in the habit of going to bed at an early hour? I was not in the habit of doing so, for I used frequently to sit up till 1 o'clock. It was only afterwards, when I suffered suffered from the excitement caused by these events that I went earlier to bed. During the whole month of April I sat up till late.

9189. Then, as I understand you, you say that you were not in the habit of going to bed early, but that during the fortnight subsequent to the month of April, you did so, and that on those occasions you left Mrs. Bentley sitting up with Inspector Harrison? Yes, I do.

9190. How long after you retired was it that your servants went to bed? Sometimes they went to bed at half-past 10, and from that to 12.

9191. Never later? No.

9192. You have two servants? Yes.

9193. Did they sleep in the same room? No; one used to sleep in the room next to that in which Inspector Harrison sat up watching, and the other in the nursery—the room next to mine.

9194. Then if you went to bed you could not say whether they sat up or not? I always knew when the nursemaid went to bed, because, as she slept in the room next to mine, I could always see her light when she came to bed.

9195. Where used the servant girls to sit before they went to bed? Either in the kitchen, or in the room next to the drawing-room in which Inspector Harrison was watching.

9196. Next to that in which Mrs. Bentley was sitting with Inspector Harrison? Yes.

9197. Were you always awake when Mrs. Bentley came to bed? Yes, always. I never went to sleep without a large dose of narcotic, and as I did not like to be disturbed after taking it, I used to wait for Harrison's going away before I took it.

9198. On these occasions you always heard the door shut after him as he left? Yes.

9199. And Mrs. Bentley used to let him out? When he went away he used to go down by himself and take the lamp down and let himself out; and then Mrs. Bentley used to go and lock and fasten the door after him.

9200. You could scarcely be aware of all this, seeing that you had gone to bed? I was aware of it, because Mrs. Bentley told me that she always went down and fastened the door after she had heard it slammed to by Inspector Harrison.

9201. By Mr. Morris: For a long time after the period mentioned in his diary when he says he first began to suspect you, did not Inspector Harrison keep up an appearance in your presence of believing that Cutolo and Montagu were the authors of these letters? Yes; to the very last. When he came on the 23rd June—the last day in which he was connected with us in the matter—he was speaking to me of the rumours that were prevailing out of doors, or rather I referred to them in the course of conversation with some indignation—I mean the remarks in reference to Mrs. Bentley being a monomaniac. I said to him at the time that the thing was too absurd to be for a moment entertained, because, if Mrs. Bentley had had anything to do with the matter, I must have been an accomplice. There could not be two opinions about that.

9202. Did Harrison then admit that he suspected you of being an accomplice? No, on the contrary. He stated that he did not believe that I had anything to do with it, but that prejudiced minds would not hold the same opinions. I then said to him, "How do you think that it would be possible for Mrs. Bentley to have gone down into the garden and dirtied her boots in order to come upon the verandah and leave the tracks we found there, without my knowledge?" He answered me, that it was just possible that such a thing could occur, though he admitted that was a difficulty. Then I said, "But how about the concert? How could these men be seen by so many persons?" He replied, that these parties might have been mistaken, and that they had been deceived by appearances, or by the gesticulations made by some person without any meaning. When he said this I began to get warm, though I never for a moment believed that he was stating his own views. I thought he was merely arguing for arguing sake, in order to find out how I would meet the objections that had been raised.

9203. He always expressed the opinion that it was Signor Cutolo and Mr. Montagu? I never heard him say anything else. In fact it was he who told me that people out of doors all said that it was Cutolo. The remark he made was this, "They all say that it is Cutolo, and you may depend upon it that I have taken no trouble to remove that impression."

9204. By Mr. W. Forster: At the time Mr. Boulanger gave information to the police about his being robbed on the Racecourse, did he give you a description of the man? I must tell you how this occurred. When Mr. Boulanger first arrived in Sydney from Melbourne, he said that he was in a very unpleasant position, for that Mrs. Boulanger had not a lady friend in the city. He was aware that we had several persons to dine with us, and he asked us whether we would do him the favour of inviting Mrs. Boulanger to dinner at the same time, in order to give her an introduction. Wishing to do him a service, we did ask her, and both he and Mrs. Boulanger dined with us on that occasion. On that night—it was a Thursday night—he took me aside, and said, "I want to speak to you." I asked him what it was, and he said, "I was stopped on the Racecourse last night by a man, but on my drawing my revolver, and presenting it at him, he ran off." He said that he did not like to tell Harrison the story, because he would only laugh at him, and say that nothing of the kind had occurred, and that he had only been needlessly frightened by some drunken man. This information he conveyed to me in a whisper. I have stated in my deposition that Mr. Boulanger described the man, but I did not swear that he did so that night, or even the next day. The fact was that he did not describe the man on that occasion at all; the conversation occurred in a hurried whisper, and was confined to what I have now stated. It was on a subsequent occasion, after the attack upon Mrs. Bentley at Mr. Josephson's gate, that he described the man, and it was done in this way: When Mrs. Bentley spoke of the man who had assaulted her, he said, "Do you think he was as tall or as broad-shouldered as the

Mr. T. C.
Bentley.

- man who attacked me?" describing the man. When Mr. Boulanger heard Mrs. Bentley's description of the man who had met her, he stated that the man who had stopped him was a tall broad-shouldered man.
9205. Then you are sure that Mr. Boulanger did not specially describe the person who had stopped him, until after he had heard Mrs. Bentley describe the man who had assaulted her? He did not.
9206. Did you hear Mr. Boulanger give different accounts of this meeting upon different occasions? Yes. He came in on the night when Mrs. Bentley was assaulted, and then it was that he described the man, and compared him with the person who had assaulted Mrs. Bentley.
9207. Did you hear him, upon several occasions, give an account of his having been stopped? No, not after the night when Mrs. Bentley was assaulted.
9208. But there were two occasions upon which he described the transaction? Yes.
9209. Did the accounts given upon the two occasions correspond with each other? When he detailed the circumstances on the first occasion, he simply told me that he had been followed by a man, and that when he turned round and presented his revolver the man ran away.
9210. And that was all? Yes; except that he asked me to see Mr. Harrison about it.
9211. He gave an account of this attack upon him to the police? Yes, I believe so.
9212. That account was published in the newspapers? Yes; he told me that the account had appeared in the papers.
9213. Did the account he gave you correspond with that which he gave to the police? I only know from what he told me; I did not see the account in the papers.
9214. You had no impression at the time that he was telling an untruth? I had not, nor have I now.
9215. You do not now believe that he told you what was false? No.
9216. And why? I believe this: Mr. Boulanger was under great pecuniary obligations to me, and in order that I might not bring him before this Committee, so that he might have me in his power, and that I might not press my claim against him, he has trumped up this story about his having deceived us respecting his being stopped on the Racecourse. I firmly believe that he has done it solely with a view to avoid his pecuniary obligations.
9217. Then you say that you do not believe Mr. Boulanger's present statement, about his original story of being stopped, to be a fiction? I do not believe it.
9218. Nor that it was an invented story? No.
9219. Have you any reason, from a comparison of the circumstances detailed with the statements made, to believe the one story rather than the other? I have reason to believe that all that he has stated to me subsequent to the Racecourse stoppage was a concoction of his own: such as the report he gave that he had seen the man making signs at the concert, and his leading me to believe that he was of the same opinion as myself in regard to who the parties were who were carrying on this persecution.
9220. How long have you known Mr. Boulanger? The first time that I met with him was in January last.
9221. Have you ever found him out in telling untruths at any time? I never have done so whilst he was my guest.
9222. Would you then have so regarded his veracity that you would have believed anything he told you? I had no reason for disbelieving him. Had I had the slightest doubt of his truth he would not have been a guest in my house after it.
9223. He was under obligations to you? Yes; and, as I consider, under very great obligations.
9224. Pecuniary obligations? Yes.
9225. Had Mr. Hanson been an intimate friend of yours prior to this? I knew him almost as soon as I landed in the Colony. He was introduced to me by the captain of the vessel in which I came to the Colony. We continued on terms of intimacy, but the period of our greatest friendship was at the time when these anonymous letters were being sent, or rather, I should say, that it began at the time when Mrs. Bentley played first in public.
9226. Then you regarded him in the light of a friend rather than in that of an acquaintance? Yes; I believed, up to the very day on which the article in the Empire appeared, reflecting upon us, and insinuating that we were the authors of these letters, that he had the same friendship for me that I had for him; for though I disagreed with him upon some points in connection with the politics of his paper, yet in most matters we agreed very closely in opinion, and I entertained a strong feeling of friendship for him.
9227. Was he not for a long time a believer in the theory that Signor Cutolo and Mr. Montagu were the authors of these letters? I never heard him express any other opinion up to the very day when the article appeared in his paper. I never had the slightest reason to believe that he entertained even the most distant suspicion of myself, or of Mrs. Bentley; and the most powerful proof I can give of this is that Mrs. Bentley was expecting Mrs. Hanson's daughter to come and take her music lesson on the very morning when this article appeared in his paper.
9228. When did he first express himself to be of a different opinion? I first knew of it on the 18th July; when his paper with this article in it was handed to me.
9229. You never had any differences with him—no differences of opinion arose between you? No, certainly not.
9230. Then before that article appeared in his paper he did not express to you privately his suspicion of Mrs. Bentley? Not in the most remote way.
9231. He still suffered you to go on in the belief that he was a friend of yours, until that morning? Most decidedly so.

9232. Used Mr. Hanson to come to your house at late hours of the evening during the time he was visiting you? He has looked in at 9 or 10 o'clock at night, on his way to the office from home. He used to have his supper at home before he went the office at night; but he has never been in my house later than 11 o'clock most certainly.

Mr. T. C.
Bentley.

17 Dec., 1862.

9233. You have, of course, heard of this letter which Inspector Harrison says he received from Mrs. Bentley? Yes.

9234. What is your opinion of it with respect to the handwriting? My opinion of it is, that when I saw it I thought it a most excellent copy of her handwriting.

9235. You acknowledge it to be a good imitation of her handwriting? Most decidedly. If I may be allowed to say so, if it had been shewn to me I should have pronounced it to be an excellent copy of her writing. I should not have had the slightest hesitation in saying so; in fact, so good is it, that I should have taken it to be hers, but for the circumstances attending it.

9236. Are you an expert in handwriting—a good judge of it? I am not. But there is this about the letter that throws a doubt upon my mind, and that is, that Mrs. Bentley does not write so evenly as this letter is written. It appears to me to have been written upon ruled lines, and Mrs. Bentley does not write so straight. On looking at it, however, I should hesitate, and would rather feel inclined to say that I do not know from the writing itself that it is not in her handwriting.

9237. But of course you have no hesitation in saying that it has not been written by her? I am sure of it.

9238. That it has not been? Certainly.

9239. Have you any suspicion as to who has written it? What are suspicions —

9240. You have formed an opinion as to who were the authors of these anonymous letters—those written in the different handwriting? I have formed an opinion, but it has been formed only on the opinions of others. I do not pretend to any great knowledge on the subject, but I have the opinion of the banker who examined and compared these letters with the handwriting of the persons suspected; and that of Captain M'Levie and Mr. Harrison, who examined them with magnifying glasses. I have never formed an opinion myself because I am no judge of handwriting, and do not pretend to be so. On the contrary, so far from holding the same opinion, I, on one or two occasions, expressed an opinion that it was not Mr. Montagu's.

9241. Did you observe in this letter the word "judgement" spelt in a way in which it is not ordinarily spelt now? I do not know. I suppose there are very few persons who know whether it is rightly spelt or not.

9242. I thought, from your knowledge of Mrs. Bentley's style, you would know if she was in the habit of spelling the word "judgment" in that particular way? I really cannot say.

9243. Is Mrs. Bentley, when writing to any one, in the habit of signing herself "Lily" Bentley? If she was writing to me she would do so.

9244. But when writing to any one else would she do so? No, she would not, even though she was writing to her own father or sister. She always signs herself Julia Bentley, and I have never seen a letter signed in any other way, except those written to myself.

9245. And she never signs a letter in any other way? No, not even to her father or sister.

9246. With regard to the wound inflicted upon Mrs. Bentley at the time she was assaulted, did you see that wound yourself? Yes.

9247. Did you examine it closely? I did, as much as my excited feelings would permit me to do.

9248. Did you see Mrs. Bentley immediately on her arrival in the house, after the assault? Within half-an-hour or three quarters of an hour afterwards.

9249. When you first saw her, what did she say about the wound? When I came in at 4 o'clock, the servant informed me that her mistress had come home, and that she was very unwell. I went in directly, and found her in a very agitated state in the dining-room, and she said, "This is Harrison's watching. I have been waylaid at Josephson's gate."

9250. Did Mrs. Bentley then, at that time, lead you to believe that she had received a wound? She only complained that she had been hurt, but from the manner in which she spoke, I understood that she had been hurt only by the violence of a heavy man's hand coming against her.

9251. Did you hear her complain during the day that she was suffering pain? That evening she did; she said then that she thought she was hurt.

9252. When, at what time, did you first see this wound? When we went up to our room; whilst she was undressing, on her dress. I saw it before she did herself, during the time she was undressing. I said, "Good God, Lily, what is that?—that wretch must have wounded you." I then saw that her breast was bleeding, and I at once called for the servants, saying, "That wretch has hurt your mistress." The way in which I should describe the wound is this: that it appeared to me as if the person who had assaulted her had been a tall man, and that his hand had gone down in that direction, and having a ring upon it, that had cut her breast. The base of the nipple seemed to me to have been torn, for there was a kind of watery matter formed under the wound.

9253. And there was blood on her dress? Not on her dress, but on her chemise.

9254. By Mr. Wilson: You examined the wound yourself? Yes, I did.

9255. Of what character was it—a large or a deep wound? It was rather a long than a deep wound.

9256. Of what length was it? I think I could better describe it by saying, that it seemed to me that a ring had cut the nipple and torn it. It looked a jagged wound with two pieces of skin hanging from it.

9257. Had it penetrated into the flesh or was it only a skin wound? It was a flesh wound

9258.

Mr. T. C.
Bentley.

17 Dec., 1862.

9258. And it had the appearance of having been cut by a person's hand coming down in that direction? Yes, but it was not a downward cut. I thought at first that perhaps it was the stays that had been forced against it and wounded it, but afterwards it occurred to me that it was a ring, because the man told her to tell Harrison that he wore a ring with a cornelian anchor on it. It struck me then that it might be a signet ring in relief, and that the projecting points of it had caught the nipple and wounded it.

9259. Was it on the upper or on the under part of the nipple? It was almost on the upper part, rather inclining to the side of the nipple.

9260. You dressed the wound, I suppose? Yes, when she was nursing our little girl she had bad breasts with suckling, and I was afraid that they might be made bad again, so I immediately ordered the servants to bring up a poultice, which I applied to the wound.

9261. At the time she was nursing her last child did she ever have chapped nipples from suckling? I cannot recollect.

9262. Are you sure that there was no wound there before of any kind? I cannot say that a previous wound did not exist; but I am quite certain that it was a fresh wound that I saw.

9263. You did not consult any medical man upon it? No; I saw Dr. Brereton on the Monday following, and mentioned the circumstance to him. He said, "You had better let me see it," and I answered "No, it is getting better; and you know what a timid creature she is." I may mention, that I said this because she had several times most positively refused to let Dr. Brereton see her with reference to other matters. In fact, she was always very loth that I should send for Dr. Brereton; and whenever he was sent for to attend her it was always without her knowledge. Dr. Brereton then added, "Do you not think that, by way of evidence, it would be better to let me see the wound?" I said I thought it was not necessary, and I understood from him that he intended to make a memorandum of the circumstance. I thanked him for what he had said, and for the interest he seemed to take in us, and when I went home I told Mrs. Bentley that it would be better that she should let Dr. Brereton look at the wound, for that should we want evidence as to the assault he would supply it. She said, "What do we want with evidence? Can there be any doubt as to the assault having taken place?"

9264. Then, as I understand you, you found the wound healing so rapidly that you did not think it necessary to consult a medical man? On the following morning I thought the place looked rather angry, but afterwards it seemed to have a more healthy appearance, and on the following Monday was so far better that it hardly seemed necessary to have medical advice. I should probably have had that advice, merely to silence objections, but that events followed so rapidly on each other as to prevent me.

9265. Were the servant women present when the wound was dressed? Mrs. Bentley put the first poultice on herself, and that was the only one applied.

9266. By Mr. Morris: Have you ever mentioned, in the course of your evidence, your having seen a man coming out of your house at an unusual hour? No, I never knew that such was the case.

9267. By Mr. Forster: Had you reason to suppose that persons were on your premises without your knowledge? Certainly, I knew that by the noises overhead; and besides that I was certain that no person could have stated the fact that Mrs. Bentley had sat down on the stairs upon one occasion, and that she had gone into the nursery upon another, without having been in the house at the time.

9268. You found your street door open upon one occasion? Yes, but that was before the entries were made into the house.

9269. Did it not strike you as an extraordinary thing that your street door should have been open? No. I merely thought that it was a piece of carelessness on the part of the servants.

9270. You recollect the morning after Easter Monday, or rather the night after? I do.

9271. Do you recollect anything occurring on that night—any out-of-the-way noise? No, not any; but on the day after Easter Tuesday Mr. Harrison went up into the loft, and said he would make an examination there. After he had done so he came to me and said he did not know what to think, but that there were footmarks on the plank leading to the window in the roof.

9272. That was after the letter had come? Yes. I told him that the footmarks he had seen on the plank might have been made by me, because I had gone to the window to see to the fastenings.

9273. Did Mrs. Bentley ever mention to you her meeting a priest at Newtown, or her going to Newtown in company with a priest? I cannot answer that question in a direct manner, because I have heard so much at this table about meeting with priests, that I get confused over it, and cannot well distinguish between what I have heard from her, and what I have heard here; but I know that I used to ask her always when she came home whether she had met with any annoyance; and upon one occasion I recollect her telling me that a clergyman was in the same omnibus with her. She used always to tell me who was in the omnibus with her, going or coming, and whom she had met; and she may have told me that on one occasion she had met a priest, but I do not remember.

9274. You have no recollection of anything of the kind? I have no distinct recollection of it.

9275. If she had met one, or had been handed out of the omnibus by one, would she, in your opinion, have told you? Yes. I believe she would, because she always used to tell me of those who went up and down with her.

9276. Then if she had met and conversed with a priest she would have told you? Yes, I am sure she would; because there never have been any secrets between her and myself.

9277. You have heard the stories of these girls, about the conversations they have had with Mrs. Bentley? Yes; and I believe them to be entire fabrications. Mr. T. C. Bentley.
9278. Had you ever reason to suspect them of being liars? No, and for this reason I gave them every opportunity for attending the services of their religion. I thought that the best guarantee I could have for their honesty and fidelity was to see that they carried out properly the religion they professed, let that religion be what it might. They appeared to me to be very regular in their going to church, and on that account I looked upon them as being quite trustworthy. 17 Dec., 1862.
9279. You had no reason before this to suspect their veracity? I have never had a dozen words with them since they have been in my house, beyond saying "good morning" or "good evening."
9280. They were well behaved girls? Yes.
9281. You have parted with them since? I retained them in my service until I thought the Committee had done with them.
9282. On account of the evidence they were required to give? Yes, on account of that evidence, although I believed it to be false.
9283. Was it at their own wish that you parted with them? No, entirely on our own account. We felt that we could not keep them any longer; only out of respect to the Committee we did not discharge them until the Committee required no further evidence from them. One of them, certainly, spoke to Mrs. Bentley, and said she supposed she would have to go after what had occurred before the Committee; but her dismissal came entirely from ourselves, without any reference whatever to them.
9284. They were never attended by a clergyman in your house? Not to my knowledge.
9285. By Mr. Morris: Could you produce any letter that has been written by Mrs. Bentley to you or to others, about the time that these anonymous letters were passing? I could not, because when Mr. Boulanger told me that he had had his drawer at the Café broken open, and all his private papers taken away, I began to think that it was time to throw aside all hesitation. Seeing that our house had actually been entered, and that we were at the mercy of our unknown persecutors, I did not wish to see my private letters going about Sydney, particularly as there were some I would not wish to be made public. I therefore destroyed all my private letters, although there were some on which I set great value, and I told Mrs. Bentley to do the same, since if they were left they might fall into the hands of these unknown parties, and be made a bad use of.
9286. Do you not know any person to whom Mrs. Bentley has written since then? No; but I have given you one letter of her's written since then.
9287. Can you give us any other specimen of her writing? I will endeavour to procure one.

Signor Cæsare Cutolo called in and examined:—

9288. By the Chairman: Are you aware of the object of the inquiry by this Committee? Yes. Signor C. Cutolo.
9289. You have expressed a wish to give evidence before this Committee? I have. 17 Dec., 1862.
9290. What is the nature of the evidence that you wish to give before this Committee? It is about Mrs. Bentley, where she says in her deposition that she saw me on the 6th January, in George-street. I beg to say that that is really impossible. That I was in George-street on that day is impossible. I was in my room, and she could not see me in George-street.
9291. How is it impossible? Because I fell at Penrith, and I hurt my hand, and my arm, and my leg, and when I came back to Sydney I kept a cold bandage, with cold water and arica on it, until the 6th January, when it was much inflamed and was gathering. The 6th of January was the worst day for the wound. My leg was all swelled, and the wounds were all open and discharging very angry.
9292. Were you out on that day? Not at all; I could not be. I could not move my leg, and I called for Dr. Nathan, and he prescribed for me.
9293. Did you go to him? If I could not move how could I go to him? I sent for him, and he came and prescribed for me this prescription, which I put before the Committee, with my chemist's account for the medicine.
9294. And are these the evidences you would wish to give of your sickness and incapacity to move out on that day? That is the bill of the chemist who made me the prescription, and this is the prescription of Dr. Nathan, which I put to my leg.
9295. So that you say you were not out at all on that day? No.
9296. You were not at Mrs. Heath's on that day? Not at all on that day.
9297. Did you not go to Mrs. Heath's in a cab? Not that day. I have gone there to the end of the week, when I got better. I may have gone so soon as I could, but I do not recollect when. I did not go on the 6th January, when she says she saw me—that was impossible.
9298. When was the first day you were out after the 6th? I do not recollect; but it could not have been the next day.
9299. Where were you injured? At Penrith; before Captain Severn and Mr. Hellyer.
9300. On what date? On the 2nd January. I was much shaken, and hurt on my arm and my leg, and by that I was too late for the train. When I found that the train was gone I was suffering so much that I took an express carriage to come to town.
9301. You did not come down by the train? No.
9302. You took an express train? Me, an express train! No, I had an express carriage, with horses.
9303. Not by rail? No.

Signor
C. Cutulo.
17 Dec., 1862.

9304. And were you out on the day afterwards? I think not.

9305. Were you confined to your room from the 2nd January to the 6th? I do not know that I was confined from the 2nd to the 6th, but I believe that perhaps I was able to go out in the evenings in a cab. But not on the 6th, which was my worst day, and I was so bad as to send for the doctor.

9306. Why do you particularly refer to the 6th? Because the question is of the 6th. In her deposition, Mrs. Bentley says, that she saw me in George-street on the 6th, and I saw that that was impossible, because I was in my room and could not move.

9307. What deposition? That where Madam Bentley swears, on oath, that he saw me in George-street on the 6th.

9308. Where does she say that? In her affidavit, which she swears about these proceedings.

9309. How do you know that she has done so? Mr. Hellyer shewed me where she said so.

9310. Do you see anything in it referring to the 6th January? Yes. I saw that it was there that she saw me on the 6th January, and I say that it was impossible.

9311. Will you refer to the document, and tell the Committee if you see it now? Yes. It is on the ninth page and the sixty-third paragraph. She says there that she saw me, and that I looked angry, when I say it is impossible I could be there.

9312. I wish to know how it happens that if you were ill on the 2nd, to such an extent that you were not able to go into the street, it was only on the 6th that you called in a medical man to attend you? I had a medical man before that, from the first. Dr. Nathan came and saw me, and he directed me to keep on bathing the wounds with cold water and arica. He told me I was doing well, and I was to keep on at that.

9313. How came it then that on this particular day, the 6th, he gave you a prescription? Because I was worse. My leg was very much inflamed and was beginning to gather, and for that reason it was necessary to prescribe for me.

9314. Did he ever give you any other prescription? No.

9315. Had you seen a medical man before that? Yes, I say that Dr. Nathan attended me.

9316. The first time he visited you did he prescribe for you? I do not recollect, but I think I had the first time.

9317. Had you any medicine before the 6th—any linament or lotion to apply to your arm before the 6th? No; all I applied was the cold water and the arica.

9318. Did you have a prescription for it? No.

9319. Where did you get the arica? I have always some by me at home.

9320. When did you first see Dr. Nathan? The next day after I was hurt. It was on the 3rd or 4th January. I may not have sent for him the first day.

9321. Did he not prescribe for you? No, he said I was to keep it cool with cold water bandages. He said, when he saw my leg and arm, that they would do nicely, and I was to keep them so.

9322. Have you any further evidence to shew that you were not out on that day? I have here a letter from Mr. Egan, in which he states that he called upon me on that day, and saw that I was not in a fit state to move. (Letter read by witness.)

9323. By Mr. Morris: It is a copy of Dr. Nathan's prescription that you have produced? Yes.

9324. Could you not procure the original prescription? I will tell you. I went to the chemist's, and I asked him to see who it was that prescribed for me on the 6th January; and he opened his book and said it was Dr. Nathan, and then he made me this copy of the prescription from his book.

9325. By the Chairman: Who is Mr. Egan? He is clerk in a solicitor's office—in the office of Messrs. Dunsmore and Stafford.

9326. Have you anything further to state to the Committee? I heard also that Mrs. Bentley had said that she saw me one day in Hunter-street, and that I spoke to her. I did see her there just after she had played at the Philharmonic Society's concert, and I congratulated her at her success, in the same way that one person would do to another that he was acquainted with. I just said to her, "I congratulate you at your great success, Mrs. Bentley,"—just the same as I would say to any other person that I knew.

9327. Then you did not make the remark imputed to you by Mrs. Bentley, about "the English for the English"? No, I could not say such a thing. I much respect the English. I am all for the English myself. I have married an English lady, and that is a proof that I think much of the English. I am pleased with Melbourne; I am pleased with Sydney; I am pleased with all the Colonies. I have nothing to complain of in respect to them, for everywhere I have been received with kindness and consideration. I have always held a good position at Government House. I have taught in the family of Sir William Denison, the late Governor General, and also I am teaching Miss Dalton, at Government House; and from all the persons I have been made acquainted with I have received much kindness. I am treated most kindly by everybody, and I have nothing whatever to complain of in the English. I could not say such a thing as she imputes to me.

9328. You are sure then that you did not make the statement that Mrs. Bentley has alleged, of "the English for the English"? I am quite sure. I simply congratulated her at her great success.

9329. Can you tell the Committee whether you were out in George-street between the 2nd and the 6th January? I think I was out, but not in George-street.

9330. Were you walking out between the 2nd and the 6th, in Sydney? I think not. Perhaps I may have been out in a cab in the evening, after my business, to visit a lady who is now my wife.

9331. Between the 2nd and the 6th? Yes, it may be.

9332. But though you may have been out, you state positively that you were not in George-street? I do, most positively.

9333. Have you any particular reason for singling out George-street as a street that you would not be likely to be in? It is because I have no business in George-street. My business makes my time the property of others, and I have to go only where my business calls me to attend my engagements. Signor
C. Cutolo.
9334. Does this receipt for the payment of your medical account or this prescription for medicine prove that you were not in George-street on that particular day? There is that, and there is also the letter I have read from Mr. Egan, who says that he saw me unable to go out. 17 Dec., 1862.
9335. Even with that, do they in your opinion prove that you were not in George-street? That is your business, and not mine.
9336. Could you, by any possibility, have been out on the 6th? I say it was impossible—quite impossible.
9337. But how did it happen that you were hurt on the 2nd—that you were out between the 2nd and the 6th—and only confined to your house on the 6th? Because it was then that the inflammation reached its height, and I was not able to move about. It is also so when you fall and hurt yourself. You walk away, and you can walk about; but afterwards, when the inflammation sets in, it is different.
9338. Then you put these letters in as proof positive that you were not there? Yes, not only as proof positive that I was not there, but as proof that it was impossible I could be there.
9339. By Mr. Wilson: You say in your evidence that you were not out on the 6th, and you put in these documents to strengthen your assertion? Yes, exactly.
9340. By Mr. Morris: Who went for the prescription? I did.
9341. At the time it was written? Yes. My servants of my home went for it.
9342. Are you not aware that Heath's chemist's shop is in George-street? Yes.
9343. And you say you visited Mrs. Heath? She did not live in George-street.
9344. Who do you say went for the medicine? The servant of where I was living.
9345. Do you know a person named D'Apice? I do.
9346. Are you aware that he also received some anonymous letters? No. He did not receive any letters; but I know that something was in the newspaper stating that his wife and two children had arrived in Melbourne.
9347. Have you anything farther to add? No. I can only say that when I arrived in the Colony, I went in a carriage to see the Signor D'Apice. I went down to Mr. Macnab's, knowing that he was often there. I was told that he was going to be married to Miss White, and I went there to ask where he was.
9348. By Mr. Bentley: Was your name ever mentioned in connection with the anonymous letters received by D'Apice? I did not know that he had received any.
9349. Did you not make inquiries of the police in respect to those letters? It was about the advertisement. I was told that I might learn something respecting it by applying to the police. I was told also that Miss White had had some love passages with a gentleman a year or two before that, and that the gentleman was not pleased at having the lady taken away from him by D'Apice, and had put that advertisement into the newspaper to annoy both D'Apice and the lady.
9350. Did you go to the detective police of this city, in regard to some connection you were supposed to have with these anonymous letters that had been received by D'Apice? No; it was about this advertisement, because they told me that perhaps the police might put me in the way of finding the matter out. Perhaps it may have been the gentleman who was Miss White's lover, and perhaps it may have been D'Apice's present brother-in-law, who did not like to see his sister married to D'Apice; and I went to the police because I hoped to receive some information about it from them.
9351. You did not then go to Inspector Harrison and ask him to take steps to exonerate you in regard to anonymous letters written to Signor D'Apice? No, not at all; I went to him to request to know from him if he had discovered who had written the advertisement for the paper—whether it was the ex-lover, or whether it was the brother of the lady. That was all; if it was more I do not recollect.
9352. Then, if Inspector Harrison has stated that you went to his office for the purpose of exculpating yourself in respect to these anonymous letters of Signor D'Apice, it is not correct? I did go to him; I went to him to inquire if he knew about the advertisement, if he knew whether it was the lover of the lady or Signor D'Apice's brother-in-law who caused its insertion.
9353. Do you know Mr. Hanson? Yes, very well.
9354. Did you ever have a conversation with him relative to D'Apice? I did.
9355. What was its nature? It was this: I was introduced to Mr. Hanson on my arrival in the Colony, and he had always been a kind friend of mine as I thought; it was a long time since I had seen him, and one day I went to put an advertisement into the paper to say that I should not give lessons on the following day, being the Anniversary of the Colony; he met me at the door of his office, and, as usual, said "Good day," and "How do you do?" After these compliments he asked me, "What news?" I told him that I was to receive a new pianoforte from England, and that I had an idea to give a concert for the Destitute Children's Asylum. I told him also that I was very much pleased with Sydney, and that I was going to get married shortly. With talking, at last I said to him that I had met in this Colony with an old friend of mine—the Signor D'Apice. He asked, "D'Apice! Who is he?" I told him that D'Apice and I had been at college together, and that in 1849 he had left it and gone to Paris, and that we had now met here after that long time of not having seen each other; but I said, when he was in college with me, for private reasons, he was in the name of his mother—that was in her maiden name, which was Sica.

Signor
C. Cutolo.
17 Dec., 1862.

Sica. When he was in Paris he was in the profession as an artist, but afterwards he received some money from his family, and then he went into another branch of business, and took his real name, which was D'Apice—that was the name of his father; but in order that the people might know who was meant, he put Sica after his name, and called himself D'Apice Sica. 9356. Using both names? Yes. When I came to Sydney and I met D'Apice, I said to myself, "It seems to me that that is Sica;" and I then asked him if he was an Italian, for he speaks French very well from his having been so long in France, and all our conversation had been carried on in French. I then asked him where he was from, and he said, "From Naples." I asked him if he had not been a student at the college at Naples, and he said he had. I then asked him if he had known the brother Borromeo, and when he said yes I asked him if he had known Sica there. He then said to me, "Did you know him?" and I told him I did; and he asked me, "Should you know him again if you saw him?" and he added, "Look at me, am I anything like Sica?" I then found out that it was he, and I asked him what was the reason that I found him now in the name of D'Apice, when I had known him in Naples, at college, as Sica. He explained to me that, for family reasons, he had taken his mother's name of Sica, whilst he was at college, and that afterwards he had resumed his proper family name. All this I told to Mr. Hanson.

9357. Did you say to Mr. Hanson—"His name is not D'Apice, his name is Sica—he is a Jesuit—he is not a man of talent—he is a believer in the Pope!"—did you say anything of this kind to Mr. Hanson? I did not say he was not a man of talent. I praised him because he was my friend, but the only thing I said about him was that we did not agree in political affairs. I said that I loved my country, and that I would like to see it united under one government, and that I wished the Pope not to be king. I said we did not agree about that, because he desires the Pope to be king, and I do not.

9358. Did you say that you were a Garibaldite? I may have done so. I may have said in joke, "I am a Garibaldite." He may have said, I suppose you are for Garibaldi, and I may have answered that I was perfectly of that opinion.

9359. And did D'Apice believe in Garibaldi? That was nothing to divide us. We did talk several times about it; but it did not make us quarrel.

9360. Was there anything said in this conversation about a school at which D'Apice had gone to teach, and in which he had succeeded you? I must tell you about that. I gave an examination of my scholars, at which I requested Lady Manning, and —

9361. What I wish to know is, whether this conversation related to a school in which Signor D'Apice had succeeded you? No.

9362. Did you tell Mr. Hanson anything relative to Signor D'Apice having succeeded you at a school? Perhaps I may have told him that D'Apice had gone to teach at a school; I will not say.

9363. Was the conversation such as is here detailed:—"He," meaning you, "came in and "shook me by the hand, and said he must thank me for the very kind manner in which I "had spoken of him to Mr. Montagu, and after some further conversation begged that I "would not allow him to be unfavourably reviewed. I said that we had 'a stern duty to "perform towards the public; but I should not think, with his talents, that he had much to "fear.' He said, 'Oh, but I have so much to contend against; I have given so much "offence by my public examination of my pupils, and the consequence is that I have "ceased to teach at the Miss Cooksey's school, also in Mr. Bradley's family.' I said, "Oh, by-the-by, who succeeded you at the Miss Cooksey's?" He said, 'D'Apice.' I, not "knowing how the name was spelled, said, 'Who is he—is he an Englishman?' He "replied, 'Oh, no; an Italian—a man of no talent—a Jesuit; a believer in the Pope; "but his name is not D'Apice, his name is Sica.' I replied, 'Oh, I suppose you are a "Garibaldite?' He said, 'Oh yes, oh yes, I'm a Garibaldite.'" Did a conversation of this kind occur between you and Mr. Hanson? Some of it, but not all.

9364. Some of these questions you were not asked? No, not at all.

9365. Did he ask you how D'Apice spelled his name? No.

9366. Did he ask you if D'Apice was an Englishman? No.

9367. Nor did you reply that he was an Italian—a Jesuit—a man of no talent—and a believer in the Pope? No; all that is perfectly untrue. All I told him was that D'Apice was in the name of Sica at college for family reasons, and that I was surprised to find him here as D'Apice.

9368. Did you see the letters, purporting to come from Margaret Dodd? I did, when they were with the police.

9369. Had you seen them previously? No. I went to inquire at the Herald Office, and I saw a tall man, and I requested to know from him who had inserted that thing in his paper; and he told me he did not know. I then said to him, "How is it that you do not know?" "If a person comes to-morrow, and puts in the paper something injurious to me or to "anybody, he may do so, and you will have no security; you will know nothing." And the tall man said, "No, we shall not." He then introduced me to another man not so tall, and with an eye offended, and he explained to me that he had received the advertisement, and that it had been given to him by a short young lady of about fourteen or fifteen years of age. He said that she gave the advertisement, paid for it, and went away. She had a thick veil over her face; but he said also that if he could see this person he would recognize her.

9370. Are you in reality a Garibaldite? I am—heart and soul.

9371. Did you on one occasion, of a concert at the Masonic Hall, tear your Garibaldian ribbon from your breast? Not at all. It was fastened on with a pin, and came off my coat, and I put it in my pocket.

9372. By Mr. Morris: Did you ever state to Mr. Bentley that you had not been in England? I have never been there.

9373. Have you been in Scotland? Never.

9374. Do you know any person named Caavin? No.

9375. By Mr. Wilson: Is your name a common one in Italy—are you the only Cutolo? There are others of the name, but it is not common.

9376. By Mr. Bentley: Do you know Mr. Boulanger? Yes. I met him once at Dr. Barker's house, in Melbourne, and I spoke to him there for a few minutes; when he arrived in the Colony he called on me.

9377. On what terms were you with him? On no terms at all; it was only that I met him once at the house of Dr. Barker, in Melbourne. As I was introduced to him there, when he came up to Sydney I left my card for him at Clarke's, and then he called on me. I did not see him afterwards until, as I was about to give a concert for the Destitute Children's Asylum, I saw something from him in the newspaper, about the concert, but I took no notice of it.

9378. He wrote some letters to the newspaper? Yes.

9379. Against you? No, not against me, but against an advertisement that I put into the paper, saying that, in order to provide a novelty at that concert, it was proposed that some of the professors of music should make an improvisation of his own upon some national melody. I suggested that because I believed it would prove an attraction, and I was anxious to make the concert as good as I could, because of its object.

9380. When you were acquainted with Mr. Boulanger in Melbourne, did you know him intimately? No; I met him only once at Dr. Barker's.

9381. Do you know anything of his character? I have heard many things about him, but what is that?

9382. In his favour? No.

9383. Against him? Well, it was that he did some little, foolish things.

9384. Will you state what they were? No. I claim my liberty to do and act as I think proper, for myself, and to avoid trouble and annoyance. I leave it to others to do the same thing. People come and say this and that to me, but I take no notice, for I do not know if it is true or not. I keep to my own home, because I find that the more you mingle with professionals the more you are troubled—you are not quiet enough; and therefore, as I wish to live quiet and private as possible, I do not go amongst them, and when they tell me things I take no notice.

9385. You are not in the habit of making sarcastic remarks in reference to your professional brethren? I do not know—I do not admit that I am, because I cannot say; they are all perfectly indifferent to me. The thing is this:—I have been ten years in college at Naples, and I do not look upon a man as a professor unless he has been at a college of music.

9386. In fact you do not regard self-taught musicians as worthy of any great consideration? I do not consider at all about it. I respect everybody, if they behave properly; but as an artist, it is different.

9387. By Mr. Wilson: Did you and Mrs. Cutolo call upon Mrs. Bentley in June last? Yes. I saw something in the paper about the Bentleys, and when I read it all, I felt that really they were entitled to sympathy.

9388. And you and Mrs. Cutolo called upon them? Yes.

9389. When? I do not recollect the day.

9390. Whom did you see? When we went the servant opened the door, and now I remember it was on a Wednesday, for that is the only day I am disengaged. I requested my wife to call with me; for seeing how they had been tormented, I felt the same as anybody else for the poor people. The servant opened the door, and I asked if Mrs. Bentley was at home; and the girl said she was engaged just then giving lessons. I said, "Perhaps you will be good enough to pass her my card, and tell her I will not keep her more than a few minutes." The servant took the card, and Mrs. Bentley came down to us. She said that she was happy to see me; and I told her that I had read the account that her husband had given in the paper, and that I had come to express my sympathy with her in her trouble; but I told her that I might say that I was angry with her that she had indulged in the idea that I had had anything to do with it; and I said, "Now that I have seen all in the paper, I see that you have been much annoyed, but I am sure that you cannot have an idea about me any longer." And I said to her, "Do not trouble yourself about anonymous letters, because they are most cowardly and base things that no person who was honorable would ever have recourse to. The pen of the anonymous writer is like the dagger in the hand of the assassin—only the ruffian will use it." Then she said, "But when they put the dagger to my side!" And I said, "Are you quite sure of that?" Then she told me that two or three times they had tried to kill her, and once lately at Newtown; and I said, "Do not let these things trouble you, for sometimes people in the street who take two or three glasses of wine, come and roll against you, but do not mean any harm." Then my wife said, "Do not trouble yourself about these things;" and she asked, "We shall see you, shall we not?" and Mrs. Bentley answered, "Yes."

9391. Did Mrs. Bentley receive you coolly? No, not at all.

9392. By Mr. Morris: You are aware that you had been suspected? Yes, because they had asked for my handwriting; that was why I said that I was sorry they had indulged in the idea that I had anything to do with it, and, as I really felt for them, I paid them that visit, as I wished it to be shewn that I had sympathy for them, and that I could not be base enough to have to do with such things.

9393. By Mr. Bentley: Did you ever state to me, in the course of conversation, that Mr. Plunkett was a dirty Jesuit? No; I do not know anything about his being a Jesuit or not. When I came to the Colony I called upon him, and he did not return my call, and there the matter ended. I simply took no notice.

- Signor
C. Cutolo.
9394. You have some cause to be offended with him at his coolness in not returning your call? No, not at all; I took no notice. He did not choose to call upon me, and there was an end.
- 17 Dec., 1862. 9395. Do you recollect meeting me at that gentleman's house, and reference being made to a piece of music, I endeavoured to identify it in such a way as you should understand what was meant by saying that Master Anderson had played it at the last Philharmonic concert. You then showed some feeling against the Philharmonic Society, and expressed regret that Mrs. Bentley should have been induced to play for them, for you said there was not a respectable person on the Committee. Upon my stating to you, "To whom does your remark apply?" you said, "To all!" I then observed, "You can scarcely intend it to apply to the Hon. Mr. Plunkett." Your answer was, "He is a dirty Jesuit." I then asked you, "Does it apply to Mr. Merewether?" and you said, "No, in his private capacity, no; but as a member of the Committee; there is not a gentleman on the Committee!" Do you recollect this? I do not. I recollect we had a dinner together, and that we talked. I recollect that we had a conversation, but I certainly do not remember anything of this kind. With Mr. Merewether I have always been on good terms—I could not have anything to say against him; nor could I have anything to say against Mr. Plunkett, because he did not want my acquaintance; that was his own affair.
9396. Do you distinctly deny having stated on that occasion that Mr. Plunkett was a dirty Jesuit? I do not deny it; I say I do not recollect anything of the kind. How can I deny, when I have not the slightest recollection of it?
9397. Do you recollect a conversation with me in the presence of two ladies? Yes, I recollect the ladies being present when we were talking.
9398. Do you recollect on that occasion calling Mr. Aldis a vulgar fellow, in the presence of those ladies? No, certainly not.
9399. You do not remember it? I do not.
9400. Do you think it likely that you did? No, certainly not; it is impossible that I should say so before those ladies.
9401. If you had, would you have recollected it? Perhaps so; but I could not say anything of what I took no interest in and knew nothing about.
9402. By Mr. Piddington: Do you recollect a conversation of any kind occurring in the manner described? I recollect there was something spoken of the Philharmonic Society and of their concert.
9403. At the time Mr. Bentley describes, and in the presence of these ladies? Yes, I recollect we were talking, and I said that I was very glad that I was not obliged to depend upon the protection of this Society for my advance. Having been introduced to Sir William Denison, I requested him to patronise my first concert.
9404. But with regard to these remarks, do you recollect any conversation whatever taking place at the time and in the manner he has described? I cannot say anything positive, except that I explained that I was invited by the Society to play for their concert; and I said to them that I was sorry that I could not play for them, because I was engaged to Sir William Denison for my first concert, but I said that on another occasion I would be very happy to play for them. They did send me an invitation afterwards for one of their concerts, and I accepted it, and played for them.
9405. But do you recollect a conversation of the kind he describes, calling Mr. Plunkett a Jesuit, and Mr. Aldis a vulgar fellow? I do not recollect. It is now a year and a half ago; and when I go to take a dinner and spend an hour in a gentleman's family, I talk to amuse, and do not recollect all that is said.
9406. Did you receive any anonymous letters? I received one, and sent it to Mr. Harrison.
9407. What was the purport of it? It was only to make a fool of me. It was that I should go to Government House and inquire of Mr. Turville something about D'Apice.
9408. What was the handwriting of that letter? I did not take notice.
9409. You are opposed in religion to Signor D'Apice—of a different creed? Yes, I am a Protestant.
9410. Do you know anything of the anonymous letters sent to the Bentleys? Not at all. I live in this way:—I have my business and my home—that is all for me; and I do not interfere with other people. I know Mr. Bentley, and I was satisfied to know him, but it was only a very slight acquaintance; and it was just the same with Mrs. Bentley. I have never been at their home, and have never inquired of them. If I met them in the street, I would say "good day," and that was all.
9411. By the Chairman: Were you at Fairlight with Mr. Hellyer? Yes.
9412. Were you at Fairlight and Memmel with him on the last days of February last, and on the Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday following? Yes.
9413. Did you ever meet with Mrs. Bentley on her way to Balmain? Not that I know.
9414. You did not meet her soon after the Philharmonic concert? Yes, I may have met her, but I do not know that she was going to Balmain.
9415. Did anything like the following occur:—"I met Signor Cutolo, on my way to Balmain, when the following conversation took place between him and me: He said to me, 'You are out early, Mrs. Bentley; how well you are looking! but then you have nothing to trouble you.' I, recollecting Mr. Black's request, looked Signor Cutolo full in the face, and replied, 'I dare say I have my trouble like other people, Signor;' upon which he blushed deeply, and looked to the ground."—Did this occur? I may have said, "Good morning, Mrs. Bentley," but that is all; the conversation that she says never occurred.
9416. You had not any conversation in which you said anything to the effect of complimenting her upon her looking well? No, certainly not. I had only the slightest acquaintance with her; and it is not likely that I should go to a lady whom I know so little, and say to her, "Madame, how beautiful you look!" It is absurd. 9417.

9417. By Mr. Bentley : You say that our intercourse was very slight? Yes.
 9418. How did it happen then that one day, just previous to the appointment of this Committee, when you met me on the Racecourse, you joined me and came to my house with me, and, though I was a complete stranger to you, you entered into conversation with me about your private affairs, telling me that your time was so completely occupied that you did not know what to do—that nearly all your connection lay in and about Woolloomooloo—that you were making £100 a month, and that that was only very little because of the heavy expenses you were under? Perhaps I have said some little things of the kind, but that is not my conversation.

Signor
 C. Cutolo.
 17 Dec., 1862.

John Le Gay Brereton, Esq., called in and examined:—

9419. By the Chairman : You are a resident in Sydney? I am.
 9420. And are a medical practitioner? Yes.
 9421. Have you been the medical attendant of the Bentley family? I have.
 9422. Have you ever had any conversation with Inspector Harrison, as to the health of Mrs. Bentley—that is to say, as to her mental health? I do not quite understand you.
 9423. Have you had any conversation with Inspector Harrison, with regard to the mental state of Mrs. Bentley? I have had conversations with Harrison.
 9424. With regard to Mrs. Bentley being a monomaniac? I cannot remember whether, in the course of conversation, the question of Mrs. Bentley's sanity was made the topic of conversation; it may have been, but I do not recollect.
 9425. Have you attended Mrs. Bentley for fainting fits and hysteria? I have.
 9426. When you have seen her in those fits, have you had any reason to suppose that she was shamming? No.
 9427. By Mr. Wilson : Will you be kind enough to state to the Committee the kind of fit for which you attended her? They were not fainting fits, but were attacks of hysteria; and they very often take the form of other external diseases, and may be often mistaken by unprofessional persons.
 9428. Were they prolonged attacks? Yes, sometimes they lasted for hours.
 9429. Have you seen instances in other cases of fits of this kind lasting so long? Yes.
 9430. Will you state, for the benefit of the Committee, whether, during the time these fits lasted, Mrs. Bentley was conscious? There would be a seeming consciousness. She would be conscious to a certain extent; that is, she would be conscious of pain or of terror, but it would not be an intelligent consciousness.
 9431. Would it be possible, during one of these fits, for her to seize the hand of a person near her, and even to press that hand in hers? Yes, there might be a spasmodic action of that kind.
 9432. And even to press it to her side? Yes, she might have gone through some very strange contortions during one of these fits.
 9433. Was there anything peculiar in her case—was it a strange case? No; the fits were violent, but I have seen them as violent in other cases. There was nothing very remarkable about her case.
 9434. By Mr. Piddington : Has your attendance on Mrs. Bentley left any impression on your mind with respect to her mental state? She was exceedingly nervous, and I should think would, under certain conditions, be very easily intimidated. She is of that particular temperament upon which mental impressions would tell to a very considerable extent; but with regard to her sanity, I never yet saw any symptoms of insanity about her.
 9435. Would any statement of impending danger be likely to affect such a temperament as that of Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
 9436. Such a statement would be likely to affect her nervous system to a considerable extent? Where the statement was of something more than ordinary, the effect would be very considerable. The fact of one attack of hysteria under which I have seen her labouring was, in one instance, directly traceable to mental excitement. I allude to the occasion when I was called up in the night to attend Mrs. Bentley, and when Mr. Bentley came and fetched me. I forget the circumstances, but I know I remembered asking, after I had seen her, whether there were any mental cause to which the attack might be traceable; and, if I remember rightly, I was informed that there had been such a cause. I do not remember what it was, for I did not make any note of it. The impression left upon my mind is, that upon one or two occasions these attacks have been caused by mental excitement.
 9437. Then, is it your opinion that she is of such a temperament that she would be liable to a strong impression of fear or terror from any statement being made of an attack upon her or her family? Any nervous female is liable to attacks of nervous derangement, of which hysteria is one form; and these derangements are liable to be caused by fright, or even by joy in excess.
 9438. Or from apprehension, however excited? Yes.
 9439. Does Mrs. Bentley belong to the class of persons you have just described? Certainly; she is a nervous female.
 9440. By Mr. Wilson : Could you suppose the case of a nervously sensitive female, being in such a great fright as to retain her consciousness, and not at the time to have any attack of hysteria—the fright overcoming the nervous feeling? Yes, readily. In the moment of excitement, a nervous person is not so liable to faint as he is after the reaction. The stimulus of fright, or even of pain, will often ward off for the time-being an attack of hysteria.
 9441. In illustration of this case, Mrs. Bentley states that when she was assaulted at Mr. Josephson's gate, she was too frightened to faint;—do you admit that to be possible? Yes, quite quite possible. For instance, a person who is lost in the bush, does not feel the fatigue whilst he is under the excitement of the search, but when he once finds the track, his whole fatigue comes upon him, and he faints.

9442. By Mr. Morris: You received several anonymous letters? Yes, three.

9443. You gave them to Mr. Bentley? Yes. When I received the first letter I kept it for a short time, but when I got a second letter I thought that Mr. Bentley was the person who ought to be in possession of them.

9444. Is there anything you have seen in the conduct of Mrs. Bentley, during the time you have been in attendance on her, that has led you to consider that the reference made in this letter to Mrs. Bentley was justifiable? No; my opinion has been that the allegations of the letter were quite groundless. I never saw anything, either in her manner or in her appearance, but what was perfectly modest and ladylike.

9445. Have you observed anything in her conduct, or in that of Mr. Bentley, that would lead you to suppose that they might be themselves mixed up in the writing of these letters? No, I have never observed anything myself that would lead to such a suspicion.

9446. Then any opinion you may have formed on the subject has arisen from statements made to you by other parties? I cannot say that I ever formed a decided opinion on the subject; I am in a state of doubt now; I have at times had suspicions that they were the parties, but these suspicions have never been based upon facts.

9447. So that any suspicions you may have had in reference to the Bentleys themselves being the authors of the letters, have not arisen from anything you have observed in their conduct? No.

9448. You remember the time when she was assaulted at Newtown, and was said to have been injured in the breast? Yes, I remember the circumstance.

9449. Did you ask to see the wound? Yes, I proposed it.

9450. And what was the reason why you were not permitted to do so? The objection that was made was that she was then in a highly nervous state, and Mr. Bentley was afraid that if I visited her it might only make her worse.

9451. Why did he come to you? He was consulting me on his own account at the time, and then he mentioned that Mrs. Bentley had received this injury. I then said that I would go and see her if he liked, and he answered that she was too weak and nervous. That was his reason, as near as I can give. I know that I proposed to go and see Mrs. Bentley, and I think he said that the wound was not so severe as to require it. I then said that I thought that perhaps, in a legal point of view, it would be as well that I should see the wound, as I considered that at some time or other it might become a legal question, and that therefore it would be advisable that he should have my evidence on the subject. He then said that Mrs. Bentley was exceedingly nervous, and that my presence would only increase her nervousness, and that as it was not absolutely necessary that I should see the wound, he would prefer that I should not do so.

9452. Is Mrs. Bentley disinclined, unless in a case of emergency, to consult a medical man? I have not noticed that there has been any remarkable disinclination on her part to consult a medical man; when I have been sent for she has never objected to see me.

9453. By Mr. Cowper: It has been stated by Inspector Harrison that, after consulting with him, you were rather inclined to the opinion that the Bentleys themselves were the guilty parties, and that the Bentleys' unwillingness to allow you to make an examination of the injury suffered by Mrs. Bentley, had shaken your opinion of their innocence? The unwillingness to shew me the wound certainly appeared somewhat strange to me; and the reason why I persisted with Mr. Bentley in asking him to let me see the wound was, that I was convinced that the fact of my not seeing it would be regarded by the public as a suspicious circumstance. No doubt it must seem so; and I own that if I had any suspicions of the Bentleys, that circumstance alone would have tended to confirm them.

9454. Did you state this to Harrison? I have not unfrequently spoken to Harrison on the subject. I have met him at the Bentleys', and once at my own house. I have had a conversation with him in my own house. He then communicated to me circumstances which I afterwards saw in his published report to the Colonial Secretary; and supposing those statements to be correct, I consider that there is a very strong case of suspicion against the Bentleys—that is, as I told Harrison, assuming his statement to be correct. But I never stated that I was satisfied that they were the authors of these letters, because the evidence at the best is altogether negative.

9455. By Mr. Piddington: Do you recollect the circumstances narrated to you by Harrison, by which you were led to believe that the case against the Bentleys had been made out? I never considered that the case was made out against them; I always told Bentley that as yet he wanted evidence before he could convict anybody else of the offence of writing these letters, for there was nothing in all the facts that had come out, inconsistent with the whole thing having been done by themselves. That is all I have ever said, and that is not saying that there were grounds of suspicion against the Bentleys.

9456. But I understood you to say, in answer to Mr. Cowper, that you had had a conversation with Harrison, and that he detailed certain matters to you, and that you then said that if those circumstances were true, they would point out the Bentleys as the authors of the whole affair? Yes.

9457. What were those circumstances? They were the same as those that were afterwards published in the form of a report from Harrison to the Colonial Secretary.

9458. Do you remember any of them? No; but I remember that there was not a circumstance mentioned in that report, that I had not heard before from Harrison. It was such things as the accumulation of dust in the attic, in which a man's tracks must have been seen, and the displacement of the bricks from the wall, and sundry other little things, all of which went to contradict the statement that Bentley himself had made. One thing was, that

J. Le Gay
Brereton,
Esq.

17 Dec., 1862.

that the dust which had accumulated in the attic had not been displaced, which must have been the case had anybody been walking there. Another point was, that a person in the attic could not look through the aperture in such a way as to see down on to the stairs, without leaning very much over a beam that was near it, and so leaving a mark behind him; these were the points that I thought would form a fair subject of comment.

9459. But you have not been led to any conclusion based on your observations, with regard to the complicity of the Bentleys in this matter? I did not think much about the matter, until after the public mind had been drawn to the question of its being probable that the Bentleys had written these letters themselves. I then went over the evidence that had been collected, and I found that there was really nothing in the whole matter that they might not very readily have done themselves. It was upon this review, as well as upon the general features of the case, that I passed my opinion.

9460. As an experienced man of the world, have you formed any opinion in support of the supposition that the Bentleys themselves are the parties concerned? I have not any decided opinion on the point.

9461. Have you formed any opinion at all that you consider definite, with regard to any parties who you believe have been concerned in this persecution? I have formed none, based on facts, sufficient to justify me in entertaining a suspicion of any party whatever. It is just as possible that some other party may have done this, as that they themselves are the authors; the one is quite as consistent with the facts as the other.

9462. I do not ask you that—but what I wish to know is, whether you have come to any conclusion in your own mind, based upon facts that have come to your own knowledge? I came to this conclusion, that there were many things that must have been done by some person in the house, intimately acquainted with the family's movements; and that one of the agents of the conspiracy must have been in the house. This agent may have been a servant, or a workman, or one of the Bentleys themselves. There was nothing direct against any one, and the suspicion that would apply to one would apply equally to the other. But the fact still remains that there must have been an accomplice in the house, for many things that were done.

9463. But I wish to know whether you have come to the opinion that the facts of the case point to the conclusion that it is the Bentleys or any one else who has done this? No, I have not arrived at any definite conclusion on the case.

9464. From any observations of your own, or from any knowledge based on facts, have you been impressed with the opinion that they themselves were connected with this matter? If we could arrive at any conclusion, based on facts, then this inquiry would be unnecessary. I have no more arrived at a conclusion based on facts than have the Committee. As for opinions and suspicions they throw no light upon the case, because they are as likely to be false as to be true.

9465. By Mr. Cowper: From what you have seen of the Bentleys during the time you have been their medical attendant, is there any mental weakness about Mrs. Bentley, not perhaps amounting to monomania, but causing her to be subject to delusions? No, I have seen nothing of the kind about her.

9466. Nothing? No, I have seen no sign of insanity about her; when free from pain she appeared to me like any ordinary person, without vice of mind of any kind.

9467. By Mr. Morris: Have you observed anything about Mr. Bentley himself that would lead you to suppose him subject to monomania? No, I have never seen anything in him unbecoming to a gentleman. I have seen him in conditions of great excitement, carrying fire-arms for instance, but then he had sufficient cause for it if he believed in this conspiracy. I know that for myself, if I thought that any person was laying plots for my wife I should most likely have been as bad as he was.

9468. From your own personal knowledge, are you aware whether Mrs. Bentley ever carried arms? I am not aware; I have never seen her out of doors.

9469. By the Chairman: Have you formed the idea that from the first there must have been some one in the house? No, not necessarily from the first.

9470. Is there any time of which you could fix the date at which you think some one must have been in the house? Well, I should say from the time when something was found pinned to the piece of music. When accidents of that kind occurred, some one must have been in the house to manage them, and must have been intimately acquainted with the family movements, knowing where the parties slept, where the nursery was, where the music was placed, and where all the doors led to; from the time of the note being pinned to the music there must have been an accomplice in the house.

9471. Are you aware that there was a detective placed in the house about that time? Yes.

9472. And may not the accomplice have been a detective as well as any one else? Yes, he may have been.

9473. If the police have predicted that certain things would take place, and that afterwards those very things did take place, would not that lead to a strong inference of their connection with the criminals? I have seen nothing in the case that would lead me in the least to suspect the police.

9474. But if the head of the police has predicted that certain things will take place in the house, or that certain things will occur at the concert, and that afterwards such things do take place, is it more likely that the Bentleys or that the police have arranged them? That is a mere matter of opinion, and I must know the whole circumstances before I venture upon giving an opinion. It is a mere matter of weight of evidence.

9475. At all events you say that some one must have been in the house? Yes; and that opinion is based upon my own observations; but I have not been able to form any with regard to whether suspicions were attachable to one person or another.

PETITION OF THOMAS CHARLES BENTLEY.

APPENDIX.

A.

(1.)

New South Wales, }
to wit. }

On the 17th day of September, 1862, Thomas Charles Bentley, of No. 67, Elizabeth-street North, in the City of Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, gentleman, and Julia Bentley, his wife; and Mary Ryan, of the same place, spinster; and Anna Maria Bradshaw, of the same place, spinster; being severally duly sworn, make oath, and say as follows:—

The deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, saith:—

1. I am a native of London, where I was born in the year 1827. I am the son of William Bentley, Esquire, chief clerk of the Stock Department in the Bank of England, and the nephew of Richard Bentley, Esquire, the well-known publisher of London.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, saith:—

2. I am a native of Honiton, in Devonshire, where I was born in the year 1836. I am the daughter of William Munk, Esquire, of Exeter. My mother died when I was about two years old. I received an ordinary musical education, but was not brought up to follow music as a profession.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

3. We were married in April, 1857, at the Church of St. Leonard's, Mount Radford, Exeter.

4. In November, 1859, we left England in the ship "Castle Howard," for this Colony, where we arrived in January, 1860, with our then only child, between one and two years old, and we have ever since resided in Sydney, or its vicinity. We have another child, who was born in November, 1860.

5. We left England for this Colony solely on account of Mr. Bentley's health, and by the advice of his physician, Dr. Walsh, of London, who stated that it was necessary for the preservation of his life to proceed to a warmer climate.

6. We brought letters of introduction with us to Sir William Denison, the Bishop of Sydney, Messrs. Flower, Salting, and Co., Mr. Benjamin Buchanan, and other gentlemen in Sydney.

7. Shortly after our arrival in Sydney, Mr. Bentley was appointed Secretary to the Australian Club, which office he held until he resigned it, to accept that of Secretary to the Union Club, which he has ever since held.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, for themselves severally say:—

8. We make and depose to the various statements herein deposed to by us, not with a view of unnecessarily casting suspicion upon, or injuring any person, but solely for the purpose of fully and truly setting forth all the facts and circumstances connected with the occurrences herein referred to, so far as we were, or are, aware of them, and to express and explain our feelings and impressions at the time when those occurrences took place, and the expressions and opinions of those persons whom we consulted on the subject, and the way in which our own minds were affected in reference thereto.

9. In setting forth or alluding to conversations, we have set them out according to their substance and effect, but do not profess to depose, in all cases, to the exact words or expressions used.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

10. Shortly after our arrival in Sydney, Mrs. Bentley—in order to add to our income—proposed to give lessons on the pianoforte, and she was subsequently employed in that capacity to instruct the daughters of several highly respectable persons in Sydney and its vicinity.

11. In the early part of May, 1861, Mrs. Bentley, at the request of the Committee of the Sydney Philharmonic Society (which request was conveyed to her in an official manner through the Secretary, and also by Mr. Black and Mr. Aldis, both members of that Committee), consented to perform at the concert of that Society, given on the 14th day of May in that year, at which concert she accordingly appeared, and played upon the pianoforte, being introduced thereat by the Honorable Mr. Plunkett, the President of the Society. On the following morning her performance was favourably criticized in both the daily newspapers, namely, the Sydney Morning Herald and the Sydney Empire.

And

And this deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

12. Whilst I was playing at the said concert, Mr. Rawack (the husband of Madame Rawack, the eminent pianiste), placed himself, apart from the general audience, so close to the platform that it was impossible for me to play without seeing him; and his position and observation of my playing made me very nervous. As I left the concert room he rudely passed me and trod upon my foot. I told Mr. Bentley of this after the concert. I thought nothing more of the matter at the time, but the circumstance afterwards recurred to my memory, in consequence of some inquiries made of Mr. Bentley and myself by Mr. Black, as to our knowledge of any foreigners, as hereinafter set forth.

13. A few days after the said concert was given (I believe the second day after the said concert), I met Signor Cutolo (with whom Mr. Bentley and I had previously become slightly acquainted) in the street, and he then spoke to me of the said concert, and said that he was not present thereat, but had read the reviews in the papers, and added, in a sarcastic tone, "The English for the English, Mrs. Bentley."

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, severally saith :—

14. Up to the early part of October last we were entirely ignorant of the existence of any attacks upon, or anonymous letters respecting, Mr. Bentley's character, or otherwise in reference to us or either of us, and we had no knowledge whatever on the subject.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

15. All the letters and writings herein referred to respectively, as numbers 1, 2, 5a, 6, 7, 8, 9b, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 29, 31, and 32, are in the same character of handwriting, and that a most peculiar one. The directions on the envelopes to the said letters hereinbefore referred to, as numbers 1, 2, 3, 5a, 6, 7, 8, 9b, 11, 12, 13, 18, 19, 24, 26, 27, 31, and 32, are in the same peculiar handwriting. The directions on the envelopes to the letters herein referred to as numbers 15, 17, 21, 23, are not in the same peculiar handwriting. The envelope to the letter herein referred to as number 16, is partly in the same peculiar handwriting, and partly in handwriting of a different character; and the other letters herein referred to—namely, numbers 4, 5, 5b, 8a, 9, 9a, 9c, 11a, 13a, 20, 25, 28, and 30—are in various characters of handwriting.

16. In setting out the copies of the anonymous letters, I have done so as far as I am able; but the writing of the originals is, in several instances, so difficult to make out, that I cannot be certain that the copies are in all cases correct.

17. In the early part of October last I ascertained, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, that on the 17th day of May, 1861, a letter (No. 1) was received through the Post Office by Mr. Black, addressed, "Black, Esq., firm, 'Morrison and Black,' Hunter-street, Sydney," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 1.)

" Sir,

" I arrived in Sydney but a few days previous to the concert given by the Philharmonic Society, and did not know, until seeing her on the platform, who the lady was that was advertised as pianiste on that occasion. Since then I have made inquiries, and find that you were one of those who brought her before the public; and this being the case, unpleasant as it may be to my feelings, I feel it my duty to tell you that Mrs. Bentley is going entirely under false colours. She says she is an English lady; but it is not so. Mrs. Bentley is an Italian by birth, and her father and mother were both of one of the first Italian families; but she has disgraced her family, and was the cause, only a few years since, of her own mother's death. After this I am sure a gentleman who holds a position in Sydney, as Mr. Black, will cease to notice one who has such a stain on her as the great pianiste, Mrs. Bentley.

" I remain, Sir,

" Yours truly,

" A LOVER OF TRUTH."

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

18. Mr. Black visited at our house on several occasions shortly after the said concert, and made various inquiries of us about the birth and parentage of Mrs. Bentley, and also as to our knowledge of foreigners resident in this city; and in reply to such inquiries we gave him the information he asked for, stating, as the fact was, that the only foreigners we were acquainted with in the city were Mr. Rawack (whom we only knew by sight) and Signor Cutolo; and during one of these visits by Mr. Black, Mrs. Bentley informed him of her said meeting with Signor Cutolo, and of his sarcastic remark, "The English for the English," and also of the conduct of Mr. Rawack at the said concert hereinbefore set out. Mr. Black requested Mrs. Bentley to look Signor Cutolo well in the face the next time she met him. We asked Mr. Black what all these mysterious inquiries meant, and why he asked Mrs. Bentley to do so singular a thing. He said, "Never mind; I'm a Scotchman; when the proper time comes I will tell you." Another gentleman, the father of one of her pupils, also questioned Mrs. Bentley as to her birth-place, and whether she was English. These inquiries appeared to us very singular, and perplexed us much.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

19. A few days after the conversation with Mr. Black, referred to in the last preceding paragraph, I met Signor Cutolo in the street, on my way to Balmain, when the following conversation took place between him and me :—He said to me, "You are out early, Mrs. Bentley. How well you are looking; but then you have nothing to trouble you." I, recollecting Mr. Black's request, looked Signor Cutolo full in the face, and replied, "I dare say I have my troubles like other people, Signor;" upon which he blushed deeply and looked to the ground, and we thereupon parted.

And

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

20. I also, in the early part of October last, ascertained, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, that, on the 2nd day of July, 1861, a letter (No. 2.) was received through the Post Office by Mr. Aldis, addressed—"Aldis, Esq., George-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 2.)

"Sir,

"I hear you are friendly, and admit into your family circle Mrs. Bentley, the lady who played at your last Philharmonic concert. Being the head of a large family of daughters myself, I feel it my duty, unpleasant as it may be to me, to tell you that that lady is not a fit person to associate with your daughters, or indeed any one who has a father's feelings for his children. Suffice it for me to say that Mrs. Bentley is out here under entirely false auspices. She is no Englishwoman, as she pretends to be, but an Italian, and of a family which, had she not disgraced in such a manner that she dare not return to it again, she would never have been in the position she now is—a common musical instructress—but could have lived in her native country (a climate far more suited for her poor husband's health) in affluence and ease.

"Like all Italian women she is fascinating in manner, and a very dangerous one to admit into a family circle, especially where there are sons, for she will scruple at no means to gain an end; and much as you, who I know are a great admirer of music, may think of her talent, which undoubtedly is great—although, forgive me, sir, is not to be compared to that of your daughter—I am quite sure you will acknowledge that a person who has by her own conduct so disgraced herself, that her own relations will not even acknowledge her, and was even the cause of her own mother's death, is not a fitting companion for your daughters, who (again pardon me for saying) would be the ornament of any society.

"Sir, I remain,

"Yours truly,
"E. L."

21. I also, in the early part of October last, ascertained in the manner hereinafter mentioned, that on the 30th day of September last, another letter (No. 3.) was received through the Post Office, by Mr. Hanson, one of the proprietors of the Sydney Empire Newspaper, (whose daughter at that time took lessons on the pianoforte from my wife,) addressed—"Hanson, Esq., Castlereagh-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date. I am unable to set out a copy of this last-mentioned letter, for the reasons hereinafter appearing.

22. I became aware of the said three hereinbefore-mentioned letters having been so received as aforesaid, in the following manner :—In the early part of October last I had occasion to go to the office of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench, and I saw Mr. Edward Wrench (with whom I was acquainted in England, and who had interested himself here in forwarding Mrs. Bentley's professional views). He shewed me an envelope bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp, and addressed to him, and asked me if I knew the handwriting. I looked at the writing on the envelope, and expressed my opinion that it was the handwriting of a gentleman with whom I was acquainted at the Australian Club. Mr. Wrench said "Oh no, it's an anonymous letter"; to which I replied, "Is it about me?" to which Mr. Wrench answered, "Oh no, I'm keeping it until I can kick the blackguard who wrote it"; and I thereupon left. Mr. Wrench has since told me that he has mislaid this letter, and is unable to find it.

23. Two days after my said interview with Mr. Wrench I met Mr. Hanson, who then shewed me the envelope of the aforesaid letter (No. 3.) addressed to him, and asked me if I knew the handwriting. I immediately recognized the handwriting to be the same as that shewn to me by Mr. Wrench, and exclaimed, in surprise, "Yes, how strange; I have seen it at Mr. Wrench's;—what is it?" to which he replied, "An anonymous letter about Mrs. Bentley," and on my pressing him to state its contents, he said he had torn it up and dismissed it from his mind as an anonymous letter. I then asked him for the envelope, which he gave me, and I thereupon (thinking that possibly the before-mentioned inquiries by Mr. Black might have some connection with similar anonymous letters), forthwith went to him and shewed him the envelope given to me by Mr. Hanson, and told him that Mr. Hanson had received an anonymous letter in that envelope about my wife, and I then asked him if his before-mentioned pointed inquiries had any reference to similar communications, to which he replied, "Yes," and went to a drawer and took thereout, and handed to me, the letter herein referred to, as letter No. 1, which I at once read. I asked him to allow me to retain it, to which he assented, and said, "Mr. Aldis has received a similar one, which he will, no doubt, give to you if you go to him." I thereupon went direct to Mr. Aldis, and saw him, who then told me he had received a similar letter, and promised to bring it into town with him the next day, and give it to me, which he did accordingly; the same being the letter herein referred to as letter No. 2.

24. On the evening of the day on which Mr. Hanson gave me the said envelope of the said letter addressed to him, and after I had seen Mr. Black and Mr. Aldis, as hereinbefore mentioned, I informed my wife of what had occurred, and the communication thereof had such an effect upon her that she became suddenly seriously ill, so much so, that late on the same night, we had to send one of our servants for Dr. Brereton (who was then, and had for some considerable time previously been, my medical attendant), to attend her, and he did so accordingly, and found her in a violent hysterical state, from which she lapsed into a heavy stupor, in consequence of the mental excitement and annoyance caused by my said communication to her. Dr. Brereton prescribed medicine for her, and told us she must be kept perfectly quiet and free from excitement.

And

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

25. The communication so, as aforesaid, made to me by my husband, so surprised and shocked me, that I was taken violently ill in consequence thereof, as mentioned in the said last preceding paragraph.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

26. In the latter part of the year 1860, Mrs. Irving (the wife of Mr. Clark Irving, late of Sydney, aforesaid), called upon Mrs. Bentley, and made arrangements for placing her daughter (Miss Irving) under her, to receive instruction on the pianoforte, and Miss Irving accordingly received such instruction from Mrs. Bentley up to the time when Mrs. Irving and her family left this Colony for England, which was in or about the month of January, 1861.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

27. Previously to Mrs. Irving so leaving the Colony, I was introduced, by her, to her husband, at their house in Sydney. Up to that time I did not know Mr. Irving.

28. Early in the month of June, 1861, Mr. Irving called at our house ; my husband was not at home at the time. He asked to see me, and I saw him accordingly. He stated that he had called to pay the amount due for the tuition given by me to Miss Irving—apologized for the delay which had occurred, and gave me a cheque for the amount, and then left. I had not seen Mr. Irving after he was introduced to me as aforesaid, until he called at our house and gave the said cheque as herein mentioned. After this I met Mr. Irving once at a party at Government House, and he danced with me on that occasion. Afterwards I casually met Mr. Irving in the street near my house, walking with Mr. Arthur Hodgson, when Mr. Irving accosted me and informed me that he was about buying a pianoforte to send up to the Clarence District, and requested me to go to Mr. King, in Market-street, from whom he was about to buy the piano, to give my opinion as to its value. I promised to do so, and he said he would call at our house to learn my opinion. I accordingly went to Mr. King and tried the piano. Mr. Irving did not afterwards call to learn what my opinion was, but I casually saw him afterwards as I was passing his house to my professional duties at Mr. Gordon's, he being in the garden in front ; he accosted me, and I then told him my opinion of the pianoforte.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

29. About the early part of October last, I was canvassing for the said office of Secretary to the Union Club, of which Club Mr. Irving was then a member. I was elected to that office on the 17th day of October last, but I did not enter upon the duties thereof until about the end of November last.

And the deponent, Mary Ryan, saith :—

30. I entered into the service of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, at their house in Elizabeth-street, Sydney, in or about the beginning of February, 1861, as cook and general servant, and have ever since remained in such service.

And the deponent, Anna Maria Bradshaw, saith :—

31. I entered into the service of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, at their house in Elizabeth-street, Sydney, on or about the month of April, 1861, as nurse, and have ever since remained in such service.

And all these deponents say :—

32. From the time Anna Maria Bradshaw entered into the service of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, she and Mary Ryan have been their only servants ; and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, their two infant children, Mary Ryan, and Anna Maria Bradshaw, have been the only inmates of that residence.

And the deponents, Mary Ryan and Anna Maria Bradshaw, for themselves say :—

33. One evening, in the early part of October last, Mrs. Bentley was taken suddenly and violently ill, and Anna Maria Bradshaw was sent, late on that night, to fetch Doctor Brereton, who came, accordingly, about midnight.

And the deponent, Mary Ryan, further saith :—

34. Shortly after 9 o'clock of the evening of the following day to that on which Dr. Brereton was called in as aforesaid, as Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were going to bed, Mrs. Bentley being still very unwell, Mr. Irving called at the house. I answered the door, and understood him to give his name as " Mr. Jenkin." I did not know him at the time, but I afterwards learnt that he was Mr. Irving, and I may have been mistaken as to the name he gave. On this occasion he walked into the dining-room, and asked if Mr. Bentley was at home. I told him he was, and that he and Mrs. Bentley were gone up to bed ; on which Mr. Irving said, " Never mind ; never mind," and went away. I then went up to assist Mrs. Bentley to undress, and told her what had occurred, describing Mr. Irving as Mr. Jenkin, which was the name I then thought he gave.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

35. Afterwards—namely, on Sunday, the 13th day of October last—Mr. Irving again called at our residence about noon, and saw both of us. He said he had called on the evening of the day next but one previous (being the day alluded to by Mary Ryan in the 34th paragraph hereof), on the subject of the application of Mr. Bentley for the office of Secretary to the Union Club, and, addressing Mr. Bentley, said, " Why did not you apply to me?"—to which Mr. Bentley replied, " Why, Mr. Irving, you are not a member of the Committee, so I did not trouble you." He replied, " I am sorry for that, because I've been using my influence for some one else." He then made some remarks expressive of regret at seeing Mrs. Bentley so ill, and saying (in allusion to the office of Secretary to the Union Club) he would see what he could do, and left us.

36. On Tuesday, the 15th day of October last, Mr. Irving again called upon us, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and we both saw him at our said residence. He stated that he had seen one of the members of the Committee of the Union Club, and had secured his interest for Mr. Bentley, and seemed studiously to endeavour to impress us with the opinion that he himself had great influence in the matter.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

37. On Thursday, the 17th day of October last, I was elected Secretary to the Union Club.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

38. On the 17th day of October last, whilst Mr. Bentley was absent from home, Mr. Irving, in the early part of the evening, again called at our house, and saw me alone. He said he had called to see Mr. Bentley about the Club, and to congratulate us, again endeavouring to impress upon me that he had been greatly, if not mainly, instrumental in obtaining the appointment for him. I told him (as the fact was), that Mr. Bentley was detained at the Club, and whilst conversing with Mr. Irving, Mr. Hanson's wife came in, and remained the evening with me. Mr. Irving remained for some time after Mrs. Hanson's arrival, and then left. After he had left, I had occasion to send some clothes to Mr. Bentley, and I at the same time sent him a note saying Mr. Irving had come again.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

39. On the following day (the 18th day of October last), we were at home at tea together, and the circumstance of the visit of Mr. Irving on the previous evening was discussed between us. Afterwards Mrs. Hanson came in, and on coming in said, "I'm come to spend the evening with you, because I thought you" (meaning Mrs. Bentley) "would be alone again." Mr. Bentley thanked her, and said that in a few minutes he would have to leave. Almost immediately after Mrs. Hanson came in, Mr. Irving called, and Mr. Bentley told Anna Maria Bradshaw to show him upstairs into the drawing-room, (a different room to that in which we were, the room in which we were being the dining-room on the ground floor,) and Mr. Bentley went up to the drawing-room to see him.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

40. I then saw Mr. Irving in the drawing-room, and asked him the object of his visit, and in reply he said he was just passing by and called to inquire how Mrs. Bentley was; I told him she was very unwell, and he then left the house.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

41. After Mr. Irving so left, Mr. Bentley returned to the dining-room, and Mrs. Hanson then stated that the real object of her visit was for fear "that man" (meaning Mr. Irving) should come again, as she had seen how unwelcome his visit on the previous night was, and added, "I think it but right now to tell you that the anonymous letter received by Mr. Hanson stated that you had been receiving valuable presents from Mr. Clark Irving, and otherwise acting improperly with him." Shortly after this, Mr. Bentley left for the Club; he afterwards returned before Mrs. Hanson left. After Mrs. Hanson left, Mrs. Bentley was again seized with a violent illness similar to that with which she was attacked on the 10th day of October last, as hereinbefore set forth. The same course of treatment was adopted as that recommended by Dr. Brereton on the previous occasion.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

42. I afterwards, on the same night, saw Mr. Hanson, and he made a statement as to the contents of the said anonymous letter to him similar to that so as aforesaid given to my wife and me by Mrs. Hanson; and in consequence thereof I, in order to prevent Mr. Irving from again calling at our house, wrote and sent to him, before 8 o'clock the following morning, a letter, of which the following is a copy :—

" October 18th, 1860.

" Sir,

" I desire that you will desist from calling at my private residence, and I also beg that you will cease to intrude yourself upon Mrs. Bentley in any way whatever.

" Your obedient Servant,

" THOS. C. BENTLEY.

" To Clark Irving, Esq."

43. Mr. Irving having, in the meantime, twice left messages that he wished to see me, I on Sunday, the 20th day of October last, called on him at his house and saw him there. I then told him that my letter had been written, not because I imputed blame to him, but on account of anonymous letters being circulated in which his name had been associated with Mrs. Bentley's in an improper manner. He then handed me some letters having no reference to Mrs. Bentley or myself, and asked if they were the same handwriting as the letters I alluded to. I took the letters so given by Mr. Irving, home with me, to compare with those already in my possession; and finding no resemblance between them, returned to Mr. Irving those given by him to me, upon which occasion he stated he would give £50 to find out the author of the anonymous letters.

44. At the time when Mr. Hanson informed me of the contents of the said anonymous letter received by him, he also stated to me that the handwriting of that letter was the same as that of the letters herein referred to as Nos. 1 and 2, both of which he had at that time seen.

45. In the early part of November last, I ascertained, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, that on the 21st day of October last, another letter (No. 4) was received through the Post Office by Dr. Brereton, addressed "Dr. Le Gay Brereton, Macquarie-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 4.)

(No. 4.)

“ Sir,

“ If I am not mistaken, you take some interest in a gentleman, a patient of yours—I mean Mr. Bentley. He is one of my greatest friends, and I know no one for whom I have a greater respect. Feeling all that I do for him, much as it pains me, I feel it my duty to tell you, as his medical adviser, what he will never allow you to know or even to guess, half his illness is caused by excitement, and that the worst kind of excitement, fear of his wife's conduct. Mrs. Bentley under a fascinating and quiet manner conceals a heart as bad as the very worst of her sex. No doubt you are aware that Mr. Bentley has been obliged to sleep at the Club House for some time, and whilst there, Mrs. Bentley has been carrying on a liaison with a gentleman who was a short time since much connected with Government House. I will not mention names, as he is not so guilty as Mrs. Bentley; and you may judge how far this has gone, when I tell you that on Thursday morning, at 3 a.m. I was returning from an evening party, and I saw him leaving Mrs. Bentley's house, letting himself out with a latch-key. Poor Bentley does not know this, and I would not for the world he should; it would break his heart; but he does know his wife is an unprincipled flirt, who waits but the opportunity to be unfaithful to him, and this it is that is making him ill. Sir, the only thing that can be done to make Bentley's home happier is by reforming his wife. I have studied her well, and, sir, she is sensitive to a degree of public opinion. If by each one of her husband's friends showing her a marked coldness of manner, so that she should know her conduct was discovered, and should not pass unnoticed, I believe fear might induce her to reform, and make poor Bentley's home happier than it has ever been. I have written this, feeling you take some interest in Mr. Bentley, and although I cannot sign my name, before many days are over you shall know it.

“ I remain, yours truly,

“ E. C.”

46. About the end of October last, I called upon Mr. Hanson at his office, to consult with him about these anonymous letters. He asked me if I had any suspicions; I said I had scarcely suspicions, but some trifling circumstances led me to suppose that either Mr. Rawack, or Signor Cutolo might be the author. He said that Signor Cutolo had until lately been very friendly with him, and he did not believe he could be the guilty party. I said I myself could not understand what object he could have in so doing, as he was doing so well in his profession, and added “ but I cannot divest my mind of the impression that Rawack may be doing it.” We had some further conversation on the subject, in the course of which I said I should like to get Mrs. Rawack's handwriting, which he said he would try to get for me. I spoke to Mr. Black about the same time, to the same effect, particularly as to getting some of Mr. Rawack's handwriting.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

47. On the 29th day of October last, I received at my said residence, through the Post Office, a letter (No. 5), addressed—“ Mrs. Bentley, 67, Elizabeth-street North,” and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which the following is a copy :—

(No. 5.)

“ Mrs. Morris presents her compliments to Mrs. Bentley, and would feel much obliged by her calling at her residence to-morrow afternoon at about 5 o'clock, to make arrangements for Mrs. Morris' three little girls taking music lessons. Mrs. Morris is sorry to trouble Mrs. Bentley, but she is a great invalid herself, and cannot leave the house, or she would do herself the pleasure of calling at Mrs. Bentley's own residence. Mrs. Morris' house is situated at the back of Mr. Lamb's, and is called Murrunga.

“ Tuesday Morning, Murrunga.”

And the deponents, Thomas Charley Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

48. On the afternoon of the said last-mentioned day, and after the said last-mentioned letter had been delivered, Mr. Bentley came from the Australian Club, and Mrs. Bentley showed it to him, and asked him if he knew where the place indicated therein was (both of us being at that moment under the impression that the letter was a genuine one). Mr. Bentley not being aware of the locality assumed to be therein indicated, went to the Australian Club to look into the Directory, to ascertain where the house in the said letter, called “ Murrunga House,” was.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

49. I went the same evening to the Australian Club for the purpose aforesaid, and not being able myself to obtain information on the subject in the Directory, I asked Sir William Macarthur, who happened to be present in the reading room, if he knew a Mrs. Morris at Murrunga, at the same time showing him the said last-mentioned letter, and he stated that he did not, and assisted me to look over the Directory to endeavour to find the place, but without effect. Before leaving the said Club on that occasion, I saw Mr. Frederick Griffiths, a member thereof, and asked him if he could tell me at the back of which Mr. Lamb's a Mrs. Morris, of Murrunga, lived, to which he replied in the negative; and before I left the said Club on that occasion, I was informed by the messenger that Mr. Hanson and another gentleman wished to see me. I therefore went into the stranger's room, and there saw Mr. Hanson and Mr. Black, and Mr. Hanson said to me, “ I want to see you particularly—just read this letter,” at the same time handing to me the letter (No. 5a), which he informed me he had that afternoon received through the Post Office. It is addressed—“ — Hanson, Esq., Castlereagh-street,” and bears the Sydney Post Office stamp of the 29th day of October last. The following is a copy of it :—

(No. 5a.)

(No. 5a.)

“ Sir,

“ Some time since I wrote to you, saying that did you know what a bad woman Mrs. Bentley was, you would not allow your daughters to continue with her. Probably you did not believe me, from circumstances preventing me signing my name. Since then she has quarrelled with Mr. Irving, and has now commenced another flirtation, or what is much worse. I know she has made an appointment to meet a gentleman who is very well known to all Sydney, to-morrow (Wednesday) afternoon, at 5 o'clock, in the bush behind Mr. Lamb's house; and I only ask you to go, or send some one on whose word you can depend, to see if what I say is not correct, and I am quite sure you will see what kind of woman the apparently quiet, lady-like creature, Mrs. Bentley is.

“ Sir, I remain, yours truly,

“ A. E.”

50. After reading the last-mentioned letter (No. 5a), I showed the letter No. 5, received on the same day by Mrs. Bentley, to Mr. Hanson and Mr. Black, and upon their reading the same we all came to the conclusion that it was the result of a conspiracy concocted in furtherance of the object of the writer or writers of the before-mentioned anonymous letters; and we resolved that the best course to adopt would be for Mrs. Bentley to go alone (but within view of some friends, who could so observe what might occur) to the place supposed to be indicated (which upon inspection made at the time by Mr. Hanson, Mr. Black, and myself, of a map and a directory of Sydney, we came to the conclusion was somewhere at the back of Macleay-street), and Mr. Hanson agreed to undertake the duty of watching to see what should occur. I then returned home (walking with Mr. Hanson as far as the Sydney Morning Herald Office), and informed Mrs. Bentley of what had occurred, and she agreed to the plan proposed.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

51. In order to carry out the plan above mentioned, Mrs. Bentley, at the time specified in the said letter (No. 5), went, at the hour indicated, in an omnibus, to Macleay-street aforesaid, Mr. Hanson having gone before in a cab to the same place. Mr. Bentley also proceeded there in another omnibus. Mrs. Bentley, after getting out of the omnibus, walked down Macleay-street, and also some distance down Victoria-street, watched by Mr. Hanson and Mr. Bentley, without anything occurring, and then Mrs. Bentley, at the request of Mr. Hanson, returned with him in his cab to our house. We have since, as hereinafter mentioned, been led to believe that the locality indicated by the said letters No. 5 and No. 5a is at Rose Bay, at the back of the house there called “ Rose Bay Cottage,” formerly inhabited by Mr. Walter Lamb; but we at the time believed it was the locality of the residence of the late Captain Lamb, which was in Macleay-street aforesaid, that was intended by the said last-mentioned letters.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

52. As I was walking with Mr. Hanson from the Australian Club towards the Sydney Morning Herald Office, on the 29th day of October last, as hereinbefore mentioned, he told me that he had settled the matter, so far as Mr. Rawack was concerned; that he (Mr. Hanson) had written to him, saying that he was anxious to place his daughter under Madame Rawack, and that he therefore would be glad to learn when she was likely to return to the Colony. That in consequence, Mr. Rawack had called upon him, and stated that it was very probable his wife would not return to the Colony at all, and that from the whole of the conversation between him and Mr. Rawack, and especially from the way in which the latter spoke of Mrs. Bentley, he (Mr. Hanson) was convinced Mr. Rawack had nothing to do with the anonymous letters.

53. A short time afterwards I repeated that conversation between Mr. Hanson and me as to Mr. Rawack, to Mrs. Bentley, who stated to me that it differed materially from a statement made to her by a lady a few days previously, which was to the effect that Madame Rawack had been well received at Vienna, and was about to play at the Philharmonic Society in that city, and would then in all probability return to the Colony.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

54. I had a conversation with the lady referred to in the last preceding paragraph as mentioned therein, and she made to me the statement therein also set forth.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

55. We pondered over these circumstances and discussed them together; and our former impression, that it was possible Mr. Rawack might be the author of the anonymous letters, was not removed from our minds. Our suspicions as to Mr. Rawack were founded, in addition to other circumstances herein set out, upon the consideration of the conflicting accounts respecting the probability of Madam Rawack returning to resume her professional position in Sydney, and the possibility that Mr. Rawack might suppose that the success of a lady in the same profession would interfere with Madame Rawack, even more than a gentleman professor, by reason of the fact of many ladies preferring that their daughters should be taught by a lady rather than by a gentleman, our impression being that it might probably be thought that pupils who were placed with a gentleman professor during Madame Rawack's absence, would return to her if she came back; which was less likely to occur, if in the meantime they had received satisfactory instructions from a lady.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

56. Some time about the end of October last, and either at or after my conversation with Mr. Hanson, on the evening of the 29th day of that month set forth in the 52nd paragraph hereof, Mr. Hanson asked me if I knew a man of the name of Montagu. I said, (as the fact was), that I did not—that I had never heard his name before. Mr. Hanson then then said that if Signor Cutolo had anything to do with the anonymous letters, he thought Mr. Montagu a likely man to be mixed up with, or a party concerned in it, stating, as his reason, that he had been turned off the staff of the Sydney Empire newspaper for anonymous letter writing, and also, that he gave lessons at the house where Signor Cutolo lodged. I have since learned that Mr. Montagu's real name is Nathan.

57. Early in the month of November last I called upon Dr. Brereton, to consult him on the subject of my own illness, when, in the course of conversation relative thereto, I stated that I was under mental excitement (as was the fact, arising from the circumstances hereinbefore mentioned), and informed him of the cause thereof, when he stated to me that he was already aware of it, as he had been himself the recipient of anonymous letters on the same subject; and he then handed me two letters, both of which he had, as he informed me, received through the Post Office,—one being the letter, (No. 4), hereinbefore set out, and the other (No. 5 b), addressed “Dr. Le Gay Brereton, Macquarie-street,” and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp, of the said 29th day of October last, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 5 b.)

“ Sir,

“ Some time since I wrote you a letter respecting Mrs. Bentley, and promised in a few days to reveal my name; circumstances have arisen which will, at present, prevent my doing so, and I feel that you may now believe anything written anonymously.

“ Since writing you, I have myself witnessed Mrs. Bentley conduct herself in the most disgraceful manner. I have this morning seen a letter written by her, asking the gentleman to whom I alluded, to meet her on Wednesday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, in the bush behind Mr. Lamb's house, on the South Head Road. If you have not hitherto believed me, because I, unfortunately, cannot tell you my name at present, I only ask you to go and convince yourself, and I leave it in your hands to tell her husband; her only excuse is, that she possibly may not know what she does, for her own medical attendant told me himself that she drank, and that, after the birth of her last little boy, he had seen her almost fall in crossing the room, and in such a state that she was totally unfit to be left a moment alone with her own children. Once more asking you to convince yourself of the truth of what I am saying,

“ I remain, yours truly,
“ _____.”

58. Before, and in, and after the month of November last, a young lady, a near relative of Herman Milford, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, and resident with him, was a pupil of Mrs. Bentley's. Early in the month of February last, Mr. Wrench placed in my hands another letter (No. 6,) which I have been informed and believe was received on the 5th day of November last, through the Post Office, by Mr. Herman Milford, addressed “Herman Milford, Esq., Elizabeth-street,” and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 6.)

“ Sir,

“ Hearing a few days since that your sister, Miss Siddins, was a pupil of Mrs. Bentley's, and feeling sure that you would be particular with whom that lady associated, I feel it my duty, painful as it may be, to tell you, that Mrs. Bentley is one who no lady, married or single, ought to know; under a quiet exterior she hides a character as bad as the very worst of her sex. Not many days since, I saw her myself walking in the Gardens, with a gentleman's arm round her waist; and some time since, poor Mr. Bentley having to sleep at the Club, she was actually carrying on a liaison with a gentleman very well known in Sydney, who I myself saw letting himself out of her house at 3 o'clock in the morning, as I was returning from an evening party; of course he could but have been there for one object. I feel you may possibly not believe what has been said by an anonymous letter, and circumstances prevent my signing my name for the present, but in a few days I will give you absolute proof of what I say—meanwhile,

“ I remain, yours truly,

59. Shortly after I obtained the letter (No. 5b,) from Dr. Brereton, Mr. Hanson consulted me, and proposed that the matter should be put by him in the hands of the police, to which I assented, and gave him the several anonymous letters hereinbefore set out, and referred to as Nos. 5, 5a, and 5b, with all of which he, as he informed me, consulted Mr. Harrison, the Inspector of the Detective Police in Sydney.

60. I afterwards again saw Mr. Hanson, who said that he had seen Mr. Harrison, and that he had little doubt that we were on the right track (meaning, as I understood, that our suspicions as to Signor Cutolo were believed to be correct). A few days after this, I met Mr. Harrison at Mr. Hanson's house, by appointment, and on that occasion Mr. Harrison expressed his opinion that it was not the work of an Englishman, and conveyed the impression to my mind that he suspected some person in particular, but without naming any one; he also said he would get the handwriting of all the professional people in Sydney, and that he thought he would be able to tell me something at the end of the week. After more than a week had elapsed, I inquired of Mr. Hanson, when I learnt from him that Mr. Harrison had gone out of Sydney with the letters referred to as No. 5, No. 5a, No. 5b, in his possession, without having reported anything, and Mr. Hanson said he would communicate with him (Mr. Harrison) on his return to Sydney. Some time subsequently Mr. Hanson informed me that he had seen Mr. Harrison, who had been able to do nothing; and upon this occasion Mr. Hanson expressed his dissatisfaction with Mr. Harrison's conduct, and and said, "I spoke to him very plainly, and told him that if he'd had £50 given to him it would have been found out." And Mr. Hanson also at this interview informed me that Mr. Harrison was on friendly terms with both Signor Cutolo and Mr. Montagu, and no doubt had told them all about it; and Mr. Hanson then gave me back the letters I had given him as aforesaid. I repeated this conversation to Mrs. Bentley.

61. In the month of December last I consulted Messrs. Johnson and Johnson, solicitors, of Sydney, and they have ever since acted as my solicitors in this matter, Mr. Robert Johnson of that firm being the gentleman who has personally acted throughout for me in this business. I placed before Mr. Robert Johnson all the aforesaid anonymous letters then in my possession, and left them in his charge, and fully and truly detailed to him all the facts and circumstances of the case, so far as I was aware of them, and particularly our suspicions relative to Mr. Rawack and Signor Cutolo, and the reasons which operated upon our minds for entertaining these suspicions; and told him, as the fact was, that we were in our own minds then in doubt as to whether our suspicions were more justified in respect of one of those individuals than the other; and I had a long and particular discussion with Mr. Robert Johnson at this time as to whether we were, under the circumstances, morally justified in suspecting either of them. Mr. Johnson retained possession of the letters for a considerable time.

62. On or about the 26th day of December last, in the morning, Mr. Hanson told me that he had seen Signor Cutolo a day or two previous; that, although their former intimacy had been discontinued by Signor Cutolo since the receipt of the anonymous letters, he (Signor Cutolo) was most demonstrative in shaking hands with him—talked about a new pianoforte he was getting from England—said that he intended to give a concert for the Destitute Children's Asylum, at Randwick—and placed a letter from himself to the editor of the Sydney Empire in his (Mr. Hanson's) hands, in reference to such concert; and Mr. Hanson remarked to me that he thought it a very strange thing that Signor Cutolo should bring such a letter to him, and not send it to the Sydney Morning Herald, and added, "I'm more than ever convinced from his manner that we are right in our suspicions." About this time Monsieur Boulanger arrived in Sydney from Melbourne.

And the said deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

63. One day early in January last I was walking in George-street, near Brush and M'Donald's, when I saw Mr. Aldis talking to Monsieur Boulanger, whom I did not at that time know. Mr. Aldis stopped me, and said, "Will you allow me to introduce Boulanger to you?" and he then introduced him to me, saying at the time, "I hope you will come up to my house some night soon and hear him play," which I said I should be happy to do, and we then parted. As I left them I saw Signor Cutolo passing by on the other side of the street, near to the French Café, and he appeared to me to look angry. I have stated that this occurrence took place on the 6th day of January last, and I still believe it did occur on that day. My reason for fixing that as the day is, that in the letter (No. 7) hereinafter set out (which, according to the post-mark, was posted on the 7th day of January last), the introduction of Monsieur Boulanger to me is referred to as having taken place on the previous day, which, at the time I first heard of that letter, agreed with my own recollection, and I have therefore presumed that it correctly referred to the day of that introduction. I never kept a diary, nor, as far as I am aware, did Mr. Bentley, until he had placed this matter in Mr. Harrison's hands, at the end of March last, and it is possible the day of the introduction may not have been the 6th day of January. I have been informed, on more than one occasion, that I must be wrong in declaring that I saw Signor Cutolo on that day in Sydney, as represented by me, and that it can be clearly proved that such could not have been the case; but notwithstanding that information, I then adhered to, and still do adhere to, my original statement, and depose positively that I did see him, as above deposed to, on the occasion of Mr. Aldis introducing M. Boulanger to me, whenever that was; but I admit it may be possible (although I do not believe it to be the case) that the date mentioned is not correct.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

64. On the afternoon of one day early in January last (a short time before Mrs. Bentley and I visited at Mr. Aldis', as hereinafter mentioned), Mrs. Bentley informed Mr. Bentley that M. Boulanger had that day been introduced to her by Mr. Aldis, and of the fact of Signor Cutolo passing by at the time, adding, "He looked so cross; but I don't know that I ought to say that, for he never looks very amiable."

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

65. I afterwards ascertained, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, that on the 7th day of January last, another letter (No. 7) was received through the Post Office by Mr. Aldis, addressed "— Aldis, Esq., George-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy:—

(No. 7.)

"Sir,

"If I am rightly informed, you yesterday introduced Monsieur Boulanger to Mrs. Bentley. Now, sir, I feel that from my not hitherto being able to sign my name, you have not entirely believed my assertion as regards the lady. Once again I must positively affirm what I have stated to be correct. I know your love for music, but will you, as the father of grown-up daughters, allow two people to be on friendly terms with your family, who have so disgraced themselves? Go to Melbourne, and see what they will say of Monsieur Boulanger—that he is a thorough blackguard, unfit to be admitted into any society. Go to Italy, and see what they will say of Mrs. Bentley—they will curse her name;—and these are the two people you are admitting into your family. Monsieur Boulanger pretends he is here on a visit; it is false.

" I have the strongest proof he already knows Mrs. Bentley, and has come here with the idea that they may play into each other's hands, and crush the other professionals; they, however, will find themselves greatly mistaken; no time or expense shall be spared to show the world what Mrs. Bentley is; and if Boulanger remains he shall rue the day he set his foot in Sydney.

" I hear, sir, that in the kindness of your heart you are interesting yourself in bringing him again before the public in Sydney. Let me, as a friend, advise you not to do so. He laughs and turns you and yours into ridicule behind your back (as also does Mrs. Bentley); it might be successful for the time, but the whole world will laugh at you afterwards, and say (as indeed it has said already), ' Mr. Aldis has all the professionals of bad character at his house, but the respectable ones never.' Sir, I have no motive in writing this, but feeling for your daughters, who I sincerely admire. Do not be led away by your love of music in making them associate with those whose own countrymen (loose as their ideas of morality are) would not admit into their society, and do not, I beg of you, my dear sir, allow your name to be so continually associated with all that is bad. I am sorry to have taken up your time, but you will pardon me I am sure, and I beg * * * myself, yours truly,— * * * you shall * * * my name."

66. On the evening of the 8th day of January last, my wife and I went to Mr. Aldis' house, by invitation, to meet Monsieur Boulanger, whom we met there accordingly. After we had been there a short time, Mr. Aldis informed me that he had had an anonymous letter about Mrs. Bentley and Monsieur Boulanger, to which I replied, " How odd! why, Cutolo passed by when you were introducing M. Boulanger to Mrs. Bentley." At the same time Miss Aldis placed some music in my hands, which she stated had been given to her by Signor Cutolo, and on which her name was inscribed in a handwriting which then struck me as bearing some resemblance to the handwriting of the letters (Nos. 4 and 5) herein set out and referred to. I was very much excited, and Mr. Aldis requested me not to speak on the subject to M. Boulanger. The next morning Mr. Aldis showed me the letter (No. 7), and either then or afterwards gave me that letter. I was greatly agitated during the whole of that day in consequence of what had transpired, and in the night I awoke in consequence of my mouth being filled with blood, which I found arose from the breaking of a blood vessel. I immediately aroused Mrs. Bentley, who forthwith sent one of our servants for Dr. Brereton, who came in a short time, and saw the position I was in, and prescribed medicine for me, and gave instructions as to how I was to be treated; and also told Mrs. Bentley that I must not be left alone for a moment, and that I must not be allowed under any circumstances to see anyone.

67. The same day I heard Mr. Hanson's voice in our drawing-room. Feeling that in all probability I should not survive the illness I was suffering from, I insisted on seeing him, and made him give me his solemn promise that he would see Mr. Aldis and point out to him the propriety of immediately informing Monsieur Boulanger of all that had occurred in reference to anonymous letters, that he might be put upon his guard and so enabled to protect himself, and I believe I wrote a few lines to Mr. Aldis on the subject, being propped up with pillows in order to be able to do so.

68. About the middle of January last (after I had partially recovered from the aforesaid illness) I saw Mr. Hanson at my house, and he then told me that he had had a curious interview with Mr. Montague. That he had called upon him about Signor Cutolo's concert for the Destitute Children's Asylum, but seemed in doubt how he would be received, and that he (Mr. Hanson) told him that he recognized him on that occasion as the Honorary Secretary of the proposed concert, and therefore could but receive him with civility. That the concert was discussed; that he (Mr. Hanson) stated that Signor Cutolo ought to be encouraged in giving a concert for such a praiseworthy object, and spoke in high terms of approbation of the intentions of Signor Cutolo. Mr. Hanson also said that he had been on his guard in this interview, and had played his cards well, feeling sure that Mr. Montague would come back to him, and that in consequence something might be elicited as to the authorship of the anonymous letters.

69. On the evening of the 20th day of January last, Monsieur Boulanger gave a concert in Sydney, at which I was too ill to attend; I requested Mrs. Bentley to go to it.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

70. I accordingly went to the said concert, accompanied by Mrs. Hanson. When I arrived, Mr. Aldis accosted me and informed me that M. Boulanger had received a letter, purporting to have been written by me, but I did not then learn its contents or further particulars of it.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

71. A day or two afterwards, I received from Mr. Aldis, or M. Boulanger, two letters enclosed in one envelope, addressed thus: " — Boulanger, Esq., Royal Hotel," and having the Sydney Post Office stamp of the 20th day of January last, which said two letters were, as I was informed by Monsieur Boulanger, received by him through the Post Office on that day. The following are copies of those letters :—

(No. 8.)

" Sir,
" I know not if you intend remaining in Sydney, but if you do or not, I feel you ought to know the accusations that a professional lady here is bringing against you—Mrs. Bentley—who, I am aware you already know, is spreading the most disgraceful reports “ reports against you ; and to show you that what I say is correct, I enclose you a letter, written by her to one of my greatest friends. Now, sir, I am the last who would wish to injure this lady, but I think it only a duty to expose those sailing under false colours. I must ask you not to divulge the contents of this letter, as my friend may not like my making use of a letter written to him, but I think you will see the necessity after this, of speaking to all your friends of Mrs. Bentley as a person who is totally unfit to be admitted into society, whose word is not to be believed, and who ought to be treated with the greatest contempt.

“ I should not have written this, did I not feel you ought to be informed of what the lady-like Mrs. Bentley is capable of.

“ I remain, Sir, yours truly,
“ _____.”

(No. 8a.)

“ Dear Sir,

“ You ask me what I think of M. Boulanger ; I need only reply by telling you the reason he left Melbourne. Some time since he taught in a gentleman’s family—a great friend of mine—living at St. Kilda. After being received as the greatest friend by this gentleman, he repaid their kindness by the greatest villany ; he seduced his eldest daughter, a beautiful girl of eighteen, who was engaged to be married, and a few days previous to his leaving Melbourne, she had a little boy, and the father threatened to enter law proceedings against him if he did not leave Melbourne immediately.

“ I need scarcely say what I think of a man who would do such a thing as this. I know what you will say. With kind regards, hoping soon to see you,

“ I remain, yours sincerely, “ LILLY BENTLEY.

“ 67, Elizabeth-street North.”

72. Monsieur Boulanger informed me that he received the said two letters, (8 and 8a.) at the Royal Hotel, just as he was preparing to proceed to his said concert.

73. Mr. Aldis informed me that he received to Monsieur Boulanger, on the day following the said concert, all the circumstances, as far as he then knew them, relative to the anonymous letters hereinbefore referred to.

74. I therefore determined that, so far as was in my power, I would further the views of Monsieur Boulanger. I came to this determination, not only from sympathy, but in the belief that with such a talented artiste to contend against, the author of the anonymous letters would persevere in his schemes, and eventually do some act which would lead to detection.

75. On or about the 22nd day of January last, in the evening, I called at Mr. Hanson’s house, when he placed in my hands two other letters contained in one envelope, which he informed me he had that day received through the Post Office, addressed, “ — Hanson, Esq., Castlereagh-street,” and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letters the following are copies.

(No. 9.)

“ Sir,
“ Knowing your love of justice, and hearing M. Boulanger intends giving another concert, I enclose you the following letter (which I am sure you will destroy when read, a lady’s name being concerned in it), feeling sure you will not give him the support of your journal when it is an absolute duty to society such a man should not be upheld, occupying the position he does. I will make no remarks ; the letter speaks for itself.

“ Yours truly,
“ W. BENHIN.”

(No. 9a.)

“ My dear Willie,

“ We are overwhelmed with grief at an event which has happened in our family. You know Boulanger has been teaching Amy music for some months past, and he has been received by the family with the greatest kindness, which he has repaid with unheard of villany. Amy, who has been ill for some time, a few days since was taken so much worse we were obliged to send for the medical man, and to our intense horror, two hours after his arrival she had a little boy, of whom Boulanger is the father. I can say nothing in extenuation of Amy but her youth ; but of Boulanger, who has insinuated himself into her affections, what is too bad for such a scoundrel ? William saw him once after ; he did not attempt to deny it, and it ended in his being kicked out of the house. I hear he is now in Sydney, and intends remaining there. Surely he will be hooted whenever he makes his appearance in public, and do not let him ruin other families as he has ours. Poor Amy is dangerously ill. In haste, I am your affectionate cousin,

“ SOPHIA MARTIN.”

76. On the following day, namely, the 23rd day of January last, or thereabouts, Mr. Aldis gave me two other letters contained in an envelope, which he informed me he had received on the said 22nd day of January last, through the Post Office, addressed, “ — Aldis, Esq., George-street,” and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letters the following are copies :—

(No. 9b.)

“ Sir,

“ I some time since sent you a letter respecting M. Boulanger, telling you what a thorough blackguard he was. Since writing that I have received the following letter from a cousin of mine, which I enclose, to let you see that what I say is correct. No one “ can

“ can doubt M. Boulanger’s musical talents, and as a great lover of everything musical, it is
 “ with the greatest pain I expose him, but I feel it a duty, as people may be entrusting their “ daughters to him, and he may be the villain to them which he has been to my friend’s “ daughter.

“ I hear he has the audacity to speak of giving another concert. Sir, you surely will “ not countenance him after knowing these facts. Boulanger had better leave Sydney, and “ soon, or he shall be scouted from the place. Sir, to show you what I think of him, did
 “ he enter my doors, I would kick him out, as a liar and a villain.

“ One of the principal members of your Philharmonic Society, who has been in “ Melbourne for some time, told me a few days since, he did not think he was a fit person “ to be associated with any society which had any claim to respectability.

“ And now, sir, I will conclude, only enclosing the following letter, and remain,

“ Yours truly,
 “ _____.”

“ My dear Willie,

“ I know not how to tell you what has taken place at St. Kilda; we are “ overwhelmed with grief. You know M. Boulanger has been teaching Amy music for “ some months, and has been received into the family as the greatest friend. We always “ thought him a gentleman, for he is so specious; the kindness he has received he has “ repaid with the greatest villany. Amy, who has been ill for some time, was a few “ days since, taken so much worse we were obliged to send for a medical man, and in a few “ hours, to our intense horror, she had a little boy, of whom Boulanger is the father. I “ cannot say one word in extenuation of Amy but her youth; but Boulanger, who has basely “ insinuated himself into her affections, what is too bad for him? William saw him once “ after; he did not attempt to deny it, and it ended in his being horsewhipped out of the “ house.

“ I hear the wretch is gone to Sydney, intending to remain there. Do not allow “ him to ruin other families, but expose him. Poor Amy is dangerously ill. With kind “ love to your wife, and kisses to the children,

“ I am, your affectionate cousin,
 “ SOPHIA MINDON.”

77. On the morning of the 25th day of January last, Mr. Hanson called upon me at the Union Club, evidently under great excitement. As he entered the room where I was, he made a statement to the following effect, “ Oh! I have seen Cutolo at my office, and had a most extraordinary interview with him. He came in, and shook me by the hand, and said he must thank me for the very kind manner in which I had spoken of him to Mr. Montague, and, after some further conversation, begged that I would not allow him to be unfavourably reviewed. I said we have a stern duty to perform to the public, but I should not think, with his talents, he had much to fear. He said, ‘ Oh! but I’ve so much to contend against; I have given so much offence by my public examination of my pupils, and the consequence is that I have ceased to teach at the Misses Cooksey’s school, also in Mr. Bradley’s family.’ I said, ‘ Ah! By-the-by, who succeeded you at the Misses Cooksey’s?’ He said, ‘ D’Apice.’ I, not knowing how the name was spelt, said, ‘ Who is he—is he an Englishman?’ He replied, ‘ Oh no, an Italian—a man of no talent—a Jesuit—a believer in the Pope; but his name is not D’Apice, his name is Sica.’ I replied, ‘ Ah! I suppose you’re a Garibaldite?’ He said, ‘ Oh yes, oh yes, I’m a Garibaldite.’” I replied to Mr. Hanson, “ Have you seen the Herald of this morning?” which I then handed to him. He said he had not seen it. The Sydney Morning Herald of that day (the 25th day of January last), contained an advertisement, of which the following is a copy:—

“ D’APICE alias SICA, Signor, Professor of Music, formerly of Naples.—Your wife and two daughters just arrived safely, but in very delicate health, from London. Pray do write without delay. Address, General Post Office, Melbourne.”

78. Mr. Hanson read the advertisement in question, and made some remarks, the exact purport of which I do not now recollect.

79. In the Sydney Morning Herald of the following day an advertisement from Signor D’Apice appeared, contradicting the statement contained in the last previously mentioned advertisement, and also an advertisement from the proprietors of the said paper, offering a reward of £25 to discover the writer. Afterwards appeared another advertisement in the same paper from the proprietors, in which they requested one Margaret Dodd to call at their offices in reference to a letter addressed to them by her on the 27th then instant, on the same subject. The following are copies of these three advertisements:—

1.

“ PERSONS ADVERTISED FOR.—Referring to the advertisements under the above heading, inserted in the issue of the Sydney Morning Herald of the 25th January instant, addressed to ‘ D’Apice, alias Sica, Signor, Professor of Music, formerly of Naples,’ stating that ‘ his wife and two daughters had arrived at Melbourne,’ I can only say that I have never been married, and that the advertisement is a false and malicious libel.

“ CHARLES D’APICE.

“ Villa Floridiana, Hunter’s Hill,

2.

“ £25 REWARD.—If the young lady who left an advertisement at this office on Friday evening, commencing ‘ D’Apice, alias Sica, Signor,’ and which was published this morning, will disclose the name of the person who employed her to bring the M.S., so that the writer may be discovered, the above reward will be paid to her by John Fairfax and Sons.

“ Herald Office, January 25th.”

3.

“ MARGARET DODD.—This lady is earnestly requested to call at the Herald Office. If her letter of the 27th instant, addressed to the Proprietors of this Journal, is true, she can have no motive for concealment; if it is false, the writer deserves the most severe punishment.”

80. The before-mentioned concert for the Destitute Children’s Asylum was advertised for the 29th day of January last. A few days previous to that day Mr. Hanson came to my office again, in a state of excitement, and, as he entered my room, made a statement to the following effect :—“ I’ve just been to your house, and found you had left. I told you Montagu would come down again; he has brought me a notice of the concert for the Destitute Children’s Asylum for insertion in the Empire, which is the most fulsome production I have ever read. It confirms me in my opinion that Signor Cutolo is a humbug.”

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

81. On the 31st day of December last, and in January last, I visited at two evening parties at the house of Mr. Wrench, and one at Mr. Herman Milford’s, and one at Mr. Henry Milford’s, on which occasion I met and was introduced to Mrs. Milford, the wife of Mr. Justice Milford, and Mrs. Robert Johnson, of Double Bay. A considerable number of visitors were present at each of those parties, and very many of the same visitors at each of them. Signor St. Juste was amongst the guests at one or two of them, and Mr. Moss, the professor of music and musicseller, of Hunter-street, Sydney, presided at the pianoforte on some of those occasions.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

82. On or about the 3rd day of February last Mr. Wrench gave me another letter, which he informed me he had received through the Post Office in the early part of January last, in an envelope, which he had lost, addressed to him, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 10.)

“ Sir,

“ Some time since I wrote to you respecting a lady of your acquaintance. I have heard since that Mrs. Bentley was at your house on the last day of the old year. Now, sir, I know you are the last person to believe ill of your friends, but I also presume you would not like your wife’s name to be talked about as admitting improper characters into her house, which is now done. Three of your most intimate friends told me they did not choose to accept Mrs. Wrench’s invitations, when they had to meet a woman of Mrs. Bentley’s character, and that they would take good care she was not admitted anywhere where they possessed any influence. She is a most contemptible woman, and I am determined the world shall know her. When her poor husband was lying upon what might have been his death-bed, only two days after his breaking the blood-vessel, that heartless, disreputable woman was walking in the Botanical Gardens for three hours with a gentleman whose character is well known in Sydney, with his arm round her waist; and on leaving the Gardens they drove off in a Hansom cab. I met Mrs. Bentley close to her own door, returning from her rendezvous, and she told me, with the most hypocritical air imaginable, little thinking I had seen her, that she had been out for a few minutes, Mr. Bentley being better. Now, sir, will you allow this woman to enter your house, and associate with you wife? I am sure you will not. Mrs. Wrench is beginning to be talked about very freely for allowing her at her parties, and you will find your friends gradually leaving you, if you invite the extremely quiet Mrs. Bentley to meet them.

“ I have written to you, dear sir, knowing, of course, you are the last person to hear what people say of your guests, and feeling a sincere regard that your kindness of heart should not allow your wife to be spoken against; and I am quite sure you will think seriously of what I have said, and at once put your veto on Mrs. Bentley entering your house again.

“ I am, dear Sir,
“ Yours truly,
“ _____”

83. On or about the same occasion, namely the said 3rd day of February last, Mr. Wrench gave me two other letters, which he informed me he had received through the Post Office in one envelope, on the 27th day of January last, addressed “ — Wrench, Esq., Pitt-street,” and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letters the following are copies :—

(No. 11.)

“ Dear Sir,

“ Circumstances having prevented me signing my name (the cause of which did you but know, I am sure you would not condemn); and feeling, perhaps, you have had “ some

“ some right in not giving entire credence to what I have said respecting Mrs. Bentley, I enclose you a letter written by her to a gentleman you are very well acquainted with, who is not only a roué but a married man, and who showed it to me, boasting that he could carry on a liaison with Mrs. Bentley. I will make no comments, but only ask you if this is a fit companion for your wife ?

“ I remain, yours truly,
“ _____ ”

(No. 11a.)

“ My dear Edward,

“ How can you say I do not care for you ? You know I have forfeited all I should hold most dear to you. Indeed I could not meet you on Saturday. Mr. Bentley made me go out with him, but I will try to do so on Friday if you will be at Newtown at 12 o'clock. If possible I will try to make him sleep at the Union Club for a few nights, and then you can manage as you did when he was at the Australian. Does your wife suspect anything ? and now good-bye dear Edward ; never say again I do not care for you. You know I love you better than any one in this world, and will remain yours jusqu'à la mort.

“ LILY BENTLEY.”

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

84. At one of my interviews with Mr. Wrench, he informed me that Captain M'Lerie had shewn him a bundle of letters known to the police to be the handwriting of Mr. Montagu, and that upon comparing some of that handwriting with some of the anonymous letters herein referred to, as being in a peculiar handwriting, the general resemblance was great, and that some of the words in each were so alike that had one been traced from the other they could not have presented so great a similarity.

85. In the early part of February last I received another letter, which I was informed and believe was received by Mrs. Robert Johnson through the Post Office, on or about the 30th day of January last, addressed “ Mrs. R. Johnson, Double Bay,” and bearing the Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 12.)

“ Madam,

“ You will, I am sure, pardon the liberty I have taken in addressing you, being myself a perfect stranger to you, but if I am rightly informed you have lately been in the habit of meeting Mrs. Bentley at different evening parties where your daughter has also been present. Now, madam, much as I dislike saying anything against any lady, I feel it a duty which I owe to society to inform you the above mentioned lady is not a fit person for any young lady to associate with, and several of her husband's friends, who respect him, have lately been obliged to refuse to countenance her in any way whatever. For some time past she has been carrying on a most disgraceful liaison with a gentleman very well known in Sydney, and this has been carried on to so much extent, that one of Mrs. Bentley's greatest friends told me she had forbidden her to enter her house, and that she would never allow her daughter to speak to her again. Now, madam, I would ask you, is this a fit person for your daughter to be in the habit of meeting, and is not the duty of those who visit much, to refuse to meet a woman of so bad a character ? You will, I am sure, pardon me for encroaching upon your time, but I know how particular a mother is with whom her daughter associates, and I am quite sure did you know what Mrs. Bentley was, you would not allow Miss Johnson to meet her.

“ In haste, I remain, Madam,

“ Yours respectfully,

“ H. BENHAN.”

86. In the early part of February last, and, as I believe, after the 4th of that month, I also received two other letters which I was informed and believe were received by Mrs. Robert Johnson through the Post Office, on or about the 3rd day of February last, in one envelope, addressed “ Mrs. R. Johnson, Double Bay,” and bearing the Post Office stamp of that date, of which letters the following are copies :—

(No. 13.)

“ Madam,

“ I took the liberty of sending you a letter a few days since, respecting Mrs. Bentley. Feeling that you may think that it was from some personal feeling I attacked the above-mentioned lady, I enclose you a letter written by her, which was sent me by a friend of mine, who is well known in Sydney as a great roué, and also a married man ; he sent me this letter, having boasted he could carry on a liaison with Mrs. Bentley, which at first I own I did not believe, but I know the handwriting to be hers, and what is more, I saw her walking in the Botanical Gardens a few days since, with this gentleman's arm round her waist. Now, madam, I am sure you will say with me this is not a fit person for any daughter of yours to associate with ; and is it not the duty of every lady who has daughters, to refuse to allow them to mix in any society where she is admitted ? By her own confession her friends are cutting her, and rightly to. If you go or send anyone to Newtown at the time mentioned in the letter, you will see without any doubt what a character Mrs. Bentley is ; if she is not more careful, in a very short time she will have to leave Sydney altogether. I am sure I need not ask you not to mention the contents of this letter to any but those in your own family, as my friend would be annoyed at my having sent you Mrs. Bentley's letter ; but without my making any further comments, I am sure you will acknowledge I have only done my duty to society.

“ I remain, Madam,

“ Yours respectfully,

“ H. BENHEN.”

(No. 13a.)

(No. 13a.)

" My dearest Edward,

" You are wrong in reproaching me; you know I love you and you only.
 " Have I not given you proof, in forfeiting all that a woman holds most dear? Surely, dear
 " Edward, you cannot believe what you say? Indeed I could not meet you on Saturday.
 " Mr. Bentley insisted on my going out with him on Tuesday; however, I will be at the " old place, by the Railway Station, at Newtown, at 12 o'clock. If possible I will get Mr.
 " Bentley to sleep out for a few nights, and then you can manage as you did when he was " at the Australian. You have your latch key. By-the-by, does your wife suspect anything?
 " Mr. Bentley is perfectly innocent of everything; but I fear others are beginning to think " all is not quite as they think it should be, for two or three of my friends have cut me
 " lately, so do be careful. Ere I conclude, let me once more tell you, dearest, that I love " you and you only, and will remain yours jusqu'à la mort.

" LILY BENTLEY.

" 67, Elizabeth-street North."

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

87. On Tuesday, the 4th of February last, I went in the Newtown omnibus (as I usually did on that day of the week) to Newtown, and after alighting from the omnibus on my way to Mr. Josephson's residence, at Enmore, I observed an elderly gentleman, apparently following me. On my return to Sydney, on the same occasion, on getting out of the omnibus in King-street, Sydney, I observed the same gentleman in the street, and on my way home found that he was still following me, and when I knocked at the door he appeared to me to be watching me as if to see where I went. I never saw that gentleman before or since to my knowledge, and I do not know who he is.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

88. On the 5th or 6th day of February last, Mr. Black called at our house, and having been informed of the receipt of the letters hereinbefore mentioned, purporting to contain appointments by Mrs. Bentley to meet a gentleman at Newtown, suggested that he should obtain the consent of Captain M'Lerie (the Inspector General of Police) to our obtaining the services of Mr. Gibson, a gentleman known to Mr. Black, and who then was temporarily employed in Captain M'Lerie's department, to which suggestion we assented, and the services of Mr. Gibson were accordingly obtained to watch Mrs. Bentley on her going again to Newtown on the following Friday, and observe anything that might take place.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

89. On the following Friday—the 7th day of February last—I went, as usual, to Newtown by the omnibus, and in consequence of the vehicle being driven much faster than ordinarily, I arrived at the omnibus stand at Newtown, about a quarter of an hour earlier than usual, and as I got out of the omnibus I saw Mr. Gibson near thereto.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

90. On Mrs. Bentley's return from Newtown on this occasion, Mr. Bentley asked her if anything had occurred, to which she replied that nothing had occurred.

91. In the evening of the last-mentioned day, Mr. Black again called at our house, and informed us that Mr. Gibson was at or near the omnibus stand at Newtown for some time before Mrs. Bentley arrived, and that about a quarter of an hour after she left the omnibus he saw the Honorable Mr. Merewether in the neighbourhood of the omnibus stand, and that he walked up the Enmore Road to Mr. Josephson's gate, looking about as if he expected to meet some one, and that he then turned back again, and walked away. Mr. Black also stated that Mr. Gibson did not at the time know Mr. Merewether, but that late in the afternoon of same day, while with Mr. Black, he had again seen him in Sydney, and pointed him out to Mr. Black, who identified him as Mr. Merewether.

92. During this evening, whilst Mr. Black was present, Mr. Hanson came, and a conversation ensued among all of us as to whether we were right in still suspecting Signor Cutolo. Mr. Black expressed himself very strongly that, in his opinion, we had very little evidence to justify us in that suspicion; and that he was quite sure that Mrs. Bentley had mistaken some one else for Signor Cutolo upon the occasion of the introduction of Monsieur Boulanger to her, as he had every reason to believe that Signor Cutolo was not in Sydney on the day assumed as that on which that introduction took place. Mr. Black also stated it as his opinion that we should not allow our minds to be prejudiced that Signor Cutolo's position in the musical world might be used by the villanous perpetrator of this persecution to conceal himself. Mrs. Bentley said that she knew Signor Cutolo so well that she could not have mistaken him. Mr. Hanson expressed his opinion in opposition to that of Mr. Black, placing his own views in the strongest possible light to establish that the suspicions against Signor Cutolo were just. At this period our own suspicions as to Mr. Rawack had been removed, and they were directed more than ever against Signor Cutolo.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

93. Mr. Black has several times informed me that Mr. Hanson has on many other occasions, when Mrs. Bentley and I were not present, strongly expressed his conviction that Signor Cutolo was the guilty party.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

94. During the following week, I believe on Friday, the 14th day of February last, I went by the omnibus, as usual, to Newtown. As the omnibus passed the Post Office, in George-street, Sydney, Mr. Merewether got in and went also to Newtown, and we both got out at the omnibus stand there. Mr. Merewether did not speak to me. I walked to and up the Enmore Road; and on crossing over to Mr. Josephson's grounds, I saw Mr. Merewether strolling about, and at some distance near the bottom of the said road. And

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

95. On Mrs. Bentley's return from Newtown on the last-mentioned occasion, Mrs Bentley informed Mr. Bentley of what had occurred; and on a subsequent occasion, when Mr. Hanson and Mr. Black called at our house, Mrs. Bentley informed them thereof.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

96. Early in the month of February last Mr. Wrench informed me that Mrs. Milford (the wife of Mr. Justice Milford) had just about that time received through the Post Office a similar anonymous letter (No. 14) reflecting on Mrs. Bentley, but which letter has not been placed in my hands.

97. On or about the 7th day of March last I ascertained, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, that on the 10th day of February last, another letter (No. 15) was received through the Post Office by Mr. Plunkett, addressed "J. H. Plunkett, Esq., Macquarie-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 15.)

" Sir,

" Knowing the high position you occupy in society and in the musical world, and seeing a concert advertised by M. Boulanger, I feel it my duty to tell you under what circumstances M. Boulanger left Melbourne, that you may not give him any of your support, for he is a most disreputable villain. M. Boulanger was engaged to teach in my brother's family, who resides at St. Kilda, and he was received there as one of the friends of the family. Their kindness he has repaid with the deepest villany, and a few weeks before he came to Sydney, my niece had a little boy of whom he was the father. My brother taxed him with it, and he did not even attempt to deny it, and it ended in his being horsewhipped out of the house, and my brother telling him if he ever returned to Melbourne again he would publicly expose him. Now, sir, is this the man for whom any man who has any regard for the rules of society should interest themselves; for his last concert was a failure in consequence of people knowing these facts? The musical profession of Sydney is now beginning to be spoken of most disparagingly, and is it not but just that those who cause this should not receive any support? There is a lady professional in Sydney at the present moment whose character is so disreputable that in England she would be scouted from society; but she hides under a quiet exterior, her vice, and she is only really known to a few — I allude to — who is known to admit gentlemen into her house when her husband is away, at 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning, and yet this woman teaches in the most respectable families, and is considered by them to be a lady of the most unimpeachable character. Now, sir, I am a great lover of music, and it is with pain I mention these facts; but I am sure you will agree with me in thinking, that those who occupy a respectable position in the musical profession should have some marked difference shewn to them from those who disgrace themselves and society. Feeling sure you will take what I have said into consideration,—

" I remain, Sir, yours truly,
" H. BENBRIDE."

98. Some time about the middle of February last, Mr. Hanson brought and gave to me three pieces of music (compositions of Signor Cutolo's) presented by Signor Cutolo to him, and respectively inscribed in manuscript, thus—"To William Hanson, Esquire, with Signor Cutolo's compliments," and one of which also bears in manuscript the signature "Cutolo." At the time Mr. Hanson so gave me the said pieces of music, he told me that his partner, Mr. Bennett (who had seen some of the before-mentioned anonymous letters) had casually seen the handwriting on the music above referred to, and exclaimed, "That writing is similar to the letters you" (meaning Mr. Hanson) "were talking about" (meaning the said anonymous letters).

99. Some time also about the middle of February last I met Mr. Huntley (Collector for the Australian Gas Company), in the street; he told me that he thought he had a clue to the "Margaret Dodd" case, and mentioned some particulars in reference thereto; and being under the impression that the advertisement relative to Signor D'Apice had been concocted by the same person or persons who had sent the anonymous letters about Mrs. Bentley, I immediately went to Mr. Fairfax and informed him of what Mr. Huntley had told me. Mr. Fairfax asked me to go with his clerk, who had received the advertisement about Signor D'Apice, to certain places, with a view of discovering the person who had taken that advertisement to the said newspaper. I went accordingly with Mr. Fairfax's said clerk to several places, but the person referred to did not at all answer the description of the person who took the said advertisement to the said Sydney Morning Herald.

100. On the 24th day of February last, a complimentary concert was given in Sydney, by a committee of gentlemen, to Monsieur Boulanger, at which Mrs. Bentley, accompanied by a gentleman and his sister, attended.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

101. On the following day, Tuesday, the 25th day of February last, I went to Newtown in the omnibus, as usual. On leaving the omnibus, and proceeding up the Enmore Road to Mr. Josephson's house, I found I was followed by a gentleman who was and is unknown to me, but whom I recollected seeing standing at the orchestra near the door of the concert room, at the concert on the previous evening. He rudely persisted in walking by my side, and talked about the concert, and asked me where I was going. I said I was going as usual to give my lessons. He replied, "Oh no, you're not, Mrs. Bentley." I then said, indignantly, "Then you'd better, sir, accompany me to the gentleman's house, where I am going." He then changed his manner, and said, "I beg your pardon, Mrs. Bentley; it will take me a long time to repair the insult I have offered to you." I replied, "You can only do that by telling me your name." He said, "I cannot do that," and then turned and left me. Mr. Hanson came to our house the same evening, and was then informed of the circumstances in this paragraph set forth, and I gave to him a description of the gentleman, and he suggested one or two persons whom, he stated, he thought likely to have been induced to go to meet me on the occasion in question.

102. In or about the beginning of March last, I purchased at Mr. Moss' music shop, a duet by Hummel, for two performers on one pianoforte.

103. One Saturday afternoon, I think early in March last, I saw Mr. Montagu (who had been previously pointed out to me) standing near one of the iron posts for the reception of letters, at the corner of Park-street and George-street, in Sydney. It immediately struck my mind that it was possible he might then be putting into the post an anonymous letter about me.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

104. Immediately on Mrs. Bentley's return home, she informed Mr. Bentley of the circumstance set forth in the preceding paragraph, and we resolved that Mr. Bentley should instantly go to Mr. Hanson and tell him of the circumstance, and advise with him what should be done.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

105. I immediately went to Mr. Hanson, and consulted with him accordingly. The Post Office being at this time closed, Mr. Hanson and I went out and met a gentleman connected with the Post Office, who said that he would give directions to have the letters from that particular post tied up and kept apart; and on the following Monday morning Mr. Hanson and I went to the Post Office about 8 o'clock, and by permission of the Post Office authorities had the letters from that particular post handed to us for inspection, as soon as the postman came in with them; we examined them accordingly, but made no discovery.

106. On the 17th day of March last, Monsieur Boulanger brought to my office the letter (No. 15); hereinafter set out, which he told me he had just received by post from Melbourne, enclosed in a letter from his wife, who was then there; and he stated to me that Mr. Plunkett advised that an advertisement should be put in a newspaper, and a detective officer employed. I drew up an advertisement accordingly, and went with M. Boulanger to Captain M'Lerie, who, after hesitation on account of difficulties which he expected would be thrown in the way by the Post Office authorities, gave his consent to a detective officer being employed in the matter, and wrote a draft of a letter to be sent to the Sydney Post Office, addressed "H. B.," which draft I copied and addressed accordingly, and caused it to be delivered and registered at the General Post Office, George-street, Sydney. Mr. Harrison was present at part of our interview with Captain M'Lerie, and it was arranged that the whole matter should be again placed in his hands in a day or two, on his return from the country, where he was then going, and in the meantime another police officer was employed to watch the Post Office, to see if any one came for the said letter addressed "H. B."

107. On the 19th day of March last, and the four following days, the last-mentioned advertisement was published in the Sydney Morning Herald. The following is a copy of that advertisement:—"If the gentleman who, on the 9th or 10th of February last, wrote to Mr. J. H. Plunkett on musical topics, and signed his name so indistinctly that it cannot be deciphered, will kindly call at the Sydney General Post Office, he will find a letter for him, addressed 'H. B.,' Sydney. Melbourne, 13th March."

108. On the afternoon of Tuesday, the 18th day of March last, on which day Signor Cutolo's concert in aid of the Destitute Children's Asylum was advertised to take place, Monsieur Boulanger came to my office and said that, from all he had heard from me, as well as Mr. Hanson and others, the disparaging manner in which Signor Cutolo had spoken to him of the musical profession, and his general conduct towards himself, prevented him from divesting himself of the impression that Signor Cutolo was the party attacking us. He said that his object in coming to me was to ask me to assist him in carrying out a plan which he thought might, as far as moral proof went, add to our convictions or otherwise; and he proposed that Mrs. Bentley and myself, and he and Mr. Aldis, and if possible others who had received the anonymous letters, should go to the concert, and that we should take care that Signor Cutolo should see us all together, conversing in the most friendly manner; that if he was guilty he might learn how signally he had failed, and that he was already suspected. I at first refused to agree to the plan proposed, but after seeing Mr. Aldis I eventually consented; and Monsieur Boulanger, Mr. Aldis, Mrs. Bentley, and myself, met together in the evening in the concert room. Signor Cutolo was to have played three times; he played twice only, and an apology was offered by Mr. Montagu for his not playing the third time, on account of his suffering from an accident to his finger, which in consequence was very inflamed. I was told a few days afterwards by Mr. Black, that he had been informed that Signor Cutolo, on the evening of his said concert, after he had played his second piece, was seen walking up and down the passage of the concert room, showing great passion, and tearing the Garibaldi ribbon out of his coat.

109. On the following day a paragraph appeared in the Sydney Empire, in reference to the aforesaid concert of the 18th day of March last, of which paragraph the following is a copy:—

"CONCERT IN AID OF THE DESTITUTE CHILDREN'S ASYLUM.—This concert took place last night, as advertised, at the Masonic Hall, York-street. We were sorry to observe that Signor Cutolo, under whose auspices the affair was got up, had again to have an apology offered for his non-fulfilment of his portion of the evening's entertainment, on account of “ his being suddenly attacked by an inflammation of one finger. We trust that Signor Cutolo will not attempt any more concerts until he recovers the use of his fingers. We may feel it necessary to refer again to this concert.”

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

110. On the evening of the 19th day of March last, Monsieur Boulanger was at our house, when, about 7 o'clock, Mr. Hanson came in, out of breath, and in a very excited state, and exclaimed, “ Montagu has been to the office and said ‘ Cutolo took up your paper this morning, and when he had read the paragraph about the concert threw the paper upon the floor, took up his hat, rushed out of the house, and had not been heard of since.’ ” The manner in which Mr. Hanson made this communication conveyed the impression that he was afraid Signor Cutolo had committed suicide, in reference to which impression Monsieur Boulanger said to him, “ You have nothing to upbraid yourself with; why do you fear?” Mr. Hanson replied, “ I don't fear; I hope the wretch has drowned himself; ” and after some further conversation left.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

111. Afterwards Monsieur Boulanger wrote a critique on the concert of the 18th day of March last, in accordance, as I understood, with a previous arrangement with Mr. Hanson, in which the performance of Signor Cutolo was severely criticised, which critique appeared in the Sydney Empire of the 21st day of March last.

112. On the afternoon of the 20th day of March last, Monsieur Boulanger brought me another letter, which he informed me he had that day received through the Post Office, addressed “ Monsieur Boulanger, Mr. Aldis', George-street,” and bearing the Post Office stamp of the previous day, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 16.)

“ A few days since I was informed you intended playing in public with Mrs. Bentley; now sir, allow me to state this fact, if either of you attempt such a thing, I swear by all I hold most sacred, to make you bitterly repent doing so. I indulge in no idle threats, but if you care not for yourselves, those who are near and dear to you may possibly have some hold on you. Mr. Bentley's hold on life is but slight, and a little thing will snap the cord which binds him to his cursed wife, and what will be the use of her playing then?

“ Think well of what I say, and know that no fear of consequences shall ever deter me doing what I have said, if you persist in joining yourselves together. So help me God. ————— An Enemy. I scorn and detest you both. ”

113. In consequence of the receipt of this letter, I called, with M. Boulanger, upon my solicitor, Mr. Robert Johnson, who advised us to act in defiance of the threats contained in it, and expressed his opinion that if a concert were given for the Sydney Infirmary or some other public institution, and if Mrs. Bentley played thereat with M. Boulanger, the party or parties writing these anonymous letters, might proceed to greater lengths, and do some act which would lead to their discovery. On my informing Mrs. Bentley of Mr. Johnson's opinion, she agreed to play with M. Boulanger, and afterwards I was informed by many of my friends that the plan proposed met with their entire approval.

114. On or about the 21st day of March last, Monsieur Boulanger called on me at my house, and asked me to let Mr. Harrison come in that evening to talk over the matter of the anonymous letters, as they were doing him great injury, saying that if I asked Mr. Harrison to my house, and treated him as a friend, and gave him £10 towards any expenses he might incur, to show him that I was in earnest, he would take more interest in the matter. I consented, and Monsieur Boulanger then said, “ I have anticipated your answer, and taken the liberty of asking him to come here at 9 o'clock.” M. Boulanger then left. At 9 o'clock M. Boulanger and Mr. Harrison came to my house, and Mr. Harrison was introduced to Mrs. Bentley, and we all supped together. After supper Mrs. Bentley left the room. All the anonymous letters that we then had, were then examined by Mr. Harrison, Monsieur Boulanger, and myself. After examining the letters, Mr. Harrison said, “ Oh, yes, I know the handwriting.” I then gave him the writing of Signor Cutolo on the music given to me by Mr. Hanson, and some writing given to me by Mr. Aldis, as Mr. Montagu's. He asked me for a pen, and he then traced out the peculiarities, which convinced him that Mr. Montagu, and no one else, was the writer, but he added, “ I will endeavour to get a letter of Mr. Montagu's which I have seen,” adding that the handwriting in that was even more like the handwriting of the anonymous letters than the writing of his then under examination. I then said to Mr. Harrison, “ I had better give you this note (handing him a £10 note) towards any expenses you may incur, as I suppose I must not tax the public purse.” This he refused to accept, saying that he would keep an account, which he would hand me when he had discovered the authors.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

115. A few days afterwards, Mr. Harrison brought the letters back, and said he had had them put under a magnifying glass by a banker in this City, to whom he had shown some handwriting which was a genuine letter of Mr. Montagu, and who said he was ready to take his oath that, in his opinion, the letters shown to him (being the anonymous letters so as aforesaid given to Mr. Harrison) were in the same handwriting as that genuine letter of Mr. Montagu; and on the occasion of returning the letters, Mr. Harrison produced one of Mr. Montagu's (signed, we believe, “ Montagu of the Glen ”), and pointed out the peculiarities in each. We placed ourselves entirely in Mr. Harrison's hands.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

116. Mr. Harrison then told me that he would willingly, at all times, attend to any suggestions we would make. Upon this or a subsequent occasion, Mr. Harrison stated that letters letters had been shown to him by Captain M'Lerie in reference to this matter, and that upon his mentioning Mr. Montagu's name, Captain M'Lerie said, "Why, you're a witch." Mr. Harrison frequently said to me that he was the first person to say Signor Cutolo was the principal in the affair, and had first told Mr. Hanson so.

117. On the evening of Saturday, the 22nd day of March last, Monsieur Boulanger and Mr. Harrison informed me that whilst they were talking in Mr. Clarke's music-shop in George-street, Sydney, Signor Cutolo had passed by in a cab. Mr. Harrison insisted that he could not have been seen by Signor Cutolo; Monsieur Boulanger expressed a different opinion, and said that after the cab had passed, Signor Cutolo had looked out of the window.

118. On the afternoon of Monday, the 24th day of March last, on returning home from the Union Club, I found a letter (No. 17) on my dining-room mantelpiece unopened; it came through the Post Office, addressed "Mrs. Bentley, 67, Elizabeth-street North," and bears the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date. Mrs. Bentley being engaged upstairs, I immediately opened the letter. The following is a copy of it:—

(No. 17.)

"Madam,

"A few days since I heard you were going to play in public with M. Boulanger. Now, you have both done me an injury which I can never forget, and I am determined you shall not do so; perhaps whatever I say to him will have no effect, but you are a woman, and, I believe, love your husband, and would therefore do anything to keep him from sorrow, which might kill him. Now, you can absolutely refuse to play with that blackguard, or associate yourself in ANY WAY with him. I appeal to all your better feelings as a woman to do this; and if you will follow my wishes, you shall neither of you have another word of or from me.

"Boulanger has a wife and child dependent on him; he shall be left alone to work his way, and you will therefore be doing him a kindness. You have your husband's health to think of, and let me ask you, did anything happen to you, would he long be here to take care of your little children? If, however, you persist in following out the course you intend, I will never leave you alone, whatever the consequences may be; I will prevent you playing together, if it be but at the last moment and the next I am in the hands of that cursed Harrison, who, I am perfectly aware, thinks he will take me, but he may yet learn he is not so clever as he thinks. Think well of what I say; I tell you plainly I hate you both, but plainly as I tell you this, I also say that if you will follow my wishes I will keep my promise, and you shall NEVER hear any more from me; if you will not, you shall rue the day you ever made me an enemy; and until I have crushed you both, which you both know I have it in my power to do, I will never cease.

"Yours, " _____ "

119. Shortly afterwards, I believe on the following day, Monsieur Boulanger came to our house, and I showed him the said last-mentioned letter (No. 17), and thereupon we entered into a discussion as to how the idea that he and Mrs. Bentley intended to play together in public had got abroad, as such a step had never been contemplated until after the receipt of the letter (No. 16) addressed to M. Boulanger. In the course of that discussion I informed Monsieur Boulanger that Mrs. Bentley had purchased the duet of Hummell's, as hereinbefore mentioned, and he said, "Why about that time I also purchased the same piece at Moss' for one of my pupils," whom he named. Up to the moment he made that statement I was unaware that he had made any such purchase. Mrs. Bentley was present at this conversation.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

120. Up to the moment when Monsieur Boulanger made the statement last above deposed to, I was unaware that he had made the above-mentioned purchase of Hummell's duet, and no idea had ever been entertained by me, or, as I believe, by him, of our playing together, until it was suggested by Mr. Johnson, as hereinbefore mentioned.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

121. One evening in the latter end of March last, about 8 o'clock, I went down stairs for a book, and found the street door open. I called to the servants, and begged them to be careful. I had on several other occasions found it open before this occasion; the lock was worn, and after the door was closed, unless it had a second push or jerk, it would at times fly open, as, until very recently, we had no latch-lock to it, although it had always a keyhole, which gave it the appearance of having one. The house also was without secure fastenings at the back, and we were accustomed to leave the back door open from the morning till night, until the servants went to bed.

And the deponents, Mary Ryan and Anna Maria Bradshaw, further say:—

122. Mr. Bentley has called our attention to the street door being left open, and has requested us to be careful not to allow it to be so.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

123. On or about the 25th day of March last, I received a note from Mr. Henry Burton Bradley, enclosing another letter (No. 18), received by him through the Post Office, addressed "Burton Bradley, Esq., Margaret-street," and bearing the Post Office stamp of the previous day, of which letter the following is a copy:—

(No. 18.)

"Sir,

"A few days since I was informed that you were admitting into your family a professional lady of this town, with whose character I am quite sure you are unacquainted.

"I

" I am the last who would wish to speak unkindly of another, but I have children of my own, and feel it a duty to society that such a woman should not be admitted into the privacy of our houses. Mrs. Bentley, sir, under a quiet exterior hides a character of the worst description. When her husband sleeps out of the house, I have seen gentlemen leaving her house at 2 and 3 in the morning. When her husband was dying, as every one thought, I saw her walking about, with a gentleman's arm round her waist, in the Gardens. Her sin is now, however, finding its own punishment; no one can see her without noticing the change in her appearance; she is now looking really ill, and only last — her own medical attendant told me she was killing herself by the life she led, and that he was so disgusted with her that he had refused to attend her any longer. Now, sir, I know how particular you are with your daughters. Will you allow this woman to associate with them? I am aware she is admitted into society, but society judges of people as they appear, not as they are. 'Ere many weeks are over I know the door of every respectable house will be shut against her. I am sure you will understand my object in writing; I feel that, like myself, your one thought is, that your daughters' friends should be those of unblemished character and reputation, and you will therefore pardon a liberty otherwise inexcusable.

" Sir, I remain, yours truly,
" H. DURBIN."

124. A short time previously to receiving the said last-mentioned letter from Mr. Bradley, I, at the request of Mr. Aldis, called on him at his office upon the subject of the said anonymous letters. He asked me to allow him to have them to compare with some letters he had in his possession. I gave them to him accordingly, and he afterwards returned them to me, saying that he had not found any resemblance in the handwriting to that with which he had compared them. I believe I only had three interviews with Mr. Bradley up to the time of his sending me the said letter (No. 18), and all those interviews were at his office, where I went for the purpose of seeing him, and I had never spoken to him before, except on one occasion, when I asked him for his interest as a member of the committee of the Union Club, on my behalf.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

125. I was and am wholly unacquainted with Mr. Bradley and his family, not even knowing any of them by sight, excepting that on the morning of the 27th day of May last Mr. Bentley pointed him out to me as he passed by us in George-street, walking with another gentleman (Mr. Ingelow, as Mr. Bentley informed me.)

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

126. Shortly after receiving the said letter (No. 18) from Mr. Bradley, I went to him and saw him, when he expressed his indignation at the letter, and then informed me that he thought it probable that the writer of it had heard that Mrs. Bradley had shortly before made an arrangement with a lady for giving instructions to his daughter, and had been erroneously informed that Mrs. Bentley was that lady.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

127. On or about the said 25th day of March last, in the evening, Mr. Harrison told us that he had seen Signor Cutolo on the previous day—the day when the said letter (No. 17) was posted—in a cab with Mrs. Cutolo, going, as he supposed, to the Railway Station; that he (Mr. Harrison) caught sight of Signor Cutolo in the cab, and turned round to look at him, when he saw Signor Cutolo looking out of the window of the cab at him.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

128. On or about the 26th day of March last, Mr. Hunt, of the Post Office, called upon me, and informed me that the registered letter, addressed " H. B.," had been called for; that the man who called for it read it, and said there was some mistake—that it was not for him, and threw it back and left, and that a detective police officer was following him. I went immediately to Captain M'Lerie's office to see if I could learn anything, but Mr. Harrison was not there, and I only learnt that it was the fact that an officer was following the man who went to the Post Office for the said registered letter. The same evening Mr. Harrison came to our house and informed me that the person who went to the Post Office for the letter was traced to Messrs. Herman, Brothers, booksellers in Sydney.

129. On the following day I was informed by Mr. Harrison that he had not been able to make anything of the bookseller, who said it was his habit to receive letters addressed " H. B.," of which Mr. Harrison expressed his disbelief.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

130. On the 1st day of April last Mr. Harrison came to our house in the evening, by appointment, to meet Monsieur Boulanger, to confer as to the propriety of inserting an advertisement in the newspapers offering a reward for the discovery of the parties concerned in writing the said anonymous letters. We had just sat down to tea when Mr. Harrison came in. Monsieur Boulanger, M. Harrison, and ourselves were all present together. Mr. Harrison produced a draft advertisement, which he had brought with him already written, offering a reward of £100. M. Boulanger expressed his opinion that the reward should be larger. Mr. Bentley then stated to Mr. Harrison that his (Mr. Bentley's) desire was not to offer any more than was absolutely necessary but that, if it was calculated to promote our object, he would willingly offer £400, as he knew his own and Mrs. Bentley's relations would willingly help us to pay it, should the reward have the effect desired. Some further discussion ensued, which ended in considerable alterations being made in the advertisement, and the sum offered remaining at £100—Mr. Harrison expressing his opinion that that sum would be sufficient, and he then left. The advertisement appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald and the Sydney Empire, on the 3rd day of April last, and several following days.

And

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

131. After this discussion, and writing and re-writing the advertisement, one of the servants was sent for some oysters for supper. M. Boulanger and my wife then returned to the drawing-room. I had occasion to go to the back parlour. I walked out on to the verandah, saw that it was a fine night, returned to the back parlour, and closed the verandah door, but whether I fastened it or not I cannot remember. I then went up stairs into the drawing-room, where Monsieur Boulanger and my wife were. M. Boulanger was sitting down to play at the pianoforte. Not more than three or four minutes elapsed from the time Monsieur Boulanger and my wife left me to go to the drawing-room, when I found them in that room.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

132. Monsieur Boulanger and I went together into the drawing-room, as mentioned in the last preceding paragraph, and neither of us left that room up to the time of Mr. Bentley joining us, which was only a few minutes after we parted below.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

133. After we had remained in the drawing-room about half-an-hour, our supper being ready, Monsieur Boulanger and ourselves all went down together to the dining-room. Mr. Bentley passed through the folding doors into the back parlour, with a light, to fetch a bottle of ale (the ale being kept in that room). Almost immediately he exclaimed, "Why, what's all this, look here; why the ground's covered with music!" Upon this M. Boulanger and Mrs. Bentley also went into the back parlour, and we all saw a quantity of music torn, evidently done wilfully, and the verandah door open. Mr. Bentley said, "Why, the verandah door's open, and I shut it." At the same time we observed that the music was so spread about that the verandah door could not be closed without removing some of the music. Mr. Bentley immediately stooped to gather it up, and cleared it from the verandah door, when Monsieur Boulanger said, in an emphatic manner, "I must insist on your not letting anyone disturb this until Harrison has seen it; I'm sure it will be better, so pray do instruct your servants." Monsieur Boulanger and Mr. Bentley, accompanied by Mrs. Bentley, took a candle and went all over the house, and at last Monsieur Boulanger went up the steps on the landing by our bed-room door, and put his head up through the opening there leading to the roof (which at that time had only a loose piece of wood, in place of a door), and said no one was there. Mrs. Bentley, at the time, expressed her fear to Monsieur Boulanger at his putting his head through the trap, as, if anyone was there, he might be injured. We then all went down stairs, shortly after which Mrs. Bentley fainted, and remained insensible for more than an hour. The servants were called, and brought pillows for Mrs. Bentley to recline upon. Remedies were used to restore her, and at length she was restored to consciousness, and was then seized with violent spasms of the heart, so violent indeed as to render it necessary for Monsieur Boulanger to hold her hands in both of his, to prevent her injuring herself. She then again fainted, when we sent out the servant—Anna Maria Bradshaw—to get some Eau-de-Cologne at the nearest chemist's. She returned, saying the nearest chemist's was closed—it being then very late. We then told her to go to Jenkins', in George-street, and to knock them up, which she accordingly did, and brought the Eau-de-Cologne, and, upon a great deal of it being applied to Mrs. Bentley, she at length revived, and Monsieur Boulanger left. Anna Maria Bradshaw then stated that she had had an escort to the chemist's; Mr. Bentley asked her what she meant, and she said that a foreigner (she thought an Italian) spoke to her when she first went out, and inquired if there was illness in the house, or something to that effect; to which she replied in the affirmative, and said she was going to the chemist's to get some Eau-de-Cologne, and that he said "You will, I think, find the shop shut;" and he afterwards said, "If you had come with me, I might have been able to give you some." That she went on as fast as she could to the shop, in Hunter-street, which she found shut, as before mentioned. Mr. Harrison and M. Boulanger were both informed of this circumstance.

And the deponent, Anna Maria Bradshaw, further saith :—

134. I went out in the evening just mentioned to fetch some Eau-de-Cologne from a chemist in Hunter-street. On my way there a foreigner, and I think an Italian, spoke to me to the effect mentioned in the preceding paragraph. The shop in Hunter-street was shut, and I hurried back and told Mr. Bentley so. Mr. Bentley then told me to go to Mr. Jenkins, of George-street, and knock them up, which I did.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

135. The next day Monsieur Boulanger informed me that he had communicated with Mr. Harrison on the events of the previous night; and in the evening Mr. Harrison came to our house with Monsieur Boulanger, and they both, with Mrs. Bentley and myself, examined the back parlour and the music, which had not been interfered with since M. Boulanger left on the previous night. In one of the pieces of music, one of us—I think Mr. Harrison—found a letter, addressed "Mrs. Bentley, 67, Elizabeth-street," and bearing no postmark, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 19.)

" Madam,

" You will find this letter where you least expect it, and I place it there that you may see I am in earnest, and not using empty threats. I have injured you more than you think, but I can repair that injury, and I will do so if you will follow the contents of my last letter, and also gradually withdraw yourself from public notice. I have two papers in my hands—one concerning you, another respecting that blackguard Boulanger. They contain particulars which will damn you both irretrievably. You can guess what the contents are respecting yourself, and Boulanger knows full well what they refer to.

" In

“ In regard to him these papers shall be used, so help me God, if you will not follow my “ advice and listen. You are killing your husband by not doing so. If you * * * *
 “ * * * are empty threats, I think you will alter your opinion when you find this,
 “ and know that I care not what I risk to attain my object. I tell you, your life or that “ man’s shall not stand in my way. I risk much now, but I will risk more yet if you will
 “ * * * * * * * * * *

“ Yours,

136. We all expressed our astonishment at this letter, and Monsieur Boulanger said, “ I thought we should find something, and that was my reason for desiring that nothing should be disturbed.” Mrs. Bentley was pale and agitated. Monsieur Boulanger and Mr. Harrison turned to her and begged her not to be alarmed; and M. Boulanger added, “ because you will be ill again as you were last night.” After some further conversation Mr. Harrison went away, saying that he would make arrangements, as I understood, to have our house watched, and see us to-morrow. The letter was left with me. The top of the paper, containing the stamp at the corner on which this and all the subsequent anonymous letters containing threats—namely, Nos. 19, 21, 22, 23, 24, and 26—are written, is cut off.

137. On the morning of the following day, namely, the 3rd day of April last, Mr. Harrison came to our back yard or garden, and with me examined it. The flower-bed at the bottom end of it was much trodden down; the bricks of the wall loosened and disturbed, and one brick had fallen on to the flower-bed. About this time, but whether on this or the following day I cannot recollect, Mr. Harrison called my attention to the fact that there was no blind to the back parlour window, which observation induced me to nail up a tablecloth in place of a blind until I could get one made. Afterwards Monsieur Boulanger saw this, and expressed his opinion that it was a mistake to put up any blind, and that things should be left just as they were, as otherwise the parties would suspect we were on the alert; and when I next saw Mr. Harrison, he said that he didn’t mean me to put up a blind, and agreed with Monsieur Boulanger that things should be left as they were, and he requested that the fastenings of the house should remain undisturbed.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

138. On the night of the same day, namely, the 3rd day of April last, Mr. Harrison came to our house in the evening, and told us that he had been to Mrs. Marshall’s and to Miss Flower’s (whose houses are situated in Castlereagh-street, directly at the back of our house), to inquire who were in them on the previous night, and also to look at the premises. That he asked at Miss Flower’s if they had heard anything on the night of the 1st of April, in reference to what had occurred at our house, and was informed in reply that they had not, but had heard the dogs barking very much; and that at Mrs. Marshall’s he learnt that a woman servant had left on the morning of the 2nd day of April last. He also said he had told Miss Flower and Mrs. Marshall that our house had been entered at the back, and some articles of small value taken away; he said he made that statement principally as an excuse for examining their premises, and that Mrs. Marshall suggested that perhaps the parties who had entered our house had got over the back wall by the aid of the dust bin. He also said that he warned them to be careful, as there were some bad characters about. He also told us that he had left a memorandum at his office, to be inserted in the newspapers on the following morning, to the effect that our house had been entered and some music torn. We objected to such a paragraph being inserted, but after some discussion assented to a statement being sent to the newspapers, provided we were not publicly identified with the transaction. Our reasons for not wishing the circumstances to appear in public, as identified with us, were, that we thought the parties concerned in sending the anonymous letters had resorted to so extreme a proceeding with the view of removing suspicion from themselves, on the supposition that they would not be generally supposed likely to resort to such desperate measures, and that the publication of the fact would rather play into their hands. We assented to a notice appearing, without alluding to us, because Mr. Harrison told us it was necessary for something to appear to justify his visit to Miss Flower and Mr. Marshall. Mr. Harrison begged us not to tell Monsieur Boulanger that he had seen Miss Flower or Mrs. Marshall, giving, as his reason, that he (Monsieur Boulanger) got so excited, and suggested such extraordinary things, and always thought his own suggestions so much better than those of anyone else. Before Mr. Harrison left Monsieur Boulanger came in, and he was informed of the notice proposed to be sent to the newspapers; he instantly exclaimed that it was the most indiscreet thing that Mr. Harrison could do, and insisted on his (Mr. Harrison’s) hearing what he had to say, and it ended in Mr. Harrison’s promising not to insert any notice on the subject. Monsieur Boulanger then expressed his opinion that if any publication took place, all the anonymous letters ought to be published, which he thought ought to be done. Upon this a very warm discussion took place between Monsieur Boulanger and Mr. Bentley, in which, eventually, Mr. Harrison joined, he and Mr. Bentley expressing their opinions that the letters ought not to be published—Mr. Bentley stating that nothing should induce him to publish letters containing such statements about his wife. Monsieur Boulanger then left, and Mr. Harrison said that if Monsieur Boulanger only was concerned he would throw the matter up, but that on our account he should still prosecute it to the best of his abilities. He then left. On the morning of this day (the 3rd day of April last) the advertisement offering a reward for the discovery of the parties concerned in sending the anonymous letters first appeared.

139. On the evening of the following day, Friday the 4th day of April last, Monsieur Boulanger came to our house and apologized for his warmth on the previous evening, and stated that I ought to have known he was only drawing Mr. Harrison out, as he never suggested anything, but seemed always to look to us for suggestions as to what ought to be done. Monsieur Boulanger remained, and in the course of the evening played on the pianoforte, and about 9 o'clock, whilst he was so doing, Mrs. Bentley left the room and went up stairs.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

140. On Mrs. Bentley leaving the room I feared she was again taken ill, and I went to the door and called to her, and asked her if it was the case ; she replied no, and said she would be down directly. In about half-a-minute she came back into the drawing-room pale and agitated, said that she had heard footsteps hurrying along the passage (meaning the passage leading from the street door) and the street door shut. I said, "Oh, you're nervous, and you fancy this." Monsieur Boulanger said (taking hold of her hands), "my dear lady, don't agitate yourself, or you will make yourself ill again." She was, however, so positive, that Monsieur Boulanger and I went down stairs to see if anything was wrong, and, on our way, we saw a letter on the sill of the staircase window ; we took it to the drawing-room. It is addressed "Mrs. Bentley, 67, Elizabeth-street," and bears no postmark. The following is a copy of it :—

(No. 20.)

"If Mrs. Bentley will come to Newtown on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, the gentleman who stopped her some time since will meet her and inform her of the name of the gentleman who requested him to speak to her, the writer having seen the advertisement in the paper. If Mrs. Bentley comes, it must be alone, and without any one to follow her, or the writer of this will not be seen. I need not say you have nothing to fear at my hands. I certainly have insulted you once, but I am anxious to make all the reparation in my power ; but I shall have to ask you not to mention my name, as I am known in Sydney, and it would injure my position ; but I can give you information which will be invaluable to you. If you will come I will meet you some way on the open space of ground opposite Mr. Josephson's gate ; but again let me say, it must be alone.

"Yours truly,
"—————."

141. After reading this letter we communicated with Mr. Harrison. My impression is that Monsieur Boulanger went for him ; at all events, he afterwards on that night came to our house, and was informed of what had taken place. The letter was examined, and, after a long discussion, Mr. Harrison expressed his opinion that it was the same handwriting as the bulk of the said anonymous letters. I expressed a contrary opinion, but I afterwards coincided with Mr. Harrison in his opinion, on account of the peculiar formation of some of the letters in different words which he pointed out. We then discussed what course Mrs. Bentley should take, and, at Mr. Harrison's suggestion, it was decided that she had better not go as invited in the letter ; and in fact she did not go.

142. After I had retired to my bed-room, and was undressing, and after Mrs. Bentley was in bed, I felt somewhat dissatisfied with the decision that had been come to, but for what particular reason I cannot now recollect ; but in consequence of this feeling of dissatisfaction I went to the Detective Police Office, to see Mr. Harrison. I found Monsieur Boulanger there, but not Mr. Harrison, and I returned to my house in a cab, which was standing at the door, and which had been hired by Monsieur Boulanger.

143. At or about this time, but I cannot recollect as to the exact day, I lent Monsieur Boulanger my revolver—Mr. Harrison having undertaken to get me one from his office—Monsieur Boulanger wishing to have mine, on account of its convenient size and of its having a catch which prevented its going off by accident ; he requiring it to carry about his person on going home late at night, whereas I only required one in my own house.

144. About this time, and I believe in the evening of the following day, Saturday, the 5th day of April last, Mr. Harrison came to our house and stated that Signor Cutolo had been watched for three days ; that he had never left his house during that period ; that on one of those days he was closeted in his own house with his solicitor, Mr. Hellyer, and that on the evening of the other he was seen walking up and down his verandah with a gentleman whom he described, but which description I forget. I believe Monsieur Boulanger was present when Mr. Harrison made this statement. He (Monsieur Boulanger) afterwards informed me that he had ascertained that Signor Cutolo had gone as usual to his professional engagements during one of those three days, and afterwards I ascertained, and informed Monsieur Boulanger of the fact, that there was no verandah to Signor Cutolo's house. Monsieur Boulanger insisted I was mistaken on that point, and then took up his hat and went out to Signor Cutolo's house to ascertain himself whether there was a verandah to it or not, and shortly returned, saying that I was right—that there was no verandah ; and he made use of an observation to this effect, "Harrison thinks he must tell us something, and therefore he humbugs us, and I shall tell him what I think," which he afterwards told me he did. Mr. Harrison has never offered any explanation to me on the subject.

145. On this night of Saturday, the 5th day of April last, the police first came to stay in our house. They usually came about 7 o'clock in the evening, and remained until 12 o'clock. It was my regular habit at this time to sit in the dark, from dusk till about the time when the police arrived, with a loaded revolver. I usually gave the police some grog about 11 o'clock, and on their leaving at or about 12 o'clock it was my habit to go round the house and see that all the doors and windows were closed, except when the police were in the house all the night and took possession of the key of the street door (which they did for some time, although by the desire of Mr. Harrison, it was kept a profound secret from all persons—Monsieur Boulanger and our servants included—except Mrs. Bentley and myself, that police were in the house after 12 o'clock, but afterwards one of our servants discovered the the fact by accident). Mr. Harrison gave as a reason for this profound secrecy, that Monsieur Boulanger was not to be trusted, as he talked so unguardedly; so much so, that one night just previous he had taken his revolver out of his pocket in a public-house, making at the time remarks which conveyed the impression that he intended to use it for some deadly purpose. Afterwards, having suffered from a severe attack of diarrhœa, I had to leave the locking of the street door to Mrs. Bentley, who attended to it, there being a detective officer in the house up to the time of its being locked—who, or the servants, used to look to the other fastenings during my illness, which was excessively severe for about a fortnight.

And the deponents, Mary Ryan and Anna Maria Bradshaw, further say:—

146. It was Mr. Bentley's usual habit, at this period, to place himself with a revolver, from dark until the arrival of the police, in the back parlour, in such a position that he could see anyone entering the passage from the back of the house, or through the glass door leading to the verandah, or going up or down the staircase.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

147. When Mr. Harrison again took charge of this matter, in March last, he made it an express condition that nothing that occurred should be mentioned to anyone—more especially to Mr. Hanson, Mr. Black, or Mr. Aldis—giving as a reason that communicating what occurred was calculated to frustrate the discovery of the guilty parties; and in consequence of this injunction of Mr. Harrison, we abstained from our former habit of discussing the occurrences with the gentlemen just above named, and confined our communications to Mr. Harrison and our solicitors.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

148. About the 5th day of April last Mr. Harrison asked me whether it was possible that Signor Cutolo could learn Mrs. Bentley's professional movements. I said (as the fact was) that he could, as I thought, most easily do so, through a lady (whose name I mentioned) with whose family Signor Cutolo was upon terms of the greatest intimacy; and with whom and mutual acquaintances we were also on terms of friendship.

149. On Tuesday, the 8th day of April last, Monsieur Boulanger brought and gave to me another letter, which he informed me that he had received through the Post Office, addressed "Monsieur Boulanger, French Caffè, George-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy:—

(No. 21.)

" Sir,

" I hear that your concert is to take place on the 28th of next month. Now, sir, if you remember, some months since you informed me of a circumstance, which I need not remind you of, and which you bound me not to mention. Now, from your subsequent actions, I am released from that promise, and if you persist in what your present idea is, you shall be exposed. You see I am not afraid of your knowing the writer of this letter, as I am fully aware you dare not mention my name, for I have you in my power—breathe a word and you shall be exposed. Now, Monsieur Boulanger, listen to me, and let me ask you, am I one likely to swerve in a course I have commenced, and you know I have power, and can do what you little thought I could. Now, I have an object, I own, in being determined you and Mrs. Bentley shall not come together in public, but a very different one from what you think. If you persist, you shall neither of you leave that room alive. You may think I would not harm a woman, but I would, and I tell you it plainly, for I hate that woman. For the last twelve months I have noticed her well, and I know her temperament as I know myself. I am quite aware threats are useless with her; but also passing events prey on her mind more than she will own. In a few months she will have another child. Will you, by edging her on, be her death? I am perfectly aware that a few nights since it was almost a matter of life or death to her; another attack, and I have the game in my own hands. Stop, and again I swear you shall hear nothing more of me. Your concert is not advertised—you can withdraw without any * * * to yourself. Proceed, and you shall both DIE. Yours ———. You need not think Harrison will catch me; no, NEVER."

150. Some discussion took place between Monsieur Boulanger, Mrs. Bentley, and myself, on the subject of the said letter (No. 21), and particularly as to the 28th of the next month being stated therein to be the day on which Monsieur Boulanger was to give his concert, as no time had then been fixed for such concert, nor any preliminary arrangements made respecting the same, beyond the fact that Monsieur Boulanger had given to Mrs. Bentley the manuscript of his own arrangement of Thalberg's Fantasia, or the Huguenots, for two pianofortes, for her to practice the same; and during this conversation as to the said date for his concert being stated, Monsieur Boulanger said that Mr. Aldis had asked him if he would play for some society at Newtown, which he (Monsieur Boulanger) thought perhaps might be referred to. At a subsequent conversation I pointed out to Monsieur Boulanger that the word "Café," in the address of the said letter (No. 21) was spelt with the ff—the Italian mode of spelling that word. The said letter (No. 21) was subsequently shown to Mr. Harrison. During the week from the 7th to the 12th of April last, Mr. Harrison withdrew the detective officer from our house, saying that he was short-handed, and could employ them more effectually in another manner, which I understood to be by watching the movements of the suspected parties, he (Mr. Harrison) not having men to do this, and also to watch, at the same time, both inside and outside the house.

151. On going to bed on the night of Friday, the 11th day of April last, seeing a peculiar reflected light from an unoccupied house on the opposite side of the street, I thought it was on fire; but recollecting that I had seen about dusk two cabs draw up to that house, and the drivers walk in without knocking, taking in parcels with them, I imagined they were thieves; and I therefore went over to Mr. Lindsay (who occupied the adjoining house) and called his attention to the peculiarity of the light in question, which appeared and disappeared at intervals. He went with me into the street, and saw the light; he thanked me, and said he would look after his premises.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

152. On the following evening, namely, Saturday, the 12th day of April last, Monsieur Boulanger and Mr. Harrison came in and joined us at dinner. Mr. Bentley related the circumstance mentioned in the last preceding paragraph, and also, that on the afternoon of that day (the 12th) he had seen two well-dressed men, apparently gentlemen, go into the before-mentioned unoccupied house. On hearing this, Mr. Harrison jumped up from the table, exclaiming that he would soon find out who was there, and left the house. He returned in a short time, saying that he thought he was right, mentioned a name which he said was that of one of the men; and said that the house, although unfurnished, was occupied by a woman who had recently been taken up for shop-lifting. After dinner we went to the drawing-room; we remained talking for about twenty minutes, when reference was made to the Ingoldsby Legends, which led Mr. Bentley to say he had better go and bring them up, and Mr. Bentley left the room for the purpose of getting the book.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

153. I immediately proceeded with a candle to the back parlour, to get the book. The moment I entered that room I saw that the verandah door was open. I instantly called out "Hie! hie!" and instead of Mr. Harrison and Monsieur Boulanger coming down to me immediately, as I expected and desired, one of them called out, "What is it?" I then answered, "I want you, Harrison; some one's been in." He then came down, walked on to the verandah, walked back again, and walked out of the house at the front door, saying he would fetch his man, and in a few minutes he returned with a detective. During his absence I went into the garden with a candle and a revolver, and searched to see if anyone was concealed, but I found no one. Up to this time there had been a strong wind and heavy rain, but at the time I went into the garden the wind had subsided, and the rain had considerably decreased. When Mr. Harrison returned with the detective officer they went down stairs, and Mr. Harrison shortly afterwards returned to the back parlour, and said he would not examine the verandah that night, as he feared that the light would put the suspected parties on the alert. I believe he stated that he would be obliged to leave Sydney on the following day, and he begged that I would in the morning examine the verandah and the yard, to see if there were any marks, and said he would see us on the Monday, and, in the meantime, would send the detectives into the house again; and he thereupon left, first closing the verandah door; he also replaced my tool-chest (which always stood there open, for convenience of the servants or others requiring to use the tools) against it.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

154. On the following day (Sunday, the 13th day of April last) we went into the back parlour to make the examination, as requested by Mr. Harrison; we found the handle of the verandah door broken, the knob of its fastening broken off, the fastening itself much bent and loosened, and a small thin piece of wood, cut off the outside of the door, was found lying in the verandah, showing that great violence had been used. On the verandah, close to the outside of the door, there was a quantity of dried mud or garden mould, which presented the appearance of having been much trodden upon; and we also saw two large footprints, apparently of a man, leading from the door to the verandah steps towards the garden. We also found, in a large china vase having a round hole in the top and large open spaces down the sides (which vase always stood in the verandah), a letter without any envelope, of which the following is a copy:—

(No. 22.)

"You are a set of fools. Don't think you are going to thwart me. I know Harrison is with you this night, and also the names of his friends, who think they will keep me out; but I laugh at them—don't think they can protect you!"

On that night (Sunday, the 13th day of April last) a detective was again placed in the house.

155. On the following day, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Harrison again came to examine the back parlour and verandah. He expressed a difference of opinion from ours as to the footprints being those of a man, stating that, in his opinion, they were four footmarks, and of a woman—two going and two returning, the returning steps, to some extent, obliterating the previous ones and making the whole impression large. He also pointed out marks which, he said, were heel marks, in several directions, shewing that the person who made them had walked both ways. Mr. Bentley said it was not likely they could get a woman to commit burglary; he replied, "Oh, you don't know—come to my office and you'd think differently." Mr. Harrison had already seen the letter No. 22, which we showed him on his coming into our house on that day. Mr. Bentley told him, as the fact was, that when he found the letter No. 22, being under the impression that the party leaving it had been disturbed whilst breaking into the house on the Saturday, and had therefore left it in the vase in the verandah, he (Mr. Bentley) had placed a piece of plain note paper, folded, in the vase, in lieu of the letter, thinking that probably the party would return to see if the letter had been found, and would be under the impression that it had not. The paper could not be got out of the vase without some difficulty, nor without making a noise, owing to there being heavy flower-pots on boards, supported by the vase. We opened the verandah gate for Mr. Harrison to go down and examine the yard, which he did; and on this and on subsequent occasions, said he was sure that Mrs. Marshall's wall was the place they came from, and that he should place some one in her house as a lodger. Mr. Bentley expressed a different opinion, saying the drop on Mrs. Marshall's side of the wall was too great for them to climb, and that it was far more probable that they had got over the wall by the lane (which a lad could leap), and passed along under the shade of the trees. Mr. Harrison treated this opinion as absurd, because he himself had, as he stated, gone down the lane in the night and the dogs immediately began to bark. At this period Monsieur Boulanger came in, and Mr. Harrison took a small dinner knife and showed how the verandah window had been forced open. Mr. Harrison then left. On this occasion, or on the preceding Saturday, he said that in future the detectives should come into our house in day-light, which they accordingly did, at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, for the first time, on the following day, Tuesday, the 15th day of April last, or thereabouts.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

156. At or about half-past 11 o'clock on the night of the said Monday, the 14th day of April last, I went down stairs to give the detective his grog, and before I got down to the bottom of the stairs the detective came out of the back parlour and, in an earnest and anxious tone, asked me if I had left the gate of the verandah open. I said I had not, but in the same breath added, "But I won't be too positive," and I then called to Mrs. Bentley, saying, "Did I close the verandah gate this afternoon?" and she replied, "Yes, most certainly; I tried it myself after you closed it." The detective then said, "Will you bring in a light, sir, to see if they have left anything?" I gave him my candle; he took it and searched the verandah, more especially amongst the flower pots, but found nothing. I asked him if he had heard or seen anything; he replied, "Oh no, I observed the gate open, and thought I would ask you." We then closed the verandah gate, and I searched the back parlour, but found nothing. I then returned up-stairs to Mrs. Bentley, and expressed to her my belief that the detective had been asleep, that the house had been attempted again; that he must have jumped up on hearing the noise, and alarmed the party making the attempt.

157. On the following day I saw Mr. Harrison, and informed him of the occurrence described in the last preceding paragraph, and stated to him my impression that the detective had been asleep; which Mr. Harrison said he was sure was not the case, as he had got the best men in Sydney employed in this matter.

158. The letter (No. 22) was shown to Monsieur Boulanger, and in a conversation respecting it between him, Mr. Harrison, Mrs. Bentley, and myself, Mr. Harrison said, "We're sure to catch them, they are little better than madmen;" when Monsieur Boulanger said, with some emphasis, "They say it is we who are the fools;" whereupon Mr. Harrison said, "No, they are the fools, how did they know that I wasn't there, lying on my stomach ready to catch them?" To which Monsieur Boulanger replied, laughingly, "Oh no, Harrison, they wouldn't think that; besides they know you were in the drawing-room—you talk so loud."

159. At or about this time, two detectives were placed on our premises (one in the house and one in the yard), from about dusk until 12 o'clock at night; and on one of those occasions one of the detectives came in late, whilst Mr. Harrison was with us. Mr. Harrison spoke to him, and then informed us that the detective had found the house watched by a little dark man with a small black moustache; to which I replied, "Why, that answers to the description of San Juste."

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

160. Some time in April last (we believe in the earlier part of that month) Mr. Harrison told us that he had engaged a servant who was formerly in the employ of Mrs. Cutolo during her former husband's life, and who occasionally still called at the house, in the hope that he might learn something from her.

161. At or about the same period, Mr. Harrison stated to us that Mr. Montagu had been speaking to a very suspicious-looking character, whom he (Mr. Harrison) thought a likely person to have been employed to post the anonymous letters, and that he was watched for some considerable time that night, but nothing had occurred. Mr. Bentley asked him if he had found out who the man was; he replied that he had not, but that if they wanted him they'd soon find him; and on a subsequent occasion Mr. Harrison told us that Mr. Montagu had been seen, one evening (then recent, and in the early part of which it had been raining), under the shadow of the row of houses of which ours forms one, and that the detective who saw him there could not be positive whether or not he had come from the lane leading to the back of that row of houses; that he (Mr. Montagu), on that occasion, was followed for two hours (from 9 until 11 o'clock) walking about the town, and that he then went into his own house, but did not then go to bed, as was (as Mr. Harrison stated) his usual habit, but wrote some letters in his room, and afterwards seemed restless, and walked in and out of the house to the verandah, until about 1 o'clock in the morning, apparently looking for or expecting some one.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

162. On the 17th day of April last Monsieur Boulanger informed me that his drawer at the Café (where he was living) had been forced open, and some letters abstracted therefrom; and on another occasion, that an attempt had been made to get his pianoforte taken away under false pretences.

And

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

163. On Saturday, the 19th day of April last, Mr. Bentley, in Mrs. Bentley's presence, told Mr. Harrison that he need not send a detective to Newtown on the following Tuesday, as on that day, on account of its being Easter week, she would not have to give the lesson which she usually gave on that day of the week at Mr. Josephson's.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

164. About mid-day of Monday, the 21st day of April last, during Mr. Bentley's absence, being in my bed-room (which is in the top story of the house), I heard a noise as if some one had stumbled in the roof over my head. Having my youngest child (then about seventeen months old) with me, and feeling nervous, I went down stairs immediately.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

165. On Mr. Bentley returning home in the evening, Mrs. Bentley told him she had been somewhat frightened, and that she fancied she had heard some one stumbling in the roof over the bed-room; Mr. Bentley replied, "Oh, you must have been nervous, and heard some noise in the house of Miss Johnson" (a lady who resides and keeps a school in the house adjoining ours, and whose school-room adjoins our bed-room.)

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

166. On the evening of the said last-mentioned day (Monday, the 21st day of April last) I went up the ladder to the trap or opening leading on to the roof of our house (which at that time was only closed by a loose piece of wood). I put my head and a lighted candle through the opening, saw nothing, and felt satisfied that Mrs. Bentley had been needlessly alarmed, and expressed that opinion to her; and on the same night Mr. Harrison was informed of the circumstances in this and the last two preceding paragraphs set forth.

167. On the following morning, as soon as I got up, I went into the roof, to see what kind of fastening there was to the window leading on to the outside of the roof, and found it was fastened by a hook on the inside. I made no particular search, and saw nothing that led me to suppose that anyone had been in the roof.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

168. On the evening of the same day, on returning home after paying some visits, we found a letter which, during our absence, had been received through the Post Office, addressed, "Mrs. Bentley, Elizabeth-street," and bearing the Post Office stamp of that date (the 22nd day of April last), of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 23.)

"Within a short time I have seen you twice pass Monsieur Boulanger close in the street without taking any notice of him, and this makes me feel that possibly your own inclination may lead you to fall into my wishes, but that you are compelled to be friendly with him by your husband. Now, Mrs. Bentley, again let me ask you not to play with him, as you can refuse at the last moment, and I swear to undo all the harm I have done you. On Tuesday I will be at the Philharmonic concert. If you will follow my wishes, do not speak to him at all, or allow him to speak to you, and I shall know by that you intend doing what I wish. I hear he is going to give a concert for Saint Vincent's Hospital, but your name is not associated as going to play with him, therefore you can now refuse. I know threats are useless with you; but listen, and then judge if I cannot do all I say. I have been two nights and a day above your bed-room, and one night was in your bed-room, in the middle of the night; had you awoke and attempted to alarm the detective down stairs (for he had not left the house then) I would have killed you in an instant; and you are well aware your husband is too delicate to protect you. I saw you leave your room, in the middle of the night, and go in to see your little baby, and had my pistol pointed at you from the trap-door—for I thought you saw me, but found I was mistaken. The night before that, I saw you as you came up-stairs, after your husband was in bed, obliged to sit down on the stairs—your old complaint having attacked you; and you know as well as I do, however much you may try to hide it from others, that that is doing its work quickly and steadily, and if anything occurs to startle you very much, will kill you. I have told you where I was, because I never shall be fool enough to go there again. Again let me ask you to do what I wish, and you shall be perfectly unmolested after; persist, and again I say, I will kill you both, for I have that which will effect my object without much fear of my being discovered; and even were that not the case, I would risk my life and all I had, or ever hope to have, to revenge myself on two for whom I have a hatred which nothing can ever quench. Yours, ———."

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

169. It is true, that during the night of Easter Sunday, the 20th day of April last, I did leave our bed-room to go, and went into the nursery to see our baby, and found that our bed-room door was not locked, although it was our usual habit to lock it when we retired to bed. It is also true, that I did, on the night of the preceding day (Saturday, the 19th day of April last) go from our bed-room to the drawing-room, for some remedy for the toothache, and that, in returning, I was attacked by a spasm of the heart, which compelled me to sit on the stairs. I am not aware that I ever passed Monsieur Boulanger in the street without taking notice of him, as alleged in the said letter (No. 23), and he has told me that he was not aware of anything of the kind having occurred. If I did so pass him, it was because I did not see him. I believe that, at that time, Monsieur Boulanger contemplated giving a concert for St. Vincent's Hospital, at which it was agreed between us that I should play with him a duet on two pianofortes, but no preliminary arrangements had been made for giving such concert.

And

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

170. On the evening of Tuesday, the 22nd day of April last, we informed Mr. Harrison of the receipt of the letter No. 23, and showed it to him. He said, "Oh! depend upon it that's mere intimidation—they never could have been there." Mr. Bentley said he should have thought so too, were it not for the circumstance that some of the facts mentioned in that letter really occurred. Mr. Harrison then went up-stairs with a candle to examine the loft in the roof; on his return Mr. Bentley asked what his impression was; he stated that he did not know what to think; that judging from the window he should say that no one had got in that way, but that there were marks of footsteps on the flooring over the joists leading from the trap to the window; to which Mr. Bentley replied, that that was no criterion, as they might be his own, as he had been up to examine the window. Mr. Harrison expressed his decided disbelief that the writer of the letter had been in the bedroom. Mr. Harrison left, saying he would bring a native tracker the next morning. At or about this time detectives were for the first time placed in the house all night, one relieving the other at 12 o'clock—an arrangement which Mr. Harrison insisted on being kept secret, even from Monsieur Boulanger and our servants. No detectives were, as far as we know, ever in the house all day; the time for their arrival was about 7 o'clock, after dark; on a few occasions one of them arrived as early as 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

171. On the next morning (Wednesday, the 23rd day of April last), Mr. Harrison, according to his promise, came to our house with an aboriginal native tracker, and they both went up into the loft together, but I heard nothing of the result of their inquiries. Mr. Bentley was not at home at the time.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

172. On the evening of the same day, Mr. Harrison came to our house, and informed us of the result of the examination of the roof by himself and the native tracker. On this occasion, as on the previous night, Mr. Harrison said that if the man who had got through the window was as large as himself he would have taken off the dust, which he (Mr. Harrison) on passing through wiped pretty clean, but that a small man might have done so; upon which Mr. Bentley said that the window was fastened inside with a hook; to which Mr. Harrison replied, that it was of little consequence if it was open when they came, as he (Mr. Harrison) had himself several times fastened it from the outside by swinging the hook, but that he never could unfasten it from the outside. He also, at our conversation on the evening of Wednesday, the 23rd day of April last, said that he found sand and broken glass on the roof outside the window, packed together as if by the rain, and on Miss Johnson's side a pool of dirty water, which he thought had been thrown out of her skylight window, but that he saw no footmarks on the roof. And either upon this, or an occasion very shortly afterwards, Mr. Harrison stated to us that he had called at the lodging-house two doors off in the same row, and went up-stairs to look at the trap-door of the roof in that house, and was informed that there had been no ladder there; and that he told the people in that house to be on their guard, as our house had been entered, either for a hoax or for some other purpose. Mr. Harrison also stated to us, that either he or one of his men should stay in our loft until the day of judgment rather than that anyone should get in there again.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

173. On the morning of the 24th day of April last (Mr. Bentley being still in bed), I was dressing, and in pulling open a drawer in the toilet table I found one of Mr. Bentley's visiting cards, with some writing on it, in the same characters as that of the majority of the before-mentioned anonymous letters.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

174. Upon finding this card Mrs. Bentley exclaimed, "Why here is some of the anonymous writing!" Mrs. Bentley then showed Mr. Bentley the card. The words written on it were "Mr. Bentley's visiting card." We discussed the matter together, but could come to no clear conclusion as to how the card could have got to where it was found. When we next saw Mr. Harrison we informed him of the occurrence. He asked us where it was likely Mr. Bentley's cards could have been obtained, and we informed him of the names of several persons whom we visited.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

175. On or about the 24th day of April last, Monsieur Boulanger informed me that on the previous night he had been followed on the Race-course by a man for some time; that he (Monsieur Boulanger) had miscalculated the distance between them, when he felt the man's hand on his shoulder; whereupon he (Monsieur Boulanger) wheeled round and levelled his revolver at him, when the man ran away like a deer. He described the man as tall, and broadly made. Monsieur Boulanger on this occasion asked me to ascertain from Mr. Harrison, without telling him of the occurrence of the previous night on the Race-course, whether he knew anything of his (Monsieur Boulanger's) movements that night, in order to learn whether he was (as Mr. Harrison told him he was) watched. I did so, but Mr. Harrison stated that he knew nothing of his movements.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

176. On Friday, the 25th day of April last, I proceeded as usual by the omnibus to Newtown, and went to Mr. Josephson's, and gave as usual the lessons I was in the habit of giving there. On returning, when I was about leaving Mr. Josephson's grounds, I saw a man standing at an opening to the paddock, on my right hand. This man was dressed in a monkey jacket; from his dress he did not present to my mind the appearance of a gentleman. I saw no one else near the spot. I felt some misgivings, and hesitated whether or not to return to the house, in consequence of the man looking about in a curious manner, as if he wanted to see whether any other person was within view or not; but I thought I should only make myself appear ridiculous by returning, as the man might probably turn out to be one of Mr. Josephson's men, employed on his grounds. I resolved to proceed, and walked on accordingly. When I reached the gate I found he had followed me. He placed his hand violently on my shoulder, advanced, and looked me in the face. I felt dreadfully agitated, and placed my hand under my Zouave jacket on my heart, which was beating violently. On this he exclaimed, "Oh, you have one, have you!" as if he supposed I was drawing a pistol or other weapon to defend myself with; and he then thrust his hand into my bosom with violence, which caused me great pain. I was so agitated and alarmed that I lost my speech; I was quite unable to speak, or even to scream. He said, "I thought you couldn't make much noise." I, however, had sufficient presence of mind to look at him and examine him, which he observed, and said, "Oh, yes! dark eyes, dark hair" (and, taking hold of and showing his shirt sleeves), "foxes' heads and brushes," and added (holding out his hand, and showing me a ring on one of the fingers), "and tell Harrison a gold ring with a cornelian anchor!" He then pulled the gate partially open, slipped through, and ran away down the Enmore Road, and then turned down a lane called Pig-lane, which runs at the side of Mr. Josephson's grounds. I examined the man well after he attacked me; his eyes were not dark. I saw he had a false beard, for it did not fit him closely; and I saw his own hair underneath or through it, and I believe his eyebrows were coloured dark, as they did not present a natural appearance. I saw when he shewed me his ring that his hand was white, presenting the appearance of that of a gentleman and not of a working man. I proceeded to the omnibus and went home, where I arrived about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

to

And the deponent, Mary Ryan, saith:—

177. On Mrs. Bentley's return home, on this occasion, I opened the door for her, and saw that she looked excessively pale; she went into the parlour immediately. I asked her if she was going to faint, when she said, "Bring me something to drink," which I accordingly did. She then told me that she had been very much frightened, having been stopped by a man, and thought, for the moment, she was going to be killed. That a man had come up to her as she was leaving Mr. Josephson's; and she showed how he had put his hand upon her—namely, upon her breast; also, that the man said to her, "You can't make a noise, I see." She told me what the man was like, and that he had told her to tell Mr. Harrison something about a ring. I said I wondered she did not faint; and she said she thought she was too frightened. Shortly after Mrs. Bentley's arrival Mr. Bentley came home.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

178. On Mr. Bentley's arrival he went into the parlour; Mrs. Bentley repeated to Mr. Bentley what had occurred, and said, "This is Mr. Harrison's watching!" and Mr. Bentley left the house immediately, saying he would go at once and see Mr. Harrison, and expressed himself angrily that no detective had been on the watch so that he could have protected her.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

179. I immediately went to Captain M'Levie's office, and found that Mr. Harrison was not there; I at once proceeded from thence to his then private residence in O'Connell-street, but he was not at home; I asked for a pencil and paper, which were supplied, and I wrote and left for him a memorandum asking him to come up to our house immediately. On leaving his house I met him, and took him with me to my house; on our way I told him what had occurred, and expressed to him my annoyance at the police not being at hand to protect Mrs. Bentley, when he said, "Why you told me she was not going up—that it was Easter-week." I repeated to him what had been stated on that point, but observed, that I could understand how the mistake had arisen; to which he replied, "I was a little in doubt " myself, and looked at my watch, and should have gone myself had I not found it was too " late."

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

180. On Mr. Harrison and Mr. Bentley arriving at our house, Mrs. Bentley described to Mr. Harrison the particulars of the assault, in the same manner, in substance, as she did to the deponent, Mary Ryan, as hereinbefore deposed to. Mr. Harrison begged us to say nothing to Monsieur Boulanger about the ring, and, in short, to tell him nothing, except the fact of the assault, and left, saying he would have the police out at once to make inquiries, and would see us again on the next day.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

181. During Mr. Harrison's visit at our house on this evening, and, I believe, whilst Mr. Bentley was out of the room, Mr. Harrison expressed his regret that he had not sent a detective to Newtown as usual—that it had not been done in consequence of what he had understood Mr. Bentley to say as to my not going to Newtown during Easter week; he added,—"Sanderson (one of the detectives) came to me this morning and asked me if he " should go; I told him there was no occasion to do so, but afterwards I had my misgivings, " and was going up myself, and looked at my watch, but then found it was too late. I felt " very fidgetty, and was coming to your house to see if anything had occurred, when I met " one of my men, who said he had seen you go home, and I therefore concluded all was " right."

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

182. On retiring to bed about eleven o'clock on the same night, and on Mrs. Bentley's commencing to undress herself, Mr. Bentley observed some blood, which led to an examination, when we found a good deal of coagulated blood round her nipple, as if it had been torn turn by some hard substance being violently thrust against it, which led us to the conclusion that the injury was caused by the ring on the man's hand coming into contact with the nipple, when he thrust his hand on her bosom. Mr. Bentley immediately called to the deponent Mary Ryan, who at once came up to our bed-room.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley, Julia Bentley, and Mary Ryan, further say :—

183. On Mary Ryan coming into Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's bed-room, Mr. Bentley said to her, "The wretch has hurt Mrs. Bentley more than we thought for;" Mrs. Bentley showed her breast (which was then bleeding) to Mary Ryan, and Mr. Bentley ordered her to make a hot bread poultice, and bring it up immediately, which she accordingly did, and applied the same to Mrs. Bentley's breast. Mrs. Bentley complained of its being very painful.

And the deponent, Mary Ryan, further saith :—

184. On the following day (Saturday) I took from Mrs. Bentley's bed-room, rags stained with blood, by reason of their having been applied to her breast, and which were removed in my presence. The next day I was told that Mrs. Bentley's breast was better.

And the deponent, Anna Maria Bradshaw, further saith :—

185. On Friday in last Easter week, when I brought Mr. Bentley's children home from our afternoon's walk, Mary Ryan told me that Mrs. Bentley had been assaulted and hurt by a man, and very much frightened; and on the following day (Saturday) I saw Mrs. Bentley's breast, and the rag which had been put upon it, which was stained with fresh blood. I inquired at night-time, or on the Sunday morning, and as far as I can remember, the bleeding had then ceased.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

186. On the evening of Saturday (the 26th day of April last), Mr. Harrison came to our house, and informed us that the police had not been able to learn anything at Newtown; but that he, believing that he knew something of a shirt answering to the description given of that of the man who committed the assault (and which he called a Crimean shirt), had gone over the water, meaning (as we understood) to Balmain, to make inquiries, but without success.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

187. On Monday, the 28th day of April last, I saw Dr. Brereton, and mentioned to him the fact of the assault upon Mrs. Bentley, and the state of her breast. He said I had better let him come and see it; I replied, "You know what a nervous creature she is, and what a dislike she has to consulting doctors, and she's better now;" he replied, "Oh! but I mean by way of evidence;" I said, "What evidence do we want?" We talked further on the subject, and it ended by my saying I would ask Mrs. Bentley if she would see him.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

188. Mrs. Bentley's breast continued sore, and to bleed at intervals, until the morning of Monday, the 28th day of April last, when it showed symptoms of healing. On the Monday evening Mr. Bentley mentioned to Mrs. Bentley the conversation between himself and Doctor Brereton lastly hereinbefore set forth. Mrs. Bentley expressed her repugnance to see a doctor on the subject, but said she would consult Doctor Brereton if it did not continue to get better. In fact it did continue gradually to get better, and in a short time got well.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

189. On the said 28th day of April last I received through the Post Office another letter, addressed "Mrs. Bentley, 67, Elizabeth-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 24.)

"Will you now follow my wishes? After what took place on Friday, you can scarcely doubt my intentions if you persist. You thought you would never be attacked in daylight, but you found to the contrary; and if I am not mistaken it will be some time before you recover quite from the effect of my hand. You think you can describe me; you are mistaken.

"I was disguised in every way, and to show what I say is true, I will be near you at the concert to-morrow evening, and you will not know me. Listen! You are a plucky woman, but you are not free from fear with all your courage; your face told me that. You have felt the weight of my hand once, but by God you shall feel it again, if you persist, in a very different way.

"Think well, and believe me, I will trouble you no more if you give in.

"Yours,
" _____"

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

190. On returning home from the Club about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the said last-mentioned day, Mrs. Bentley gave me the said letter (No. 24), and I went out with it for the purpose of taking it to Mr. Harrison at his office; I saw him, and showed him the letter, and he said he would come up and see us in the evening.

191. On the occasion of the receipt of one of the said anonymous letters received by Mrs. Bentley, and I believe of the one No. 24, on my way to Mr. Harrison's office I met Captain McLerie, and showed him the letter, and told him I was on my way to Mr. Harrison to consult him about it

And

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

192. On the evening of the said Monday, the 28th day of April last, Mr. Harrison, according to his promise, came to our house, and we had some conversation on the subject of it; he then promised that in future the detectives should always be at hand, and that if Mrs. Bentley wanted to go to Balmain or the suburbs, she had only to give him half-an-hour's notice. He also said he would lend her a small stiletto, which she could carry under her dress, and which a lady could easily use, and a whistle, which she must wear round her neck, so that if any suspicious-looking person approached her she could use it, and a detective would be at hand, who would come to her assistance. He said he would send these things, or meet her on her way to Newtown and give them to her, adding, that he wished to have the stiletto sharpened.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

193. On the following day Mr. Harrison met me as I was walking to the omnibus and gave me a stiletto and a whistle. I wore the stiletto on that occasion, and once afterwards, and the whistle constantly. The first occasion when I wore the stiletto I went to Mr. Josephson's, and when I came home I found that the case of it had dropped off; I then (feeling that it was useless to carry it about with me, as I never should have courage to use it,) resolved to wear it no more. On the next occasion of my going to Mr. Josephson's, one of his family showed me the case (supposing it was a scissors' case), and asked me if it was mine; and on my saying it was, gave it to me. After I had so as aforesaid resolved not to carry about with me the stiletto any more, I took it once with me, at my husband's request, he saying, "As Harrison wishes you to wear it, do so;" but after this second occasion I never carried it about with me.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

194. Some time about the end of April last, Mr. Harrison told us that Mr. Montagu had been seen in Pitt-street talking to another man, and that the following conversation between them had been overheard, namely, that Mr. Montagu said—"You had better not; take my advice—the risk is too great;" to which the other man replied, "but I will, though." Mr. Harrison said that he was anxious about this, as he thought it might refer to the entry into our roof. We believe that Monsieur Boulanger was present at this conversation.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

195. On Tuesday, the 29th day of April last, Mr. Aldis brought Mr. Kloete to me at my office, and the last-named gentleman gave me a letter, which he stated he had received through the Post Office, and addressed to "— Kloot, Esq., George-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of the 28th day of April last, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 25.)

"Will you meet me to-morrow, at a quarter to 12 o'clock, on the Enmore Road, Newtown, between the commencement of it and Mr. Josephson's gate? I do not know you, but have long wished to. May I trust to your honor not to divulge my name, for I am a married lady. If you cannot be there, will you come to the Philharmonic in the evening.

"Yours ever,
"L."

After Mr. Aldis left, Mr. Kloete and I had some conversation on the subject of the anonymous letters, and as to the handwriting of them, and he then left; and when I returned home in the evening, I told Mrs. Bentley of the said last-mentioned letter (No. 25), and of what had occurred between Mr. Aldis, Mr. Kloete, and myself, about it.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

196. We went together in a cab to the Philharmonic concert, on the evening of the said 29th day of April last. On arriving at the concert-room we saw Mr. Harrison at the door in York-street, and the detective Campion in the passage. We went into the concert-room together. As the last piece of music was commenced many of the audience rose to leave. Mrs. Bentley said to Mr. Bentley "There he is—there he is—he's held up a letter." Mr. Bentley said, "Where, where?" She said, "He has just gone out" by such an entrance (naming the street.) Mr. Bentley immediately went to find Mr. Harrison, leaving Mrs. Bentley with a lady with whom she was acquainted.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

197. Just as the audience were getting up to leave the concert-room, as mentioned in the last preceding paragraph, I saw a man in the room hold up a letter or piece of paper and look at me with a peculiar grin, by which I instantly recognized him to be the man who had assaulted me as hereinbefore mentioned; he was in the crowd, and I could only see his face and his hand which he held up. He immediately disappeared, going away by the stairs at the back of the concert-room leading to Clarence-street, and I immediately made the statement to Mr. Bentley mentioned in the last preceding paragraph. He replied, "Where, where?" I told him at the Clarence-street entrance. Mr. Bentley then left me with the said lady, and went to find Mr. Harrison.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

198. In the confusion in which I was, I must either have misunderstood or forgot which street Mrs. Bentley mentioned. I was, in fact, ignorant of that part of Sydney, and did not know which was Clarence-street and which was York-street. I found Mr. Harrison at the York-street entrance, and told him what had taken place; he said that no man answering

answering the description (alluding to the description Mrs. Bentley had before given of the man who had assaulted her) had passed that way. I went back to Mrs. Bentley and told her what Mr. Harrison had said, when I found I had gone to the wrong entrance. By this time the concert was just finishing, the hall was crowded by people leaving, and I felt that all opportunity of finding the man was lost; but as soon as I could get to Mr. Harrison I informed him of my mistake. Monsieur Boulanger at this time, according to previous arrangements, came to Mrs. Bentley and offered her his arm, which she took, and the other lady took my arm, and we, with a young lady who was with her, all left the concert-room together by the York-street entrance.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

199. When I took Monsieur Boulanger's arm, as mentioned in the last preceding paragraph, I was still greatly agitated, and trembled very much, and Monsieur Boulanger said to me something to the effect that I must not be foolish, or he should not know what to do, evidently fearing that I was about to faint.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

200. Mrs. Bentley did not tell Mr. Bentley of the remark of Monsieur Boulanger mentioned in the last preceding paragraph, nor was any allusion made to the circumstance until after the receipt of the letter (No. 26) next hereinafter set out. After seeing the before-mentioned lady, and the young lady with her, into a cab, Monsieur Boulanger and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley proceeded to walk home to our house. After we had proceeded a few yards, Monsieur Boulanger pointed to a man close to his shoulder, in the street, saying, "That man has been dogging my heels ever since I left the concert-room; fetch Harrison." Mr. Bentley went to try and find Mr. Harrison, but without success, but saw the detective Campion, to whom he pointed out the man indicated by Monsieur Boulanger, and we three proceeded homewards (the man, after Mr. Bentley had pointed him out, ceasing to follow us). Campion followed us at a distance, and Mr. Harrison joined us, and we all went into our house. Some conversation took place respecting the events of the evening, in the course of which Monsieur Boulanger said that signs were made by one of the suspected parties and others whenever he made his appearance at the concert-room door; which statement Mr. Harrison confirmed, and described the nature of the signs, which he stated were made by several persons one to the other, and that one of them was Mr. Montagu. Campion was then called in, and told to accompany Monsieur Boulanger home; and he (Campion) being asked if he had seen the people making signs, said that he did.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

201. I have since been told by Mr. Aldis, that at the last before-mentioned Philharmonic concert, and also at the one afterwards given on the 27th of May last, Mr. Harrison had applied to him for, and obtained, ten tickets for each concert, to enable him to pass in ten detective officers. Mr. Aldis also stated to me that, after the concert of the 29th day of April last, he had seen Mr. Harrison, and had stated to him that he (Mr. Aldis) could not see anything going on, although he had been watching a suspected party (meaning Mr. Montagu); and that Mr. Harrison replied, "Oh! you haven't the eye of a detective; we saw them making signs one to the other whenever Boulanger made his appearance."

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith :—

202. On the following day (the 30th day of April last) I received through the Post Office a letter addressed "Mrs. Bentley, 67, Elizabeth-street," and bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of that date, of which letter the following is a copy :—

(No. 26.)

" You saw me last night, and that letter I showed you told you you should never
 " hear anything more of or from me, for I believed you had determined to follow my wishes;
 " but I hear you did not, and that after I left, you took that damned Boulanger's arm, and " walked out of the concert with him. Did you wait until I went, to show me that you
 " would do what I wish? * * * * *

" your husband; the only hope I have of this being the case is, that you were seen almost
 " clinging to Boulanger's arm for support, you could scarcely stand, and he evidently " thought you were fainting, from his remark: 'Now don't be foolish, or I don't know what
 " I shall do.' Let me tell you this: Last night neither of you would have come home safe
 " had I not believed you had given in. When the concert was over, you left, and then
 " the work was entrusted to a damned fool who pitied you; but you have brought it on " yourselves by your cursed obstinacy, and you will find that nothing shall turn me from
 " my purpose; and although you are under Harrison's protection, or with Boulanger armed " with his pistol and cocking it, as he did last night outside the concert, you shall not " be safe. I thought I had prevented you appearing for some considerable time in the " costume you wore last night; but you must have a harder blow than I thought, and
 " the next shall be a surer one. I can learn all your movements now. I know that at " the concert you play at you are to be watched there and back, and followed; that you
 " are watched at Newtown; that the detectives are in your house till 12; I know
 " also that two are watched day and night, or ought to be. I can learn everything
 " that Harrison has done in your house, and from a quarter you little think of, Mrs.
 " Bentley. I am not hasty now. When I struck you I did it calmly, and I believed
 " I had injured you more than I find I have. When I saw you last night on that cursed
 " man's arm, had I had my pistol with me I would have risked all, and shot you both.
 " Boulanger may be a stronger man than I am, but I don't fear him; he is a coward; or " why does he have a man dogging his heels? You both have systematically injured me,

“ in a way that I never can nor will forgive, and each day I live makes me hate you both more and more. For the intense satisfaction it would be to me to injure both of you seriously, I would risk any danger of discovery. Still, do what I wish, and you shall be at peace.

“ Yours,
“ _____.”

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

203. On the evening of the last-mentioned day Monsieur Boulanger and Mr. Harrison joined us at dinner, when the last-mentioned letter (No. 26) was shewn to them, and discussed. Monsieur Boulanger stated that it was quite true that he had cocked his pistol outside the concert-room, as mentioned in that letter; he also stated that he had spoken to Mrs. Bentley, to the effect set out in that letter (which Mrs. Bentley confirmed), and that, at the time, Mr. Montagu was standing close by them. At, and shortly before and after this time, the detectives were in our house all the night, relieving one another at 12 o'clock; but that circumstance was, as before mentioned, kept a profound secret.

204. On the evening of Friday, the 2nd day of May last, Monsieur Boulanger came to our house, and whilst he was there Campion came to the house, and asked if Mr. Harrison was there; Mr. Bentley said he was not, but that he knew where to find him, and left the house with Campion.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

205. I then went with Campion down to the Victoria Theatre. On our way I asked if his business with Mr. Harrison was connected with our affair. Campion said it was, but gave no further explanation. I found Mr. Harrison in the theatre, and told him Campion wanted to see him about something connected with our case. Mr. Harrison came out of the theatre, saw Campion, and we all three got into a cab, and, by Mr. Harrison's directions, drove until we came to a post—(one of the iron posts for receiving letters)—at the corner of Castlereagh and King streets. Mr. Harrison then stopped the cab and jumped out, and had a conversation, apart with Campion. Mr. Harrison, on our way, told me the nature of the communication made to him by Campion, which was, that one of the suspected parties—(I believe, Mr. Montagu)—had been seen at that post, and was supposed to have posted a letter there, although Campion could not speak positively on the point. After Mr. Harrison had spoken aside to Campion he called me out of the cab—(which, I believe, I then dismissed)—and said he must have some of the envelopes of the anonymous letters for comparison, as he intended to send Campion to the Post Office early in the morning, to see the contents of the iron post in question opened. I told Mr. Harrison that the letters were at the Union Club, in a safe place, and that I would go down for them when he wanted them, and he said that he would call again that night, (mentioning some hour) for them; he, however, then accompanied me to my own house, and went in with me, where we found Mrs. Bentley and Monsieur Boulanger. Mr. Harrison continued to converse with me aside from Mrs. Bentley and Monsieur Boulanger, about the examination of the letters at the Post Office on the following morning, and in a few minutes left, saying he would call again for the envelopes. In the course of the evening I went to the Union Club and got the letters, and Mr. Harrison afterwards called and I gave them to him to make such selection from them as he thought fit. He took about half-a-dozen of the envelopes, which he said was all that he required, and then left, taking the envelopes with him, which he retained for some weeks.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

206. On this evening we had some dispute with Monsieur Boulanger, on account of Mrs. Bentley declining to take part in some domestic matters of Monsieur Boulanger, which we feared would lead to a police office matter, and he never visited us after this evening.

207. The same evening we told Mr. Harrison of our disagreement with Monsieur Boulanger, and expressed a fear that if Mr. Bentley was called as a witness in a Police Court, in reference to Monsieur Boulanger's affairs, it might lead to publicity being given to the circumstances of our case, which at that time we all thought it most desirable to avoid until the guilty parties were discovered. Mr. Harrison said to Mr. Bentley, “ You need not fear; he shall never trouble you by calling you as a witness at the Police Court. I can make the place so hot for him that he'd have to leave it in twenty-four hours.” He also expressed his opinion that our quarrel with Monsieur Boulanger was rather a matter of congratulation, as he (Mr. Harrison) believed him to be perfectly capable of going over to the enemy, if they only offered to pay his debts for him. On a subsequent occasion, on one of us stating to Mr. Harrison that it was singular that the attacks upon Monsieur Boulanger had ceased, Mr. Harrison said, “ Oh, there's no occasion for them to attack him now; the only respectability he ever possessed he lost when he quarrelled with you.”

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

208. At or about this time Mr. Harrison told me he was very short-handed, and wished to withdraw the man from the inside of our house; to which I objected until I had had the house made secure; and in order to make it secure, I employed Mr. Toose, a carpenter, to put bolts and bells on the doors (including the door window leading to the verandah at the back), and a latch lock on the street door, and the piece of wood at the trap made into a trap door, and double-bolted, and a bell attached,—all which was done; and afterwards, namely, on or about the 5th of May last, the detectives were withdrawn from the inside of the house, and came no more for the purpose of protecting it; but Mr. Harrison informed me it continued watched outside, back and front, by detectives, he himself taking charge of the inside, and he, in fact, usually came in every night and remained until 12 o'clock.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

209. On Saturday, the 3rd day of May last, Mr. Harrison informed us that the investigation at the Post Office had not resulted in any discovery, and we believe on the same day, or thereabouts, he showed us an anonymous letter which he had received, addressed to himself (but in a handwriting quite unlike any of the anonymous letters herein set out), stating that if he took any further interest in the Bentleys, things should be made unpleasant for him. We discussed the matter, and all of us came to the conclusion that the writer of this letter had no connection with any of the parties by whom the anonymous letters herein set out were concocted.

210. During the winter of 1861 a large quantity of the ceiling in our bed-room fell in the night, making a great crash, and covering the foot of our bed and the floor of the room with heavy fragments; the space left vacant where the ceiling had fallen from was a circle about four feet in diameter. The ceiling was re-plastered by the before-named Mr. Toose, but it was not whitewashed, so that the spot where the ceiling had fallen was quite perceptible.

211. In consequence of the long continuance of the annoyances hereinbefore set forth, and of the various circumstances hereinbefore detailed, we were both of us in a continual state of nervous excitement.

212. One morning in April last, being the one following, or next but one following, the Friday on which Mrs. Bentley was assaulted, as hereinbefore mentioned, Mr. Bentley, whilst lying in bed, observed to Mrs. Bentley, "Suppose those fellows do purposely what the rain did accidentally, and let the ceiling down upon us, it would be awkward, would it not?"

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

213. A few days afterwards, when Mr. Toose was in the house, making it secure, as hereinbefore mentioned, I called him into our bed-room and showed him the part of the ceiling where it had fallen, and asked him if he remembered it; he said he did. I then said I was going to speak to him in confidence, and informed him of the annoyances to which Mrs. Bentley had been subjected, and of the assault upon her, and of the suspicions as to some one having been in the roof; and I asked him if he could contrive something for our bedstead which would protect us in case any attempt was made to let down the ceiling upon us; and he expressed his sympathy, and said he could make a wooden covering. Whilst he was measuring, I said, "Couldn't you put a piece of tin or something on it?" adding, "because you know a man who would strike a woman wouldn't stick at trifles." We had some further conversation, which resulted in his making a covering of zinc. I told Mr. Harrison what had been done, of which he approved, intimating that the same idea had occurred to himself.

214. On the 5th day of May last I saw Mr. Robert Johnson, and requested him to see Mr. Plunkett, who had recently arrived from Melbourne, and to show that gentleman all the before-mentioned anonymous letters. My reason for taking this step was, that he (Mr. Plunkett) had some correspondence with Monsieur Boulanger on the subject, and had been provided by Monsieur Boulanger with copies of some of the aforesaid anonymous letters, and had expressed his sympathy with Mrs. Bentley. And on the 10th day of May last, Mr. Robert Johnson informed me that he had had an interview with Mr. Plunkett, and had received from him a letter, which he gave me. It is addressed to the Honorable "J. H. Plunkett, Q.C., Macquarie-street;" it bears the Sydney Post Office stamp of the 30th day of April, 1862. The following is a copy of it:—

(No. 27.)

" Sir,

" Seeing your arrival announced in the paper, I take the earliest opportunity of writing to you, on a subject which I am quite sure you will give your earnest consideration. Some time since I wrote to you, informing you of the bad character of two now resident professionals of Sydney, and I am pained to be obliged to return to that subject again. Monsieur Boulanger proposes to give a concert in aid of St. Vincent's Hospital, in which, if I am not misinformed, he is to be assisted by Mrs. Bentley. Now, sir, I know that you can entirely stop this; and will you not do this, for would it not disgrace a society calculated to do so much good, to countenance anything connected with two such characters? On Monday night, between 11 and 12 o'clock, I met Mrs. Bentley walking on the Race-course with a gentleman (who is very nearly connected with you), whose arm was round her waist; he walked home with her, and when they parted, her last words were, 'Come back at 2, and I will come down to you when my husband is asleep.' As for Boulanger, he has been the companion of prostitutes since he has been in Sydney, and there is scarcely a bad character in Sydney he has not had connection with; indeed the finger of scorn is being, and justly, pointed at them both; and now these two are going to play for a religious institution. Surely Mr. Plunkett you will prevent it, for you can; and I know how bitterly you would despise yourself for countenancing anything of the kind—for, believe me, I have not told you even one-half what I could. Again let me ask you to pardon the liberty I have taken, but justice to others demands I should do what I have, and—

" Believe me to remain,

" Yours obediently,

" ARTHUR VINDIN."

215. On the night of Saturday, the 10th day of May last, at about two o'clock in the morning, I heard a knock at our street door; I was in bed with my wife; I jumped up and told Mrs. Bentley of it; I threw open the bed-room window, and asked who was there?

I saw two men, and one of them in reply said, "Harrison"; I immediately put on my dressing-gown, put my revolver (which I always had, when I was in bed, under my mattress) in my pocket, and went down and opened the door. I found Mr. Harrison and a detective officer with him; I asked Mr. Harrison what was the matter; he said he had a letter just delivered to him, which he then gave to me; he said that it having been addressed to the Police Station, in George-street, was the reason that he had not had it earlier. It was addressed "Inspector Harrison, Central Police Station," bearing the Sydney Post Office stamp of May the 9th, 1862. The following is a copy of it:—

(No. 28.)

"Mrs. Bentley's life is in danger. Look everywhere yourself—I speak from knowledge." The address to this letter, and the letter itself, are in printing characters, but made with a pen. Mr. Harrison and the detective both took off their shoes, and Mr. Harrison asked me if I had a revolver with me; I told him that I had. Mr. Harrison then showed me the letter, and I read it, and then gave it back to him. I was very much alarmed. The detective then went down stairs to the kitchen; Mr. Harrison went up stairs, and I was following him, when the detective came up and asked me where Mr. Harrison was; I told him (as the fact was) that he was just above on the stairs, and we all three then went up stairs together. When we got up stairs Mr. Harrison went up the ladder to the trap, which he unbolted, and took off the bell from it; and the detective handed him a candle, and he (Mr. Harrison) went into the loft. I then went into our bed-room and told Mrs. Bentley (who I found out of bed with her dressing-gown on) what was going on.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

216. Shortly afterwards Mr. Harrison returned from the loft, and as he came down the steps, Mr. Bentley said, "Well, have they been in there?" and he said, "Yes," and added that the roof window was open and propped up with a brick; he also said there were a good many bricks lying about, and that he had picked up a piece of paper, which he then showed Mr. Bentley—two pieces of torn and crumpled paper, apparently note-paper, which he said he had picked up in the loft. He then washed his hands, and seeing that Mrs. Bentley was dreadfully agitated, said, "Don't be alarmed; I'm sure there's no intention of really injuring you—it is only intimidation." Mr. Bentley made some remark, to the effect that they might be coming down the chimney next; Mr. Bentley then looked up the chimney, and said, "Oh, there's no fear of that." Upon this Mr. Harrison looked up, and said, "They could, though; a man on horseback might come down," and he then walked to a chest of drawers and placed it against the fire-place. We then all went down-stairs together, and when in the dining-room, Mr. Bentley asked Mr. Harrison what he thought of the letter (No. 28); he said he did not know what to think. Mr. Bentley said, "Could it come from the man described as the damned fool that pitied you?" Mr. Harrison said, "Perhaps it might," or that perhaps it was a "feeler." He handed it to Mr. Bentley, who then pointed out that it was posted the day before, and that therefore there was no telling when they had been in. Mr. Harrison said, "No, they could not have been in in the night-time, or I should have found a candle." When Mr. Bentley pointed out that the letter had been posted the day before, Mr. Harrison looked at it and said, "So it was," in a manner which led us to suppose that he had not before observed that circumstance. After some further conversation he and the detective left, Mr. Harrison saying he would have the place watched, and would see us again in the morning, and we returned to bed. The trap was re-fastened and the bell again put on by Mr. Harrison before he left.

217. On the following morning (Sunday, the 11th day of May last) on getting up, we conversed about the events of the previous night, and after some little time Mr. Bentley saw, and pointed out to Mrs. Bentley, a small hole in the ceiling, over the bed; shortly afterwards, Mr. Bentley called the servant, Anna Maria Bradshaw, who was then in the nursery, into our bed-room.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley, Julia Bentley, and Anna Maria Bradshaw, further say:—

218. On Anna Maria Bradshaw going into Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's bed-room, Mr. Bentley pointed out to her the hole in the ceiling, over their bed; Anna Maria Bradshaw expressed her surprise, and afterwards left the room, and shortly afterwards called Mrs. Bentley into the nursery, and Mrs. Bentley went there accordingly.

And the deponent, Anna Maria Bradshaw, further saith:—

219. On entering the nursery, I observed a hole in the ceiling of that room, and called Mrs. Bentley in to look at it, who came accordingly, and she afterwards called to Mr. Bentley, who also came into the nursery.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley, Julia Bentley, and Anna Maria Bradshaw, further say:—

220. We were all together in the nursery, and saw the hole in the ceiling thereof.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

221. Between 1 and 2 o'clock, in the day-time of the same day, Mr. Harrison came just before we were going to dinner. I at once took him up-stairs and showed him the holes in the ceiling of both our bed-room and the nursery. After dinner, and during daylight, Mr. Harrison went into the loft, accompanied by me; when we got up there we both commenced to look about, when I saw an old pocket-knife lying close to Mr. Harrison's feet, which I picked up and gave to him. It had the appearance of having been there a long time. One of us discovered the hole in the nursery ceiling; the light was plainly visible through it. I said, "Where on earth's the other hole?" Upon my saying this, he stooped down down to the plaster between the joists, and after looking for a short time, said, "Here it is," and plunged the blade of the knife I had handed him through the ceiling. After a few minutes' reflection, I came to the conclusion that it was not in the position of the hole over the bed. I called to Mrs. Bentley, who was then in our bed-room, and asked her if that was the hole; she called out, "No, further off;" I asked her what she meant by further off; she replied, "Wait a minute, and I'll show you." She passed a thin iron rod through the hole over the bed, which discovered to us where the hole was. There was then some discussion as to where the bricks came from. Mr. Harrison seemed at a loss to form an opinion, when I said, "Could they have taken them from the chimney?" and we both walked over to the abutment forming the chimney, and I put my hand against the bricks, which have an uneven surface there, and on the ground close by saw a piece of paper, which I picked up, and in the act of doing so, put my hand upon a gimlet. I immediately exclaimed, "Why here's a gimlet, Harrison," and handed it to him, together with the piece of paper. He opened the piece of paper, which had a few lucifer matches in it, and seeing some writing on the paper, he (having returned to the skylight window) read it. It was torn, dirty, and crumpled. It appeared like the fragment of a note, and such fragment contained, as well as I am able to make out, the following words:—

(No. 29.)

"For . . . . . light sleeper . . . . . on the left hand side
"finish at once . . . . . shoot."

I then proposed that we should make a further search to see if we could find anything else. We did so, and I saw something lying between the joists which I thought was a piece of a candle. I exclaimed, "Why, here's a piece of candle, Harrison," but on taking it into my hand, I found it to be a piece of mortar shaped like a piece of candle. Finding the skylight window had been closed, I suggested to Mr. Harrison that it had better be left with the brick keeping it open, as he had found it on the previous day—saying that from the gimlet being left it was probable whoever had been in would return. Mr. Harrison examined the gimlet, and remarked that there was fresh lime in it, and that it had evidently been recently used. We then came down, and went into the nursery, where Mrs. Bentley was, and told what had occurred in the loft. Mr. Harrison then left the house. I went with him to look at the adjoining houses from the outside, which we did, and we discussed the possibility of anyone getting up on the roof. I expressed my opinion that they might, by the aid of ropes; he differed from me. He then said he had occasion to go to his office, and we walked together. On the way I expressed my opinion that things had been carried to an alarming length, an opinion in which he, by his manner, appeared to concur. He asked me if I would like to have a man in the loft. I said, "Yes, I should, most certainly;" and when we parted that evening, he left, leaving me to understand that a man would be put in the loft, but no man came. After Mr. Harrison had left, I found that he had not taken the knife, the gimlet, or any of the torn paper with him; I therefore put them away in a cabinet in the drawing-room, where they remained for several weeks. Afterwards Mr. Harrison obtained the gimlet from me and took it away.

222. I afterwards inquired of Mr. Harrison why he did not have a man put into the loft; he replied that he had changed his mind about it, that he had made arrangements to place a man, who was a dead shot, in the attic of the empty house opposite, where the light had been previously seen, as hereinbefore mentioned, and that while the nights were light no one could get on our roof without being shot, and that if the nights got rainy or dark he would make other arrangements. On this or a subsequent occasion he took me out into the street to show me from what quarter the roof could be seen, and pointing to a certain spot, said, "That's where (naming a detective, whose name I forget) always stands."

223. On Tuesday, the 13th day of May last, Mrs. Bentley received an official invitation from the Committee of the Philharmonic Society, to play at their concert on the 27th day of that month. I consulted Mr. Harrison on the subject, who advised that Mrs. Bentley should accept the invitation, and play whether she was ill or well, adding that if she broke down it was no matter, as everyone would soon know the cause. The invitation was accordingly accepted, and the fact that Mrs. Bentley had consented to play at that concert was advertised in the newspapers.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

224. Between this and the 27th day of May last, Mr. Harrison came into our house nearly every night, but nothing of importance occurred. As we understood, the detectives still watched the house all night from dusk, changing guard at 12 o'clock. During this period Mr. Harrison stated to us that he was engaged in another matter in reference to anonymous letters respecting Signor D'Apice. Mr. Harrison stated that a letter had been sent to His Excellency the Governor, purporting to be written by Signor D'Apice, requesting to be allowed to wear some badge of honor conferred upon him by the Pope, and also that several letters had been forged in the name of Mr. Turville (His Excellency's Private Secretary), asking for information as to Signor D'Apice's antecedents. We expressed the opinion that this was a matter too silly in itself to be genuine efforts to affect Signor D'Apice, but that we thought that it was a ruse to direct Mr. Harrison's attention from the more serious matter connected with ourselves; in which view Mr. Harrison appeared to concur. Mr. Bentley said, "I am surprised the Governor has not had some of these communications about us." Mrs. Bentley said, "How do you know such is not the case?" to which Mr. Bentley replied, "Because His Excellency, at an interview which I had with him in November last, in consequence of Government House being mentioned in one of the letters, informed me that up to that time he had not received any such communication, and told "me that if he did he would let me know." Mr. Harrison said, "At any rate, I'll ask Mr. Turville." A few days afterwards Mr. Harrison told us that he had been informed that His Excellency had had a letter, and that he (Mr. Harrison) would learn the particulars in a day or two. A short time after this Mr. Bentley asked Mr. Harrison if he had seen the letter, and he (Mr. Harrison) said he had not, and spoke in such a tone, and seemed so reserved on the subject, as to impress us with the idea that what he had before said about this matter was unauthorized, and that he was unable to afford us any further information respecting it.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

225. A few days before the last-mentioned Philharmonic concert took place, I gave Mr. Harrison a note for Monsieur Boulanger, requesting him to return my revolver, which he (Mr. Harrison) said he would get back for me. The day after I had given this letter to Mr. Harrison, I met Monsieur Boulanger at Mr. Aldis', in George-street; he told me that he would clean my revolver and then send it to me. The same evening I told Mr. Harrison that he need not send my letter, and informed him of my conversation with Monsieur Boulanger. Mr. Harrison then said to me—"By-the-by, yours has been loaded for a long time; you had better have it reloaded, or it might miss fire." He then said—"I will not leave you, though, without one. I will bring my own revolver for you to-morrow, and then take the other back"; and he brought me a revolver of his accordingly, and subsequently (after I had got my own from Monsieur Boulanger), took both of his away.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

226. On the evening of the 26th day of May last, Mr. Harrison asked us what arrangements we had made as to the concert on the following night. We told him (as the fact was) that it was arranged that we should leave our house at a quarter before 8 o'clock in a cab, and that we should leave the concert immediately after the first part, and Mr. Harrison said he would make his arrangements accordingly. He agreed to go with us in our cab, and then left.

227. On the evening of the following day Mr. Harrison came to us accordingly. We all three went from our house together for the concert in a cab, being rather late in starting, in consequence of Mrs. Bentley being very unwell. On our way to the concert Mr. Harrison said he should very much like us to leave as soon after Mrs. Bentley played as possible, without waiting for the end of the first part. To this Mrs. Bentley objected, on the ground that it would disturb the audience; he, however, stated that he had made his arrangements upon the supposition that we should agree to it, and we consented to act according to his wishes.

228. We arrived at the concert shortly after 8 o'clock, and in consequence of Mr. Merewether, the Vice-President of the Society, refusing to lead Mrs. Bentley to the platform, she refused to perform, and left the concert-room about half-past 9 o'clock, followed by Mr. Wrench. On our leaving, Mr. Harrison said he would join us as soon as he could. We at once proceeded home in a cab. Mr. Wrench returned to the concert-room.

229. After we had been home about an hour, Mr. Harrison came in. He said that he had remained behind to hear what people said; that at first everyone expressed great annoyance at Mrs. Bentley's conduct, but that before he left the tide had quite turned, and that he had shewed Mr. Aldis a letter he (Mr. Harrison) had received that evening before going to the concert, which quite satisfied him on the subject. We asked him what the letter was, and he said he would bring it with him the next evening. He had not before mentioned to us that he had received such a letter. He expressed himself very strongly against Mr. Merewether, as to his conduct in refusing to lead Mrs. Bentley to the orchestra. He on the next evening gave Mr. Bentley that letter; it is addressed, in imitation of print, "Inspector Harrison, Central Police Station," and bears the Sydney Post Office stamp of the 27th day of May last. The body of the letter is also written in imitation of print. The following is a copy of it :—

(No. 30.)

"Do not allow Mrs. Bentley to remain at the concert to-morrow evening until the last; induce her to leave as early as possible, for real danger is very near, where you least think of, and that you cannot guard against. I have not deceived you hitherto, and I do not now. Nothing but Mrs. Bentley's life will satisfy those who are injuring her, and I have written this knowing what I say."

230. Mrs. Bentley was this night seized with another attack of her heart complaint, produced by the agitation of the events of the evening. Mr. Bentley went to Dr. Brereton for advice, and came back with medicine. Mr. Harrison was still with Mrs. Bentley, and both the servants were rendering all the assistance they could to her, and when she partially recovered Mr. Harrison left; it was then past midnight.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

231. On the next day, the 28th day of May last, I went to Mr. Wrench's office, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, to go with him to see and consult with my solicitor as to what course should now be pursued. Mr. Wrench told me he had ascertained that Mr. Robert Johnson would not be disengaged until after 5 o'clock. I remained with Mr. Wrench until after that hour, and just before he and I left to go over to see Mr. Robert Johnson, Mr. Wrench, in passing through his office, took a letter off his desk which had just been delivered through the post. It is addressed "— Wrench, Esqre., Pitt-street," and bears the Sydney Post Office stamp of the 28th day of May last. The following is a copy of that letter :—

(No. 31.)

(No. 31.)

" Sir,

" I have written to you before respecting Mrs. Bentley, and from not having proof, you have, I know, not believed my letters. Perhaps you will now alter your opinion, after the just exposure that was made of Mrs. Bentley last night. You may not be aware of the cause of Mr. Merewether's refusal to countenance Mrs. Bentley's appearance at any society to which he belonged. Mrs. Bentley has been his mistress until within the last month, when he cast her off, and some words ensuing, he told her he would never countenance her in any way, and that if she played at the Philharmonic Society she should be treated but as one of the common supernumeraries, without having either his own or Mr. Plunkett's support, for that she should not appear there as one who had always conducted themselves properly. Now, Mr. Wrench, will you still continue to countenance this woman, who is no better than a prostitute? Is she a fit companion for your wife? Feeling sure you will think of what I have said,—

" I remain, Sir, yours truly,

" ARTHUR VINDEN."

Mr. Wrench did not then open the letter, but said, " Let us take it over to Mr. Johnson unopened." We both recognized the handwriting of the address as being the same as that of the majority of the before mentioned anonymous letters. We went to see Mr. Robert Johnson, but he was not in, and I then requested Mr. Wrench to open the letter, which he did, and we read it. Mr. Wrench said he had a strong suspicion as to who sent that letter, and then mentioned that on the previous evening, on returning to the concert room, after Mrs. Bentley left, he observed Mr. Montagu talking to a lady by his side in a way which at the time convinced him that he (Mr. Wrench) was the subject of their conversation, which circumstance led him to believe that the letter came from Mr. Montagu. He again went to Mr. Robert Johnson, and saw him, and by his advice I wrote and sent to the Sydney Morning Herald the letter which appeared in that newspaper on the 4th day of June last.

232. On this evening (Wednesday, the 28th day of May last), Mr. Harrison came to our house and gave me the letter (No. 30), and said he did not say anything about it the preceding night, before going to the concert, for fear of agitating Mrs. Bentley and preventing her playing. I told him of the letter (No. 31), received by Mr. Wrench as aforesaid, and told him (Mr. Harrison) that I had been advised by Mr. Robert Johnson to write an explanatory letter to the newspapers. Mr. Harrison said he could see no help for it, but enjoined me emphatically to avoid all allusions to the police in the matter. He again expressed himself violently against Mr. Merewether, and expressed his opinion that the conduct of that gentleman had thrown away a good chance of finding out the authors of the persecution; he further stated his opinion that the two letters, in imitation of print, sent to himself, were mere feelers, and that it would have been a mere question of time if matters had not become public in consequence of what had occurred at the concert.

Mr. Harrison expressed this opinion upon more than one occasion, and the regret that he had not put some advertisement in the newspapers to induce the writer of the letters (Nos. 28 and 30) written in imitation of print, to come forward under promise of secrecy.

233. On the next morning (Thursday, the 29th day of May last,) I went to see Mr. Aldis, having with me the letter to Mr. Wrench (No. 31). I saw Mr. Aldis, and showed him that letter. He said, " I've got one also—a most extraordinary one;" he read the one to Mr. Wrench, and said, " It's just like mine;" he took me into a room behind his shop, and handed to me the one received by him; it is addressed "—Aldis, Esq., George-street," and bears the Sydney Post Office stamp of the 28th day of May last. The following is a copy of it:—

(No. 32.)

" Sir,

" After the exposure which took place last evening at the Society of which you form one of the Committee, I feel you will now exonerate the writer of this letter from trying to injure a lady of such unblemished character as Mrs. Bentley. Mr. Merewether knows her character—for until within the last month she has been his kept mistress, and he justly refused to countenance her appearing at any Society to which he belonged. Finding he could not prevent her playing, he acted as a man in refusing to give her the same position as that she was entitled to had she been a lady of unblemished character, and compelling her, if she played, to play without the countenance of either the President or the Vice-President of the Society, which she had when her character was not known. I feel sure that after this you will not doubt what I have already said, and

" I remain yours,
" _____ "

234. On the 31st of May last an advertisement appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald and the Sydney Empire, from the Secretary of the Philharmonic Society, of which the following is a copy:—

" To the Members and Subscribers of the Sydney Philharmonic Society.

" The Committee of the Philharmonic Society have to acknowledge, with thanks, the kind manner in which Mrs. Bentley placed her services at the disposal of the Committee, for the performance of a pianoforte solo, at the last concert of the Society. They deeply regret that, owing to an unfortunate misunderstanding which arose on the evening of the " concert

“concert, that lady should have felt herself compelled to decline performing. While they deeply regret the disappointment occasioned to the subscribers and the public, the Committee feel it only due to state that the course taken by Mrs. Bentley was justified by a careful regard for her position, and was called for under the peculiar circumstances which have since come to their knowledge.

“By order of the Committee,

“CHARLES T. GEDYE,

“Honorary Secretary.

“May 30th, 1862.”

235. On or about Monday, the 2nd of June last, I called at Mr. Hanson's office, and saw him. We conversed on the turn matters had taken at the Philharmonic concert, and he expressed himself very warmly in regard to Mr. Merewether's conduct. I stated that at any rate the Committee had done all in their power, as, besides the advertisement hereinbefore set forth, they had sent (as the fact was) a very courteous letter to me, in order that the difficulty which had arisen might be properly explained. Mr. Hanson said it was no apology at all, and that he had told Mr. Aldis very plainly what he thought; and that if Mr. Merewether was not turned out of his Vice-Presidentship, they might just as well close the Society.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

236. In consequence of Mr. Harrison's injunctions of secrecy, and also of our fear that our servants would not remain with us if they were aware of all that was going on, we did not communicate to them more than was absolutely necessary to account for the circumstances and arrangements which unavoidably came under their own observation.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

237. On the afternoon of Wednesday, the 4th day of June last (the day on which Mr. Bentley's letter appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald) Signor Cutolo and his wife called upon me at my residence. I was engaged giving a music lesson, as the servant who answered the door knew, and she, as she informed me, stated to them that I should not be disengaged for an hour; but that Signor Cutolo said he would wait, but at the same time pressed so much to have his card taken up, saying he would not detain me one moment, that she shewed them into the dining-room, and fetched me down. On entering the dining-room, Signor Cutolo took both my hands, and shaking them in an enthusiastic manner, said he had not been able to do anything since 8 o'clock that morning but read Mr. Bentley's letter, and Mrs. Cutolo added, “In short, Mrs. Bentley, we couldn't rest until we'd seen you.” Signor Cutolo said he had been very angry both with me and Mr. Bentley, on hearing that we had suspected him, and turned to his wife, and asked her if it was not impossible for him to be guilty of such wickedness, and asked me to visit them. I treated them with as much coolness as I was able, and simply thanked them. Mrs. Cutolo, seeing, as I believe, by my manner, the meaning of my expression, said, “But you will come to see us, won't you?” on which I repeated the words, “I thank you.” They then proceeded to leave, Mrs. Cutolo going first—Signor Cutolo saying to me, “Don't be frightened, Mrs. Bentley; I'm sure they don't intend to hurt you.” I replied, “But they have hurt me.” He said, “But have they really?” when I said, indignantly, “You know they have.” Mrs. Cutolo then called to him to go, and they both left together. The following Saturday they sent to know how I was.

238. On the evening of the said 4th day of June last, Mr. Harrison came to our house at about half-past 9 o'clock, and told us what was said out of doors—that everyone said it was Signor Cutolo, and that he had certainly not said anything to remove that impression, intimating that it was a matter of course that he should have encouraged that opinion. During that night Mrs. Bentley was taken very ill, so much so that about half-past 11 o'clock we sent for Dr. Brereton, who came and remained in the house some time, and Mr. Harrison left a few minutes afterwards, it being then nearly 1 o'clock.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

239. On the following morning (Friday, the 6th day of June last) I went to see Mr. Josephson, and saw him at his office in Sydney, and informed him (as the fact was) that Mrs. Bentley was too ill to give her usual lesson at his house that day. He alluded to my letter, and expressed his opinion that it was ill-judged. He also said that he himself had received an anonymous letter about Mrs. Bentley—that he left his office with the intention of bringing it to me, but on his way changed his mind and destroyed it. I believe he said he received that letter after the evening of the 27th day of May last.

240. On the afternoon of the 5th of June last I met Mr. Richard Johnson, one of my solicitors, who referred to a circumstance which had been mentioned to him as having occurred at Exeter, when my wife was a child, and asked me if I knew anything about it. I replied, “So many years have elapsed, that I have forgotten the particulars.” I then told him the little I knew of the matter, adding that it could have no reference to our present persecution. On the same evening—it being my custom to inform Mr. Harrison of anything that happened during the day relative to the business entrusted to him—I told him what had been said at the interview between Mr. Richard Johnson and myself, adding that it could have nothing to do with the anonymous letters. I have since learnt that Mr. Harrison states that I have spread the report that the persecution endured by Mrs. Bentley and myself is the work of the Jesuits, and that Signor Cutolo is their agent. I never made such a statement. During the discussions which took place between Mr. Harrison and myself, Mr. Harrison on some occasions spoke in a conjectural manner as to whether it was possible the Jesuits had anything to do with the matter. I always said I felt that such an idea was nonsense; that I had been married five years, and been resident in Rome itself for many months months, and we had never been molested in any way until Mrs. Bentley appeared in public as a professional musician. I have stated that it was possible Signor Cutolo might be a Jesuit, using means to forward his own selfish views, being 12,000 miles away from those who could call him to account. Mr. Harrison frequently said I did not know what the Jesuits could do, that they would stick at nothing even for the smallest ends; and told me that I ought to read the "Wandering Jew," and he subsequently lent us an English edition of that work, in order that Mrs. Bentley and myself might read it.

241. Soon after my aforesaid letter appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald, Mr. Harrison expressed his wonder at the silence of the Empire newspaper, saying that he believed Mr. Hanson was disappointed at not having an opportunity of attacking the police, as they were not mentioned in the letter, and added that that was one of his reasons for insisting on my being silent on that point.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

242. Mrs. Segmont (a lady who had been introduced to me in consequence of my teaching at Mrs. Irving's) sat in the front row near to me at the said concert of the 27th day of May last.

And the deponent, Anna Maria Bradshaw, further saith:—

243. One day, early in June last, after Mr. Bentley's letter appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald, Mrs. Segmont called at our house. I opened the door for her. She asked to see Mrs. Bentley. I told her (as the fact was) that Mrs. Bentley was not at home, on which Mrs. Segmont asked what day Mrs. Bentley was most likely to be disengaged, and I said she was always disengaged on Wednesday. Mrs. Segmont desired me to tell Mrs. Bentley that she wished to see her very much, as she had seen a man in disguise at the concert, and that she would call on the following Wednesday.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

244. On the following Wednesday, (the 11th day of June last), Mrs. Segmont accordingly called upon and saw me. She told me that at the concert her son (a lad of about sixteen years of age) had pointed out to her a man with a false moustache sitting close to them; that he was wrapped up in a cloak, and presented to her mind so forbidding an appearance that she had refused to allow her son to remove from her side, as his doing so would have placed her nearer to the man in question. She also stated that he turned his head away all the evening, as if to avoid observation. She also told me that her son had brought home the newspaper with Mr. Bentley's letter in it, and said to her, pointing out the letter, "Read that, and tell me what strikes you." That she did so, and immediately exclaimed, "Why, that man in disguise!" We had some further conversation, and she then left.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

245. From this time until nearly the end of the month of June last (except for a few days at the time of the gold escort robbery), Mr. Harrison came to our house nearly every evening. At the earlier part of this period he stated that the public opinion was changing, and that he was sorry to say there was quite a reaction in Signor Cutolo's favour, and that the rumours now all pointed to Mrs. Boulanger. We treated that suspicion as absurd. A few days afterwards Mr. Harrison stated that every person was saying that Mrs. Bentley was a monomaniac; and that she had done it all herself, and was killing Mr. Bentley, to whom they gave three months to live; and it made him (Mr. Harrison) mad. On our asking him what he said to all this, he stated that he had said he would stake his soul that we had had nothing to do with it, an expression which he repeated on several occasions. He also at the same time said no one suspected Mr. Bentley.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

246. On the 14th day of June last I wrote to Dr. Brereton a letter, of which the following is a copy:—

"To Dr. Brereton.

"My dear Doctor,

"Being anxious that those who are so kindly aiding me in my endeavours to bring to justice the miscreant who has so pertinaciously persecuted us, may have other testimony than my own to silence the silly reports circulated, perhaps, by interested parties, and calculated to throw a doubt upon my statement, at least in the minds of those unable to inform themselves of facts, I write to ask you to be kind enough to exert yourself to recollect any circumstances connected with your attendance upon Mrs. Bentley, which you may think have had any reference to the painful matter I am so diligently endeavouring to unravel. I must apologize for thus trespassing upon your time, although I feel sure that under the circumstances you would not think anything a trouble which will forward my views.

"I remain, my dear Doctor,

"Yours very sincerely,

"THOMAS C. BENTLEY.

"67, Elizabeth-street North,

"14 June, 1862."

And on the 17th day of the same month I received an answer from Dr. Brereton, of which the following is a copy:—

"The Bath, 17 June, 1862.

"My dear Mr. Bentley,

"In answer to your note of the 14th, I shall be happy if any information I can give, as Mrs. Bentley's medical adviser, will aid at all in your object of 'bringing the miscreant to justice' who has so deeply injured your wife. By my day-book I find that I "visited

“ visited Mrs. Bentley during the night of the 10th of October last; she was in a violently hysterical state, from which she lapsed into a heavy stupor. I considered, and stated at the time, that the symptoms were probably the result of mental excitement. On the night of the 27th of May, 1862, you called me up, and described your wife to be again suffering as on the former occasion, and I prescribed for her accordingly. During the night of the 5th of June you again called me in to visit your wife. She was, when I arrived, in the same heavy stupor which followed the convulsions I witnessed on the 18th of October. You described her as having shortly before (when you came for me) been in violent convulsions, which statement was confirmed by her own testimony the next day when I called.

“ I am, my dear Mr. Bentley,
 “ Yours very faithfully,
 “ LE GAY BRERETON.”

247. On the 17th day of June last I called on and saw Mr. Hanson, and asked him if he could recollect the date when Mrs. Hanson told Mrs. Bentley of the purport of the first anonymous letter which he had received, as I believed that a letter I had received from Dr. Brereton (meaning the letter to me of the 17th day of June last) would fully answer the silly report that Mrs. Bentley was a monomaniac. Mr. Hanson said he thought it was an insult to Mrs. Bentley and myself to answer such rumours. And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

248. About the middle of June last Mr. Aldis came to our house and saw both of us. He told us that Mr. Curtis had told him that Mr. Harrison had stated to him (Mr. Curtis) that he (Mr. Harrison) did not believe half Mr. Bentley's statement. Mr. Aldis said he had written a letter, which he handed to Mr. Bentley, and said he would thank him to give it to Mr. Harrison, and added that when he (Mr. Harrison) had seen Mr. Curtis he (Mr. Aldis) should like to have matters explained. This letter was given to Mr. Harrison the same evening, and having read it Mr. Harrison denied ever having made to anyone such a statement as that alleged to have been made by him to Mr. Curtis.

249. The following evening Mr. Harrison again came to our house, and stated that he had seen Mr. Curtis, who said that he had never made such a statement as that imputed to him, nor even mentioned his (Mr. Harrison's) name; that what he (Mr. Curtis) had said was, that a detective officer stated that there was no proof against the suspected parties. Mr. Harrison then informed us that he thought these rumours had got about from his having at that time become very cautious what he said, as he was stopped and questioned by everyone as to the suspected parties, and as he had previously spoken freely against Signor Cutolo, even mentioning his name.

250. A few evenings afterwards Mr. Wrench came to our house. Mr. Harrison was there at the time. Mr. Wrench addressed him and said, “ You're the man I want to see; I came to see this loft. I hear that a detective officer has said that, in the first place no one could get through the window in the roof, and that even if they did so it would be at the risk of their lives.” Mr. Harrison said that he had been through it several times himself, and as to risk of life there was a parapet four feet high, so that anyone could get from house to house with perfect safety, and without being seen from the street. Mr. Wrench said, “ I'm glad I've seen you, as, although I did not believe the statement, I'm glad to be in a position to contradict it.”

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

251. On the 20th day of June last I went to Mr. Wrench's office, and saw Mr. Harrison there, in Mr. Wrench's private room. The next morning I saw Mr. Wrench in the street; I asked him if I should go to see Mr. Cowper about these anonymous letters, as I was anxious to write to England. He said he had seen Mr. Cowper; that everything was in a right train; begged me not to be importunate, and to do nothing until the next week. I then asked Mr. Wrench what had transpired at his interview with Mr. Harrison the previous afternoon. Mr. Wrench told me that it had been satisfactory. I said, “ Why I ask you is because of the delay, and these reports alleging Mrs. Bentley to be a monomaniac; the police having been once or twice at fault, it makes me a little suspicious that they are throwing obstructions in the way.” Mr. Wrench said, “ Well, but what has Harrison said to you?” I replied, “ Why, that he'll stake his soul that neither Mrs. Bentley nor I have had anything to do with it.” And Mr. Wrench replied, that the substance of what Mr. Harrison had said to him was to the same effect.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

252. After this, Mr. Harrison again came to our house, and reference being again made to the report about Mrs. Bentley being a monomaniac, Mr. Bentley stated that the rumour was absurd, that the very slightest investigation would prove that Mrs. Bentley could not have done it without his (Mr. Bentley's) knowledge. Mr. Harrison said, “ Yes, to an unprejudiced mind; but yet it would not be impossible, although I'll stake my soul that neither you or Mrs. Bentley had anything to do with it.” Mr. Bentley said, “ How could Mrs. Bentley go down in the middle of the night without my knowledge?” He said, “ Perhaps you're a sound sleeper.” Mr. Bentley said, “ And go down stairs, and muddy her boots, and then muddy the verandah; but how about the banker, who declared the letters to be Mr. Montagu's?” Mr. Harrison said, “ That is as far as his belief goes; besides, since then, I've seen other writing which is more like.” Mr. Bentley said, “ Then how about the signs said to have been seen by you and your man at the concert?” He replied, “ Oh! we might have been mistaken.” Mr. Bentley said, “ How about those letters which were sent to you?” He replied, “ Well, that's about the greatest mystery of all.” This conversation continued for some time, Mr. Harrison stating, as we understood, what might be said by people who took prejudiced views against us, and not as putting forth the arguments as his own; and in reply to some statement by Mr. Bentley, Mr. Harrison said, "Well, the fact is, I'm so cross-questioned every day, I can't be too careful what I say." Mr. Harrison then left, saying he would see us the next evening.

And the deponent, Julia Bentley, further saith:—

253. On this occasion I went down with Mr. Harrison to let him out of the house. Before leaving he begged me to use all my influence with Mr. Bentley to prevent him pressing for an investigation, saying that it would do us harm. I replied, "Why, what have we to fear? I certainly shall do no such thing; we have everything to gain by it. You say that people believe me to be a monomaniac, and any investigation will prove that I am not one." He replied, "You don't know; even my papers won't remove the impression from prejudiced minds." I said, "Well, I can't help that; when the plain facts are known people can't think so." He then said, "Mrs. Bentley, I wish I could caution you; I am subjected every day to such a searching cross-examination." I said, "Caution me against what—is anyone going to bear false witness against me?—for that's the only thing I can think of. You have no right to be talking to me in this way. If you have any thing to say, say it." He then said, "Mrs. Bentley, I can say nothing more than this: Answer all questions put to you, but ask none," to which I replied, "That I most certainly shall not do." He said, "Well, I shall see you to-morrow night, and then I will tell you more." He then left, and I have never seen him since.

And the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say:—

254. On Mrs. Bentley returning up-stairs, she told Mr. Bentley what had transpired between her and Mr. Harrison, as detailed in the last preceding paragraph. We discussed the matter between ourselves as to the probability of Mr. Harrison having favoured the report as to her being a monomaniac, in consequence of his having been unsuccessful in discovering the perpetrator of the persecution against us. We, however, came to the conclusion that such could not be the case, but that he was so perplexed and harrassed in the matter, that he did not know what to do or say.

255. About the end of the last week in June, Mr. Hanson called at our house and saw both of us, and remained conversing with us a considerable time in the most friendly way. He alluded to the fact of having seen a carriage at our door a few nights previously, and said how pleased he was to learn from that circumstance that Mrs. Bentley was going out again.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith:—

256. On the 2nd day of July last, Mr. Wrench informed me that he had, on our behalf, seen the Honorable Mr. Cowper, the Chief Secretary for the Colony, on the subject of offering a reward for the detection of the author of the persecution, and that Mr. Cowper said he could do nothing until he (Mr. Wrench) had had an interview himself with Captain M'Lerie.

257. On the 4th day of July last, Mr. Wrench again called on me, and said that he had seen Captain M'Lerie, that his interview was strictly confidential, but that if Mrs. Bentley and myself would only depose on oath to what I had stated, the Government would help me. I protested against such a matter being kept secret from me, and characterized it as a very un-English proceeding, but at the same time stated, that there could not be any possible objection to the course proposed; and I immediately (while Mr. Wrench waited), wrote a note to Captain M'Lerie, to inform him of my intention to adopt the course suggested. I at once instructed my solicitor accordingly, and the following morning took the note to Captain M'Lerie. I saw Captain M'Lerie. He received me courteously, and informed me that as soon as I had placed the necessary documents in his hands he would recommend the Government to offer a large reward. I suggested that a free pardon should also be offered to an accomplice, and he said that he would recommend that also.

258. During the following week I called on Mr. Cowper, and thanked him for having given our case his favourable consideration, and at this period, was under the firm belief that the matter was now in due course for a thorough investigation.

259. About this time I met Mr. Hanson and informed him of my interview with Captain M'Lerie, and what I believed would be done, and that (as the fact was), I had seen my solicitor, Mr. Robert Johnson, and he had stated that he would not have me depose merely to the truth of my published letter, but that all the letters should be set forth, and all the circumstances in any way bearing upon the case, minutely detailed, so as to let the facts tell their own story.

260. On Saturday, the 5th day of July last, I had an interview with Mr. Robert Johnson on the subject of the proposed deposition, and have been almost daily with him since, during all such hours as his arrangements, or my own, rendered it possible, in order to complete the same as quickly as possible. I have been engaged with him, for many hours, on many days, getting this deposition prepared, but his other avocations, and my own engagements, have rendered it impossible to get it completed sooner.

261. On the 14th day of July last, I wrote to Captain M'Lerie, informing him of the nature of the causes which prevented the depositions being completed as speedily as I wished.

262. Some days prior to the 16th day of July last, Mr. Wrench informed me that he had written to Captain M'Lerie, requesting to be allowed to communicate to my solicitors what had transpired at the interview between Captain M'Lerie and himself, stating, as his reason, that he thought such a course was only just to me, as it might be used unfairly against me.

263. On or about the 16th day of July last I saw Mr. Wrench, who informed me that Captain M'Lerie had called upon him and stated that it was not in his power to grant Mr. Wrench's request, but that he would consult the Crown Solicitor on the subject.

264. On the 18th day of July last a leading article appeared in the Sydney Empire newspaper, commenting on the case, and insinuating that the whole matter had been concocted by Mrs. Bentley and myself, and that such was the theory of the police themselves.

265. I immediately consulted Mr. Robert Johnson thereon, and by his advice wrote letters on the subject for publication in the Sydney Empire and Sydney Morning Herald of the following day, in which publications they appeared accordingly, in the latter one as an advertisement. The following is a copy of that letter as it appeared in the Sydney Empire:—

“ To the Editor of the ‘Empire.’

“ SIR,—I have this moment had a copy of the Empire of to-day placed in my hands, in which an article appears in reference to the persecution suffered by Mrs. Bentley. I will not reply to it now, further than to state that I am not aware that the police have made any statements whatever which reflect upon us, although I am aware that some secret and confidential communication has been made by Captain M'Lerie to a kind friend of mine (who has all along endeavoured to have as much light thrown on the matter as possible), and against which secrecy I have protested; but my friend has felt himself bound to observe it, and through your columns I hear, for the first time, that the police have a theory of their own, clearly insinuating this theory to be that Mrs. Bentley and myself are the authors of the calumnies circulated against her, and the inventors of the incidents stated in my published letter to have occurred. This is neither the time nor the occasion to combat so monstrous and cruel a suggestion. If the police have given expression to any such theory it is indeed surprising, as the last time I saw Inspector Harrison he stated, in reference to rumours out of doors, ‘I will stake my soul that neither Mrs. Bentley or yourself have had anything whatever to do with it;’ and I feel sure he never can have stated that ‘on the 19th of April Mrs. Bentley requested that this escort might be discontinued, as Mrs. Bentley would not give her lessons during the following week.’ Mr. Harrison was informed by me on the 19th of April, that on the following Tuesday Mrs. Bentley was not going to her professional duties, it being Easter week; but the assault took place on the following Friday; and Mr. Harrison himself informed us that he was in so much doubt as to whether he ought to send some one on that day that he looked at his watch, intending to go himself, but found he was too late. I regret that I this morning sent you a cheque for the advertisement, as you may think I did so in consequence of your comments. Such is not the case, I assure you. I had not then seen them; and I write calmly, although indignantly, as Mr. Hanson (who is an editor as well as a proprietor of your paper) has all along, by his statements and conduct, given me the strongest assurances of his belief in the truth of all I have stated. Mr. Hanson knows he heard it from me that I am engaged with my solicitor drawing up depositions on oath, that I have been and am urging the Government for assistance and inquiry; and, in the face of this, instead of waiting a few days, when all the facts and circumstances will be stated on oath, he practically lends himself to the villains who have so untiringly persecuted us.

“ Sir, every inquiry shall be made and must be made. I have done and am doing everything in my power with that view; and I feel deeply the cruelty of this, to say the least of it, premature insinuation, that my wife and myself are persons capable of acting in concert to carry out so base and detestable a conspiracy, as would be the case if the insinuation were true.

“ I am, Sir,

“ 67, Elizabeth-street North,
“ July 18th, 1862.”

“ Your obedient Servant,

“ THOMAS C. BENTLEY.”

266. On the following day my solicitors wrote a letter to Captain M'Lerie, of which letter I believe the following to be a copy:—

“ 181, Pitt-street, Sydney,
“ 19 July, 1862.

“ Dear Sir,

“ No doubt you are aware that an article appeared in the Sydney Empire of the 18th instant, on the subject of the slanderous anonymous letters written respecting Mrs. Bentley, in which article it is insinuated that the police (who were employed to detect the guilty parties) have formed the opinion that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley are themselves the authors.

“ Will you allow us, on Mr. Bentley's behalf, to ask you if any statement has been made by the police authorities which justifies such an insinuation? We, of course, do not ask for your confidential communications (if any such exist) with the Government or otherwise; but whether any statement has been made to the proprietors or editor of the Empire (or which has been accessible to them) to the effect in question? We cannot believe such is the case, because we are confident such a statement would not have been communicated to the proprietors or editor of a newspaper, and withheld from the parties themselves who were most entitled to know, and most interested in knowing it.

“ Requesting your early reply,—

“ We remain, dear Sir,

“ Yours truly,

“ JOHNSON & JOHNSON.”

“ To Captain M'Lerie,
“ Inspector General of Police.”

267. My solicitors received from Captain M'Lerie the following answer to the said last-mentioned letter :—

“ Police Department, Inspector General's Office, “ Sydney, 21 July, 1862.

“ Gentlemen,

“ I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 19th instant, written on behalf of Mr. Bentley, and, in reply, beg to inform you that I have received a report from an officer of this department respecting the anonymous letters referred to by you.

“ Without admitting your right to inquire what use has been made of the report, I have no objection to state that it was shown to two gentlemen, who expressed a wish to peruse it, as friends of Mr. Bentley—I refer to Mr. Wrench and Mr. Hanson.

“ I have the honor to be,

“ Gentlemen,

“ Messrs. Johnson & Johnson,
“ Solicitors.

“ Your most obedient servant,
“ JNO. M'LERIE,
“ Inspector General of Police.”

And in reply thereto my solicitors sent another letter to Captain M'Lerie, of which letter I believe the following to be a copy :—

*“ 181, Pitt-street, Sydney,
“ 21 July, 1862.*

“ Re BENTLEY.

“ SIR,

“ Your communication of this date has just come to hand, and we presume that as you have shown the report therein mentioned to Mr. Wrench and Mr. Hanson, on the assumption that they were both acting as friends of Mr. Bentley, there cannot be the least objection to show the same to us, as his solicitors. Indeed, after the use which Mr. Hanson has made of the perusal afforded to him, it is a mere act of justice to our client to give him the same amount of information as that given to the gentleman just named. It would oblige us if you would furnish us with a copy, which would save us the trouble of attending to read the original.

“ We have the honor to be,

“ Sir,

“ Your most obedient servants,
“ JOHNSON & JOHNSON.”

“ To John M'Lerie, Esq.,
“ Inspector General of Police.”

268. Afterwards, Captain M'Lerie placed in the hands of my solicitors the report referred to, which is a statement by Mr. Harrison in relation to the matters aforesaid, and that report was read to me by Mr. Robert Johnson, on or about Wednesday, the 23rd day of July last, when, for the first time, I became acquainted with the real nature of Mr. Harrison's representations.

And the deponent, Thomas Charles Bentley, further saith :—

269. At my request, Mr. Robert Johnson inspected our bed-room and nursery, and the loft above them. He went through the trap into the loft, and examined the trap-door and the skylight, as well as the interior of the loft. He also measured the openings for the trap and the skylight. He furnished me with a memorandum of the result of his examination, which is to the purport following :—

“ Went to Mr. Bentley's. Went up into the roof—trap-door nineteen inches by fourteen and a half inches. Skylight twenty-four inches by thirteen and a half inches. Saw the three holes—one over the nursery, two over Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's bed-room, one over the bed. Saw the plaster on top of bedstead (the zinc covering) evidently forced off ceiling by a puncture from above. Could see, without stooping much, from trap-door partially into Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's bed-room, and into the nursery, and down stairs. Could see anyone going in or out of those rooms, or on the stairs; also saw back parlor and door leading into verandah, and examined old fastenings, which had evidently been forced and broken. Saw also Mr. Bentley's tool-chest, which had all the gimblets (four) mentioned in the printed list pasted on it.”

And, lastly, the deponents, Thomas Charles Bentley and Julia Bentley, further say :—

270. We, each speaking for himself and herself severally, solemnly swear that the insinuation or imputation that we, or either of us, are, or is, the authors or author of any of the aforesaid anonymous letters, or the contrivers or contriver, or inventors or inventor, in any way whatever, of the aforesaid transactions or matters herein set forth, is utterly false and unfounded. All the transactions and circumstances respecting the same are herein fully, minutely, and truly set forth, to the best and utmost of our knowledge, remembrance, information, and belief.

THOS. C. BENTLEY.
JULIA BENTLEY.
MARY RYAN.
ANNA MARIA BRADSHAW.

Sworn by the four deponents, on the day first above mentioned, at Sydney aforesaid, before me, a Justice of the Peace in and for the Colony of New South Wales,

DAN. EGAN, J.P.

(2.)

181, Pitt-street, Sydney,
17 September, 1862.

Sir,

We have the honor to forward herewith the depositions of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, and their two servants, relative to the persecution to which they were so long subjected, and on their behalf we beg your careful consideration of the same, which we are quite convinced will dispel all impressions (if any such exist) as to their being the authors of the many anonymous libels circulated respecting them. We trust that you will have no hesitation in recommending the Executive Government to offer a reward for the detection of the guilty parties, and a pardon to any accomplice whose testimony may be available for their conviction.

If such steps be taken, we trust that the authors of this unparalleled persecution may yet be made amenable to justice.

Requesting your early attention to this communication,

We have, &amp;c.,

To the Honorable the Colonial Secretary,
Sydney.

JOHNSON &amp; JOHNSON.

(3.)

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 10 October, 1862.

Gentlemen,

I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th ultimo, in which you forwarded the depositions of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley and their two servants, relative to certain anonymous letters circulated respecting them, and suggested that a reward should be offered by the Government for the detection of the authors of these papers. Mr. Cowper has also received your further letter of the 3rd instant, referring to your former communication on the subject.

2. The Colonial Secretary desires me to state to you, in reply, that he has read with attention the depositions of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, and their female servants, and that after full consideration, he is clearly of opinion that the case is not now one for the interference of the Government. It appears that large rewards have already been publicly offered, without any successful result, for the discovery and conviction of the parties to the annoyances of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, and the authors of the anonymous letters which are referred to. Quite sufficient has, it seems to Mr. Cowper, been done to effect this object, if any pecuniary inducement could be of avail.

3. Besides the rewards thus offered, every assistance has also been given, for several months past, by the Police Department, in endeavouring to bring to light the actors in these diabolical proceedings; and the Colonial Secretary considers that the Government has, in this respect, done all that could be reasonably expected.

4. The case is undoubtedly one involved in mystery, but as the names of several persons have been used, and suspicions avowed of their being parties concerned, it would, in Mr. Cowper's opinion, be wrong in the Government to mix itself up in the matter, after it has assumed its present peculiar shape, and the features of which are of so extraordinary a character.

I have, &amp;c.,

Messrs. Johnson and Johnson.

W. ELYARD.

(4.)

142, Pitt-street,
Sydney, 10 June, 1862.

Dear Sir,

As the friend of Mr. T. C. Bentley, I beg to direct your particular attention to the wicked persecution to which his wife has been subjected during the last twelve to fourteen months, as partly made known by his letter to the Philharmonic Society, and to call upon the Government to lend its powerful assistance towards the discovery of the base authors of the anonymous letters. I may mention, in justification of my interference in this matter, that I am one of Mr. Bentley's oldest friends in the Colony, and that years ago in England our families were on terms of intimacy. The first anonymous letter was, I believe, received by me, and from first to last I have seen all the letters which, addressed to his friends and others, have from time to time been placed in his hands.

The whole of the correspondence is now in my possession, and I will wait on you with it at any time you may appoint, in order that you may be as satisfied as I am that it bears evidence on the face of it that it is the work of more than ONE writer.

Believing this, I would beg to suggest for your consideration, that the Government should offer a large reward for the detection and conviction of the principals in this infamous business, accompanied by the promise of a free pardon to any accomplice, not being the actual author, who will give such evidence as will ensure punishment reaching the guilty parties.

As head of the Government of this Colony, I would earnestly press upon you the necessity of using the strongest measures for purging society of the villains, whose presence renders the character of every lady liable to defamation by the insidious system of anonymous letters.

I am, &amp;c.,

To the Honorable
Charles Cowper, Esq.

E. WRENCH.

Letter

Letter referred to in the foregoing.

To the Members and Subscribers of the Philharmonic Society and their Visitors, on the occasion of the Concert on the 27th of May.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I feel it my duty to lay before you a simple statement of facts which, I trust, will satisfy you that Mrs. Bentley's refusal to perform the portion of the programme allotted to her at your last concert was not the act of a capricious woman, but the necessary determination of a lady, placed by circumstances in so painful a position that no other course was open to her than to withdraw.

Painful as it is to obtrude our private troubles on the public, I yet am glad that a fitting opportunity has occurred to justify me in thus addressing you, as I sincerely hope that this publicity may be the means of aiding me in my endeavours to discover and punish the miscreant who, sheltering himself under the veil of anonymous letters, and by the aid of the Post Office, has persisted in a series of outrages, quite, I believe, unparalleled, at least in an English community; and I am advised by my solicitors, Messrs. Johnson and Johnson (with whom I have been consulting for some months on the subject, and who have the letters in their possession), to adopt this course with that view.

Let me premise that the facts about to be laid before you are collected from upwards of forty letters, placed in my hands from time to time by the heads of families of this city. All these letters, with the exception of forgeries purporting to be written by Mrs. Bentley, and a supposititious "Mrs. Morris," are anonymous, and in the same—a very peculiar—handwriting.

On the 14th of May, 1861, Mrs. Bentley for the first time played in public, being introduced by your honorable President as a pianiste, at the Philharmonic concert given on that evening. The following morning her performance was favourably criticised in both the leading journals. Two days afterwards a member of the committee received an anonymous letter through the post, stating that the writer was sure that the gentleman to whom the letter was addressed would not countenance Mrs. Bentley when he was informed that that lady "was sailing under false colours," not being the English lady she pretended to be, but an Italian, whose conduct had broken the heart of her own mother only a few years since. A letter of the same kind was sent about a month afterwards to another member of committee, stating that, had it not been for Mrs. Bentley's misconduct she "could have lived in her native country, a climate far more suited for her poor husband's health, in affluence and ease." These letters were followed by others addressed to the heads of various families resident in Sydney, stating that Mrs. Bentley was a person of disreputable character, and unfit to be the companion of their daughters.

On the evening of the 29th of October, Mrs. Bentley handed me the following letter, just received through the post, at the same time asking me who was the Mrs. Morris by whom it purported to be written:—

"Mrs. Morris presents her compliments to Mrs. Bentley, and would feel much obliged by her calling at her residence to-morrow afternoon, at about 5 o'clock, to make arrangements for Mrs. Morris's three little girls taking music lessons. Mrs. Morris is sorry to trouble Mrs. Bentley, but she is a great invalid herself, and cannot leave the house, or she would give herself the pleasure of calling at Mrs. Bentley's own residence. Mrs. Morris's house is situated at the back of Mr. Lamb's, and is called Murringa. Tuesday morning. Murringa."

The same evening a proprietor of one of the leading journals (who had before received one of these anonymous letters, and whose daughter was receiving musical instruction from Mrs. Bentley) handed me a letter, posted at the same time as the foregoing, requesting him to satisfy himself as to the truth of previous statements respecting Mrs. Bentley's private character, the writer stating that he had seen a letter written by her "making an appointment to meet a gentleman who is very well known to all Sydney;" and that he desired the gentleman addressed to be at the place referred to in the above letter at the appointed hour, in order to satisfy himself of the truth of the accusations made against her. Steps were immediately taken to entrap the conspirators, but without success. A letter of the same kind was also placed in my hands by my medical adviser.

Anonymous letters of a similar character were from that period, from time to time, sent to Mrs. Bentley's friends, until the arrival of Mr. Boulanger, who, on the 6th of January, 1862, was introduced in the street to Mrs. Bentley by a member of the committee, who, the next morning, received an anonymous communication to the effect that both Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Boulanger were disreputable characters; and stating that Mr. Boulanger was already known to Mrs. Bentley, "and has come here with the idea that they may play into each other's hands, and crush the other professionals."

On the evening of the 20th January, just before leaving to perform at his first concert, Mr. Boulanger received a letter putting him upon his guard against Mrs. Bentley, and enclosed a letter forged in her name, to prove that she was endeavouring to blast his reputation; at the same time letters were sent to your honorable President and other influential persons, enclosing forged letters purporting to come from certain persons resident in Melbourne, and repeating the same malicious slanders with regard to Mr. Boulanger. At this time I was brought down by a serious illness, and having broken a blood-vessel, Mrs. Bentley for some days never left my bed-side; more of these anonymous letters were then sent to the heads of two families, stating that at the time I was supposed to be dying, "that heartless woman was walking in the Botanical Gardens for three hours with a gentleman whose character is well known in Sydney," and otherwise slandering her.

These anonymous letters were followed by others, addressed to the same parties, by way of corroboration, enclosing letters forged in Mrs. Bentley's name, and described as the originals—originals—in different handwritings, however, thus fortunately evidencing the falsehood of the slanderer—making appointments on certain days, and at certain hours, in the neighbourhood where Mrs. Bentley was called by her professional duties. Early in March, Mrs. Bentley purchased a copy of one of Hummell's duets for the piano, a copy of which, by a singular coincidence, had been purchased a day or two previously by Mr. Boulanger. On the 19th of that month, Mr. Boulanger received a threatening letter, saying that the writer had been informed that he "intended playing in public with Mrs. Bentley. Now, sir, allow me to state this fact: If either of you attempt such a thing, I swear, by all I hold most sacred, to make you bitterly repent doing so. I indulge in no idle threats," &c., &c. Signed—"An Enemy—I hate and detest you both." A few days after, Mrs. Bentley received the following letter:—

"Madam,—A few days since I heard you were going to play in public with Mr. Boulanger. Now, you have both done me an injury which I never can forget, and I am determined you shall not do so. Perhaps, whatever I say to HIM will have no effect; but you are a woman, and, I believe, love your husband, and would therefore do anything to keep him from sorrow, which might kill him; now you can absolutely refuse to play with him, or to associate yourself in ANY WAY with him. I appeal to your better feelings as a woman to do this, and if you will follow my wishes, you shall NEITHER of you hear ANOTHER word of or from me. Boulanger has a wife and child dependent on him; he shall be left alone to work his way, and you will therefore be doing him a kindness. You have your husband's health to think of, and let me ask you, did anything happen to you would he long be here to take care of your little children?

"If, however, you persist in following out the course you intend I will never leave you alone, whatever the consequences may be. I will prevent you playing together, if it be at the last moment, and at any risk * * *

"Think well of what I say. I tell you plainly, I hate you both; but plainly as I tell you this, I also say that if you will follow my wishes, I will keep my promise, and you shall never hear any more from me; if you will not, you shall both rue the day you have made me an enemy, and until I have crushed you both, which you know I have it in my power to do, I will never cease.

"Yours, ———."

This was followed by other threatening letters, one of which was left in the house, on the 1st of April, and pinned to some music, wantonly torn and thrown down on the dining-room floor—entrance having been effected by the glass door opening upon the verandah at the back of the house.

On the 21st of April (Easter Monday) on my return from the Club, my wife informed me that she felt sure that, whilst in her bed-room, she had heard some one stumble and fall, over her head, amongst the rafters. I looked through the trap door in the roof, and saw that no one was concealed there, so we naturally concluded that some noise next door had caused a false alarm.

The next day we received by the post the following letter, addressed to Mrs. Bentley:—

"Within a short time I have seen you twice pass Monsieur Boulanger close in the streets without taking any notice of him, and this makes me feel that possibly your own inclination may lead you to fall into my wishes, but that you are compelled to be friendly to him by your husband. Now, Mrs. Bentley, again let me ask you not to play with him; you can refuse at the last moment, and I swear to undo all the harm I have done you. On Tuesday I will be at the Philharmonic concert. If you will follow my wishes, do not speak to him at all, or allow him to speak to you, and I shall know by that you intend doing what I wish. I hear he is going to give a concert for St. Vincent's Hospital, but your name is not associated as going to play with him, therefore you can now refuse. I know threats are useless with you; but listen, and then judge if I cannot do all I say. I have been two nights and a day above your bed-room, and one night was in your bed-room in the middle of the night; had you made an attempt to alarm * * * I would have killed you in an instant, and you are well aware your husband is too delicate to protect you. I saw you leave your room in the middle of the night and go in to see your little baby, and had my pistol pointed at you from the trap door, for I thought you saw me, but I found I was mistaken. The night before that I saw you as you came up-stairs (when your husband was in bed) obliged to sit down on the stairs, your old complaint having attacked you, and you know, as well as I do, however much you may try to hide it from others, that it is doing its work quietly and steadily; and if anything occurs to startle you very much will kill you. I have told you where I was, because I never shall be fool enough to go there again. Let me ask you to do what I wish, and you shall be perfectly unmolested after; persist, and I say I will kill you both, for I have that which will effect my object without much fear of my being discovered, and even were this not the case, I would risk my life and all I have, or may hope to have, to revenge myself on two for whom I have a hatred which nothing can ever quench."

Mrs. Bentley did go into the nursery on the night of Easter Sunday to see our child, and as she left our room informed me that the door had been left open, and on the previous night Mrs. Bentley also left the room, just after I had gone to bed, to fetch some medicine, and she was attacked as she came up-stairs with a spasm of the heart, and compelled to sit down on the stairs. We also found a visiting card of my own, with the words, "Mr. Bentley's visiting card," written on the back in the anonymous handwriting, placed in the drawer of our toilet table. The household had long retired to bed.

On the 24th of April Mr. Boulanger informed me that on the night of the 22nd he had been stopped in the Race-course, at midnight; that he levelled his revolver, and the man took to his heels.

On

On the 25th Mrs. Bentley, as she was returning from her professional duties, was waylaid at a solitary spot, and brutally struck and seriously hurt by a man in disguise.

On the 28th of April Mrs. Bentley received the following letter :—

“ Will you now follow my wishes; after what took place on ———, you can scarcely doubt my intentions if you persist; you thought you would never be attacked in daylight, but you found to the contrary; and, if I am not mistaken, it will be some time before you recover quite from the effect of my hand. You think you can describe me; you are mistaken; I was disguised in every way; and to show you that what I say is true, I will be near you at the concert to-morrow evening, and you will not know me. Listen! You are a plucky woman, but you are not free from fear, with all your courage. Your face told me that. You have felt the weight of my hand once, but by God you shall feel it again, if you persist, in a very different way. Think well, and believe me, I will trouble you no more, if you give in.

“ Yours,
“ ———.”

Other threatening letters were then posted to Mrs. Bentley, apparently with the same object, namely, to prevent her appearance in public as a professional pianiste. On the morning of Sunday, the 10th of May, at 2 a.m., I was roused from my sleep by a knock at the street door. I went down-stairs and was informed that something was wrong. The house was searched, and we then unfastened the trap in the roof (which had been made secure, so as to shut off all access to the house), and found the sky window open, but no one was there; the window was propped open with a brick, as if to ensure escape; a circular hole about an inch in diameter had been made in the nursery ceiling, and another hole had been commenced in our bed-room ceiling, exactly over our bed. In the roof was found a gimlet, full of lime, which had evidently been recently used; also an old knife, and some lucifers wrapped up in a torn piece of dirty paper, having upon it, in the same handwriting as the anonymous letters, fragments of what appear to be directions, viz., “ for ”—“ light sleeper ”—“ on the left hand side ”—“ finish at once ”—“ shoot.”

A few days after the last alarming occurrence, Mrs. Bentley was asked officially by your committee to play at your then forthcoming concert, which invitation (after advising with those considered most competent to give advice) she accepted; two members of your committee, who also made the same request, having assured Mrs. Bentley that the usual courtesy heretofore shown on similar occasions (to Mrs. Bentley herself on one of such), of being led to the platform by the President or Vice-President (if present) would, as a matter of course, be accorded to her.

The persecution herein detailed had seriously affected my wife's health. On the afternoon of the day of the concert she was very unwell, but determined not to fail in her engagement, and accordingly went to the concert with the full intention of performing the portion of the programme allotted to her. When the time arrived for that performance, Mrs. Bentley naturally expected that, the President being absent, the Vice-President, who was present, would, as a matter of course, conduct her to the platform; and being suddenly informed that that gentleman positively refused to do so, she was so pained and agitated at the idea that such a public refusal, by an official patron of your society (who was aware of the anonymous persecution Mrs. Bentley had been subjected to) might, in some minds at least, give countenance to the wicked slanders so artfully and so widely disseminated against her, that she (feeling that there was no alternative) withdrew from the concert room.

Since the concert I have had other of such anonymous letters placed in my hands by one of your committee, and another gentleman, stating the confidence of the writer that “ after the just exposure that was made of Mrs. Bentley last night ” by the Vice-President, who, the writer asserts, was cognizant of her bad character, and had, therefore, publicly withholden from her the courtesy “ she was entitled to had she been a lady of unblemished character,” no further doubt will be left in their minds as to her being a disreputable person.

It is gratifying to me that your committee have published an advertisement, exonerating Mrs. Bentley from all blame in the course she adopted in declining to play.

I have endeavoured to be as brief as possible; but although much has therefore necessarily been omitted, my solicitors, Messrs. Johnson and Johnson, will certify that there is no colouring or suppression of facts whatever.

Feeling that the circumstances of the case are my justification in thus addressing you,

I remain, Ladies and Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

THOMAS C. BENTLEY.

67, Elizabeth-street North, 2nd June.

P.S.—A reward of two hundred pounds (£200) will be paid by me to any one who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the offender or offenders.

Sydney, 8 October, 1862.

Re BENTLEYS.

Dear Sir,

I am instructed a deposition made by Thomas Charles Bentley, Julia Bentley, Mary Ryan, and Anna Maria Bradshaw, on oath, before a Magistrate, has been forwarded to you; I am informed the name of Signor Cutolo has been used in a manner which requires attention on his part, in this deposition.

For

For him I respectfully inquire—

Why this deposition has been placed in the possession of the Government?

Will any steps be taken by the Government in the matter?

If not, may I ask the deposition may be lent to me, for perusal by me and Signor Cutolo, together with a copy of a report I have heard has been made by the police with reference to this matter.

If no report has been made by the police, will you kindly require a report from Inspector Harrison in the matter, as I am confident the close attention given to it for several months by that officer will point directly to the guilty parties; and I would respectfully urge that, in order to punish the indirect slanders and rumours prejudicial to Signor Cutolo, so industriously concocted and circulated by Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, such a report is absolutely necessary, and justify my application, to enable me to establish the innocence of Signor Cutolo beyond a shade of suspicion, and expose and—I hope—mete out adequate punishment to, his slanderers.

The Honorable C. Cowper, Esq.,
Chief Secretary.

I have, &c.,
WILLIAM HELLYER.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 11 October, 1862.*

Sir,

I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th instant, and to inform you, in reply, that it is not the intention of the Government to take any further steps in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, therein referred to, but that your request to be allowed access to the documents in this office cannot be complied with.

William Hellyer, Esq.,

PARTICULARS OF THE BENTLEY CASE.

(As handed in to the Colonial Secretary by Mr. Harrison.)

THIS case was first put into my hands in November, 1861, by Mr. Hanson, of the Empire, and Mr. Bentley. I was then informed by them that a foreign professional was the suspected person; they afterwards told me that it was Cutolo, and gave me particulars which appeared to put the matter beyond a doubt. I took all necessary steps, and after the lapse of a month, being unsuccessful in finding the author, I was met by Mr. Hanson, who commenced a tirade of abuse against the police, and ended by saying that he believed I had betrayed them to Cutolo, and if he had sent a cheque at the time he sent the information, he had no doubt the author would have been discovered. I informed Captain M'Lerie of the fact, and took no further steps in the matter until the 18th March, 1862, when Mr. Bentley and Boulanger, who had just arrived in Sydney, called on Captain M'Lerie, and asked him to have the matter once more taken into the hands of the police. I again undertook the matter, on condition that it should remain a secret between us, as I knew that Cutolo was aware he was suspected, having been openly denounced by many of Bentley's friends as the author of the anonymous letters then in circulation.

I put Cutolo, Montagu, and St. Juste under surveillance night and day; and acting upon a letter which Mr. J. H. Plunkett had received, a fictitious letter was sent to the Post Office, signed H. B., and advertised to that effect; likewise advertised in both the daily papers, offering £100 reward for any information as to the authorship. Bentley wanted to make the reward £400, which I objected to. These advertisements did not lead to any result; and from steps taken I was soon convinced that if Cutolo was the author, and Montagu the amanuensis, there must be others employed.

Wednesday, 2 April, 1862.

Bentley informed me that, the night previous, he had discovered a quantity of torn music in the drawing-room, and he had left it there until this evening, so that I should see it in its original state. On examining one of the pieces, which Bentley handed me, I found a letter pinned between the leaves. On the following night I placed detectives back and front of the house, kept a watch on the suspected parties, and took many other steps, all of which Bentley was acquainted with. On Friday, the 4th, I told him I should withdraw the men from watching the house, as I could put them to a better purpose. The next morning Bentley shewed me a letter which had been left on the staircase window, and informed me that Mrs. Bentley had heard the footstep running down the passage and out of the front door. The letter, as usual, contained threats against Mrs. Bentley. On the following night, and subsequently, I placed a detective in the house, making every arrangement to ensure success; nothing, however, transpired. On the 10th I withdrew the men from the house, of which fact Bentley was aware. I again had the house watched closely, back and front, so that it was impossible for anyone to gain admittance without being seen by the detectives; of this Bentley was not aware, as I had become suspicious of something wrong on the premises, from the tenor of one of the letters, which shewed that the writer was aware of the steps taken by the police, although I had used extra precautions. The watching inside the house I took upon myself. About 9 o'clock on the night of the 12th, Bentley, who had gone down-stairs to the dining-room, called me, and said that he had found the back verandah door open, which had just been fastened by him; that some one had gained admittance, but had been disturbed by his coming down. We looked for a letter, but did not find one; the house was searched, without success. The detectives who were watching informed me that no one had entered. I told Bentley to examine the yard next morning for some trace of the visitor, as it was raining heavily. The following day he informed me that he had found a letter on the flower-stand in the verandah, and marks of a large footstep in mud leading from the garden to the dining-room door. On examination I found it consisted of two small footprints, evidently made for the purpose of deceiving; I pointed this out to him. He insisted at first that I was mistaken, but afterwards said it was possible, as St. Juste had a small foot, and he had long suspected him as the man who had gained admittance to the house. I again placed a detective on the premises day and night. On the evening of Monday, 21st April, Mrs. Bentley informed me that she had been alarmed, at mid-day, by hearing a stumbling noise overhead; he said he had examined the place, and had come to the conclusion that it was a cat. On the following day Bentley shewed me a letter he had received, which stated that the writer had been concealed in the roof three days, and that he had watched Mrs. Bentley during the night, and had been in the bed-room while they were asleep, and had she given the alarm to the detective in the house he would have shot her. I then closely examined the roof, and found the only access to the same was by a small window, twelve inches by eighteen inches; this had cobwebs on it, and the window frame was thickly coated with dust. Examined the outside of the roof; there was a quantity of mud and sand in the gutter which would have retained the slightest impression. I failed in discovering any trace, and from the fact of the dust and cobwebs on the skylight window, I did not think it possible that any person could have gained admission without disturbing the same. I again examined the inside of the roof or loft. The flooring consists of joists, between which is the lath and plaster of ceiling beneath; the whole was covered with a thick coating of dust, being the accumulation of years. Admission is gained to the said loft by means of a ladder and a small trap about twelve inches square. This is situated under a beam about two feet from the ground. No one could possibly see what was going on down-stairs, as described by the letter, without lying flat on the ground and putting their head partly through the trap. Had this been done, some impression must have been left in the dust; but not a particle was disturbed, except the mark of a foot on a plank leading from the trap to the window and back. This I recognized as being similar to the boot then worn by Bentley, and without telling him the conclusion that I had come to, and that the purport of the letter was false with regard to anyone being concealed in the roof, I questioned him about the footprint, and he told me that it was his. Thinking the servants might be concerned in the matter (although frequently assured by Bentley to the contrary), I took steps regarding them, and soon satisfied myself that they were innocent. On the night of the 22nd, when the letter received by Mrs. Bentley was under discussion, I stated my unbelief of their having been into her bedroom, as I had advised them to keep it locked all night; this they had done, except on the night in question, when Mrs. Bentley said she had omitted doing so, being unwell. I told them had the writer been in the bed-room—his whole object being evidently intimidation and not murder—he would never have lost the opportunity of leaving some trace behind to convince them of that fact. I had a vague suspicion at the time I made the remark, which was strengthened the following day, when Bentley handed me one of his visiting cards, which he said Mrs. Bentley had found that morning in the dressing table drawer, and on the back of which was written, in the anonymous hand, "Mr. Bentley's visiting card." He also said this card must have come from Mrs. Foulis, and had been obtained by Cutolo—he and Mrs. Foulis being on a footing of more than simple acquaintance. In the course of conversation with Boulanger on the same day, he told me that on crossing the Race-course on the previous night, being followed by a man who pretended to be drunk, he came close up to him and made some remark, when thinking it necessary to draw his revolver, the man said, "Oh! you have got one, have you?" and ran away. Previous to this Bentley had advised Boulanger to carry a revolver, telling him that his life was in as much danger as Mrs. Bentley's. Boulanger believing this, was in a constant state of alarm. From cross questions I put to him I was satisfied that, if his statement were true, he had been needlessly alarmed by some drunken person. For some time previous to Easter week I had sent a detective to Newtown, on Tuesday and Friday (being the days on which Mrs. Bentley gave music lessons at Mr. Josephson's), Bentley having informed me that on more than one occasion she had been spoken to by gentlemen on the road, one of whom had followed her as far as Mr. Josephson's house. He told her that he had come there by appointment to meet her, but acknowledged that he had been duped. He apologized, but declined giving his name. Her description of him was so vague (although she said she had afterwards seen him at the Philharmonic concert) that I had little hope of discovering him. I told her to be particular with regard to the next one who stopped her, and take a careful survey of his dress, and especially of any article of jewellery he might have about him. On Saturday, the 19th April, Bentley told me it would be needless to send an escort to Newtown on the following week, as, being holidays, she would not give any lessons. On Friday, 25th, Bentley called on me in the afternoon, and told me that Mrs. Bentley had been assaulted at Mr. Josephson's gate by a man, whom she described as being about thirty years' of age, stout built, dark beard, hair, moustache, eyes, and complexion; that he roughly seized her by the shoulder, when, owing to fear, she became speechless, and put her hand upon her heart, whereupon he rudely thrust his hand inside her dress, and said, "Oh! you have got one too, have you?" and observing that she was taking particular notice of him, he said, "Oh! you are taking my description, are you? You can tell Harrison I wear a red Crimean shirt, with yellow foxes' heads and tails upon it, and a gold ring with a cornelian anchor upon it; and I shall be at the Philharmonic concert, and I defy him to catch me." I questioned Mrs.

Mrs. Bentley particularly about the man's description; she said she was sure his beard and moustache, wig, &c., were all false; believed him to be a fair complexioned man, although he appeared dark; he had the manners of a gentleman; but being very much alarmed, feared she could not recognize him unless he presented the same appearance. I left the house satisfied that Bentley, and no other, was the author of the anonymous letters, and the whole affair a fabrication. On the strength of this belief, I again saw Bentley on the same evening, and made some indirect remarks as to the motives of the assault. I did this for the purpose of confirming my suspicions, and, if correct, I knew that Bentley would write a letter next day, probably detailing the particulars of the assault, for the purpose of confirming Mrs. Bentley's statement. The following afternoon Bentley waited upon the Inspector General, with an anonymous letter confirmatory of the above. The following morning I had a long conversation with Captain McLerie about this case, and informed him that I had discovered the author, and the persons so long suspected were innocent, but I was not in a position to give him the particulars at the present time. My motive for doing so was this:—I saw the awkward position in which I was placed, the particulars of these anonymous letters were known to some hundreds in the city, all of whom felt the greatest interest in Mrs. Bentley—amongst the most active were Mr. Plunkett, Messrs. Johnson and Johnson, Hanson, Black, Wrench, Ingelow, Aldis, Bradley, and Doctor Brereton—and I felt sure that if a suspicion of my belief as to the author of the letters had reached Bentley's ears, he would have instantly declined any further assistance from the police, alleging, as an excuse, that they had conspired with the enemy. I even believed him capable of going to any length to confirm the same in public opinion. Had this taken place it would have been impossible for me to adduce proofs to the contrary, as at this time I had not one tittle of evidence against him. I was, therefore, compelled to let the matter take its course.

On the night of the Philharmonic concert, Tuesday, 29th April, I had detective officers placed at both doors, according to Bentley's request. A few minutes previous to the conclusion of the performance Bentley rushed up to me, and said that the man who had assaulted Mrs. Bentley at Newtown had just passed out of the door at which I was standing in York-street; he had made himself known to Mrs. Bentley by holding up a letter. I told him it was impossible, as only three persons had passed out during the last quarter of an hour, all of whom were known to me; he insisted that it was so, and I sharply told him he was mistaken; he returned to the room, and afterwards apologized, laying the blame on Mrs. Bentley for having wrongly informed him at which door she had seen the man pass out. On questioning Mrs. Bentley about the appearance of the man, she could not give me any description of his dress; she had recognized him by the sneering laugh as he held the letter up. I made some remarks to him that night, for the purpose of drawing another confirmatory letter, which duly arrived.

About half-past 1 on the morning of the 11th May a letter was given to me at the detective office, which was addressed to the Central Police Office, where it had laid two days; it was written in a printed hand, to the effect that Mrs. Bentley's life was in danger, and to search the house carefully. Anticipating the result, and the object with which it was sent, at the same time being engaged in police business of importance, I felt inclined to leave it until the morning; but thinking if I did so it might give rise to the very suspicion in Bentley's mind it was my object to avoid, I, in company with a detective officer, proceeded to the house at once. Some few days previously Bentley informed me that he had had the top of his bed lined with zinc. I roused him up and shewed him the letter, at which he appeared surprised and alarmed. I proceeded at once to the roof; the trap leading to the same was fastened with two strong bolts, and a bell attached, shewing that no one could have got to the top of the house through the said trap, and which Bentley informed me had not been unfastened for some days. I found the skylight window propped open with a brick, a number of which were lying on the ground; there was a quantity of mortar attached to some of them; the loose plaster between the joists was pulled up, evidently for effect, and perfectly useless for any sinister purpose. I searched the place carefully, but did not find anything but a piece of torn note paper. I told Bentley what I had seen, on coming down; he then said the note paper was the same as that on which the anonymous letters were written, and the enemy had evidently meditated an attack on his wife's life, which I had happily frustrated; and with regard to the letter I received, the writer must, through feeling of pity, or hope of future reward, have sent me the caution. I then told him (having an object in so doing) that they must have been there in the day-time, and not during the night, or I should have found some trace of a candle being used, and that I would return on the following morning and make a more careful search. I did so, in company with Bentley; he handed me, from behind one of the joists, an old knife, a new gimlet marked with plaster, and some wax matches wrapped up in a piece of torn note paper, on which was written, in the anonymous hand, "light sleeper"—"left side"—"shoot." I examined the paper, and was satisfied that the words had been written after the paper was torn, and not part of a torn letter, as was evidently the intention of the writer to convey; he also shewed me two small holes—one in the ceiling of the nursery, the other over his bed—remarking that the intention of the person concealed was evidently to shoot Mrs. Bentley through the same, as it was on the left side, and directly over where she slept; that they must, in the first instance, have mistaken the nursery for the bed-room, or they would not have made a hole there; he evidently forgot at this time, that had there been a design against the life of Mrs. Bentley there would have been plenty of time to put it into execution, as my letter of caution (which he said had been the saving of life) was detained two days at the Central Police Office. The gimlet found, from its make and general appearance, I have every reason to believe came out of a chest of new tools now in his possession. I made careful search for the place from which the bricks had been removed at the top of the house, but without success. I afterwards found some similar ones on a broken wall in rear of the garden.

On

On the evening of the last Philharmonic concert I got another letter in the same printed hand, advising me to withdraw Mrs. Bentley from the concert before its conclusion, as her life was in danger. On Mr. Merewether's refusal to hand Mrs. Bentley to the piano she immediately left. The following day Messrs. Wrench and Aldis received each an anonymous letter, with regard to the occurrence of the previous evening.

The object in first writing these letters I believe to be known only to Bentley,—probably for the purpose of creating an interest in his wife, and for the sake of notoriety. Pecuniary interest may have had much to do with it, as Cutolo was in many instances teaching at the same house where Mrs. Bentley gave her lessons. The animus of Bentley against Cutolo during the whole affair has been very great, and he has never lost an opportunity of impressing his friends, and those who have questioned him about it, that he, and no other, was the guilty party, and that his object was professional jealousy towards Mrs. Bentley. All the letters went to carry out the same idea; those sent to Mrs. Bentley, and which her husband shewed to all his acquaintances, were to the effect that she should retire at once from the musical world and then all persecution should cease. It is not likely that any number of people would band themselves together, commit burglary, and risk being shot at any moment when on the premises—not forgetting the punishment the law would have inflicted on them—for the paltry object of depriving Mrs. Bentley of a few pupils, or preventing her playing in public. There is nothing said in any of the letters to shew that other than professional jealousy is the object; and it must have cost a larger sum than the object was worth, to keep a number of subordinates faithful, in face of the large rewards offered, although the advertisements promised secrecy to anyone giving the information.

On Boulanger landing here he was introduced to the Bentley's, and became a constant visitor at the house. He received several letters, but on his quarrelling with Bentley they ceased.

In no case where the anonymous letters were received, could Mrs. Bentley's character have suffered, as in every instance they were sent only to those who, from intimacy with her, could never for a moment entertain the slanders against her. The recipients of the first letters were Mr. Hanson, Mr. Aldis, Mr. Black, and Dr. Brereton; they were, of course, well aware of the falsity of the charges preferred—Dr. Brereton being medical adviser to the family.

Since the publication in the daily papers of Mr. Bentley's advertisement (seeing that it has in a great measure turned public opinion from Cutolo into other channels) Bentley has circulated a report of Mrs. Bentley having fallen into the hands of the Jesuits, at Exeter, when a child, and that probably the late persecution may be their act, and that Cutolo is their agent, and has been working to answer their ends, at the same time answering his own by driving Mrs. Bentley out of the musical world.

In every instance Bentley has managed to get possession of the anonymous letters, alleging that he wished to have them all complete, to produce as evidence against the enemy when brought to justice; but I believe his motive in collecting them was, at any moment, in case of an exposé, to have the power of destroying them, thus doing away with any evidence against himself; as he has often said that Cutolo would try and get possession of them for the same purpose.

With regard to the assault on Mrs. Bentley, and the concealment of the parties in the house for the purpose of taking her life, if this portion is false, the letters must be so likewise; as, after the assault and reported concealment in the house, letters in the same handwriting were received confirmatory of the same. In addition I would remark, that the holes in the ceiling were so small that a quill could not be passed through them; neither Mr. Bentley nor I could find where they were made between the joists, until Mrs. Bentley had passed a wire through from beneath to indicate their position. After this was done nothing could be seen in the bed-room below.

I HAVE carefully perused the accompanying depositions. Any opinion that I may entertain respecting the case, does not, I think, affect the question whether the application made on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley should be entertained by the Government or not.

It is a matter of fact, that certain anonymous letters have been written affecting Mrs. Bentley's character, and it is for the Government to decide if sufficient personal injury has been done or attempted thereby, to justify the offering of a public reward. I informed Mr. Bentley, when he spoke to me on the subject, that when a sworn information was made I would recommend the Government to offer a reward; though, at the same time, I cannot see any material consequence likely to result from this course—a heavy private reward having already been offered.

I may perhaps be allowed to suggest that, in the event of a Government reward being offered, it should be notified in guarded terms.

Sir,

We have the honor to call your attention to the letter of our firm to you, dated the 17th of September last, enclosing the depositions of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley and their servants, and to request that we may be favoured with a reply thereto, at your earliest convenience.

We have, &amp;c.,

"ONE HUNDRED POUNDS REWARD (£100).—The above reward will be paid to any person who will, by letter or otherwise, give such information as will lead to the conviction of the author of numerous anonymous letters, addressed from time to time, during the last twelve months, to the heads of certain influential families in Sydney, having for their object the circulation of false and malicious charges against a lady professor, resident in the city; and also of certain anonymous communications recently written, with the same object, and directed against an eminent artist of musical profession, lately returned to the Colony.

"It is known that the letters alluded to have been written by an amanuensis, and information given by that person will entitle him to the reward.

"PROFESSIONAL JEALOUSY—ASSASSINATION.

"To the Editor of the 'Empire.'"

"Sir,

"The advertisement which appeared in your paper of yesterday, containing particulars of a diabolical attempt to sacrifice the characters and lives of two unoffending and respectable citizens—residents here only, I understand, about two years—out-Herods everything on record in Botany Bay; and when the paltry object is taken into consideration with the protracted and systematic persecution, I remember nothing bearing its comparison in the world's history. My object in writing these few lines is to request you to draw the attention of the Government to the matter. It should come before Parliament, and no amount should be spared in a reward for the discovery of the wretches who are identified therewith. Who can rest in their beds after the disclosures of yesterday? It will remain a black spot on our character as a Colony of Britons, if we do not hunt out the band of miscreants in this most diabolical conspiracy. I can only say that I shall be but too happy to put my name down for £50, in addition to the reward already offered, for the purpose of bringing these human devils to justice.

"AN OLD CITIZEN OF SYDNEY."

"Sir,

"The advertisement signed by Mr. Bentley, which appeared in your paper of yesterday, must have evoked a feeling of horror and indignation in the breast of every man who read it.

"A correspondent in your paper this morning offers an additional reward of £50 for the apprehension of the unmanly ruffian who has made the dastardly attack on the life and character of a helpless woman. I, too, Mr. Editor, will cheerfully add another £50 to aid in bringing such a cowardly ruffian to justice; and I feel sure that the Government of a British Colony will not be so far wanting in its duty to the community as to delay in using all the means which power and money can effect in speedily avenging this gross outrage on humanity, and thus teaching the perpetrator thereof that an atrocious habit, but too prevalent in the south of Europe, cannot with impunity, be practised in a land inhabited by Englishmen.

I COMMENCE a letter to you to-day, a day earlier than I intended doing so, feeling that Friday may be the only day I can post it.

How strange does it appear to have to write instead of talking to you. I have so much to say, and yet strange and foolish as it may appear to you, I am so fearful of this falling into other hands that I am almost tongue-tied; past events have indeed made me a sad coward, and I am sure you will not misunderstand me when I say that I am sometimes suspicious when my better judgment tells me that it is folly being so.

During the last two days I have pictured you riding through the rain (for we have had wretched weather), anxiously longing to come up with those whom you are seeking; you cannot be more anxious than I am that you should succeed, and each morning my first thought is the newspaper, to see if there is any intelligence from the Lachlan. As for Sydney news I have very little to tell you. No doubt you hear everything of any consequence officially. As for Mrs. Bentley's annoyance, that I believe for the present rests quietly, the mail robbery having for the time at least usurped all the public interest. Mr. Cowper was very gracious on Tuesday; but Captain M'Leerie not having returned, he could not decide upon anything until after having had an interview with him. The letters were, I believe, left in Mr. Cowper's hands, for his perusal. I am sorry to say the belief of Mrs. Bentley's madness is gaining ground; but enough of this subject. Why should I allude to it when you have had nothing but trouble on its account for months past? Can you see any prospect of your return? I fear not at present. How gladly will you be welcomed when you do!! You scarcely know how gladly. And now I must say adieu.

That success may attend you in all you undertake, and that every happiness may be yours, is the heartfelt prayer of yours ever.

Dear Sir,

We have not been able to make anything of the bookseller as yet; he states that he is in the habit of receiving communications with the same initials. I don't believe it.

Will see you, if possible, this evening. Should I not do so, rest assured that nothing fresh has transpired.

Yours truly,

— Bentley, Esq.,

My dear Sir,

I beg to introduce to you a family in which I am particularly interested. Its head, Mr. Bentley, is one of the most remarkable examples I have yet met with of galloping consumption arrested. He is, besides, a most amiable and excellent person, whom it is impossible to know without liking. His wife's devotion has much helped to save him.

I feel assured you will look well after him and his.

Yours very truly,

Sir,

We have much pleasure in bearing our testimony in behalf of your son, Thomas Charles. He gave us entire satisfaction when a clerk in our employment for some years, and left us, to our regret, on account of his health. When in business for himself he had an account with us, and always acted so as to maintain our respect.

We trust that he will have his health, and be successful in Australia.

Dear Sir,

We are very glad to hear of your brother's, Thomas Chas. Bentley's, success in the Colony, and hope he will be quite restored to health by the fine climate of Sydney.

We have much pleasure in stating that we have been acquainted with him for some years, and have had many transactions with him in business, and believe him to be a man of high honor and respectability.

Sir,

We are pleased to hear that Mr. Thomas C. Bentley has, through your kind interest in his favour, succeeded in obtaining the appointment of Secretary to the Australian Club; that gentleman is personally known to us, and we feel assured of his integrity and ability.

We are convinced that he will faithfully and zealously discharge the duties committed to him, and will do credit to the appointment you have been mainly instrumental in obtaining for him.

(1.)

Police Department of New South Wales,
Detective Branch,
Sydney, 23 August, 1862.

Dear Sir,

I am informed that a case of a singular nature occurred in Exeter about fourteen years ago. A gentleman named Monk who, I believe, held a Government appointment there, put a matter into the hands of the police for investigation. It appears that his daughter Julia, then about sixteen years of age, who was a day scholar at Miss Hawkes' school, was in the habit of receiving anonymous letters, the said letters being attached to stones and thrown into the windows of her father's house. The matter, I am informed, created great excitement at the time, which continued for several months.

On returning from school one day Miss Monk informed her father that she had been taken into an empty butcher's shop by an elderly gentlemen, a stranger, and had there been compelled to take some fearful oaths, the object of which was to turn her from the Protestant to the Catholic faith. I am likewise informed that a young clergyman, named Guerne, was mixed up in the matter.

Will you be kind enough to collect for me all the particulars of the affair, as a case of a similar nature has occurred here, and I have reason to believe that the parties are identical. By complying with this request you will confer a great favour upon

Yours, &c.,
C. E. HARRISON.

Guildhall, Exeter, 16 October, 1862.

Sir,

In answer to your letter of August 23rd, respecting a matter that was investigated by the police, caused by statements made by Miss Julia Monk, and correctly stated in yours, upon hearing them I caused every inquiry to be made, and appointed a detective to watch when she went to and from school; others to watch the house,—but nothing transpired in the slightest degree to confirm any part of her statements, but rather the contrary.

The clergyman named Gurney was, at that time, curate in the parish in which her father resided. He was not supposed to be mixed up in the former affair—more a love one. He is at present in Paris—a very popular preacher there. Miss Julia was afterwards married to a Mr. Bentley, and, as I am informed, went to Australia.

To the Chairman of the Select Committee in the Bentley case.

Sir,

Having been informed that Monsieur Boulanger has stated that he never told me of the fact of Mrs. Bentley being armed, I beg most distinctly to affirm that he did do so, and although I cannot positively fix the date, I am positive that it was very shortly after I heard of the assault upon Mrs. Bentley, and that at the time no rupture had taken place between Mr. Bentley and M. Boulanger.

I shall be most happy to attend you to-morrow morning if any evidence on my part can tend to assist you in this investigation.

I am, &c.,

PETITION OF REV. J. M'GARVIE.

To His Excellency SIR GEORGE GIFFS, Knight, Governor-in-Chief.

The Petition of the Rev. J. M'Garvie, D.D., on behalf of his Congregation,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

* That petitioner's church was built at a time when there was open access from it to George-street, and with the understanding that a road should be made through the Old Burial Ground to join Clarence-street; but the first having been cut off by the enclosing of the cathedral grant, and the second not having been effected, petitioner's congregation experiences great inconvenience on sabbath thereby.

That petitioner, sensible of the great public benefit of opening a footpath to the north of St. Andrew's Church, most respectfully solicits that His Excellency the Governor will be pleased to authorize the erection of a door, gate, or wicket, in the wall of the Old Burial Ground, at each end of Clarence-street, and its continuation to Bathurst-street, for the use of foot-passengers only, no graves being disturbed thereby, to be used, if judged expedient, during the week, or only on sabbath, to afford facilities for attending divine service in the three churches in that neighbourhood; and, if necessary, petitioner will take charge of the key.

That petitioner has authority from the Rev. J. Saunders to state to His Excellency that he entirely concurs in this request, and in the great benefit that will arise from it to the public.

Petitioners will ever pray, &c., &c., &c.

JOHN M'GARVIE, D.D.

COLONIAL SECRETARY to REV. DR. M'GARVIE.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 7 May, 1846.*

REVEREND SIR,

I am directed by the Governor to acknowledge the receipt of your petition of the 22nd ultimo, requesting, on behalf of the congregation of St. Andrew's Church, that a footpath may be allowed to that church, through the Old Burial Ground in George-street, for the purpose of affording facilities for attending divine service; and, in reply, to inform you, that when His Excellency lately proposed, in a message to the Legislative Council, to open the burial place in question to the public, a feeling of disinclination to the measure was, he believes, extensively manifested; and that His Excellency regrets, therefore, very much that he can take no active steps towards complying with the present request, although he is far from considering it unreasonable.

I have, &c.,

W. ELYARD.

REV. DR. M'GARVIE to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 12 May, 1846.

SIR,

I had the honor of your reply of 7th May, respecting a path through the Old Burial Ground, and beg to thank His Excellency for the expression of his regret that he cannot take any active steps in the matter, and that he thinks the request not unreasonable.

As

* Original papers on which this ground was given are not now traceable.

As I apprehend that my request is misunderstood, I would beg liberty to remark that there is already a common road through the burial ground to the English church and school (where the wall is broken down), and which terminates in the cathedral grant, within a few yards of my church, but of which my congregation have not the benefit; and my chief request is that this footway already established and used may end, with His Excellency's permission, without trespass, at a gate, door, or other opening, to be placed ten yards or thereby west of the termination of the present road, for the convenience of the public, and particularly for facilitating attendance upon divine service on sabbath, discountenancing all desecration.

My church was built fronting George-street, with the understanding on the part of the Government that we should have access to the northern and eastern parts of the town, whenever the time should expire when the burial ground might be lawfully opened. Three thousand pounds have been expended, and we are prepared to lay out other five hundred pounds; and we think we are justified in appealing most strongly to His Excellency for so small a favour as that we pray for, viz.,—that the path used with so much advantage to the English church and school, approaching to within ten yards of our church gate, may be rendered available to our congregation, by permitting the authorized removal of a part of the wall, which is the only barrier to the increased usefulness and extension of our place of worship and congregation.

I fervently pray that, on revision of the case, His Excellency will be enabled to comply with this most respectful request.

I have, &c.,

JOHN M'GARVIE, D.D.

REVEREND SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, in reply to mine of the 7th, on the subject of your application to be allowed to open a footpath through the Old Burial Ground, George-street, to the north of St. Andrew's Church,—I am directed by the Governor to inform you, that the common road or path to which you allude does not appear to have been in any way established by the Government, and that unless it can be shewn that it was opened by the Government, His Excellency regrets to say that he must still decline any interference in the matter.

LORD BISHOP OF SYDNEY to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 22 March, 1847.

SIR,

I have the honor to submit, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor, an application which has been addressed to me by the Churchwardens of the parish of St. Andrew's in Sydney. The statement made by those gentlemen is clear and simple, and requires no confirmation from me. Indeed, I may observe that the most impressive confirmation it could receive would be from an inspection of the ground in its present state. Two years ago I took considerable pains, and went to no small expense, in restoring the Cemetery to a state of decency and order, as well as in endeavouring to preserve it from further violation. In this effort I have been well supported by the Churchwardens and most respectable inhabitants of the parish. But in consequence of their inability to obtain protection from the police against trespassers, the place has speedily become dilapidated, and is the continual scene of such gross enormities as renders it a scandal in the heart of the city and so near a church. I am, therefore, of opinion that no effectual remedy can be provided except by His Excellency's assenting to the prayer of the applicants, authorizing them, by a grant of the ground, to enclose it securely; and I have recommended them to limit their application to the extent of one acre, in consideration of its being the same with that which the Roman Catholic community were authorized, by Sir George Gipps, to take from Hyde Park, in addition to their previous allotment.

I beg to enclose a plan, which has been laid down from actual measurement and approved by the Churchwardens.

I have, &c.,

W. G. AUSTRALIA.

[Enclosure in No. 5.]

Sydney, 1 March, 1847.

My Lord,

It is in your Lordship's remembrance that, about three years ago, we put into circulation a petition relative to the Old Burial Ground, which petition, signed by upwards of four thousand persons, your Lordship kindly presented, at our request, to His Excellency the late Governor. Not traceable.

Since that time this ground has been wholly neglected; and we are continually reminded of the indecency, as well as the bad effect upon the public mind, of suffering a spot once devoted to so sacred a purpose to continue in its present state.

We respectfully and earnestly request your Lordship will draw the attention of His Excellency the present Governor to the subject, and use the influence of your Lordship's high station in obtaining a fit appropriation of a piece of ground in the heart of the city, associated with the recollections of the past, and in the immediate vicinity of our present place of worship and the rising walls of the cathedral church.

REPORT OF DEPUTY SURVEYOR GENERAL.

9 April, 1847.

NOTWITHSTANDING the high and influential quarter from which this application is made, I cannot feel myself justified in recommending a measure which I consider repugnant to feelings of humanity. The precedent referred to in the case of the Roman Catholic community appears to me to be quite foreign from the point. True, indeed, in both cases the land was considered to have been appropriated, but in the one case the appropriation was for the ordinary purposes of recreation; and in the other dedicated to the Almighty, for the sacred purpose of burial. The motives of the Lord Bishop to preserve from violation a portion, at least, of the remains of the departed of former days in the history of the Colony, must ensure a proportionate degree of respect for His Lordship's high sense of propriety; but I beg leave to maintain, that it is neither right nor expedient on the part of the Government, to entertain a question which has reference to wounding the feelings of thousands of individuals now living in this small community.

As the first settlement of Colonies is generally made by traders, there is naturally a propensity to acquire property of a pecuniary value, but there may be cases in which it may be the duty of the Government to check or direct such propensity; and this, I affirm, is one of the cases. Men of wealth, in all ages and countries, have built mausoleums in order that the remains of their departed relatives might rest undisturbed; and even the savages of this country respect the memory and the places of interment of their dead. Shall we then be the only people, for the sake of lucre, to violate such feelings? Heaven forbid! 'Tis not right—neither is it expedient on the score of profit.

Already the city of Sydney occupies more ground than many European cities of five times the amount of population, and surely the portion originally appropriated, and doubtless consecrated as a burial place, may be left undisturbed, and which will have the effect of increasing the value of the surrounding ground.

I would, therefore, beg leave to suggest that the whole area be placed in the hands of as large a number of Trustees as possible; that designs for handsome iron gates and the laying out of the ground should be invited—the area being surrounded by a foot wall surmounted by substantial iron railing—the grave-stones replaced or arranged, and other improvements effected to render this much abused spot a principal feature in the embellishment of the city of Sydney. I beg leave further to apologize for the warmth of expression into which this interesting subject has involuntarily led me.

MY LORD,

I duly received and submitted to the Governor, together with the report of the Surveyor General's thereon, your letter of the 22nd March last, enclosing a communication from the Churchwardens of the parishes of St. Andrew, soliciting, under the circumstances set forth, a grant of the Old Burial Ground in George-street; and in reply, am directed to inform your Lordship that, having before him the Report of the Committee of the Legislative Council, made in the year 1844, upon the General Cemetery Bill, and which Report His Excellency finds was adopted by the House, he regrets that under the recommendation contained in that report, it will be impossible for him to comply with your Lordship's request, as His Excellency considers that the plan proposed by the Council, and which it appears to him would accomplish the main object that your Lordship has in view—that of preventing the desecration of the ground—should be carried out. To effect this, His Excellency proposes to place a sum upon the Estimates, as well as one for an addition to the police force, to watch over the ground to prevent the improprieties complained of. This will not, of course, interfere with the use of the temporary church which has been erected within the precincts of the Burial Ground.

SIR,

In attention to your letter of the 29th ultimo, I do myself the honor to state the probable expense of enclosing the Old Burial Ground in George-street with a light iron railing, as recommended by the Committee of the Legislative Council on the General Cemetery Bill, including taking down the present wall, fixing coping, gates, &c., may be estimated at £750. This sum will provide for railing-in the ground in George-street, Drutt-street, and a portion of the line adjoining the site of the cathedral. SIR,

With reference to enclosing the Old Burial Ground in George-street, and in reply to your letter of the 22nd instant, informing me that the sum of £750, as per estimate submitted in my letter of the 17th instant, appears to His Excellency the Governor to be an enormous sum for such an object, and requesting me to furnish an estimate of the expense of repairing the present boundary line,—I do myself the honor herewith to transmit the estimate called for, amounting to the sum of £228 4s., and to explain, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that although the sum of £750 may appear heavy, the extent of railing required is considerable, the boundary of the inclosure measuring in extent (1,393) one thousand three hundred and ninety-three feet; and fixing the iron railing it would have been requisite to take down the upper part of the old wall, repair and point the lower portion, and prepare and fix a new stone coping, properly cramped, on the whole line, the cost of which would have been £260 independent of the railing, which, taken at 10s. per running foot, including standards and entrance gates, would amount to £490, making a total of £750, exclusive of any per centage of contingencies.

Having been informed that the Government are about to repair the old wall around the Old Burial Ground, George-street, I beg to bring under the notice of His Excellency the Governor, that the extreme height of the wall immediately adjoining my church obstructs the view of that building and access to it; and that it might be lowered about two feet, for the space of three or four rods, with great advantage, leaving still a sufficient height for the purposes of an enclosure. I would therefore most respectfully request that, in the event of my information respecting the repair of the wall being correct, His Excellency the Governor would be pleased to direct the Colonial Architect, or other person in charge of the work, to meet with myself and Trustees, that we may point out to him our wishes on this matter, when he will be enabled to report for His Excellency's approval.

LORD BISHOP OF SYDNEY to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 24 February, 1849.

SIR,

I have the honor to forward, for consideration of His Excellency the Governor, a report prepared by E. T. Blacket, land surveyor, under instructions from John Campbell, Esq., J.P., upon the present condition of the Burial Ground appertaining to the Church of England, in Sydney. My personal observation of the crowded and offensive state of the ground occasioned me to recommend to Mr. Campbell, as acting Trustee, the employment of a competent person to inspect and report upon its actual condition; and the representation which has been received, I submit to His Excellency's observation, is such as leaves no alternative but to close the spot as a place of burial, not only to prevent the disturbance, which now unavoidably occurs, of the remains of the dead, but to guard against the danger which may be apprehended of communicating infection to the living.

I cannot close this communication without observing that the absence, during so many years, of all power of control on the part of any person, for the maintenance of decency and regularity in the order of the graves and tombs, has been the cause of that disorderly and highly unbecoming appearance which the place of burial presents; and the occasion likewise leads me to direct the consideration of His Excellency to the still continued neglect of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, adjoining St. Andrew's Church. In the hope of rescuing it from the profane encroachments which had been made upon it, and restoring some portion of the decent solemnity which ought to be attached to the place, I went to considerable private expense in collecting and arranging the dilapidated tombs, and planting trees in the vacant spaces, and the Churchwardens of St. Andrew's were at the cost of new gates to exclude disorderly characters; but, owing to the want of all legal or municipal protection, these well-meant endeavours have proved ineffectual. The gates are broken; the walls are scaled; the place is the resort of the most loose and disorderly characters at all hours of day and night; the tombs are broken, and the stones carried away; and I do not at all exaggerate the case in stating that, while the encouragement thus given to a feeling of irreverence for the dead contributes greatly to injure the moral and religious character of the people, the place itself is becoming a disgrace to the city, as it has long been the source of much painful feeling to the very respectable congregation attending St. Andrew's Church.

I have, &c.,
W. C. SYDNEY.

No. 34.

E. BLACKET, Esq., to JOHN CAMPBELL, Esq.

Sydney,
9 February, 1849.

DEAR SIR,

According to your instructions, I have carefully examined into the present state of the Burial Ground, and have gone over every part to discover what portion of it is fit for future interment.

I find that there is really no unoccupied ground whatever. The principal part of the graves that have been made of late are in the lower part, near the entrance. This portion of the Burial Ground was covered about three years ago with new soil, to the depth of nearly three feet, which has enabled the sexton to dig the ground over again till he came upon the coffins originally interred.

A large part of even this artificial spot is quite full, the coffins being very much nearer the surface than usually thought to be advisable.

The sexton has very great difficulty in finding room for a new grave, especially if there be any desire for any particular spot, the place at present in use being very low, and is in bad repute, on account of its proximity to the graves of those persons who were executed.

Several newly made graves in this part were extremely deficient in depth, in some instances being under six feet, owing to the appearance of rock which runs over the whole of this part of the ground, and rises to within four feet of the surface in some places—on this account it is impossible to inter more than one coffin with propriety.

There are many other places in various parts of the ground where there is space for a grave, but it is of no practicable use; for being between two walls, it is impossible to remove the soil without letting down the arches of the vaults, an accident which has actually occurred in some cases.

There is also a small quantity of space in the bank of sand thrown up against the end wall that was erected a short time ago, but this does not appear to be well accounted of, as the only graves are those of inmates of the Asylum. Upon the whole, I may say that there is no place to make a new grave without seeking a spot for it, and when found it is almost impossible, from the multitude of coffins and the shallowness of the soil, to dig to a fit and proper depth.

The external wall is in good preservation in all parts, except at the higher end, where, from the continual shifting of the sand, the foundations are undermined and are falling out.

The buildings are in very fair order, needing only some trifling repairs.

The vaults are all occupied.

I have, &amp;c.,

E. BLACKET.

In reply, I beg to report, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that the strictest orders have been issued by me to the police, to keep a watch that no disorderly characters resort to the Old Burial Ground or scale the walls. This watch is kept by the police constantly both day and night, when the nature of their other duties will

will admit; and I very much regret to say that it is not in my power, from the insufficient number of men placed at my disposal for the preservation of the peace and good order of the city, to spare a man for the exclusive purpose of watching over this burial ground. Many of the injuries to the tombstones complained of, I have no doubt have been occasioned by the cattle of individuals which gained admission through a breach left in the wall for a considerable time, and doubtless some from a number of children belonging to the numerous schools in the neighbourhood. As it is, however, several convictions have already taken place, for offences against the Police Act committed in this locality.

I may further remark that, with respect to the present burial ground, a strict watch is kept upon it, both by day and night, and that my two orderlies are very frequently told off for that duty.

MY LORD,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter, of the 24th ultimo, submitting the great necessity which exists for the closing of the present Church of England burial ground as a place of interment, and complaining of the continued desecration of the Old Burial Ground in George-street.

With respect to your Lordship's remark, that the want of all control, on the part of any person, for the maintenance of decency and regularity in the order of the graves, &c., has been the cause of that disorderly and unseemly appearance which the place of burial presents, I have the honor to observe that this is a matter over which the Government could exercise no control, the land having been conveyed to Trustees under the provisions of the Acts 7th William IV., No. 3, and 8th William IV., No. 5.

5. In reference to the desecration, &c., of the Old Burial Ground, complained of by your Lordship, I have to point out that the wall has been placed in a state of thorough repair, and instructions have already been issued to the Superintendent of Police, to prevent the ground being made a place of resort by disorderly characters.

6. I have also received a communication on the subject from that officer, by which it appears that the strictest orders have been issued to the police under his control to prevent the burial ground in question being desecrated, and that watch is constantly kept by the police when their other duties will admit. It is, however, further stated that a constable cannot be spared for the exclusive purpose of protecting the ground.

I enclose, for your Lordship's further information, a copy of the Superintendent's letters on the subject.

LORD BISHOP OF SYDNEY to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 16 April, 1849.

SIR,

In further reference to my letter addressed to you on the 24th February, respecting the unsatisfactory state of the Church of England burial ground in this city, I have the honor to forward, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor, a communication upon the same subject which has been made to me by the Rev. W. H. Walsh. As the incumbent of the parish in which the burial ground is situated, he has frequent occasion to visit it in discharge of his duties, and may be considered as more directly connected with, if not responsible for the due observance of regularity and decency in the interment of the dead.

The survey by Mr. Blacket, which was undertaken by direction of the Trustees, in consequence of the many revolting statements continually made, and which was enclosed in my previous letter upon the subject, appears to be thoroughly confirmed by the present representation of Mr. Walsh. I have not felt it necessary to obtain additional evidence from the other officiating clergymen; but all those to whom the statement has been shewn have expressed their readiness to certify to the existence of such violations of natural feeling continually and unavoidably occurring, as require that the use of this ground as a place of interment (excepting tombs or vaults already constructed, and for persons dying in the Benevolent Asylum or Infirmary, not having relations or friends to provide a funeral elsewhere) should be forthwith discontinued. I beg leave also to draw the attention of His Excellency to the circumstance of an Act of Parliament having received the Royal Assent and come into operation on the 1st January last, for regulating the interment of the dead in cities and towns, and imposing a penalty of £20 in every instance in which there shall not be a depth of at least five feet from the surface of the soil to the top of the coffin. In the burial ground at Sydney, it is impossible to ensure in ordinary cases that even one-fourth of that depth shall exist. Although therefore that Act may not be actually in force in this Colony, so as to subject officiating ministers and other parties to the penalties imposed by it, still the spirit of the law is so just and prudent, and the risk which may accompany a neglect of its provisions is so great, that I conceive it must be morally operative here. I have, therefore, out of consideration for the public security, determined to withdraw, from the 15th proximo, the licenses under which the several clergymen are authorized to perform the funeral service in the Sydney Burial Ground, with the exception only of the cases which are particularly referred to herein.

I have not received the intimation referred to in your letter, as to the time when the Cemetery will be fit to be used, but shall be prepared at any time to enter into a communication with you upon the subject; and trust that, in accordance with the terms suggested by Earl Grey, in his despatch to Sir Charles Fitz Roy on the subject, it may be found practicable to remove those objections to some of the provisions contained in the Act of Council for the establishment of this Cemetery, which were conscientiously entertained by a numerous portion of the members of the Church of England. I beg to assure His Excellency that my own endeavours will not be wanting to accelerate this desirable agreement, and—

REV. W. H. WALSH to LORD BISHOP OF SYDNEY.

Christ Church Parsonage,10 April, 1849.

MY LORD,

I admit myself of the circumstance of the burial ground being in my parish, to represent to your Lordship its present condition of unfitness as a place of interment for the Christian dead. I am told, and from my own observation I believe, that, except in one small portion at the lower end, it is now scarcely possible to dig a grave without disturbing or disinterring remains of dead bodies; and I have myself on several occasions seen the side or portions of coffins projecting at various depths into graves which had been dug, to the great distress of all right-minded persons, and with grievous offence to decency. To save ground, and also to escape the alternative I have just described, it has been the practice of the gravedigger, when there have been many burials, to place two and three coffins one upon the other, the upper one sometimes lying within eighteen inches of the surface soil, and the lowest remaining covered with only a light layer of earth for perhaps two or three days, the interval before the interment of a second or third body. I am sure I need not say more to excuse me to your Lordship for expressing a hope that steps may be taken for the speedy closing of the present burial ground. However, I believe it would still be possible to find a space in which to avoid the inconvenience of their removal at present to a greater distance. The bodies of persons dying at the Benevolent Asylum might, for a time at any rate, be interred. Whatever may have been the experience of the other clergymen of Sydney, most of them I am sure would concur with me as to the truth of the general statement I have made—that the present ground is too full for use.

I have, &amp;c.,

W. H. WALSH.

ROBT. CAMPBELL, Esq., to HON. E. DEAS THOMSON.

Fort-street, 5 September, 1849.

MY DEAR SIR,

I am afraid it is not the first time parties have brought under the notice of Government the unfortunate state of the Old Burial Ground in George-street. A gentleman in the neighbourhood—he is Assistant Secretary to the New South Wales Bank—has written to me the enclosed letter, and to advance his motives I cannot do better than enclose it for your perusal. I may state that we have had the occupant of the cottage in the cathedral close sworn in as a constable, and who has, in a small degree, by getting parties punished at the Police Office, abated some of the nuisances; but you will see from the gentleman's letter, he has not strength to abate the whole. We pay him a small sum towards the object. Now it strikes me it would save the Government a great deal of trouble and expense, were the land given entirely over to the custody of the Church of England, who would then be bound by many ties to see these nuisances were not committed; and really such a step would not be opposed, I am sure, by any party, more especially when the beautiful building adjoining, in course of erection, is taken into consideration. And I really do hope, if you have an opportunity of bringing this subject under the consideration of the Executive, you will not lose sight of my suggestion. Perhaps you will smile when I have the hardihood to say I think the land should not be alienated from the owners of that beautiful building, because not only should such a magnificent structure (to be the pride hereafter, I hope, of generations of colonists) have such an area of ground, but it deserves it from the Crown for these reasons, even if it were not enjoined upon us by many others.

Hoping you will excuse the freedom I have taken in a matter very, very interesting to my feelings,—

I remain, &amp;c.,

ROBT. CAMPBELL.

P.S.—I should have called upon you personally, but that I am confined to my house with a sore leg, and have been so for the last ten days.

No. 42.

JOHN H. BAILLIE, Esq., to ROBT. CAMPBELL, Esq.

Sydney, 1 September, 1849.

DEAR SIR,

Do you think the Trustees of St. Andrew's Temporary Church would join in an application to the Government, to have the wall of the Old Burial Ground removed, and a rail substituted, as in the Racecourse? As a resident in that neighbourhood, I am anxious to have this agitated, both as a measure of sanitary reform and from moral considerations. As the place is at present, it not only interferes with the free circulation of the healthy sea-breeze, but it is also a moral nuisance of the most offensive description. By removing the wall in Druitt and George Streets and substituting a rail, laying the tombstones flat, and levelling the ground, the sanitary condition of the whole neighbourhood would be improved. The immoralities perpetrated there would be restrained, while the respect paid to the memory of the dead would not be violated. As an instance of the immoralities I refer to, I may mention that I have myself seen the escape of a scoundrel there after an attempted violation of a female child in broad daylight; the man was scared by some parties entering the ground, and notwithstanding a chase succeeded in escaping from justice. A practice has also been made by a parcel of thieves, recently, of haunting the ground for the purpose of stripping children of sundry articles of clothing, which could not be carried on if the place were properly open to observation. I say nothing about the indecencies which the most casual visitor may witness. As to expense, the material of the wall would go some way towards it. The Government might be got to contribute, and if they should refuse, I dare say the whole sum required would be raised by subscription among the residents or landed proprietors in the neighbourhood. Would you turn the matter over in your mind, and let me know your opinion?

I remain, &amp;c.,

JOHN. H. BAILLIE.

Sydney, 11 June, 1851.

SIR,

We, the Churchwardens of St. Andrew's Temporary Cathedral Church, have the honor to call your attention to a thoroughfare from George-street through the Old Burial Ground to the front of the Scots Church, St. Andrew's. The entrance from George-

George-street is by a gate, the same as is used as an entrance to our church ; and as this gate is left open during the week, numbers of persons passing enter for urinary relief and other purposes, rendering this entrance most unseemly and revolting to the feelings of those who attend the church and necessarily enter at this gate. In order to avoid in future this disgraceful nuisance, we have the honor to request that, as the existence of this thoroughfare does not appear of any importance to the public, we may be allowed to shut the gate in George-street, and erect another opposite the said Scots Church, both which can be kept shut, and when required be opened for the use of our church. Should the Government be unable to allow us to shut up this thoroughfare, we would beg to suggest the propriety of allowing us to open another gateway in George-street for the public, and to enclose our entrance to the church by a fence, as shewn by a plan marked in red ink, so as to prevent a continuance of what we now have to complain of. CROWN LAW OFFICERS' REPORT to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

27 June, 1851.

We think that the Government has the power of complying with the request of the Churchwardens, but we cannot say that it necessarily follows that the public will be bound to submit to the proposed change and substitution of footpaths, because we are not in a position to advise with certainty that the public have not acquired a right of way by use of the present path. We are, however, disposed to think that no absolute right of way can have been acquired ; and if it has, we may anticipate that the substitution will not be resisted.

Before any change be made, we would recommend that a report be obtained from the Surveyor General, as to the original intentions of the Government respecting the locus in quo and the way now used as a thoroughfare.

REPORT OF ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL.

3 July, 1851.

THE original intentions of the Government, as expressed in the Colonial Secretary's letter, No. 41/577, dated 20th December, 1841, were that the Trustees of St. Andrew's Cathedral were to have a permission to occupy, for the purpose of erecting thereon a temporary church, a portion of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, at the south-east corner, to the extent of about eighty feet each way, with right of access from the gate then walled up, they having, by their written engagement, dated 13th December, 1841, undertaken that the land in question should be given up whenever the Cathedral Church of St. Andrew's is opened, or any part of it opened, for the celebration of divine worship. Cannot be traced.

The Trustees have been informed further, that it will be necessary that they should put up a fence to separate the land so occupied from the rest of the burial ground ; thence it appears that no public thoroughfare was ever contemplated, a right of access to the church being all that was accorded. It will perhaps be proper that any further suggestion respecting the appropriation of the Old Burial Ground should form the subject of a separate communication, and which I propose to make. Cannot be traced.

SIR,

We, the Churchwardens of St. Andrew's Temporary Cathedral Church, have the honor again to address you on the subject of the Old Burial Ground. A dwarf wall was erected by the late Colonial Architect opposite York-street, which appears to have been intended for an iron railing, but has not been completed, the consequence is that persons go over the wall at this place into the Burial Ground and commit nuisances; therefore, notwithstanding the arrangements for enclosing it as granted by His Excellency the Governor General, by putting up gates, we are still unable to keep out trespassers, and we are informed it is and has been for some time past a rendezvous at night for very bad characters.

We have to apologize for giving so much trouble in the matter, but we trust His Excellency the Governor General will give instructions to have this portion of the wall so raised as to put an end to the nuisance of which we complain.

SIR,

Having been informed that the opening into the Old Burial Ground in the prolongation of Clarence-street to Bathurst-street, allowed by Sir George Gipps, on the petition of the Rev. Mr. Saunders, myself, our congregations, and the public generally, and with the approval of the Colonial Architect, after a meeting with the Committee of my church, is about to be closed up,—I do myself the honor, humbly, to apprise His Excellency that the opening has been of the greatest benefit and convenience to the inhabitants inhabitants residing in the lower parts of the town, and that if it is closed again, it will prevent all access to our churches, except by a circuitous route, amounting nearly to a prohibition to members of our congregations on the northern parts of the city. Having enjoyed this privilege of access to George-street so long, with so much advantage, and without a single complaint being made known to me, I trust His Excellency the Governor General will withhold his sanction from any proposal to close up the wall entirely, but that he will, from his great consideration for the interests of the public, allow access, on sabbath at least, to George-street, by a gate or opening for persons proceeding to the house of God, through a burial ground in which the remains of the parents and relatives of many of them repose. I have in addition to state that there are five schools in the neighbourhood, and that with the exception of the boys playing on the ground, which if requisite may be easily prevented, I have never seen nor heard of any nuisance or impropriety to justify the closing in of the ground, although I reside close to it, and use the path many times a day. Since the wall was removed the healthiness of the locality has been greatly promoted, to the benefit of the neighbours and children attending the schools, which will be lessened by closing of the wall as before.

I beg therefore most urgently to solicit that, in any improvements to be made in this locality, the passage for foot-passengers, through the Old Burial Ground, from George-street to the prolongation of Clarence-street to Bathurst-street, may be preserved, if not for every day of the week, at least on sabbath day.

1 October, 1851.

It is quite clear to me that the Churchwardens of St. Andrew's having applied for one thing have effected another—they have closed up the original entrance in George-street, but have not opened that proposed by them and shewn in their sketch. They have also closed up the wall in Drutt-street. The railing near the Scots Church has been closely barricaded, and a gate erected there, which is, I presume, that complained of by Dr. M'Garvie. I cannot, however, see but that all parties might be accommodated even with the present arrangements, if the gates are opened on the sabbath, as Dr. M'Garvie wishes.

REV. DR. M'GARVIE to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

3 October, 1851.

SIR,

I have been requested to forward to you, for presentation to His Excellency the Governor General, two petitions, complaining of a grievance to which the public have been subjected, as they believe, without authority from His Excellency, as notified by me in a letter addressed to you on the 14th August last.

The larger petition is signed by members of my congregation, and of the Baptist Church—persons deeply injured by this proceeding; and the second* was got up in a hurried manner, chiefly by working men and persons residing in the district, who had long enjoyed the right, through His Excellency, of passing and repassing from and to their places of work by a short path through the Old Burial Ground.

I strongly recommend attention to this case, as putting our churches in jeopardy, by placing almost a prohibition against attendance upon our places of worship on sabbath; and as exciting a strong feeling of disaffection against so sudden and causeless a withdrawal of a privilege which the public have never abused, but have enjoyed with great advantage for several years.

I have, &c.,
JOHN M'GARVIE.

[Enclosure in No. 56.]

To His Excellency SIR CHARLES AUGUSTUS FITZ ROY, K.C.B., Governor General of the Australian Colonies.

The Petition of the undersigned respectfully sheweth:—

That memorialists residing in Bathurst, Kent, Sussex, Druitt, Clarence, and George Streets South, and in the southern parts of the city generally, beg most respectfully to submit to your Excellency a grievance, which we believe your Excellency has it in your power to remove when informed of the same.

That through your Excellency's kindness, the right of a footpath through the Old Burial Ground has long been enjoyed by the public, affording ready and easy access to the southern parts of the city to members of the congregations, and to children attending the various schools in the vicinity, as well as to workmen proceeding to and from their work; and that no inconvenience known to us has existed during the period it has been allowed.

That memorialists have to complain that the door in Clarence-street has been closed up with brick, the gate in George-street locked, the neat open fence put up by Government taken down, and a formidable wooden barricade erected, with a placard notifying that the thoroughfare has been stopped.

That the fence, the footpath, and the door in Clarence-street, were recommended by the late Colonial Architect, and have been of the greatest benefit; and believing that the grievance has arisen from some misunderstanding, and without your Excellency's permission, we humbly solicit that the footway may be kept open and the fence and door-way replaced.

SIR,

We have the honor to acknowledge your letter dated 31st ultimo, with a copy of a report from the Colonial Architect on a communication from the Revd. Dr. M'Garvie, relative to the stoppage of the thoroughfare through the Old Burial Ground, and that His Excellency the Governor General did not think it necessary to insist upon restricting us to the terms of our original application, by calling upon us to alter the present arrangements, but it would be necessary that the gates should be open on the sabbath. We beg to state that the gates have always been opened during the hours of divine service, and we have given directions they shall remain open on Sundays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., which we trust will meet Dr. M'Garvie's wishes.

We have to remark that the Colonial Architect was wrong in stating that the Churchwardens had applied for one thing and effected another, for the alteration was made strictly in accordance with our application, namely, to enclose the ground by the two gates, to which His Excellency assented; the only variation made, if it may be so called, was our having a small door-way bricked up which led into Druitt-street and was necessary to complete the enclosure; the close barricade which Mr. Blackett mentions is merely a batten fence with a small gate.

SIR,

I have the honor of mentioning, by direction of the Committee of St. Andrew's Scots Church, Kent-street, that their attention having been drawn to certain proceedings of the Church of England, as published in the Sydney Morning Herald of the 10th instant, in reference to a proposed petition by the members of that Church, to His Excellency the Governor, for a "grant" of the Old Burial Ground adjoining St. Andrew's Cathedral,—they beg leave to state, through you, for His Excellency's information in dealing with the the petition, that this Burial Ground was the subject of a considerable correspondence in 1846, between the late Reverend John M'Garvie, D.D., and His Excellency the late Sir George Gipps. That from this correspondence, it appears that the understanding at the time of St. Andrew's Scots Church being built was, that when the proper time should arrive, Clarence-street should be enclosed through this ground, and meantime that access through it by footpath was solicited as now enjoyed by the Scots Church.

I beg leave to observe, that the extension of Clarence-street (which could be made under precautions against desecration, similar to those proposed in the petition referred to) would give, as all along anticipated, the advantage of frontage to St. Andrew's Scots Church, and good access to it for the congregation. Having stated these facts and views, I have only, on behalf of the Committee, to say, that they have no wish whatever factiously to object to any grant in favour of the English Episcopal Church, but consider it their unavoidable duty in this instance to pray His Excellency, merely, that in any grant or privilege to be conferred on the English Church, the rights and privileges of the Presbyterian Church be kept entire.

MINUTE OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

Minute No. 153-59.—Confirmed, 19th December, 1853.

His Excellency the Governor General lays before the Council an application proceeding from the Bishops, clergy, and certain of the laity of the Church of England, for a grant of the site of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, Sydney, which it is proposed to use as a cathedral close, to contain dwellings for the clergy of the Church of England in residence at St. Andrew's Cathedral, a clerical library, and a theological college for candidates in immediate preparation for holy orders.

2. The Council regret that they do not feel at liberty to advise a compliance with this application, in the face of the objections taken by a Select Committee of the Legislative Council to the disposal of the site of the Old Burial Ground in the manner formerly contemplated. In the Report of the Select Committee on the General Cemetery Bill, in the year 1845, the following remarks occur, in reference to a proposition then entertained to grant the Burial Ground as a site of a Town Hall:—"Your Committee regret that they are unable to concur in the proposition contained in the Bill sanctioned " for their Report, to remove the remains from this Burial Ground to a new Cemetery— " First, because the feelings and prejudices of many persons are strongly opposed to any " such

“such measure; and although your Committee readily admit that, were any object of sufficient public importance to arise, such scruples ought not to be regarded as insuperable, yet they see no reason in the present instance to recommend that this land should be employed as building ground—Secondly, because it appears desirable to preserve it as an open space in the central part of the city. They would further suggest that it should be enclosed with a light iron railing, and that after a lapse of a few years, when the remains may be entirely decomposed, it should be laid out in an ornamental plantation, to be placed under the control of Trustees in whom it is understood the Government intend to vest places of public resort for the city.”

MICHL. FITZPATRICK,
Clerk of the Council.

COLONIAL SECRETARY to ARCHDEACON OF CUMBERLAND.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 25 January, 1854.*

VERY REV. SIR,

His Excellency the Governor General has laid before the Executive Council, the application proceeding from the Bishops, clergy, and certain of the laity of the Church of England, for a grant of the site of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, Sydney, which it is proposed to use as a cathedral close, to contain dwellings for the clergy of the Church of England in residence at St. Andrew's Cathedral, a clerical library, and a theological college for candidates in immediate preparation for holy orders.

2. I have it in command to inform you in reply, in order that you may communicate the same to those signing the memorial, that His Excellency, acting under the advice of this Council, regrets that he does not feel at liberty to direct a compliance with the application, in the face of the objections taken by a Select Committee of the Legislative Council to the disposal of the site of the Old Burial Ground in the manner formerly contemplated. In the Report of the Select Committee on the General Cemetery Bill, in the year 1845, the following remarks occur, in reference to a proposition then entertained to grant the Burial Ground as the site of a Town Hall:—

“Your Committee regret that they are unable to concur in the proposition contained in the Bill submitted for their report, to remove the remains from this Burial Ground to a new Cemetery.”

I have, &c.,
W. ELYARD.

REV. SIR,

Adverting to my letter to you of 2nd September last, I now do myself the honor to inform you that His Excellency the Governor General did not feel himself at liberty to direct a compliance with the application alluded to in your communication dated 27 August, 1853, for a grant of the site of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, Sydney, for purposes in connection with the Church of England, in the face of the objections, by a Select Committee of the Legislative Council, to the disposal of the site of the Old Burial Ground in the manner formerly contemplated.

GENTLEMEN,

I am directed to inform you, in reply to your communication of the 1st September last, in which you request that a portion of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, Sydney, may be granted as a site for a parsonage in connection with St. Andrew's Cathedral, that His Excellency the Governor General, acting under the advice of the Executive Council, regrets that he does not feel at liberty (&c., &c., as in letter to the Venerable the Archdeacon of Cumberland.)

I have, &c.,

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 15 February, 1854.*

SIR,

Not with papers.

His Excellency the Governor General has laid before the Executive Council your letter of the 29th December last, transmitting a memorial, signed by the Venerable the Archdeacon of Cumberland and a number of the clergy and laity of the Church of England, applying for a grant, to the Bishop of Sydney and his successors, of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, Sydney, for the purpose of being properly enclosed and laid out as an ornamental plantation, as suggested in the Report of a Select Committee of the Legislative Council, in the year 1845, but with permission to build a school and other appendages to St. Andrew's Cathedral, on that portion of the land which will be to the eastward of Clarence-street when carried through the Burial Ground.

2. I am now directed to state, for the information of the Venerable the Archdeacon of Cumberland and the other gentlemen signing the application, that His Excellency in Council regrets that he cannot at present concur in any arrangement which implies that any part of the Old Burial Ground shall be built upon.

I have, &c.,
W. ELYARD.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 20 August, 1854.*

SIR,

Not traceable.

His Excellency the Governor General has laid before the Executive Council your letter of the 26th ultimo, in which, in reference to the application from a number of the clergy and laity of the Church of England for a grant of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, Sydney, to be used as a cathedral close, you renew (on behalf of the requisitionists) that application, but modified by the omission of that part of it which implied an intention of erecting certain buildings in connection with the cathedral, on part of the land.

2. On further consideration of this matter, His Excellency in Council has directed the Old Burial Ground should be granted to Trustees, in the way contemplated by the Act of Council 18 Vic., No. 33, as a place of public recreation, reserving to the Government the right of continuing the line of Clarence-street through the same. This, it is conceived, will be in accordance with the views expressed in the Report of the Select Committee of the Legislative Council on the subject, in 1845. In order, however, to prevent the use of the enclosure in any manner incompatible with the character of the adjoining edifice, a majority of the Trustees will be chosen from amongst members of the Church of England.

H. K. JAMES, Esq., to G. FITZ ROY, Esq.

Sydney, 29 December, 1854.

SIR,

I have the honor to transmit herewith the memorials addressed to His Excellency the Governor General, which Sir Charles Fitz Roy was pleased to invite the presentation of, on the occasion of the deputation of the members of the Church of England waiting upon His Excellency last week, and which the subscribers trust may be favourably entertained by the Executive Council.

I have, &c.,
H. KERRISON JAMES.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 70.]

To His Excellency SIR CHARLES AUGUSTUS FITZ ROY, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath, Knight Commander of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Governor General of all Her Majesty's Australian Possessions, and Captain General and Governor-in-Chief of the Territory of New South Wales and its Dependencies, and Vice-Admiral of the same.

The Memorial of the undersigned Members of the Church of England, residents in Sydney,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That the portion of ground adjacent to Saint Andrew's Cathedral, and known as the Old Burial Ground, has for a period of upwards of thirty years ceased to be employed as a place for interment. That the wall enclosing it is dilapidated, and the ground desecrated and become a place for the resort of idle and disorderly persons, and thus rendered a nuisance to that neighbourhood.

2. That the area surrounding the cathedral is very limited, and altogether insufficient for a building of its character and pretensions. That it is most desirable that an open space should be preserved in this particular locality, being one of the most densely populated parts of the city.

3. Your memorialists, therefore, request that your Excellency will be pleased to grant the allotment of land above referred to to the Bishop of Sydney and his successors, as a cathedral close, upon trust, for the purpose of being properly enclosed and laid out as an ornamental plantation, as suggested in the Report of a Select Committee of the Legislative Council, in the year 1845.

4. Your memorialists further respectfully suggest that, in any deed of grant your Excellency may be pleased to issue, a restriction should be imposed against the erection of buildings in the area marked A in the plan annexed hereto; but that such prohibitions should not apply to the portion of land in the same plan marked B, in which last-mentioned side (being the narrow strip of land on the western side of the proposed prolongation of Clarence-street) it is desired that a school and other appendages to the cathedral may hereafter be erected.

And your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

[Enclosure 2 in No. 70.]

To His Excellency SIR CHARLES AUGUSTUS FITZ ROY, Knight Companion of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Governor General of the Australian Colonies, Vice-Admiral of the same, and Governor-in-Chief of New South Wales and its Dependencies.

We, the undersigned Bishops, Clergy, and Laity of the Church of England,—

Most respectfully present the following Memorial to His Excellency the Governor General:—

Your petitioners most respectfully represent to your Excellency, that the Old Burial Ground adjoining St. Andrew's Cathedral has long continued in a state of desecration, alike painful to their feelings and discreditable to the city of Sydney.

Your petitioners, therefore, humbly request that your Excellency will be pleased to grant the above ground to the Church of England, upon the conditions and for the trusts hereinafter mentioned.

Namely, that the aforesaid ground should be used as a cathedral close, to contain dwellings for the clergy of the Church of England in residence at the cathedral; a clerical library; and a theological college for candidates in immediate preparation for holy orders, under the eye of the Bishop and residentiary clergy of the cathedral. Your petitioners are persuaded that an institution of this kind will be required, in order to give full effect to the collegiate system proposed to be established in connection with the University of Sydney.

Your petitioners will be prepared to take every possible precaution to preserve the graves of the dead from desecration, by enclosing with a cloister the area not occupied by the proposed buildings, and by arching over with vaults the basement story of the houses, wherever this should be rendered necessary by the position of the graves. Your petitioners pledge themselves to use their utmost efforts to give effect to this recommendation, by erecting as speedily as possible buildings which may be a lasting ornament to the city of Sydney, and by founding a theological college, in which graduates of the University or other eligible persons may complete their education for holy orders.

Minute No. 55-26.—Confirmed, 6th August, 1855.

REFERRING to the proceedings, on the 30th January last and previous dates, with respect to the application, from a number of the clergy and laity of the Church of England, for a grant of the Old Burial Ground in George-street, Sydney, to be used as a cathedral close, His Excellency the Governor General now lays before the Council a letter from Mr. H. K. James, renewing, on behalf of the requisitionists, that application, but modified by the omission of that part of it which implied an intention of erecting certain buildings in connection with the cathedral or part of the land.

2. On further consideration of this matter, the Council advise that the Old Burial Ground should be granted to Trustees, in the way contemplated by the Act of Council 18 Victoria, No. 33, as a place of public recreation, reserving, however, to the Government the right of continuing the line of Clarence-street through the same. This, it is conceived, will be in accordance with the views expressed in the Report of the Select Committee of the Legislative Council on this subject, in 1845. In order, however, to prevent the use of the enclosure in any manner incompatible with the character of the adjoining edifice, a majority of the Trustees should be chosen from amongst members of the Church of England.

EXTRACT from Report of Officer of Health, of date 9 December, 1859.

Inhumation and the Burial Grounds within the City.

This is a subject of great importance, and has long been neglected by the authorities.

Veneration and respect for the remains of relations and friends is implanted in the breasts of all; and every nation, whether civilized or barbarous, has accordingly adopted some ceremony of a religious nature for the disposal of the human corpse; but it is the duty of the State, in all countries, to guard the living against any ill-applied respect for the dead by which the former are liable to become injured.

It has always been considered that the burial of the dead in crowded places is detrimental to public health.

In warm climates such as this, procrastination of interment is attended with bad consequences. The effluvia of a dead body diffusing itself in a house where the minds and vital energies of the occupants are depressed by sorrow, and where, as it frequently occurs here, the friends are in bad circumstances and incapable of providing means of interment without soliciting assistance, may produce the worst effects.

The graveyards within the city consist of the Old Burial Ground in George-street and the Cemeteries in Devonshire-street.

The first has long been closed as a place of interment, and it is much to be regretted that it should remain as it is, when it would be so desirable a place for healthful recreation if planted with trees, &c.

The Cemetery in Devonshire-street is divided between the several religious communities. That belonging to the Church of England has long been closed as a place of general interment, but family vaults are still used. The Presbyterian and Roman Catholic grounds are as full as they can well be; fresh interments cannot take place without exposing and disturbing previous ones. To the two latter my attention has been directed by various rumours. I have frequently visited them, to ascertain the depth of graves, space, &c., and I regret to state that the results of my inquiries are very unfavourable.

A similar question was brought forward in 1855 before the legislative body, by the late Mr. Robert Nichols, and a Select Committee of the House was appointed to inquire into and report on the management of burial grounds in the city and districts of Sydney. The inquiries of the Committee extended only to the Cemetery at Camperdown; a Progress Report was made, and the further consideration of the subject was left for the new Legislature—here the matter ended.

A short time back I received a letter from a person living near the burial grounds, who stated that, as I had made no allusion to the subjects in quarterly reports, he begged to point out to me "the filthy and overcrowded state, where some twenty or thirty bodies were interred weekly, many not exceeding two feet below the surface of the land—that the effluvia was at times unbearable." Shortly after the receipt of this I visited the grounds, found the soil of a light porous sand. The Presbyterian and Roman Catholic graves appeared quite full—in fact, overcrowded. While walking round (on Sunday afternoon—many people were there) I heard a person in conversation with another say: "It is a pity some one does not put a paragraph in the paper about these places; it is a shame the way in which the burials are made." I introduced myself to him, saying I was the Health Officer, and asked him to explain to me what he alluded to. He said to the depth of the graves; that some were only a foot deep of sand, and that in the upper ground a coffin was exposed. He took me to the spot, and there I saw a coffin was exposed; at one end, recently interred, it was not more than a foot underground, and appeared as if some animal had been scratching around it.

I examined with a stick several other new graves, and could distinctly feel the coffins not two feet deep.

On several occasions I again visited these places. Once I followed a funeral in (a few days back), and observed the depth of the grave was about four feet; but I also observed that another coffin was below, which, from its appearance, must have been there many years.

I made inquiry of the sexton as to the number of interments, and it appears on an average about twenty per week. The depth of the graves never exceeds six feet, and on these are piled extra coffins, according to circumstances. The gravedigger told me they could not help this, as a person who purchased a piece of ground could inter as many as he liked in it.

In the pauper ground they are also interred one above the other, to within two feet of the surface. I made inquiry of persons living in the vicinity, and was informed that at times the effluvia was most offensive. One respectable woman said, "It comes in puffs for a second." This is easily accounted for. On one of my visits to the grounds I distinctly perceived the effluvia.

The soil being sandy and dry, decomposition takes place slowly. The greater depth of the grave the "putrefaction" will be retarded, because the earth is colder the deeper we go, so decomposition of those so near the surface must be very rapid, the soil being so porous, and the heat readily penetrating.

In the Presbyterian ground I observed a most offensive nuisance. A large cesspool from the yard of the Benevolent Asylum empties into the burial ground, spreading among the adjacent graves. To this I directed the attention of the Inspector of Nuisances, and presume it will soon be altered.

I would with due deference express an opinion that the public Cemetery should be far from the city, and that, for economy sake, it should be approachable by railway.

EXTRACT from Report of Officer of Health, of date 5 January, 1860.

The history of medicine shews that overcrowded graveyards within towns and cities have given rise to most fatal consequences. The gases which are evolved from the dead human body are capable of producing contagious and most pestilential diseases, even plague and cholera.

It is sufficient to mention that putrefaction in the earth is gradually accomplished; that dry sandy soil, as that of the burial grounds here, is most favourable to rapid decomposition, particularly when aided by heat and humidity of the atmosphere; and when we consider the number of interments which are weekly taking place (now thirty per week) from the city and surrounding districts, we may form some idea of the noxious gases which are constantly evolving and rendering the surrounding atmosphere dangerously impure.

The cholera is again raging at the Mauritius. The history of this disease shews that no climate or season, no temperature on sea or land, claim exemption from its virulence; no meteorological power or atmospheric influence seems to prevent its spread; but it passes from one country to another in the immediate track of human intercourse. When once established in a place, all sanitary works for arresting its progress and mitigating its severity have been found to be relatively inefficacious when compared with the very same means systematically carried out previously to the advent of the disease.

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 7th instant, forwarding a resolution passed by the Municipal Council of Sydney, respecting the state of the cemeteries within the city, I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to state, for the information of the Right Worshipful the Mayor, that the Government will take the subject into consideration as soon as more urgent matters that are in hand shall have been disposed of.

LORD BISHOP OF SYDNEY to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 13 September, 1843.

SIR,

I beg to represent to His Excellency the Governor that the burial ground in Sydney, belonging to the Church of England, is so completely occupied that not only are decency and propriety much outraged by its crowded state, but it is actually impossible to find room for more bodies. My request, therefore, is that a suitable portion of Government land, in a convenient situation, may be set apart as a place of interment, or rather I should suggest there be two such places—the one on the South Head Road, the other in the direction of Grose Farm.

I have, &c.,
W. G. AUSTRALIA.

REPORT OF SURVEYOR GENERAL.

It appears to me that two spots, each containing an area of two, three, or four acres, should be set apart for this purpose, and this may be done in the situations herein indicated, viz., at Grose Farm and on the road to Bank's Meadow. If His Excellency the Governor will authorize this, I might have surveys of the neighbourhood made, and spots marked out and planned, so that the further sanction of His Excellency and the approval of the Bishop may be obtained before they are finally surveyed and described.

I should have replied immediately on this matter, had I not hoped to have submitted plans with it, in pursuance of instructions issued to Mr. Rawnsley, but he has been hitherto otherwise engaged.

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your report of the 28th ultimo, on a letter from the Bishop of Australia, requesting the appropriation of two burial grounds for the use of the Church of England—one at Grose Farm and the other on the South Head Road—I am directed by the Governor to request that you will lay out the ground in these situations, in the manner proposed in your report, and His Excellency will inspect the spots with His Lordship.

SURVEYOR GENERAL to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*Surveyor General's Office,
6 December, 1843.*

SIR,

In attention to your letter of 6th November, by which you acknowledge the receipt of my blank cover report of 28th October on a letter from the Bishop of Australia, requesting the appropriation of two burial grounds for the use of the Church of England in Sydney, viz., one near Grose Farm and the other on the South Head Road, and requesting me to cause the ground in those situations to be laid out in the manner proposed in my report, so that His Excellency the Governor and His Lordship the Bishop may inspect the spots,—I have the honor to state, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that pending the correspondence and inquiries that have been instituted on this subject, the direct bearing of His Excellency's memorandum, requiring the burial grounds to be a mile from the boundary of the city, was overlooked; if this be insisted on, the only eligible spots would be the Sydney Racecourse, or at the back of Hough's Mill, for the whole of Grose Farm is within the mile. But the Sydney Racecourse and the land on the South Head Road also drain to the Water Works Swamp, and all that intervening between the Botany Road and the Surry Hills is within the mile.

Not traceable.

I would submit to His Excellency that to have a burial ground beyond the paper mill or Hough's Mill would be a great inconvenience to the public, and that as the boundaries of the city have been determined prospectively, the interpretation of the Act of Council directing burying grounds to be a mile from a town, might have reference rather to the mass of the town than to prospective boundaries embracing an area which may not perhaps be covered with buildings for a century to come. It is evident that the necessity for the appropriation of burial grounds is urgent, and I am really at a loss what to propose under the restriction; for even admitting that the drainage would permit of sites on the Botany Road by the paper mill, or on the South Head Road by Hough's Mill, the distance is so great that burials would be attended with inconvenience and expense both to rich and poor; at the same time I fully admit the propriety of making burial grounds outside rather than inside of towns.

In attention to your letter of the 2nd instant, informing me that you are directed by His Excellency the Governor to request me to furnish a sketch of Grose Farm, shewing the portion recommended by me to be appropriated for a general cemetery,—

I have the honor to forward a sketch from the survey of Grose Farm accordingly, shewing the allotment, No. 8, which appears to me to be well suited for a burial ground; as being overlooked so well from the elevated road, and likewise because of its oblong form, and having a road on one side, now not used, but which would thus answer well for the approach of any funeral proceedings, while spectators would naturally occupy the elevated road, so that no idle crowds would be likely to impede the ceremony of interment.

SIR,

I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to request, with reference to my letter of the 17th instant, that you will prepare an estimate for enclosing the proposed burial ground on the old Sydney Common with a stone wall eight feet high, and for subdividing it into six different portions by walls six feet high.

The portions thus subdivided it is proposed to allot to the following religious denominations, viz. :—

1. Church of England.
2. Presbyterian.
3. Wesleyan.
4. Roman Catholic.
5. All other Christian denominations.
6. Jews.

The areas of the four first subdivisions are to be as nearly as possible proportionate to the members of each denomination supposed now to exist in the city of Sydney.

The fifth and sixth divisions to be, together, equal to the smallest of the first four.

His Excellency requests that the plans and estimates may be ready by the 1st of May next, or sooner if possible.

DEPUTY SURVEYOR GENERAL to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 4 March, 1846.*

SIR,

With reference to your letter of the 17th ultimo, conveying the Governor's directions to select and mark out, on the old Sydney Common, in the situation generally approved by His Excellency on the spot, a piece of ground, not less than twenty acres, for the purpose of a burial ground, I have the honor to acquaint you, for His Excellency's information, that having revisited the ground, in company with Mr. Darke, and carefully examined its details, I have caused to be marked in an irregular figure twenty acres of ground, which comprises nearly the whole of the basin lying between the old Botany Road and the road eastward of the boundary of Sydney.

The irregular figure is adopted, as being the only one that accommodates itself to the peculiar contour of the ground, the lines defining the boundaries of the twenty acres running immediately under the crests of the surrounding hills, and excluding the small lagoon to the westward. Adverting generally to the conversation which passed in the conference with His Excellency on the spot, I do myself the honor to offer, for consideration, some suggestions as to the mode which appears to me suitable for carrying out the contemplated arrangements for the purpose in view. On a very close examination of the ground, I am led to the opinion that the whole of the sand is a drifted accumulation, accumulation, caused by the action of the prevailing winds upon the loose and dry sands in the neighbourhood; and that consequently the enclosing it by a wall of brick or stone would lead to inconvenience similar to that which has been experienced at Newcastle, and the work itself would be one of difficulty, owing to the want of a firm foundation. To obviate these inconveniences I would propose a mode far less expensive, and which promises to be efficacious, viz., that of surrounding the area either by a military ditch, breastwork, or internal glacis, and with an inclined palisading outwards to prevent the ingress of cattle, or by a broad belt of plantation between simple palisading. I would further propose, in the event of the first plan being adopted, that the external slope of the ditch should be planted, to a considerable distance, back as far even as the crests of the range, with trees and shrubs best suited to a sandy soil, and that the internal slope and the crest of the glacis should be finished by a turf revetment, within which should be a belt of plantation of deciduous trees of a nutritious nature, so that the fall of the leaves might contribute in some measure to the tenacity of the ground. To effect these objects, it will be necessary to reserve all the ground between the area of the burial ground and the exterior slope of the hills, which should be secured by a three-rail fence. I would also beg leave to suggest that a plantation of willows and other ornamental trees be made around the small lagoon, towards which broad and deep canals should be cut through the lowest part of the valley, and their banks revetted and planted with ornamental trees.

Should His Excellency approve of these suggestions, which may be carried into complete effect during the approaching season, it will be requisite to employ a working party accustomed to the use of the spade, and under the constant superintendence of some competent person from the Botanical Garden. But, upon the whole question, it appears to me that the most important point for consideration is whether the surface around the enclosure should be disturbed at all until first secured by broad bands of turfing, between which the plantations might be made; and in the event of this plan being adopted, I would suggest that the turf should be conveyed to the spot where it is required to be laid, upon dish-formed sledges instead of wheel carriages; and I apprehend that by such mode the enclosure might be made with much less labour and expense than would be incurred by the erection of an ordinary stone wall; as in the one case it would be a mere question of prison or military labour, the latter of which may be estimated at 3d. per day per man, whereas in the case of a wall of masonry there would be an immense amount of mechanics' labour, which cannot be estimated at less than 4s. per day per man, besides the labour of digging for foundations and assisting the mechanics, and which after all may not answer the purpose contemplated.

No. 13.

REPORT of a Board appointed by His Excellency the Governor, to take into consideration and report on the best means of enclosing and subdividing the Burial Ground on the Old Sydney Common.

THE Board, having had under their consideration the various documents relating to the appropriation of certain lands in the neighbourhood of Sydney, for the purpose of forming a general cemetery, together with His Excellency's minute thereon, dated 15th February, 1846, proceeded to the ground referred to in the notification of their appointment; and after a very careful examination of its various features, procured a survey of a rectangular portion of that which had been inspected, and in a general way approved by His Excellency on the 9th February, 1846. This portion is, in its natural character, secluded from the streets, roads, and avenues in its immediate neighbourhood, being a basin formed by an abrupt range of hills, presenting by their connection the figure of a horseshoe, narrow at the opening which is to the westward, and about a quarter of a mile south of the boundary stone at the corner of Cleveland-street. The whole of the basin comprises an area of twenty-three acres, and the parallelogram being traced near the crest on three of its sides, the fourth opening towards the continuation of street, admits of every part of the exterior being accessible for entrances by convenient roads. The Board therefore recommend that the whole area, with the exception of the subdivisions to be allotted to the respective denominations, should be enclosed by a stone wall eight feet high.

With respect to the subdivision of this area, so as to be as nearly as possible proportionate to the numbers of each denomination supposed now to exist in the city of Sydney, it appears that, according to the last published census of the population of the city of Sydney (1846), the numbers were as follows, viz. :—

Of the Church of England .....	24,316
Roman Catholics .....	14,700
Presbyterians .....	5,009
Wesleyans .....	2,289
All other Christian denominations...	2,505
Jews .....	631
Pagans, &c. ....	{ 21
	{ 157

All other Christian denominations and Jews are to be apportioned together, as to the extent of ground appropriated for their several and respective uses, equal to the smallest of the four above mentioned, and which gives the following proportion, nearly, viz. :—

Church of England .....	10½ acres.
Roman Catholics .....	6 "
Presbyterians .....	3 "
Wesleyans .....	1¼ "
Others Christians .....	1½ "
Jews .....	¾ "
	23 acres

And the Board recommend that the subdivisions should be distinctly marked out on the ground by boundary stones, so as plainly to indicate the portion allotted to each denomination.

Between the western boundary of the twenty-three acres proposed to be immediately appropriated as burial ground and the continuation of street there are about seven acres of ground, for the most part low, and containing a small lagoon formed by the drainage of the adjacent hills. These seven acres the Board recommend should be reserved and enclosed with a substantial three-rail fence, and that the whole area so appropriated and reserved should be surrounded by a road half a chain wide, which should be formed, coated with hard and tenacious material, such as argillaceous ironstone, and protected by a three-rail fence.

The expense of erecting the wall eight feet high, surrounding the twenty-three acres, and marking the subdivisions by boundary stones will be, according to the Colonial Architect's estimate, about £2,000; the expense of fencing the additional reserve and the road around the whole areas will be about £57.

The expense of forming the road may be estimated at £500, making a total of £2,557.

The Board suggest that, so soon as the proposed arrangement shall have been sanctioned by final approval, the Surveyor General should be moved to cause to be prepared a survey and description of each of the portions of ground enumerated in the subdivision, and with a view to the preparation of the consolidated deed of grant to be made in favour of Trustees, for the uses of the several and respective religious denominations referred to in this report.

†See preceding paper, No. 13.

I do myself the honor to transmit to you the accompanying copy of a *Report of a Select Committee of the Legislative Council, respecting the establishment of a general cemetery in the neighbourhood of Sydney, together with the †Report of the Board appointed for selecting a site for that purpose; and with reference thereto, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to request that you will be pleased to prepare a Bill to be laid before the Council during its next session, to enable Trustees to hold the land, consisting of twenty-three acres, which has accordingly been selected for this purpose about a quarter of a mile to the southward of the boundary stone at the corner of Cleveland-street, and in the proportions proposed by the Board and approved by the Governor, for the use of the several religious denominations specified. So soon as the measured description of the land has been received from the Surveyor General, it will be transmitted to you.

The Trustees should be authorized to do all lawful acts for the care, maintenance, and preservation of the land, or any enclosure or monument erected thereon, and for enclosing the ground, and in laying it out in ornamental shrubberies, or otherwise as may be appropriated to the purpose for which it is set apart; provided that they shall not be at liberty to interfere, directly or indirectly, with the performance of any religious ceremony in the burial of the dead, according to the usage of the communion to which the deceased may have belonged.

The Trustees should also be authorized to charge and recover, under certain specified limits, fees for the use of the ground, and for the erection of vaults or tombs, in the same manner as is provided in the Church of England Temporalities Act, 8th Gul. IV., No. 5.

The Trustees should likewise be authorized to spend the fees so received in carrying into effect the objects of their appointments.

It is proposed that the Trustees should be not less than _____ in number, and be nominated by the Governor.

SIR,

See No. 13.

In transmitting to you the accompanying copy of the report of the Board appointed for taking into consideration the best means of enclosing and subdividing the land intended as a general cemetery on the old Sydney Common, I am directed by the Governor to communicate to you His Excellency's approval of the recommendations of the Board, and to inform you that the Crown Law Officers have accordingly been instructed to prepare the necessary Bill, to be laid before the Legislative Council during its next session, for giving effect to the same.

I am now to request that you will have the goodness to cause to be prepared, as early as possible, a survey and description of the whole twenty-three acres proposed to be appropriated to the above purpose; and also of each of the portions enumerated in the subdivisions proposed by the Board, with a view to the preparation of a consolidated grant to be made to Trustees for the uses of the several and respective denominations.

I have also to request that the said subdivisions may be laid out on the ground, in order that measures may be taken for marking them out by boundary stones or otherwise, so as plainly to indicate the portion allotted to each denomination.

I am further to request that you will be so good as to cause a survey and description to be prepared of the seven acres adjoining the land proposed as the general cemetery, in order that the same may be reserved and enclosed as recommended by the Board.

I am also directed by the Governor to request that you will take the proper measures for marking out and forming the roads referred to in the report of the Board, for which purpose the Legislative Council have voted the sum of £500.

It may not be superfluous to inform you, that the Colonial Architect has been instructed to adopt the necessary measures for enclosing the cemetery with a wall of eight feet high, and for subdividing the ground in the manner proposed by the Board, as well as for enclosing with a three-rail fence the road by which it is recommended the whole area so appropriated and reserved should be surrounded; and I have to request that you will afford him any information necessary from your department to enable him to comply with these instructions.

COLONIAL SECRETARY to COLONIAL ARCHITECT.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 8 March, 1847.*

SIR,

I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to transmit to you the report of a Board, of which you were yourself a member, appointed for taking into consideration the best means of enclosing and subdividing the land intended as a General Cemetery on the Old Sydney Common; and to inform you that His Excellency has been pleased to approve of the recommendation of the Board. See No 13.

I am accordingly to request that you will take immediate steps for causing the whole area, consisting of twenty-three acres, set apart for this purpose, to be enclosed with a substantial stone wall eight feet high, having the entrances to the portions allotted for the several denominations in the positions indicated by the plan which accompanied the report of the Board. I have also to request that you will cause the subdivisions to be marked out on the ground by boundary-stones or otherwise, so as plainly to shew the portion allotted to each denomination.

You will perceive that the Board has proposed that the portion of land lying between the proposed General Cemetery, and a line in continuation of Dowling-street, should be reserved and enclosed with a three-rail fence; and that the whole area so appropriated and reserved should be surrounded by a road half a chain wide, and protected by a three-rail fence. The Surveyor General has been instructed to take the proper steps for the formation of the road, and I am to instruct you to do what is necessary for the erection of the fencing.

For these several purposes the Legislative Council have voted the sum of £2,500, of which £500 is intended for the formation of the road, leaving £2,000 for the works now entrusted to your execution.

For any further information which you may require in carrying into effect the instructions now conveyed to you, I have to refer you to the Surveyor General.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 15 March, 1847.To Masons and others.*

TENDERS will be received at this office until noon of Monday, the 12th April next, from persons willing to contract for the erection of a stone wall and other works required for enclosing twenty-three acres of land in the vicinity of Sydney, for a General Cemetery.

Every such tender must be sealed and endorsed, "Tender for wall, &c., General Cemetery," and must contain the names of two solvent persons, to be approved of by the Government, as sureties for the due fulfilment of the contract within six months from the date of its acceptance; and no tender will be entertained unless accompanied by a letter signed by the said parties, expressing their willingness to enter into a bond, jointly and severally with the contractor, in double the amount of the sum tendered for the performance of the contract.

A plan and specification of the work may be seen, and further particulars obtained, at the Colonial Architect's Office, Hyde Park.

Parties tendering, or their agents, are requested to attend at this office at the time appointed for opening the tenders, for the purpose of affording any information or explanation that may be required.

SIR,

In attention to your letter of the 4th instant, inquiring, by the Governor's direction, what has been done with respect to the roads directed by your letter of the 8th March last to be marked and formed around the General Cemetery, I have the honor to acquaint you, for His Excellency's information, that, on the 20th March last, Assistant Surveyor Darke was instructed, by letter from Sir Thomas Mitchell, to mark out the boundaries of the proposed Cemetery and its subdivisions, for the guidance of the Colonial Architect ;

Architect; but with respect to the forming of the roads, it was observed that nothing need nor could be done until the surrounding walls were completed. As this observation had reference evidently to the levels upon which the Colonial Architect might find it expedient to lay the foundation of the walls, I beg to be informed whether the operations of that officer are in a sufficient state of forwardness to admit of the roads being proceeded with?

[Enclosure in No. 21.]

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 20 March, 1847.*

Sir,

Referring to what has been already done in the survey and appropriation of the land intended for a General Cemetery, I have now to enclose you a copy of the Colonial Secretary's letter,* <sup>See No. 15.</sup> No. 47/925, of 8th March, together with a copy of the Report† of the Cemetery Board, and to request that you will lose no time in performing all that is thereby required. In the sketch-book you will find a copy of the plan which accompanied the report of the Board, and you will gather from the Colonial Secretary's letter that the marking out and preparation of a description of the whole twenty-three acres is necessary, together with descriptions of the subdivisions and a description of the proposed reserve of seven acres, which are also to be marked out; a plan on a larger scale than the sketch should accompany these descriptions. As the object of marking is to enable the Colonial Architect to proceed with the erection of the walls and gates, and the definite marking of the subdivisions, it will be well for you to communicate with that officer, and to place in the ground such posts or marks as may be most convenient to and most easily recognized by Mr. Lewis and the work people.

Mention is made in the Colonial Secretary's letter of the marking and forming of the roads around the Cemetery and the approaches thereto, but nothing need be or can be done in this until the walls are completed.

As it will be necessary to have a large open drain through the whole of the land, communicating with the lagoon in the seven-acre reserve, it is desirable that you should transmit to me a sketch, shewing how such drain would be best made without interfering with the subdivisions or impeding the access to any part of them.

I have, &c.,

*Surveyor General's Office,

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 1st instant, referring to that of the 19th August, and calling for my report as to the probable time when the work at the General Cemetery, required to be executed by this department, will be completed, I have the honor to state, that as the exterior wall of the Cemetery is to have several openings for gates, it is requisite, before commencing the work to be performed by this department, that I should be made acquainted with the levels of the sills of those gates; and indeed it would be desirable that the whole of the foundations should be excavated previously to commencing with the road surrounding the Cemetery, as otherwise the level of the road, in cases of considerable excavation, might be formed above the level of the top of the wall, whereas if the levels of the whole foundation were first ascertained, those of the road could be adapted to them by reducing in some parts and raising in others, wherever requisite; and indeed it appears that until some progress has been made in the wall all round, the road is wholly unnecessary, as the ground is open and the area accessible from every point.

DEPUTY SURVEYOR GENERAL to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 24 January, 1848.*

SIR,

I have the honor to represent to you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that, on the 11th March, 1847, a copy of the report of a Board appointed to take into consideration the best means of enclosing and subdividing a portion of ground on the Sydney Common, set apart as a General Cemetery, was received at this office, together with instructions, dated 8th March, to the Surveyor General, to take the proper measures for marking out and forming the roads referred to in the report of the Board, for which purpose the Legislative Council have voted the sum of £500.

On the 4th August another letter was addressed to me, adverting to the letter of the 8th March, and inquiring what had been done with respect to these roads.

On the 1st November a further communication was made to me, stating that the Act of Council for regulating the General Cemetery had passed, and requesting that I would report the probable time in which the work to be executed by this department would be completed. At the end of December, availing myself of an unavoidable suspension on the Hawkesbury Road, I commenced operations on the Cemetery road, reporting that I had done so; but it appears, notwithstanding the length of time that occurred since the first instructions were issued to the Surveyor General to take the proper measures for forming the roads in question, the Auditor General is still without sufficient authority to pass the accounts for the payment of the workmen; and I have accordingly to inquire whether the work is to be proceeded with or stopped, as while questions of form are under discussion the men employed on the work are wanting bread?

I have, &c.,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th instant, stating that your proposal of the 7th of this month was only to employ the party recently working on the Hawkesbury Road upon such roads as may be determined upon, and that they have already made considerable impression on the road around the General Cemetery. In reply, I am directed to inform you that there is a specific provision for the road surrounding the General Cemetery, respecting which you have already received instructions; but this is a very different question from that proposed in your letter of the 7th instant, namely, to employ the men alluded to upon such roads as may be determined on around the Water Reserve, and between it and the coast.

SIR,

No connection with the subject of this Return.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 24th instant, stating that at the end of December, availing yourself of the unavoidable suspension of work on the Hawkesbury Road, you commenced operations on the Cemetery road—reporting, by your letter of the 7th instant, that you had done so—I do myself the honor to refer you on this subject to my former letter of this date, in reply to your communication of the 19th instant.

I have further the honor to point out, with reference to your remark, that notwithstanding the length of time that occurred since the first instructions were issued to you to take the proper measures for forming the roads around the General Cemetery, the Auditor General is still without sufficient authority to pass the accounts for the payment of the men, that it is presumed that this is owing to your not having furnished him with the proper vouchers.

On the 8th March, 1847, you were desired to take measures for forming the road round the Cemetery, and informed that the Council had voted £500 for the purpose. A copy or extract of this letter, and of its enclosure, being the copy of the report of a Board of which you were a member, should have been sent by you, according to the practice of the service, with the accounts of the first expenditure, to the Auditor General, who would, it is believed, have considered it sufficient to enable him to pass them, and if he had any doubt on the subject he would, as usual in other cases, have applied to the Governor for instructions.

In attention to your letter of the 10th instant, inquiring, with reference to the vote of Council (on the Supplementary Estimates) of the sum of £1,500 towards completing the enclosing wall of the General Cemetery, what further expense will be necessary to make the Cemetery roads by this department,—I have the honor to report to you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that £500, the sum originally estimated by me for the formation of the roads referred to, will be sufficient, in my opinion, to complete the work required. It may be observed, however, that a small portion of this sum, namely, £64 15s. 11d., has been already expended, but in consequence of my being obliged to discontinue the work, a considerable portion of the sand has drifted over the part that had been reduced, this occasioning the additional expense of removing, and I should therefore still require the full sum I have mentioned to complete the work.

[Enclosure in No. 41.]

Downing-street,
30 June, 1848.

Sir,

I have received your despatch of the 16th December last, No. 242, enclosing an Act Not necessary. (No. 11—11 Victoria) passed by the Legislature of New South Wales, entitled, "An Act for the establishment and regulation by Trustees of the General Cemetery near to the City of Sydney to be called 'the 'Necropolis.'"

Having laid this Act before the Queen, I have now to acquaint you that Her Majesty has been pleased to confirm and allow the same.

You will communicate Her Majesty's decision to the inhabitants of the Colony under your government, by a proclamation to be published in the usual and most authentic manner.

In signifying to you, however, Her Majesty's decision upon this Act, it is necessary that I should state that I have recommended the allowance of it in the full confidence that the Legislature of New South Wales will not fail to amend it, if, in its practical operation, the members of the Church of England should find anything of which they could justly complain as offensive to their religious feelings.

You will assure the Bishop of Sydney, in reply to his remonstrance upon the subject, that it is this confidence alone which has induced me to advise Her Majesty to confirm the Act, relating as it does, to a subject upon which I should be very reluctant to interfere with—the discretion of the local Legislature.

I have, &c.,
GREY.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to request that you will report to me, for the information of His Excellency the Governor General, what progress has been made towards the completion of the work at the General Cemetery? Your report should not only shew what has been done, but what remains to be performed, the sum necessary for the purpose, and the amount of the vote for the present year now unexpended?

Colonial Architect's Office,
24 April, 1849.

SIR,

In attention to the instructions contained in your letter of 16th ultimo, requesting me to report the progress made towards completion of the work at the General Cemetery,—

2. I do myself the honor herewith to transmit a plan and elevation shewing the quantity, dimensions, and present state of the work actually performed; by which it will be seen that the whole of the southern boundary wall has been erected, the eastern wall nearly completed, and a portion of the western wall erected. Not traceable.

3. The quantity of masonry actually built in this manner is 2,856 perches, or about three-fifths of the whole work required for enclosing the ground.

4. On referring to the elevation in the accompanying drawing, it will be perceived that the depth to which it was found necessary to sink the foundation is greater than was anticipated. Had this not been the case, the quantity of masonry already executed would have been sufficient to complete the whole of the walls; but this extra depth of foundation will be found very advantageous hereafter, as it will admit of graves or vaults being dug close to the walls without causing any injury to them, and will consequently render available for its intended purpose a much greater portion of the area than could otherwise have been safely used. Not with papers.

5. The work remaining to be done is, as before stated, about two-fifths of the masonry of the walls, or about 2,000 perches, with the requisite gates to the entrances and fences or other means of subdividing the enclosure.

6. The balance remaining unexpended of the vote for this work is £276 6s. 5d., and a further sum of £2,000 will be required for this purpose. I have included £1,000 in my supplementary estimate for the present year, and a similar sum in my estimate for 1850.

7. I beg also to state that, should it, in order to meet the want of the community, be considered desirable to render available for early use any of the respective portions portions of the area appropriated to the different religious denominations, any one or more of them can be got ready without waiting for the completion of the entire enclosure, at about the following proportions of the estimated further cost:—

MINUTE OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

Proceedings of the Executive Council, on the 22nd May, 1849, with reference to the sums for which it will be necessary to apply to the Legislative Council, for the completion of the Cemetery Wall and the Museum.

Minute No. 49-21.—Confirmed, 28th May, 1849.

His Excellency the Governor lays before the Council statements which have recently been submitted by the Colonial Architect, respecting the further sums for which it will be necessary to apply to the Legislative Council, for the completion of the Cemetery wall and the Museum.

The cost of these buildings will so extravagantly exceed the estimate furnished by the Colonial Architect, when their commencement was decided upon, that His Excellency considers it necessary to bring the matter before this Council for inquiry; and he directed the Colonial Architect to be in attendance, in order that he may be questioned by the Council.

Having considered the papers before them, the Council call in the Colonial Architect, and examine him on such points as they consider necessary.

On the withdrawal of the Colonial Architect, the Council record their opinion as follows:—

It appears to the Council, from the statements made by the Colonial Architect in the course of his examination before them, that his estimates for the buildings in question, and especially for the Cemetery wall, were prepared loosely, and without taking into consideration the nature of the ground on which they were to be erected. It is also clear that the Colonial Architect was fully aware that the cost of the buildings, at the rate at which the first contracts were taken, would vastly exceed that stated in his estimate, but that he did not in any way bring this fact under the notice of the Government when the acceptance of the tenders was under consideration, so as to afford an opportunity of deferring the commencement of the work until the increased expenditure should have been sanctioned by the Legislative Council.

In these particulars, at least, the Council are of opinion that the conduct of the Colonial Architect was highly reprehensible, and that it should be visited with a severe censure.

F. L. S. MEREWETHER,
Clerk of the Council.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to inform you that a sum of £500 has been voted on £500. the Estimates for 1850 " for the erection of a paling to enclose the new General Cemetery, and the formation of the road thereto."

2. In drawing your attention to this vote, I take the opportunity to request that you will have the goodness to suggest, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor, the best way of completing the General Cemetery consistent with the limited sum appropriated for the purpose, which is to include also the expense of forming the approaches thereto from the nearest available road.

I have, &c.,
W. ELYARD, JUNR.

No. 47.

COLONIAL ARCHITECT to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*Colonial Architect's Office,
Sydney, 18 January, 1850.*

SIR,

In attention to your letter of the 14th ultimo, requesting me to suggest, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor, the best way of completing the enclosure of the new General Cemetery, consistent with the limited sum (£500) appropriated for the purpose, which is to include the expense of forming the approaches thereto from the nearest available road,—

2. I do myself the honor to state that I have caused the Cemetery to be examined by the Clerk of Works; and from his report, and after duly considering the subject—having regard to the smallness of the sum appropriated for the work—I find it will be impossible to form the road, as originally proposed, around the outer fence, and it will therefore be unnecessary to make separate entrances to the different sections of the ground. I would therefore recommend that the enclosure be completed with a six-foot paled fence, the length of which will be 2,100 feet, and having but one entrance from the west with a single pair of gates; and that access should be had to the respective sections of the enclosure by branch roads through the several allotments to those at the furthest extremity, which arrangement might be dispensed with when the outer road is formed.

3. The road to the Cemetery should as I believe, be made from Bourke-street, and will be in length about one-third of a mile. As the ground is sandy it will require to be laid on fagots, and if forty feet be assumed as its width, it may be expected to cost about £400. There will also be required a timber bridge over the watercourse leading to the lagoon in the reserve; this will cost about £30 additional.

4. The whole cost of these works may be estimated as follows:—

External paled fence and entrance gates .....	100
Division fences, three-railed .....	40
Road .....	400
Bridge .....	30
	£570

amounting to £570. There is, I am informed, a balance of £200 of the former votes for the Cemetery yet unexpended.

5. I must also remark that the unfinished wall, from its having no coping, is suffering from the effects of the weather; and that the sand is accumulating in several places to such an extent as to render the wall itself but a very slight protection from intrusion.

SIR,

With reference to your letter of the 6th instant, No. 53, respecting the erection of fencing, &c., at the new General Cemetery,—

Appendix F.

2. I do myself the honor to state that, upon proceeding with the preparation of a plan and specification for the work, I find a part of the ground over which the new road must run (from A to B, marked in red on the accompanying plan) is private property, and that it is moreover in dispute, having been already the subject of an action at law. I am therefore obliged to inquire whether I have authority to cut through the part in question?

3. I also find that a straight line along the fence in continuation of the street near Baptist's Gardens will meet the Cemetery fence at B, leaving a large space between it and the Cemetery Reserve. As it will be very inconvenient to make a bend in the road, I would recommend that the reserve be enlarged, and that its boundary be brought up to the line of the new road.

HIS Excellency the Governor lays before the Council a letter from Mr. James Cooper, objecting, on behalf of Mr. Daniel Cooper, to the opening of the recently notified street leading to the General Cemetery, in which Mr. Cooper represents that "he had been refused by the Surveyor General a sight of the map delineating the street in question."

2. As it is required by law that a survey and tracing of streets, notified by the Government as intended to be formed, should be open to the inspection of the public at the office of the Surveyor General, in Sydney, the Council think it necessary to recommend that the above statement of Mr. Cooper should be referred to the Surveyor General for report.

Referred to Surveyor General for report as to the advisability of retaining the present site, or to propose some other more favourable locality for a public cemetery.—8 August, 1856.

No. 74.

REPORT OF SURVEYOR GENERAL.

In reference to the minute of the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, dated 8th August, 1856, as to the advisability of retaining the present site, or to propose some other more favourable locality for a public cemetery, I beg to state that the present site appears to embrace the only available land within a distance of eight miles of the city; at the same time I do not entertain a doubt as to its unsuitableness for the purpose. The ground seems to be in some parts subject to inundation, and in the driest season water is found within two or three feet of the surface, which renders the locality unfit for the desired purpose. I consider also that it would be highly improper to remove the brush-wood or break up any part of the surface, which would lead to mischief by causing the sand to drift—the ill effect of which has already been experienced in the southern portion of the city. The question becomes more serious from there being no available public lands nearer than Longbottom, a distance of eight miles, which I apprehend must be considered too remote for the purpose required. It thus becomes a question as to whether the Government would purchase or exchange land to meet the necessity, or whether the question should be taken up by a company. These points I beg to submit for consideration, an early decision being desirable.

[Enclosure in No. 74.]

REPORT OF DEPUTY SURVEYOR GENERAL.

THE question submitted to the Surveyor General, is as to the advisability of retaining the Necropolis, or propose some other site for burial grounds or for a public cemetery. Independently of the facilities which might result from the use of railways or water carriage, it was definitely settled, when the Necropolis site was determined on, that was the only suitable vacant land which the Crown possessed within a proper and convenient distance from Sydney for burial grounds; consequently there is no alternative but to make use of it as far as possible.

With the assistance of Mr. Commissioner Pearce and the bailiffs I examined the ground at the Necropolis, and found that the flats were all subject to inundations during rains, and that in the driest seasons the water on digging rises to within two or three feet of the surface, and consequently the flats are not available for interments. On the sides of some of the hills, however, there are spots suitable for small burial grounds; but the sides that face the south should not be touched at present, because the slightest disturbance of the shrubs would let loose the sand and cause it to drift towards Sydney; the sides facing the north-east, the quarter from which the sea breeze blows, would also require attention. It becomes evident, therefore, that no general design for continuous occupation could be made, and as the Necropolis Act, 11th Vict., No. 2, has never been acted on, it also seems evident that no arrangement for corporate management, as provided for by the Necropolis Act, could now be satisfactorily carried out.

What I would propose is, that the whole of the vacant land at the Necropolis and around it, be reserved for burial grounds; that the Surveyor General should determine the ways of access, and make such disposition of the lands as may be expedient; that, subject to such arrangement and to the survey and marking out by the Surveyor General, the different communities should be authorized to select specific areas, according to their wants; that it should be incumbent upon the communities so selecting to do all that is needful at their own cost and charges, or as regards roads, draining, and fencing, in conjunction with other communities. In every part of the Colony, although the Crown gives the land and right of access, it does no more—it incurs no expense whatever; and so it must be in Sydney, unless the Government were prepared to take charge of every burial ground in the Colony. In fact, all that the Government should do is to authorize the appropriation of portions of land, leaving the responsibility of its fitness and the incurrence of all expenses upon the communities, who may prefer obtaining from the Government such land as it has to give, rather than by private purchase.

The following points may require consideration, viz. :—

Is the Necropolis Act, if not fully carried out, sufficient to warrant the appropriation of the land for interment, it being within a mile of Sydney? If the Government were to consider it expedient to clear, to make roads, to cut drains, or incur any other expense, there must be a special money vote for that purpose. The land around the Necropolis being the only available Crown land, and that land not being altogether suitable, it might be agreed that the Government should obtain land for burial grounds by purchase or exchange; but clearly this is not contemplated by the provisions in the Waste Lands Act.

The wall at the Necropolis might be sold in portions, at a valuation, to any community that might select adjoining it, if it were not made a boundary; for it does not seem probable that any Trustee in custody of a cemetery for all denominations would work, and, consequently, the wall is not likely to be required, or even to be completed, were it only on account of the great expense.

I have now to remark, that as there are not a great many spots available for burial grounds at and around the Necropolis, and that in a few years more burial grounds will be required, it is expedient to consider the propriety of reserving the land at Longbottom, which may eventually be approached by railway or by steam-boat. It is not improbable, however, that private cemetery companies—such as those around London and other large cities—may ere long relieve the Government from all difficulties on this subject; and in the contemplated Act for the regulation of burial grounds and burials, it will be important to consider under what arrangement such general cemeteries should be allowed to be established; at the same time that part of the 2nd clause of the Act 6 Geo. 4, No. 21, which provides that all burial grounds shall be distant one mile at least from any town or township, should be repealed, and the power of determining sites for burial grounds vested in the Surveyor General or in the Minister who may have the control of the Surveyor General's Department; it being provided, that in the case of any town extending more rapidly than was contemplated, so as to bring a burial ground in too close proximity to population, that it should be competent to the Legislative, on the report of a board of medical or other scientific men, to shut it up.

JOHN THOMPSON.

20 Sept., 1856.

I ought to have stated that the Randwick and Coogee Road being now completed, and in good repair, the vacant land here and the Necropolis can be easily approached; and it will not, therefore, be necessary to make the proclaimed street from Bourke to the Necropolis, which would be a very expensive work.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

SOME nine or ten years ago an Act was passed for establishing a General Cemetery near Sydney, for the burial of the dead of all religious denominations. The site was chosen by a Board of Officers, consisting, I think, of the then Colonial Secretary (Mr. E. Deas Thomson), the Deputy Surveyor General (the late Capt. Perry), and the Colonial Architect (Mr. Lewis). Considerable sums of money were voted and expended in erecting a wall of enclosure. The work, however, was embarrassed by the character of the soil, which rendered the sinking for foundation unusually deep. The walls were thus rendered unexpectedly costly, and were, moreover, in part overrun by the sand.

The subject was repeatedly before the late Legislative Council, when money votes were asked, and altogether created great dissatisfaction.

The

The work has, from these causes, and also from the sudden rise in the cost of labour, been practically abandoned for the last five or six years.—(This is given chiefly from memory.)

On a recent occasion a proposition was made to appropriate the land to other purposes, but the Executive Council resolved that it should still be reserved for the purpose to which it was originally devoted. The question is now again substantially raised by the Reverend Mr. Eggleston as to the ultimate application of the land.

The matter having been referred to the Surveyor General, that officer reports—(see report enclosed):—1st. That the Necropolis contains the only available land within eight miles of Sydney, and,—2nd. That the land comprised therein is wholly unsuited to the purpose—(See also the report of the Deputy Surveyor General, who recently inspected the Necropolis.) This latter officer suggests that the available spots at the General Cemetery should be marked out as separate burial grounds (this would be at variance with the spirit of the Necropolis Act), and that the land at Longbottom, on the Parramatta Road, eight miles from Sydney, should be reserved, which may hereafter be approached by railway.

The whole question is one of much importance and considerable difficulty. The foregoing memo. is perhaps sufficient to place it before the Secretary for Lands and Works.

MEMORANDUM OF SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

THE Rev. J. Eggleston having applied, about twelve months ago, for a burial ground for the Wesleyans, either in connection with the carrying out of the project of a General Necropolis or otherwise, and it having been intimated to him that the Government would communicate with him on the subject after having taken it into consideration, it becomes necessary now to decide what answer shall be given. The question is one of a very important character, being, I think, nothing less in its present aspect than whether the Government shall continue to hold itself out as providing cemeteries for all classes of inhabitants of Sydney?

It appears from the report of the Surveyor General that the site set apart for the General Necropolis is totally unsuitable for the purpose, and I am sorry to say that there can now be but little doubt that such is the case. A large portion of it is now and has been for several years so saturated with water as to be perfectly unsuitable, while the greater part of the remainder is a deep sand, now covered with bushes except where cart tracks cross it, and wherever denuded of these bushes, exhibiting a great tendency to drift. The destruction of the native scrub, unless followed by the establishment of a turf, will certainly produce an extensive movement of sand, and in a burial ground it is hardly possible to prevent this. It appears, further, from the Surveyor General's report, that the nearest land available, with the exception of that thus condemned as unsuitable, is at Longbottom, eight miles from Sydney.

The use of this, however, would necessarily be very inconvenient. It is a considerable distance from the railway, and by a cross-road which would have to be formed and metalled.

It becomes very doubtful under these circumstances whether, so far as Sydney is concerned, we ought not to limit any further provision for cemetery to those whom, from the poverty in which they have died or the neglect of their friends, it is left to the State to inter. There is no doubt but that the present arrangement is a wasteful one where land has become valuable, and that no care is taken to economize space where as much space as is required can be got for the asking. The arrangement of cemeteries for those who are beyond the class of paupers is, where the population has become dense, perhaps best in the hands of companies or of the different religious bodies.

MINUTE OF VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

General Cemetery for Sydney.

I SEE nothing whatever in these papers to shake my deliberate opinion that the site of the Necropolis was judiciously chosen, having reference to the portions of land available for the purpose at the time it was selected. The lower portion of the site was known to be unsuited, but it was necessary to include it in the area set apart for the purpose, for the sake of convenient boundaries. The soil is exactly similar to that of the Old Burial Ground in Sydney, which was always considered peculiarly well adapted for a purpose of this kind. The failure to carry out the Necropolis arises from two causes—first, the very defective estimates of the then Colonial Architect, of the expense of enclosing it with a stone wall, and the indisposition, consequently, of the late Legislative Council to sanction the the necessary expenditure; second, the determined opposition of the late Bishop of Sydney, and of the Roman Catholic Archbishop, to any appropriation of a general character. They require that any land, so set apart for their respective denominations, should be expressly granted to separate Trustees, in order that it might be consecrated by them according to the rites of the church they represent. They further require that the spots so set apart should be substantially fenced in, so that there might be no communication between the sites appropriated to the different denominations. I need scarcely say that these conditions were opposed to the entire spirit and intentment of the Necropolis Act.

No. 84.

COLONIAL ARCHITECT AND DIRECTOR OF BOTANIC GARDENS to SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

*Colonial Architect's Office,
Sydney, 5 September, 1857.*

SIR,

In attention to your letter of the 11th ultimo, requesting us to visit the locality reserved as a Necropolis, and to report generally as to the state and fitness of the place for the purpose to which it has been devoted,—

2. We do ourselves the honor to report that we have visited and examined the ground referred to, and beg to submit the following observations, in reply to the questions proposed to us.

3. The ground, as well as the adjoining land, is covered with a thick brush vegetation—the lower part of the ground being covered with water. On the north, east, and west sides, the land appropriated for a cemetery is partly enclosed by a stone wall eight feet high, forming about one-third of the entire boundary. Portions of this wall are in an unfinished state, and in parts it is in a dilapidated condition from the action of the weather upon the exposed face of the stone, which is of an inferior quality. No fences have been erected, and in several places on the exterior, sand has drifted to nearly the height of the walls, in consequence, as we believe, of the brushwood, which formerly surrounded the walls, having been cleared for the purpose of forming a roadway. On the north side the sand has been prevented from drifting by the shelter afforded by the growing shrubs.

4. As regards fitness, the locality appears to us to be admirably adapted for a Necropolis; it is in a retired situation, and surrounded by a considerable area of public land, of which a sufficient portion might be reserved to prevent encroachments; the soil throughout is of sufficient depth for the purpose of interments. At present there are no roads from the main road to the cemetery; it can, however, be approached either by Bourke-street or by the road to Randwick, the latter being preferable, as it is in good condition, easy of access, and passing within 100 yards of the north-east corner of the cemetery, at which place, in our opinion, one general entrance should be made, and, if necessary, a side entrance could be formed for access by the road from Bourke-street.

5. A main central road inside the enclosure will require to be formed, to give access to the various divisions of the cemetery, as well as branch paths through the several portions; the side channels of these will be sufficient to carry off surface water, the formation of the ground presenting great facilities for drainage to its lowest level, from whence the water may be conveyed by an underground drain or culvert to the lagoon situated on the low ground southward of the cemetery.

6. In our opinion, the quantity of land proposed to be enclosed is altogether inadequate, considering the present and probable increase in the population of Sydney and its suburbs. We would therefore recommend that the quantity of ground appropriated for a Necropolis be materially increased, giving to each denominational body a proportion of the additional space; and that, where not already fenced in, the ground be enclosed by a substantial close paling or brushwood fence. The brush vegetation within the enclosure will require to be removed, the ground levelled in various parts, and the whole space manured and planted with couch or other grasses.

7. The expense of carrying out these suggestions contained in this report will not, in our opinion, be very great, and, if required, we will prepare and submit a detailed estimate.

We have, &c.,
ALEXANDER DAWSON,
Colonial Architect.
C. MOORE.

UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS to COLONIAL ARCHITECT.

*Department of Lands and Public Works,
Sydney, 1 April, 1858.*

SIR,

In reference to the joint report made by you and the Director of the Botanic Gardens, dated 5th September last, respecting the site reserved for a Necropolis at the Sand Hills, near the Randwick Road, I am directed by the Secretary for Lands and Public Works to inform you, that it is the intention of the Government to abandon the project of forming a burial ground at the locality in question.

2. Mr. Secretary Robertson desires me to ascertain from you, whether or not the prepared stone alluded to in the 3rd paragraph of the communication under reference had not better be sold?—and, if so, to request you to report as to the best manner of its disposal.

I have, &c.,
MICHL. FITZPATRICK.

COLONIAL ARCHITECT to SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

*Colonial Architect's Office,
Sydney, 26 April, 1858.*

SIR,

In attention to your letter of the 1st instant, informing me that it is intended to abandon the intention of forming a burial ground at the Sand Hills, Sydney, and calling upon me to report as to the advisability of selling the stone in the wall which has been erected there,—

2. I do myself the honor to state that, as the wall in its present position is quite useless, and the materials, if sold, would probably realize a fair price, I would recommend that it be sold by auction, in portions of about 200 feet each. As the foundation is of considerable depth, it will be desirable to stipulate that the excavation be filled in by the purchasers of the stone.

3. There is now built against a portion of the wall, a hut, occupied by the person who has charge of the Crown lands in the neighbourhood, and as his residence in this locality tends to the preservation of the fences and the lately-planted sand hills, I would recommend that the portion of wall against which the house is built be reserved from sale.

4. Should the sale of the materials be authorized, I will cause the necessary advertisement to be published, and a description of the respective lots to be prepared.

I have, &c.,
ALEX. DAWSON.

MINUTE OF SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

Interment of the Dead.

THIS question, especially as it relates to the Sydney district, has become exceedingly pressing, scarcely a day passing without applications, either written or oral, being made to me for suitable provision with regard to it.

So long back as the year 1847 an Act passed the Legislature for the establishment of a General Cemetery near the city of Sydney, and subsequently an eminently suitable site was allotted for the purpose. It appears, however, that so strongly felt were the objections 11 Vic., No. 11.

objections to the mode of management provided under the Act alluded to, that no benefit whatever has, up to this time, resulted from the liberality of the Government in setting apart land appropriate for the purpose.

I am strongly disposed to think that those portions of the regulations provided for under the Act, and taken exception to on conscientious grounds, might be advantageously relaxed; that we might, at once, provide for proper management of the Cemetery, and for avoidance of collision with the conscientious scruples or even prejudices of the various sects of religionists, or of any of them.

All that the Government can properly be asked to provide in the matter would seem to be—

- 1st.—Land suitably situated, and properly enclosed, sufficient in quantity to receive the dead.
- 2nd.—That the ground shall be placed under the care of Trustees, whose character shall be sufficient guarantee to the public that no improper or unbecoming procedure will be permitted.
- 3rd.—That excessive charges for burial shall not be suffered.

I therefore recommend—

- 1st.—That the Cemetery be increased in area to as great an extent as there is suitable land for the purpose, not to exceed sixty acres.
- 2nd.—That the whole be fenced in with eight-feet paling, to be paid for out of the sale of the stone wall; any deficiency to be made up by the Government.
- 3rd.—That one-third part of the land be placed in the hands of lay Trustees for a General Cemetery properly so called.
- 4th.—That the remaining two-thirds part of the land be divided amongst the various religious bodies, according to the Census, and handed over to Trustees to be recommended by such religious bodies.
- 5th.—That a grant of each portion of land so allotted be made to such Trustees, and that they have the right to fence off the same, and, indeed, to hold complete control thereof, except that the ground is to be used alone as a place of interment, and that no charges for burial be exacted, unless provided for in rules approved by the Governor General and Executive Council. No such rule to be so approved until notice thereof shall have been given in the Government Gazette at least one month. Provision should also be made, that any such grant shall be void if the land shall not be bonâ fide used for the purpose contemplated within two years from the date of the deed of grant.
- 6th.—That such portions of the area of any division of the land as may be considered unfit for the purpose of burial shall not be taken into account in apportioning the land, but shall nevertheless pass into the care of the trusts.

It may be doubted whether, without repealing the Act 11 Vic., No. 11, so great a change can be made in the appropriation of the land set apart for the Necropolis. Should such be the case, however, I am of opinion that the question is of sufficient importance to demand that the Government should grapple with it, even though it may be found necessary to take that preliminary step.

I further desire to suggest that, in future, no grants of land for burial purposes be issued, excepting with the provisions as to charges set out in recommendation No. 5 of this paper.

I am aware that the Honorable the Attorney General is of opinion that a portion of land on the south side of Botany Bay is the most suitable site for the purpose of burial, and that he has in contemplation a plan of approach to the ground by means of a tramway to the north shore of Botany Bay, and thence by punt. I fully acknowledge the desirability of the site and the feasibility of the plan of approach; but, believing that it cannot be carried out for some years to come, venture to suggest the adoption of my recommendation, as a means of at least meeting the immediate requirements in the matter. In the mean time, a large reserve of the land recommended by the Attorney General could be made, to be used when the Colony is disposed to carry out so magnificent a scheme as his.

*Department of Lands and Public Works,

SIR,

I am directed to request that you will have the goodness to cause to be made, and submitted to the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, a tracing of the land at Randwick, setting forth the present site of the Cemetery, and distinguishing that portion of the ground which sheds its waters into the Water Reserve.

2. The object, I am to add, of Mr. Secretary Robertson in calling for this tracing, is to ascertain whether sixty acres of the land in question can be obtained without interfering with the Water Reserve.

SURVEYOR GENERAL to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 11 June, 1858.

SIR,

Referring to your letter of the 27th ultimo, I have the honor to forward, with a tracing thereof, the plan transmitted with my memorandum of the 25th September, 1856, on the subject of the cemetery, which I have obtained from the Clerk of the Executive, and which shews, by tints and an explanation, the land at Randwick most suitable for burial purposes. Wanting,
See No. 74.

2. The tracing shews all the Crown land west of the Randwick Road, and south of the proposed extension of Cleveland-street, and, by green edgings, two portions of sixty acres each, including a considerable extent of the land best suited for burial grounds—avoiding the swampy flat on the old appropriation—both of which are wholly beyond the watershed of the Lachlan Swamps, being partly isolated basins and eventually draining to the Waterloo Swamps. Appendix I.

3. Of these portions the northern, marked A, possesses the advantage over the others of being sheltered from both the southerly and the north-easterly winds, by which the surface sand is so liable to be drifted on the removal of the brush and scrub which now serve in some measure to bind it.

4. The portion marked A is also more readily accessible from the Randwick Road, and although somewhat nearer the town, will probably be considered the more desirable site.

I have, &c.,
G. BARNEY.

MINUTE OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

Proceedings of the Executive Council, relative to the appropriation of certain lands for the purposes of a General Cemetery for Sydney, and to the regulations for the appointment of the same among the different religious communities.

Minute, 58-24.—7 June, 1858.

His Excellency the Governor General, at the instance of the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, invites the attention of the Council to the question of the establishment of a Necropolis in the neighbourhood of Sydney; the pressing necessity for taking some steps in the matter, without delay, being almost daily brought under the notice of the Government, by applications, written or oral, for suitable provision for the interment of the dead.

2. So long back as the year 1847 an Act passed the Legislature for the establishment of a General Cemetery near the city of Sydney; and subsequently a site, which at the time of its selection was considered an eminently suitable one, was allotted for the purpose. It appears, however, that so strongly felt were the objections to the mode of management provided under the Act alluded to, that no benefit whatever has, up to this time, resulted from the liberality of the Government in setting apart land appropriate for the purpose. During the last few years, also, doubts have been entertained as to the suitability of the spot selected; and, in August last, when the subject was under the consideration of a previous Administration, the Council recommended that the Colonial Architect and the Superintendent of the Botanical Garden should inspect the site, and report generally as to its state and fitness for the purpose to which it had been devoted.

3. His Excellency now lays before the Council the report prepared by those officers, together with all the previous papers on the subject, and a minute by the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, expressive of his views with respect to it.

4. It is not necessary here to advert to the several suggestions which have, at different times, been made as to the most convenient position for the Necropolis; it is sufficient to state that the report of the Colonial Architect and the Superintendent of the Botanic Gardens is decidedly favourable to the site originally proposed, which forms part of the Old Sydney Common, and is situated at or near Randwick, about a mile from Sydney. The Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works concurring in that view, submits, in his present minute, certain arrangements by which he conceives that collision with the conscientious scruples or even prejudices of the various sects of religionists may be avoided.

5. Having carefully weighed these arrangements, and given to the whole question that full consideration which its importance demands, the Council concur, generally, in the views expressed by the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, and advise as follows:—

- (1.) That the site originally selected at Randwick for the Necropolis be adhered to, and be increased in area, so as to embrace the land between it, the Randwick Road, and Cleveland and Dowling Streets.

- (2.) That the whole be forthwith fenced in with eight-feet paling, and that the Legislative Assembly be invited to make provision for this expense and for any further expenditure that may be required for laying out and planting the main intersecting avenues.
- (3.) That one-third part of the land be placed in the hands of lay Trustees for a General Cemetery properly so called.
- (4.) That the remaining two-thirds part of the land be divided amongst the various religious bodies according to the last census, and handed over to Trustees to be recommended by such religious bodies.
- (5.) That a grant of each portion of land so allotted be made to such Trustees, who shall have the right, if they so see fit, to fence off the same, and indeed to exercise complete control over it—with the distinct understanding, however, that the ground is to be used alone as a place of interment, and that no charges for burial, in so far as the use of the land is concerned, be exacted, unless such as may be provided for in rules to be submitted and approved by the Governor General and Executive Council.
- (6.) That no such rules be so submitted for approval until notice thereof shall have been given in the Government Gazette, at least one month.
- (7.) That any such grant be held void, if the land be not bonâ fide used for the purpose contemplated, within two years from the date of the deed of grant.
- (8.) That such portions of the area of any division of the land as may prove unfit for the purpose of burial, shall not be taken into account in apportioning the land, but shall nevertheless in each case pass into the care of the trusts.
- (9.) That in the event of these arrangements being inconsistent with the provisions of the existing Necropolis Act, 11th Victoria, No. 11, a Bill be introduced into Parliament for repealing the said Act.
- (10.) That the stone wall, partially enclosing the twenty-three acres first appropriated as the site of the cemetery be sold, except that portion of it against which is built a hut at present occupied by the person who has charge of the Crown lands in the neighbourhood.

6. During the consideration of this question, the attention of the Council is directed to suggestions, emanating from the Honorable the Attorney General, that the south side of Botany Bay is the most suitable site for the interment of the dead, and that the same may be made easily accessible by means of a tramway to the north shore of Botany. Although, therefore, they adhere to their opinion that the position now adopted is that best suited to satisfy the present requirements of the Colony, the Council consider it not undesirable that, whilst it is yet in the power of the Government to effect it, ample provision should be made for the future; and they accordingly advise that an area not exceeding 150 acres be reserved in the locality in question, to be hereafter used for the interment of the dead.

7. Finally, the Council desire to place on record their decided opinion that no grants of land for burial purposes should be issued, except with the provisions as to charges set out in the 5th and 6th recommendations of this minute.

EDWARD C. MEREWETHER,
Clerk of the Council.

UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS to SURVEYOR GENERAL.

*Department of Lands and Public Works,
Sydney, 21 June, 1858.*

SIR,

The question of the establishment of a Necropolis in the neighbourhood of Sydney having, at the instance of the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, been brought under the attention of the Executive Council, and the Council having deliberated thereon, I am directed to inform you that the site originally selected for this purpose at the Sand Hills is to be adhered to, and increased in area so as to embrace the land between it, the Randwick Road, and Cleveland and Dowling Streets, as shewn on the sketch understood to have been personally returned to you by the Clerk of the Executive Council.

2. I am to request you to have this enlarged area measured as quickly as possible and marked on the ground, informing the Colonial Architect when this has been done, in order that the latter may have the whole fenced in as advised by the Executive as follows:—"That one-third part of the land be placed in the hands of the said Trustees, for a General Cemetery properly so called; that the remaining two-thirds be divided amongst the various religious bodies, according to the last census, and handed over to Trustees to be recommended by such religious bodies."

3. In connection with the above, the Council have further advised that such portions of the area of any division of the land as may prove unfit for the purpose of burial shall not be taken into account in apportioning the land, but shall nevertheless in such cases pass into the care of the trusts.

SIR,

The Executive Council, before whom the matter was laid, having advised on the question of the establishment of a Necropolis in the neighbourhood of Sydney, I am directed by the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, to inform you that the site originally selected for this purpose at the Sand Hills is to be adhered to, and increased in area so as to embrace the land lying between it, the Randwick Road, and Cleveland and Dowling Streets.

2. I am to request you to prepare and submit to this department, an estimate shewing the probable cost for having the whole of the land fenced in with eight-foot paling.

3. I am at the same time to ask you to submit at once a notice, offering to public sale, in suitable lots, the stone in the existing wall (except that portion of it against which is built a hut, at present occupied by the person who has charge of the Crown lands in the neighbourhood), the sale to be on condition that the stone shall be removed within a period to be named.

4. The Surveyor General, I am to add, has been requested to measure and mark on the ground the enlarged Necropolis, and to apprise you when this has been done.

17 September, 1853.

Sir,

I beg to call your attention to an advertisement in the Sydney Morning Herald, announcing the intention of the Bishop to consecrate the cemetery in connection with St. Jude's Church at Randwick, to-morrow, the 18th instant; and as I have reason to believe that a cemetery in such a situation will drain into the new reserve for the supply of the city with water, and thereby produce dangerous contamination, I beg to suggest the necessity of taking steps to prevent such a result.

I have, &c.,
ISAAC AARON,
Officer of Health.

The Mayor of Sydney.

CIVIL CROWN SOLICITOR to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

Civil Crown Solicitor's Office,
Sydney, 22 September, 1858.

SIR,

Referring to your letter to me of the 21st June last, in which you forwarded, for my information, an extract from the minute of the Executive Council, relative to the proposed establishment of a Necropolis in the neighbourhood of Sydney, I have the honor to inform you that I have now obtained, as requested by you, the opinion of the Honorable the Solicitor General, as to whether the arrangements mentioned in such minute are compatible with the Act of Council 11 Vic., No. 11.

A copy of that opinion I now enclose, from a perusal of which you will perceive that Mr. Solicitor General considers that the arrangements as proposed cannot be carried out under the Act just above referred to; and that it will be necessary therefore to repeal that Act, and to bring in a new Bill to effectuate the objects contemplated.

The extract already referred to I now return to you, enclosed.

I have, &c.,
WM. W. BILLYARD,
C. C. Solicitor.
(Per J. J. JACKSON.)

OPINION.

I THINK that the arrangements proposed to be carried out, as detailed in the Minute of the Executive Council, cannot be effected under the provisions of the Act, 11 Vic., No. 11.

The appointment of Trustees under the Act conflicts with the scheme laid down in the minute of the Executive Council; and further, the increased area cannot be obtained without the authority of the Legislature, conveyed either under a general Act or a special Act passed for the purpose.

I am of opinion, therefore, that it will be necessary to repeal the Necropolis Act of 1847, and to bring in a new Bill to effectuate the objects contemplated.

ALFRED P. LUTWYCHE,
Solicitor General.

CHAIRMAN OF WESLEYANS to SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

Parramatta, 22 October, 1858.

SIR,

May I beg to call your attention to letters addressed on the subject of a burial ground for the use of the Wesleyan body in and about Sydney? For some time past we have been under the painful necessity of refusing permission to our people still to bury in our present ground, for the reason that it is full, and therefore highly improper and unsafe still to inter the dead there. We are now obliged to bury where we can, which is not only painful to many parties who have friends buried in the present ground, but often subjects them to annoyance from others.

Begging your early attention to this subject,—

I have, &amp;c.,

STEPHEN RABONE,
Chairman of Wesleyans.

SIR,

Appendix K.

With reference to your letter of the 8th ultimo, I have the honor to forward herewith Mr. Darke's plan of his survey of the Necropolis, shewing the subdivision which he would propose, together with his reports, by which it will be seen that the external boundaries of the Cemetery have been sufficiently marked on the ground, and an officer of the Colonial Architect's Department informed.

Sydney, 13 October, 1858.*

Sir,

Wanting.

My plan of the site for a Necropolis for the city of Sydney, submitted to you by my letter of the 30th ultimo, having been returned to me with your memorandum of the 6th instant, directing me to shew thereon, for approval, a proposed subdivision amongst the various religious bodies,—I have the honor to retransmit the plan now shewing the subdivisions I would suggest. The several portions I have endeavoured to reconcile with the proportions of each denomination as shewn by the census, as far as the form and features of the land will admit, taking at the same time the approximate area of lagoons and swamps into consideration.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 30 September, 1858.*

Sir,

Wanting.

In attention to your memorandum of the 17th instant, on the subject of my survey of lands in the parish of Alexandria as a Necropolis for the city of Sydney, I have the honor to state that I have made the feature survey, and have marked and cleared the boundaries as directed, and forward a plan of the site (119 acres) herewith.

Some delay has arisen in the performance of this duty, from the alteration the boundaries as first cleared and surveyed, but more from the necessity of a series of observations to determine the variation of the magnetic meridian since the time of the original alignments in this locality; with reference to the result of which I beg to refer you to my letter of this date.

Not received.

I return all papers on this subject and plans herewith.

NOTICE IN "GOVERNMENT GAZETTE."

*Department of Lands and Public Works,
Sydney, 3 May, 1859.To Fencers and others.—Fencing at the Necropolis near Sydney.*

TENDERS will be received at this office until 12 o'clock on Tuesday, the 17th instant, from persons willing to contract for the performance of fencing required at the Necropolis near Sydney.

Tenders to be endorsed, "Tender for fencing Necropolis near Sydney."

Specification and form of tender may be seen, and further particulars obtained, at the Colonial Architect's Office, Sydney.

Tenders must state the time within which it is proposed to complete the work; and at the foot of every tender there must be a memorandum, signed by the party tendering, and two responsible persons as sureties, agreeing to be answerable for the due performance of the contract, in the event of the tender being accepted, and undertaking in that event that they will severally execute and deliver, at the office of the Civil Crown Solicitor in Sydney, within seven days from the usual notification of acceptance, a bond to Her Majesty, in the penal sum of £100, for securing such performance, otherwise the tender will not be taken into consideration.

THOMAS PERKINS to SECRETARY FOR LANDS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

Balmain, 18 May, 1859.

SIR,

The meeting reported in this day's Herald, respecting a Cemetery to be established in the suburbs of Sydney, has induced me to take the liberty of pointing to a far more eligible site, that is, on the Liverpool Road, beyond Ashfield; if ten or fifteen miles out, it little matters; we must take an example from London; and it is not too much to state, that in another century all the land from Newtown to the coast, reaching from Botany Heads to Port Jackson, will be dotted with houses and market gardens, and that the population will be equal to what New York is at the present time. An area of at least 300 acres should be secured and cleared, for the purpose of laying out ornamentally; to be sufficient distance from the railway so as to make it an agreeable landscape to the traveller. A mourning train to start daily to the ground.

All the surrounding neighbourhood, from Cook's River to Parramatta River, could and would avail themselves of it; and even for Balmain far more convenient than the present plan of crossing Darling Harbour in boats or steamer, to be again subject to be transferred, like a case of merchandise, to Newtown or the proposed Cemetery near the source where Sydney is supplied with water; for a hearse would reach the Petersham Station far more convenient and satisfactory than crossing the harbour and Sydney streets, as at present.

The land in the neighbourhood, I believe, is of little value for agricultural or grazing, and, judging from the cuttings in the railroad, very suitable for a Cemetery, having no running spring, and may be sunk to any depth free from water.

THOS. PERKINS.

No. 135.

MEMORIAL of the undersigned Inhabitants of Sydney, Surry Hills, and the adjacent localities, to the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works, against the proposed erection of the Necropolis on the reserve at Surry Hills.

THE subscribers most earnestly protest against it, for the following amongst other reasons:—

Because the proposed site commences sixty feet within the city boundary, and is in close proximity to the properties of some of the memorialists; and it is contrary to all sanitary regulations that cemeteries shall be erected within a city or adjoining the dwellings of the people.

2. That the water which filters through the sands of this part of the Surry Hills, forms a portion of the water used by the memorialists and many others, and must consequently become contaminated if the same sands are to be the burying-place of the metropolis, and cannot but be the cause of disease and death.

3. That in many places the proposed site is wholly unfit for the purpose contemplated, inasmuch as there is almost permanent water to be found a few feet under the sandy surface, rendering burial in such positions, without the most expensive system of drainage, manifestly impossible.

For these, irrespective of all other reasons, the undersigned respectfully urge upon the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Public Works the necessity for abandoning the proposed site for some one of many spots that could be chosen presenting none of these objections.

THE contract for fencing is taken, and the whole matter has been so long determined on by the Government, that any objections on the grounds of contiguity to certain dwellings can scarcely be fairly put forward, as the dwellings alluded to were erected since the site was chosen—not before. Besides this, those who have taken the most trouble to inquire into the matter, including the Mayor and Corporation of the city, have withdrawn their objection. The Surveyor General may, however, be requested to hold back from apportionment for burial purposes a belt of the land along Dowling-street, which may be at some future time planted with trees, and thus to some extent meet the views of the petitioners.

No. 145.

SURVEYOR GENERAL to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 19 October, 1859.*

SIR,

Not traceable.

In obedience to the instructions conveyed by your blank cover letter of that I should report what Crown lands in the vicinity of Sydney are eligible for a General Cemetery for the city, and not open to the objections which have been taken to the site between the Randwick Road and Dowling-street,—I have the honor to report that the only land in the possession of the Government, and to which similar objections might not be taken, is a portion of the Church and School Estate in the parish of Botany.

This land is situated on the sea face of the range which extends along the coast from near Long Bay, Randwick, and upwards of 100 acres might be marked out, the drainage from which would be directly to the sea. It is approached by the Randwick Road and the new road now about being constructed, which latter would either form the boundary or pass through it. The distance from the centre of Sydney would be about five miles. The soil is sandy, and there is no timber on the land. I have taken measures to ascertain whether the depth of soil is sufficient for purposes of sepulture.

The objections to the site—are its distance from Sydney, which is too great to admit of its being ordinarily reached by pedestrians; the sandy nature of the soil, which would probably, in so exposed a situation, result in the breaking up of the present surface in extensive sand drifts; and its proximity to the growing suburb of Randwick, through which funerals would necessarily pass.

A site might be selected on the western slope of the same range of hills, which would be somewhat less distant, and which would not be approached through Randwick; but this site would be open to the objection that the drainage would be to land which is likely to be extensively occupied within the next few years.

I should mention also, that the establishment of a General Cemetery in either of those positions would materially depreciate the sale or leasing of the lands in the vicinity.

Two

BURIAL GROUNDS, SYDNEY.

81

Two other sites have suggested themselves; one being at Cabarita Point, on the Parramatta River, and about midway from Sydney to Parramatta, and the other being a portion of the Government Domain at Parramatta, in the vicinity of the railway line.

The former of these would have to be reached either by water (in a distance of about five miles) or from the railway line, the distance from the Ashfield or Burwood station on which is about two miles. The vacant line contains an area of about 170 acres, and is generally pretty thickly wooded; but it might probably be cleared for little more than the value of the timber. The drainage is to the water of the Parramatta River, which almost surrounds it.

This land is under proclamation for sale on the 16th proximo, but may of course be withdrawn. I have not yet had the depth of the soil tested, but shall have this done at once, should the suggestion be deemed worthy of consideration.

The site at Parramatta is on the north side of the railway line on the slope of the ridge towards Toongabbee Creek; and without embracing portions having frontage on that creek, 115 acres might be appropriated as a Cemetery.

This would however embrace the land which I understand is about being applied for in exchange for the Cemetery for Parramatta, of thirty acres, reserved on the opposite side of the railway line, but which proves not to have a sufficient depth of soil. The approach would of course be by railway. The land is partly cleared, and is, I believe, to a great extent at least, of sufficient depth for burial purposes.

I have, &c.,
A. G. M'LEAN,
A.S.G.

The enclosed papers having been withdrawn from the consideration of the Executive Council, are forwarded to the Honorable the Secretary for Public Works, with a view to his making such arrangements as he may consider necessary with the contractor who was employed to fence-in the abandoned site. The papers referring to a fresh selection have been transmitted to the Honorable the Secretary for Lands.

SIR,

I have the honor to inform you that, according to your instructions, I have examined the soil on the reserve at Cabarita Point, having caused four holes to be dug at different parts of the ground; and as regards the soil, I am of opinion that it is well adapted for burial purposes. There is about one foot and a half of sandy loam on the surface, then about three feet of ironstone, and after that the ironstone becomes mixed with a dry sort of whitish clay. Three holes out of the four we dug five feet deep, but time would not permit us to go so deep with the fourth.

THIS matter should be considered urgent, as although the contractor is willing to make a reasonable arrangement for a change in the site upon which to place the fencing, he cannot be expected to suffer the affair to remain long in abeyance. I am disposed to recommend the site first intended herein. The contractor has only placed on the ground about one-third of fencing material, therefore the allowance proper in consideration of the change need not be great.

UNDER SECRETARY FOR PUBLIC WORKS to COLONIAL ARCHITECT.

SIR,

It appears from the accompanying papers, that the Colonial Architect was requested, on the 21st June, 1858, to furnish an estimate of the cost of fencing-in the land appropriated for a Necropolis, at the Sand Hills near Sydney, which he did on the 8th November of that year. The amount (£970) was voted on the Estimates for 1859, and tenders were called for, to be opened on the 17th May last. On the 10th May (seven days before the tenders were opened) a communication was received from the Town Clerk, suggesting, by direction of the Right Worshipful the Mayor, that the consideration of the tenders might be postponed until the City Engineer's report was obtained as to the position of the Necropolis with regard to the Water Reserve. The tenders were opened on the 17th May, and referred in the usual manner to the Colonial Architect, who reported on the 20th that William Harmer's tender was the lowest, and recommended its acceptance. Mr. Harmer was however informed that the matter was suspended, at the request of the Mayor.

On the 16th June, however, a further communication was received from the Town Clerk, stating that, as the City Engineer had reported that the drainage from the proposed Necropolis was not likely to interfere with the present arrangement for the supply of water to the city, His Worship did not see any reason for asking any further delay on the part of the Government, in the consideration of the tenders for fencing-in the Cemetery. Mr. Harmer's tender was then accepted by the Government, and his bond signed and transmitted to the then Lands and Public Works Office, on the 12th August.

The second reading of the Necropolis Bill in the Assembly, on the 6th October last, having been negatived, it was considered desirable to stop the work and make arrangements with the contractor for the work performed. The amount of Harmer's contract was £756. The Colonial Architect estimates the work executed, £241 11s. Od. ; value of material supplied but not yet worked up, £138 ; compensation for anticipated profit, £75 12s. ; total, £455 3s. As Mr. Harmer is willing to take this amount, the Colonial Architect recommends that it be paid to him, and that the Government take the materials, which can be used for other purposes.

It is submitted whether, if the recommendation of the Colonial Architect be carried out, Mr. Harmer can be paid from present vote, or whether a subsequent vote must be taken for the £455 3s. ? Mr. Harmer is pressing for payment.

B.H.M.,

Let Mr. Harmer be paid out of the present vote.—G.E.—18/3/60.

SIR,

The Colonial Architect will take over from the contractor the materials in the timber yard at wharf, valued at £138, free of all cost of wharfage and store rent, to which effect wharfinger's receipt must be obtained. On this being done, the Colonial Architect may pay the contractor the £455 3s. recommended by him, in satisfaction of the contract.

The materials referred to above should be removed and kept under the charge of the Colonial Architect as soon as possible, so as to prevent charges where they now are.

No. 160.

ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 2 April, 1860.*

SIR,

With reference to your b.c. letter of the 29th ultimo, on the subject of the selection of a General Cemetery, I have the honor to state that I have not received any instructions on the subject in question, since that in obedience to which my letter of the 19th October last was written. Not traceable.

2. The lands at Cabarita Point have now been disposed of, and therefore there remain only the lands near Randwick and those in the Parramatta Domain, available. I have ascertained that the soil in the former is to a considerable extent of sufficient depth for purposes of sepulture; but irrespectively of the objections which will no doubt be urged by the inhabitants of Randwick, the sandy nature of the soil and its exposed position are strong reasons against its adoption. The distance from Sydney, too (five miles) and the consequent cost of funerals is an objection of some weight, and yet there are no Crown lands nearer to the city, with the exception of the rejected site on the Randwick Road, to which still more weighty objections do now exist.

3. There are other portions of the Church and School Estate, and of Crown lands in the parish of Botany, which are less exposed than the above site, and to which no persons could urge such objections as those to be apprehended from the Randwick inhabitants; but their greater distance would, I fear, prove a bar to their adoption, unless communication were facilitated by a tramway; and under the circumstances it will, it appears to me, be best to seek a site for transit between which and Sydney the existing Parramatta railway may be made available.

4. Such a site is afforded by the Parramatta Domain, as suggested in my letter of the 19th October above mentioned. Within the space alluded to the application of the Parramatta residents, adverted to in my letter, has now been made, and was reported on by my b.c. letter of the 23rd ultimo, No. 261. There are, however, in this locality, without crossing Toongabbee Creek, about 300 acres, and therefore even were a reservation made along the creek, to preserve as far as possible the purity of the water, there would probably remain sufficient space for the requirements of both the Parramatta district and the metropolis. The distance (about fifteen miles) to be travelled by railway, and the necessity of passing through Parramatta to the Cemetery, are no doubt objections which may be urged against this site, as is also the circumstance that the drainage would be to water from which Parramatta is now supplied, and which must be used by purchasers on the other side of the creek; but notwithstanding these, the site is in my opinion more suitable than any other lands still in the hands of the Crown.

5. If, however, it were practicable to purchase some of the alienated lands on or near the railway line, about twelve miles from the Sydney terminus, and which is of little value for any other purposes, the distance would thereby be reduced some three miles; funeral trains would not pass through Parramatta; and drainage might be secured either to the salt water of the Parramatta River, or to some water supply which is not necessarily used to any extent. There is land in the locality referred to so inferior in quality to that of the portion of the Parramatta Domain referred to that, notwithstanding the greater distance of the latter from the metropolis, the difference in value must be rather in its favour, and therefore the loss to Government by selling the one and buying the other ought to be very slight. On the whole, and after much consideration of this difficult question, I am of opinion that the last suggestion above would, under existing circumstances, be the best way of meeting it.

I have, &amp;c.,

A. G. M'LEAN,

Acting Surveyor General.

No. 165.

MR. LICENSED SURVEYOR KNAPP to ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL.

*No. 100, Elizabeth-street,
Sydney, 13 August, 1860.*

SIR,

In conformity with verbal instructions received from you on the 11th ultimo, I ascertained where I could see the sale plan of that portion of the Petersham Estate, offered to the Government for the purpose of a General Cemetery; and as it did not contain the least information necessary to estimate the contents of the various allotments shewn on the lithograph (enclosed herewith) I have not obtained a copy.

The following is the result of my inspection of the land in question:—From Fraser's road to Cutler's, on the new road to Canterbury, the soil is composed of very hard ferruginous clay and gravel, difficult to sink a hole with any degree of celerity; this kind of soil, similar in many respects to that of the Camperdown Cemetery, is confined to the allotments fronting the Cook's River Road, from Mr. J. Williams' land northwards, and round the Canterbury New Road as far as the estate extends.

South of Read's and Alexander's properties, the character of the land differs slightly, being 18 inches loamy soil and then stiff clay.

At the head of the creek which falls into the river (see lithograph) I found the soil to be 18 inches loam, 2 feet yellow clay, and then a stratum of very stiff clay; this description of soil will in summer time be difficult to sink through speedily.

On both sides of the creek (along which boulders of sandstone crop out in some places) downwards, the soil is well adapted for the purpose of a Cemetery, there being 2 feet 6 inches sand, and then a stratum of a kind of soft yellow loam; the centre of the estate is composed of this description of soil.

A portion of the land is clear, but the greater part is timbered with brush and saplings and stumps of trees long since cut down.

On the whole, I consider the land well adapted for the purposes of a Cemetery, but there is one great objection which ought not to be lost sight of, viz., that the drainage from the major portion of the estate flows into the creek which falls into Cook's River. From enquiries made on the ground, I ascertained that there is water in the creek all the year round (an old resident of 18 years informed me that during that time he never knew it to be dry); six months of the year it is running, and the water is so good that people come some distance for the purpose of obtaining it. Under these circumstances I think it unadvisable to select it for a Cemetery, the consequences being so clear that I need not explain them.

I also inspected the land offered the Government by Mr. William Russell, which I consider better adapted for the purposes of a General Cemetery than the land above-mentioned, because the soil, though of the like description, is not so difficult to sink through; but I am apprehensive the public would strongly object to the site, on account of its near contiguity to the Parramatta Junction Railway Station which it surrounds, and beg respectfully to suggest that some other be sought for, certainly possessing the advantage of easy access to a railway station, but not in immediate contact with one.

SIR,

In obedience with verbal instructions received from you, respecting the several properties offered to the Government as sites for a General Cemetery, I beg to inform you that I have inspected the same, and am of opinion that they are not adapted for the purposes required, both as regards soil and drainage.

I have examined J. Smith's 100-acres grant, situate on the north side of the Parramatta Road, and bounded on the north-west and north-east by Duck Creek (salt water), and on the south-east by Duck River (salt water). The land is admirably adapted for a Cemetery. The greater part of the soil is of a loamy nature. The drainage is into the creek and river above mentioned. It is little more than a quarter of a mile from the Parramatta Junction Railway Station, and has the two-fold advantage of being accessible by land and water. ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL to MR. LICENSED SURVEYOR ARMSTRONG.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 23 February, 1861.*

SIR,

I take advantage of your presence in Sydney to avail myself of your judgment and experience in the examination of the several portions of land described in the within papers, with a view to determine whether any is eligible for a General Cemetery; and, if any, which is the most eligible?

2. You will perceive that Mr. Knapp, junr., has been employed in this duty; but I beg that you will be in no degree biassed by the conclusions at which he has arrived, but will exercise freely your own judgment in the matter.

3. The essentials in a Cemetery are—soil of sufficient depth, and of such character that, while graves may be dug without any extraordinary labour, their sides will stand vertically; secondly, drainage sufficient to keep the graves dry while being prepared, and leading to salt water, or otherwise, so as not to affect the purity of water which is or may be required for domestic uses; thirdly, such proximity to the railway lines as to render communication with it, and, if possible, with some existing station, easy and inexpensive.

4. It is desirable, also, that the Cemetery should be, to some extent, isolated, so that its establishment might not depreciate the value of adjacent property, by rendering it undesirable as a residence; and it would be advantageous that the soil should be such that, while meeting the necessities above mentioned, the spot would be capable of being cultured and beautified, as is frequently the case with Cemeteries in other countries.

5. You will include in your examination and report Smith's grant, which is alluded to by Mr. Knapp, but of which no offer has yet been made to Government.

The business is somewhat urgent in character, and I trust that it may meet with your early and careful attention.

I am, &c.,

ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 26 February, 1861.*

SIR,

Although I anticipate reporting on the suitability of the various sites for a General Cemetery which have been offered for sale to the Government, within a very short period, I think it desirable that, with a view to obviate inconvenience, I should now call attention to the circumstance that the price asked by the proposing sellers is uniformly £20 per acre; and to suggest that a sum sufficient to purchase, at that rate, 100 to 150 acres—the former quantity being the minimum mentioned in the advertisement inviting tenders of land—be provided in the Supplementary Estimates.

I have, &c.,
A. G. M'LEAN.

Approved conditionally. If we are in a position to tell the House the land we desire to purchase—if not, I must object, reluctantly however, to placing the money on the Estimates. JOHN R.—

No. 179.

MR. LICENSED SURVEYOR ARMSTRONG to ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL.

*Macquarie-street,
6 March, 1861.*

SIR,

Referring to your letter, dated 23rd February, 1861, No. 269, 61-1139, I have the honor to inform you that I have visited the lands offered to the Government by Mr. P. A. Thompson, for a General Cemetery, on the south side of Cook's River, adjoining Undercliffe. The land offered comprises two of the 100-acre portions purchased originally by Abraham Polack; part of another 100-acre portion purchased by ditto. Part of Thorpe's 50 acres, and a small part of Unwin's 100 acres (on which Mr. Thompson's house is situated), are not included in the land now offered, it being a low strip near the river.

The only land available for a General Cemetery is part of portion A and portion B, tinted green in the accompanying sketch. About 100 acres might be chosen at that spot, which is on a level, and higher than the remainder of the land—a steep bank of rocks and stones separating it generally from the lower land adjoining Cook's River, and from a creek or gully descending into it. If any more were to be added to what I have pointed out, it would be an inconvenient strip.

The

The soil at A and B is sandy for two and three feet, and then yellow loam; at other places, pipeclay below.

The general wash or drainage is into Cook's River, which is salt water. The timber is only suitable for firewood, being blood-wood, red gum, with low barren scrub.

The road from Sydney to this land is by way of Newtown, near the Railway Station, thence to Undercliffe Bridge, from which station the distance is called  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles, or 3 miles from Camperdown Cemetery. From Macquarie-street to the bridge is estimated to be about  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles; from ditto to Unwin Bridge, about  $6\frac{1}{4}$  miles; and from ditto to the dam, about  $6\frac{1}{2}$  miles.

On reaching Undercliffe Bridge, the access to the coloured portion, A and B, must be by the road marked C, D, E, F, and which ultimately turns into the Illawarra Road. The road from Newtown is pretty good, parts requiring forming and repair. The Government give £30 annually for repair as far as the bridge, and £30 for the road beyond it.

The above land offered cannot be said to be conveniently situated; the soil is in many parts, I fear, too sandy. The advantages may be said to be, that the distance is moderate; that there is no necessity of making use of the railroad; and the drainage is to a salt water river.

Smith's grant, 100 acres, on the Parramatta Road, between Duck Creek and Duck River:—

Scrubby flat land; all the valuable timber cut down; generally pipeclay, varying to yellow clay, and some little ironstone in parts in the subsoil. Drainage to salt water. Appears sound dry land, but it is alleged by some that, in very wet seasons, the wash from the back land passes over part of it. Wood-boats come up Duck Creek to Beckett's Creek, and up Duck River to the Parramatta Road. I think it would be difficult to make this spot ornamental or picturesque, as it is flat and barren.

Part of Geo. Sunderland's sixty acres on the south side of the railroad, and J. Sunderland's 100 acres, offered by Rev. J. J. Therry:—

Part of George Sunderland's sixty acres, on the south side of Haslem's Creek Station may be suitable as to soil for a Cemetery. The soil is pipeclay generally; a small creek passes diagonally through it. In wet weather a considerable wash comes down and swells that creek.

The 100 acres is low, but firm land, and clay bottom; not heavily timbered; no improvements; and the land barren. The wash is into Hacking Creek. The entrance from the railroad is at the station-house. For the purpose of a Cemetery the railroad must be made use of here.

The distance from the Sydney terminus is  $10\frac{1}{4}$  miles, and 3 miles from the present Parramatta station.

This spot can scarcely be considered suitable. It could not be made ornamental, as it is flat and barren land, and the timber unsightly.

Wm. White's grant, eighty acres, and J. O'Donnell's grant, sixty acres, near the last-mentioned grants, and south side of the railroad, offered by Messrs. Richardson and Wrench:—

Wm. White's grant, eighty acres:—At the east and south sides the land is good, and clay subsoil; across the centre, running east and west, is a narrow, gravelly, low ridge; the rest is good soil, thickly timbered, with woolly butt, blood-wood, and some iron-bark, with much scrub. It is alleged that twenty-five acres of this grant, adjoining the west boundary, have been previously sold.

There appears to be some encroachment by the proprietor of Frazier's grant adjoining, at the south boundary.

The north-east corner of the grant is only about six or seven chains from the railroad, but access to the land must be from the Haslem's Creek Station.

J. O'Donnell's grant, sixty acres, is all pretty good land; is fenced in on the east and west sides; thickly timbered, as above. It is alleged that, at the south end of this grant, upwards of ten acres have been previously sold.

I beg to remark, that in the year 1838, I surveyed this sixty acres grant, for sale, by order of the trustees of the late Solomon Levey, who then claimed it, their title being a deed of lease and release, from J. O'Donnell to Levey, dated 1831.

These two grants have better soil than any other land offered to the Government, but the wash will be into that branch of Hacking Creek which passes through Barber's and Tuckwell's grants, in which are several fresh waterholes; they therefore cannot be considered suitable.

On Frazier's grant is a pretty good dwelling-house and cultivation paddock.

Part of Barraham Blaxcell's grant, 1,125 acres, at the junction of the Parramatta and the Dogtrap Road to Liverpool, offered by Captain Russell:—

The south side of the railroad. The surface soil is partly consisting of stiff loam, with small ironstone grit and yellow clay below; other parts have good brown loam on the surface, and clay below. About the point G in the sketch, on the rise, it is gravelly; and along Duck Creek is a belt of poor pipeclay land.

The large timber on this grant has been greatly cleared away, but there is much wattle and other scrub.

At the north end, toward the railroad, some parties are desirous of purchasing an allotment or two there, the land being flat and good, and nearly clear.

The wash from the ground would fall, I believe, chiefly into Duck Creek, and there would be no injury on that side. If any should find its way into Beckett's Creek, it would not be serious, the water there not being much used.

Supposing

Supposing this spot should be selected for the Cemetery, it would be advisable to strike the northern boundary of it a moderate distance back from the railroad, say at H I.

If there are any advantages in this spot, it is that it can be reached by the railroad only, and is at the junction of two main roads. It can be rendered more ornamental and picturesque than any of the spots offered, as the ground rises gently; the land is pretty good, and the shrubs appear to grow well.

But the disadvantages are, its nearness to the town of Parramatta, and that in the neighbourhood of it improvements may be likely to take place at some future time; also, being obliged to use the train such a distance from Sydney.

In conclusion, I submit to you that, according to my judgment, neither of the five above-mentioned places are really eligible for a General Cemetery for Sydney. There are disadvantages in each. I take the liberty of suggesting some inspection of the properties lying on the right hand of the Parramatta Road, up as far as Homebush. Should a desirable part be discovered, the proprietor might be invited to send in a tender to the Government.

My reason for proposing this is, that all the land there must drain into salt water creeks, or into a fall of ground descending into Parramatta River. It would not be likely to interfere with dwellings or other improvements; and lastly, there would be no necessity of employing the train, which, to a large number of persons in this Colony, would, I fear, be objectionable.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ARMSTRONG,
L.S.

No. 180.

ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Surveyor General's Office,
Sydney, 26 March, 1861.*

SIR,

Having had the lands which it has been proposed, by the enclosed offer, to sell to the Government for a General Cemetery examined—firstly by Mr. Knapp, licensed surveyor, and secondly by Mr. Licensed Surveyor Armstrong, whose experience I considered it desirable to take advantage of as he happened to visit Sydney, and having some personal knowledge of most of the localities, I beg to make the following report:—

2. The land offered by Mr. Thompson on the south side of Cook's River is so far removed from the railway line as not to fall within the class of lands for the sale of which Government invited offers by the advertisement, and it may therefore be dismissed from consideration.

3. The other portions, including one granted to one Smith, and now, I believe, the property of Mr. Wentworth, which has not been offered, but which has been suggested as peculiarly suitable, are, as will be seen from the sketch enclosed in Mr. Armstrong's letter, in the vicinity either of the Haslem's Creek or Parramatta Junction Railway Station.

4. It does not appear that Smith's grant is by any means peculiarly suitable, and attention may therefore be confined to the other portions offered.

5. Of these, Sunderland's grants of 60 and 100 acres adjoin a railway station, and being ten and a quarter miles from the Sydney terminus, is the nearest of the lands offered; but the soil, although not very unsuitable for grave-digging, is too poor, and the land is too flat to admit of the Cemetery being hereafter made picturesque by planting, &c.

6. The next portions offered are more suitable in some respects, but the drainage is towards a branch of Hacking's Creek, in which there are several fresh waterholes on adjacent properties, and I consider the land therefore to be unsuitable.

7. Blaxcell's grant, offered by Captain Russell, or rather a portion of it, which may be selected, is on the whole the most suitable of the portions offered; but the distance from the Sydney terminus (nearly thirteen miles) is a material disadvantage. This grant has been advertised for sale in allotments, but has, I understand, been withdrawn, in the hope that the Government may purchase some of it for a Cemetery.

8. The prices asked for all these lands are, I would remark, far higher than the present rate of sales of real property would warrant; for in the year 1858, when property was much higher, the Crown lands at Longbottom, containing good soil and a considerable amount of timber, being within seven miles of Sydney by road, near water carriage, and near the Burwood Railway Station, realized only about £12 per acre, and the greater distance of those referred to from Sydney, more than counterbalance the advantage of their proximity to Parramatta.

9. Mr. Armstrong states his opinion that none of the places offered is really eligible for a General Cemetery for Sydney, and suggests our inspection of properties on the north side of the Parramatta Road, with the object of securing drainage to salt water, and rendering it practicable to use the burial ground without the aid of the railway.

10. The former reason is a sound one; and saving of cost, in using seven miles only of the railway instead of ten to thirteen, is a strong reason in support of such a proposal.

11. Should the Secretary for Lands approve of this examination being carried out, I shall at once issue the necessary instructions, although I fear that were suitable land discovered the price asked would be a high one, and there would be some expense and inconvenience in taking a railway for steam or horse power across the Parramatta Road.

12. Should Government, on the other hand, consider it desirable to purchase at a reduced rate part of Blaxcell's grant, which is suitable in every respect, save distance, I would recommend that Captain Russell be invited to say what would be the lowest price for say 200 acres, which area it would, I think, be well to secure; the Government, as proprietors of the railway line, having power to make the proceeds of burials reimburse the Treasury for the purchase.

A. G. M'LEAN.

Land for Public Cemetery.

SIR,

With reference to the land adjoining the Parramatta Junction Railway Station offered for sale to the Government for the above purpose, by Captain Russell, and forming part of the Drainwell Estate, which we had received instructions to bring to auction on a subdivision, we beg to state that having learnt, a short time since, that the land in question had been reported on as the most eligible site for a Public Cemetery of any which had been tendered to the Government, we, having every desire to study the convenience of the Government, at once advised with our friends, and postponed the intended auction sale. As, however, our principals are now desirous that the matter should be settled with as little delay as possible, they have instructed us to proceed with the sale after laying the matter thus particularly before you; and we therefore beg the favour of your informing us whether the Government is willing to treat for the land in question, or whether they give up the intention of becoming its purchaser for the public purpose mentioned?

We beg to enclose for your reference a plan of the subdivision under which it is intended to sell the land, the parcel offered to the Government being outlined pink; and awaiting the favour of your reply,—

ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL to MR. LICENSED SURVEYOR KNAPP, JUNR.

23 April, 1861.

SIR,

Referring to the correspondence which has passed on the subject of the selection of land suitable for a General Cemetery for the metropolis, I have now to request that you will, without delay, make an examination of the land situated on the slope of the Sydney side of the Homebush Course—that is, on this side of the creek or hollow, which would probably be the most available, and transmit a report in respect thereto similar to those which you have already furnished in regard to the lands offered by the Rev. J. Therry and others.

2. You will be good enough to bear in mind that the quantity should not be less than 100 acres—that the drainage should be to salt water—and that the land to be selected, which should be near the railway and if possible near a station, should not interfere with residences.

3. I may add that the land, to which your attention is now directed, has not as yet been offered to the Government, but that an arrangement might be made with the proprietor or proprietors, should you find that a sufficient quantity of land of a description suitable for the purpose could be obtained in the neighbourhood referred to.

GENTLEMEN,

Referring to your letter of the 6th instant, respecting the land adjoining the Parramatta Junction Railway Station, offered for sale to the Government, by Captain Russell, for a Public Cemetery,—I am directed to inform you that of the lands already offered offered the land in question appears to be the most suitable, but the Secretary for Lands considers it his duty to take further steps, in the hope of finding land more suitable in several respects.

2. It will be for the owner of the property to consider, therefore, whether or not they will keep the land open for purchase by the Government?

SIR,

With reference to the notice in the Government Gazette, requesting parties in the possession of land near the line of railway between Sydney and Parramatta, who may be disposed to sell a block of not less than 100 acres for a General Cemetery, to furnish particulars of the same to your department,—acting as agent for Mr. William Charles Wentworth, I am authorized to offer you 100 acres of land or more at Homebush, on the Parramatta Road, on the eastern boundary of the estate, which are to be bounded on the south by the Parramatta Road.

The geological formation is described as well adapted for the above purpose, being gravelly and no rock. The drainage is immediately into Powell's Creek, a salt water inlet from Parramatta River; it is within half a mile of the Homebush Railway Station, and possesses direct access by the Great Western Road.

The price is (£50) fifty pounds per acre, which, considering the superior advantages of soil, drainage, and ready means of access, cannot be considered excessive.

With reference to my report as to J. Smith's grant of 100 acres at Duck River, No. 60-3, as a very eligible block of land for the purpose of a General Cemetery,—I have the honor to inform you, that I have ascertained from Major Wentworth, now in Tasmania, the present proprietor, that he merely holds a life interest in the grant in question, and that no steps could be taken to effect a conveyance in fee until the arrival of his brother Mr. W. C. Wentworth.

Since that gentleman arrived, I have been informed by him that no such conveyance can legally be made, as under the will of his late father the land in question will descend to his son, in the event of him (W. C. Wentworth) surviving his brother Major Wentworth.

Acting on the instructions conveyed in your letter to me of the 23rd April, I have made an examination of the land therein referred to, viz., that situated on the slope of the Sydney side of the Homebush Racecourse, that is, on this side of the creek or hollow, and have the honor to report that the land so described, extending from the creek or hollow to Powell's Creek on the east, consists of about 140 to 150 acres, and is comprised in a grant of sixty acres to Darcy Wentworth, seventy acres to Thomas Rose, and about eighteen acres of Simeon Lord's 160 acres grant, and a small portion sold to Emanuel Neitch.

The land appears generally suitable for the purpose of a General Cemetery; the drainage is into salt water, both by the creek or hollow before mentioned on the west, and Powell's Creek on the east. It is very near the Homebush Railway Station, and does does not in any way interfere with residences. The subsoil is composed of a rather stiff clay on the higher ground, and where examined by excavation, I discovered neither rock nor shale; towards the creeks the land becomes more pervious with a mixture of loam. Its position is central, being little more than midway between Sydney and Parramatta, and possesses the advantage of ready access by the Parramatta turnpike road as well as by the railway.

SIR,

In accordance with your verbal instructions to test the proposed site for Cemetery on Mr. Wentworth's property at Homebush, comparatively with proposed site at the Parramatta Railway Junction, I have the honor to report for your information, that in sinking the holes at Homebush, the first two to two and a half feet is through dark dark brown clay easily dug through, to a bed of firm blue clay or marl, from one to two feet in depth, and which is uniformly followed by a shingly bottom of mixed ironstone and slate, which can be penetrated with a pick, and does not increase in hardness to a depth sufficient for Cemetery purposes, and in which the labour of opening graves would be about similar to the Newtown Cemetery. The proposed site on the south side of the property contains a quantity of low ground, not so well suited for the purpose as the north side.

The proposed site at the Parramatta Railway Junction appears a good one, and the sinking would be more easily accomplished; the upper clay is nearly similar to Homebush, and graves could in most cases be dug to the bottom without using a pick.

SIR,

Understanding that the Government are desirous of selecting a plot of ground for a General Cemetery, within easy communication of Sydney, I beg to submit for their approval a block containing between 1,600 and 1,700 acres, situated at Liberty Plains, and about 11 miles from Sydney, and through which the railway runs. The land is also of easy access from the Parramatta and Liverpool Roads. There is also in the centre of the land a reserve for a railway terminus. The land was formerly the property of Sir Charles Nicholson (by whom the reserve was given), and is now the property of my brother, Mr. Edward Cohen, of Melbourne, who has placed it in my hands for sale. The price of the whole block is £17,000 (seventeen thousand pounds).

Withdrawn.

I enclose a rough sketch of the situation of the land. The soil, I believe, is deep, and the land is free from floods.

The site appears generally preferable to that formerly proposed on the Homebush Estate, on account of not being so hard, and the railway passing through it, cutting off a triangular corner of about 40 acres from an enclosure of about 300 acres.

I beg also to state, that the drainage of about three-fourths of the enclosure has an inclination through the Homebush Estate.

B.C.—Acting Surveyor General.—27 July, 1861.—M.F.

[Enclosure in No. 196.]

Sydney, 25 July, 1861.

Sir,

When the Government called for tenders from persons having land on the line of railway, and who would be willing to sell 100 acres to the Government, for the purpose of a Public Cemetery, I offered to sell 100 or 120 acres at £20 per acre, within a short distance of the Haslem's Creek Railway Station. I have since reduced my price to £15 per acre, and communicated this reduction in price to the Honorable the Secretary for Lands and Works.

It is now currently reported that the Government have decided on purchasing 100 acres of land from the President of the Legislative Council (who was not originally one of the parties tendering), and to pay him at the rate of £40 per acre—land which I would submit to any jury of non-official persons is not in any way better situated for the purposes of a Cemetery than mine, which I offer at £15 per acre.

Whether the Government takes my land or not is to me a matter of very little consequence, but as far as the Government is concerned, it strikes me that this transaction is one deserving some consideration, and therefore, as the trustee of the funds of the Colony, I would respectfully place before you the following figures:—

The Government is said to have agreed to pay the President of the Legislative Council for—
100 acres at £40 per acre .....	£4,000
The cost of a tramway is variously estimated at from £1,000 to
£1,500; take the lowest .....	1,000
Total .....	£5,000
I offer the Government—
120 acres at £15 per acre .....	£1,800
The cost of a tramway estimated at .....	500
Total .....	£2,300

SIR,

Referring to a letter addressed to you on my behalf by Messrs. Richardson & Wrench, offering to sell to the Government 120 acres, more or less, of land belonging to me at Haslem's Creek, and within a very short distance of the railway station, I do myself the honor of informing you that I will sell you the land at £15 per acre, instead of £20 per acre, as named by them.

I believe the land will be found in every way suited for the purpose, and if the Government desire it, I will send a surveyor to meet any gentlemen whom you may name, on the ground, and point out the locality.

I have, &c.,
GEO. KING.

REPORT OF ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL.

THIS examination was made after the inspection of the sites offered by Mr. Wentworth and Mr. Russell, by the Colonial Secretary, Secretary for Lands, &c. The report is favourable to the site between the Parramatta Road. It will be well to obtain the reply sought from Mr. Cohen in relation to his land, which apparently joins Mr. Wentworth's, and perhaps to inquire the price of the land herein referred to from Mr. Wentworth before considering the question further.

A. COHEN, Esq., to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Castlereagh-street,
Sydney, 6 August, 1861.*

SIR,

Under date July 1st, I had the honor to submit for sale to the Government a block of land at Liberty Plains, for the purposes of a General Cemetery, which offer was accompanied by a rough sketch of the land. I have now the honor to forward a correct chart* of it, as also a local sketch,† with more particulars relating thereto. The land submitted in my previous offer was 1,642a. 1r. 11p., more or less, comprised of 470 acres and 369 acres, grants to J. H. Potts, and 803a. 1r. 11p., being portion of a grant of 1,100 acres grant to Douglas; the price of the whole, £17,000.

Understanding that the Government would not require so large a block, I am authorized by the proprietors, Messrs. E. Cohen and D. Benjamin, to treat for any portion of the same.

The price of the block, 803a. 1r. 11p., will be £10,000 (ten thousand pounds), or the 470 acres and 369 acres £10,000, or any portion of either of the three grants, £15 per acre.

The excellent position of the 803 acres I should wish particularly to call your attention to, as it is of easy approach by three ways, viz.—First, by the railway, which runs through it (fourteen acres abutting it having been given for a railway station); the second, by a Government road from the Parramatta Road; and the third, from the Liverpool Road, a frontage to which it has of thirteen chains thirty links.

The soil also of this land is deep, and I believe very generally free from rock.

I have, &c.,
A. COHEN.

W. C. WENTWORTH, Esq., to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

Australian Club,
9 August, 1861.

SIR,

I beg to inform you that, since the death of my late brother, Major Wentworth, I and my eldest son, Fitzwilliam, have together acquired the fee simple in the 100 acres of land lying between Duck River and Duck Creek, on the Old Parramatta Road, and extending from that road to the junction of those fine salt water streams, which after thus uniting, flow into the Parramatta River. It is probable, as Tooth's grant was one of the old grants, that the area contains more than the 100 acres stated in the grant—but for this I will not vouch. I am willing to take £20 per acre for this land, which I am told was in the first instance deemed the most eligible site for a Public Cemetery, until it was ascertained that no proper title could be made out. This difficulty is now removed, as before stated, by the lamented death of my late brother.

I have, &c.,

MY DEAR SIR,

When I saw you the other day, in reference to Captain Russell's land for the Cemetery, you said the matter would be decided one way or other immediately. Will you excuse my asking, if it has been yet determined, what is to be done in the matter; and, if not, when it is likely to be so, as I fear we cannot keep our offer open much longer?

Yours very truly,

SIR,

In transmitting the enclosed sketch of the Hyde Park Estate, which is situated at Liberty Plains, between Sydney and Parramatta, and which has been offered to the Government for the selection out there of a site for a General Cemetery for Sydney, I have to request that you will visit the property, and sink holes on the parts edged yellow and green on the sketch, on both sides of the railway line, and extending over about 200 acres on the south side of the line, to ascertain its suitability for Cemetery purposes.

2. In your report you will refer specially to the direction of the drainage.

Sydney, 7 September, 1861.

SIR,

In accordance with your instructions of the 29th ultimo, No. 61-1203, to examine and report on the suitability of proposed site for General Cemetery near Homebush, I have the honor to state, for your information, that I caused various holes to be sunk on the parts referred to in the sketch, and found, as regards sinking, that the ground would be generally suitable for Cemetery purposes. It is in parts covered with a dense tea tree and wattle scrub, and wooded with mahogany, stringy bark, hollybut, and tea tree; but the best of the timber has been fallen for splitting and other purposes. I beg leave to suggest that the whole of the site might be selected on the south side of the railway line, which appears to me would be the most compact, as well as commanding a better prospect.

I also beg to say that, in sinking some additional holes on Mr. Wentworth's property, I found a sandstone rock between three and four feet from the surface, at the places marked red on the sketch; but it would require more holes to be sunk to ascertain how far the rock extends.

I have also noted on the sketch the direction of the drainage.

In accordance with your verbal instructions to report on the suitability of proposed site for Public Cemetery near Petersham, the property of Mr. Ramsay, I have the honor to state, for your information, that in sinking holes on the most likely places to test the ground, rock was generally found, varying in depth from one to five feet from the surface, and that on a considerable portion of the land solid rock is visible on the surface, which I beg leave to say makes it objectionable for Cemetery purposes.

REPORT OF ACTING SURVEYOR GENERAL.

THE present state of the Cemetery matter is that the most favourable sites, considering proximity to Sydney as a material advantage, are the properties of Mr. Wentworth and Mr. Cohen.

The latter is offered at £15 per acre, but no price has been named for the other.

It would be well to learn Mr. Wentworth's price for the portion of the Homebush Estate south of the Parramatta Road (or any part thereof which might be taken, not being less than 100 acres), previously to the personal inspection which I understand it is the intention of the Secretary for Lands to make.

W. RUSSELL, Esq., to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

Regentville.Penrith, 15 October, 1861.

MY DEAR SIR,

I have by this post received a letter from Mr. Wentworth, acquainting me that he is no longer my competitor for land to be used as a General Cemetery.

I hasten to offer to the Government 100, 200, 300, or 400 acres, adjoining the railway line, at £14 or £15 per acre, as may be agreed upon.

The land is not far from Homebush, on the line of railway, and connected by railway with Parramatta, Liverpool, Campbelltown, Camden, Penrith, Richmond, and Windsor and adjacents.

The land is reported by my surveyor as most eligible, with drainage to Duck Creek, on the line of railway, with extra sidings.

Pray believe me, &amp;c.,

CROWN SOLICITOR to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Crown Solicitor's Office,
Sydney, 21 May, 1862.*

SIR,

I have the honor to inform you that Mr. Levy, the solicitor for Messrs. Cohen & Benjamin, has forwarded to me an abstract of his clients' title to the land near Homebush, of which a portion has recently been purchased by the Government.

The title disclosed by the abstract relates to 319 acres granted to J. H. Potts, by deed of date 28th April, 1834, entered as No. 772, vol. 129, in registry of county of Cumberland, in Surveyor General's Office.

470 acres granted to J. H. Potts by deed, of date 20th April, 1835, entered as No. 835, vol. No. 142, in registry of county of Cumberland (4) at the Surveyor General's Office; and 803 acres, portion of a grant of 1,100 acres to H. G. Douglass, which grant is registered at Colonial Secretary's Office, in registry of grants of land No. 23, page 30; and I am informed that the 200 acres intended to be conveyed to the Government is a portion of one or more of these parcels of land.

It is necessary, before I can prepare the conveyance, that I should be furnished with a description of the land intended to be conveyed, and a surveyor's certificate that it forms a portion of the lands above mentioned; and I therefore forward the abstract herewith, to enable such description and certificate to be prepared.

With respect to the 803 acres, I should mention that it is said to be part of 893 portion of the 1,100 acres grant to Douglass. It will be seen by referring to the abstract (page 3), that 893 acres were conveyed by Shadforth & Douglass to Potts; that Potts conveyed this land to M. A. Bates (page 5), and that M. A. Bates conveyed it to Dawes & Smart (page 7), who, however, only conveyed 803 acres 1 rood 11 perches to Messrs. Francis Cohen & Benjamin; 89 acres 2 roods and 29 perches, the remaining portion of the 893 acres, having been, it is said, conveyed to one Bates; it will therefore also be necessary to ascertain that the land proposed to be conveyed to Government does not include any portion of the 89 acres lot.

I have borrowed from Mr. Levy an original deed, wherein these lands are set out in a plan which may perhaps assist the surveyor in identifying them, if he will call upon me and inspect it.

I beg to remind you that I have not yet received the description and surveyor's certificate of the identity of the parcels for which I wrote to you on the 21st ultimo, and that without them I am unable to prepare a conveyance of the lands purchased. Mr. Benjamin, one of the vendors, is in England, and there is no sufficient power of attorney in the Colony authorizing the execution of the conveyance on his behalf. Mr. Levy, the vendors' solicitor, informs me, however, that he has written for a power of attorney from his client, and that his letter was forwarded by the April mail. He is desirous, in the meantime, that this transaction shall be completed upon Mr. Cohen indemnifying the Government, by giving a bond for the due execution of the conveyance by Mr. Benjamin. Mr. A. Cohen will at once give possession of the land, and consents to one-half the money being retained by the Government pending Mr. Benjamin's signature being obtained. CROWN SOLICITOR to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Crown Solicitor's Office,
Sydney, 10 September, 1862.*

SIR,

I have the honor to inform you that the conveyance from Messrs. Edward Cohen and David Benjamin, of land at Haslam's Creek, intended as a site for a Burying Ground, has been duly executed and is in my hands, and that the consideration money may now be paid.

I have, &c.,
JOHN WILLIAMS,
Crown Solicitor.

Will a note be made for Supplementary Estimates for the costs of fencing?
I conclude the fencing may be paid for out of the balance of the vote.
I should like to see the papers with regard to the fences.

SIR,

I am directed to request that you will have the goodness to move the Finance Minister to cause to be paid to Mr. E. Cohen, of Melbourne, as agent for Messrs. E. Cohen and D. Benjamin, the sum of £2,000, being the purchase money of certain land at Haslem's Creek, intended as a site for a General Cemetery, to be charged to the vote (£3,000) taken on the Estimates-in-Chief for the present year.

SIR,

It being desirable that steps should be at once taken for fencing-in the new General Cemetery near Homebush, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Robertson, to request that you will have the goodness to give to Mr. Cohen and the other neighbouring proprietors of land, if any, the notice that may be necessary under the law to compel them to pay their portion of the dividing fence, apprising me of the result, for the information of the Secretary for Lands.

I have, &c.,

A. COHEN, ESQ., to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Cohen's Family Hotel, Wynyard Square,
Sydney, 4 November, 1862.*

SIR,

I have just learnt, through the Crown Solicitor, that it had been represented to you, that when Mr. Moore applied to me for permission to clear about twelve feet at the side of the proposed fence for the Cemetery, I refused to give the permission unless the Government paid for it. To this statement I give the most distinct denial, such a mercenary idea never entered my thoughts, but on the contrary, I told Mr. Moore that I should be too happy to afford the Government every facility, but that before doing so I should like to go out and see that there were no large trees of value in the way, but that if there were they be left standing, as they would do the fence no harm. Mr. Moore acquiesced in the propriety of my suggestion, and he was to let me know when he would be ready to go out to see the line, as I undertook to go out with him any day he might appoint, with the exception of Saturday. Since then I have heard nothing further of the matter. I called at your office yesterday and to-day, to personally contradict the statement; but having been unsuccessful in seeing you, I write this note.

I have, &c.,

A. COHEN.

DIRECTOR OF BOTANIC GARDENS to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

*Botanic Gardens,
7 November, 1862.*

SIR,

So far as I am concerned, the statements made in the accompanying letter from Mr. Cohen are incorrect. My recollection of the matter is, that I went to Mr. Cohen and requested to know from him whether there would be any objection to the Government clearing about twelve feet of the land adjoining that purchased for a Cemetery. His reply was, in substance, that he would not give the permission sought for without first looking over the ground, as there might be some valuable timber upon it. I represented to him that I was aware that such was not the case, that I had examined the locality a day or two previously, and that I was desirous of proceeding with the work of fencing as speedily as possible. He still declined giving the required authority until he had had seen the ground. I then asked him when it would be convenient to do this, as I would accompany him; the reply was not before next week. As this would cause a delay of five days in any determination being arrived at, I considered it advisable to report the result of my interview to Mr. Secretary Robertson, and in the course of conversation with that gentlemen stated incidentally that, in my private opinion, the only object Mr. Cohen could have in at all objecting to assent to the ground being cleared was that a pecuniary advantage might be gained by it.

I have, &c.,
CHARLES MOORE.

CHART SHEWING DIVISIONAL SURVEY. SECTION N<sup>o</sup> 1 B OF THE PETERSHAM ESTATE.

Note The shaded line will convey a tolerably correct idea as to where and what the land offered to Government for a General Cemetery is near enough at all events for them to decide as to whether the locality be suitable and the quantity of land sufficient. The lot already sold could not be readily obtained when the decision in reference to the Estate is arrived at, there is apprehension against buying near a Cemetery and it does not seem that the present holders would sell at a fair price. The Main Roadway must be preserved at all events to certain extent. This however is immaterial in reference to a Cemetery for I suppose that certain portions will be allotted to the various denominations and there is a quit already between some of them.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

SYDNEY COMMON.

(NOTICE DATED 5 OCTOBER, 1811, RESPECTING.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 1 October, 1863.

*Head Quarters, Sydney,
5 October, 1811.*

GOVERNMENT PUBLIC NOTICE.

His Excellency the Governor, anxious for the accommodation of the inhabitants of Sydney, and in pursuance of the intention signified in his General Orders of the 6th October last, gives this public notice, that he has assigned and caused to be marked out and measured, a large Common in the immediate vicinity of Sydney, containing one thousand acres, for the common pasturage of the cattle belonging to the inhabitants of Sydney.

The public are to take notice that said Commonage is described by the Acting Surveyor in the following terms:—"Bounded on the west side by twenty-eight chains of Surrey Hill Farm and a south line of ninety-six chains; on the south side by an east line of ninety-seven chains; on the east side by a north line to the road leading from Sydney to the South Head; and on the north side by that road." For the purpose, however, of making said description and boundaries more clearly understood and known, the limits of said Commonage will be further marked by four posts, with suitable labels, which will be erected on the most conspicuous angles or parts thereof.

This land being thus assigned for the use of the public, no excuse can be made for persons in future turning their cattle at large to seek food where it may be most easily found, without considering whether they may not trespass on private property, and do material injury to the gardens and enclosures of other persons; and the public are therefore cautioned not to permit any horses, horned cattle, sheep, goats, or pigs, to stray in future either upon the grounds called Hyde Park, or on any private property belonging to other persons; as all cattle which may be thus found trespassing are to be taken up and put into the common pound of Sydney, until all damage done by them shall be fully discharged.

His Excellency thus communicates to the public that he will make a regular grant of said Common lands to the Judge Advocate and Magistrate of Sydney, for the time being, in trust for the benefit of the present and of all succeeding inhabitants of Sydney.

By Command of His Excellency the Governor,
J. T. CAMPBELL,
Secretary.

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL ORDERS OF 6TH OCTOBER, 1810.

In further view to the accommodation and convenience of the inhabitants of the town of Sydney, particularly of those who have horses or other cattle that they may wish to have grazing for within a short distance, it is His Excellency's intention to have a large Common marked out immediately, within as short a distance of the town as circumstances will admit, and which will be publicly notified as soon as the ground is measured and marked out.

COOK'S RIVER DAM.

---

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 November, 1863.

---

RETURN to an Order made by the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, dated 29 September, 1863, That there be laid upon the Table of this House,—

“ Copies of the Plans and Specifications, shewing the “ manner in which the works were to be performed in the “ construction of additional Flood-gates at Cook's River “ Dam ; also, copies of the Tender and Agreement of the “ person who performed the works.”

(Mr. Lucas.)

---

COOK'S RIVER DAM.

SPECIFICATION of work to be executed at Cook's River Dam.

THE works to be performed under this contract will consist:—

- 1st.—In excavating that portion of the approach to the Cook's River Dam, adjoining the present outlet and flood-gates, to the width and depth shewn on the general plan and section.
- 2nd.—In building a retaining wall to land side of cutting.
- 3rd.—In building piers and face wall to the present retaining wall.
- 4th.—In constructing a timber bridge to connect the dam with the present approach.
- 5th.—In building flood-gates.

Excavation.—The extent of the cutting is shewn and marked on the general plan and sections. The sole of the cutting shall be 1 foot above low water-mark spring tides, or 8 ft. 5 in. below the top of eastern retaining wing wall, and the rock shall be worked perfectly level, and equal to hammer-dressed masonry. Some borings have been taken to ascertain the depth of rock below the surface approximately, and are marked in the sections, but the contractors are expected to satisfy themselves about the correctness of the borings as well as of the levels, as no extra allowance will be made on account of errors in these sections. The slope for the cutting shall be  $1\frac{1}{2}$  horizontal to 1 vertical, when in soil or other loose material, and if in rock, it shall be 1 horizontal to 6 vertical, which is the batter of the retaining wall. Excavate for the retaining wall to the solid rock, which shall be made perfectly level, and stepped in regular courses, to receive the footings. Chases to receive the bottom cills of pier and frame for flood-gates shall be chiselled, and the cutting in front of cill for flood-gates shall be excavated to the level of the bottom of this cill, as shewn in the detail drawings. The material excavated shall be used for filling up all holes in the dam caused by former floods; any more excavated material, beyond what is required for the filling up of the holes in the roadway, shall be deposited in any such close proximity to the works as will be directed or approved of by the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers, or his appointed Clerk of Works. The portion of retaining wall specified hereafter to be set in cement, shall be puddled 2 feet thick clay. The embankment on dam shewn on general plan is not to be included in this contract.

Masonry.—The whole of the wall shall be carried up of axed and drafted masonry, in regular perfectly level courses, of the hardest approved sandstone, cut to the proper batter, with perfectly square joints, laid on their natural or quarry bed, in mortar consisting of half fresh shell-lime, and half pure sharp sand, mixed in equal proportions. One portion of the retaining wall, to 1 foot above high water-mark, marked specially on detail plans, and the cut-waters to old wall, shall be laid in best Portland cement, mixed in small quantities with equal portions of sand; the cement will be required to set perfectly hard, and to fill up perfectly every joint throughout the whole thickness of the wall. The retaining wall shall be 3 ft. 6 in. thick at half-tide mark; to be carried up perpendicular at back, and with a batter of 2 inches to the foot in front and at the returns. All face stones shall be not less than 10 cubic feet; headers shall be used throughout the wall, in each course, at intervals not exceeding 8 feet; stretchers shall be not less than 18 inches in width, set close back to back, so that no spaces are required, or interstices of more than 1 inch left in the heart of the wall; the joints shall be properly broken, and not less than 9 inches bond will be allowed in any case.

The face wall to old wall shall consist entirely of headers to the height of the old wall, and bond stones shall be introduced, in each course, at intervals not exceeding 8 feet, to enter at least 1 foot in depth into old wall; these are to be laid in cement, well secured and wedged up in old wall. The cut-waters shall be formed of larger stones, in approved bond; no joint shall be made at the point. The coping courses, in all cases, shall be all headers, jointed with cement, and not less than 18 inches in height, nor less than 3 feet wide.

Frame-work for Flood-gates—shall be constructed of 12 in. x 12 in. ironbark, let into the stone at each end, in accordance with the detail drawings, secured together with 3 in. x  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. malleable iron straps, and  $\frac{7}{8}$ -in. screw-bolts, as shewn. The uprights shall be morticed into top cill, and notched into bottom cill; the centre upright shall be 9 in. x 16 in., secured at top with 3 in. x  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. iron angle straps, and three  $\frac{7}{8}$  screw-bolts, forked out at bottom for cill of wood pier, and secured with 3 in. x  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. angle strap, one  $\frac{3}{4}$  in. x 6 in. driving-bolt, and one  $\frac{7}{8}$  screw-bolt through fork and cill of pier, as shewn on plan; scarf in cill and head where shewn to be 4 feet long, the faces planed up, and secured with a key and two  $\frac{7}{8}$  screw-bolts each; the faces meeting the gates shall be planed up, so as to afford an even bedding for the flaps; the bottom cill shall be properly fitted and made water-tight, with oakum and tar well driven into the joints.

Flaps—shall be made of perfectly dry red baltic pine boards,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches thick, and not exceeding 8 inches in width, placed longitudinally and transversely; their faces and edges to be well planed up and wedged together previous to being screwed up; they shall receive two good coats of Stockholm tar on their internal as well as external faces, and shall be secured together with  $\frac{3}{8}$  in. x  $2\frac{1}{2}$  in. screws; there shall be two screws at every crossing of two planks, screwed from opposite sides, as shewn on plan; each flap shall shall be hung on two substantial hinges, forged, 3 in. x  $\frac{5}{8}$  in. thick, on both sides of the flap, with as many bolts as there are longitudinal planks. The eyebolts to receive the hinges shall be  $1\frac{1}{2}$  in., forged with a shoulder, and screwed up securely with the nuts at the back of the frame.

Pier to Bridge.—The pier supporting centre of bridge is to be framed together, as shewn in section, of 12 in. x 12 in. ironbark, the uprights and diagonals shall be morticed and notched top and bottom, as shewn, and secured to the bottom cill at centre with 3 in. x  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. strap, and two  $\frac{7}{8}$ -in. screw-bolts and two 6 in. x  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. driving-bolts, the outer battening uprights are secured to bottom cill with two  $1\frac{1}{4}$ -in. screw-bolts and nuts each. The upper fastenings securing bridge to pier consists, for the outer girders, in  $1\frac{1}{4}$ -in. anchor-bolts, with 3 in. x  $\frac{5}{8}$  in. straps, secured with 1-in. screw-bolts and  $\frac{3}{4}$ -in. driving-bolts, and for the centre girder of 1-in. anchor-bolts, with 3 in. x  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. strap, two  $\frac{3}{4}$ -in. screw-bolts, and one  $\frac{3}{4}$ -in. driving-bolts.

The intermediate or 12 in. x 6 in. girders are bolted with 1-in. bolts to the top cills. The whole pier shall be let into a chase 3 in. deep, well fitted and secured with a  $1\frac{1}{4}$ -in. lewis bolt on end, four  $1\frac{1}{2}$ -in. iron bolts 3 ft. 6 in. long well driven diagonally into holes drilled carefully into the rock.

Bridge.—The principal girders of bridge are shewn on plan to be 12 in. x 12 in. square, scarfed together at the centre; but the contractor will be at liberty to use round timbers the full length of the bridge, adzed off on top to receive the planking, and notched over cills at bottom; and such round timbers shall be perfectly straight, and not be less than 15 inches diameter at the small end. The scarf, if of square timber, shall be as shewn on general plan, secured with a 6 in. x 12 in. piece at back, and four  $\frac{7}{8}$ -in. screw-bolts. The intermediate 12 in. x 6 in. girders may overlap 3 feet at the centre, and be bolted with two  $\frac{3}{4}$ -in. bolts each; and bolted to the top cill of wood pier with 1-in. screw-bolts. The girders shall be notched over 12 in. x 12 in. cills, resting on walls at both ends, and secured with  $1\frac{1}{4}$ -in. screw-bolts for principal girders, and 1-in bolts for 12 in. x 6 in. girders.

Planking.—On top of girders should be 20 ft. 6 in. wide of 9 in. x 4 in. Colonial hardwood, the whole to be closely and evenly laid and spiked down to the girders with  $\frac{1}{2}$ -in. bolts 8 inches long, one into each plank wherever it crosses a girder, and cut opening through planking where required for rain water to escape. A stringer or guard-piece of 9 in. x 9 in., hardwood, rounded on edge, shall be bolted down over the planking at each side, as shewn, with 1-in. screw-bolts, at distances not exceeding 6 feet. The handrail shall be constructed of 4 in. x 4 in. hardwood uprights, notched out 1 inch, and spiked securely to the girders and guard-piece, morticed on top into a 4 in. x 4 in. Oregon rail, planed smoothly, and rounded on top, secured with  $\frac{1}{2}$ -in. iron straps and screws to uprights. The handrails shall be returned to the parapets of the old bridge; the uprights being morticed 15 inches into the solid stone, and wedged up. The battens, where shewn, shall be 3 in. x 2 in. let  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch into uprights secured with screws. The ends of rail on land side shall be finished as shewn on elevation.

The whole of the handrail shall be painted with three good coats of oil paint, of such colour as may be selected.

All materials or workmanship used in any part of this work shall be of the very best of their respective kinds; the timber shall be quite sound, perfectly straight, and, where shewn, truly squared; of ironbark, spotted or blue gum, blackbutt or other approved Colonial hardwood; free from knots, pipes, shakes, sap, and all other defects; all butts and joints to be neatly and closely worked, tenons to fit their mortices, planks to fit fair on their supports, and to be set up close at their edges, &c.; all bolts, nuts, spikes, nails, &c., to be of the best crown bar or cable iron, well and neatly forged; all screw-bolts and nuts to have clean and well cut threads; nuts to be  $1\frac{1}{2}$  times the diameter of the bolts in depth; washers of boiler-plate 4 in. x 4 in. x  $\frac{1}{4}$  in. to be placed under all nuts and heads.

Tarring.—The whole of the timber work to receive two good coats of Stockholm or Archangel tar, boiled with a little pitch, and laid on hot; all joints to be well tarred before they are put together; the ironwork to be coated, while hot, with pitch or black varnish.

Position of bridge.—The plans shew the bridge to be a construction on one side of the dam, but, if desired, the contractor shall construct the same in the centre of the dam, as shewn by green lines on the plans; the position of the retaining wall altering, of course, correspondingly, without any extra allowance being made on that account.

Accommodation of traffic.—The contractor shall not in any way interfere with the traffic in the dam, and shall retain a fair approach and roadway to and over the dam, the latter to be at least 20 feet wide. The gate, lodge-gates, &c., shall be carefully taken up and removed to where will be directed by the Clerk of Works.

Discrepancy in plans and specification.—Should any discrepancy be found either in the plans or specification, or the written dimensions, or should there be any ambiguity between them the same shall be referred to the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers, or the appointed Clerk of Works, whose decision shall be final; anything contained in the specification or in the drawings shall be considered as binding upon the contractor as if it had been contained in both.

SCHEDULE.

Contractors shall state in their tender a lump sum for which they intend to carry out the whole of the works, according to the plans and specification, complete, and to the entire satisfaction of the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers, and also to state, in detail, the cost of different parts of the work; all such prices being for their respective items, tarred, fixed, and fastened in place, to the entire satisfaction of the Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers.

Schedule to state cost of—

- 1st. Excavation of soil or other loose material and carrying into embankment, @ per cubic yd.
- 2nd. Excavation of rock dressed to a fair surface, @ per cubic yard, including carriage into embankment.
- 3rd. Masonry, per perch of 24 cubic feet, as specified, set in cement, including puddling.
- 4th. " " " " including mortar.
- 5th. Girders, 12 in. x 12 in. square, scarf included, or round timbers in one length, as specified, @ per foot running.
- 6th. Girders, 12 in. x 6 in., laps included, @ per foot run.
- 7th. 12 in. x 12 in. timbers in pier frame cills, &c., @ per foot run.
- 8th. 9 in. x 9 in. stringers over planking, @ per foot run.
- 9th. Planking 4 inches thick, as specified, including spikes or bolts, @ per square of 100 feet super.
- 10th. Handrail complete, including painting, @ per foot run.
- 11th. Flood-gates complete, including screws, &c., @ per square 100 feet super.
- 12th. Malleable iron, in straps, bolts, nuts, hinges, &c., @ per lb.

Minor matters.—Should it appear that any minor matters have been omitted in the plans and specification, but the intention to include which is obviously necessary for the completion and stability of the works herein specified, all such additional parts or things are to be provided by the contractor, and shall be considered as included in the contract sum, or the rates stated in the schedule.

Time of completion.—The contractor shall state in his tender the time within which he shall complete the whole of the work; and in the event of its non-completion to the satisfaction of the Engineer-in-Chief within such specified time, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of £20 sterling per week for every week that shall elapse from such specified time till its completion.

Measurement and payments.—The work shall be measured at the end of every four weeks, and payments made at the rate of 75 per centum on the value of the work actually executed and certified to by the Engineer and his Clerk of Works, estimated according to the schedule of prices to be furnished by the contractor, the balance to be retained by the Government till the work shall be finally taken off his hands, which will be in two months after its final completion, if all its parts shall then be found to be in proper and perfect condition.

The contractor will be bound to maintain the works for a period of two months after its final completion and use by the public; and if any parts should within that period shew any sign of weakness or of giving way, or should any defective workmanship or materials be detected, the contractor when called upon to do so shall make good the same at his own cost, to the satisfaction of the Engineer, before the reserved balance will be paid. Any material or workmanship the Engineer-in-Chief or his Clerk of Works may disapprove of shall be immediately removed, or if not done so within seven days after receiving notification so to remove them, the Engineer may cause the same to be removed, and deduct the cost thereof from the contractor's next instalment.

E. O. MORIARTY,
Engineer-in-Chief for Harbours and Rivers.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

ABATTOIRS AT GLEBE ISLAND.
(AMENDED ORDERS AND REGULATIONS OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 8 January, 1864.

THE accompanying copy of the Orders and Regulations concerning the Public Abattoirs at Glebe Island, made by His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, is laid upon the Table of the Honorable the Legislative Assembly, in terms of the Act of Council, 14 Victoria, No. 36.

*The Treasury, New South Wales,
8 December, 1863.*

PUBLIC ABATTOIRS AT GLEBE ISLAND.

HIS Excellency the Governor having been pleased, with the advice of the Executive Council, further to amend the Orders and Regulations concerning the Public Abattoirs at Glebe Island, as published in Treasury notice of 23rd ultimo, directs it to be notified that, in lieu thereof, the following shall be enforced from and after the 1st of January next.

GEOFFREY EAGAR.

1. The slaughter-houses shall, with the exception of six beef and six mutton slaughter-houses, be retained in the hands of the Government, for the use of persons slaughtering therein.
2. The six beef and six mutton slaughter-houses thus retained, shall be submitted to public competition by lease, at an upset price of £150 per annum for the beef, and £100 per annum for the mutton slaughter-houses.
3. An inspection fee of 3d. per head shall be charged upon every head of cattle slaughtered in the leased houses.
4. Parties desirous of using the slaughter-houses reserved by the Government, shall be permitted to do so in priority of application to the Inspector of Abattoirs, or to the Assistant Inspector of Abattoirs, and on payment of the following fees :—

	s.	d.
For every ox, cow, bull, heifer, or steer (including an inspection fee of 3d.)	1	0
For every calf (including inspection fee)	0	6
For every sheep or lamb	0	1½
For every head of swine	0	6

5. No person or persons shall slaughter or attempt to slaughter in any of the houses, without the sanction of the Inspector or Assistant Inspector of Abattoirs.
6. All fees shall be paid to the Inspector or Assistant Inspector of Abattoirs on demand, who shall pay the same into the Colonial Treasury under such directions as he or they shall from time to time receive from the Secretary of Finance and Trade.
7. Printed receipts shall be demanded by, and given to all parties paying any fees.
8. All horned cattle shall be driven in and yarded before 8 a.m.
9. All animals driven into the yards shall be counted as driven in, and the fees be payable on such computation.

10. Sheep and cattle will not be permitted to remain in the Abattoir pens for more than forty-eight hours from the time of being brought in.

11. No person shall refuse or neglect, when ordered by the Inspector of Abattoirs, to remove and destroy at once diseased cattle, or shall slaughter for food diseased cattle, or expose for sale diseased meat.

12. All blood, filth, and offal shall be removed, and each slaughter-house be thoroughly cleansed to the satisfaction of the Inspector of Abattoirs, daily, before 8 a.m.

13. The premises attached to, and the roadways in front and rear of each slaughter-house shall be kept clean by the Lessee of each slaughter-house to the satisfaction of the Inspector of Abattoirs.

14. No hide of horned cattle, if slaughtered without previous inspection by the Inspector or Assistant Inspector of Abattoirs, or spleen of horned cattle or carcase of any animal, whether inspected before slaughtered or not, shall be removed from any slaughter-house until after inspection by the Inspector or Assistant Inspector of Abattoirs.

15. No meat shall be blown in any slaughter-house; and if any meat be found blown in any slaughter-house, the owner of such meat shall be held to be the person liable.

16. No cattle, sheep, or pig, or other animal shall be slaughtered, nor shall any meat be exposed for sale between midnight of any Saturday and midnight of any Sunday, between the 1st of May and 31st of October in any year; nor shall any cattle, sheep, or pig, or other animal be slaughtered, nor shall any meat be exposed for sale between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. upon any Sunday, between the 1st of November and the 30th of April in any year.

17. The lease of the tank to contain the blood of the slaughtered animals and the washings of the slaughter-houses, shall be sold annually, or for a term of years, by public auction; if not so disposed of, the contents shall be removed in such other manner as may be deemed expedient.

18. The Lessee shall remove the contents of the tank once in every twenty-four hours, and, if taken off the Island, the contents must be removed in covered carts or covered casks.

19. The Lessee shall also keep clean the roadway in front of, over, and immediately around the tank, to the satisfaction of the Inspector of Abattoirs.

20. The Inspector or Assistant Inspector of Abattoirs may examine the tank whenever either he or they may think fit, and no person shall obstruct, delay, or hinder his or their so doing, or shall otherwise obstruct, delay, or hinder him or them in the execution of their duty.

21. Any person or persons offending against any of the orders and regulations contained in paragraphs 5, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 19, and 20, shall, for each and every offence, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding £5.

QUARTZ-CRUSHING MACHINE—MINOR KING'S PATENT.
(CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 13 April, 1864.

D. C. DALGLEISH, Esq., M.P., to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

307, Sussex-street, Sydney,
17 December, 1863.

SIR,

I have the honor to intimate to you that a patent, granted to Mr. Minor King, dated the 8th day of December, 1858, for improvements in machinery for crushing quartz and other ores, and which, with the necessary specifications and drawings, was duly registered according to law, and by a deed, dated 21st November, 1863, made between the said Minor King and myself, was assigned by him to me. It has come to my knowledge that the patent rights so secured have been infringed by the Government in a machine erected by them, without the consent of the patentee, at the Sydney Branch of the Royal Mint, in the following respects, that is to say:—

- 1st.—The cylindrical stamps or pestles fitted with a disc on the stem, which being set in motion by a cam, causes the pestle to rotate as it is raised. The pestle is also made in two parts, the lower part or shoe being made to remove when worn. This pestle is described in the specification, and shewn in the drawings accompanying the letter of registration, and distinguished by the letters J and K respectively.
- 2nd.—The screens and drip-flange arranged relatively with each other and with the mortar and pestles, as shewn and described in the said drawings and specification.
- 3rd.—The circular loose die, placed in a recess in the bed plate of the mortar, and marked I in the drawings and specification.

I have taken the earliest opportunity of communicating with you, in order that the necessary steps may be taken to protect my rights.

I have, &c.,

D. C. DALGLEISH.

Remarks on Mr. Dalgleish's letter, dated 17th December, to the Colonial Secretary, in respect to the infringement of Minor King's Patent by Government.

THE Quartz-crushing Machine at the Mint was erected after a model furnished by a mechanic, and some modifications suggested by my inspection of the machines in use on the Gold Fields of Victoria. It consists of, amongst others, the following elements:—

A cylindrical stamper, fitted on a stem, on which is fixed a disc; a cam which acts on the disc, and causes the stamper to rotate whilst being raised; stampers made in two parts, the lower part or shoe being made to remove when worn; screens and a lip or flange underneath it, arranged in respect to the stampers in a manner somewhat similar to the screen and drip-flange employed in Mr. King's machine.

Circular loose dies, placed on the bed of the mortar, though not in a recess, as in Mr. King's machine.

The above may therefore be admitted, in reply to Mr. Dalgleish's letter. It is, however, a question whether the use of these details is an infringement of Mr. King's patent rights.

My impression is, that Mr. King does not claim, in the specification attached to his patent, to be the inventor of any of the details; but rather of the combination or arrangement, as set out in his specification and drawings, of things previously known. In this case his rights have not been infringed at the Mint.

If, however, he claims a right in the rotatory stamper, it is a question whether it was not in use within the British Dominions previous to the date of the patent obtained by Mr. King in this Colony; and if it was, whether the patent obtained here can be maintained at law. (See Coryton on Patent Law, p. 132). The enclosed circular shews that it was in use in Victoria previous to the introduction there of Mr. King's machine, and for some period before that.

I have been informed by Messrs. P. N. Russell & Co., that rotatory stampers, screens, drip-flanges, and dies, have for some years past been manufactured in this Colony, and that they are now extensively used on the diggings; also, that though Mr. King has from the first been aware of this, he has made no claim in vindication of his position. Is not this sufficient to render Mr. King's right void against persons who have already adopted these details? (See Coryton on Patent Law, p. 325 and 326.) Would not any admission by the Government, of their having infringed a patent right, prejudice the case of all the many who are using machines fitted with any of these appliances, if Mr. Dalgleish should take legal proceedings against them?

Under these circumstances, I recommend that the opinion of the Crown Law Officers be taken, before any further admission be made than that which I have suggested.

The Colonial Secretary.

D. C. Dalgleish, M.P., respecting infringement of Mr. Minor King's Patent, by the Government.

I HAVE perused the papers submitted to me, also copies of Mr. Minor King's letters of registration, and the specification accompanying them; and on a full consideration of the case, I am of opinion that there has been an infringement of Mr. King's Patent by the authorities at the Sydney Branch of the Royal Mint. To use the language of Lord Chief Justice Tindal, in the case of Crane v. Price, 5 Scott, N. R. 388—"There are numerous cases of patents which have been granted, where the invention consisted in no more than in the use of things already known, the acting with them in a manner already known, the producing effects already known, but producing these effects so as to be more economically or beneficially enjoyed by the public."

The essential parts of Mr. King's invention have, it appears to me, been adopted at the Mint, and that, on the authority of the case Sellers v. Dickinson, 5 Ex. 323, is enough to constitute an infringement. An infringement, on the authority of that case, will arise not only when there is a complete adoption of all the details of any patented invention, but also where there has been a substantial adoption of it. I see nothing to lead to the conclusion that Mr. King's invention was in public use before he obtained his patent, and I cannot recommend, on the evidence before me, that the Government should litigate the matter with Mr. King or his Assignee.

Attorney General.

D. C. DALGLEISH, ESQ., M.P., to DEPUTY MASTER OF THE MINT.

307, Sussex-street, Sydney,
9 January, 1864.

SIR,

With reference to the infringement of Mr. Minor King's Patent in Quartz-crushing Machinery at the Sydney Branch of the Royal Mint, and my demands on the Government on account of such infringement, I, in the first instance, require a written acknowledgment that the Quartz-crushing Machine in use at the Mint is in the following particulars an infringement of Mr. Minor King's Patent, viz.:—By having cylindrical stamps fitted on stems on which are fixed discs, acted upon by cams, which cause the stamps to rotate as they are raised—the stamps being made in two parts, the lower part or shoe being made to remove when worn; by having the screen and drip-flange as described by King's specification and shewn in drawings attached thereto; by having the loose dies on the bed of the mortar. These being the essential parts of Mr. Minor King's Patent, I also require a name-plate, with the following inscription in raised letters, one inch in length, "King's Patent, Dalgleish Assignee", and fixed upon a conspicuous part of the machine. I do not intend to make any charge for the use of my patent at the Mint, my sole object being to assert my right as Assignee of Mr. Minor King's Patent.

You have therefore my sanction to use, at your pleasure, all of the improvements in Quartz-crushing Machinery within the Sydney Mint, for which letters of registration were granted to Mr. King, and which are fully set forth in the drawings and specifications registered in the Supreme Court Office, Sydney.

I have &c.,

D. C. DALGLEISH.

Minute by Deputy Master of Mint, on Mr. Dalgleish's letter of 9th January, 1864.

THIS letter is the result of an interview I had with Mr. Dalgleish, with a view of arranging the matter, as requested in Colonial Secretary's minute of 8th instant on Attorney General's opinion of 5th instant on this case.

The acknowledgment of the infringement should, I presume, be made by the Government, under the advice of the Attorney General.

There is no mechanical objection to the fixing of the "name-plate." If the Government approve, I will see that it is affixed as requested.

E. W. WARD.

The Hon. Colonial Secretary.

B.C., 11 January, /64.

Minute by Honorable Colonial Secretary, on Mr. Dalgleish's letter of 9th January, 1864.

THE Government will be prepared to acknowledge the infringement of the patent, if Mr. Dalgleish will suggest the form in which such acknowledgment would be satisfactory to himself. The fixing of a "name-plate" may be at once carried out. Inform Mr. Dalgleish and Colonial Treasurer, for Captain Ward's information.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

RIVERINE DISTRICT.

(PETITION, TO THE GOVERNOR, RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 2 September, 1863.

To His Excellency the Right Honorable SIR JOHN YOUNG, Baronet, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Captain General and Governor-in-Chief of the Colony of New South Wales, and Vice Admiral of the same.

The humble Petition of the Inhabitants of the Pastoral Districts, and others interested in that part of the Colony of New South Wales known as "The Riverine District,"

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners inhabit that portion of the Colony of New South Wales lying to the north of the Murray River, and bounded as follows, viz.:—On the north commencing at a point where the Culgoa River intersects the Queensland boundary, by a line forming the southern boundary of Queensland, and running due west to the South Australian boundary; on the west by a line at right angles to the last-mentioned line, being the 141st degree of longitude, and forming the eastern boundary of South Australia, to its intersection with the Murray River; on the south by the Murray River; and on the east, commencing at a point on the Murray River, a few miles east of Howlong, at or about 146 degrees 40 minutes east longitude, by a line to the junction of Houlahan's Creek with the Murrumbidgee River; thence by Houlahan's Creek to a point on that creek, and then by a line to the nearest point on the Narraburra Creek; thence by the Narraburra Creek and Cowal Lake to the junction of Bullock Creek and the Bogan River; thence by that river to its confluence with the Darling River; thence by the Culgoa River to the commencing point on the Queensland boundary:—sometimes called, "The Riverine District."

That your Petitioners have, for many years, suffered such inconvenience and hardship from the effect of legislative and administrative neglect, the result of their present practical political disability, that they humbly approach your Excellency to pray for relief; and your Petitioners would respectfully point out that the distance of Sydney from Deniliquin is 478 miles, with a twelve days' course of post, from Wentworth by course of post 740 miles, and from Perry by course of post 848 miles; that the nearest Assize Court is held at Goulburn, distant from Deniliquin 370 miles, from Moama 420 miles, from Wentworth 600 miles, from Menindie 800 miles; and that the majority of witnesses attending this Court, travel those distances on foot over trackless plains and bridgeless rivers, with considerable risk and not unfrequent loss of life, while those who can afford to do so proceed by Melbourne and Sydney, a distance to and fro of about 2,400 miles, at an expense of nearly £100; convictions are, consequently, so difficult that felonies are often compounded or silently submitted to, and even undoubted murderers have escaped through the absence of witnesses.

That your Petitioners suffer the greatest inconvenience in respect to transactions connected with the transfer and mortgage of real property, stations, stock, sheep, and wool, it being next to an impossibility to complete any such transactions within a shorter period than from six to eight weeks. Many negotiations with respect to such transactions in consequence of such delay, fall through, and entail in many instances ruinous consequences on the parties intimately connected therewith. The delay arises from the long time which elapses before the result of the usual and necessary searches in the Registry and Supreme Court Offices for incumbrances and charges on such properties can possibly be made known to the interested parties in this district, and from the long time which again elapses before such transactions can themselves be registered.

That your Petitioners are subject to great injustice in all civil actions and suits in consequence of the proceedings in such actions and suits having to be initiated and carried on in Sydney at a cost, owing to the heavy expenses connected with the attendance and loss of time of witnesses, which practically amounts to a denial of justice.

Debtors are frequently leaving the Riverine district for other colonies, but as it takes at the least three weeks to obtain from Sydney a common writ of summons, and from four to five weeks to obtain a writ of capias or ne exeat to prevent the departure of such debtors, your Petitioners are in reality without any redress, and in many instances they suffer actual and heavy loss.

That the sheep of this district amount in number to not less than 3,000,000, the cattle 100,000, and the horses 25,000; which, with stations and improvements, represent a capital of not less than five millions sterling, besides the capital invested in the towns, villages, and local trade.

That the produce sent from the district in wool and fat stock alone, amounting to more than one million sterling per annum, with an extensive and rapidly increasing return trade, gives rise to innumerable business transactions, many of them large and intricate, and your Excellency cannot fail to see that the establishment of a branch of the Supreme Court, with branches of all other Government offices in Deniliquin, has become not only an act of justice but of absolute necessity.

That this district is of a peculiar nature with peculiar requirements, consisting of immense level arid plains (sometimes 200 miles across), without surface water. This immense tract of plains (400 miles long by 350 miles broad) is intersected by five great watercourses, of which two are in summer only lines of precarious water-holes, and the remainder full of serious impediments to navigation.

That the efforts and capital of the flockmasters have hitherto been confined to the country in the neighbourhood of the watercourses, but that they would occupy the entire area, capable of carrying 20,000,000 of sheep, were the country opened up for them.

That to canalize and clear these rivers, so as to obtain at once lines of communication and a permanent supply of water, besides opening up, by means of wells and tanks, &c., 1,000 miles of public road across the great plains, very large sums of money must be expended.

That the inhabitants of the eastern portion of the Colony will naturally have strong objections to pay interest upon a debt of some millions sterling, for works from which they will derive no benefit whatever.

That your Petitioners have equal objections to paying for railways which they can never use, as they neither export nor import nor transact any business whatever through the New South Wales seaboard. That your Petitioners are conscious that the debt and expenses of Government of 20,000 inhabitants of this district will be much greater in proportion than those of the 350,000 inhabitants of the seaboard, and they respectfully propose that each be charged with the interest of the future debt incurred for their particular benefit, and that a retrospective account may be taken, as in the case of Queensland, to ascertain upon what amount of the present debt this district should pay interest.

That your Petitioners would respectfully point out that a Government Resident will be required to communicate with the central Government to overlook the branch departments of public money, also that it will be necessary to define the district under his jurisdiction and liable for the local debt, and your petitioners would respectfully point out the expediency of establishing this as a distinct district with defined boundaries, on the same footing as Port Phillip before separation, with a Superintendent, possessing however sufficient power to prevent the constant reference to head-quarters which caused so much delay and discontent.

That while the property of your petitioners is so large, their annual produce being more than one million sterling, their population is under 20,000, and their representation being in the ratio of 20,000 to 350,000, they are practically disfranchised. Your petitioners would respectfully submit that, taking into consideration their isolation and distance from the seat of Government, and their large property, ten members would not be more than a fair amount of representation.

That the Riverine district is at present principally occupied by pastoral tenants of the Crown, and while pre-eminently adapted for grazing purposes, is almost totally unfit for agriculture, consisting, as it does, of immense plains subject to severe droughts and hot winds, which set in so early in summer, and are of such a scorching nature and of such frequent recurrence, that only the hardiest of the native herbs are able to survive their withering influence, and all attempts to cultivate the ordinary crops are rendered abortive; indeed it is now an axiom of universal recognition here that where the salt-bush grows there cereals will not flourish.

That notwithstanding these facts, legislation has regarded these lands as equally adapted to agricultural settlement as those of the more favoured portions of the Colony. That your Petitioners, having had two years experience of the Crown Lands Act of 1861, while admitting that they may be admirably adapted for developing the resources of other regions of the Colony, beg respectfully and advisedly to state that they are in many of their provisions so prejudicial to the Riverine District that unless some few, but most important amendments, are speedily made, the pastoral interest will be so materially damaged, that the prosperity of the district will be destroyed, and all classes of the community will be involved in one common ruin.

That your Petitioners would wish that every opportunity should be given to the cultivators, and that they should have the most ample scope for selecting lands for any purpose which they may imagine would be profitable; but your Petitioners would point out that there are thousands of miles of salt bush plains which can be turned to account as pasture only. That to throw these open for conditional purchase would be no benefit whatever to the bonâ fide agricultural settler, but would lay the pastoral tenant open to such extortion and persecution as was practised lately at the Tataila run, on the Murray, by a pretended agriculturist. He took up forty acres of land, at an expense of £10, and at once impounded the imported bulls and other stock belonging to the lessee, as they passed between his pegs to water, levying the sum of £35 2s. 6d., as the amount of damage he had sustained thereby.

by

That your Excellency will find that the amendments in the said Lands Acts, as craved by your Petitioners in their prayer hereto, are calculated not only to increase the security of the tenure of the pastoral tenant of the Crown, but also to place in a far better position the bonâ fide conditional purchaser, giving him a pre-emptive right of purchase over land twice the size of that conditionally purchased, thereby securing to him exclusive occupation thereof, in lieu of a pre-emptive right of lease over three times the area of the land conditionally purchased, which has proved nothing but a delusion and a snare—because within twenty-four hours of acquiring the pre-emptive lease, the land over which such lease extends may be conditionally purchased by another free selector, who in his turn would be deprived of his pre-emptive lease as soon as he had the misfortune to have a conterminous neighbour.

THEREFORE YOUR PETITIONERS HUMBLY PRAY—

That the Riverine province may be defined by the following metes and bounds, viz.:—On the north, commencing at a point where the Culgoa River intersects the Queensland boundary, by a line forming the southern boundary of Queensland, and running due west to the South Australian boundary; on the west by a line at right angles to the last-mentioned line, being also the 141st degree of longitude, and forming the eastern boundary of South Australia, to its intersection with the Murray River; on the south by the Murray River; and on the east commencing at a point on the Murray River, a few miles east of Howlong, at or about 146 degrees 40 minutes east longitude, by a line to the junction of Houlahan's Creek with the Murrumbidgee River; thence by Houlahan's Creek to a point on that creek, and then by a line to the nearest point on the Narraburra Creek; thence by the Narraburra Creek and Cowal Lake to the junction of Bullock Creek and the Bogan River; thence by that river to its confluence with the Darling River; thence by the Culgoa River to the commencing point on the Queensland boundary; and that the same be proclaimed a district of New South Wales.

That a Government Superintendent may reside at Deniliquin.

That a branch of the Supreme Court, with judge, officers, and all its appendages, may be established at Deniliquin.

That a Registrar's office may be established at Deniliquin.

That a branch Land and Survey office and Commissioner of Crown Lands office, and all other public offices may be opened there also.

That a sufficient loan may be at once raised for canalizing and clearing the Darling, and clearing the Murrumbidgee and Murray Rivers (precedence being given to the clearing and canalizing of the Darling), and for erecting necessary public offices and other improvements.

That after providing for the support of local government and judicial institutions, &c., and the payment of the fair quota of the cost of the postal service, and of the expense of the general government, and of the interest on the Colonial debt, the balance of the revenue of the Riverine province, as well as the money borrowed in behoof thereof, may be expended therein upon public works under the supervision of local boards.

That the Riverine province may be divided into ten electoral districts, each returning one member to the Legislative Assembly.

That in lieu of a pre-emptive lease of an area thrice that of the land conditionally bought, the conditional purchaser may be granted an indefeasible lease for fourteen years, with an absolute pre-emptive right over an area of twice that of the land conditionally bought; but that the land, purchased by the conditional purchaser, and held by such pre-emptive lease, shall be securely fenced within two years from the date of such selection, and that until such fencing be made and completed no power of impounding off such land by such purchaser shall exist or be allowed.

That the leases to which holders of runs are entitled under the Crown Lands Occupation Act of 1861, may be made renewable leases at the expiration of the term granted by said Act, and that the rent payable during such renewed term may be fixed by appraisalment to be made periodically by arbitration, until the lands are required for sale or for any other public purpose; and that the power of making reserves within which free selection, as it is now known, will apply, should be continued undisturbed, provided that all such reserves so made shall be submitted to Parliament within one month, if the same be in session; if not in session, within one month of the assembling of the House; and that no permissive occupation may be allowed until the sanction of Parliament be obtained; and that such sanction may not be given until three months after the matter has been brought under the notice of Parliament, and three months' notice has been given to the lessee or lessees on whose run or runs the proposed reserves are to be made.

That upon reserves made upon any of the said runs becoming conditionally occupied by free selection, or otherwise alienated, the lessee of such runs shall receive compensation, by appraisalment of its market value as pasture, for the loss of the portions so occupied from an assurance fund to be raised by general assessment on all station holders, on the same plan as the Scab Assessment is raised.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

[Here follow 1261 Signatures.]

[REPLY.]

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 1 September, 1863.*

GENTLEMEN,

I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to acquaint you that the petition which was presented by you, on the 3rd ultimo, as a deputation from the inhabitants of the District of Deniliquin and the surrounding country, has been carefully considered by the Government, and that the following decision has been arrived at, upon the various matters referred to in that document.

2. With reference to the first proposition, I am to inform you that the Government is not prepared to recognize the necessity of defining any portion of the existing Colony of New South Wales as a separate Province.

3. As regards the second proposition, the Government is of opinion that the appointment of a Government Superintendent, to reside at Deniliquin, would rather impede than expedite the transaction of the public business by the Government departments.

4. In respect to the desire expressed that a branch of the Supreme Court with judge, officers, and all its appendages, may be established at Deniliquin, I am to acquaint you that the question of increased facilities for the administration of justice in the more remote districts has for some time engaged the attention of the Government, and a proposal with that object will shortly be submitted to Parliament; but the establishment of a Registrar's office, separate and distinct from that at Sydney, besides being surrounded with difficulties which seem insuperable, would be likely to complicate transactions which it is intended to assist.

5. In reply to your request that a branch Land and Survey Office, and Commissioner of Crown Lands Office, and other public offices may be opened at Deniliquin, I am also instructed to intimate that the Government has already provided District Survey Offices for the more important divisions of the Colony, and there will be no objection to extend the number of such offices to other districts from time to time, if it be shewn that the expense of such establishments can be justified.

6. The Government has already directed its attention to the improvement of the navigation of the Darling, Murrumbidgee, and Murray Rivers; and Parliament will be invited to make further appropriations from time to time, as such expenditure may be considered expedient after proper surveys and investigation.

7. The Government is also prepared to recognise the justice of a fair distribution of the General Revenue of the Colony, throughout its various districts.

8. In the event of any re-adjustment of the representation of the Colony being necessary, by its increased population, due consideration will be given to those districts whose claims may be established to the satisfaction of Parliament.

9. With respect to the remaining portions of the Petition, I am directed to add, that there do not seem to be sufficient reasons set forth to induce the Government to ask the Legislature, at present, to sanction alterations in the Land Laws of the Colony, these laws appearing to have met a most difficult and complicated question, in a manner calculated to give the greatest amount of advantage to each class interested, at the least amount of inconvenience or impediment to any other class. The Government entertains no doubt that the request for continuous renewals of leases will be accorded on a re-appraisal of the rental for each five years; a course the less objectionable from the fact that under the present law, all lands the leases or renewals of leases of which may have been, or may be promised subsequently to the 22nd February, 1858, are notwithstanding such leases, open to sale conditionally or unconditionally.

10. The Colonial Secretary further directs me to assure the inhabitants of the district of Deniliquin, and the surrounding country, that the Government is at all times prepared to give the fullest consideration to any representations having for their object the attaining of redress for any grievances under which they may be suffering. Differing from the Petitioners as to the character of the country described by them, and not admitting that that country is totally unfit for agriculture, and that all attempts to cultivate the ordinary crops must be abortive, the Colonial Secretary begs to assure them that the Government will be ready, cheerfully, and to the extent of its power, to afford every facility for increasing the population, and for developing the resources of this valuable part of the Colony.

I have, &amp;c.,

W. ELYARD.

GIDEON S. LANG, ESQ.,
and the other Gentlemen of the Deputation, from the District of Deniliquin, and the surrounding Country.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 4 September, 1863.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the Inhabitants of the Pastoral Districts, and others interested in that part of the Colony of New South Wales known as "The Riverine District,"

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

This immense tract of plains (400 miles long by 350 miles broad) is intersected by five great watercourses, of which two are in summer only lines of precarious water-holes, and the remainder full of serious impediments to navigation.

That the efforts and capital of the flockmasters have hitherto been confined to the country in the neighbourhood of the watercourses, but that they would occupy the entire area, capable of carrying 20,000,000 of sheep, were the country opened up for them.

That to canalize and clear these rivers, so as to obtain at once lines of communication and a permanent supply of water, besides opening up, by means of wells and tanks, &c., 1,000 miles of public road across the great plains, very large sums of money must be expended.

That the inhabitants of the eastern portion of the Colony will naturally have strong objections to pay interest upon a debt of some millions sterling, for works from which they will derive no benefit whatever.

That your Petitioners have equal objections to paying for railways which they can never use, as they neither export nor import nor transact any business whatever through the New South Wales seaboard. That your Petitioners are conscious that the debt and expenses of government of 20,000 inhabitants of this district will be much greater in proportion than those of the 350,000 inhabitants of the seaboard; and they respectfully propose that each be charged with the interest of the future debt incurred for their particular benefit, and that a retrospective account may be taken, as in the case of Queensland, to ascertain upon what amount of the present debt this district should pay interest.

That your Petitioners would respectfully point out that a Government Resident will be required, to communicate with the central Government, to overlook the branch departments of public offices, also that it will be necessary to define the district under his jurisdiction and liable for the local debt; and your Petitioners would respectfully point out the expediency of establishing this as a distinct district, with defined boundaries, on the same footing as Port Phillip before separation, with a Superintendent, possessing however sufficient power to prevent the constant reference to head-quarters which caused so much delay and discontent.

That while the property of your Petitioners is so large, their annual produce being more than one million sterling, their population is under 20,000, and their representation being in the ratio of 20,000 to 350,000, they are practically disfranchised. Your petitioners would respectfully submit that, taking into consideration their isolation and distance from the seat of Government, and their large property, ten Members would not be more than a fair amount of representation.

That the Riverine District is at present principally occupied by pastoral tenants of the Crown, and while pre-eminently adapted for grazing purposes, is almost totally unfit for agriculture, consisting, as it does, of immense plains subject to severe droughts and hot winds, which set in so early in summer, and are of such a scorching nature and of such frequent recurrence, that only the hardiest of the native herbs are able to survive their withering influence, and all attempts to cultivate the ordinary crops are rendered abortive; indeed it is now an axiom of universal recognition here, that where the salt-bush grows there cereals will not flourish.

That notwithstanding these facts, legislation has regarded these lands as equally adapted to agricultural settlement as those of the more favoured portions of the Colony. That your Petitioners, having had two years experience of the Crown Lands Acts of 1861, while admitting that they may be admirably adapted for developing the resources of other regions of the Colony, beg respectfully and advisedly to state that they are in many of their provisions so prejudicial to the Riverine District, that unless some few but most important amendments are speedily made, the pastoral interest will be so materially damaged, that the prosperity of the district will be destroyed, and all classes of the community will be involved in one common ruin.

That your Petitioners would wish that every opportunity should be given to the cultivators, and they should have the most ample scope for selecting lands for any purpose which they may imagine would be profitable; but your Petitioners would point out that there are thousands of miles of salt bush plains which can be turned to account as pasture only. That to throw these open for conditional purchase would be no benefit whatever to the bonâ fide agricultural settler, but would lay the pastoral tenant open to such extortion and persecution as was practised lately at the Tataila run, on the Murray, by a pretended agriculturist. He took up forty acres of land, at an expense of £10, and at once impounded the imported bulls and other stock belonging to the lessee, as they passed between his pegs to water, levying the sum of £35 2s. 6d. as the amount of damage he had sustained thereby.
by

That your Honorable House will find that the amendments in the said Land Acts, as craved by your Petitioners in their prayer hereto, are calculated not only to increase the security of the tenure of the pastoral tenant of the Crown, but also to place in a far better position the bonâ fide conditional purchaser, giving him a pre-emptive right of purchase over land twice the size of that conditionally purchased, thereby securing to him exclusive occupation thereof, in lieu of a pre-emptive right of lease over three times the area of the land conditionally purchased, which has proved nothing but a delusion and a snare—because within twenty-four hours of acquiring the pre-emptive lease, the land over which such lease extends may be conditionally purchased by another free selector, who in his turn would be deprived of his pre-emptive lease as soon as he had the misfortune to have a conterminous neighbour.

THEREFORE YOUR PETITIONERS HUMBLY PRAY—

That the Riverine Province may be defined by the following metes and bounds, viz. :—On the north, commencing at a point where the Culgoa River intersects the Queensland boundary, by a line forming the southern boundary of Queensland, and running due west to the South Australian boundary; on the west by a line at right angles to the last-mentioned line, being the 141st degree of longitude, and forming the eastern boundary of South Australia, to its intersection with the Murray River; on the south by the Murray River; and on the east commencing at a point on the Murray River, a few miles east of Howlong, at or about 146 degrees 40 minutes east longitude, by a line to the junction of Houlahan's Creek with the Murrumbidgee River; thence by Houlahan's Creek to a point on that creek, and then by a line to the nearest point on the Nurraburra Creek; thence by the Nurraburra Creek and Cowal Lake to the junction of Bullock Creek and the Bogan River; thence by that river to its confluence with the Darling River; thence by the Culgoa River to the commencing point on the Queensland boundary; and that the same be proclaimed a District of New South Wales.

That a Government Superintendent may reside at Deniliquin.

That a branch of the Supreme Court, with Judge, officers, and all its appendages, may be established at Deniliquin.

That a Registrar's office may be established at Deniliquin.

That a branch Land and Survey office and Commissioner of Crown Lands office, and all other public offices may be opened there also.

That immediate and efficient steps may be taken for canalizing and clearing the Darling, and clearing the Murrumbidgee and Murray Rivers (precedence being given to the clearance and canalizing the Darling), and for erecting necessary public offices and other improvements.

That after providing for the support of local government and judicial institutions, &c., and the payment of the fair quota of the cost of the postal service, and of the expense of the general government, and of the interest on the Colonial debt, the balance of the revenue of the Riverine Province may be expended therein, upon public works, under the supervision of local boards.

That the Riverine Province may be divided into ten Electoral Districts, each returning one Member to the Legislative Assembly.

That in lieu of a pre-emptive lease of an area thrice that of the land conditionally bought, the conditional purchaser may be granted an indefeasible lease for fourteen years, with an absolute pre-emptive right over an area of twice that conditionally bought; but that the land purchased by the conditional purchaser, and held by such pre-emptive lease, shall be securely fenced within two years from the date of such selection, and that until such fencing be made and completed, no power of impounding off such land by such purchaser shall exist or be allowed.

That the leases to which holders of runs are entitled under the Crown Lands Occupation Act of 1861, may be made renewable leases at the expiration of the term granted by said Act, and that the rent payable during such renewed term may be fixed by appraisement to be made periodically by arbitration, until the lands are required for sale or for any other public purpose; and that the power of making reserves within which free selection, as it is now known, will apply, should be continued undisturbed, provided that all such reserves so made shall be submitted to Parliament within one month, if the same be in session; if not in session, within one month of the assembling of your Honorable House; and that no permissive occupation may be allowed until the sanction of Parliament be obtained; and that such sanction may not be given until three months after the matter has been brought under the notice of Parliament, and three months' notice has been given to the lessee or lessees on whose run or runs the proposed reserves are to be made.

That upon reserves made upon any of the said runs becoming conditionally occupied by free selection, or otherwise alienated, the lessee of such runs shall receive compensation, by appraisement of its market value as pasture, for the loss of the portions so occupied, from an assurance fund to be raised by general assessment on all station-holders, on the same plan as the scab assessment is raised.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

WEIGHT OF BREAD SOLD BY BAKERS.

(PETITION [No. 1.]—CERTAIN BAKERS, &c.)

---

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 November, 1863.

---

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled,
&c., &c.

We, the undersigned Bakers and others, Inhabitants of Sydney and environs, to the number of sixty-eight, most humbly approach your Honorable House, praying that you will take into your consideration such parts of the existing law affecting the baking trade as inflicts a penalty in cases where bread is found under the statute weights of two pounds and four pounds to the loaf respectively, and so modify or repeal such law as to relieve the trade in such cases as constantly arise, from the nature of the climate and its effects upon the process of baking, whereby penalties are incurred highly oppressive to your Petitioners, from causes over which they have no control.

Your Petitioners, therefore, pray your Honorable House to modify and assimilate the law of this Colony to the law as it exists in England, whereby the baker has the opportunity of supplying his customers by weight, and is not restricted, as now, in this Colony, to the weight of the individual loaf, and thereby relieve your Petitioners from a grievance which frequently presses most heavily upon them, and, at the same time, protects the public, by insuring them, at all times, full value for their money.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 November, 1863.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled,
&c., &c.

We, the undersigned Bakers and others, inhabitants of Sydney and environs, to the number of 111, most humbly approach your Honorable House, praying that you will take into your consideration such parts of the existing law affecting the baking trade, as inflicts a penalty in cases where bread is found under the statute weights of two pounds and four pounds to the loaf respectively, and so modify or repeal such law as to relieve the trade in such cases as constantly arise, from the nature of the climate and its effects upon the process of baking, whereby penalties are incurred highly oppressive to your Petitioners, from causes over which they have no control.

Your Petitioners therefore pray your Honorable House to modify and assimilate the law of this Colony to the law as it exists in England, whereby the baker has the opportunity of supplying his customers by weight, and is not restricted, as now in this Colony, to the weight of the individual loaf, and thereby relieve your Petitioners from a grievance which frequently press most heavily upon them, and at the same time protects the public by insuring them at all times full value for their money.

SUNDAY SELLING BY BUTCHERS.
(PETITION—BUTCHERS OF SYDNEY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 29 September, 1863.

To the Honorable the Speaker, and Members of the House of Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Butchers, of the City of Sydney and suburbs,—

SHEWETH :—

That formerly, and until very recently, it was the general practice of the trade to which your Petitioners belong, to open shops and carry on business during the early part of the Sabbath day.

That in pursuance and in consequence of proceedings which took place at two public meetings held in Sydney, one hundred and fourteen (114), being a large majority of all the butchers in the City and suburbs, agreed that, on and after the ninth day of May last past, they would close their places of business at 12 o'clock on each Saturday night, and would not resume business until the following Monday morning, and many others have since joined in the agreement.

That your Petitioners are convinced, from experience alone, it would highly conduce to the commercial, social, moral and religious advantage and benefit, not only of your Petitioners and those employed by them, but to the public at large, if the whole trade were, by legal enactment, prevented from carrying on business during the Sabbath day.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will be pleased to take the premises into your most favourable consideration, and give your Petitioners such relief as your Honorable House may deem expedient and proper.

And your Petitioners will ever pray.

REGULATION OF CARRIAGE INTO THE INTERIOR.
(PETITION—BATHURST.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 31 July, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the Storekeepers, Merchants, and Settlers of Bathurst,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That the commercial interests of the Western District have long and grievously suffered, from numerous cases of dereliction on the part of carriers.

That the practice of carriers securing loading when rates rule high, and then detaining it at their homesteads whilst prosecuting farming operations, involves great loss to the owners, and is frequently ruinous in its effects.

That many instances could be adduced of bills arriving at maturity before the goods have reached their destination, and that recently carriers under fictitious names have obtained property to large amounts for transmission to the interior, and have successfully absconded with the same, notwithstanding the most strenuous efforts at discovery.

That breaking bulk, waste, and negligence by carriers, have now become an every-day occurrence, and that except in mere delivery of goods committed to their charge, the terms of any contract in reference to carriage are very rarely respected.

That furthermore, carriers practise systematic fraud with perfect impunity.

That the evils now referred to have become oppressive and alarming, and that the existing law affords neither protection nor redress.

Your Petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that your Honorable House will take the above premises into your favourable consideration, with a view to the enactment of some law for the better regulation of carriage into the interior.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will every pray, &c.

SEAMEN'S LAWS AMENDMENT BILL.
(PETITION RELATIVE TO.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 14 July, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned, James Shoobert, Henry Burns, and John Campbell, of the City of Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, ship-owners, &c.,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH :—

That at a public meeting of merchants, shipowners, captains, and others, held at the Sydney Exchange, on the 3rd July instant, your Petitioners were unanimously appointed to carry out the resolutions adopted at the said meeting.

Your Petitioners therefore most earnestly represent to your Honorable House,—

That in any amendment of the present Seamen's Laws, it is necessary and in accordance with the laws of England, that provision shall be made for allowing owners or masters to engage their crews on board ship, without reference to the Government Shipping Office.

That it is desirable that all seamen shall be discharged at the Government Shipping Office only, and that no seaman be engaged under any pretext without a properly certified discharge from such office.

Your Petitioners respectfully represent, that the stringent carrying out of a law indicated in the last paragraph will effectually prevent the engaging of runaway seamen.

Your Petitioners also respectfully represent, that clause five in the proposed Seamen's Laws Amendment Act, now before your Honorable House, will, if carried into effect, be productive of continual disputes, annoyances, and litigations.

Your Petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that your Honorable House will refuse to pass the said clause.

Your Petitioners humbly request that your Honorable House will be pleased to take this Petition into your consideration, and act in such manner as to your Honorable House may seem meet in granting the desires of your Petitioners.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c., &c.

MATRIMONIAL CAUSES BILL.
(PETITION—SYDNEY.)

---

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 4 August, 1863.

---

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, at present in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Inhabitants of the City of Sydney,— SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioners have noticed, with deep regret, the rejection of the Matrimonial Causes Bill by your Honorable House.

That your Petitioners beg to state, that although certain members of a religious body have opposed the Bill, on the ground of the injurious tendency which the passing of such Bill would have on the domestic condition of the inhabitants of this Colony, yet the benefit to accrue by the passing of this Bill, to many members of this community, has been entirely overlooked.

That your Petitioners beg most respectfully to state, that there are many persons, at present residents of this Colony, to whom the adoption of the Bill would have been a most beneficial measure, as by that means they would have been enabled to free themselves from the abject misery and degradation they at present have to encounter.

That your Petitioners would most respectfully urge on your Honorable House the immediate necessity and expediency of some legislation on this matter, so as to arrest the widely-spreading crime of adultery, which at present is striking so deeply at the root of the domestic happiness of many of your Petitioners, and causing our Police Reports to teem nearly every week with cases for "maintenance" to be settled by the authorities.

Your Petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that your Honorable House will take the premises under your favourable consideration, and pass such a Bill as your Honorable House may think fit.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

HOMŒOPATHIC TREATMENT OF DISEASE IN PUBLIC

---

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 15 September, 1863.

---

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament

The Memorial of the undersigned Colonists of New South Wales,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That your Memorialists have been favourably impressed with the arguments and facts urged by scientific medical writers and practitioners on Homœopathic treatment and cure of diseases in Great Britain, on the Continent of Europe, in the United States of America, and elsewhere.

That they have observed the successful introduction of the Homœopathic use of medicine in this Colony.

That there are several educated and properly qualified medical men, who practise Homœopathy, now residing in this Colony.

That there is not any accommodation provided in the hospitals, and other such places to which public money is granted, for the treatment of patients Homœopathically.

The prayer of your Memorialists therefore is—

That in those institutions to which public money is granted for the treatment and cure of disease, wards may be set apart for the use of such patients as may desire Homœopathic treatment, and that free access may be granted to such properly qualified Homœopathic practitioners as may be appointed to visit and prescribe for these patients.

TRAFFIC IN INTOXICATING LIQUORS.
(PETITION—CITIZENS OF SYDNEY.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 22 April, 1864.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

We, your Petitioners, Citizens of Sydney, and Colony of New South Wales,—

HUMBLY SHEW:—

That the traffic in intoxicating liquors is a pernicious source of crime, immorality, pauperism, disease, insanity, and premature death; whereby not only the individuals who give way to drinking habits are plunged into misery, but grievous wrong is done to the persons and property of the citizens generally. Whereas the aforesaid traffic is destructive of health, order, industry, and the welfare of the people, individually and collectively; the public rates and taxes greatly augmented; our resources wasted; colonization and progressive civilization retarded; our present and prospective anticipations clouded by an atmosphere of woe; and what limit, if any, can grapple with the fell cause of these evils, we implore your Honorable House to consider;—also to weigh whether considerations of private gain or public revenue justify the upholding of a system fraught with such disastrous results. Your Petitioners believe a “Legislative Permissive Liquor Traffic Bill” perfectly compatible with rational liberty and the claims of legitimate commerce; and humbly pray your Honorable House to take the premises into consideration, and grant relief.—And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners having, in consequence of the dryness of the season in the year 1862, lost their crops and great numbers of their cattle, which formed the chief means of support, were unable to purchase Seed to sow their land in the year 1863.

That, in consequence of this, they have availed themselves of the liberality of the Government, in obtaining supplies of Seed Wheat and Oats on credit; the condition being that they should pay for the same in twelve months, or failing payment should incur heavy penalties.

That these payments fall due about May next; and that, in consequence of the disease known as "Rust" having destroyed the wheat crops of your Petitioners, and the continued dryness of the season having damaged their late crops, the condition of your Petitioners is little if at all better than in the year 1862.

That your Petitioners, although sincerely anxious to fulfil the obligations they have incurred, are utterly unable, in their present embarrassed circumstances, to do, being, with their families, in great distress; they therefore earnestly pray, that your Honorable House will be pleased to recommend the Government to afford such relief as it may deem expedient under the present circumstances.

No. 1.

ALEXR. B. BLACK, ESQ., to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

SIR,

Agreeably with your request, I have the honor to submit my opinion on a Bill presented by Mr. Driver, intituled, "A Bill to protect the Fisheries of New South Wales." I had already closely examined all existing data bearing upon the hydrography of Australia, as well as had obtained the oral testimony of men engaged in fishing pursuits, and sailors in the coasting trade, in order to acquire as far as the very imperfect data at command would permit, a knowledge of the temperature, strength, and limits of the currents which run in the surrounding seas, for the purpose of enabling me to judge, by inference, whether there were any banks, and where situated, likely to afford feeding and breeding grounds for the numerous varieties of non-migratory fishes (scarcely known) which inhabit these seas, and also to discover the proper spots on the coast where fishing vessels could, with the greatest advantage, intercept the vast shoals of very valuable migratory fishes which periodically traverse our shores, from Wilson's Promontory into the tropics, on their way to spawning grounds, which lie in the shallow bays, inlets of the sea, and estuaries of rivers, which so numerous indent the coast. Moreover I have in addition taken considerable pains to revise the information thus obtained, and to extend my inquiries on this subject, amongst practical men of every description, in order to ascertain whether any peculiarity existed in the method of spawning, or in the run of the fish, i.e., in the migratory instincts of the fish on the coast of New South Wales, different from the well-known migratory instincts of fish elsewhere, to justify the arbitrary division in the first clause of the Bill into winter and summer months, as follows:—"The winter months shall comprise the period extending from and inclusive of the 1st day of May to and inclusive of the 30th day of September, and the summer months shall comprise the period from and inclusive of the 1st day of October to and inclusive of the 30th day of April in every year," instead of clearly specifying the natural seasons which the habits of each particular kind of fish point out; and I find no peculiarity exists to warrant such a division.

With respect to the 2nd clause of the Bill it is so extremely vague as to be utterly impracticable for the purpose intended. For instance, there are many kinds of fish fit for food which do not exceed, at maturity, the size of the fry of other fishes, and which the dimensions proposed for the mesh of the net would prevent the catch thereof, e.g., the sprat, the sardine, the pilehard, the herring, and salmon nets differ in size of mesh and other dimensions from each other. Indeed the dimensions of salmon nets vary in different rivers, and even in certain parts of the same river; so also does the close time. Again, all fish are not in season at the same time. I also fail to discover that any physical peculiarity exists in the conformation of the coasts, rivers, or the estuaries thereof, to render the proposed dimensions of the net imperative throughout the Colony, e.g., in Great Britain, in other parts of Europe, and in America, the dimensions of the mesh and of the net for each kind of fish, and for particular localities, are minutely specified by law, and the reasons for doing so are distinctly pointed out.

It may not, perhaps, be considered out of place, to give an example of what I mean from the English Acts, in which even the size of the fish is specified, and the restrictions as regards the size of the nets, and the lucid way in which the size of the mesh is explained, beyond the possibility of a quibble, is worthy of note and of imitation by any who may be induced to frame Acts of Parliament upon this subject. They are as follows:—

13th Edward I., stat. 1, c.47. It provides "That certain rivers, which are specified, wherein salmons be taken, shall be in defence for taking salmons from the nativity of our Lady until St. Martin's Day, and that likewise young salmons shall not be taken nor destroyed by nets, nor by other engines at millpools, from the midst of April unto the nativity of John Baptist." It assigns overseers to enforce the above enactments; and the third offence one year's imprisonment, "and as the trespass increaseth so shall the punishment."

I. Elizabeth, c. 17, "for the Preservation of the Spawn." This Act is intituled, "An Act for Preservation of Spawn and Fry of Fish." The preamble is as follows:—
 "For preservation hereafter of spawn, fry, and young breed of eels, salmons, pikes, and of all other fish which heretofore hath been much destroyed in rivers and streams, salt and fresh, within this realm, inasmuch that in divers places they feed swine and dogs with the fry and spawn of fish; and otherwise, lamentable and horrible to be reported, destroy the same to the great hindrance and decay of the commonwealth," enacts "that no person or persons of what estate, degree, or condition soever, he or they shall be of, from and after the 1st day of June next, coming with any manner of net, weele, bul, taining, kepper, lime, crele, raw, fagnet, trolnet, teimenet, trimboat, stalboat, weblistler, seur, lammet, or with any device or engine made of hair, wool, line, or canvass, or shall use any troling net or trimboat, or by any other device, engine, cawtal, ways or means whatsoever, heretofore made or devised, or hereafter to be made or devised, shall take and kill any young brood, spawn, or fry of eels, salmon, pike or pikerel, or of any other fish in any floodgate, pipe, at the tail of any mill, wear, or in any straits, streams, brooks,

“ brooks, rivers, fresh or salt, within this realm of England, Wales, or Berwick, or the marches thereof; nor shall from and after the 1st June next, coming by any of the means or ways aforesaid or otherwise, in any river or place above specified, take and kill any salmon or trouts, not being in season, being kepper salmones or kepper trouts, shedder salmones or shedder trouts.”

Sec. 2. “ That no person or persons, of what estate, degree, or condition he or they shall be of, from and after the 1st day of June, by any of the means aforesaid, in any of the rivers or places abovenamed, shall take and kill any pike or pikerel, not being in length ten inches or more, nor any salmon not being in length sixteen inches or more, nor any trout not being in length eight inches or more, nor any barble not being in length twelve inches or more,” &c.

The penalties—£1 and loss of tackle, &c., for first offence; £5 for second, and imprisonment—a heavy fine in those days.

One of the sections provides penalties for neglect of duty in stewards of leets and juries thereof (a highly useful section if applied generally in this Colony).

30th year of Charles 2, c. 9. This is merely a local Act for the preservation of the Severn. Nets are not to be used, “ the mesh whereof shall be under two inches and a half square by the standard, and not extended—that is to say two inches and a half square from knot to knot, allowing to each mesh four knots—or which shall be above twenty yards in length and two yards in breadth or depth in any part of the said River Severn, from Ripple Lockstake, on the edge of the said County of Worcester, to Gloucester Bridge, which is upon the said River Severn; or above fifty yards in length in any part of the River Severn below Gloucester Bridge, and six yards in breadth or depth in the wing of the net, or shall fish with more than one of these nets at any one time—that is to say, with two nets or more fixed together—shall forfeit the sum of £5.

It must be obvious to every one that it is advisable to prevent the destruction of the fry of esculent fishes, and also to protect the spawning fish; but I believe that the Bill in question is not in any way calculated to accomplish this object; indeed, in so far as the establishment of fisheries in the Colony is concerned, the said Bill will have the effect of retarding and discouraging, instead of fostering the same.

I submit, with great deference, that much more information is required to legislate on such an important branch of industry as are fisheries to a maritime country, than will be deduced from the Honorable the Assembly, if such a peurile, ill-considered Bill is submitted to them as the one upon which I have the honor to report.

Perhaps on no other subject of equal magnitude to the interests of a maritime country is such wide and varied information necessary to guide its discussion.

I have, &c.,

ALEXR. B. BLACK.

No. 2.

ALEXR. B. BLACK, ESQ., to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

17 July, 1862.

SIR,

In compliance with your request, I have the honor to submit to Government the method of regulating the Oyster Fishery, which I conceive will be most conducive to the interests of the Colony.

My opinion is based, firstly—on a minute investigation of the Colonial system of oyster fishing;

Secondly—On a personal acquaintance with the oyster fisheries of France, Britain, and America, to which, in support of my views, it will be necessary to refer;

And lastly—On a perfect knowledge of the habits and economy of the fish.

The natural consequence of no close season being observed, nor any law or usage existing to prevent the beds being disturbed at any time, and the oyster fished before it has arrived at maturity, will be its speedy extirpation.

Indeed I am credibly informed that in some parts, where the oyster formerly abounded, it has already either become extinct, is now rarely found, or has deteriorated.

In certain parts of the Colony a most pernicious practice exists, of fishing at all seasons for the live oyster, to use for making lime; if this is not put a stop to, or the season for fishing, which will be least injurious to the breeding oyster and the brood, distinctly specified by law, it will soon cease to exist in those localities. For not only is the breeding oyster destroyed by this practice, but the cultch covered with spat is removed, thereby depriving of its natural bed the brood of any oyster that may escape. Hence it either falls on a bed ungenial to its habits, or is carried away by currents; in either case it is inevitably lost. The proprietors of oyster fisheries in Britain pointed out a fact, subsequently fully confirmed by the observation of naturalists, that removing the cultch, or disturbing it at an unseasonable time, not only renders the bed less genial to the oyster, but promotes the development of mollusca and annelida, antagonistic to it, which having once obtained a footing by the agency of man, and their natural prey, the oyster, affording abundance of food, they propagate rapidly, and speedily usurp the bed, thus materially aiding and finally completing the destruction commenced by man.

The argument may be used, that the oyster is so abundant in this Colony, and so prolific, that no apprehension need be entertained of the supply ever failing, therefore there is no necessity for placing any restrictions whatever on this fishery.

This

This argument, however, cannot be borne out by facts, and I do not think it will be supported by anyone who has fully considered the subject; indeed, apart from the close season, the enactment of laws for regulating the fisheries and defining the rights of fishermen, has invariably proved of essential value to the interest of all maritime nations.

In order to substantiate my opinion, I will refer to the example afforded by the British fishery. At an early period of the history of England, in consequence of the supply of oysters failing, it was deemed necessary to enact laws, similar to those now in force, for the purpose of checking the decline of the oyster, encouraging the breeding of the fish, and fostering the general fishery. To accomplish this object, vested rights were granted to certain suitable spots, set apart for the purpose of artificially breeding and rearing the oyster; and laws were passed, clearly specifying the close season, the time for removing the spat, and the marketable size of the oyster. Certain other immunities were granted, which however proved to be, when the fishery was fairly established, unnecessary and objectionable monopolies, and therefore have been abolished. The wisdom of these measures, modified to suit the time, has been conclusively proved by long trial.

The Oyster Fishery Laws of Britain are based on a thorough practical knowledge of the natural history of the fish, and although most rigorously enforced, give universal satisfaction.

The opponents to legislation on this subject may urge that laws applicable to Britain—an old and thickly populated country, perhaps not very productive of oysters—are not suitable to a new and thinly inhabited Colony, where oysters abound. This argument, in its broadest sense, however, is refuted by the Oyster Fishery Laws of America. In that country oysters are found in greater abundance, and are more generally distributed than in this Colony, yet, notwithstanding, several of the States were early admonished, by the extermination of the oyster in parts, and by a general decline of the produce of the fishery, of the necessity of framing laws for its preservation as well as for the better regulation of the fishery.

With this end in view, Federal, State, and Municipal laws have been enacted, based on, and not dissimilar to those of Britain, yet so modified as to suit each particular district, of a sea board possessing the variety of climate experienced between the latitudes of 26° and 40° north, and between the longitudes of 67° and 99° west. And the difference of the temperature of water found to exist between the Gulph Stream, running along the coast as far north as Cape Hatterass, when it diverges, and the Labrador current flowing south along the coast to the same point. Nowhere else are the inhabitants of the Polar Seas brought into such close proximity with those of the Tropics. These fishing regulations are so suitable to circumstances that the oyster, when in season, is sold so cheap, and being fed on artificial beds, is of so delicious a quality, that cooked in a variety of ways it forms an economical and nutritious dish, common at the table of every poor as well as rich man, consequently the Oyster Fishing Laws are in strong favour with the public. Indeed the quantity of oysters consumed in America is barely credible; and it is said the capital embarked in this fishery, which is of great national importance, is very productive.

The States of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, and Maryland, greatly encourage the oyster fishery, especially the formation of breeding and feeding beds. The supply of brood and stock oysters, required by these beds, as well as supplying the internal and export trades, furnish with constant employment a magnificent fleet of fast sailing schooners, manned by several thousand seamen. The oysters are procured from Long Island Sound, the shores of New Jersey, the Chesapeake, the Delaware, and the shores of the Carolinas.

The States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Texas, have municipal laws only, which prohibit the sale of oysters during the spawning season; these laws, however, are strictly enforced from about the middle of April to the beginning of October. At the commencement of the latter month may be seen assembled at New Orleans many hundreds of fast sailing boats, of a peculiar construction, and single lug-rigged (locally named pirogue), varying in capacity from thirty to sixty barrels, and each laden with the bivalve, which are sold at 70 to 100 cents per barrel. These are procured from the enormous continuous beds which line the northern and western shores of the Gulph of Mexico, and the numerous bayoux and bays which intersect and penetrate every part of the lower delta of the Mississippi.

The municipal authorities, anxious to foster a fishery which contributes so much to the health of the inhabitants, have cut several expensive boat canals to facilitate the means of communication between the Mississippi and the oyster beds. These canals are defended by flood-gates, and kept in repair by a small toll on each laden boat.

Many wooden "shanties," for the sale of oysters, dot the Levec, for which a small rent is charged by the municipality, and oysters saloons are almost as abundant in that city as grog-shops are in Sydney. In these establishments the bivalve is cooked in every conceivable way, and supplied so cheaply, that a basin of excellent oyster soup, and a small roll, are sold at five cents.

Although five months during summer the sale of the fresh oyster is prohibited, yet in the fishing season it is preserved in various ways, in kegs, jars, and tins, and consumed largely by the inhabitants during the prohibited months. In its preserved as well as in its fresh state, it constitutes a considerable article of trade with Havannah, as well as with the inland American towns; and perhaps in summer there is not a more delicious, wholesome, and nutritious article of diet than the preserved oyster.

With respect to the French oyster fishery, that government has taken upon itself the duty of constructing artificial oyster beds, and of cultivating the oyster for the general good. These recent and laudable efforts to promote her fisheries, have been attended with the most beneficial and successful results, to which, however, I need not further refer, as a detailed account of the proceedings has been disseminated by the periodicals.

As I have now conclusively shewn that, to prevent the extermination of the oyster, it is indispensable to protect it during its spawning operations, and also to prevent the bed or cultch from being removed or unseasonably disturbed.

I shall now proceed to point out the mode which, in my opinion, is best adapted to promote the development of the oyster fishery in this Colony, having due consideration for the interests of those at present engaged in this occupation.

It is alleged by dealers that oysters of different localities spawn at different periods; this in a measure may be true, but not I think to the extent alleged. It is a fact, however, that, by increasing the temperature of water, spawning is accelerated, and vice versa; also, that the oyster of deep water attains maturity sooner than its fellow of shallow water. As this question materially affects the interests of the fishery, it should at once be set at rest. Therefore a competent person should be appointed to examine, with a powerful microscope, once or twice a month, a few oysters taken off several beds in each locality—this examination to be continued for one year. From data thus obtained the exact spawning time of each locality will be determined; and the localities found to agree in their time of spawning, should be classed in districts, and the close season to be observed in each district, with that portion of it allotted for collecting spat for transmission to artificial beds, must be distinctly specified by law.

The necessity of so collecting spat will be obviated when fishermen have become fully acquainted with the less expensive mode of procuring it by culture.

Although fisheries are of paramount and of vital importance to a maritime country, yet the fisherman's occupation is more hazardous and precarious than any other. For this reason, when it has been necessary to make any alteration in the fishery laws, or create a new fishery, it has been found expedient in the one case to graduate the change so as to suit the fisherman in the other, either to create the fishery as in France, or to aid in so doing, as in Britain and America. Therefore, in order to adopt the change to the circumstances of those engaged in the fisheries, and to give them a reasonable time to stock artificial beds, the law should not be put in force until the second spawning time after the passing of the Bill (if in the present Session), or the commencement of the second spawning season after the close months have been determined.

In order to encourage fishermen to form artificial oyster beds, it will be advisable to give every facility for selecting a suitable spot, and as neither legal nor prescriptive rights exist in this Colony to bar selection of any such spot under high water-mark, either on the sea shores or on the estuaries of rivers, the part selected, wherever it may be, should at once be surveyed and its limits distinctly and permanently defined by land-marks as well as buoys, and conveyed free of charge to the selector in perpetuity, he stipulating to keep the buoys in serviceable condition, and to create the bed within a reasonable time (say three years) after conveyance to him, on pain of forfeiture. And to none but bonâ fide fishermen, or those engaged in fishing operations, should be given such grants, or be permitted to enjoy these immunities.

It is obvious that well managed artificial oyster beds will be of great value to the country, especially to the towns in whose vicinity they are. Therefore it will be advisable for this Government to imitate the example afforded by other countries, and pay, to aid in establishing this fishery, a reasonable bounty on every thousand spat, being produce of the artificial beds and in fit condition to be transferred to other beds for the first two breeding seasons after the close season has been determined.

It will be necessary, in order to facilitate the conveyance of the produce to market, that a right of way should be given from the shore opposite to the bed, as direct as possible to the nearest public road. The right which fishermen possess of plying their calling on the sea shores and banks of tidal estuaries and navigable rivers a certain distance back from high water-mark, should be distinctly known, and inasmuch as any interference with the mode of cultivating the land is not attempted, neither should there be any interference with the management of private artificial oyster beds.

No. 3.

ALEXR. B. BLACK, Esq., to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

12 November, 1860.

SIR,

I have the honor to comply with your request to be furnished with a Report upon the practicability of introducing and acclimatizing salmon in the rivers of this Colony, and its commercial value.

I have much satisfaction in putting on record, for public use, the result of my inquiries and experience, and the conclusions to which they lead me as to the wealth that would accrue to this Colony from the establishment of salmon fisheries, and the most feasible means of attaining a result in every way so desirable.

I propose, in the first place, to submit some observations on the commercial value of salmon fisheries, because I believe that the simple profit and loss aspect of the question is the one that more especially demands the attention of the colonists of New South Wales. No doubt the introduction of a new sport is desirable, and fly-fishing for game so noble as the salmon, is unquestionably a sport of the most attractive and exciting nature, but this would be merely an incidental advantage.

The

The great benefit that would be derived by the Colony from the establishment of these fisheries, results from the value of salmon as an article of commerce.

I have no hesitation in saying, that (when the conditions of a river are suited to the propagation of salmon) there is no trade that could be developed with equal ease, at so small a cost, and the fruits of which would shew so large a return upon the capital required to create it.

Persons unacquainted with the habits of the salmon, and especially with the rapidity with which it multiplies, may be unprepared to admit the results I have exhibited in the tabular tables of increase I have appended to this report. They are, however, strictly within ascertained and demonstrable facts. I have indeed, in all cases, understated the results I should have been justified in assuming. I am in a great measure, however, relieved from the necessity of vindicating the accuracy of my calculations, by the patent fact that the salmon fisheries of Scotland and Ireland yield enormous revenues to the river proprietors, whose right of fishing are amongst the most valuable appendages to their estates.

The most costly efforts have been made, from time to time, to re-stock rivers, and to introduce salmon into rivers supposed not to be their natural habitat, and when the attempt has been successful the results have been remunerative to an extent out of all proportion to the capital invested. The commercial value of these fisheries, which has thus been fully tested by private enterprise in Britain, has also been established by experiments conducted by the Government of France. It is well known that up to the year 1850, many of the rivers in France were entirely destitute, and others nearly so, of fish; since that time, by the liberal support of the Imperial Government, and the judicious management of the gentleman in charge of the piscicultural establishment, several rivers have been amply and permanently stocked, whilst in others the process is rapidly going on. Streams that, prior to the commencement of this enterprise, were utterly profitless, now afford a most remunerative field for private investment, employment to thousands of industrious persons, and a rapidly augmenting revenue, which already yields several millions of francs per annum. The new source of wealth which has been called into existence is one which none of the causes that operate to embarrass commerce and render its operations disastrous, can affect. No unforeseen accident can render the speculation ruinous, or swallow up the capital invested in it. By the steady unvarying operation of natural laws, year by year will add its increase to the marketable wealth of the Colony. Nor will these results have to be long waited for; within a period of two years and eight months from the introduction of the ova, the fisheries may be expected to become a source of profit, and the produce of the fish caught in the Snowy River, at the end of the sixth year, may be set down, I believe, at not less than £70,000 per annum.

In order to sustain these conclusions, I will endeavour to convey some idea of the marvellous increase of the salmon, both by natural and by artificial propagation—a rate of increase which I cannot doubt will be maintained in waters not dissimilar to that of its natural habitat.

I am well aware that those to whom this subject presents itself for the first time, will find it difficult to conceive that nature works on so stupendous a scale, but the ichthyologist, who is acquainted with the commercial value of salmon fisheries, will know that I am dealing not with mere hypothesis, but with facts gathered from reliable sources of information, and from statistical records of easy access.

I assume, for the present, that salmon ova is capable of being imported, and that the waters mentioned possess all the conditions necessary to the health and propagation of the fish.

Then, of 50,000 ova embarked, I do not think it at all hazardous to predict that as many as 30,000 would be landed in safety, and deposited in properly prepared breeding ponds. In these ponds, properly tended, the young fry will, in course of two years, have developed into smolt, ready to take their first journey to the sea. There, their sojourn will be from six to ten weeks, at the expiration of which time, re-entering the river, they will slowly wend their way up it, and, at the commencement of the spawning season—about eight months after their departure from the ponds—they may be expected to arrive back there, and being now in a fecund state, will select a suitable spot, in that vicinity, on which to deposit their spawn. If we assume that of 30,000 hatched ova, only one-third, or 10,000, live to return to the river, they will be what are called grilse, of about six pounds each in weight. We suppose that one-half of this number are females, each depositing 5,000 ova. Thus, at the end of two years and eight months from the commencement of colonization, the ova deposited will amount, on a low calculation, to the astonishing quantity of 25,000,000—300,000 of which must be artificially impregnated, and transferred to the ponds for the purpose of artificially rearing. Experience has established the fact, that of ova reared artificially, only a very small per centage is lost—of the remaining millions left to themselves possibly only a small proportion will survive to become grilse.

The grilse having spawned, proceeds once more leisurely to the sea, in order to recover from its exhaustion, and renew that wonderful process of marine nourishment by which, in a few weeks, it more than doubles its weight and size; and this time, after an absence of eight weeks, it returns a "first year's salmon," weighing more than twelve pounds. Its fecundity has proportionally increased, and each female will deposit as many as 12,000 ova. On its third return—"a second year's salmon"—it will weigh about twenty pounds, and the female will deposit 20,000 ova. Its fourth journey to the sea completed, it may average thirty pounds. How long this process of growth continues, or what may be attained, if the fish is not prematurely killed, are facts not ascertained. It appears however, however, after the third migration, the growth is slower. Here let me remark, that a painstaking observer will have an excellent opportunity of ascertaining correctly several points in its history, which are at present rather doubtful.

FISH—PROPAGATION OF.

The first ova, deposited about two years and eight months after the colonization of the parent, will be incubated in these waters in seventy days. Exactly two years after this date, 260,000 smolt from the breeding ponds, and, say the same number naturally reared, making in all 520,000, may be expected to leave the river on their first journey to the sea. Remaining about eight weeks in the sea they will re-enter the river about the beginning of the fifth year, to the number—allowing for loss—of say 350,000 grilse, weighing each six pounds, to begin in their turn the process of procreation, a process to go on for ever.

The following tabular statement will shew the rate of increase, year by year, to the seventh year; the number and weight of the fish, after each journey to the sea; and the common appellation of each:—

Date.	Ova in Ponds.	Ova in the River.	Grilse Weight, 6 lbs.	1st Year's Salmon, 12 lbs.	2nd Year's Salmon, 20 lbs.	3rd Year's Salmon, 30 lbs.

7th " "	300,000	"	500,000	300,000	10,000	None.

The river in the sixth year may be considered adequately stocked, and capable of furnishing an inexhaustible supply of fish.

Assuming that the fish will be as prolific in these waters as experience has proved them to be in their native streams, and that the above tabular statement is a moderate estimate thereof, the following table will exhibit the time when it will be advisable to commence fishing, with a view to open the market, and to establish the fisheries gradually as the fish increases—the number of fish, and the market value of it, that may annually be taken from the river without detriment to the process of stocking it.

At the termination of the fishing in the sixth year the total sale of fish will amount to £93,975.

There need not, I think, be any apprehension whatever felt on the subject of a market. In addition to the ordinary demand likely to arise amongst a population so numerous as that of the Australian Colonies, for a fish which is everywhere regarded as one of the most delicious of all table delicacies, it may be noted that members of the Roman Catholic Church and the Jewish Communion are numerous, and that in the season of Lent, salmon will be in prime condition. This circumstance alone will create a large demand for it: but even without looking for special demands of this kind, how few there are amongst the million of inhabitants of Australia, who will deny themselves the luxury, when it is placed within their reach? It may be expected that there is not a restaurant, or hotel of any position, that will be without its daily salmon of twenty pounds. It will constitute a standing item in the bill of fare on every table d'hote, as is now the case in the hotels and eating-houses in London, and generally throughout Britain. It is not easy to put limits to the probable consumption in private families. It is well known that any addition to the limited dietary of the Colonies, is everywhere eagerly availed of; even of imported preserved salmon, which cannot be said to retain much trace of the original flavour of the fish, there is a large consumption, at a price often much in excess of the sum I assume as the probable market value of the fresh salmon. In tins, often tainted, and never retaining beyond the faintest conceivable degree the true flavour, the preserved fish sells at something beyond this figure. That 1s. 6d. a pound will be readily realized, and that the fish sold wholesale, for preserving will be worth 1s. per pound in the market, is a moderate expectation. An average sale of one single pound for each head of the population of Australia (reckoning them in round numbers at 1,000,000) will yield a revenue of £75,000 per annum.

In assuming that the salmon of the Snowy River would command the markets of all the Australian Colonies, I have regard to tangible facts. Possibly Tasmanian salmon might appear in this market; but the Snowy River will have a decided advantage, from its entering the sea midway, and being twenty to thirty hours nearer the Sydney and Melbourne.

Melbourne markets, as also the quality and value of salmon deteriorates rapidly even in Britain, and of course much more so in such a warm climate as this. And it is my opinion that the northern rivers of Tasmania, even if suitable to propagate salmon in, will produce only a very limited supply; on the other hand, the Snowy River, from the fact of its rising in an elevated snow-clad range, near the sea, having a greater annual deposit of rain than elsewhere in these Colonies, it is, therefore, likely to have a more uniform volume of water, and maintain a lower temperature of water, in consequence of its short swift course to the sea, than any other river in all the Colonies. It also flows through a thinly populated country. All these circumstances point it out as offering a more reasonable hope of a successful naturalization of the salmon than any other river in all the Australian Colonies; and, from its peculiar position, which I have already adverted to, I have no doubt will prove to be the most valuable as a salmon-producing river.

The question may arise of the practicability of transporting salmon in a fresh state to the markets of Sydney, Melbourne, Queensland, &c.; but by packing the fish in ice, and using a small screw yacht, fitted up as an ice-house, the difficulties of the case will be obviated, and establishments of ice-houses at the market-towns, and at an accessible point on the river, for the reception of the fish as caught, &c., will be part of the general arrangements necessary to turn the salmon fisheries to good practical account.

I have now given a sketch of the natural history of salmon, its commercial value, and the advantages likely to accrue to this Colony from its introduction. I now propose to describe the appliances, which I have proved by a series of experiments to be the only means there is of introducing salmon into this Colony, and an approximate estimate of the cost thereof, and, in addition, to the cost of giving the experiment a fair trial.

The frame of the apparatus to be made of bars of galvanized iron, connected by cross-bars of the shape of a frustum of a cone; spirally round this frame is a trough, one foot wide by four inches deep, divided into compartments, in which are placed the perforated and covered glass tiles to contain the ova. Two tanks, each to contain 250 gallons, the one to be placed on deck as a feeding tank, the other on the deck below the vivarium, to receive the water after passing over the ova. Inserted in the deck tank is an inch and a quarter copper pipe, well tinned, led entirely round the ice-house, whence it emerges, and is led by a flexible joint into the upper compartment of the vivarium. The water, after flowing into it, is conveyed by a pipe, inserted in the lower compartment of the vivarium, into the tank on the lower deck, whence it is thrown by a force-pump into an aerating and filtering machine; after being thoroughly subjected to both processes it is conveyed into the feeding-tank. Thus a brisk stream of cold pure water will flow constantly over the ova, which is an indispensable element in the success of the experiment.

Fitted up between decks will be an ice-house to contain twenty-five tons of ice; tanks capacity, six tons. All these must be lined with block tin. A frigorific machine of a peculiar construction:—This it is prudent to have in reserve, in the event of an accident occurring to the ice-house, or the ice failing.

Should any of the ova hatch prematurely, a fountain swinging-tray will be provided to place them in. This last is merely for the sake of experiment, as I am convinced by the result of many experiments conducted by myself and by others, that the embryo fry will not live where it is subjected to any other motion than a steady direct current of cold water, not exceeding three or four inches in depth. In addition there will be required elastic bands and tubes, a few spare boards, tin, lead, and carpenters' tools.

A manager with two assistants:—These should be salmon fishermen of good character. As they are difficult to procure, it might be advisable, as an inducement to emigrate, to note as an item in the estimate the passage of their families. It will be prudent to supply the manager with a letter of credit, in case the ship has to put into an intermediate port by force of weather or otherwise.

The following is an estimate of the cost of importing the ova, and also the total cost that will be incurred during the period of two years and eight months subsequent to its introduction—that is, until the expiry of the natural season for the return of the fish the first time from the sea. It will then be fairly proven whether the salmon can be acclimatized in these waters. If the result prove favourable (as I confidently predict it will), then it will be seen what further expense it will be necessary to incur, in order to turn the fishery to practical account. So confident am I of the practicability of the scheme that I propose that the manager's salary shall be contingent upon the successful introduction of the ova, but that a specified allowance for personal and travelling expenses should be granted.

Before concluding this paper, it is necessary that I should submit a few remarks in order to shew the expediency of examining the rivers supposed to be suitable for propagating salmon, and also the necessity of enacting laws similar to those of Scotland for the protection of the salmon.

I have proved by a series of experiments that salmon cease to propagate in water whose temperature exceeds 57° Fahrenheit.

It is therefore advisable, before entering into a costly and difficult experiment, to ascertain, during the ensuing summer, the temperature of the rivers which are physically adapted to the propagation of salmon, which flow down the eastern slope of the Snowy Range, especially that of the Snowy River, and the coast water into which they disembogue. From information which I have received from parties well acquainted with that river and district, as also with the habits of salmon in its native streams in Scotland, it appears to be similar in its physical aspect to the Spey, the swiftest and finest salmon river in Britain. Upon this information I have based my remarks and calculations.

In order to acclimatise the fish and utilise the fisheries, it will be imperative to maintain a system of artificial rearing by means of breeding ponds, similar to the Government breeding ponds of France; and inasmuch as the system pursued by the French Government has proved so eminently successful, it will be advisable to copy their system, and modify it so as to suit the difference of climate and site. As the success of the experiment depends in a great measure upon a judicious selection of a suitable spot for this purpose, it is requisite to examine the river and its tributaries with great care; it will be necessary to know the shortest and most convenient route by which to transport the vivarium and its contents from the spot where it is disembarked, to the ponds—so delicate is the ova at this stage of the experiment, that much shaking, delay, or a sudden increase of temperature, will certainly jeopardize the experiment.

Whilst examining the river and its tributaries, an approximate estimate may be arrived at of the probable produce of the river and its commercial value.

I may here remark that the estuary is the most valuable part of the river, inasmuch as the quality of salmon is superior direct from the salt water, and it deteriorates according to the length of time it remains in fresh water, until its return to the salt to recover itself (by that marvellous process of marine nourishment already adverted to); and by various contrivances, such as stake nets, cruvies, &c., the fish can be captured at the mouth of the river, and thereby prevented from ascending to the natural spawning beds. It is now known in Britain that this is the principal cause of the decrease of salmon.

In Scotland, however, the law distinctly defines the various methods of fishing, and infringements thereof are strictly watched and severely punished. Land and water are held as two distinct properties—for example, a proprietor of land, having a river running through it, may alienate the right of salmon fishing on his part of the river without the land, and vice versa; and in many instances the fishings on the estuaries, and miles up, are held by companies and by private individuals, who of course have a right also to haul nets and land cobbles on the banks.

All rivers in Scotland appear to have been at one time vested in the Crown, but from time to time the monarchs have alienated all that kind of property, sometimes with the land through which it ran, at other times the grant was quite distinct. In every case, however, there was a proviso that the banks were available for all the purposes of fishing; and as these usages have obtained from time immemorial, and are so well understood by the bulk of the people, no conflict of interests ever arise. I therefore beg strongly to recommend the adoption of the Scottish salmon laws, simply because experience proves them to be, in practice, better than any other now in use.

I trust that I have entered sufficiently into this question to shew clearly the little risk that is attached to the introduction of salmon, in comparison with the advantages that will accrue to the Colony therefrom; and as no private company or individual can engage in this enterprise, in consequence of the rivers being vested in Government, and cannot legally, I presume, be either alienated nor sold, neither in the present age can a monopoly of any description be guaranteed. It therefore obviously devolves on the Government, for the general good of the Colony, to introduce, propagate, and stock the rivers with salmon, and to establish the fisheries, precisely as the Government of France are now so successfully doing. When the rivers are stocked, and the fisheries are properly established, it may be desirable to divide the river into sections of small fishings, and rent them; when this is done, I have no hesitation in saying that the annual rental will much exceed the estimated cost of the enterprise.

The spawning season begins in Britain in September, and ends in March. The latter end of January is the best time to take the spawn, and leaving Britain at that season will insure crossing the tropics when there is the least amount of electricity in the atmosphere (a most essential condition for the success of the experiment). It will then arrive here at the period of the year (the beginning of the winter) the most congenial for commencing the process of acclimatizing it.

Assuming that early steps are taken in this enterprise, the temperature of the river may be tested during the summer, a suitable site for a breeding pond selected, and prior to the next spawning season in Britain the apparatus, &c., may be constructed, the ova embarked in January, and in May next 30,000 ova can be deposited in the breeding ponds of this Colony, and six years from that date I believe the fishings will have produced £90,000, and will, in the seventh year, yield £70,000 per annum. As the fish continues to propagate, the price of it, without diminution of revenue, can be reduced materially, thus bringing a most delicious, nutritious, and wholesome article of food within reach of the poorest colonist.

ALEXR. B. BLACK, ESQ., to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 15 December, 1860.

SIR,

In compliance with your request, I have the honor to submit the subjoined remarks for the consideration of the Government.

The question of introducing and acclimatizing salmon in these Colonies, has for some years occupied the attention of men conversant with the habits of salmon in their native streams; but this knowledge of itself does not furnish data, to guard against the risks to be encountered whilst carrying the project into operation.

The first experiment in Britain of this nature, was made, I believe, at the instance of His Excellency Sir William Denison, then Governor of Tasmania. The Duke of Newcastle, at that time Secretary of State for the Colonies, employed a salmon fisher and experimenter on salmon, of great repute (Mr. Boccus), to report upon the feasibility of the scheme, and to carry it into operation.

This experiment however signally failed. It was obvious that Boccus was not aware of the fact, that the maximum temperature of water in which the ova cease to exist, is 20° of Fahrenheit, lower than the average temperature of the tropics; and this difference of temperature must be increased 24° Fahrenheit more, i.e., the ova must be kept in a temperature of 36° Fahrenheit, so that the fish in its ova state can be deposited in these rivers; inasmuch as by numerous experiments it has incontestably been proved that, as embryo, smolt, and adult fish, it cannot be carried alive by sea, even from Britain to France. The ova is also peculiarly liable to destruction, by an excess of electricity in the atmosphere. It is to these causes, requiring a large amount of frigorific material, that the hazard and expense of this enterprise is to be attributed.

Even as early as 1850-51, I procured in California a quantity of ova for the above-named purpose; it occurred, however, after its collection, that my route was changed to China instead of these Colonies. At that time I possessed very imperfect data, respecting the temperature required for the healthful preservation of the ova. Subsequently however I had frequent opportunities of experimenting on it to this end.

During the course of the late enterprise I verified my assumption, based upon prior experiments, and have succeeded in ascertaining the exact temperature to keep the ova during the enterprise. But in addition to this, it is indispensable to know the maximum temperature of the rivers, which seem adapted to the propagation of salmon, likewise that of the coast water into which they disembogue; this of course can only be correctly ascertained by a practical person, during the months of January, February, and March.

The only rivers in this Colony which appear to me to be adapted to this purpose are, the Snowy (running in this and the neighbouring Colony—which is peculiarly eligible), the Shoalhaven, and the Clarence. However the information which I have obtained from residents of the respective localities, is of such a conflicting nature, that no practicable dependence can be placed upon it.

Should this Government now, or at any future period, resolve to introduce salmon, a careful examination of the conformation and temperature of these rivers will not only give the information whether, and in what degree, they are suitable to its propagation (and thereby avoid the fruitless expense of trying to introduce the fish wherein they will not breed), but it will also furnish the wanting data necessary to solve the question whether salmon can ever be acclimatized in the rivers of this Colony.

The time and expense I have already so freely given, to acquire the necessary information for ensuring the ultimate success of this enterprise, prevents the possibility, even if advisable, of examining these rivers, as an individual, without the sanction and aid of Government. I therefore beg to solicit the assistance of Government in prosecuting, in proper season, the requisite inquiries.

The humble Petition of Alexander B. Black,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That in the month of May, 1862, by appointment he waited on the Honorable the late Colonial Secretary to solicit that gentleman's influence and mediation with the Honorable the late Secretary for Lands, in order, if possible, to obtain a favourable reception to an application for a lease of a certain lagoon, the property of Government, and not in use for any purpose whatever, for the purpose of stocking it and breeding therein Murray River Cod and other esculent fishes, which are esteemed as an article of food, but not procurable in the Sydney market.

That the Honorable the late Colonial Secretary kindly accompanied him to the Lands Office, but the Honorable the late Secretary for Lands would not give a decisive answer, but led him to infer that his application might be complied with.

That then the Honorable the late Secretary for Lands, who recently had laid an Oyster Bill before the Honorable the Legislative Assembly, requested that your Petitioner should, in writing, give an opinion thereon.

That he declined to do so, either verbally or in writing, stating that in no way could the said Bill further the cause which he had so long advocated, nor facilitate, but the reverse, that branch of Fisheries which more immediately concerned himself, and was the purpose of the present interview, i.e., Fresh Water Pisciculture; besides, in order to give a reliable opinion thereon, a particular kind of local knowledge was necessary, a personal inspection of some of the "beds," and a critical examination of persons engaged in prosecuting this Fishery, because no knowledge of Oyster Fisheries, and the local causes which influence those Fisheries elsewhere, no matter how varied and sound soever that knowledge might be, although it would aid most materially in forming a sound judgment, yet he could not feel justified in expressing an opinion in writing unless in possession of the information indicated, which of course would involve expense, labour, and time.

That notwithstanding the Honorable the late Secretary for Lands insisted before the Honorable the late Colonial Secretary, that your Petitioner should furnish a written report on the Oyster Fishery Bill aforesaid, subject to the penalty in case of refusal of imputation of incapacity and rejection of application for lease of the said lagoon.

That under these circumstances he promised to comply with the Honorable the late Secretary for Lands request, on condition that the lease applied for should be granted, or else payment for the report.

That believing, as he does, that Fisheries, particularly deep Sea Fisheries, are of the highest importance to the Colony of New South Wales, not only in a domestic economical point of view, by which an increasing class of youth, who otherwise are almost irrevocably doomed to a life of compulsory idleness and its expensive and deplorable consequences, can be profitably employed to themselves, consequently to the State, in gathering the produce of a highly fertile field (which for lack of well directed enterprise and energy is utterly useless to the Colony at present) in order to provide their fellow citizens with a cheap and ample supply of a wholesome and very nutritious article of diet, the supply of which is notoriously inadequate, not only when it is considered that the several productions of Fisheries are of great commercial value as articles of export, but that Fisheries form the best nursery for seamen, and that the foundation of the advance and prosperity, perhaps even the existence, of the Colony, is based solely upon the security from invasion of its extensive and easily assailable sea-board, and in the safety of its sea-borne commerce; that this security can only be effectually guaranteed, which is a fact, proved by the testimony of all maritime nations, by employing the human waifs and strays of this overgrown city in self-supporting Fisheries, on condition and understanding that they shall be trained from youth as Sea Fencibles, to be ready at a moment's notice to man proper vessels, and sail wherever their services are required to defend their country's coast, to guard the approaches to the metropolis, and afford protection to its mercantile marine.

It is by no means improbable—indeed, perhaps the time is not far distant, inferring from the slumbering political convulsions of the civilized world—that the Colony's energies will be taxed to the utmost in self-defence, or if that is inefficient, to pay the invader handsomely to spare the city, and thereby suffer humiliation as well as loss, not to mention the sufferings of the inhabitants of Sydney under a state of blockade, that by establishing Fisheries on a simple plan, and adopting well considered Fishing regulations, embracing the views herein very imperfectly shadowed forth, the humiliation, loss, and sufferings would be avoided, because no enemy's flying squadron would dare approach these shores, if it were known that such a force existed, and the expense to the State would be trivial in comparison with the advantages gained, or with the cost of any other system of defence.

That he therefore, and for the reasons above stated, bestowed much time, labour, and expense in acquiring the information conceived necessary to justify him in drawing up a reliable report thereon; and also information to enable him to give an opinion on Richard Driver's, Esq., M.L.A., Fishery Protection Bill, which the Honorable the late Secretary for Lands subsequently commissioned him to report upon.

That he submitted the circumstances herein stated, to the Select Committee of your Honorable House sitting on the Fishing question, while he was being examined on Fisheries, and your Honorable Committee declared that the reports referred to were extremely useful in enabling them to arrive at a right understanding of the subjects upon which they treated, and on those grounds your Honorable Committee would recommend the attention of the late Government thereunto; but the duties of that Honorable Committee not being terminated prior to the recess of Parliament of last year, and not resumed during the sittings of Parliament of this year, the Honorable the late Secretary for Lands declined to take action in the matter till officially recommended by your Honorable Committee do do so.

That the Reports referred to were ordered to be laid upon the Table of your Honorable House on 19th December, 1862, and were ordered to be printed 28th July, 1863.

Your humble Petitioner therefore prays that the Honorable the Assembly will take his case into consideration, and afford him such redress as your Honorable House may in its judgment consider fair and equitable; and your humble Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c., &c., &c.

ALEXR. B. BLACK.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

CORONER AT WEST MAITLAND.

(PETITION OF MR. JOSHUA ANDERSON.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 4 September, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of the undersigned Joshua Anderson, Landowner, of West Maitland, in the said Colony,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH :—

That in the month of April last a stack of hay, valued at £70 to £80, the property of your Petitioner, was destroyed by fire at Forest Hill, Oakhampton, near West Maitland, under circumstances which, in the opinion of your Petitioner and other residents of the neighbourhood, left very little room for doubt that it was the act of an incendiary.

That the local police entertained the same opinion, and in consequence a reward of £50 was offered by the Government for the detection and conviction of the offender or offenders.

That your Petitioner promptly applied to the Coroner for the district to hold an inquest on the fire, and that that officer refused to comply with his request, under the pretence "that no one could give evidence in reference to the matter."

That, on the contrary, your Petitioner could have adduced evidence which would have strongly tended to criminate a person whom he suspected, and that the Coroner was so informed.

That the Coroner has held inquests in other cases, in which Insurance Companies were concerned, and in which evidence of a much less conclusive character than might have been brought forward in your Petitioner's case, was available.

That your Petitioner also lost a stack of hay, by fire in the same place about nine months previously, and under somewhat similar suspicious circumstances.

That your Petitioner believes that the conduct of the Coroner is calculated still more to endanger his property, and therefore prays your Honorable House to cause an inquiry to be instituted into this case, and such other steps to be taken in relation thereto, as may, in the opinion of your Honorable House, be just and proper.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JOSHUA ANDERSON.

No. 1.

MR. JOSHUA ANDERSON to ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Maitland, 24 April, 1863.

SIR,

I beg to inform you that, on the night of the 17th instant, a stack of hay, to the value of £70 or £80, was destroyed by fire. I believe it to have been a malicious act of some persons, but I am unable, at present, to obtain evidence pointing to any person in particular.

This is the second act of incendiarism which has been committed against my property, within ten months.

The Coroner, to whom I reported the matter, declines to hold an inquest, on the alleged ground that the property is of too trifling a value, and that I am bound to point to some particular person as suspected by me.

Requesting that you will direct the Coroner in this matter,

I have, &c.,

JOSHUA ANDERSON.

I presume the Coroner exercised a proper discretion in this matter. Will he favour me with any remarks he may think proper?

The Coroner, Maitland.

JOHN F. HARGRAVE,
Attorney General.
B.C., 30/4/63.

No. 2.

CORONER, MAITLAND, to ATTORNEY GENERAL.

*Coroner's Office, East Maitland,
7 May, 1863.*

SIR,

Relative to the stack of hay destroyed by fire on the 17th ultimo, the property of Mr. Joshua Anderson, of the Oakhampton Road, situate a few miles beyond West Maitland, the following day, Saturday, the 18th ultimo, Mr. Anderson called, and informed me that he had had a stack of hay destroyed by fire, and believed it was the act of a person of the name of Kelly, his neighbour, with whom he was at variance, and against whom he had previously commenced proceedings for stopping a watercourse. He said he had no ground, but merely his suspicion, and no one could give any evidence relative thereto; he stated that the stack was of oaten hay, and consisted of about seven or eight tons, which he valued at £10 per ton. I told him I would be engaged on the Monday, as it was the last day of the English mail, but would attend to it on the next day, Tuesday, the 21st ultimo. Although, from what he stated, I considered it quite unnecessary to hold an inquest, notwithstanding the constant rain that fell on Tuesday, the 21st ultimo, I visited Mr. Anderson's premises. The stack of hay in question had been placed at a very short distance from a hut occupied by a man and his family in Mr. Anderson's employment, at the corner of a vineyard, close to a fence, and adjoining apparently a by-road, and which hut was not further apart than about a chain. The occupants of the said hut, I am told, from the noise of the rain that fell that night, did not see the fire until they awoke the next morning. The fire, it is believed, took place at about between 1 and 2 o'clock, A.M.

Mr. Anderson informed me that the only person who saw the fire was a man who resides a considerable distance, and he only saw it through the slabs of his hut. He (Mr. Anderson) residing in the opposite direction, about the same distance, did not see the fire, and knew nothing about it until told what had occurred next morning.

At my second interview with Mr. Anderson, when I called upon him at his premises, he then said that his suspicions were altered, and, from what he had heard, that a man lately in his employment, he had discharged, might have put the stack on fire. The whole seems to me a matter in which there was not the slightest necessity of holding an inquest, and I told Mr. Anderson so; he said he would endeavour to induce the Government to offer a reward, and he would do so also.

I have, &c.,

JAMES THOMSON.

SIR,

With reference to your letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that a stack of hay, to the value of £70 or £80, was lately destroyed by fire, and that you believe it to have been a malicious act on the part of some person,—I am directed to state that the Coroner has written upon the subject, and that officer's report seems to the Attorney General to be quite satisfactory, as it would appear that no one could give evidence in reference to the matter.

FIFTY POUNDS REWARD.

WHEREAS on the morning of the 18th April last, a stack of hay, the property of Mr. Joshua Anderson, Forest Hill, Oakhampton Road, was destroyed by fire, and there is reason to believe that it was caused by an incendiary: Notice is hereby given, that a reward of £50 will be paid by the Government for such information as may lead to the apprehension and conviction of the person guilty of the offence; a free pardon will also be extended to any person implicated in the above offence (not being the person who actually committed the act) who may first give such information.

No. 5.

MR. JOSHUA ANDERSON to ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Maitland, 14 May, 1863.

SIR,

In acknowledging the receipt of your reply to my letter respecting the Coroner refusing to investigate in the matter of my hay-stack being burned, I beg to state, as regards the Coroner saying that no one could give evidence in reference to the matter, in so stating I am convinced that he is mistaken, for although, perhaps, no direct proof to clearly shew the perpetrator of this plain case of incendiarism, one and all here conversant with this trying case will bear me out in saying that nine-tenths more evidence can and would be given in it than what was given in the five last cases of a similar nature he investigated in this vicinity, in proof of which I beg to refer you to the following list of circumstantial evidence bearing on the case:—

- 1st. I can myself prove that a party in the neighbourhood has again and again threatened to do something tantamount to that now done twice, but in addition has threatened my life and that of my family, and I am now and again suffering the most barefaced wrongs at his hands.
- 2nd. I can prove, through an old servant of mine, that something of a threatening nature has been disclosed to him which the party would either do to me or to my property.
- 3rd. I can also prove by a servant of mine, residing about forty yards from where the stack stood, that another party referred to what might result if a fire stick was put in the stack (not then burned, but since has been).
- 4th. I can prove through another that the party who referred to the fire stick, &c., wished, and strove to implicate the man who at first gave notice of the burning. Now all this, and much more circumstantial evidence, might have been elicited from the aforesaid parties, had the Coroner done but his duty, or would yet do it; for if not (to an intelligent jury) the real culprit could be found out, it might at least tend to prevent any further destruction to my effects by fire, &c.; if not, I feel convinced that such destruction is not yet ended, or perhaps, what might be still worse, my life may be taken.

It is evident, if this case now drops without further inquiry, I will be constrained, after spending £1,200 in improving my land, to either sell or let it at whatever it may bring, and if so, the loss I may then sustain may be justly attributed to the conduct of the Coroner in this trying affair. And, indeed, I can prove (if required) that his chief excuse for not holding an inquest was, that the sum allowed on such occasions, viz., £1, was insufficient to cover the expenses attendant thereon.

I have, &c.,
JOSHUA ANDERSON.

A Government reward having been offered, I think this matter may stand over.

JOHN F. HARGRAVE,
Attorney General.

No. 6.

MR. JOSHUA ANDERSON to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Maitland, 8 July, 1863.

SIR,

You are aware that I sustained a loss of £70 on the 17th of April of this year, from the destruction, by fire, of a stack of hay, my property, at Forest Hill, Oakhampton, under circumstances which left little or no room for doubt that it was the work of an incendiary. You may also have heard that I sustained a similar loss at the same place, about nine months previously, and that it too was likewise surrounded by the same suspicious circumstances.

The neighbouring residents, with one or two exceptions, feel certain that both stacks were maliciously set fire to. I believe that the constabulary of the district are of the same opinion, for I understand that it was at their instance that a reward was offered by the Government for the detection and conviction of the perpetrator.

Shortly after the occurrence of the last fire, and after collecting evidence which tended to criminate a party whom I suspected, I applied to Mr. James Thomson, the Coroner, to hold an inquest, which he, however, to my surprise, refused to do. Several friends on hearing this endeavoured to prevail upon him to comply with my request, on the grounds that it was his duty to do so, but without avail; amongst these friends were a Magistrate and a solicitor. I next wrote to the Attorney General on the subject, who informed me in reply that he was satisfied with Mr. Thomson's explanation. As I am not satisfied, and think that an inquest should still be held, and am supported in this opinion by many friends whom I have consulted, I now appeal to you, in the hope that you will see fit to direct the Coroner to institute an investigation into the origin of the last fire. I may add that my attention has been drawn to the fact that Mr. Thomson has held inquests in other cases of fire, and I do not know why he should not also officiate in my case, unless he considers that my interests are of less importance than those of the Insurance Companies who were concerned in the inquests referred to.

I have, &amp;c.,

JOSHUA ANDERSON.

SEND the Coroner's letter, explaining his conduct, and stating Mr. Anderson's interviews with him as to the fire, and his suspicions, with the other papers, for the consideration of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Anderson's letter of the 8th instant does not alter my opinion that the Coroner has exercised a wise discretion in the matter, in declining to hold an inquiry, after such conflicting statements by Mr. Anderson, and without any reasonable prospect of obtaining any reliable evidence of any kind.

No. 1.

MR. KEIGHTLY to COLONIAL TREASURER.

(10,822.)

*Police Office, Tamworth,
24 December, 1857.*

SIR,

I do myself the honor to enclose a cheque for three hundred and six pounds, one shilling and three-pence, being the balance purchase money for lots sold on the 2nd and 3rd instant, at Nundle, to the individuals mentioned in the margin.

Vouchers in support thereof are herewith enclosed.

I have, &c.,

HENRY M. KEIGHTLY.

Brennan.
Robinson.
Roe.
M'Pherson.

MINUTES ON THE FOREGOING LETTER.

By the Chief Clerk of Revenue Branch (Mr. Hollinworth.)

Mr. Keightly should be called upon to explain why this remittance has been forwarded, unsupported by the voucher or return furnished by the Surveyor General; secondly, why he has forwarded the official receipts to this Office, instead of to the individual paying the money.—E. W. H.—30.

By the Under Secretary (Mr. Lane.)

The Agent is instructed in paragraph 15, "to give the receipts to the purchasers"; and in paragraph 16, "to transmit a Return to the Under Secretary to the Treasury, accompanied by all moneys received."

Mr. Keightly has not attended to these instructions. As to Mr. Hollinworth's suggestion, that Mr. Keightly should be called upon to explain, I am forced to express the opinion, grounded on past experience, that it is useless for me to ask explanation. (See paper 10,733 herewith.)

Submitted for the Treasurer's decision.—30 Dec.—H. L.

By the Treasurer (Mr. Jones.)

Bring Mr. Keightly's gross negligence under the notice of the Chief Secretary, and the Secretary for Lands and Works, from whom he holds his two appointments as Clerk of Petty Sessions and Crown Land Agent.—R. J.—30 Dec., 1857.

Mr. Keightly has not explained the delay in sending the vouchers?—23.—H. L.

By the Chief Clerk.

No. E. W. H.

Mr. Keightly's remittance was by cheque for £19 8s. 10d. The vouchers are for £19 10s. 8d. I cannot, therefore, carry his collections to account.—E. W. H.—23.

By the Under Secretary.

Does the Clerk of Petty Sessions, Tamworth, render his accounts to the Auditor General in a satisfactory manner?—23.—H. L.

By

By the Auditor General.

Mr. Keightly's accounts for the September quarter were not received within the time required by the regulations; his salary was, in consequence, suspended until the 22nd October. A circular, dated 10th November, was sent to him, with a request that he would acknowledge its receipt, which he has not done. His collections during the months of October and November have not yet been credited at the Treasury.

UNDER SECRETARY FOR FINANCE AND TRADE to MR. KEIGHTLY.

*The Treasury, New South Wales,
20 February, 1858.*

SIR,

I am directed to request that you will forward the sum of two-pence, as the balance of the deposit on lots 1 and 7 of the sale at Tamworth on the 12th instant, and, at the same time, to call upon you to report why the printed sheet, setting forth the conditions of the sale, has been detached from the sale list, and omitted to be sent to this office.

I am, &c.,
HENRY LANE.

MR. KEIGHTLY to UNDER SECRETARY FOR FINANCE AND TRADE.

*Police Office, Tamworth,
25 February, 1858.*

SIR,

I do myself the honor to enclose a draft for the sum of twenty-five pounds five shillings and eight-pence, being the balance purchase money, together with the deeds fees, for the lots sold to the individuals mentioned in the margin, on the 28th ultimo, at Nundle.

I have, &c.,

No. 9.

UNDER SECRETARY FOR FINANCE AND TRADE to MR. KEIGHTLY.

*The Treasury, New South Wales,
4 March, 1858.*

SIR,

With reference to repeated applications made to you from this office, for correct vouchers, in the form prescribed by the regulations under which you hold your appointment as Agent for the sale of Crown Lands, I have now to enclose a statement shewing the position of your accounts with this department, in reference to your remittances on account of land.

It will be seen that the whole of your remittances on account of the sales of 2nd and 3rd December had to be carried to account upon temporary vouchers, prepared in this office; and it is absolutely necessary that vouchers in the proper form should be substituted, without any further delay.

On account of the sales held in the month of January, amounting, exclusive of deed fees, to £1,049 2s. 10d., a sum of £137 1s. 2d. only has been carried to account, an amount of £932 11s. 7d. remaining in suspense, as it is utterly impossible to credit the same upon the document accompanying the remittance, which does not sufficiently distinguish balances and deed fees, and is otherwise deficient in necessary information.

The form of voucher required would be the same as that referred to in paragraph 16 Form D. of the letter of instructions, supplies of which can be obtained from the Government Printer.

I have, therefore, once more to call upon you immediately to comply with the requirements of this department, as I shall, otherwise, however reluctantly, be compelled to make a formal report on the case.

I have, &c.,
HENRY LANE.

REPORT from Clerk in charge of Land Accounts, Treasury (Mr. Lennon.)

1. The total amount of the sale of land, held at Nundle, on the 2nd December, 1857, should be £123 17s. 6d., instead of £120 17s. 6d., as stated in the report of the sale.

2. The total amount of the sale of land, held at Nundle, on the 3rd December, 1857, should be £1,012 6s. 5d. instead of £1,007 16s. 5d., as stated in the report. The fees on deeds of the same sale should be £15 5s., instead of £15 15s., as stated also in the report of land sold.

3. The total amount of the sale of land, held at Tamworth, on the 11th January, 1858, should be £310 18s., instead of £325 6s., as stated in the report; and the fees on deeds should be £44, instead of £46 as stated. These discrepancies arise from lots 35 and 36 having been forfeited, as stated by the Surveyor General.

4. The total amount of the sale, held at Tamworth, on the 12th January, 1858, should be £630 13s. 3d., instead of £637 17s. 3d., as stated in the report of the sale of land; and the fees on deeds should be £47, instead of £35, as stated. These discrepancies arise from lots 11 and 12 having been forfeited, as stated by the Surveyor General.

I have to add that Mr. Keightly has reported subsequently to the Surveyor General, that the forfeitures alluded to in the sales of the 11th and 12th January, 1858, have not taken place.

SIR,

With reference to the sale of land held at Nundle on the 3rd December, 1857, and to the purchase of 91 acres by William Ryan at that sale, I am directed to call upon you to state, without delay, if the above-named purchase, amounting to £88 4s., including the fees on the deeds, has been completed, and to point out to you that, from the extremely negligent manner your accounts have been kept, and the defective vouchers forwarded in support thereof, it is impossible to trace the payment into this office for the land above alluded to.

I have, &c.,

Under Secretary.

No. 15.

MR. W. RYAN to COLONIAL TREASURER.

Nundle, 6 May, 1858.

SIR,

On the 3rd of December, 1857, I purchased at the land sale held at Nundle, two farm allotments near the town of Nundle, Nos. 25 and 26, at the upset price of £1 per acre, which, with the deed fees, amounted to the sum of £93 5s; of this, I paid deposit £9 2s., on the day of the sale, to Mr. Keightly, the Land Agent; the balance I remitted to the Treasury.

As one cheque forwarded by me, £30 14s. 3d., was returned as not negotiable, I paid to Mr. Keightly at Tamworth, on the 1st January, 1858, the amount then due from me on the purchase, namely, the sum of £28 10s., for which I hold his receipt.

I have now, therefore, to request that I may be furnished with a receipt in full for the total amount paid by me, namely, £93 5s.

I have, &c.,
WILLIAM RYAN.

SIR,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 22nd ultimo, respecting the payment of William Ryan for land sold at Nundle on the 3rd December last.

In reply, I beg to state that, having had to perform a journey of some distance to see Ryan and ascertain the particulars, it has occasioned the present delay.

It appears that Ryan sent his balance purchase money to the Treasury, amounting to £88 4s., and for which he received an acknowledgment; but at the same time a cheque for the sum of £28 10s., which had been tendered by him in part payment, was returned as being dishonored, accompanied by a request that he would make the amount, viz., £28 8s. 9d., good, and pay the same to me, which he accordingly did; and the amount, together with an explanation of the same, were duly forwarded by me in my communication of the 6th of January, No. 58-10.

REPORT from the Clerk in charge of Land Accounts.

31 May, 1858.

In reporting on Mr. Keightley's letter of the 13th instant, I beg to point out the discrepancies which appear. In the first instance, he states the sum forwarded by Ryan amounted to £88 4s., whereas the amount received was £86 8s. 4d. Again, he states that a cheque for £28 10s. was returned dishonored. He is again in error, for the amount of the cheque was for £30 14s. 3d. And in the latter part of his letter he contradicts himself, by stating the amount to be paid was £28 8s. 9d.; in fact, his statements are unintelligible.

With reference to the second paragraph of the letter above alluded to, it is quite clear to my mind that Mr. Keightley does not keep records of land sales in his office, and has therefore had occasion to pursue the highly objectionable course of applying to a private party for information which he should certainly have in his own possession.

I now beg leave to bring under the notice of the Secretary to the Treasury that the sum of £8 6s. 5d. is still due, to complete the purchases of land sold at Nundle on the 2nd and 3rd of December, 1857.

MR. KEIGHTLY to COLONIAL TREASURER.

Police Office, Tamworth,
8 April, 1858.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 25th ultimo, No. 302, respecting an inaccuracy with reference to land sales in the months of December and January, and requesting me to forward the sum of £54 16s. 6d. in support thereof.

In reply, I do myself the honor to state, that I should have replied to your communication at an earlier date, had I not been obliged to ride a journey of some distance to obtain the signature of a Magistrate.

With reference to the sale of the 2nd of December, the gross amount, including deed fees, realized £140 5s. 6d., the receipts for which have been forwarded.

In respect to the sale of the 3rd of December, I beg to state that, according to my copy sale list, the gross amount appears to be £1,013 1s. 5d., receipts for which have been returned, with the exception of the lots purchased by Ryan, who states he forwarded the necessary amount.

Should be £140
17s. 6d.Should be £1,027
11s. 5d.

J. G. L.

In the sale of the 11th January, I do myself the honor to state that lots 35 and 36 were the only ones forfeited, and that receipts have been duly returned for the amount realized, viz., £371 6s.

In reference to the sale of the 12th of January, I beg to state that lots 11 and 12, alluded to in your correspondence as forfeited, were paid for, as the receipt for the same, No. 46, of 30 January, is in this office, as also receipts for the gross amount of sale—in all £686 17s. 3d.

I have, &amp;c.,

Nundle, 9 June, 1858.

SIR,

I beg to inform you that I purchased, at the land sale held at Nundle, on the 3rd December, 1857, allotment No. 20, of forty-six acres, near Nundle, at 29s. per acre, which, with the deed fee of £1, amounts to the sum of £67 14s. As I paid to Mr. Keightly, on his demand, the sum of £68 13s. 6d., in proof of which I beg to enclose his receipts, I shall feel obliged by your causing the overcharge of 19s. 6d. to be returned to me.

I have, &amp;c.,

MRS. MARY ROBINSON to UNDER SECRETARY FOR FINANCE AND TRADE.

Albion House,
Elizabeth and Campbell Streets,
Sydney, 29 June, 1858.

SIR,

I do myself the honor to lay before you the following statement:—

On the 3rd of December last, at a Crown Lands Sale, held at the Court House, Nundle, my husband, Mr. Richard Robinson, of that place, became the purchaser of a certain lot of land, containing sixty-four acres, for the sum of £65 5s., being the upset price of the land, including deed fees. At the time, or immediately after the purchase was made, he paid the money, £65 5s., into the hands of Mr. Keightly, the Clerk of Petty Sessions for Tamworth, and for which he received the written receipt enclosed, marked A.

My husband on the same occasion purchased other land, viz. sixty-eight acres, situate at Nundle, and for which he paid £79 9s., being at the rate of £1 3s. per acre, and which, including deed fee, brings it to that amount. For this second purchase, as payment, he received the written receipt, also enclosed, marked B.

About

About January last Mr. Keightly forwarded to my husband the two printed receipts (respectively marked C D) enclosed herewith, by which it will be seen that in reference to the purchase of the sixty-four acres the printed receipt is for less money than paid. In the purchase of the sixty-eight acres, the receipt is for more money than paid.

My husband sent the receipts to Mr. Keightly, for correction; but after a considerable time had elapsed, and after three successive written applications, they were forwarded back to him through another party, unaltered and unexplained.

I have been put to considerable trouble and expense, in coming to Sydney for the purpose of having this matter properly settled, and I therefore trust respectfully that I may be put in possession, at the earliest convenience, of the necessary instructions or documents for procuring the deeds of the lands above referred to.

Sir,

In forwarding a book containing 100 receipts for moneys which may be received by you, from the 1st January next, on account of the public service, I am directed to communicate to you the following rules, for your guidance in the issue of the receipts in question.

- 1st.—That no money be taken on public account, be the amount however small, without a receipt being given for the amount, even when not taken away by the party paying the money.
- 2nd.—That the butts of the receipts, next the binding, be forwarded to the Auditor General, the outer butts being cut off and retained by you as your voucher.
- 3rd.—That any deviation from these instructions, by your receiving any moneys without duly recording the same in the receipt book, will be treated as a grave dereliction of duty, and will be visited accordingly.

A copy of the Government Gazette, containing a notice to the public respecting these receipts, is enclosed, in order that it may be posted in the most conspicuous place in your office, for the information of the public.

You will be good enough to inform me, with as little delay as possible, what number of the forms of receipts you will probably require for the ensuing twelve months, in order that they may be furnished to you.

MINUTE OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

No. 58-23, 31 May, 1858.

HIS Excellency the Governor General brings under the consideration of the Council a memorandum by J. H. Scott Durbin, Esq., late Commissioner of Crown Lands for the District of Liverpool Plains, reporting that, having had occasion, prior to his removal from Tamworth, to be dissatisfied with the carelessness displayed by Mr. H. M. Keightly, the Clerk of Petty Sessions, in the performance of his official duties, he considered it expedient, on his recent arrival in Sydney, to inquire whether a sum of £103, which was paid into Court in November last, as part of the effects of Mr. A. Campbell, deceased, intestate, and was received by Mr. Keightly in his presence, had been duly remitted to the proper office, and has ascertained from the Curator of Intestate Estates that Mr. Keightly has neither remitted the money, which he should not have received without an order from the Curator, nor even notified its receipt, and although three letters have been written to him on the subject, has not forwarded the usual affidavit of death.

2. The Council see in this transaction alone sufficient to call for Mr. Keightly's removal from office, and, as it appears from the records of the Treasury, that the like irregularity and negligence is displayed by him with regard to his accounts as Land Sales Agent, they advise that he be forthwith required to shew cause why he should not be so removed.

BENCH OF MAGISTRATES, TAMWORTH, to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

*Goonoo Goonoo,
11 June, 1858.*

SIR,

I have the honor of acknowledging your letters bearing dates 28th and 31st May, addressed to the Bench of Magistrates, Tamworth; in the first of which you direct the suspension of the Clerk of the Bench, Mr. Keightly, and demanding an explanation of the charges laid against him in that and the last letter.

In reply, I have the honor of stating that Mr. Keightly was suspended on Thursday the 10th instant, on which day your letters of the 28th May were taken into consideration.

On Monday the 7th instant, the day on which your letters were laid before the Bench, being a very busy day, I retained his services till the business was settled.

I have the honor of stating that he now remains suspended, awaiting your decision consequent upon your consideration of his explanation, which I now enclose.

I have the honor of further stating, that I have looked over his books, which appear to me to have been kept in a regular manner; and I have seen the vouchers for the sums marked and in his explanation.

From what I can make out, I fancy that the whole mistake has arisen through one Ryan paying the sum of £54 14s. 3d. into the Treasury, which has not been placed to the credit of Mr. Keightly, although he is debited with that sum in the land sales. Vide his letter of the 8th April to the Honorable Colonial Treasurer, and also his letter of the 13th May to that officer, now enclosed.

I have, &c.,
ARTHUR S. KING, J.P.

[Enclosure]

[Enclosure 1 in No. 29.]

Police Office, Tamworth,
7 June, 1858.

Gentlemen,

The Honorable the Colonial Secretary having requested that I should furnish a report, in explanation of alleged irregularities in the performance of my duties in the remittance of the proceeds of land sales to the Treasury, as also in business relating to intestacy,—I do myself the honor, in reply, to furnish the following statement:—

In reference to the alleged irregularities in remitting the proceeds of sale of Crown Lands, I do myself the honor to state, that after a diligent search through the correspondence received by me from the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer during the year 1857, and up to the present date, in relation thereto, I find that the communications I received respecting irregularities in the remittance of proceeds of land sales to be of the following dates:—

20th February, No. 58-209.—Respecting a deficiency of 2d., being a part of deposit, and which was duly forwarded in a communication under date 2nd March, No. 58-49.

6th March, No. 58-253.—Respecting a deficiency of £1 12s. 4d., as part purchase money, which amount was duly forwarded 25th March, No. 58-302.

Respecting a deficiency of £54 16s. 6d., as balance purchase money.

This report was replied to in a communication under date 8th April, No. 58-101, copy of which is herewith enclosed. I do myself the honor, in explanation of the above apparent deficiency, to state as follows, which I conclude has given rise to the complaint of the alleged irregularities.

At a land sale held by me at Nundle, on December 3rd, 1857, and immediately after the regulation came in force respecting payments being made to the Land Agents, and not to the Treasury as formerly, a man named Ryan omitted paying his balance purchase money to this office, but forwarded it to the Treasury, for which he states he received an acknowledgment, but which amount not having been notified from the Treasury to me as paid, was therefore not credited, and consequently gave rise to a long correspondence, but which was explained in my report to the Colonial Treasurer of the 13th ultimo, No. 58-135, copy of which I beg to enclose.

As I am not aware of any other cause or case of complaint excepting the above, and which, though I much regret should have ever occurred, was not in my power to have prevented,—

I feel it incumbent on me, in self-justification, in reference to the way my duties have been performed as Land Agent in this locality, to state that ever since I have had the honor of holding office here as Clerk of Petty Sessions, since August, 1855, there has been a minute and correct book kept of all sales of land, and everything relating thereto, for reference; and I should feel obliged if the Bench would do me the favour of inspecting those records and reporting on their condition. With reference to the complaint respecting the intestate estate of one Alexander Campbell, I do myself the honor to state as follows:—

In December last, a man named Clift, who came in from the country, paid in open Court the sum of £103, as having been found on the person of the deceased, Alexander Campbell. I there took Clift's affidavit of the death, and at the same time was informed that deceased was a cattle drover, and had a partner with him, who would probably give me further information respecting deceased. I consequently in a few days saw the partner of deceased, who voluntarily stated that he was indebted to deceased in the sum of £100, but that he had not then the money conveniently, it being invested in stock, but that if I would allow him some time to proceed overland to Victoria, before the demand was made on him, as he knew deceased's friends he would then be enabled to sell his stock, and pay the amount when the demand for payment was made from Court.

Consequently, allowing him some time to get on his route, as requested, I sent the affidavit of death to the Curator of Intestate Estates, in a communication under date the 18th February, No. 58-44, but which was returned as being informal, accompanied with a request that I would furnish another.

I have the honor to state, that the delay that has occurred arose in consequence of the party who was required to make the affidavit of death being at the same time travelling with stock, and information to that effect was conveyed to the Curator in a communication of the 13th ultimo, No. 58-128.

I further beg to state, that I have made four separate communications to the parties who could furnish the information, requesting as a favour that the affidavit might be made here as soon as possible; and furthermore, in my last communication, volunteered to pay the expenses attendant on his journey, as an inducement and to prevent any further delay.

These circumstances I explained in a communication to the Curator of Intestacy, on the 6th instant, No. 58-191, enclosing at the same time a cheque for the sum of £103, and stating that as I had had such difficulty in trying to get the individual to come and make his affidavit in Tamworth, to prevent further delay I should make it my duty to go the journey myself, however inconvenient, in order to obtain the same.

I must add, that it is with feelings of the deepest regret that I observe that any performance of my duties should have occasioned so strong a mark of censure from the Government, my wish having always been to merit their confidence.

Trusting my explanation will shew, that having endeavoured to carry out the instructions conveyed, as far as practicable, I beg to express my regret if, in so doing, I should have incurred the displeasure of Government.

I therefore, gentlemen, have the honor to request that the Bench will have the goodness to inspect the manner in which the various branches connected with this office have been generally conducted by me, in reference to this locality; and at the same time will confer the favour of stating if those duties of late have not been considerably increased, so much so that, to prevent public inconvenience and delay, I have frequently employed clerical assistance, at my own expense, in order to facilitate a prompt performance of the same; and also if, from inattention, absence, or otherwise, any complaint, either verbally or by letters, has been laid before the Bench by a resident in this district, to the effect that I have afforded inconvenience by neglect or delay.

I beg to add, that during the time I have had the honor to hold this appointment, being since August, 1855, at no one period has an application been made by me for a fortnight's absence from duty; and that within the last three months, when this Bench had not the support of one single Justice of the Peace, thereby causing confusion and accumulation in the performance of public duties, I voluntarily proceeded to the adjoining Police District, a distance in all over seventy miles, to procure the required signature of a Justice, and if possible to prevent affording confusions and unnecessary correspondence in transmission of returns required in Sydney within a prescribed date.

In conclusion, I have to express a hope the foregoing will tend to prove that, although labouring from difficulties, I have voluntarily endeavoured to afford satisfaction when practicable, and to retain that confidence and trust which I hope this explanation will tend to restore.

I have, &amp;c.,

HENRY M. KEIGHTLY.

Police Office, Tamworth,
8 April, 1858.

Sir,

I do myself the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 25th ultimo, respecting inaccuracy with reference to land sales in the months of December and January, and requesting me to close the sum of £54 16s. 6d. in support thereof.

In reply, I do myself the honor to state, that I should have replied to your communication at an earlier date, had I not been obliged to ride a journey of some distance to obtain the signature of a Magistrate.

Amount as per account received,
£140 17s. 6d.

In reference to the sale at Nundle on the 2nd of December, I beg to state, that the amount realized, together with the deed fees, amounted to £140 5s. 6d., for which amount receipts have been duly forwarded.

In respect of the sale of the 3rd December, I beg to state, that the gross amount by my account sales appears to be £1,013 1s. 5d., including deed fees, and for which, with the exception of the lot purchased by Ryan (and for which I am informed the money has been duly forwarded), receipts have also been forwarded to me.

With respect to the sale of the 11th January, at Tamworth, I beg to state, that lots 35 and 36 were the only ones forfeited at that sale, and that Government receipts for the amount of £352 18s. (A) have been duly forwarded to me.

In reference to the sale of the 12th January, I do myself the honor to state, that lots 11 and 12, alluded to in your correspondence as forfeited, were paid for, as the receipt for the same, No. 646, 30 January, 1858, is retained in this office, and the receipts for the gross amount of sale of that day, in all £686 17s. 3d. (B), have been likewise duly forwarded to me.

Police Office, Tamworth,
13 May, 1858.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 23rd ultimo, respecting the payment of William Ryan for land sold at Nundle on the 3rd December last.

In reply, I beg to state that having had to perform a journey of some distance to see Ryan and ascertain the particulars, it has occasioned the present delay.

It appears that Ryan sent his balance purchase money to the Treasury, amounting to £88 4s., and for which he received an acknowledgment; but at the same time a cheque for the sum of £28 10s., which had been tendered by him in part payment, was returned, as being dishonored, accompanied by a request that he would make the amount, £28 8s. 9d., good, and pay the same to me, which he did accordingly; and the amount, together with an explanation of the same, were duly forwarded by me, in my communication of the 5th of January, No. 53-10.

I have, &amp;c.,

Land Agent.

The Colonial Treasurer,

No. 30.

MR. KEIGHTLY to COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sydney, 24 July, 1858.

SIR,

I do myself the honor, in explanation of certain irregularities, complaints in support of which have been made against me, to state as follows:—

1. In reference to the transmission of the sum of £103, in the intestate estate of one Campbell, I beg to state that the detention of the payment of the money never occurred from any intention on my part; and that although the affidavit of death, as forwarded by me on the 18th of February last, in order to enable my obtaining an order of Court for the payment of the same, was returned as informal, still had I received a request from the Curator to forward the amount it would have been done at once, as at any moment I was prepared to pay the same.

But as such a request was never made, and because I was unfortunate enough in not being able to obtain another affidavit of death, although I made repeated efforts to do so, and reported the same to the Curator, it has placed me in the unpleasant position I now occupy.

I may add, that the fact of my forwarding the affidavit at a period of more than five months ago, shews that it was my wish to obtain an order of Court for the transmission of the amount and settlement of the estate; and that although the affidavit might have been accidentally informal, still it was my intention to shew there was an estate awaiting collection.

2. In reference to certain written receipts for land sold at Nundle on the 2nd and 3rd December last, I beg to state that the books for issuing the proper receipts for deposits and balance purchase moneys were never received by me until some days after the sale in question. In respect to the receipt of the balance purchase money of one Richard Robinson,

Robinson, on the 3rd of December, for the sum of £58 17s., I beg to state that the receipt in question is correct, and corresponds to the amount received as balance purchase money, which was forwarded and mentioned in my report sale list in support thereof.

I beg respectfully to acknowledge that the receipt given by me for land sold on the 3rd December, to Joseph Roe, was incorrect, insomuch as it exceeded the amount I received, but that I forwarded to the Treasury the amount as contained in the receipt.

On examination of the receipts for land sold to Mary Anne Durbin, and to which allusion has been made by Mr. Durbin in his memo., it is a matter of the utmost astonishment to me, how that gentleman can call the attention of Government to those receipts, when subsequent to their issue he came to me, mentioning they were inaccurate, as the body of the receipts had been made out by an assistant in the office; and at his request and in his presence I filled up fresh receipts, in my own handwriting, which he received from me, acknowledging them to be correct.

I beg to express my regret that I should have occasioned so much inconvenience at the Treasury, with reference to the sales of the 2nd and 3rd of December; and, in extenuation, can only say that at that period, owing to the new regulations coming into force, and my not being acquainted with their detail, may have occasioned the inconvenience alluded to, as prior to that date, under the old regulations, my duties were performed in a more satisfactory manner.

I however trust that, on consideration of this explanation, the Government will perceive, that although I may have in some instances been accidentally irregular or informal, still the various circumstances attendant on the same afford some extenuation, and that the fact of my having been suspended for so long a period may be considered a sufficient mark of censure.

In conclusion, I beg to state, that trusting I may be permitted to resume my duties, I shall make every effort to establish that confidence in the performance of those duties, and merit the approval of the Government, which I regret, from circumstances, I have not done on the present occasion.

I have, &c.,
HENRY M. KEIGHTLY.

MINUTE OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

No. 58-30, 26 July, 1858.

His Excellency the Governor General lays before the Council a letter of explanation from Mr. H. M. Keightly (Clerk of Petty Sessions at Tamworth, who, in accordance with their recommendation on the 31st May last, has been called upon to shew cause why he should not be dismissed from the public service, by reason of the following charges, viz.,—1st, of having failed to hand over to the proper office a sum of £103 which came into his possession by virtue of his office; and 2nd, of general carelessness and irregularity in rendering his public accounts, more especially those relating to land sales.

2. Upon a perusal of this letter, the Council regard the explanation afforded by Mr. Keightly, with respect to the grave charge, as sufficiently satisfactory; but regret that they are unable to acquit him of the minor charge, in support of which abundant evidence is afforded by various documents submitted to them. They are of opinion, therefore, that he cannot be allowed to remain in a position where it appears that large sums of public money must necessarily pass through his hands, and they accordingly advise that he be appointed Clerk of Petty Sessions in some other district where this will not be the case.

3. The Honorable the Colonial Secretary, in his place, then informs the Council that provision has been made in the Estimates for a Clerk of Petty Sessions at Gunnedah, on the Namoi River, and that it is desirable that the appointment should now be made; whereupon, the Council, being invited thereto by His Excellency the Governor General, advise that Mr. Keightly be appointed such Clerk accordingly; that Mr. John Macdonald, Clerk of Petty Sessions at Wollombi, be appointed to succeed Mr. Keightly at Tamworth; and Mr. Joseph Biscoe, to fill the vacancy thus created at Wollombi.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 6 August, 1858.*

GENTLEMEN,

I am directed to inform you that a letter of explanation has been submitted to the Executive Council, from Mr. H. M. Keightly, Clerk of Petty Sessions at Tamworth, who was called upon, by the letter addressed to you from this office, on the 28th May last, to shew cause why he should not be dismissed from the public service, by reason of the following charges, viz.:—1st. Of having failed to hand over to the proper officer a sum of £103, which came into his possession by virtue of his office; and 2nd, of general carelessness and irregularity in rendering his public accounts, more especially those relating to land sales.

2. Upon perusal of this letter, the Council regarded the explanation afforded by Mr. Keightly, with respect to the grave charge, as sufficiently satisfactory, but regretted that they were unable to acquit him of the minor charge, in support of which abundant evidence has been afforded by various documents submitted to them. They were of opinion, therefore, that he could not be allowed to remain in a position where it appears that large sums of public money must necessarily pass through his hands, and they accordingly advised that he be appointed Clerk of Petty Sessions in some other district where this will not be the case.

3. As provision has been made in the Estimates for a Clerk of Petty Sessions at Gunnedah, on the Namoi River, Mr. Keightly has been appointed Clerk at that place, and Mr. John MacDonal, Clerk of Petty Sessions at Wollombi, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Keightly at Tamworth.

4. The appointment of those gentlemen will be notified in the Government Gazette, and I am to request that you will instruct Mr. Keightly to present himself to the Bench of Magistrates at Gunnedah, at his earliest convenience.

I have, &c.,

MR. GOLD COMMISSIONER KEIGHTLEY'S LATE CAMP-KEEPER.

No. 1.

MR. H. J. WILLIAMS to SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

20, Devonshire-street,
Sydney, 28 January, 1863.

SIR,

My attention has been called, by a mere accident, to a debate in the Legislative Assembly, on the 4th of December, 1862, in which Mr. Dalgleish, M.L.A., calls the attention of the House to a case of a discharged Camp-keeper. Myself being that person, and as you remarked, if the case was properly reported, it should be inquired into, I beg most respectfully to state, that I wrote a full statement of the case to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary in November last, enclosing the correspondence I had with Mr. Keightley, relative to my proceeding to Bathurst with my wife. The following is a statement I submitted by letter to the Colonial Secretary's Office, believing as I did, that was the proper quarter to make my complaints:—

“ To the Honorable the Colonial Secretary.

“ Sir,

“ I beg most respectfully to call your attention to the following facts, relative to an engagement with Mr. Keightley, a Gold Commissioner at Rockley, as a Camp-keeper. About the middle of August, having heard that Mr. Rotton, M.L.A., required a respectable married couple to proceed to Bathurst—the man to act as Camp-keeper, the woman to cook and act as house-servant, and wash for the Commissioner's family—with my wife I had an interview with Mr. Rotton in Sydney. He informed me that my duties would be (if engaged) to look after two horses, take charge of the establishment during the Commissioner's absence, be able to write a fair hand, do what writing was required during the Commissioner's absence, and take charge of the establishment. The wages were to be for myself £100 per annum, finding myself with rations; my wife £10 per annum, and, as I understood, she was to have her board in the kitchen the same as any other domestic servant.

“ We had a second interview with Mr. Rotton; he was satisfied with the reference we gave him, and in one instance called upon a lady with whom my wife lived as servant, and after about a fortnight's delay I received two telegrams (enclosed with the letter)—the first was to know when I could come up, to which I replied in three days, provided my expenses were paid up. The second telegram was, that seats were paid, per Cobb's coach, to Bathurst from Penrith, and that our luggage was to come per Wood's van. I obeyed his instructions, we broke up our home, and on the 29th of August we proceeded to Bathurst, paying our own fares per rail, and our expenses on the way up, including one night's stoppage at Hartley. We arrived at Rockley on the 1st of September. Mr. Keightley appeared highly satisfied with our appearance, gave me my instructions and charge of the premises, and on the following day, his business calling him away, he left myself and wife solely in charge, saying it was probable he should be away for a week or more. During his absence we performed the employment he instructed us to do.

“ Although we found the place was not such as had been represented to us, for in lieu of two horses to look after there were seven horses in a paddock, a draught and a saddle horse in the stable, a buggy, about 200 fowls and other kinds of poultry, two cows, two sheep, two goats and kids. The room myself and wife had to sleep in was an open slab hut, with spaces between the slabs we could put our hands through; and the weather being very wet and cold, my wife caught a severe cold. I had also to work in a large garden, and to feed two pigs, one of which I had to kill and scald.

“ Upon Mrs. Keightley's arrival with her child and nurse, my wife found the work very heavy; and having to ration herself out of the £10 per annum she was allowed, she naturally complained, more so because it was so difficult to get meat; and finding Mr. Keightley wished me to do many menial duties that was not exactly the thing, I told him that the place was not such as had been represented to us by Mr. Rotton, and also that I objected to ration the nurse-girl with ourselves, for 5s. a week, which he wished us to do. The girl was sixteen years of age, and we could not get meat for ourselves, upon which Mr. Keightley said if my wife objected to the work, and that we would not board the girl, we had better leave at once. I said we were not prepared to leave at once (giving a month's notice), but finding he wished us to go at once I agreed to do so, naturally expecting he would pay me the wages due to us. We had then been on the establishment eleven days. After signing a voucher for the eleven days' salary (under protest), he gave me a cheque for £1 7s. 5d., deducting the remainder towards our coach fare from Sydney.

“ This occurred on the 11th of September. On that day we left Mr. Keightley's camp, my wife being at the time very unwell. We had to walk to Bathurst (a distance of more than “ twenty

MR. GOLD COMMISSIONER KEIGHTLEY'S LATE CAMP-KEEPER. 3

" twenty miles) where fortunately we found an acquaintance, with whom I left my wife, and proceeded myself to Sydney on foot. On my arrival in Sydney I wrote to Mr. Keightley asking him to pay for seat per coach for my wife to come to Sydney, but he took no further notice.

" My object in this statement is, believing I was in the situation of a public officer, that Mr. Keightley did not act justly in discharging me at a minute's notice, without paying me what was justly due to me without deducting any. I was at a great expense. I broke up my home in anticipation of a good situation. I paid 8s. 6d. fare by rail, and 25s. it cost us on the road up, besides having to pay 15s. carriage for our luggage per Wood's van. My wife was in Bathurst six weeks before I was enabled to send for her. That was a further expense of £2 10s., and 12s. more for our luggage back to Sydney per Wood's van.

" Under these circumstances, I humbly request that you will be pleased to consider my case, and cause my expenses to be refunded to me—that is all I ask, and for which, as in duty bound, I shall ever pray.

" HENRY J. WILLIAMS."

[No record of the receipt of the foregoing document can be traced in the Colonial Secretary's Office.]

No. 3.

MR. GOLD COMMISSIONER MACLEAN to UNDER SECRETARY FOR LANDS.

Western Gold Fields Office,
Bathurst, 16 March, 1863.

SIR,

In returning you the complaint of Henry J. Williams, formerly acting as Camp-keeper at Rockley, together with the report thereon of Mr. Assistant Commissioner Keightley, I have the honor to state my opinion, that Mr. Keightley's report appears to refute the allegations of Williams as to unfair treatment.

2. It is my custom to leave the selection of Camp-keepers entirely to the several Commissioners. They are allowed first to take their Camp-keepers as acting, or, as it were, on trial. The present was a case of this description, and I received no complaint, nor had I a knowledge of any difficulty concerning Williams. He was paid as acting Camp-keeper for eleven days, through Mr. Keightley, as is usual. The deduction for expenses seems to have been a matter of private arrangement between Mr. Keightley and Williams, and not inequitable.

3. It is clear, however, that a considerable amount of work of a domestic character was expected by Mr. Keightley of Williams, by whom the extent has probably been exaggerated. Williams, however, not having been prepared to take up the appointment for which Mr. Keightley states that he would have felt bound to recommend him, I do not see that any case for further interference has been made out.

I have, &c.,

HAROLD MACLEAN.

[Enclosure in No. 3.]

Gold Camp, Dunn's Plains,
13 February, 1863.

Sir,

With reference to the enclosed, of Camp-keeper Williams, I have the honor to state as follows:—

Requiring a Camp-keeper, I sent to a friend in Sydney, requesting he would procure me a married couple suited for the appointment, "stating the necessary qualifications." I also intimated, for further convenience, I would advance out of my own pocket their mail expenses, on this understanding,—that should they remain six months it would be as a bonus, but in the event of their remaining only three months they would have to refund half. This, I must observe, was done only with the view of assisting them should their funds be limited.

Camp-keeper Williams appears to labour under the idea that I was to pay his travelling expenses to enable him to hold a Government appointment. His statements are greatly perverted, and in many cases are not in accordance with facts. Williams was perfectly well aware that he and his wife were to board themselves on his salary, as is the rule on every camp on the Gold Fields.

The morning after I returned to my camp, the 10th of the month—so that Williams had actually been only one day on duty—I was quietly informed by his wife, that the place did not suit, and that they gave a month's warning. This I need not observe was very unsatisfactory, as I had just advanced £4 for his mail fare, besides lending him £1 on his arrival. I went outside, and asked him the reason: he replied, he was discontented with the place, and desirous of leaving. I then told him if he was so dissatisfied dissatisfied, I would have no objection, if he wished it, to foreclose the month's warning, and let him leave the next day, as I never cared detaining a man when it was in opposition to his wishes. He left next day, and, by his conduct, I was left without servants, and had to sustain the loss of £2—his half mail fare—having had, I may say, the benefit of his services for only a few hours. His statement to the effect that "because his wife had said she would not ration my nurse at a certain rate, I considered they had better leave at once," I beg to state is utterly devoid of truth.

4 MR. GOLD COMMISSIONER KEIGHTLEY'S LATE CAMP-KEEPER.

I need scarcely observe that, where he alludes to his wife complaining of the work being so great, he appears to have lost sight of the fact that they had not then been actually one clear day in service.

The quarters he speaks of so disparagingly, I beg to state consist of a good-sized shingled hut, slabbed, plastered, and watertight; and I can only say that there are quarters on other Gold Fields, which I have occupied, and are still in occupation by other Commissioners, not nearly so desirable as those Camp-keeper Williams rejects.

In conclusion, I beg to state that from what I have seen of the matter, "Camp-keeper Williams" has imposed on myself and others, having represented himself as qualified as a groom and servant, whereas, from his own statements, I have been led to understand that he never filled either situation before, having been a plasterer or bricklayer by trade, and afterwards an assistant in some store.

I can only regret that the same accuracy of detail that Williams has shewn in his complaint did not guide him in the settlement of the only transaction he performed during his short servitude, as he omitted to defray the expenses of a pair of blankets that he had obtained at a store in Bathurst on my account, without informing me he had done so, at the same time receiving payment from me for the blankets in question, on his leaving my service.

H. Maclean, Esq.,
Chief Gold Commissioner, Bathurst.

I have, &c.,
HENRY M. KEIGHTLEY,
Assistant Gold Commissioner.

*Department of Lands,
Sydney, 21 April, 1863.*

SIR,

With reference to your letter of the 28th January last, respecting certain payments alleged to be due to you for services rendered by you in the capacity of Camp-keeper, I am directed by the Secretary for Lands to inform you, that so far as the payments said to be due to you are concerned, the statements of Mr. Assistant Gold Commissioner Keightley are directly opposite to your own, and that the proper mode of proving your claim would be to sue for wages.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

EUROPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY'S BILL.

FRIDAY, 7 AUGUST, 1863.

Present:—

MR. BURDEKIN, | MR. COWPER,
MR. HART.

CHARLES COWPER, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

W. C. Curtis, Esq. (of the firm of Messrs. Billyard & Curtis) appeared as Solicitor for the promoters of the Bill.

Frederick James Jackson, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Curtis: You are Secretary to the Local Board of the European Society in Sydney? I am. F. J. Jackson,
Esq.
2. Has a Joint Stock Company been established in England, by the name of the European Society? Yes. 7 Aug., 1863.
3. When was it established? The 2nd September, 1854.
4. Under what name was it established? Under the name of the People's Provident Assurance Society.
5. When was the statute to change the name of the Society to its present one passed? In April, 1859. 22 Vict., cap. 25.
6. Under what did the Society act previous to this? Under a deed of settlement.
7. Have you the date of that? The 2nd of September, 1854.
8. What was the object of the Act of April, 1859? To change the name of the Society.
9. Had the Act any other object than that of changing the name? Yes, it was "for authorizing the taking of the guarantee of the Society, instead of other security required from persons in public offices and employments, and for other purposes."
10. Under what power did the Society appoint Local Boards of Directors? Under the 39th clause of the deed of settlement, which empowers the Board in London, for the time being, to appoint Agents and Local Boards in the Colonies as well as in the United Kingdom.
11. Has a Local Board been appointed for the City of Sydney and Colony of New South Wales? It has.
12. What was the date of appointment of the present Local Board? The 25th November, 1861.
13. Of whom does the Local Board at present consist? Of George Thornton, J. G. Waller, and G. O. Allen.
14. Has that Board been appointed for carrying on the business of the Society? It has—under power of attorney.

- F. J. Jackson, Esq.
7 Aug., 1863.
15. By the Chairman: What is the capital of the Company? £250,000, with power to increase to half a million.
16. Have you branches established in any of the adjoining Colonies? We have in Melbourne, and agencies in Adelaide, Queensland, and New Zealand.
17. Have you commenced operations in New South Wales? We have been in operation for the last two years, under a Local Board; and for the ten years previously, under agencies.
18. There is a distinction then made between carrying on business under a Local Board and by an agency? Yes; a Local Board has power to deal with all matters in the Colony; agencies have to refer to the nearest branch offices having Local Boards.
19. Can you state to what extent operations have already been carried on in the Colony? Our annual income is about £6,000 for premiums.
20. By Mr. Curtis: How is that disposed of? All that is raised is invested in the Colony. We have power to draw upon the head office for claims if necessary, but since the establishment of the Company no money has ever been sent out of the Colony.
21. Is it within your knowledge that there has been any difficulty felt by this Company with reference to suing or being sued? In the recent case of the Bank of New South Wales, when a clause was made and action entered, the Bank found a difficulty in ascertaining whom they should sue. A similar difficulty was felt by the Liverpool and London Fire and Life Assurance Company, which was remedied by the Act of last Session.
22. By Mr. Burdekin: Is the capital of the Company paid up? Subscribed, but not all paid up.
23. Is the liability of the shareholders limited or unlimited? Unlimited.
24. Is there any register of the shareholders open to the public? A register of the shareholders is open to the public at the head office, and lists from time to time are published.
25. By Mr. Curtis: The power of attorney is duly registered in the Colony? Yes, and a return is made periodically, to the Board at Home, of all the changes that have been made in the shareholders.
26. By Mr. Hart: Are there any proprietors resident in this Colony? There are, I think, five. The Local Board are shareholders, and the medical officer of the Company is also a shareholder.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PARNELL'S TRUST BILL.

THURSDAY, 24 SEPTEMBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. COWPER, MR. CUNNEEN,		MR. GRAY, MR. MATE,
MR. SUTTOR.

CHARLES COWPER, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

W. Barker, Esq., appeared as Solicitor for the Promoters of the Bill.

Mr. Rees Rutland Jones called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Barker: What are you? Clerk to Messrs. Norton and Barker.
2. Do you produce the Probate of the Will of the late Mr. Thomas Parnell, of Richmond? Mr.
R. R. Jones.
Yes. (The witness produced the same.)
3. Have you examined the recitals in the preamble of the Bill with the Will? I have. 24 Sept., 1863.
4. Are those recitals strictly in accordance with the Will? They are.
5. Do you produce an examined copy of the Petition presented by Mr. William Parnell and Mr. Charles Parnell to the Supreme Court, in the matter of the trusts of the Will of Thomas Parnell, deceased? I do. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix A. No. 1.)
6. And also a true copy of the affidavit verifying the allegation of the petition? Yes. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix A. No. 2.)
7. That petition was filed under the 26th Victoria, No. 12? Yes.
8. Do you produce the judicial opinion and advice given by the Primary Judge in Equity upon that petition presented by the trustees, advising that this application should be made? I do. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix A. No. 3.)
9. The opinion you now produce is signed by the Master in Equity, in the usual form in which such documents are signed? Yes, and sealed with the seal of the Equity Branch of the Supreme Court.

Charles Parnell, Esq., called in and examined:—

10. By Mr. Barker: You are one of the petitioners for this Bill? Yes.
11. And a trustee under the will of your late father? Yes. C. Parnell,
Esq.
12. You and your brother William are now the only surviving trustees? Yes. 24 Sept., 1863.
13. Have all the children of the testator who are interested in the stations, runs, and stock under the trusts of the will, attained their majority? All, with the exception of four, who are still under age.
14. What are the ages of the four? The eldest of the four is twenty, the next is eighteen, the next fifteen, and the next twelve.

15.

- C. Parnell,
Esq.
24 Sept., 1863.
15. Have all the children of the testator who have already attained the age of twenty-one, received the shares of stock to which they are entitled under the will? They have; not the whole of them, but they have received part, and would have received the whole but for the late heavy rains. The muster is now going on, and in a very short space of time will be complete, and the stock will then be removed.
16. Then, if I understand you, you inform the Committee that those children who have already attained their majority, have received a portion of their stock, and that the remainder are now in course of being delivered? They will be.
17. They are being mustered, for the purpose of being delivered and of being removed from the run? Yes.
18. The delivery would have been completed but for the late rains? Yes; they will be taken away within a fortnight or three weeks at the very outside, perhaps sooner.
19. Are you of opinion that it will be advantageous for the four minors of whom you have spoken, that you should be authorized to sell the stock and stations in which they are interested? I am of that opinion, for the several reasons embodied in the petition presented by myself and my co-trustee to the Supreme Court.
20. Will you state very briefly why you think so? In the first instance, it is necessary to protect the runs from trespass, and to secure that it would be necessary to expend a large sum of money in the purchase of land to avail ourselves of the pre-emptive right, and to do that will cost upwards of £3,000, as we are near to a population of some 300 persons—within a few miles of them. It is also necessary to make large reservoirs for water. Besides, the grasses have deteriorated very much, and a great portion of the run is only fit for horse stock, and that is not considered by any person as a judicious investment. We have no power to expend that money, nor have we the power to purchase stock of any description, and we do consider on these grounds that it is necessary the station should be sold.
21. How much do you say it would be necessary to spend on the purchase of land, for the protection and successful management of the run? Over £3,000.
22. And you have no power to purchase land at all under the will? No; besides it would be necessary to spend a large sum of money in the formation of reservoirs.
23. Would the stock belonging to the minors be sufficient to stock the runs to which they are entitled? They would be totally inadequate, and I have no power to purchase other stock; indeed it is difficult now to say what description of stock it would be desirable to purchase; certainly not sheep, and to purchase cattle it would be necessary to spend a large sum of money in preserving water.
24. What would be the proportion of the expense of management, with regard to the income derivable from the property of the minors—Would not the expense of managing the diminished number be as great as it has hitherto been to manage the whole? Very nearly; indeed with the cattle I consider it would cost just as much with the fewer number as it would with the whole.
25. Would not a considerable part of the income be consumed in the expense of management? I question whether there would not be a deficiency; I believe the whole would be consumed. The license and assessment alone amount to £437 5s.
26. Have you, or your co-trustee, Mr. William Parnell, any personal interest in the property you now desire to sell? Not the least.
27. You are simply trustees for your own brothers and sisters who are minors? Simply trustees.
28. Was it because you and your co-trustee were convinced of the necessity to sell, that you presented your petition to the Supreme Court? Yes.
29. By Mr. Mate: You certify that that is the signature of your co-trustee (handing paper to witness)? It is.
30. By Mr. Suttor: Have leases been granted for these runs? No, I have no lease.
31. For none of them? No.
32. Can stock be obtained upon terms to stock these runs? They may of course be obtained, but I do not think any person interested in squatting would like that.
33. By Mr. Cunneen: Do you think that the interests of the minors would be better served by selling the stock as proposed by this Bill, or by leaving them unsold? Decidedly I am of opinion that it would be better for them to be sold.
34. I suppose your co-trustee is of the same opinion? Decidedly.

A. No. 1.

No. 1914 A.—Brief Petition for the Petitioners.

In the Supreme Court of New South Wales. }
In Equity. }

IN the Matter of the Trusts of the Will of Thomas Parnell, late of Richmond Bottoms, in the County of Cumberland, and of Osterley, in the County of Northumberland, in the Colony of New South Wales, grazier, deceased.

And of the Trust Property Act of 1862.

To the Honorable Samuel Frederick Milford, Esquire, the Primary Judge in Equity of the Supreme Court of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of William Parnell, of Richmond, in the County of Cumberland, and Colony of New South Wales; and Charles Parnell, of Osterley, Hunter River, in the County of Northumberland, in the said Colony, the surviving Trustees and Executors of the Will of the above-named Thomas Parnell, deceased,—

SHEWETH AS FOLLOWS:—

1. The said Thomas Parnell duly made and executed his last will and testament in writing, bearing date the eighteenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two; and the said testator, after appointing his wife, Elizabeth Parnell, since deceased, and your petitioners, to be executors and trustees of his will, proceeded to direct and bequeath, in the words and figures following, that is to say: "In the first place, I direct that all my just debts, and funeral and testamentary expenses, be paid and satisfied as soon as can be after my decease: And I charge my freehold estates with the payment thereof in aid of my personal estate: And I direct my executors, in the first place, to apply that part of my personal estate as may consist of ready money, and money at my bankers, and money that may be owing to me, in or towards payment of my just debts and funeral and testamentary expenses: I give and bequeath unto my said wife absolutely all my household furniture, pictures, plate, linen, china, glass, musical instruments, watches, horses, carts, drays, and carriages, and furniture belonging thereto, cows, poultry, and other live stock growing, and other crops, implements of husbandry, wines, liquors, and consumable stores, and other the household effects in or about my dwelling-house called Rose Cottage, and upon my farm belonging thereto, situate at Richmond Bottoms aforesaid: And I hereby, so far as I lawfully or equitably may or can, exempt and discharge the personal estate so bequeathed to my said wife as aforesaid, from the payment of my debts, funeral and testamentary expenses: I direct my trustees or trustee, for the time being, out of the income and proceeds arising from the residue of my personal estate to provide my father, Thomas Parnell, with proper and sufficient board, lodging, clothing, attendance, and all other necessaries during his life: And as to for and concerning all the residue and remainder of my personal estate and effects, whatsoever and wheresoever, and of what nature or kind soever, of which I shall be possessed at the time of my decease: I give and bequeath the same unto the said Elizabeth Parnell, William Parnell, and Charles Parnell, their executors, administrators, and assigns: Upon trust that they or the survivors, or survivor of them, or the executors or administrators of such survivor, will or shall with all convenient speed after my decease possess, collect, and get in any moneys which may be due and owing to my estate, with full powers for my said trustees or trustee, in their or his discretion, to refer to arbitration any dispute concerning any debts or credits owing by or belonging to, or claimed to be owing by or belonging to my estate, and also to compound for any moneys due or owing to my estate, upon such terms and in such manner as my said trustees or trustee shall think proper: And to give or allow time for the payment of any moneys owing to my estate without being answerable for any loss in respect thereof: And to pay any debt or debts claimed to be owing by me, notwithstanding the want or defect of strict legal evidence or title in support thereof: And upon further trust to lay out and invest the clear residue of the moneys to be received and got in as aforesaid in the purchase of shares in the capital stock of one or more of the banks in Sydney, and to stand possessed thereof, in trust, for all and every my daughters living at my decease (except my daughter Mary Cope, wife of Joseph Cope, of Windsor, who I have already provided for) as shall have attained the age of twenty-one years or been married, or shall afterwards live to attain the age of twenty-one years or marry before that age, if more than one, in equal shares: And to pay unto or permit and empower my said wife to receive the annual income and dividends thereof for and towards the maintenance, education, and bringing up of my said daughters until they respectively shall attain the age of twenty-one years, or be married under that age: And to stand and be possessed of the residue of my live stock, upon trust, for my said wife and for all and every my children living at my decease (except my son Edward Parnell, and my daughter the said Mary Cope, who I have already provided for) as shall have attained the age of twenty-one years, or been married, or as shall afterwards live to attain the age of twenty-one years or marry before that age, to be divided between or amongst them in equal shares: And I direct that the shares of such of my said children as shall be a son or sons of and in the residue of my said live stock shall be delivered to him or them respectively at his or their respective ages of twenty-one years, and that the share or shares of such of my said children as shall be a daughter or daughters of and in the said bank shares and of and in the residue of my said live stock shall be paid, transferred, and delivered to her or them respectively at her or their respective ages of twenty-one years or day or respective days of marriage which shall first happen: And I direct that a partition and division of the said bank shares and of the said live stock shall be made when and as each of my said children shall become entitled to his or her share: And that such partitions and divisions shall be made by the trustees or trustee for the time being of my will in such manner as they or he or she in their, his, or her discretion shall think proper: And I direct my said trustees or trustee for the time being to pay unto or permit and empower my said wife to receive the net annual income and profits to be derived from the sale of the wool to be produced from my said sheep and the increase and produce thereof, and also from the sale of such of my said sheep as may be fit and proper to be killed for food and as my said trustees or trustee

"may

"may think advisable: And also the net annual income to be derived from the sale of such of my said horned cattle and horses as my said trustees or trustee may think advisable: She thereout maintaining, educating, and bringing up such of my sons as shall for the time being be under the age of twenty-one years, and such of my daughters as shall for the time being be under that age and unmarried." And the said testator, after giving certain directions in case of the marriage again of his said wife, which event did not happen, directed his said trustees or trustee by and with and out of the moneys to be derived respectively from the wool of the said sheep, and from the sale of the said sheep, horned cattle, and horses as therein aforesaid to pay all lawful charges for the depasturing such sheep, cattle, and horses, and the increase and produce thereof respectively, and for the management, charge, and care of the same: And also the Government assessment and license fees due in respect of any land upon which the said sheep, cattle, and horses might be depasturing: And the said testator authorized his said trustees or trustee in their, her, or his discretion, to convert into money by sale or mortgage and apply not more than one half of the expectant share or shares of any of his said children, for his, her, or their advancement in life: And the said testator gave and bequeathed all his right, title, and interest in and to all the sheep and cattle stations or runs that he might be possessed of at the time of his decease, unto his two youngest children that should be living at the time his youngest child should attain the age of twenty-one years, as tenants in common: And the said testator by his said will, after giving and devising unto his said trustees the real estate vested in him as mortgagee or trustee in manner therein mentioned, made specific devises in manner and form therein contained of his real estate, in favour of his son, Matthew James Parnell, his wife, Elizabeth Parnell, his son, your petitioner, William Parnell, his son, John Henry Parnell, his son, Thomas Liverpool Parnell, and his son, your petitioner, Charles Parnell, charged as to the last mentioned devise to his said son, your petitioner, Charles Parnell, with a sum of three hundred and fifty pounds which the said testator gave to his daughters who should be living at his decease, except as therein mentioned.

2. The said testator duly made and executed a codicil in writing to his said will, dated the seventeenth day of November one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, but the said codicil in no way affects the disposition of the said personal estate and cattle and sheep stations of the said testator in his said will contained.

3. The said testator duly made and executed a second codicil in writing to his said will, dated the 8th day of October, 1853; and the said testator thereby revoked the trusts of the residue of his personal estate in his said will contained, so far as two of his daughters and one of his sons therein named were concerned; but the said codicil in no other respect affects the disposition of the said personal estate and cattle and sheep stations of the said testator in his said will contained.

4. The said testator died on the 11th day of September, 1856, without having revoked or altered his said will and codicil or either of them, save only in so far as the said will was revoked or altered by the said codicils; and the said will and codicils were, on the 17th day of November, 1856, duly proved in this Honorable Court, in its Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, by the said Elizabeth Parnell and your petitioners, the executrix and executors therein named.

5. The said Thomas Parnell, the father of the said testator, died in the year 1853, in the lifetime of the said testator; and the said Elizabeth Parnell, the widow of the said testator, died on the twenty-sixth day of December, 1862.

6. Your petitioners and Edward Parnell, of Jerry's Plains, Mary Cope, widow, of Windsor, formerly Mary Parnell, spinster, Elizabeth Baker, the wife of Henry Baker, of Newcastle, solicitor, formerly Elizabeth Parnell, spinster, Thomas Liverpool Parnell, of Wetalibah, Namoi River, Sarah Cooper, the wife of Theophilus Cooper, of New England, in the said Colony, formerly Sarah Parnell, spinster, Agnes Thompson, the wife of Lindsay George Thompson, of Sydney, formerly Agnes Parnell, spinster, John Henry Parnell, of Osterley, Hunter River, Susan Hester Parnell, Margaret Isabella Parnell, Emma Jane Parnell, Matthew James Parnell, and Wilhelmina Alice Parnell, of Sydney, were the only children of the said testator left by the said testator him surviving, of whom the said Agnes Thompson, John Henry Parnell, Susan Hester Parnell, Margaret Isabella Parnell, Emma Jane Parnell, Matthew James Parnell, and Wilhelmina Alice Parnell were then infants under the age of twenty-one years; and of whom the said Agnes Thompson, then Agnes Parnell, spinster, John Henry Parnell, and Susan Hester Parnell have, since the death of the said testator, attained their respective ages of twenty-one years, that is to say:—The said Agnes Thompson on or about the 13th day of September, 1857, the said John Henry Parnell on or about the 12th day of February, 1860, and the said Susan Hester Parnell, on or about the 21st day of June, 1862.

7. The debts and funeral and testamentary expenses of the said testator have been long since paid and satisfied by the said executors and trustees of the said testator, and the said Elizabeth Parnell, the widow of the said testator, received and enjoyed the personal estate specifically bequeathed to her by the said will: And the said executors and trustees long since collected and got in the moneys due and owing to the estate of the said testator at his death; and the moneys so received and got in have been invested in conformity with the directions in the said will in that behalf contained: And the said executors and trustees have held and managed the cattle, sheep, and horses, and live stock of the said testator, together with the sheep and cattle stations of the said testator, for the benefit of all the children of the said testator interested therein under the said will of the said testator.

8. The sheep and cattle stations, or runs of which the said testator was possessed at the time of his death, and which are now held by your petitioners as such surviving trustees of the said will and codicils of the said testator as hereinbefore mentioned, consist of two runs adjoining to each other, situate in the District of Liverpool Plains, and called or known respectively by the names of the Burrell or Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs, a plan whereof is hereunto annexed marked with the letter A; and also of seven runs adjoining to each other, situate on the River Darling, and called respectively Geera or Wyaberry, Willoi Ulouri, Back Willoi, Back Ulouri, Ginge, and Back Ginge, a plan whereof is hereunto annexed, marked with the letter B.

9. The value of the said Burrell or Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs is in danger of being entirely destroyed, inasmuch as at the expiration of the existing tenancy, which will determine on the 31st day of December, 1865, your petitioners will be liable at any time to be deprived of the most valuable portions of the said runs, and without the possession of which it would be impossible profitably to hold the said runs, by means of the said portions being open to free selection under the provisions of the Act 25 Victoria, No. 1.

10. The portions of the said Burrell or Wetalibah Run to which your Petitioners refer in the last paragraph of this petition, are marked with the figures I, II, III, and IV, on the map or plan hereunto annexed marked with the letter A. The said figure I indicates land in the neighbourhood of land which now forms part of the public reserve for the town of Gunnedah, the said town of Gunnedah being separated from the said Burrell or Wetalibah Run by the River Namoi, and containing a population of 200 inhabitants or thereabouts. The said figure II indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called the Gunnebal Lagoon; the said Gunnebal Lagoon being the only available watering place for cattle on that part of the said run. The said figure III indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of the said River Namoi; and the said figure IV indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called the Gap Creek, the said Gap Creek being a dry creek, but where, by the expenditure of money in constructing a dam and other works, a supply of water may be obtained for the use of a portion of the said run.

11. Your petitioners are advised and believe that, in order to secure to your petitioners as such trustees as hereinbefore mentioned, the secure and proper use and enjoyment of the said Burrell or Wetalibah Run, it would be necessary to purchase 320 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the westerly end of the said public reserve for the said town of Gunnedah, and 320 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the westerly end of the said public reserve;

reserve; 320 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the neighbourhood of the said Gunnibal Lagoon; 160 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the said neighbourhood of the said River Namoi; and 320 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the said neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek—the object of purchasing the said several portions of land, with the exception of the said land in the said neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek, being to preserve an adequate supply of water for the use of a portion of the said Wetalibah Run, and to protect the said run against trespass; and the object of purchasing the said land in the said neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek being to preserve free access to the said Tulcumbah Run from the said Wetalibah run, such access being necessary to the convenient management and enjoyment of both the said runs, and also to secure a supply of water for the said Burrell or Wetalibah Run.

12. The portions of the said Tulcumbah Run to which your petitioners refer in the 8th paragraph of this petition, are marked with the figures V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, X, XI, XII, and XIII, on the said map or plan hereunto annexed marked with the letter A. The said figure V indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek. The said figure VI indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called Barney's Springs, at which station are valuable improvements, consisting of a newly-erected stockyard, shepherd's huts, watering troughs, and other improvements. The said figure VII indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain station, consisting of sheep-yards, huts, and other buildings, called the Gap Station. The said figure VIII indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain other station, consisting of stockyards, huts, and other buildings, called the Borah Station. The said figure IX indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water marked in the said map as the reservoir and well, and where there is a station consisting of stockyards, huts, and other buildings. The said figure X indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called Orphant's Well, and where there is also a station, consisting of yards, huts, and other buildings. The said figure XI indicates land in the neighbourhood of a certain station, consisting of a paddock, stockyards, woolshed, and other valuable improvements, marked in the said map as Tulcumbah Head Station. The said figure XII indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called Gunambene Swamp. The said figure XIII indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain run called Peel Run.

13. Your petitioners are advised and believe that, in order to secure to your petitioners as such trustees as hereinbefore mentioned, the secure and proper use and enjoyment of the said Tulcumbah Run, it would be necessary to purchase 320 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek; 160 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Barney's Springs; 160 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Gap Station; 160 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Borah Station; 320 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the said reservoir; 160 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Orphant's Well; 160 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Tulcumbah Head Station; 160 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the neighbourhood of the said Gunambene Swamp; and 160 acres of land, or thereabouts, in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Peel Run; the general object of purchasing the said several pieces of land being to preserve an adequate supply of water for the said Tulcumbah Run, and to protect the said run from encroachment.

14. Your petitioners are advised and believe that they, as such trustees as hereinbefore mentioned, have no power; and, as a matter of fact, your petitioners have no adequate pecuniary means in their possession to purchase the said several pieces of land hereinbefore mentioned. And your petitioners are advised and believe that, in the absence of such power and means as aforesaid, the only course, which, having regard to the interests of the parties entitled under the said will of the testator, can be advantageously pursued, is to sell the said Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs and the stock thereon, and to invest the proceeds of such sale in the manner directed by the said testator in reference to the residue of the moneys to be received and got in as part of his residuary personal estate, and to apply the annual income of such investment, and the securities on which such investment shall be made, for the benefit of the persons entitled under the said will to the stations and stock respectively, in conformity with the trusts of the said will, or as near thereto as the nature of the said investments will admit.

15. Your petitioners submit, as a further reason for selling the said Burrell or Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs, that the expense of managing the said runs is continually becoming more and more disproportionate to any advantage derived from such management, inasmuch as, according to the provisions of the said will of the said testator, the share of the stock depasturing on the said runs belonging to any one of the said testator's children is withdrawn from the said runs immediately on such child attaining the age of 21 years: And your petitioners submit that this reason is strengthened by the fact that it will be absolutely necessary, in order efficiently to manage the said runs, to spend a large sum of money in improvements on the said runs.

16. Your petitioners submit, as a further reason for selling the said Burrell or Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs that, in consequence of withdrawal of stock as hereinbefore mentioned, the said runs are becoming understocked, and are in consequence in danger of serious injury from encroachment, and that the most effectual way of obviating such danger and of preventing the said encroachment, would be fully to stock the said runs, but your petitioners are unable so to do consistently with the trusts of the said will of the said testator.

17. Your petitioners submit, as an additional reason for selling the said Burrell or Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs, that the grasses on the said runs have so much deteriorated that the sheep depasturing on the said runs are rapidly becoming injured and enfeebled in constitution, and that thereby the yield of wool is becoming less in quantity and inferior in quality, and the value of the said sheep as breeders is also greatly diminished.

18. Your petitioners are also advised and believe that the said seven runs called Geera or Wyaberry, Willoi and Ulouri, Back Willoi, Back Ulouri, Ginge and Back Ginge respectively, so appearing on the said map or plan annexed hereto, marked with the letter B hereinbefore mentioned, ought also to be sold, inasmuch as the said run called Geera or Wyaberry, is in consequence of its position with regard to the River Darling, exposed to continual trespass by persons travelling with cattle and other stock along the main road which runs along the bank of the said river; and inasmuch as the said run is in danger of being exposed to further encroachment, by reason of the two pieces or parcels of land situated within the said run, and marked on the said map or plan with the letter R, and coloured red, having been set out as Government Reserves, and being therefore liable, at the expiration of the existing tenancy, which will terminate on the 31st December, 1865, to be put up to public sale; and inasmuch as the said runs, called Willoi and Ulouri respectively, are so inadequately supplied with water, that a considerable outlay is required to render them suitable for the purpose of pasturing stock.

19. Your petitioners submit, as an additional reason for selling the said Geera or Wyaberry, Willoi, and Ulouri Runs, that in consequence of the shares of each of the children of the said testator in the said stock being from time to time withdrawn as each of such children comes of age, the expense necessary for rendering the said runs suitable for the purpose of pasturing stock as aforesaid will become quite disproportionate to the advantage derived from the use of the said runs for pasturing the stock continuing on the said runs.

20. Your petitioners are advised and believe, that all the said runs hereinbefore mentioned could be now sold much more advantageously than it is probable that they would be sold at a future time.

21. That the license fees and assessment payable to Government on the several runs hereinbefore referred to, amount, together, to the annual sum of four hundred and thirty-seven pounds five shillings.

22. Your petitioners are advised and submit that, under the circumstances hereinbefore mentioned, it is desirable that your petitioners should obtain the opinion, advice, and direction of your Honor, respecting the future management and administration of the several runs hereinbefore mentioned; in reference to the question of the propriety of your petitioners, under the circumstances hereinbefore mentioned, selling the said runs; and, in the event of such sale being proper, upon the further question, whether your petitioners have authority to carry such sale into effect; and if your Honor shall be of opinion that your petitioners have not such authority, then, upon the further question, whether your petitioners ought to take any, and if any, what steps—by an application to this Honorable Court, or to the Legislature, or otherwise, to obtain such authority.

Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that your Honor will be pleased to give to your petitioners your Honor's opinion and advice respecting the management and administration of the several runs hereinbefore mentioned; in reference to the question of the propriety of the sale of the said runs, under the circumstances hereinbefore mentioned; and in the event of your Honor's opinion and advice being in favour of selling the said runs, or any of them, then, that your Honor would be pleased further to give to your petitioners your Honor's opinion and advice, whether your petitioners have authority to sell the said runs or any of them; and if your Honor shall be of opinion that your petitioners have not such authority, then, that your Honor will be pleased to give to your petitioners your Honor's opinion, advice, and direction, whether your petitioners should take any, and if any, what steps—by application to this Honorable Court, or to the Legislature, or otherwise—to obtain such authority.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

WILLIAM BARKER,
Elizabeth-street, Sydney,
Solicitor for the Petitioners.

A. No. 2.

Affidavit of William Parnell and Charles Parnell, sworn 18th June, 1863,—

STATES:—

1. The paper-writing hereunto annexed, marked with the letter A, is a true copy of the last will and testament of our deceased father, Thomas Parnell, deceased, dated the 18th day of October, 1852, and of the two codicils thereto, the first dated the 17th day of November, 1852, and the second dated the 8th day of October, 1853.

2. The said testator died on the 11th day of September, 1856, without having revoked or altered his said will or codicils, or either of them, save only in so far as the said will was revoked or altered by the said codicils; and the said will and codicils were, on the 17th day of November, 1856, duly proved in this Honorable Court, in its Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, by the said Elizabeth Parnell, since deceased, and by us the executrix and executors therein named.

3. Thomas Parnell, the father of the said testator, in the said will named, died in the year 1853, in the lifetime of the said testator, and the said Elizabeth Parnell, the widow of the said testator, died on the 26th day of December, 1862.

4. We and Edward Parnell, of Jerry's Plains; Mary Cope, widow, of Windsor, formerly Mary Parnell, spinster; Elizabeth Baker, the wife of Henry Baker, of Newcastle, solicitor, formerly Elizabeth Parnell, spinster; Thomas Liverpool Parnell, of Wetalibah, Namoi River; Sarah Cooper, the wife of Theophilus Cooper, of Windemere, New England, in the said Colony, formerly Sarah Parnell; Agnes Thompson, the wife of Lindsay George Thompson, of Sydney, formerly Agnes Parnell, spinster; John Henry Parnell, of Osterley, Hunter River; Susan Hester Parnell, Margaret Isabella Parnell, and Emma Jane Parnell, Matthew James Parnell, and Wilhelmina Alice Parnell, of Sydney, were the only children of the said testator left by the said testator, him surviving, of whom the said Agnes Thompson, John Henry Parnell, Susan Hester Parnell, Margaret Isabella Parnell, Emma Jane Parnell, Matthew James Parnell, and Wilhelmina Alice Parnell, were then infants, under the age of 21 years, and of whom the said Agnes Thompson, then Agnes Parnell, spinster, John Henry Parnell, and Susan Hester Parnell have, since the death of their father, the said testator, attained their respective ages of 21 years—that is to say, the said Agnes Thompson, on or about the 13th day of September, 1857; the said John Henry Parnell, on or about the 12th day of February, 1860; and the said Susan Hester Parnell, on or about the 21st day of June, 1862.

5. The debts and funeral, and testamentary expenses of the said testator, have been long since paid by us, the said executors and trustees; and the said Elizabeth Parnell, the widow of the said testator, received and enjoyed the personal estate specifically bequeathed to her by the said will, and we have long since collected and got in the moneys due and owing to the estate of the said testator at his death, and the moneys so received and got in have been invested in conformity with the directions in the said will in that behalf contained: And we have held and managed the cattle, sheep, and horses, and live stock of the said testator, together with the sheep and cattle stations of the said testator, for the benefit of all the children of the said testator interested therein under the said will of the said testator.

6. The sheep and cattle stations, or runs, of which the testator was possessed at the time of his death, and which are now held by us as such surviving trustees of the said will and codicils of the said testator, as hereinbefore mentioned, consist of two runs adjoining to each other, situate in the District of Liverpool Plains, and called or known, respectively, by the names of Burrell, Wetalibah, and Tulcumba Runs, a plan whereof, marked with the letter A, is annexed to the petition presented by us to His Honor Samuel Edward Milford, Esquire, the Primary Judge in Equity of this Honorable Court; and also of seven runs adjoining to each other, situate on the River Darling, and called respectively Geera or Wyaberry, Willoi, and Ulouri, Back Willoi, Back Ulouri, Ginge, and Back Ginge; a plan whereof is also annexed to the said petition, marked with the letter B.

7. The value of the said Burrell and Wetalibah, and Tulcumba Runs, is, in our judgment and opinion, in danger of being entirely destroyed, inasmuch as, at the expiration of the existing tenancy, which will determine on the 31st day of December, 1865, we will be liable at any time to be deprived of the most valuable portions of the said runs, and without the possession of which it would be impossible probably to hold the said runs, by means of the said portions being open to free selection, under the provisions of the Act 25 Victoria, No. 1.

8. The portions of the Burrell and Wetalibah Run referred to by us in the last paragraph, are marked with the figures I, II, III, and IV on the said map or plan annexed to the said petition marked with the letter A; the said figure I indicates land in the neighbourhood of land which now forms part of the public reserve for the town of Gunnedah, the said town of Gunnedah being separated from the said Burrell or Wetalibah Run by the river Namoi, and containing a population of 200 inhabitants or thereabouts. The said figure II indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called the Gunnibal Lagoon, the said Gunnibal Lagoon being the only available watering place for cattle on that run. The said figure III indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of the said river Namoi, and the said figure IV indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called the Gap Creek, the said Gap Creek being a dry creek, but where, by the expenditure of money in constructing a dam and other works, a supply of water may be obtained for the use of a portion of the said run.

9. We are advised and believe that, in order to secure to us, as such trustees hereinbefore mentioned, the secure and proper use and enjoyment of the Burrell or Wetalibah Run, it would be necessary to purchase 320 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the westerly end of the said public reserve for the said town of Gunnedah, and 320 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the westerly end of the said public reserve, 320 acres of land or thereabouts in the neighbourhood of the said Gunnibal Lagoon, 160 acres of land or thereabouts in the neighbourhood of the said Namoi River, and 320 acres of land or thereabouts in the said neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek; the object of purchasing the said several portions of land, with the exception of the said land in the neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek, being to procure an adequate supply of water for the use of a portion of the said Wetalibah Run, and to protect the said run against trespass; and the object of purchasing the said land in the said neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek, being to preserve free access to the said Tulcumbah Run from the said Wetalibah Run, such access being necessary to the convenient enjoyment of both the said runs: And also to secure a supply of water for the said Burrell or Wetalibah Run.

10. The portions of the said Tulcumbah Run to which we have referred in the sixth paragraph hereof, are marked with the figures V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, X, XI, XII, and XIII on the said map or plan hereinbefore mentioned as marked with the letter A and annexed to the said petition. The said figure V indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek; the said figure VI indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called Barney's Springs, at which station are valuable improvements consisting of a newly erected stockyard, shepherd's huts, watering-troughs, and other improvements. The said figure VII indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain station, consisting of sheep-yards, huts, and other buildings, called the Gap Station. The said figure VIII indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain other station, consisting of stockyards, huts, and other buildings, called the Borah Station. The said figure IX indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water marked on the said map as the reservoir and well, and where there is a station consisting of stockyards, huts, and other buildings. The said figure X indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called Orphant's Well, and where there is also a station consisting of yards, huts, and other buildings. The said figure XI indicates land in the neighbourhood of a certain station, consisting of a paddock, stockyard, woolsheds, and other valuable improvements, marked on the said plan as Tulcumbah Head Station. The said figure XII indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain piece of water called Gunambene Swamp. The said figure XIII indicates land in the immediate neighbourhood of a certain run called the Peel Run.

11. We are advised and believe that, in order to secure to us, as such trustees as hereinbefore mentioned, the secure and proper use and enjoyment of the said Tulcumbah Run, it would be necessary to purchase 320 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Gap Creek; 160 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Gap Station; 160 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Borah Station; 320 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the said reservoir; 160 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Orphant's Well; 160 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Tulcumbah Head Station; 160 acres of land or thereabouts in the neighbourhood of the said Gunambene Swamp; and 160 acres of land or thereabouts in the immediate neighbourhood of the said Peel Run; the general object of purchasing the said several pieces of land being to preserve an adequate supply of water for the said Tulcumbah Run, and to protect the said run from encroachment.

12. We are advised and believe that we, as such trustees as aforesaid, have no power, and as a matter of fact we have no adequate pecuniary means in our possession to purchase the several pieces of land hereinbefore mentioned; and we are advised and believe that, in the absence of such powers and means as aforesaid, the only course which, having regard to the interest of the parties entitled under the said will of the said testator, can be advantageously pursued is, to sell the said Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Run and the stock thereon, and to invest the proceeds of such sale in the manner directed by the said testator in reference to the residue of the moneys to be received and got in as part of his residuary personal estate, and to apply the annual income of such investment and the securities in which such investment shall be made, for the benefit of the persons entitled under the said will to the stations and stock respectively, in conformity with the trusts of the said will, or as near thereto as the nature of the said investment will admit.

13. The expense of managing the said runs, called the said Burrell or Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs, is continually becoming more and more disproportionate to any advantage derived from such management, inasmuch as according to the provisions of the said will of the said testator, the share of the stock depasturing on the said runs belonging to any one of the said testator's children is withdrawn from the said runs immediately on such child attaining the age of twenty-one years; and we are advised and believe that it will be absolutely necessary, in order efficiently to manage the said runs, to spend a large sum of money on the improvement of the said runs.

14. That in consequence of the withdrawal of stock from the said Burrell or Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs, as hereinbefore mentioned, the said runs are becoming understocked, and are in consequence, in our judgment and opinion, in danger of serious injury from encroachment; and we believe that the most efficient way of obviating such danger and of preventing the said encroachment would be fully to stock the said runs, but we are unable so to do consistently with the trusts of the said will of the said testator.

15. That the grasses on the said Burrell or Wetalibah and Tulcumbah Runs have so much deteriorated, that the sheep depasturing on the said runs are rapidly becoming injured and enfeebled in constitution, and thereby the yield of wool is becoming less in quantity and inferior in quality, and the value of the said sheep as breeders is also greatly diminished.

16. We are also advised and believe that the said several runs, called Geera or Wyaberry, Willoi, and Olouri, Back Willoi, Back Olouri, Ginge, and Back Ginge, respectively so appearing on the said map or plan hereinbefore referred to as marked with the letter B, ought also to be sold, inasmuch as the said run called Geera or Wyaberry is, in consequence of its position with regard to the River Darling, exposed to continual trespass by persons travelling with cattle and other stock along the main road which runs along the banks of the said river; and inasmuch as the said run is in danger of being exposed to further encroachment, by reason of the two pieces or parcels of land situated within the said run marked on the said map or plan with the letter R, and coloured red, having been set out as Government Reserves, and being therefore liable, at the expiration of the existing tenancy, which will terminate on the 31st day of December, 1865, to be put up to public sale; and inasmuch as the said runs called Willoi and Olouri respectively are so inadequately supplied with water that a considerable outlay is required to render them suitable for the purpose of pasturing stock.

17. In consequence of the shares of the children of the said testator in the said stock on the said Geera or Wyaberry Willoi and Olouri Runs being from time to time withdrawn as each of such children comes of age, the expense necessary for rendering the said runs suitable for the purpose of pasturing stock as aforesaid will become quite disproportionate to the advantage derived from the use of the said runs for pasturing the stock continuing on the said runs.

18. We are advised and believe that all the said runs hereinbefore mentioned could be now sold much more advantageously than it is probable they could be sold at a future time.

19. The license fees and assessment payable to Government on the several runs hereinbefore referred to, amount together to the annual sum of £437 5s., or thereabouts.

No. 1,914 A.—Judicial Opinion and Advice.

In the Supreme Court of New South Wales. }
 In Equity. }

IN the matter of the Trusts of the Will of Thomas Parnell, late of Richmond Bottoms, in the County of Cumberland, and of Osterly, in the County of Northumberland, in the Colony of New South Wales, and of the Trust Property Act, 1862.

Friday, the tenth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three.

WHEREAS William Parnell and Charles Parnell, the surviving trustees and executors of the will of the above-named Thomas Parnell, deceased, did, on the twenty-ninth day of June last, prefer their petition to the Honorable Samuel Frederick Milford, Esquire, the Primary Judge in Equity of this Honorable Court, setting forth as therein is set forth, and praying that His Honor would be pleased to give to the petitioners His Honor's opinion and advice respecting the management and administration of the several runs therein mentioned in reference to the question of the propriety of the sale of the said runs under the circumstances therein mentioned, and in the event of His Honor's opinion and advice being in favour of selling the said runs, or any of them, that His Honor would be pleased further to give to the petitioners His Honor's opinion and advice whether the petitioners had authority to sell the said runs, or any of them, and if His Honor should be of opinion that the petitioners had not such authority, then that His Honor would be pleased to give to the petitioners His Honor's opinion and advice whether the petitioners should take any, and if any, what steps, by application to this Honorable Court, or to the Legislature, or otherwise, to obtain such authority; whereupon all parties concerned were ordered to attend the Primary Judge in Equity on the matter of the said petition; and all parties concerned attending this day accordingly before His Honor Samuel Frederick Milford, Esquire, the said Primary Judge; whereupon and upon hearing the said petition and the affidavit of the said William Parnell and Charles Parnell, sworn the eighteenth day of June last read, and upon hearing what was alleged by Mr. Gordon of counsel for the petitioners, and by Mr. Darley of the counsel for John Henry Parnell, the guardian ad litem of the infants Margaret Isabella Parnell, Emma Jane Parnell, Matthew James Parnell, and Wilhelmina Alice Parnell, interested under the said will of Thomas Parnell, deceased, in the several matters referred to in the said petition, His Honor is of opinion that it is advisable, and for the interest of all parties concerned, that a sale should be made of the several runs in the said petition mentioned, if the said William Parnell and Charles Parnell, the surviving trustees of the will of the said Thomas Parnell, deceased, had sufficient powers under the said will to effect such sale; and His Honor being of opinion that the said will did not contain sufficient power to enable them to effect such sale, he advises that an application should be made to the Legislature, for a private Act to enable the said trustees to sell the said several runs, and to do all necessary and proper acts for effecting such sale, and to invest the proceeds upon such of the trusts of the will of the said Thomas Parnell, deceased, as are still subsisting and capable of taking effect, or as near thereto as the nature of the circumstances may allow or the Legislature may direct.

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

COLONIAL SUGAR COMPANY'S BILL.

FRIDAY, 2 OCTOBER, 1863.

Present :—

MR. SAMUEL,		MR. GARRETT,
MR. DALGLEISH,		MR. SMART,
	MR. MATE.

SAUL SAMUEL, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

George Penbivil Slade, Esq., called in and examined :—

1. By the Chairman : You are Solicitor for the promoters of this Bill ? Yes, I am Solicitor for the Bill. G. P. Slade,
Esq.
2. What are the objects of the Bill ? The objects of the Bill are simply to enable the Company to sue and be sued in the name of the Company, without incorporation, and without in any shape limiting the liability of the Company. 2 Oct., 1863.
3. The Company, I presume, have a deed of settlement ? The Company have a deed of settlement, which I produce. (Deed produced.) It is dated the 1st day of January, 1855, and is duly executed. The Company commenced business on the same day, and have since carried on business.
4. Does Mr. Knox's name appear to that deed of settlement ? It does. The present Directors are Edward Knox, Esq. (Chairman), Frederick Fanning, Esq., William Walker, Esq., Frederick Tooth, Esq., and Thomas Buckland, Esq. The capital of the Company is £150,000, in 3,000 shares of £50 each, the whole of which has been paid up.
5. By Mr. Garrett : The liability is unlimited ? Entirely unlimited, and we do not seek to limit it in any way. I should add, that the object of the Company is not only to sue and be sued, but also to vest the property of the Company in the present and future Trustees, as they shall be from time to time appointed, without the necessity for the usual conveyance.
6. By the Chairman : Is that a usual provision ? Yes. I may say that every clause of this Bill is identical with the similar clauses of two Acts passed for the Liverpool and London Fire and Life Insurance Company, by which these powers have been sought by that Company on two several occasions. In 1857 an Act was passed "to vest the Trust Moneys "Securities and Property of the Liverpool and London Fire and Life Insurance Company in "this Colony in the local Trustees of the said Company for the time being." The clauses of that Act, or such of them as were applicable to the subject, have been embodied in this Bill. In 1862 an Act was passed "to enable the Liverpool and London Fire and Life Insurance Company to sue and be sued in the name of such Company." The provisions of that Act, so far as they are applicable to this case, have also been embodied in this Bill. We are seeking solely and simply in this one Bill the powers given to the Liverpool and London Insurance Company in those two Acts. I may mention, as a reason for our not having applied for an Act before, that we have hitherto had no occasion to sue ; but we are now involved in some litigation, and it becomes necessary, and has in fact been done, to insert the names of the whole of the shareholders—an extremely inconvenient process, as well for the plaintiff as the defendant ; and in the event of any action being brought against the Company, it would subject persons seeking redress to very serious inconvenience.
7. The Company are now carrying on extensive operations in Sydney ? Yes.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

MORUYA SILVER MINING COMPANY'S INCORPORATION BILL.

WEDNESDAY, 9 DECEMBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. GARRETT, | MR. LEARY,
CAPT. MORIARTY.

JOSEPH LEARY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Randolph J. Want, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You are Solicitor to the promoters of the Bill? I am.
2. Will you be good enough to state generally what objects the promoters of the Bill propose to themselves? I produce the deed of settlement of the company, by which it is shewn that the object of the promoters or the shareholders of the company, is the working of mines on the company's purchased and leased land at Moruya. The name of the company is the "Moruya Silver Mining Company." It was formed in the year 1862, and has been in operation ever since. By the 4th clause of the deed of settlement the directors are directed to apply for an Act of incorporation. The capital of the company is £20,000, and all the shares have been taken up; the deed has been signed by sixty-six shareholders; the preamble of the Bill is true in every respect, and the Bill itself contains the usual clauses inserted in most of the mining incorporation Acts that have been passed in the Colony.
3. Ample provision has been made for the security of the shareholders? Yes, the usual clauses of the Colonial Mining Incorporation Acts have been inserted in the Bill.
4. By Mr. Garrett: The Bill enables you to sue and be sued? Yes, that is the principal object of the Bill.
5. How much of the £20,000 capital has been paid up? The original shares first taken up amounted to £10,000, all of which was paid. Since then there have been additional shares issued amounting to £10,000, of which sum £8,000 have been paid up.
6. By Capt. Moriarty: About nine-tenths of the whole capital have been paid up? Yes, about that.
7. By Mr. Garrett: And invested in machinery? Yes, principally.
8. Have the company raised much ore? Their attention has been principally directed to the opening of the mines rather than to the raising of ore.

R. J. Want,
Esq.

9 Dec., 1863.

- R. J. Want,
Esq.
9 Dec., 1863.
9. How far are the mines from the place of shipment? Not above a mile or a mile and a quarter at the outside; that is from the mines to Wanban Creek; we have the ore carted from the mine and delivered on board vessels lying in the harbour at 25s. per ton.
10. What per centage of silver does the ore contain on an average? It is impossible to say—it varies so very much. From some of it we have got no silver at all—only gold, whilst from other ore we have got as much as 160 ounces of silver and 12 of gold to the ton of ore. It is, however, impossible to say with certainty, until it is worked, what the mine will turn out.
11. Have you power to increase your capital, and to what extent? Only by the issue of new shares—in no other way.
12. And what is the limit of the issue of new shares? The extent is not named, and will depend upon circumstances; but the capital can only be increased by the issue of new shares, which must be taken up, and there is therefore no further liability of the shareholders.
13. And this is in accordance with the deed of settlement? It is.
14. By Capt. Moriarty: The mine is above the township? Yes, it is three miles from the township.
15. On the river, above the township? Yes.
16. And at certain states of the tide you can send down your ore to the harbour, to be shipped? Yes, we have water carriage within a mile of the mines. There is a creek named Wanban Creek that is navigable for punts up to within a mile of the place.
17. Within a mile by your road to the creek? Yes, and once shipped there, the ore goes right down the harbour to the vessel. The navigation of the harbour is all done with punts to the heads.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

COX'S MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT BILL.

TUESDAY, 15 DECEMBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. SAMUEL,
MR. HOLROYD,
MR. BELL,

MR. LEARY,
MR. RUSDEN,
MR. W. MACLEAY.

ARTHUR TODD HOLROYD, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Montagu Consett Stephen, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: Your name is Montagu Consett Stephen? Yes.
2. You are a solicitor of the Supreme Court? Yes.
3. And you are also solicitor for the petitioners? I am also solicitor for the petitioners.
4. Do you produce the deed of settlement? Yes, I produce the deed of settlement of the land described in the preamble of the Bill, which deed of settlement is in the terms in the Bill set forth. I also produce a reconveyance of a mortgage cited in that deed of settlement, also referred to in the Bill.
5. A reconveyance from whom? From Mr. Tebbutt. The land comprised in the marriage settlement was conveyed to the trustees of the settlement, subject to a certain mortgage.
6. And that mortgage has been paid off? Yes; it just simply makes the land subject to the trust of the settlement—it makes it free from the mortgage to which it was then subject, so that the land is not now liable to be interfered with by the mortgage. The marriage settlement is one made by Mr. George Cox, the father of Mr. Charles Clarendon Cox, on the latter's marriage with Miss Louisa Stafford Stuart. I propose to examine Mr. Charles Clarendon Cox.
7. Is there any power under that deed to sell the land comprised in the settlement? None whatever.

M. C.
Stephen,
Esq.

15 Dec., 1863.

Charles Clarendon Cox, Esq., called in and examined:—

8. By Mr. Stephen (Solicitor to the petitioners): You are one of the petitioners? Yes.
9. And you are the same Charles Clarendon Cox whose name is in this settlement? Yes.
10. By the Chairman: What is the date? The 17th September, 1855.
11. By Mr. Stephen: Louiza Stafford Stuart, mentioned in that settlement, became your wife shortly afterwards? Yes.
12. Is she alive now? No.
13. Were there any children of the marriage? One.
14. State the name and age, if you please? She was seven years old last June.
15. And her name? Louiza Eliza.
16. By the Chairman: She is living? Yes.
17. And the only child? Yes.

C. C. Cox,
Esq.

15 Dec., 1863.

- C. C. Cox,
Esq.
15 Dec., 1863.
18. By Mr. Stephen: Is there any one else interested under this marriage settlement besides yourself, that child, and your father, Mr. George Cox? No.
  19. He also is a petitioner in this Bill? Yes.
  20. Is this property let now? It is.
  21. What is it let for? £250, but including other lands as well.
  22. Have you any idea what it would sell for if it were put up for sale—that is, without reference to the other piece? Yes; I have had an offer for it.
  23. Of how much? £4,800 for this said property.
  24. Where is the property situated? Between Windsor and Richmond.
  25. How many acres does it comprise? 202.
  26. Are there any buildings on it? There are.
  27. What state are they in? They are in very good order now; they have been just repaired; but they are very old, and constantly require repairing.
  28. Is it possible with the land in its present state to make any more rental—is it let at its full annual value now? Yes, quite.
  29. By the Chairman: You say it is let with other lands for £250? Yes.
  30. What is the annual rent value of this piece of land which is comprised in the settlement? Well, I should say about — I can hardly tell without a little consideration.
  31. But you can give us some idea? About £200.
  32. By Mr. Stephen: How much of the rental per annum does it take to keep the place in repair—what proportion? About twelve months ago I spent nearly £1,000 on the property.
  33. And repairs to some extent are required continually? Yes.
  34. By the Chairman: Have you seen this Bill (before the Committee) Mr. Cox? Yes.
  35. Is that piece of land the land mentioned in the preamble of this Bill as “all that piece or parcel of land containing by estimation 200 acres more or less lying and situate in the district of Mulgrave-place in the Colony aforesaid”? Yes.
  36. And it is bounded as mentioned in the preamble? Yes.
  37. Then it will be for the benefit of both yourself and your child that a power should be given to you by the Legislature to sell this land, and re-invest under the terms of the settlement? Yes, that is the object of getting this Bill.
  38. By Mr. Stephen: You believe that a larger income would be produced by the property being sold and the money invested? Yes.
  39. By Mr. Leary: Could you, by any certain expenditure, obtain a very much larger yearly income from this estate? I think not; I have lost a great deal by floods during the last few years, in rent.
  40. And how will it pay anybody to give £4,000 for it—the amount of the offer? I believe he wants it as a homestead more than anything else; I do not think he expects ever to make much out of it.
  41. By Mr. Stephen: He owns the adjoining property, does he not? He does.
  42. By Mr. Leary: And £4,000 invested would yield a much larger interest? Much larger than I could obtain at present.
  43. By Mr. Stephen: Have you any funds belonging to this particular trust by which you could improve the estate so that it would produce more? No.
  44. And there is no money belonging to the same trust with which you could do it? No.

George Cox, Esq., called in and examined:—

- George Cox,
Esq.
15 Dec., 1863.
45. By Mr. Stephen: You are Mr. George Cox? I am.
  46. You were the conveying party in this deed of settlement? I was.
  47. You settled the property on your son and proposed daughter-in-law? Yes.
  48. You have a life interest under that deed, I believe? I have.
  49. And you join in this petition? I do.
  50. You are one of the petitioners for this Bill? Yes.
  51. You have heard the evidence just now given by Mr. Charles Clarendon Cox? I have.
  52. Is it correct? It is perfectly correct.
  53. By the Chairman: In your opinion, would it be to the advantage of the trust if this property were sold, and the proceeds invested under the terms of the settlement? No, I think not at all; I think quite the contrary; I think it would not be for the advantage of the child at all.
  54. To sell it? No, to keep it.
  55. Would it be of advantage to the child, and to Charles Clarendon Cox, to sell it under the terms of the settlement and to invest the proceeds? It would. It is an uncertain property; it is subject to floods; it is a very old establishment—it is father's oldest establishment.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

BATHURST MARKET BILL.

THURSDAY, 31 MARCH, 1864.

Present:—

MR. CUMMINGS, | MR. DANGAR,
MR. DRIVER.

RICHARD DRIVER, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

William Elyard, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You are Principal Under Secretary to the Government? Yes.
2. Do you produce any documents from the Office of the Colonial Secretary, relating to the Bathurst Market? There is an application from the Mayor of Bathurst, to have the Market, established some years since in the town of Bathurst, legally vested in the Municipal Council, to which an answer was given, stating that the request could not legally be complied with. A further application was made by the Mayor, dated 7th September, 1863, to the Government, to introduce an Act to give the Municipal Council of Bathurst control over the Market at that place; and in reply it was stated that, owing to the urgency of financial questions, the Government desired to confine the business as much as possible to that subject, and therefore they could not take up the question referred to at present. That is all the correspondence on the subject. An opinion was given by the late Attorney General, by which it appears that, where a market has been established under the "Market Act," 3 Victoria, No. 19, notwithstanding the provision in the existing "Municipalities Act," 22 Victoria, No. 13, passed in 1858, regulating markets, such market does not become vested in the municipality of the district; and therefore, the Commissioners being all dead or absent, either the process prescribed by the Market Act should be gone through again, or some special law passed to transfer the market to the municipality. (Copies of documents referred to handed in. Vide Appendix.)
3. Was this market in the town of Bathurst established in or about the year 1847? On the 2nd November, 1847, there was a notice approving of a Market at Bathurst, in terms of the Market Act.
4. Are the Commissioners originally appointed, dead or absent from the Colony? In the letter from the Mayor, to which I have referred, it is stated that the whole of them, with one exception, are dead, and that one is understood to be resident in Victoria.
5. There is a Municipal Council in Bathurst? Yes.
6. Are you aware whether the Municipal Council derive any revenue from the Bathurst Market at present, or are they in a position to collect any dues? No, they cannot be in a position to do so, there being no persons having any power to act; and the Mayor states that the Municipality is in consequence losing an annual revenue of about £400.
7. Do you believe that statement to be correct? I have no reason to suppose it otherwise. Of course I can have no knowledge of the probable revenue, but I have no doubt of the other fact—that they have no means of acting in the absence of Commissioners.
8. Under these circumstances, do you consider it expedient to transfer to the Municipality of Bathurst the Market established in that town? I should think so, the Municipal Council being desirous of it, if no opposition is made by any of the inhabitants, who may

W. Elyard,
Esq.

may be supposed to be the parties interested. I may add that, in the Bill for amending the "Municipalities Act," introduced by Mr. Cowper on the 25th June, 1863, there is a provision enabling the Governor and Executive Council to authorize Municipal Councils to take upon themselves the charge of Markets, established in their respective districts, in the same way as that of Bathurst, but that Bill has not been passed into law.

9. Is there any objection, that you are aware of, on the part of the Government, to the transfer of this Market? I am not aware of any in this particular case, but, of course, I cannot give an opinion what the decision of the Government might be, if the matter were brought under their consideration.

10. By Mr. Dangar: Do you think this Bill is necessary? I have no doubt that, under the opinion given by the late Attorney General, it can only be done by a Bill.

11. Are there any similar cases elsewhere? Yes, Parramatta is much in the same situation, and, I think, Goulburn.

12. If the amended "Municipalities Act" were to become law — ? Of course that would render unnecessary any special Act.

APPENDIX.

BATHURST MUNICIPAL COUNCIL.

Bathurst, 14 March, 1863.

Sir,

I have the honor to state that I am instructed by the Mayor of the Municipality of Bathurst, to call your attention to the Markets in this town, which were a considerable time ago vested in Commissioners, who have ceased to act for many years, all of whom are now dead, and to request that the Markets, together with the Town Common, may be legally vested in the Municipal Council.

The Honorable
The Colonial Secretary.

I have, &c.,
WILLIAM BROWN,
Town Clerk.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 26 June, 1863.*

Sir,

With reference to the Town Clerk's letter of the 14th March last, containing a request that the Market and Town Common of Bathurst may be vested in the Municipal Council, I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to inform you, that the desire of the Council in respect to the Market cannot legally be complied with, and that, with regard to the Town Common, application should be made to the Secretary for Lands, it being a matter appertaining to his department.

The Mayor of Bathurst.

I have, &c.,
W. ELYARD.

Bathurst, 7 September, 1863.

Sir,

Some fourteen or fifteen years ago the market property of this township was vested in trustees, all of whom, with one exception, are dead, and he, I understand, is resident in Victoria. Upon instituting the necessary inquiries, I find that the powers of the trustees cannot be transferred, owing to the circumstances now stated, without the passing of a short Act by the Legislature, and the Corporation is in consequence losing an annual revenue of about £400.

I beg therefore to request, in behalf of the Municipal Council of Bathurst, that you will cause a Bill to be introduced for the purpose referred to, in order that the necessary steps may be taken for establishing markets and collecting market dues.

The Honorable
The Colonial Secretary.

I have, &c.,
R. COUSINS,
Mayor.

*Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 17 November, 1863.*

Sir,

With reference to your letter of the 7th September last, in which you apply for the introduction of an Act to give the Municipal Council of Bathurst control over the Market at that place, I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to inform you, that your application will receive due consideration; but that, owing to the urgency of financial questions, and the desirability of confining the attention of the Legislature to this important subject, it will not be possible for the Government to effect the legislative alterations suggested, during the current Session of Parliament.

The Mayor of Bathurst.

I have, &c.,
W. ELYARD.

OPINION OF ATTORNEY GENERAL.

J. M. GOULD, respecting Commissioners of Parramatta Market and amount due from Lessee, &c.

I GATHER from all these papers that the Commissioners, under 3 Victoria, No. 19, are de facto and de jure defunct, and that no restoration of any such body can take place without the actual consent of the Governor and Executive Council, and under the proceedings mentioned in that Act.

Assuming, therefore, that no such restoration be allowed, nor at any future time be attempted, the only question is as to the jurisdiction of the present Municipality over what may be called a vacant "Market." Now, although the words of the 72nd section, as "markets, market dues," are perfectly general, still I cannot advise that these words repeal the 18th, 19th, 21st, and other sections of the 3rd Victoria, No. 19, and transfer their estate as Commissioners to the Municipality. The case seems to me to be one not contemplated by either of these statutes, and therefore I cannot advise the Municipality to consider this Market as in any sense transferred to them.

The Principal Under Secretary.
B.C., 7/1/63. W. E. P.

JOHN F. HARGRAVE,
Attorney General.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

QUEENSLAND STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY'S BILL.

THURSDAY, 31 MARCH, 1864.

Present:—

MR. ALEXANDER,		MR. LEARY,
MR. BELL,		MR. SAMUEL,
MR. EGAN,		MR. TERRY.

JOSEPH LEARY, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

George Penkivil Slade, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You are Solicitor for this Bill? Yes.
2. Will you be good enough to state to the Committee the general objects of the Bill? This Company was formed in the Colony of Queensland, on the 1st April, 1861, for steam navigation purposes; the original capital was £25,000, in 2,500 shares of £10 each. It was afterwards, in the year 1862, deemed advisable to increase the capital of the Company by the issue of 3,500 new shares, so as to make the whole capital amount to £60,000, and those shares being thrown open to the New South Wales public, were to a great extent taken up by residents in that Colony, and it became expedient to alter the original constitution of the Company, by establishing a Board as well in Sydney as in Queensland. These various alterations were all properly carried out under the powers of the existing deed of settlement, and the alterations in the deed of settlement were ultimately carried into effect by a special general meeting, held on the 24th August, 1863. The Company being, under existing circumstances, as much a New South Wales as a Queensland Company, it is desirable that the privileges and benefits of incorporation should be extended to it in this Colony as well as in Queensland, and for this purpose alone and for no other is this Bill sought to be introduced. The Bill is identical with the Act of Incorporation already obtained in Queensland, save in so far as the altered constitution of the Company above alluded to and other incidental variations and improvements may be concerned.
3. Have you the deed of settlement? The Secretary is in attendance, and I propose to call him to produce the deed of settlement.
4. What is the present capital of the Company? £60,000.
5. Is it proposed to increase this capital? There is no present intention of doing so.
6. By Mr. Samuel: Does this Bill limit the liability of the shareholders? By clause 21, it is provided that "in no case shall any shareholder be liable for or to have execution issued against him for an amount in excess of his subscribed capital and a further amount equal thereto." The responsibility is limited, in fact, to double the amount of his shares. There is also a proviso that, after having ceased to be a shareholder for a certain specified time, no former shareholder shall be liable to have such execution issued against him.

- . P. Slade, Esq.
31 Mar., 1864.
7. By the Chairman: This Bill is, in point of fact, a protection to the public? No doubt it is an advantage to the public, because without it, in the event of legal proceedings being taken against the Company, they would have to make every individual shareholder a party.
8. By Mr. Samuel: And I take it they would have to sue in Queensland? They might sue in this Colony, but they would have to sue the shareholders as private individuals. The limit of liability is exactly identical with that which is already prescribed by the Queensland Act.
9. By Mr. Alexander: How are the public to understand or ascertain the separate liabilities of each of the shareholders—will the deed be registered? The deed will not be registered, but there is a register of shareholders provided for by the 19th clause, to be open to the public.

William Badcock, Esq., examined:—

- W. Badcock, Esq.
31 Mar., 1864.
10. By Mr. Slade: You reside in Sydney? Yes.
11. And you are Secretary to the Sydney Local Board of the Queensland Steam Navigation Company? Yes.
12. You have heard the evidence given by myself with reference to the establishment of the Company, the original capital, the increased capital, and the number of shares; and also the evidence given by me with reference to the alteration of the deed of settlement by a special general meeting, held on the 24th August, 1863? Yes.
13. Is that evidence correct? It is.
14. A special general meeting was also held on the 25th August, 1863? Yes.
15. On that occasion certain Directors were appointed? They were.
16. Will you be good enough to state who they were? For the Brisbane Local Board—Messrs. George Raff, John Petrie, Henry Buckley, S. B. Stephens, and W. J. Munce; and for the Sydney Local Board—Messrs. P. N. Russell, Edward Flood, and J. B. Rundle.
17. The Company is already incorporated in Queensland, by an Act of 20th Victoria? It is.
18. The sole object of obtaining this Bill is, I understand, to give the Company the same corporate privileges in New South Wales which it already possesses in Queensland? Yes.
19. By the Chairman: Do you produce the deed of settlement? I do. (Original deed of settlement produced, and copy handed in.)
20. Is this an exact copy of the deed of settlement? Yes.
21. By Mr. Terry: Have you any power to borrow under the deed of settlement? Yes, to the extent of one-third of the subscribed capital.
22. In what way—by bills or debentures? In any way the Directors approve of.

---

George Penkivil Slade, Esq., re-examined:—

- G. P. Slade, Esq.
31 Mar., 1864.
23. By the Chairman: Are you aware whether the copy of the deed of settlement now produced is a correct copy? Yes; the printed copy now produced is a printed copy of the deed of settlement as it stands. The original deed of settlement is now before you. That original deed of settlement contains, amongst other clauses, a clause empowering a special general meeting, convened in a particular manner, to make such alterations in the deed as may become necessary. A special general meeting was, as I have already deposed, called, on the 24th August, 1863, and at that meeting a variety of alterations were made in the original deed of settlement, making it harmonious with the increase of the capital and the introduction of new blood on the Sydney side. These alterations were made by resolutions adopted at that meeting; and the present copy of the deed of settlement handed in is a copy of the deed as altered by that general meeting, and is in fact the deed of settlement as at present in force.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

EXCHANGE OF LAND; SCOTS CHURCH, JAMISON-
STREET, LEGALIZING BILL.

FRIDAY, 11 MARCH, 1864

Present:—

MR. DALGLEISH,	MR. SUTHERLAND,
MR. PIDDINGTON,	MR. MATE,
MR. STEWART,	MR. SADLEIR,
DR. LANG,	MR. ROBERTSON.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

George Browne, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You are one of the petitioners for this Bill? Yes.
2. In what capacity? As one of the elders of the Church, and Chairman of the Committee of Management at present. G. Browne,
Esq.
3. What object have you in view in putting this Bill forward? We desire to get a definite settlement, with regard to that portion of land which is sought to be exchanged. We wish to have it settled in time to prevent future litigation, which may occur perhaps, in the event of the decease of the present pastor of the church. 11 Mar., 1864.
4. Are you aware of the agreement which took place between the Trustees of the Scots Church and Sir John Jamison, who is named in this Bill as the owner of a portion of land that was exchanged? Yes, I am aware that an agreement did take place; at least, I have reason to believe that an agreement did take place. But it was previous to my arrival in the Colony. However, I believe that such an agreement did take place.
5. That was in the year 1830? Yes.
6. Have you seen a plan of the ground? Yes, I have. (Plan produced.)
7. Was it not an important part of that arrangement, that the Trustees of the Scots Church should surrender a portion of their allotment to Sir John Jamison? Yes.
8. In order to square the lines of the ground caused by the cutting of the street? Yes, I think it was rendered necessary by that.
9. Did not this render it necessary to purchase a portion of the ground so surrendered to Sir John Jamison? Yes.
10. To repurchase it from him at his sale? Yes.
11. Did the Church purchase either of the two allotments that were bought from Sir John Jamison, including the portion that was temporarily surrendered to him? „No.”
12. Who did? I believe that Dr. Lang did.
13. What extent of frontage to Jamison-street was acquired for the church by that purchase? 29 feet, I think. I forget exactly, but I think it was 29 feet.
14. Was it 29 or 31 feet? One was 31 and the other 29. I forget how they were situated exactly, just at present.
15. Did you consider the 31 feet frontage a fair equivalent for the 29 feet surrendered on the opposite side? Yes.

- G. Browne,
Esq.
11 Mar., 1864.
16. Do you consider that it was reasonable, under the circumstances, to run a line across the properties on the south side of Jamison-street—as the permanent boundary of the church allotment—to the eastward? Yes, I do.
  17. And you consider that it was a fair equivalent to exchange one for the other? Yes.
  18. Supposing a fair equivalent to be made to the Church for the back ground surrendered by Sir John, in addition to the allotment with 29 feet frontage to the street, do you consider such an arrangement an equitable one? Yes.
  19. Supposing the ground to be in the condition in which it was when the arrangement was made, do you consider the triangular piece A, on the sketch, a fair equivalent for the triangular piece marked B? Yes; the one is a little larger than the other, but I think the piece given was a fair equivalent.
  20. Are you a builder? Yes.
  21. And of course we must presume that you have a fair knowledge of the value of buildings. You know the gable end of the house nearest to the Scots Church? Yes.
  22. Do you consider the erection of the half of the gable end of the house occupied by Dr. Lang (that is, the house next to the church—the future manse for a minister) a fair equivalent for the back ground surrendered by Sir John Jamison? Yes, I think it is. It is more than an equivalent in proportion to what the ground was at that time.
  23. Do you think it is an equivalent, considering what the value of the back ground would be at the present time? Yes, I believe it is more so now; I think it is a fair equivalent for the value of the ground.
  24. Do you know what the frontage of Sir John Jamison's property in Jamison-street was sold at per foot? I believe it was sold at about £4 per foot.
  25. What do you consider to be the value of the half gable of the house alluded to? Well, I do not know, I have never valued it exactly; but I should imagine it to be worth something like £300.
  26. If the frontage to Jamison-street was worth £4 per foot, what would you consider to be the value of an allotment of land that had no frontage and no right of opening—a back allotment having no frontage and no right of way? It would be of very little value.
  27. I presume that a few shillings per foot would be its outside value? Yes, I conceive that it would be almost valueless.
  28. Excepting as an addition to land which had a frontage? Yes, it might be of some value to a house adjoining which had a frontage.
  29. Then you consider that the value given for this land would be about £150, if you value the gable at £300? Yes.
  30. Would not this back land be valued then almost at the same rate as the front allotment? It would, then.
  31. I am speaking of the value at that time, of course? Yes.
  32. Has the Church, or have the Trustees of the Church been in possession of the ground on both sides of the street since the year 1831? Yes, I believe so. They have been in possession ever since I came to the Colony, and I believe they were previously to that time.
  33. Do you know if Sir John Jamison ever made any allusion to the surrender of a portion of the Scots Church land to him, when he gave evidence before a Select Committee of this House? —
  34. In the first instance I will ask you, have you any knowledge of any evidence having been taken on a previous occasion, by a Select Committee, in reference to this subject? Yes.
  35. Have you read that evidence? Yes, I have read a portion of it.
  36. Did you read the evidence of Sir John Jamison? Yes.
  37. Did Sir John Jamison make any allusion to the land which had been surrendered by the Scots Church to him, when he gave that evidence? I believe not, so far as my memory serves me.
  38. Then he was guilty almost (no doubt by an inadvertence) of an act of injustice to the Scots Church, in thus hiding, as it were, the fact that he had obtained an equivalent portion of land, for the land held by the Scots Church? Yes.
  39. That omission on the part of Sir John, was likely to lead the Committee and others reading that evidence, to a very erroneous view of the whole arrangement? Yes, it was calculated to do so.
  40. Do you consider that it is at all material to the object of this Bill, as far as the church property is concerned, that the question as to the mortgage on that property should be determined before-hand? Well, I do not think it material. There is some legal difficulty probably in the way, but I do not think it material.
  41. As a matter of fact, the Church is in actual possession of the land in question? Yes.
  42. And no claim has ever been set up by any party to it? No.
  43. Would Dr. Lang be personally benefited by the passing of this Bill? No, I do not see that he would.
  44. Is it not a Bill, not to transfer the land to Dr. Lang as an individual, but to the Scots Church? Yes.
  45. And the Scots Church, you have already said, have given value for the land in question? Yes.
  46. Besides the convenience to both parties in squaring the lines of the property? Yes.
  47. It was a mutual advantage? It greatly enhanced the value of both properties I think.
  48. Do you know any members of the Scots Church that have any objection to the passing of this Bill? I am not aware of any.
  49. Do you know any members of the Scots Church who think that their interests would be damaged by the passing of this Bill? No, I do not think there are any.
  50. You know the tower of the said church? Yes.

51. It is in contemplation by this Bill, to erect another tower on the site of the one at present built? Yes. G. Browne,
Esq.
52. Do you know of any objection to the rebuilding of this tower? Well, the Alignment Act would be an objection I believe—the present Alignment Act of the city of Sydney. 11 Mar., 1864.
53. Do you know if the tower stands on a proclaimed street? I am not positive whether Jamison-street is proclaimed or not; I rather think it is.
54. Would it be an advantage to the Church to have that tower rebuilt? Yes.
55. And you know of no wrong that would be done to any party by this Bill being passed? No, I am not aware how any wrong could be done to any one; it would be an advantage to all I think.
56. By Mr. Piddington: I think you have said, Mr. Browne, that you have read the evidence of Sir John Jamison, given before a Committee of the Legislative Council, on the subject of the loans to the Australian College? Yes.
57. And I think you have stated that in that evidence, you saw no allusion made by Sir John Jamison to his giving to the Scots Church a piece of land, in exchange for the right of running Jamison-street through the Scots Church allotment? I stated that I did not, so far as my memory guided me.
58. You must have a very bad memory, Mr. Browne? No, I think not.
59. I beg to read to you the third question put to Sir John Jamison before that Committee:—"Jamison-street was formed through a part of your property, and a part of the allotment belonging to the Scots Church?" His reply is:—"It was. I entered into an agreement with Dr. Lang, the late Mr. M'Vitie, and Dr. Ramsay, as Trustees of the Scots Church, to exchange a portion of my land for a portion of the land belonging to the Church, for the purpose of continuing Jamison-street through it."—Is that not an allusion to an exchange of land? It is an allusion to the street, but not to the land, I think, on the north side of the street.
60. I do not know what you allude to as the opposite side of the street. Does not Sir John Jamison state this: that he entered into an agreement with Dr. Lang, the late Mr. M'Vitie, and Dr. Ramsay, as Trustees of the Scots Church, to exchange a portion of his land for a portion of the land belonging to the Church, for the purpose of continuing Jamison-street through it;—now I ask you whether that is not an allusion to an exchange of land by Sir John Jamison, with the Trustees of the Scots Church? Yes, it appears so.
61. "Was there not an additional portion sold by you to the Trustees of the Scots Church?" That was the fourth question, and Sir John Jamison's reply is:—"In addition to the land which was given in exchange for the portion of the church allotment given up by me, two building allotments were sold by me to the trustees, at the average price of the adjoining allotments; on one of these, two houses were built, and the other allotment (a small angular one), on the opposite side of the street, is not yet built upon." The next question is—"Was it in contemplation at that time to found the Australian College, and was the land sold by you with a view to that object?" Sir John Jamison's reply is—"It certainly was." The next question is—"To whom has the land so disposed of by you been conveyed?" The answer is—"The conveyance was only completed lately. The land having been intended for public purposes, my solicitor, Mr. Norton, demurred as to making the conveyance to Dr. Lang individually; but Dr. Lang having furnished a statement shewing that the land was intended to be used for the purposes of the College, Mr. Norton consented to the conveyance, and it was executed accordingly." I suppose you are now convinced that Sir John Jamison, in his evidence before that Committee, did refer to an exchange of land upon his part, with the Trustees of the Scots Church? Yes.
62. You alluded to this evidence when you spoke, did you not? Yes.
63. Are you aware that the congregation of the Scots Church have already lost a portion of their church allotment? I am aware that a portion of two houses, built on a part of the Scots Church allotment —
64. Have they lost that portion to which you now allude? It is not absolutely lost, I should imagine.
65. Have they absolutely or in any way lost it? The ground is occupied, but not lost.
66. Are you aware of any other portion of the Scots Church allotment which has been lost to that congregation? No, I never heard of any.
67. Will you have the goodness to direct your attention to the line of Jamison-street running through the allotment? The street is lost.
68. Are you aware that Sir John Jamison gave 29 feet frontage on the south side of Jamison-street to the Trustees of the Scots Church, as compensation for their loss of land by Jamison-street being allowed to run through their church ground? Yes.
69. And are you aware that Dr. Lang has obtained a conveyance from Sir John Jamison, for his own use and benefit, of the 29 feet frontage to the south side of Jamison-street, given by Sir John Jamison to the Trustees of the Scots Church? Yes.
70. You have stated that a certain other portion of land, on the north side of Jamison-street, has been in some way given to the trustees, in lieu of the 29 feet frontage on the south side of Jamison-street? Yes.
71. Are you aware that Dr. Lang has acknowledged that that has never been conveyed to the trustees? No, I am not aware.
72. Are you aware that it is conveyed? No, I am not aware that it is conveyed.
73. If it turns out that it is in no way conveyed to the trustees, in what way can the trustees have any right to the land? That would be settled, I imagine, partly by this Bill.
74. I am not asking you that question. If the portion of land on the north side of Jamison-street, which is stated by Dr. Lang to be given to the Trustees of the Scots Church, in lieu of a piece on the south side, which he has had conveyed to himself as an individual—if that

G. Browne,
Esq.

11 Mar., 1864.

that portion of land on the north side has been in no way conveyed to the trustees—in what way can they have any legal title to it? They cannot have any legal title to it until it is conveyed.

75. Then in what way has any compensation been given to the Scots Church, for the manner in which that congregation has been deprived of 29 feet frontage to the south side of Jamison-street, by Dr. Lang, in the way I have described? They have compensation in the erection of that gable.

76. But the compensation is stated to be derived from land on the north side, which is said to have been given by Dr. Lang to the Trustees of the Scots Church, on account of the land he has taken from them on the south side? It is understood that this land does or should belong to the Trustees of the Scots Church, and in addition there is the erection of that gable.

77. But what understanding can have any legal effect—I am speaking of law? It can have no legal effect.

78. Are you one of the Trustees of the Scots Church? No.

79. Who are the trustees? There is none except Dr. Lang now.

80. Then Dr. Lang is really asking the Committee to interfere in a matter where he is the only legal trustee living? Yes, just in order to have the question fairly settled—definitely.

81. You have stated that your object is to obtain a settlement;—what do you mean by that? To get a definite settlement and a title to the land.

82. In favour of whom? In favour of the Church.

83. But how is that to be done, when there are no trustees but Dr. Lang? There would have to be trustees appointed immediately after the settlement.

84. You acknowledge that Dr. Lang is the only surviving trustee? Yes.

85. Then, if this question be settled, how will any one be benefited but Dr. Lang, the sole surviving trustee? The congregation will be benefited.

86. By being deprived of a portion of their land upon which buildings are now erected, for another portion of land on which there is nothing? Yes, it will be an absolute benefit to both parties.

87. But what legal existence have the congregation if there is only one trustee—does not the trustee represent the congregation, in the legal aspect of the case? Yes.

88. Was not the Scots Church allotment granted by Sir Ralph Darling to trustees, for the use of the Scots Church congregation on Church Hill? Yes.

89. If from any cause there is only one trustee, and that trustee is Dr. Lang, does not the entire legal authority vest in the trustee? Yes, the entire legal authority.

90. I am speaking of that? Yes.

91. Taking it as a legal question at present, is not Dr. Lang the only person legally interested in this Bill? Legally he is, but morally he is not. Still Dr. Lang could not do anything with property without the sanction of the congregation.

92. That I am not asking you—I am asking you for the facts of the case? Yes.

93. Do you consider that a nominal surrender of a certain small portion of land on the north side of Jamison-street, is an equivalent for the deprivation, to the Scots Church, by Dr. Lang, of 29 feet frontage to the south side of Jamison-street? I consider it an equivalent along with what I have before stated.

94. But if there is no legal effect to that equivalent? If there is no legal effect it must be got I suppose.

95. But I am speaking of the present case at the present time? Yes.

96. Do you consider a promise, on the part of Dr. Lang, to surrender a portion of land on the north side of Jamison-street, an equivalent for a seizure by Dr. Lang of 29 feet on the south side, which he has accomplished by law? Well, a promise in some cases is as good as a legal authority.

97. I am not about to dispute that point with you, but I ask you this simple question: Do you consider a promise by Dr. Lang of a portion of land on the north side to the trustees, or to himself, as surviving Trustee of the Scots Church, equivalent to the land which he has obtained conveyed to him individually, on the south side of Jamison-street, and having a frontage of 29 feet? Well, legally it is not an equivalent; but morally —

98. That is all I ask—I have nothing to do with morality. You say you are acquainted with the value of land, generally speaking? Yes.

99. Upon what ground do you form an opinion that the triangular piece of land marked A (upon which a large portion of the house in which Dr. Lang resides, and a portion of the second house, which, I presume, is let by Dr. Lang), is an equivalent to the Scots Church for the piece of land marked B, upon which there are no buildings? It is an equivalent in so far as it squares the lines and gives a full size to the land.

100. You appear to misunderstand me. I am not asking you about squaring the lines, but about the money value of the proposed allotments. I ask you whether the money value of the triangular allotment marked A, upon which a portion of two houses known as College Buildings is built, is or is not more than equal to the money value of a triangular piece, marked B, at the back of the allotments, near to Barrack-lane? It is extremely difficult to fix any value upon these pieces of land as described upon the plan, because a portion of each of them would be entirely valueless, in my opinion.

101. Notwithstanding your knowledge of the value of property, you find it impossible to state your opinion of the value of these pieces of land? Yes, I do in the way in which they are put there.

102. Then do you think it possible that the triangular allotment marked B, adjoining Barrack-lane, or at the back of these allotments, is equivalent to the allotment marked A, forming a portion of the Scots Church allotment, and having a large frontage to Jamison-street? Yes.

103. Upon what ground do you estimate the value of property in Sydney? Well, according to the frontage. But frontage, without any depth or rear, is of no value. G. Browne,
Esq.
104. Then do you consider that a triangular piece of land, at the back of the allotments in Jamison-street, is equivalent in value to another triangular piece of ground in front of the street? Yes, I consider it equivalent in value, in the case in which it exists there. 11 Mar., 1864.
105. Did you state that Dr. Lang repurchased certain allotments in Jamison-street, upon which two houses are built (I mean the two houses nearest George-street), out of his own funds? Yes, I believe he did. It was not out of the funds of the church, in any way, I know.
106. Did not Dr. Lang mortgage the buildings in Jamison-street; and at the same time that he executed the mortgage, obtain the money by that means for the purchase of these two allotments? I am not aware.
107. You are not aware of all the facts of the case, then? I am aware that there is a mortgage upon them, but whether Dr. Lang mortgaged those two houses for the purpose of purchasing that ground I do not know.
108. You are not aware of all the facts of the case, then? No.
109. Do you think it right, on the part of the congregation of the Scots Church, to allow their church property to be managed by a single gentleman, who is the only surviving trustee of that property? No, it is not right by any means.
110. Do you think that a great deal of the confusion which has arisen with regard to this property, has arisen from the neglect of the Trustees of the Scots Church? No doubt of it.
111. Do not you think that it would be a proper course for the Scotch congregation to elect a certain number of gentlemen as trustees, before any alteration of the church property is sanctioned by Parliament? No, I think it would be better if the sanction of the Legislature were given first, and the trustees elected afterwards. They would then know definitely what they had to do with.
112. Do you think it right for the congregation to allow a property that was granted to four or five gentlemen as trustees, to be managed by one single surviving trustee? It is not right.
113. Then why do you say that it is correct for the congregation to permit that neglect to continue? There would be a great difficulty, I think, in the congregation appointing trustees now, under the existing difficulties.
114. But is that difficulty any reason why the congregation should not adopt the usual course in such cases? Well, it would be difficult to get trustees to act until this is settled. In fact, that is our difficulty, or it would have been done previously, for this many years. At least, some years previous it would have been done.
115. You have stated that you read the evidence given by Sir John Jamison before a Committee of the Legislative Council? Yes, I have read it. I read it some considerable time since, though.
116. Did you also read the evidence of another witness before that Committee—a Mr. Norton? Yes, I read it all, but I can scarcely recollect much of it now.
117. I beg to draw your attention to the following question and answer, with the view of refreshing your memory. Mr. Norton was examined before the Committee, and he was asked this question—"Under these circumstances, why was the land conveyed to Dr. Lang, and not to the trustees, especially that part given in exchange for a part of the church land?" The answer is—"I conceive that the whole of the land ought to have been conveyed to the trustees, and I objected to the conveyance as prepared in favour of Dr. Lang. He, however, explained that Mr. M'Vitie, one of the trustees, was dead—that Capt. Piper had not taken an active part in the trust, and was absent, and that Dr. Ramsay, the other trustee, consented to the conveyance to him (Dr. Lang). I afterwards saw Dr. Lang and Dr. Ramsay, and they then explained that the College was indebted to Dr. Lang in a very large sum laid out by him in the building of the houses, and that to enable him to pay himself, and also to raise the amount due to Sir John Jamison [that is, the amount of this purchase money], "he (Dr. Lang) would be compelled to obtain a mortgage on the land, which could not be done if the land were conveyed to the trustees; and Dr. Lang added, that he was willing, subject to that loan, to convey the whole of the land to the trustees. The impression made on my mind by the statements of Dr. Lang and Dr. Ramsay was, that the whole of the funds for the erection of the College Buildings were provided by Dr. Lang. I also felt that a Court of Equity would at any time compel Dr. Lang to release the trustees. I was aware that a large sum had been advanced by the Crown on the Scots Church grant, but the chief part of this sum I always understood to have been expended in the erection of the church" [which was not the case]. "I was led to this belief from the fact of large advances having been made by the late Rev. Samuel Marsden to Dr. Lang, as I understood, on account of the building of the church, to secure the repayment of which to Mr. Marsden, I was instructed to prepare a mortgage on the church grant. This the title would not admit of. Mr. Marsden's loan was afterwards repaid by Dr. Lang. I prepared the Crown security at the instance of Dr. Lang, and the deed was approved by Dr. Kinchela, then Attorney General. At the time Mr. Marsden made his advance, Jamison-street was not formed, nor the erection of the College Buildings commenced"—Now, from that evidence, so read to you, are you of opinion that Dr. Lang imposed upon Mr. Norton, and so obtained a conveyance to him as an individual, of the land exchanged and given by Sir John Jamison to the Trustees of the Scots Church, as well as of the land which was said to be purchased by Dr. Lang, and which forms the two lower allotments nearest to George-street, on the south side of Jamison-street? Well, I do not know. I do not see that he imposed upon him exactly, from that evidence. 118.

- G. Browne, Esq.
11 Mar., 1864.
118. By Mr. Stewart: A square building is shewn here (on the plan before the Committee)—does the Scots Church hold this ground now? Yes.
119. Do they hold this square building which is represented here below this angular line? They do not hold the building at present, but the ground is still theirs.
120. Then in that case they at present hold a portion of the ground with considerable frontage, which would have been the property of Sir John Jamison? Yes.
121. Is it leased from the Church? Yes.
122. It is their property? It is not the property of any one under Sir John Jamison, but was handed over to the Church, as an addition to their property? Yes.
123. Then if they have lost some frontage on one side of the street, they, to some extent, possess additional frontage on the other? Yes, but they have no legal title to it.
124. Still they have possession, and have had since the street was opened? Yes.
125. By Mr. Piddington: In what way have they a legal title to the land outside the church allotment? They have no legal title.
126. By Mr. Stewart: They have built on it and they hold it? Yes.
127. This building was put on it in connection with the Church property? Yes.
128. That would represent a frontage nearly as large as that which it is desired to exchange? Yes.
129. By Mr. Piddington: What right or title have the Scots Church, or what right or title has any representative of the Scots Church to any house on that side? They have no legal title to it.
130. Dr. Lang has a legal title to 29 feet frontage on the south side, conveyed to him by Sir John Jamison? Yes, I believe so.
131. By Mr. Sutherland: Although they have no legal title to it, they hold it, and have continued to hold it for upwards of thirty years? Yes.
132. How long, of your own knowledge, have they held that land? About twenty-two years—ever since I came to the Colony.
133. They have, according to your own knowledge, held these two portions of land during that time, and appropriated them to their own use? Yes.
134. By Dr. Lang: Sir John Jamison, when before the Committee, was asked the following question (No. 3):—“Jamison-street was formed through a part of your property and a part of the allotment belonging to the Scots Church?” And he replied:—“It was; I entered into an agreement with Dr. Lang, the late Mr. McVitie, and Dr. Ramsay, as Trustees of the Scots Church, to exchange a portion of my land for a portion of the land belonging to the Church, for the purpose of continuing Jamison-street through it”;—now what portion does Sir John Jamison refer to, when he says that he entered into an agreement to exchange a portion of his land for a portion of the land belonging to the Church, for the purpose of continuing Jamison-street through it? This portion. (Pointing to that portion marked A.)
135. This portion marked A? Yes.
136. The reference on the chart is that “A” is a portion of land relinquished by Sir John Jamison to the Church. This (A) was the portion that Sir John Jamison surrendered for the privilege of running the street through our property. Well, Sir John Jamison states, in answer to the question,—“Was there not an additional portion sold by you to the Trustees for the Scots Church? In addition to the land which was given in exchange for the portion of the church allotments given up to me, two building allotments were sold by me to the trustees, at the average price of the adjoining allotments. On one of these, two houses were built, and the other allotment (a small angular one), on the opposite side of the street, is not yet built upon.” That is this small angular portion B;—does Sir John Jamison include in his answer this portion B that was surrendered to him? No, I think not.
137. By Mr. Piddington: You see this plan, Mr. Browne? Yes.
138. And this part of it coloured light green? Yes.
139. Do you believe that the 29 feet frontage from the side line of the church allotment at the end—taking the frontage to that point and running back, including all the portion marked A—is not a much more valuable piece of land than that piece on that side coloured pink? Certainly it is.
140. Do not you think that Dr. Lang has obtained a great advantage, at the expense of the Scots Church, by obtaining this land (which properly belongs to the Scots Church), on the ground that that small piece is equivalent to it in value? There is another equivalent—the end of the house.
141. But, in addition to the end of the house, do you think that that small piece coloured green is equivalent to this large piece containing 29 feet frontage? It perhaps might not be an equivalent now, but at the time the land was sold it was a full equivalent.
142. You think that when the land was sold this large piece was not more than an equivalent for that smaller one? It was not more than an equivalent.
143. By the Chairman: Did you not say, in answer to a previous question, that land was valuable only in proportion to its frontage? Yes.
144. Of what value would be the angular piece of land marked A cut off from the frontage of the street—would it not have been comparatively useless unless the frontage had been secured? Yes.
145. Does the triangular portion cut off represent much more value than the triangular portion given up by Dr. Lang to Sir John Jamison? Yes.
146. Did Sir John Jamison, in his evidence, make any allusion to that portion of land marked B upon the plan, and which had been given up by the Scots Church? No, I think not.
147. Did the evidence you gave a few minutes ago apply to that triangular piece of land marked B on the plan, or to the portions mutually given up by the Scots Church and Sir John

- John Jamison, which were the main features of the exchange—to which did your answers apply, to portion B or to portion A? To this marked A. G. Browne, Esq.
148. By Mr. Piddington: I wish to ask you whether you are acquainted with the fact that the part of this plan marked B is a portion of the Scots Church allotment granted to the Trustees of the Church by the Crown? Yes, I am fully aware of that. 11 Mar., 1864.
149. Then what authority would the trustees have to part with a single portion of that allotment—what authority would they have to part with one inch of it? They would have no legal authority.
150. Then in what way can this be held to be an equivalent for anything else, inasmuch as they could not part with it and never did? They could have no legal authority without getting a Bill, but mutually it was agreed to.
151. But what effect can any agreement have, where the parties have no authority to make an agreement? They ask now for a legal authority.
152. You know it is stated that this part of the Scots Church allotment is to be considered in reference to some exchange? Yes.
153. It is impossible that Sir John Jamison, or anybody else, could have had a legal title to one inch of the Scots Church allotment without an Act of Parliament? Yes.
154. Do you believe that Sir John Jamison had any title to any portion of this Scots Church allotment? He could have had none without an Act of Parliament.
155. By Mr. Stewart: He appeared at that time to be satisfied that he did get an equivalent? Yes.
156. By Dr. Lang: Did not Sir John Jamison receive for the frontage of this allotment, on the north side of Jamison street, as much as he would have received if it had included the portion of the church allotment that was formerly surrendered to him? Yes.
157. The questions put refer to the different values of the land which is waste, in the section B of the small sketch, and the triangular portion A of that sketch, as built upon. Is it not the fact, evidenced on the plan, that the exchange was made before there was any building on the land? Yes.
158. By Mr. Mate: Are you aware whether Sir John Jamison gave anything to the Scots Church in consideration of the road being made through their land? This was in consideration of it to some extent. ("A" on coloured plan.)
159. Then the permission to take this has added to the value of what would have been back land, if it had not been that an agreement had been made with the trustees to square the allotments? Yes.
160. What would have been the value of that land, had it not been for this triangular piece being taken out of the Scots Church land? It would have been of very little value.
161. This triangular piece being taken from the Scots Church has added to the value of these two allotments considerably? Yes.
162. These two allotments (A) are private property? Yes; these two allotments would be valueless without this other land.
163. By Mr. Sadleir: You say that the reason you desire to have this Bill passed is to prevent litigation? Yes.
164. Who with? With Dr. Lang or his heirs.
165. Do you think that the Parliament have any right to step in to prevent litigation between parties—do you think that is their office or function? Well, I think they have a right to step in and sanction such a fair exchange.
166. I am asking you whether they have any right to step in to stop litigation between parties who are contending for property? It is to prevent future litigation. I have no fear of litigation in the mean time.
167. But have the Parliament any right to step in to prevent future litigation between parties contending for property? I think so, in a case of this kind, where a grant was made by the Crown for educational or religious purposes.
168. Do you think that the occupancy of land for twenty-two years entitles people to take possession of it and keep it, or that it gives them any right to it whatever? I believe there is some law to that effect, but I am not exactly sure of the time it is necessary to be in possession.
169. By the Chairman: Are you a lawyer, Mr. Browne? No.
170. Then your opinion as to how long property must be held to give a title to the holder is of no value? No.
171. By Mr. Sadleir: If a person took your property and held it for twenty-two years, you would not think him entitled to it? No.
172. Would not you eject him if you could? Yes.
173. You say that Dr. Lang has no benefit in the exchange of these allotments? There would be a mutual benefit.
174. But you said that Dr. Lang had no benefit? Yes, there would be a benefit to him, but mutual.
175. In what way? The benefit would be mutual, inasmuch as it would give those two allotments (A) a value which they could not have without it; and it would also give to this land (B) a value which it would not otherwise possess.
176. But what has the Scots Church to do with any benefit to Dr. Lang? The Scots Church have a benefit by the land B.
177. By Mr. Piddington: No legal benefit? No, unless sanctioned by an Act of the Legislature.
178. By Mr. Sadleir: You spoke of the congregation having this Church property;—what right of property have the congregation got—is the deed made over to the congregation, or to the Scots Church generally, or to whom? There is no deed for this (B.)

- G. Browne, Esq.
11 Mar., 1864.
179. No, but you spoke of the congregation having a right over this property; now, I ask you, how the congregation have a right over it—the congregation are a fluctuating body? The trustees are the legally constituted parties appointed by the congregation, and sanctioned by the Government.
180. Not appointed by the congregation? No, chosen by the congregation, and appointed by the Government.
181. In whose favour do the trustees hold this land? In favour of the congregation.
182. Do you mean to say that they hold it in favour of the congregation, and not in favour of what is expressed in the deed, I presume—in favour of the Presbyterians generally, and not in favour of the congregation? It is in favour of the congregation, I think.
183. Is the word “congregation” in the deed? Yes.
184. Are you aware whether the trustees have any power to give up any portion of this land for a street, or for anything else, according to the deed? I am not exactly sure. The deed may not, but there may, perhaps, be some reservation or proviso. (Witness referred to deed.) There is nothing in that.
185. Then if the trustees acted illegally in giving up that land, do you think any subsequent agreement is good? None can be without an Act of the Legislature.
186. But the trustees have acted illegally, and all their subsequent acts are illegal, as founded upon an illegal act? That is the reason why we ask that they may be made legal.
187. Do you mean to say that the portions A and B are of equal value as pieces of land? When the exchange was formerly agreed to I believe they were.
188. By Mr. Piddington: Are they now? Not now, exactly.
189. By Mr. Sadleir: What kind of lane have you got here? I suppose it is 18 or 20 feet wide.
190. There must be a great difference between the value of these two pieces of land? There is a difference now. The ground, as it is laid down there, without any access to the street, is, as I said before, valueless.
191. By Mr. Piddington: We are asked to act for the future, and I have asked you whether the value of the land marked A is equal to the value of the land marked B? I cannot fix a value to it.
192. By the Chairman: Was there any lane there at the time the exchange was made? No; the back part is worth more now than it was then.
193. By Mr. Piddington: But is the back part of this land, with the advantage of the lane, equal in value to the part marked A, with two houses on it? No, of course it is not; but, as I stated before, it would be valueless almost, separated in that way.
194. By Mr. Mate: You said you were connected with the Church. Are you aware, if this Bill were passed to legalize this exchange, that trustees would be appointed, in accordance with the deed of grant, and security given to the Government equal to that which it has at the present time? I believe so.
195. You believe that sufficient security would be given to secure any right which the Government may have for the advance of money? Yes, I believe that would be done immediately.
196. By Mr. Piddington: Are you aware that the Government hold a mortgage of £3,500 upon every inch of land granted to the Scots Church? Yes, they hold a mortgage, I believe, upon that land.
197. If this Bill were passed, would not the value of the Government mortgage be diminished by the transfer of portions of two houses fronting Jamison-street, for a piece of land on which there are no houses? Well, the value would be diminished.
198. By Mr. Sutherland: Would not the value be increased to the Government by receiving the buildings on this side, where the line cuts right through the centre, in like manner? Yes.
199. Would this security not be increased by having a legal title to this portion (B), to which they have no title now? I believe it would.
200. Then would the whole security to the Government be less valuable than it would be represented by this line cutting through the whole? I think the security would be better to all parties—at least, commercially it would.
201. Would not the Trustees of the Scots Church receive—taking also into consideration the half of the party-wall for the parsonage—land more valuable than that which they are giving up? Yes.
202. By Mr. Piddington: They are giving up party-wall and all? No, that is to be conveyed—we get the party-wall.
203. By Mr. Sutherland: Will the party-wall now built form a portion of the property of the Scots Church allotment, as represented on this plan, or as it is supposed to be conveyed to the trustees? Yes.
204. And will the whole of this building not be conveyed to the trustees legally? Yes.
205. They have no legal right to it at all now? No.
206. Do you know the frontage to Barrack-lane, or to the lane abutting on the back of this property? Yes.
207. Is the frontage to that lane more than that given up in Jamison-street? Yes, it is some 18 inches or 2 feet more, as far as my recollection serves me.
208. By the Trustees of the Scots Church having a legal title to that, would that not improve the whole value of this block of ground? Certainly.

Edward Bell, Esq., called in and examined:—

209. By the Chairman: You are the City Engineer? Yes.
210. Are you aware of the object for which the Committee is sitting? It is something relating to the Scots Church tower, I understand.
211. Are you aware of the position of the Scots Church, at the top of Jamison-street? Yes.
212. Does the tower of that church stand upon the alignment of the street? I do not think the street is aligned so far as the tower.
213. Is the street proclaimed? Yes, it was proclaimed in the Gazette of the 28th December, 1841, or on the 14th—I will not be certain which—from George-street to Church Hill; and according to a plan which, it is stated in the Gazette, was exhibited at the time. The only tracing of the plan which I can get of Jamison-street is this (tracing produced) which I have obtained from the office of the Surveyor General. It shews the lines drawn in full, as far as the corner of Church Hill, and all the other lines to the westward are dotted in. The bearings of these angular lines, east and west of the tower, are given in like manner to that in the front, but the eastern angular line is a dotted line only. The proclamation says, “from George-street to Church Hill”; now, Church Hill ends at its junction with Jamison-street (place pointed out on the tracing), but Jamison-street is continued to between York-street and Clarence-street. This plan is not signed in any way, and does not appear to me to have been prepared as it ought to be to make the proclamation complete and of effect.
214. By Mr. Stewart: Is that plan similar to this (the one before the Committee)? Yes. There is a minute on it which says, “NOTE.—This was called for by the Colonial Secretary” [then there are some letters of reference], “in consequence of the width never having been determined on or proclaimed, and in consequence too of Dr. Lang’s request,” [I think it is “request,” but the word is almost obliterated], “to follow the present line, and not to set back 12 feet, as required by the Act of Council.” There is no signature to it, but it is the only plan they could shew me at the office of the Surveyor General. Jamison-street is proclaimed  $22\frac{1}{2}$  feet in the roadway,  $6\frac{1}{4}$  feet footpath on the north side, and 7 feet on the south side; in all,  $35\frac{3}{4}$  feet in width.
215. By Mr. Piddington: Do you infer from the “Note” you have read, that there is an encroachment of 12 feet on the proper line of alignment? No, I do not think the proclamation extends so far as the church.
216. What do you think the note alludes to when it says “not to set back 12 feet, as required by the Act of Council”? It says that “this” (I presume it means this “plan” or this “proclamation”) was called for by the Colonial Secretary, in consequence of the width of the street never having been determined on or proclaimed, and in consequence of Dr. Lang’s request to follow the present line (that is, I presume, the line in front of the church), and not to set back 12 feet, as required by the Act of Council.
217. But what is meant by not setting back 12 feet—the Act would come into force as soon as the proclamation was complete? The proclamation never was complete, as it appears to me, in consequence of Dr. Lang’s request.
218. By Mr. Stewart: Do you think that indicated that there was an exception sought in this case? It seems that this plan was prepared to proclaim the street originally; and partly in consequence of Dr. Lang’s application not to have this part subjected to the Alignment Act, the proclamation of it was allowed to remain in abeyance.
219. And it has not really been subjected to proclamation? It has not, at the part near the church. I was of opinion that it had been proclaimed before I looked into the matter so far as I did some twelve months ago, when I found that there had been no proper proclamation. The several properties on both sides of a street ought to be shewn in the plan distinctly, and the names of the proprietors should be given, but this has not been done.
220. By Mr. Piddington: In your opinion, considering the imperfection of this plan, is there any real proclamation of the street through the Scots Church allotments? No, there is none, beyond the junction of Jamison-street and Church Hill.
221. Inasmuch as there is no reference to the property on this plan, are you of opinion that there is no proclamation of the continuation of this street through the Scots Church allotment? Unless they can produce some better plan than this, I do not think it has been properly proclaimed.
222. And if the trustees wish to resume this piece of land, they may do so, as far as the proclamation is concerned? No, they cannot close the street. We have made it—the public funds have made it—and that is as good as a proclamation.
223. By Dr. Lang: Under these circumstances, does it require an Act of Parliament to legalize the re-erection of the present tower of the church (in the event of its being taken down) on its present foundations? No, I do not think the city can interfere with you in any way, or with the tower.
224. By Mr. Stewart: Would there be any serious objection on the part of the city authorities to this building being replaced—would they feel that it was an innovation or an exceptional case? I think from what I have heard expressed, that they would like to see it put back, but I do not think they could interfere unless they could shew that there had been a proper proclamation.
225. It would not be an impediment to any considerable extent? The only thing one could wish for would be to get a wider approach for the persons who attend the Scots Church. The general public are not inconvenienced by the narrow pathway, because very few people go down that way.
226. The greatest inconvenience would be to the persons who attend the church? Yes.

Edward Bell,
Esq.

11 Mar., 1864.

- Edward Bell, Esq. 227. By Mr. Piddington: If this footpath were increased to treble its present width, who would have any title to complain? No one.
- 11 Mar., 1864. 228. Then might not the interference be extended to the actual resumption of the whole width of the street, if no party has any right to complain? No, all that we hold we are entitled to hold.
229. But you say that you have no title to it? We made it with the public funds, and are entitled to every inch we have made.
230. Then no further encroachment could be made without infringing on that portion of the street which is held by the city? No; and moreover, since the Scots Church gave to the Corporation the 12-foot footpath in York-street (which was never proclaimed), the city has been perfectly satisfied with what they have.
231. By Mr. Stewart: There could be no further encroachment? No.
232. By the Chairman: The proclamation to which you refer is dated 28th December, 1841? Yes, it refers to a plan. I applied at the office of the Surveyor General for the plan, to make a copy of it, and this is the only one they could shew me having any reference to the proclamation.
233. And that plan, from the absence of the names of the proprietors, is not such an one as to make the proclamation of legal effect? No; we have lost two or three cases, one of which was before the Supreme Court from similar causes.
234. By Mr. Piddington: In this proclamation to which you allude I see that the width of the carriage-way, of the north foot-way, and of the south foot-way is specifically mentioned? Yes.
235. Does not that proclamation carry with it the force of law? Only as far as Church Hill. If you came to try it in Court, you would find the case given against you, as it was given against us in the case of Victoria and Brougham Streets. We produced a plan containing the names of nearly every proprietor on both sides of those streets, but as it was not perfect, it was held that it was not such a plan as was required to sustain the Corporation in the course they sought to pursue.
236. By Mr. Sutherland: That was where we wanted to continue a street through property held by private individuals, but this is in possession of the public? Yes; in that case the street had been always open, but never "made," and an attempt was made to fence it in.
237. By the Chairman: Would any greater inconvenience arise to the public from the rebuilding of this tower than at present exists? I think not.
238. Would the public interests suffer in any way more than they do at the present time? I do not think they would suffer at all.
239. By Mr. Sutherland: Is the curbing and guttering not laid down now; and has it not been laid down for many years, in accordance with the dotted line shewn here (on the tracing)? Yes, nearly in accordance with the line on the plan. The present Corporation has taken it up and relaid it on the present line.
240. Does not that legalize their line as the true line to which they can go? I should think so.

Present:—

MR. PIDDINGTON, | DR. LANG,
MR. MATE.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

George Bowman, Esq., called in and examined:—

- G. Bowman, Esq. 241. By the Chairman: Are you one of the shareholders of the Australian College? I am.
- 22 Mar., 1864. 242. Do you know the land upon which the Scots Church is built, and the land belonging to it? I know it pretty nearly; it was a grant on Church Hill.
243. Do you know that a portion of that land has been exchanged for another piece of land? No, I do not.
244. Can you give the Committee any evidence on the subject? I always understood the Australian College was to be built on the Scots Church property, but that, not being sufficiently large, that there was a piece purchased from Sir John Jamison, to enable the College Buildings to be put up, partly on that and partly on the church property.
245. On which side of the street are the College Buildings erected? On the south side of Jamison-street.
246. Are you aware that a portion of that land was exchanged for another portion? No, I am not.
247. Can you give the Committee any evidence on the subject? If the Committee will ask me any questions, I will answer them to the best of my judgment.
248. Are you in possession of any information on the subject—can you give the Committee any evidence with regard to the exchange of any portion of the land belonging to the Trustees of the Scots Church for any other portion of land? No, I do not know that I can. I never heard of it until lately.
249. By Mr. Piddington: Are you a shareholder in the Australian College Buildings in Jamison-street? I am.
250. What is the amount of shares you have paid up in that project? Sixteen shares of £25 each; the total amount, £400.

251. Are you aware that the object of the Bill before the Committee is to legalize the exchange of a portion of the land belonging to the Scots Church, on which land portions of two College buildings are erected, for another portion of back land without any buildings on it? I have heard such a thing is in contemplation, and I have enquired with whom the exchange was to be made, considering that it was one property—the property of the Church and the College—and that the College was to be built on the Church land, but that not being sufficient, a piece was bought from Sir John Jamison, and another piece exchanged with Sir John for the street.

G. Bowman,
Esq.

22 Mar., 1864.

252. Are you aware there is a mortgage, signed by the Trustees of the Scots Church, including Dr. Lang, on the land and buildings now proposed to be exchanged? No, I am not.<sup>1</sup>

253. Will you direct your attention to this plan. This plan professes to be a sketch of the allotment belonging to the Scots Church. I beg to call your attention to that part with the letter A on it; that part professes to shew a portion of the Scots Church allotment on which parts of two buildings are erected. It is intended, by Act of Parliament, to exchange this piece of land, on which portions of these two buildings are erected, for the piece marked B, at the back of the allotment, upon which there is nothing? Yes, I understand that is the object, but I never could understand with whom the exchange was to be made. These two lower buildings were, by the Trustees of the College, transferred to Dr. Lang, as compensation for all his outlay; <sup>2</sup>not the other part.

254. Are you in favour of making a good title, by the help of the Bill before the Committee, to the two remaining College buildings, for the private advantage of Dr. Lang? No. I say now, as I have always said, that whatever money is due to Dr. Lang he is entitled to be paid, together with interest, the same as every shareholder in the College, if the institution is not carried on as originally intended, and if the buildings are sold.

255. Then I understand you to insist upon an equality of treatment, as regards the claims of yourself and other proprietors, and those of Dr. Lang? Yes, Dr. Lang has made the largest advances, and is entitled to more than others, no doubt; but all should receive in proportion.

256. If Dr. Lang succeeds in possessing himself of the two remaining College Buildings, will not the Presbyterians of the Colony be deprived of their College property? When you speak of the two remaining buildings, do you exclude the two first?

257. Those Dr. Lang has already got; now he wants a good title to the two remaining? If I understand the thing rightly, this piece of land was purchased from Sir John Jamison to enable these buildings for the College to be erected, but it was not paid for, for a considerable time, and then Sir John threatened to take them away. In consideration of that I believe Dr. Lang took the advice of his friends, and that advice was, to take a conveyance in trust for uses, and then he would be able to raise money by mortgage upon them to pay for the land, and he did so.

258. If Dr. Lang succeeds in possessing himself of the two remaining College buildings, will not the Presbyterians of the Colony be deprived of their College property? I should think they will, and the shareholders particularly that have paid for it.

259. Do you approve of the attempt to deprive the Presbyterians of the Colony, of the benefit intended for them by the subscribers to the Australian College? I do not. I think there is ample means there, if the property is sold, to pay every man what he subscribed and interest.

260. Did you ever before hear of a proposal to deprive a college of property belonging to it, for the benefit of one individual? No, I never heard of this till to-day. I always did consider the two lower buildings were to be the property of Dr. Lang, to compensate him for his outlay up to a certain time.

261. By Dr. Lang: To what time? I think about 1840.

262. Was it not 1841?<sup>3</sup> I do not think I was one of the Council in those days.

263. May not the arrangement you refer to have been effected in 1841? It might have been in 1841—it was 1840 or 1841. I was made a Trustee or Councilman of the College, at a meeting we had for the business of the College.

264. Are you aware of the terms of the exchange mutually made by the Trustees of the Scots Church and Sir John Jamison, when the street was opened in 1831? No, I am not aware of anything, only from hearsay, and partly from yourself—not of any exchange particularly; but I understood that a piece of land was purchased, and as it was not in your power to pay for it, Sir John Jamison threatened to take the houses away, and you took the advice of your friends—I think you said your legal friends—and they advised you to take a conveyance for uses, and by that means you would be able to give a mortgage, and get money to pay Sir John Jamison.

265. Do you know why the delay in paying Sir John Jamison took place? I believe it was because funds were not furnished to you by the shareholders of the College.

266. Are you not aware that the original arrangement was, that the shareholders should occupy the position I had with Lord Goderich, and complete the arrangements I had made at home? No, I am not aware of that.

267.

<sup>1</sup> ADDED (on revision):—but I understood from Dr. Lang himself, that when Sir John Jamison became pressing for the payment of the land, and threatened him that if he was not paid for the land that he would resume it and the buildings thereon, that then Dr. Lang took advice in the matter, and got a conveyance made to him for uses, which enabled him to mortgage the two lower houses to the Trust Company for £1,500, and thereby was enabled to pay Sir John his claim.

<sup>2</sup> ADDED (on revision):—not the other portion of the land purchased from or exchanged with Sir John, only the two lower houses, and the land or allotments they are built on—no part of the upper or other two houses.

<sup>3</sup> NOTE (on revision):—I think this question was 1831-2, not 1841-2.

- G. Bowman, Esq.
22 Mar., 1864.
267. Are you aware of the nature of the original arrangement with Lord Goderich? Only from your publications—only from what you have stated.
268. Have you not seen the letters that passed on the occasion, published in documents from the Secretary's Office? I think I have seen them; I generally see most things that are published, and no doubt I have seen those.
269. That publication therefore does not rest solely on my information? I cannot say.
270. If it is contained in letters that have issued from the office of the Colonial Secretary—? I should say they are publications of original documents.
271. Are you aware that the original stipulation with Lord Goderich was, that £1,500 should be advanced to me towards the passage of the Scotch mechanics, on their arrival in the Colony, and that no further amount was to be advanced by the Government, till at least an equal amount should be expended on the buildings? No, I am not aware of that, only from your statements. I was not connected with the College when it was first commenced; it was some time afterwards when I became a shareholder, believing it would be a benefit to the Colony, and having a family rising up.
272. Then you have no knowledge of the arrangements made between the trustees and Sir John Jamison, in 1830, for the opening of the street? No, that was before I had anything to do with it whatever.
273. Are you aware that in their arrangement with Sir John Jamison, the trustees then agreed to transfer to him a portion of their allotment? No, I was not aware of that, but I have heard of it lately. I was not intimately acquainted with the then trustees; I knew them personally, but was not acquainted sufficiently to get that information from them, not being interested at that time myself.
274. Did that arrangement with Sir John Jamison, in 1830, not necessitate a further arrangement on the part of the trustees, in 1831, when Sir John's property in that street was sold? That I cannot say; I had nothing whatever to do with it then, and paid no attention to it.
275. You are therefore unable to give the Committee any information bearing upon the particular point which is referred to it? I am not able to give any information as to the arrangement you have been speaking of.
276. By Mr. Piddington: With regard to the exchange of land? No, that was before I had anything to do with the institution.
277. By Dr. Lang: Are you aware that when the original arrangement for the College was made, it was intended that the whole of the ground on which the buildings were to be erected was to be transferred to the shareholders by the Trustees of the Scots Church? I have heard such a thing, but I am not positive that was to be the case; I have heard it mentioned, but when or where I cannot say. But I always understood the College Buildings and College were to be in connection with the Scots Church, and built on the Scots Church property, but that finding there was not sufficient room, this piece was purchased and an exchange made. That was all done before I became connected with it, for the buildings were up and the institution in existence then.
278. Do you observe a clause in the Bill before the Committee (No. 3), providing that this Act shall not be held to affect or invalidate any rights or claims, either of the Government or any private individuals, to or over the ground of which it legalizes the exchange? I observe that clause.
279. Do you not think that that would secure the rights either of the Government or of private individuals over the property? I am not aware that it would. The object of that institution was to raise an academical institution for the benefit of the Colony, but if it is converted to another purpose that object is lost. I am as anxious as any man that that object should be carried out.
280. You are not aware of the arrangements that were made by the trustees in reference to the ground, before the erection of the College Buildings? No, I am not.
281. By Mr. Mate: Are you aware whether, if all existing interests were secured, there would be any objections to this Bill? I think there would be. I think this is obviating the object of the institution—doing away with it altogether, and the object of the shareholders defeated.
282. You say that because you believe the object of the institution of the College would be defeated? Yes, I am certain it would be defeated if that property was given away, or turned from the purpose for which it was originally intended.
283. By Mr. Piddington: I wish to draw your attention to section 1 of this Bill. If the Parliament agrees to the first section of this Bill, authorizing the exchange of this piece of land, is there anything that will secure your rights as a shareholder interested in the two portions of buildings proposed to be exchanged? I do not see anything in this clause.
284. Nor in any other? No; I never read this Bill before. It is not stated in this Bill with whom this exchange is to be made. Now if it is to be the Trustees of the College that should be stated.
285. There are no Trustees of the College—Dr. Lang is the sole person interested, excepting the mortgagees to whom he has mortgaged the property. The whole of this (referring to the plan) Dr. Lang has mortgaged for £4,500, and for that vacant piece of land Dr. Lang wishes to obtain parliamentary authority to get possession of the two remaining houses? I do not think it can be for himself; I think he should be paid every farthing that is due to him, but I do not think he should claim the property of other people. These houses were built with other people's money as well as Dr. Lang's.
286. By Dr. Lang: Are you not aware that there was an educational establishment called into existence, when the College was founded, in December, 1831, that involved a large expenditure on the part of those concerned? But that educational establishment paid its own expenses for a considerable time.

287. By no means — ? I was told by Mr. Wallace, the treasurer, that there ought to be a dividend given to the shareholders—that there were funds in hand; and, I believe, had the thing been conducted properly, as it was in the first instance, it would have been a flourishing institution to this day. G. Bowman,
Esq.
22 Mar., 1864.

288. Are you aware that, up to 1836, the shareholders had never qualified themselves to receive any advance from the Government at all? I never understood what qualification was necessary myself.

289. Supposing there had been an arrangement similar to that proposed to be legalized by this Bill, made in 1831, before any buildings were erected on the ground, would there have been any inequality or injustice in the proposed exchange when the ground was vacant, thirty-three years ago? I think it would have been an injustice to the shareholders, if they had paid their money,<sup>1</sup>

290. There were no shareholders at that time? Not then, but afterwards we became entitled to an interest in that land by paying our money towards the College.

291. It is stated in the preamble of the Bill, that when the said street (Jamison-street) was formed, it was agreed that a small triangular portion of the allotment of the Scots Church, on the south side of Jamison-street, should be exchanged for a similar triangular portion of the said allotment of the late Sir John Jamison — ? I know nothing of that; it was before I had anything to do with it whatever;<sup>2</sup>

292. Supposing such an arrangement had been made then, would there be any injustice in its being legalized now? I think so, unless it was conveyed to the parties holding the College Buildings, that is, the shareholders of the Australian College.

293. By Mr. Piddington: I think you stated you understood that, when this portion of land, bought by Dr. Lang from Sir John Jamison, was conveyed to him, it was intended to be conveyed in trust for the College? I always understood so.

294. Are you aware that Dr. Lang has obtained a conveyance of that land to himself, as an individual? No, I am not.

295. If he has done so, should you think that would be in accordance with the understanding at the time? I should not think it in accordance with Dr. Lang's principles,<sup>3</sup>

296. If the fact turns out to be that Dr. Lang has obtained a conveyance of that land to himself as an individual, do you consider that to be in accordance with the understanding that existed? I think not;<sup>4</sup>

297. By Dr. Lang: Are you not aware that the buildings were erected almost exclusively at my expense, and with my funds? I have heard you laid out a great deal of money in erecting them; I know you did, indeed, from your accounts.

298. And are you not aware that a large expenditure was incurred, with the sanction of the shareholders, in maintaining the educational establishment for a long series of years? I am aware that the establishment paid its own expenses for a series of years.

299. Only for a very short time? Had it been conducted properly by the professors, it would have continued to do so.

300. Are you not aware that there were other educational institutions that fell, though under perhaps equally favourable auspices? I do not think there were any equally favoured with that.

301. Do you not think the Sydney College was under as favourable auspices? No, I do not think it was.

302. Are you aware what amount had been contributed by the shareholders, up to the year 1836? Only from what I have seen published—your own accounts, and some of the proceedings of our meetings.

TUESDAY, 29 MARCH, 1864.

Present:—

DR. LANG,		MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. MATE,		MR. STEWART,
MR. SUTHERLAND.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

The Rev. John Dunmore Lang, D.D., M.L.A., examined in his place:—

303. By the Chairman: You are one of the persons who have brought forward this Bill? I have brought it forward, at the instance of the Elders and Committee of Management of the Scots Church. Rev.
J. D. Lang,
D.D., M.L.A.
29 Mar., 1864.

304. What is the particular object of the parties applying for the Bill? It was to get the limits of the property definitively settled, to enable them to appoint additional trustees, and to prevent litigation, which would otherwise in all likelihood take place in the event of my decease.

305.

<sup>1</sup> ADDED (on revision):—as they certainly did, believing the buildings were being built on the Church property.

<sup>2</sup> ADDED (on revision):—but had I known that the College and buildings were being erected on any other than Church property, I never would have joined it.

<sup>3</sup> ADDED (on revision):—as Principal of the Australian College, and carrying it on as a public institution—not a private one.

<sup>4</sup> ADDED (on revision):—indeed, I am sure it was not; the shareholders never would have agreed to the institution being on private property.

Rev.
J. D. Lang,
D.D., M.L.A.
29 Mar., 1864.

305. Can you state the particular arrangement that was made between the Trustees of the Scots Church and Sir John Jamison, in 1830? At the suggestion of Sir John Jamison, it was agreed between him and the trustees to form a street from George-street to Church Hill, through their respective allotments, for the improvement of both properties; the particulars of that arrangement are shewn on the plan I have exhibited to the Committee.

306. When were Sir John's allotments in Jamison-street sold? In 1831; and agreeably to the arrangement specified in the plan, I purchased two of these allotments, the one of them including the portion of the allotment of the Scots Church which had been temporarily made over to Sir John, he being bound in the mean time to sell the portion of his allotment, including that portion surrendered by the trustees to him for the time, on the north side of the street, at the same price that he was to receive for the adjoining allotment further down; and the same arrangement was made for the purchase of an allotment on the south side of the street.

307. Who purchased those allotments? I did all of them.

308. For whom? I purchased the allotment on the north side with a view to its being transferred to the Trustees of the Church, including the portion of their allotment that had been assigned for the time being to Sir John. That allotment had a frontage of 31 feet to Jamison-street; it tapered to a point at the upper end, and Sir John received the same price for it as he would have done had it had a depth of from sixty to a hundred feet back.

309. Did you make any subsequent arrangement about this purchase? It was indispensably necessary for the trustees to get back a portion of their allotment that they had formally and temporarily assigned to Sir John to square the lines, and as that allotment was 31 feet frontage, while the portion of the ground surrendered to the trustees on the south side of the street had a frontage of 29 feet; and as I was engaged at the time in founding an academical institution of great importance, it was conceived, to the Colony, it was considered by the trustees that the 31 feet of frontage, with the back ground on the north side of the street, was equivalent to the 29 feet on the south side, and that exchange was made between the trustees and myself accordingly.

310. Had the trustees the power to alienate any portion of the allotment of the Scots Church? Certainly they had no power to alienate any portion of it; they could not do it without an Act of the Legislature at the time; but it was suggested as the only means of squaring the lines, in a case in which there were various angular portions of ground cut off that could not have been turned to account otherwise. In these circumstances it was thought that the best course was to draw a line across, and declare that all above that line should belong to the trustees, and all below it to Sir John Jamison; but Sir John was bound at the same time to sell to me, at the same rate that he should receive for the adjoining allotments, the portion that was thus transferred to me, to complete the arrangement. I may state that, in three different instances, there have been portions of the original allotment of the Scots Church alienated without the sanction of an Act of the Legislature. The opening of the street to Church Hill implied an alienation of the portion of the ground, but the trustees merely opened a road to the public, and the Government sanctioned and approved of their act and deed by proclaiming the street subsequently. The second was the surrender to the Government—for it was at their instance it was done—of 10 feet for the road from Church Hill south along the house that belonged some time since to Mr. Wentworth. These three buildings had been erected as Government quarters by Major Ovens, who was at the head of the Works Department in Sir Thomas Brisbane's time; and when General Darling arrived in the Colony, he would not allow them to be used for the purpose for which they were erected, and ordered them to be sold; but it was found that Major Ovens had brought up the western line of the buildings to the verge of the Scots Church allotment, and the officers of the Government at the time asked the trustees whether they would allow a road to the Government to enable them to sell their buildings, which they would otherwise have been unable to do from the want of access. The trustees merely removed their fence 10 feet, and got some compensation from Government at the time—I forget the amount—which went into the Church funds. The third instance of alienation was of very recent occurrence; it was for the widening of York-street. The Corporation required that the street should be widened, which could not be done without the consent of those representing the Scots Church, as it encroached upon the line of the street. The Corporation, in order to have that arrangement effected without loss to this grant, agreed, in the event of our allowing the street to be widened, to build the wall that surrounds that portion of our ground. Such an arrangement was conceived to be mutually beneficial, but in none of these instances did the trustees imagine that they had any power to alienate any portion of their allotment.

311. When was Sir John Jamison paid for the two allotments that you purchased? He was not paid till 1841.

312. How was it there was such a long delay; was it from inability to pay, or what other cause? It was not from inability, for much greater amounts had been paid from the funds, that went to the erection of the buildings, but because it was arranged from the first, that in the event of the establishment of the institution on the basis on which it was founded in December, 1831, the ground on which the four buildings stand should be made over to the trustees or representatives of the shareholders of the institution. The trustees of the Church had nothing to do with that ground after the arrangements that were made in 1831, in reference to the allotment repurchased from Sir John on the north side, and the exchange of that allotment for the one on the south side. I may state, in further explanation, that the back ground included in the portion surrendered by Sir John, in addition to the frontage to Jamison-street of 29 feet, was considered of inferior value to the portion having frontage to that street; but to compensate the Church for any sacrifice that such an arrangement would have have implied, it was agreed, at the suggestion of Dr. Ramsay, one of the trustees, that, in consideration of the back ground, the building to be erected on the uppermost portion of the ground prospectively set apart for educational purposes, should have the half-gable for the erection of a future manse for the minister. I neglected to state that it was found necessary, after the arrangement for the exchange of the allotment on the north side of the street for the allotment on the south side of 31 feet for the 29 feet of frontage to Jamison-street, it was found necessary to draw a line across the allotment of the Church and a portion of the ground acquired from Sir John as the definitive boundary of the Scots Church property, and to compensate the Church for the value of the back ground. The arrangement suggested by Dr. Ramsay was agreed to and carried into effect accordingly, and the Church have had possession of the allotment purchased from Sir John, including the portion temporarily surrendered by the trustees on the north side of the street, for thirty-three years; and they have had possession of the portion which it is proposed to exchange (the triangular portion) for the same period. I believe there is a small error in this plan (the plan appended to the Report), which the Committee observed themselves, with respect to the ground—the line drawn across the allotment—the cross line from the old Barrack wall to Jamison-street is 4 feet additional to what is given on this plan, because the surveyor took the measurement from the present fence, but the property of the Church goes 4 feet further down.

Rev.
J. D. Lang,
D.D., M.L.A.
29 Mar., 1864.

313. Was there any written record of the arrangement of 1831? There was. The trustees made the arrangement among themselves, and although there was no written arrangement here is one equally binding, because the trustees have had possession of the allotment on the north side; and the half gable, to compensate for the additional back ground, was erected immediately after that arrangement was made.

314. Has the value of the half-gable been estimated by any competent person, and if so, by whom? It was estimated merely as a matter of trade, not in consequence of any order from a Committee of this Assembly, by the late Mr. George Patten, who had been himself one of the mechanics erecting the buildings, and who was afterwards a member of the City Corporation; he valued the half gable at £300.

315. As one of the promoters of this Bill, what is your own object in seeking the Bill? In common with the Trustees of the Church, I am anxious —

316. By Mr. Piddington: Who are the other trustees? In common with the Elders and Committee of Management of the Church—it was a lapsus—I am anxious that the question of property should be definitively settled, because we cannot at present appoint additional trustees without laying ourselves open to great legal expenses, and without involving these trustees in the complicated questions that the undertaking has given rise to; and so long as the question is unsettled, there will be no possibility of a revival of the institution, which, I think, is quite practicable otherwise in present circumstances.

317. What do you allude to by "the institution"? The defunct College. I do not consider it to be completely dead; I think it is capable of a revival, and very speedily, because, if the Presbyterian College—for which there has been a Bill before the Assembly these two years—comes into existence, it will be almost useless without a preparatory institution available for the youth of the Presbyterian communion all over the Colony; and I have all along had it in view to have such an institution as a nursery for the Presbyterian College, ever since the Affiliated Colleges Act was passed in 1854. I have had many offers, for many years past, to lease the ground that still belongs to the Church—the triangular portion between Jamison-street and Charlotte-place—especially during the gold mania, but I always set my face against anything of the kind, although it would have brought me a considerable revenue, as the only remaining trustee, under the idea that the ground having been set apart for an academical institution, it was not proper to appropriate it for any other purpose, even temporarily. A lecture-room for the institution was erected on the ground on the north side of the street, and was in use for the institution on a reduced scale, from the period when there was a break-up in it in 1841, till 1854, when the Affiliated Colleges Act was passed. That shews that the arrangement made in 1831 was adhered to.

318. By the Chairman: What property do you specially claim in the houses and land on the south side of Jamison-street? I can shew that the whole of the buildings, with the exception of the portion contributed by Government, which was very small, were erected from my funds, through the sacrifice of my property, which had become a matter of necessity at the time.

319. By Mr. Piddington: With reference to the so-called agreement which you state was entered into between yourself and the other Trustees of the Scots Church with Sir John Jamison, in reference to prolonging Jamison-street through the Scots Church allotment, have you any record, or is there any record in connection with the Church, of who the Trustees were who were present on that occasion? Their names are given on the plan which is still in existence, and which I have produced before the Committee.

320. Is there any written agreement besides, beyond the memorandum on that plan? No, there is not. I may state, in explanation, that although the trustees found themselves perfectly competent to open up the road through their allotment for the improvement of their own property, which was obviously the result of such an arrangement at the time, they could not enter into any specific arrangement that would have implied a legal alienation of the ground.

321. There is no legal agreement? There is not.

322. Are you one of the original Trustees to whom Governor Darling granted the allotment of land on Church Hill, in trust, for the Scots Presbyterian Church? I am.

323. Were the other Trustees John Piper, Thomas M'Vitie, and David Ramsay? Yes.

324. Are the trustees all dead excepting yourself? They are.

325. Are you aware that the deed of grant contains the condition that the congregation of the the Scots Church are to choose trustees to fill vacancies in the trust, as soon as such vacancies occur? There is a clause to that effect.

326. Has the congregation chosen trustees to fill the vacancy in the number of four trustees as stated in the deed? I would answer the question with a preliminary statement necessary for its explanation.

327. I only want an answer? I will give you a direct answer. The congregation, in the year 1840, chose three additional trustees, Mr. George Bowman, Mr. Thomas Brown, and Mr. Thomas Cadell.

328. Are those three additional trustees alive? Mr. Cadell is dead, Mr. Brown has left the Colony, and is now in England, and Mr. George Bowman is still alive; but in a legal case that came before the Supreme Court, the appointment of these trustees was disallowed, and was declared to be invalid and of no effect, and in consequence of that disallowance Mr. Bowman was relieved of all responsibility, in the great suit—the property suit between the Synod of Australia and myself. From that circumstance—from the disallowance of these trustees—there have been no other trustees chosen since.

329. Does the disallowance to which you allude, proceed on the presumption that the congregation cannot elect trustees if they wish? No, it does not; it was declared in consequence, if my memory serves me right, of there never having been a conveyance of the property made to these additional trustees.

330. Cannot the congregation, if they feel disposed, elect three trustees in accordance with the terms of the deed of grant, and so fill up the vacancy? No doubt they can.

331. Can you represent the Scots Church property, being but one trustee out of four named in the grant? I think I can.

332. You are speaking morally, I suppose? I am; I cannot say legally; I believe, legally I am the representative of the property of the Church.

333. Does not the deed of grant prescribe that there shall be a succession to the trustees named in the deed for ever, by the congregation choosing successors to fill up vacancies? I think it does; I do not remember the terms.

334. Have you the formal consent of the congregation to the exchange of land proposed by this Bill? Decidedly, I have the consent of the Elders.

335. I am speaking of the congregation? The Elders and Committee of Management, who represent the congregation. The Presbyterian Church Government is conducted on representative principles.

336. Was that consent obtained at a meeting of the congregation convened for the express object? It was given by the congregation again and again, for they are very anxious that the question of property should be settled.

337. When did the congregation give their consent to the application being made for this Bill? At the time when it was first brought forward.

338. Was there any meeting of the congregation for the express purpose? There was—there is an annual meeting —

339. The congregation have then actually given their consent? Yes.

340. Not alone the Committee of Management—who are the Committee of Management of the Scots Church at the present time? There are twelve, of whom Mr. George Brown is Chairman. I cannot remember the names of the eleven, but I believe they are attached to the petition.

341. What particular advantage will accrue to the congregation, by squaring the lines of the Church property on the south side of Jamison-street? They will be able to erect a manse for the minister.

342. What is to prevent the Scots Church, if so disposed, from erecting a manse for the minister at the present time? They could do it, but they would not.

343. Is there anything to prevent them if they felt inclined? Nothing certainly.

344. Then what particular advantage will the congregation have from what you call squaring the lines? They will have a definitively fixed boundary.

345. Have they not now the definitively fixed boundary granted by General Darling? No, because, in consequence of the arrangement with Sir John, it was agreed that the back ground, in addition to the 29 feet of frontage to Jamison-street, should be transferred to me for the purpose of the institution.

346. What effect can any arrangement made by parties not authorized by law to make arrangement, have upon the definitive boundary of the Scots Church allotment? Perhaps it cannot interfere with the legal boundary.

347. I am speaking of legally, not of any cock-and-bull story? Morally and virtually it can.

348. If this Bill passes, will the Church allotment be squared on the north side of Jamison-street? The Church allotment remains as it originally was, with the addition of the portion obtained by purchase from Sir John Jamison.

349. Have you any memorandum of that so-called purchase of the Scots Church allotment on the north side of Jamison-street from Sir John Jamison? I have no other than the one certified to on the plan.

350. Is it common to purchase land from a proprietor without having any written agreement or conveyance? I had the conveyance in 1841.

351. Of this particular land belonging to the Scots Church allotment? No, certainly not.

352. I ask you, is it common for two men, one to sell and the other to buy land, without any conveyance of the land so purchased? Certainly not, it is not usual, but this was a very particular case.

353. Can you give the Committee any information with regard to the sum you paid for that particular portion of the Scots Church land which you say you bought from Sir John Jamison? Yes, the portion of 23 feet —

354. No, excuse me, I am not speaking of the south side; I am speaking of that portion within the lines of the Scots Church allotment,—have you any memorandum or receipt from Sir John Jamison for any portion of the Scots Church allotment which you say you purchased from him on the north side of the street? Certainly not, for it was not practicable for the trustees to alienate any portion of their allotment; and it was merely an arrangement on paper till Sir John Jamison's sale of his allotments could be effected.
355. Did Sir John Jamison ever take possession of any portion of the Scots Church allotment, on the north side of Jamison-street, which you say you repurchased from Sir John Jamison? I do not think he did; I was in England at the time.
356. Did you ever see any fence or enclosure placed around that portion of the Scots Church allotment which you say you purchased from Sir John Jamison on the north side of the street? Certainly not.
357. Have you any written memorandum of what you paid Sir John Jamison for interest on the purchase money of that 23 feet frontage on the south side, and the 33 feet frontage on the north side? The whole amount ———
358. I am speaking now of interest? The rate of interest was specified by Sir John at his sale, and was given in the memorandum that I brought to the Committee with the original plan. I do not happen to have it just now, but my recollection is perfect, I believe, as to the two allotments. The 23 feet on the south side were purchased at the same rate as the adjoining, at £4 a foot frontage, and the other at a few shillings less; but the one purchase was £92, and the other £113, I think, or £104.
359. That is not the question—I will put it again: Do you recollect the total amount you paid to Sir John Jamison, for the 23 feet of land on the south side of Jamison-street, and the 33 feet on the north side, including interest? It was £447.
360. Can you tell me what portion of the sum of £447 was paid by you to Sir John Jamison for interest? The difference between the amount of the original purchase and that sum.
361. What did you give for the frontage on the north side? I think £104.
362. What for the frontage on the south side? £92.
363. That makes a total of £196? Yes.
364. Do you say that for ten years' interest on £196 you paid £447? It was £497, because it included Sir John's two shares in the institution.
365. Then you repurchased, from Sir John Jamison, two shares in the Australian College? No; Sir John allowed his shares to be deducted from the sum total that was due to him; he had never paid anything till then.
366. Was the difference between £196 and £497 the interest you paid for ten years upon £196? Yes, it was.
367. Have you any idea of the value at the present time of the vacant pieces of land marked B., which you propose to give in exchange? I have not the least.
368. Are you owner of the portion of land you offer in exchange, marked B.? I am.
369. Is the portion I allude to encumbered by any mortgage, or altogether unencumbered? It is encumbered by a mortgage.
370. To whom is this piece of land mortgaged? To Mr. Wallis at present.
371. Have you the consent of the mortgagee to the proposed transfer? Certainly I have; but through an arrangement that has to be effected, for Mr. Wallis wants to be paid up his money, and I have arranged to get it from the Savings' Bank in the event of this question being settled, and to give a conveyance to the Church of that portion of the ground.
372. Then, in the event of Parliament agreeing to this Bill, you contemplate the mortgage of the portion of the two houses that are built on the Scots Church allotment? It would then be all one.
373. That is what you mean? No doubt ——— Making a conveyance to the Church of the portion B. and also of the portion bought from Sir John Jamison on the north side.
374. Then do you seek power by Act of Parliament to give the vacant piece of land next the old barrack wall, which you have mortgaged, to the Scots Church congregation, in exchange for the portion of the Scots Church allotment in Jamison-street, marked A? Yes.
375. Is not the allotment you propose to take away from the Scots Church covered by a portion of two stone houses called College Buildings? Yes.
376. What is the length of the portion you propose to take away from the Scots Church allotment? I think the Committee ascertained the other day that it was 51 feet.
377. What is the length of the frontage to the back land—the portion of land you propose to give, marked B.? I think the Committee ascertained that also to be 52 feet, but to that portion must be added 4 feet below the present fence to the eastward.
378. If Parliament consents to the Bill before this Committee, will not the entire four houses, on the south side of Jamison-street, known as College Buildings, become your own private property? No doubt they will.
379. What is the entire length to Jamison-street of the four houses called College Buildings? I do not at this moment recollect.
380. To the best of your belief, do you not think the entire frontage of the buildings is about 103 or 104 feet? I dare say that is the extent.
381. How much of the entire frontage of these four houses did you ever buy from Sir John Jamison? I bought from Sir John Jamison only the portion included in the allotment of 23 feet frontage on the south side.
382. Is there one house out of the four College Buildings erected entirely on the land you purchased from Sir John Jamison? I think there is not entirely.
383. Not one house out of the four erected entirely upon the land you purchased from Sir John Jamison? No.
384. Did you not purchase the allotment on the south side of Jamison-street with the avowed object of building the College Buildings thereon? Yes, I did.

Rev.
J. D. Lang,
D.D., M.L.A.

385. Then is not, speaking of the entire frontage of the buildings to Jamison-street, 51 feet frontage now a portion of the Scots Church allotment, 29 feet a portion given by Sir John Jamison to the Church, and the remaining 23 feet the portion purchased by you for the purpose of building the College? No doubt. Perhaps I may be allowed to explain my answer. No doubt that is the state of the case; but with the consent of the trustees, the allotment purchased by me on the north side was exchanged for 29 feet on the south side, and the back land of the remaining portion was considered to be paid for in the erection of the half-gable.

386. With respect to this further explanation, can you tell the Committee the names of the trustees who made that arrangement with you, and the time when they made it? Dr. Ramsay and Mr. M'Vitie were on the ground when the arrangement was made—Captain Piper, the third of the four trustees, being absent at the time at Bathurst.

387. Can you state the time when that arrangement was made? In November, 1831. It was before there was a single stone on the ground; it was merely pegged off.

388. Is there any record in any of your church books of that arrangement? No, there is no other record than is shewn upon the ground in the erection of the half-gable.

389. Have you any written memorandum on the part of these two trustees, in conjunction with yourself, when this famous arrangement was made? No.

390. How have you obtained the conveyance of 29 feet to Jamison-street, given by Sir John Jamison to the Trustees of the Scots Church? I obtained it in virtue of the arrangement with the trustees, who got a quid pro quo, and believed they had.

391. In what way did the trustees obtain a consideration from you for that piece of land given by Sir John Jamison to the Church? I have already stated repeatedly that they got 31 feet of frontage, with the back ground on the north side, for the 29 feet on the south side.

392. Were you ever in legal possession of any part of the northern portion of Jamison-street, between the triangular piece with 31 feet frontage? Not as an individual.

393. Can you state the area of this triangular piece of land on the north side, as compared with the 29 feet frontage to Jamison-street, and the back land to it? I cannot.

394. Do you think it has one-tenth the area of the land obtained from Sir John Jamison on the south side? Perhaps not.

395. Was not the 29 feet given by Sir John Jamison on the south side of Jamison-street, given for the right of prolonging the street through the Scots Church allotment? The whole of the ground surrendered by Sir John was given for that purpose.

396. When you say "surrendered," do you apply the word to land given and not to land sold? Yes.

397. Does not Jamison-street run through the Scots Church allotment? It does.

398. Could Sir John Jamison have accomplished his object of prolonging the street through the Scots Church allotment, if the Trustees of the Scots Church had refused their consent? Certainly not.

399. Was not the contract to purchase one allotment on the south side of Jamison-street, and one on the north, signed by the four Trustees of the Scots Church? It was signed by them on the original plan.

400. Did you ever make known to the Scots Church congregation that Sir John Jamison had given to the Church a valuable piece of land in Jamison-street, for the right of running Jamison-street through their property? Certainly, it was a matter of notoriety, was mentioned at the public meetings of the congregation, and it was considered a very beneficial arrangement for the Church.

401. Was the beneficial arrangement for the Church understood to be the giving you 29 feet on the south side of Jamison-street, for some gable that was proposed to be erected to the buildings? The 29 feet were not given for that purpose at all; they were given for the 31 feet on the opposite side.

402. Have you ever conveyed the 31 feet on the opposite side to the Scots Church, or to any one in trust for the Church? No, it remains subject to the final arrangement that may be made.

403. Then I understand you that the parties connected with the Scots Church have, upon the promise from you of giving them an angular piece of land with 31 feet frontage—which you have not done—allowed you to take possession of 29 feet on the south of Jamison-street with the back land? I do not think that is a fair way of putting the question.

404. Have the congregation any legal right to the 31 feet frontage on the north side? They have an actual right.

405. Have they any legal right? Not yet, but they have had possession for thirty-three years of the buildings erected upon the land.

406. Is not the greater portion of this building that you allude to on the north side already built upon the Scots Church land? It is.

407. Then I again ask you whether the Scots congregation have not allowed you to obtain the 29 feet frontage on the south side of Jamison-street, conveyed to yourself individually, upon the promise to give them what is not legally conveyed to them? No doubt.

408. What further advantage will the Scots Church receive from the passing of this Bill, with reference to the gable upon the western side of the College Buildings, than they have now? They have had that advantage as the prospective portion of the cost of the future manse for their minister, for thirty-three years past.

409. What further advantage I ask will they have, if the Bill is carried out, than they have at present? They will have the property in the portion of the back ground that will square the allotment.

410. You speak of the half-gable having been built, which you say is a compensation to the Scots Church congregation;—did you build that gable entirely out of your own money? I did.

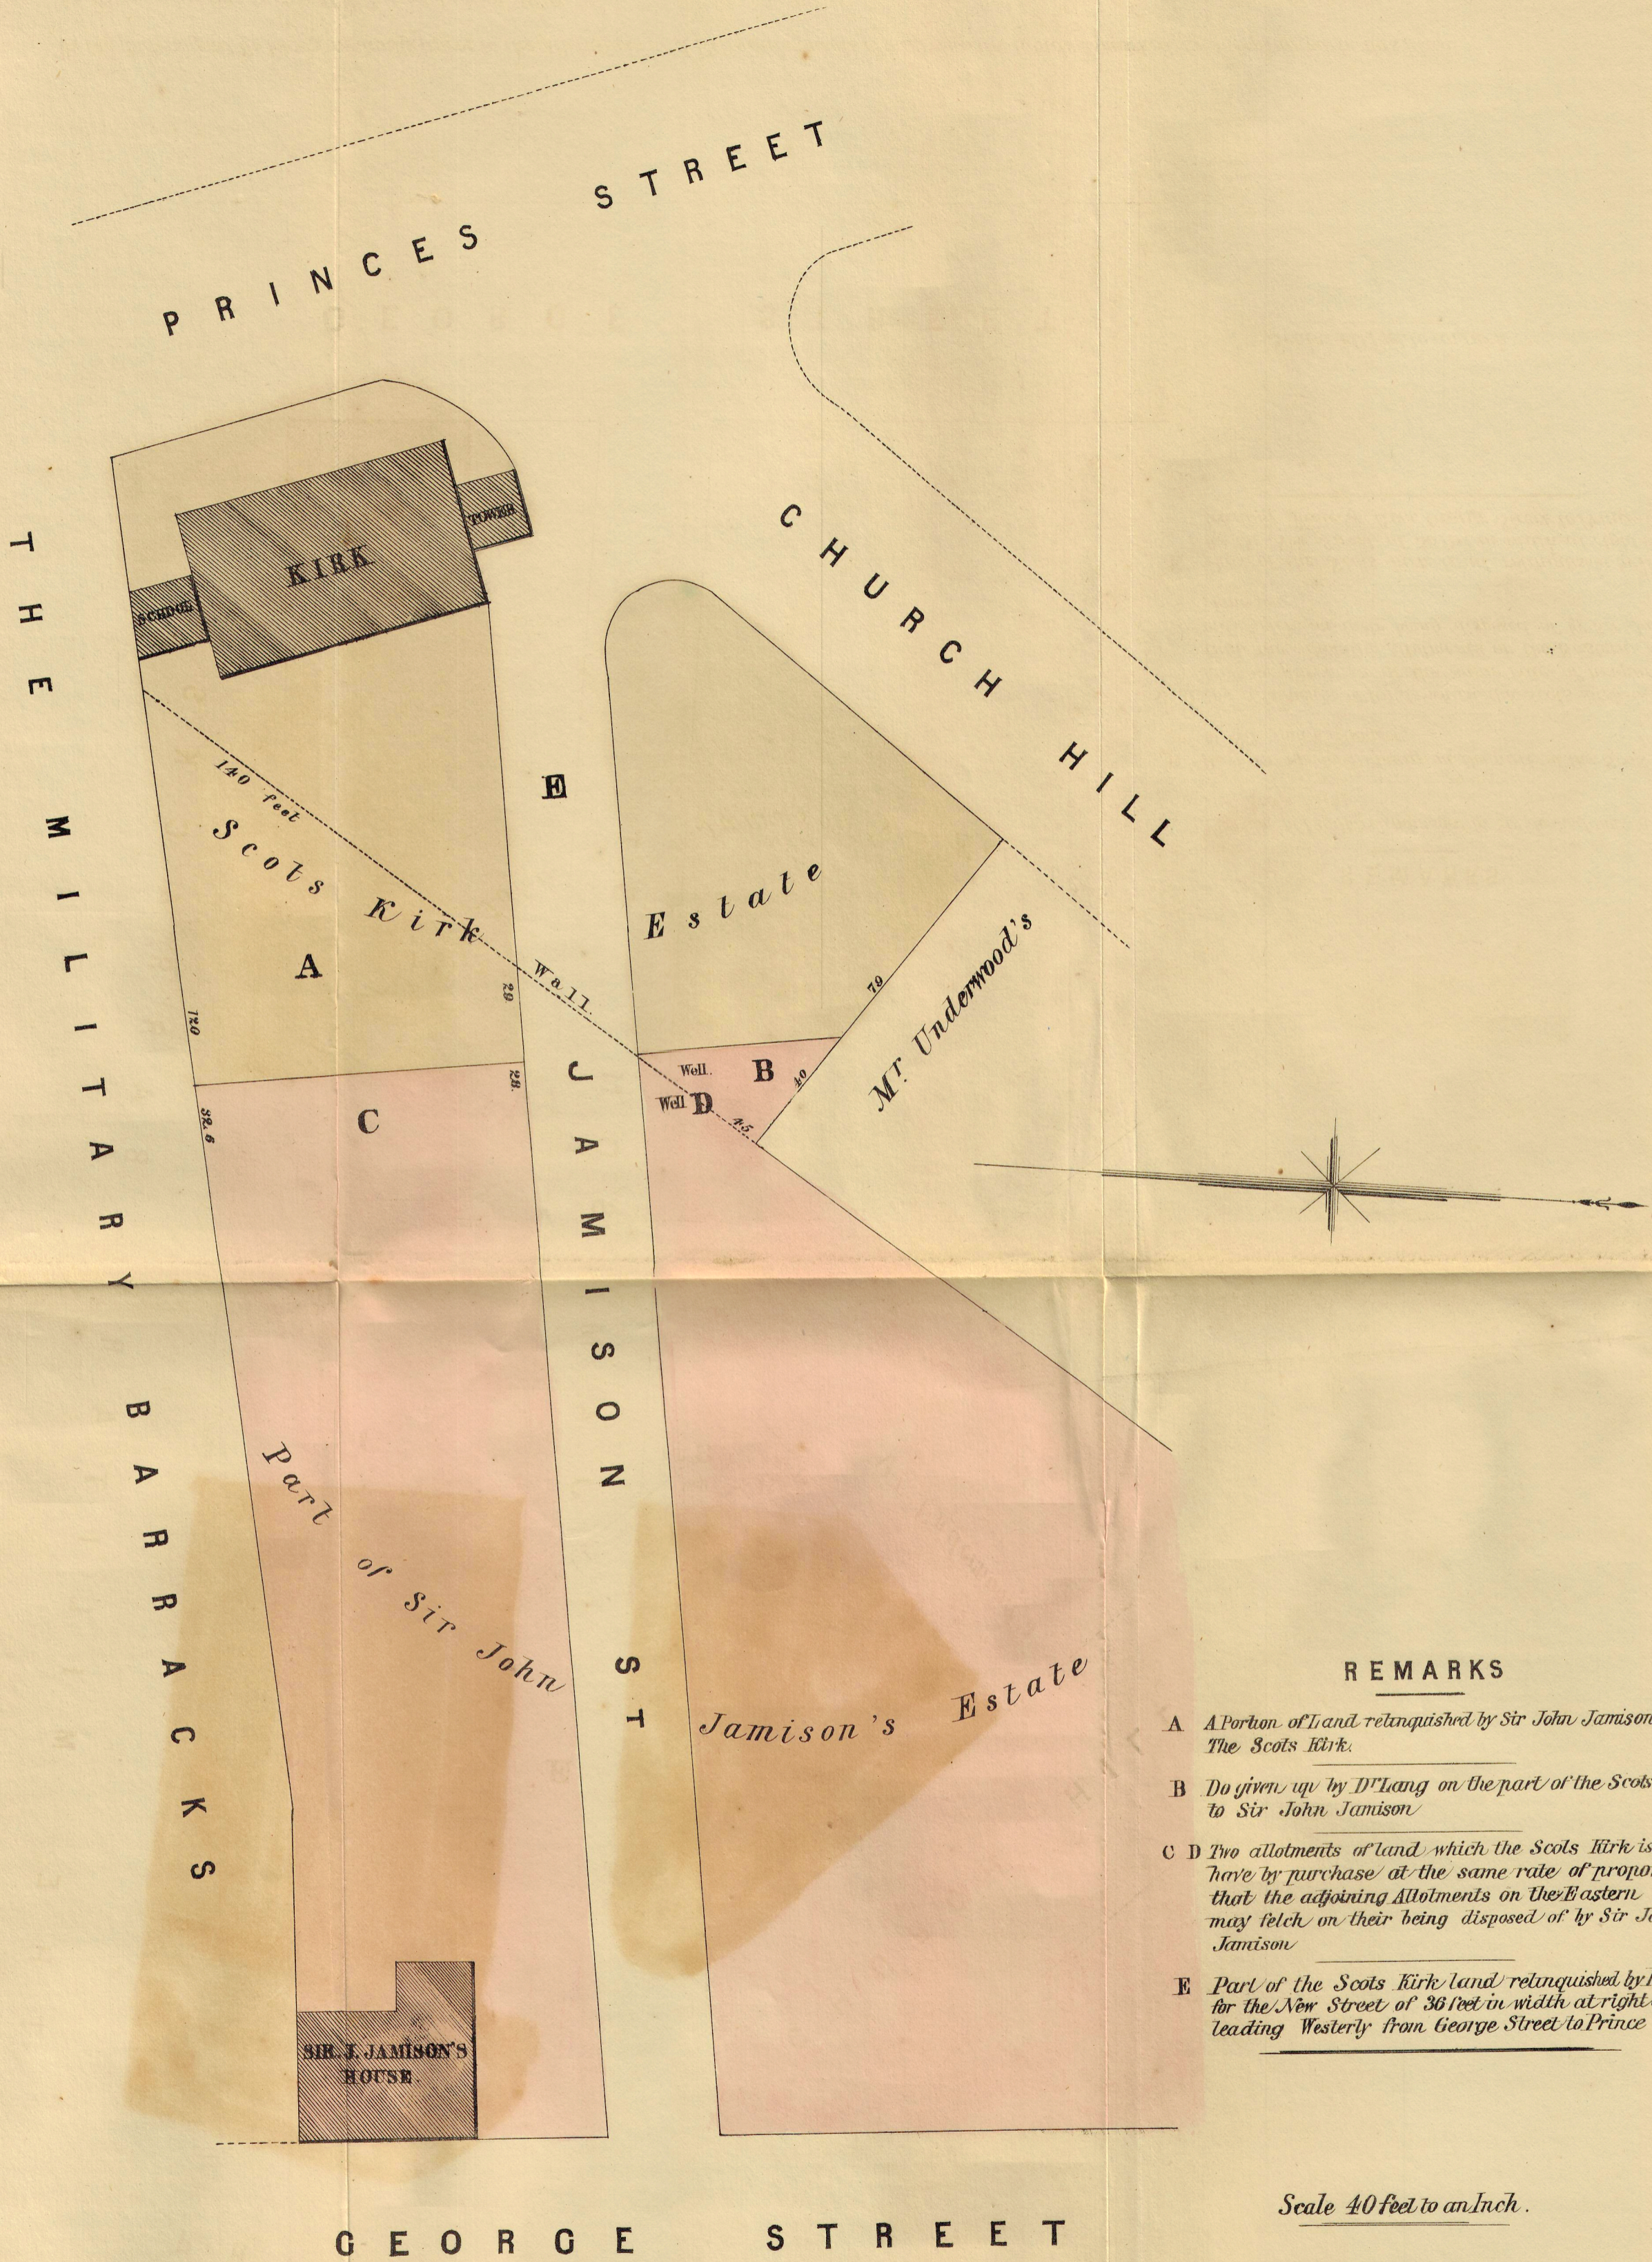

411. Did not the Government advance £3,500 in order to build those four houses? The Government advanced so much, but only a portion of that money went to the erection of the building. Rev.
J. D. Lang.
D.D., M.L.A.
412. I did not ask where it went; I asked did not the Government advance £3,500 in order to build the College, and which money ought to have been spent upon these buildings? No doubt. 29 Mar., 1864.
413. Are not these four buildings a portion of the so-called College? No doubt.
414. Did not individual subscribers in the Colony subscribe a sum exceeding £2,000, in order to contribute to the erection of a College building? There was a considerable sum subscribed, but the whole of that amount I can shew went towards the maintenance of the institution.
415. By Mr. Stewart: It is sought by this Bill merely to legalize what was a private arrangement previously? Yes.
416. By the Chairman: In fact, it was always in contemplation to get a Bill to legalize this exchange? Yes.
417. Why has it been allowed to sleep for thirty-three years? Simply because there was no hope of getting it; I had too many friends in the old Council.
418. By Mr. Stewart: Would this exchange in any way damage the rightful claim of any person? Certainly not; the late Attorney General, Mr. Hargrave, suggested that a clause should be added to the Bill, to secure the interests of Government or any private individuals in the case.
419. You did not suppose that it would in any way affect any private interests? I did not think it would.

DISORGANIZED STATE OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

 PROGRESS REPORT.

---

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on the 6th October, 1863, "to inquire into and report upon the Disorganized State of the Public Works Department,"—"with power to send for persons and papers," and "with leave to sit during any adjournment of the House,"—have agreed to the following Progress Report :—

In considering the matter referred to them, your Committee have taken the evidence of thirty-five witnesses, by which many grave irregularities have been disclosed, viz.,—That drinking has been carried on to such an extent in the office, and during office hours, as to interfere frequently with the orderly discharge of office duties; that quarrels have been frequent, and have ended in blows on several occasions; that many of the officers have been irregular in their time of coming to business in the morning and in leaving in the evening, and have been allowed to absent themselves from their duties in a most unaccountable manner; for example—Mr. Hall's journal shews that during the eighteen months previous to his suspension, he was absent for above one hundred days; Mr. Micklethwait's journal shews that he was absent seventy-seven days, besides two months (for which journals have not been sent to your Committee), the most of which time he was supposed to be ill. The evidence also shews that plans and other documents have been mislaid and lost; that the long room, in which seven or eight draftsmen work, was without a recognized head, and consequently not half the work performed which should have been; and that a want of order and discipline has been apparent throughout the whole department.

Your Committee beg to draw the attention of your Honorable House to the documents laid before your Committee, by Mr. Whitton, for the purpose of throwing discredit on the evidence of Mr. C. Fowler; and also to the documents produced and evidence given by the last-mentioned gentleman, on his final examination, which appears to your Committee, as far as Mr. Fowler is concerned, to be satisfactory.

The

The cost of the drawings made in the Railway Department, especially those for Station buildings, appears to be five or six times as great as it would be if they were prepared by a private architect. Your Committee recommend that drawings be made for the different classes of Station buildings, and that one set of plans be used for each class.

Your Committee recommend that Mr. Martin Gardiner be reinstated in the position from which he was dismissed, and that, when an opportunity offers, he be placed in as good a position as that held by him when he first entered the Railway Department; for the following reasons:—Because the offence with which he was charged was not of so grave a nature as to call for his dismissal from the public service; because Mr. Whitton admits, in his evidence before your Committee, that Mr. Gardiner performed all the duties which he entrusted to him, in the most satisfactory manner, and that the remarks made by Mr. Arnold, in his place in the Assembly, as to Mr. Gardiner's incompetency to perform the duties intrusted to him, were not justified, and because Mr. Whitton acknowledges that, if certain plans marked "Error" were placed before Mr. Gardiner, they must have been so placed for the purpose of insulting him, and went far to palliate, if not justify, the conduct for which he was dismissed. The evidence of Messrs. Drewett, Doherty, Gardiner, and Robertson, shews that they were so placed.

Mr. Whitton has recommended, in his report to the Minister, that Messrs. Doherty and Robertson should be dismissed, for writing letters for publication in a newspaper. Your Committee conclude, from the evidence given before them, that neither Mr. Doherty or Mr. Robertson intended nor did anything to cause such publication, consequently they do not deserve removal from the public service.

The evidence clearly shews that Mr. Robertson is an excellent draughtsman, a good mathematician, and was engaged on some of the best and most important drawings done in the Works Department; that he worked at the same table and on the same plans as Mr. Drewett, and that Mr. Drewett could not, with the plans before him, distinguish his own from Mr. Robertson's work. Mr. Whitton, Mr. Drewett, and every witness who gave evidence as to the ability, conduct, and duties of Mr. Robertson, spoke of him in the highest terms of commendation. In the face of those facts, your Committee cannot refrain from drawing the attention of your Honorable House to Mr. Whitton's report to the Minister, as regards Mr. Robertson's ability, conduct, and duties, which contains statements quite at variance with the above.

Mr. Whitton, in his report to the then Minister of Works, on the evidence taken before himself and Mr. Moody, says, "The evidence of Mr. Trengrouse is either true or untrue. If true he " is

“ is highly culpable, in not reporting such occurrences to me ; if not true, his conduct deserves severe condemnation ; and in either case I consider his services should be dispensed with.” Your Committee consider the latter reason may, but the first would not be sufficient ground for the dismissal of a gentleman who has been in the office for about ten years without a single complaint being made against him, and who, as a draughtsman, is equal to any in the office. Mr. Trengrouse positively states that, some two years ago, he informed Mr. Whitton of the excessive drinking and other objectionable proceedings in the department, when he was recommended by Mr. Whitton to “ mind his own business.” This Mr. Whitton denied, and drew the attention of your Committee to what purported to be the evidence of Mr. Trengrouse, given before Mr. Whitton and Mr. Moody, according to which Mr. Trengrouse never complained to his superior officer. Mr. Trengrouse states this was not the evidence he gave ; his statement was taken down by Mr. Moody, and read by that gentleman as he (Mr. Trengrouse) gave it, but not as it appeared in print. On finding that his evidence was not properly recorded, he applied to Mr. Arnold to be re-examined ; and upon the second examination his evidence was correctly taken, from which it appears that Mr. Trengrouse did inform Mr. Whitton of the drinking, &c. Your Committee believe that Mr. Whitton may have forgotten the circumstance, but Mr. Trengrouse’s statement is corroborated by Mr. Trengrouse, junior, Mr. Gardiner, Mr. Doherty, and by an extract from Mr. Trengrouse, senior’s, private journal. Your Committee, therefore, are of opinion that Mr. Trengrouse should not be dismissed, as recommended by Mr. Whitton.

Mr. Whitton acknowledges that a great portion of his time has been occupied in performing duties which your Committee believe should be performed by a Manager or the Commissioner ; for example, he stated—not a day passes but he is called upon to report upon minutes in connection with the working of the lines, and that fully a month of his time was taken up in prosecuting the charges against the late Traffic Manager,—whilst, during the latter period, the boring for the foundation of the Nepean Bridge was intrusted to a Mr. Robertson, a carpenter. The evidence discloses that serious mistakes were made, which would not have been the case if the borings had been conducted under the supervision of a competent civil engineer. Your Committee, therefore, recommend that the Engineer-in-Chief for Railways should devote the whole of his time to the construction of works, and not interfere with the management of those portions of the lines which are completed.

Your Committee recommend that a Time-book be kept in the Works Office, and that every officer should be compelled to enter the time of his arrival at and departure from his duties. And further, that greater care should be exercised by the Heads of Departments, in granting leave of absence to subordinates, and in calling upon them to account for such absences when they occur without prior permission.

The

The evidence proves that Mr. Hall drank to excess, idled his time, and very frequently absented himself from his duties; it further proves that he obtained a cheque for £55 from one of the contractors (for the Singleton and Picton Station buildings), to pay for ironmongery, the cost of which was only £48 17s. 6d., and that the balance, £6 2s. 6d., should have been paid by Mr. Hall to the Government, but instead of doing so he converted it to his own use; in consequence of which Mr. Whitton, "at the final settlement," deducted the last-mentioned amount from these contractors. For the first three irregularities, your Committee recommend that Mr. Hall's services should be dispensed with; the last they consider to be a matter for the consideration of the Honorable the Attorney General. Your Committee also direct the attention of your Honorable House to the conduct of this officer, with reference to the ironmongery for the Burwood Station.

Your Committee believe that Mr. Micklethwait's resignation ought not to have been accepted; but having been so, they recommend that he should not be again employed in the public service.

Your Committee attach no credit to the evidence of Mr. Fearnside; and as he appears to have occupied a considerable portion of his time in drinking, reading newspapers, and discussing politics, your Committee recommend that his services should be dispensed with.

Your Committee regret being compelled to report that they were dissatisfied with the evasive manner in which Mr. Drewett gave his evidence, and also with the means resorted to by Messrs. Mackay and Deering to obtain evidence against Mr. Martin Gardiner; Mr. Whitton also produced documentary evidence reflecting on the character of Mr. Gardiner, and refused to inform your Committee how it came into his possession.

Finally, your Committee regret that the approaching close of the Session precludes them from entering at further length into this inquiry, and recommend that the subject should be resumed during the ensuing Session.

JOHN LUCAS,
Chairman.

TUESDAY, 19 JANUARY, 1864.

MEMBERS PRESENT:—

Mr. Lucas in the Chair.

Mr. Dalglish,		Mr. Morris,
Mr. Tighe,		Mr. Stewart.

The Chairman read the following letter from Mr. Whitton:—

“ Department of Public Works,
 “ Railway Branch, Engineer's Office,
 “ Sydney, 18 January, 1864.”

“ Sir,

“ I have to acknowledge Mr. Connery's letter, in reply to mine of the 15th instant, in which I request permission to reply to the evidence taken before the Committee on the Disorganized State of Public Works Department.

“ It appears that the Committee have come to the decision of confining their inquiry, during the present Session, to the question of drunkenness or disorganization, and will examine any witnesses whose names I may desire to furnish, on the understanding that the examination be confined to those subjects.

“ I beg respectfully to draw your attention, and that of the Committee, to the fact that the evidence already taken has not been confined to any particular subject, and that it contains charges of a serious nature against gentlemen who were not present, nor have they had any opportunity afforded to them of disproving these charges.

“ I

" I need only refer to the evidence of Mr. Nicholas Trengrouse, to shew the extent to which the witnesses have been permitted to go with their statements.

" The Committee, I feel assured, must see that, if the evidence in its present state be published, the Parliament and the public will be misled as to the facts, and cruel injustice and irreparable injury will be done to the parties affected by it, who, by reason of the protection afforded by law to those making the statements to the Committee, however unfounded, are deprived of the opportunity of vindicating their characters.

" I am prepared to attend the Committee at any time, to be examined in respect of all matters affecting myself and the department under my charge; and I feel assured, so far as I am personally concerned, that I shall, if permitted, not only disprove the statements, but also shew that some of the most serious ones are so untrue and entirely without foundation, that the persons by whom they have been so recklessly made cannot be relied upon in any particular. If the Committee should, however, still determine that the Progress Report should be made, and the Evidence published, without affording me an opportunity of replying to it, I trust they will do me the justice of publishing with it my application for a hearing.

" I am, &c.,

" JOHN WHITTON.

" John Lucas, Esq., M.L.A.,
" Chairman of Committee."

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

DISORGANIZED STATE OF PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

TUESDAY, 13 OCTOBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. W. FORSTER,
MR. ARNOLD,

MR. GRAY.

MR. DALGLEISH,
MR. WILSON,

JOHN LUCAS, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

John Rae, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: Your name? John Rae.
2. What office do you fill under the Government? That of Under Secretary for Public Works and Commissioner for Railways.
3. You were summoned the other day to attend this Committee, and also to produce certain documents—do you now produce those documents? No, I am sorry to say I cannot produce them, as they are not in my possession; they are at present before the Executive Council.
4. Do you produce some of them, or can you say what they consist of? I can inform you what they consist of, but cannot produce them, as they are before the Executive Council for consideration.
5. Could you produce them to-morrow? I shall endeavour to procure them to-morrow. (Vide Appendix.)
6. How long have you been in your present office? Since the month of January, 1861.
7. Are the draftsmen in your department allowed to draw plans and perform works other than Government works? Not to my knowledge.
8. Do you know any officers in the department who have done so? I am not aware of any—there are none who have done so to my knowledge.
9. Is it allowed? It is not allowed.
10. Are there any railway passes given to persons in the Railway Department? Passes are given to officers when on service.
11. And when on service only? When on service only.
12. And is that placed to any account? No, it is not shewn; the passes and pass-books are kept.
13. But it is not shewn in any account? It is not shewn; the books do not shew any account for free passes.
14. Are there any persons employed under the Government and living in localities on the line of railway, given free passes? None. The only exception was in the case of Mr. Trengrouse, and when this was brought under my notice I submitted the case to the Minister for Public Works, who ordered the pass to be stopped.

John Rae,
Esq.

13 Oct., 1863.

- John Rae,
Esq.
13 Oct., 1863.
15. Are there any accounts in the office shewing the number of special trains? Yes, I think we have such accounts.
16. And who has ordered them? I should not like to be positive of that, but I think we can ascertain. Orders have always been given, and I believe a note of them is kept. I think we can furnish that information.
17. Can you furnish the Committee with the number of special trains for the last two years, with the names of the persons who ordered them, and the amount of money paid for them? I will do so to the best of my ability. (Vide Appendix.)
18. And also how the money was paid? Yes.
19. Can you tell me how many draftsmen there are in your department? I cannot from memory, but will do so when I have the documents before me.
20. I wish to know the number employed for the last two years in the Railway Department, under the Engineer for Railways? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
21. Will you also let us know the names and number of the draftsmen in the Roads Department? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
22. Also those in the Rivers and Harbours Department? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
23. Specifying each branch of the department, how long the officers have been in the service, and all other particulars? Yes.
24. Is there any rule in your department by which leave of absence is granted? No, none at all; it is left to the Minister.
25. Is it usual, when a gentleman is absent from the office on leave, or otherwise, to stop anything from his salary? Not if he gets leave of absence.
26. Suppose a gentleman is ill, and he stops away, do you stop anything from his salary? We do not consider that he has a right to stop away if he is ill, unless there is a medical certificate or he has leave.
27. How many cases do you know of where salary has been stopped on account of absence from the office? I do not remember any case of the kind. I think there was one, but I do not remember it exactly.
28. Will you look and see? I will.*
29. Have you ever heard of, and from your personal knowledge are you aware of, any cases of drunkenness in the office? I did not know anything of the kind until I saw a question in reference to the matter was asked by Mr. Dalgleish in the House.
30. Are you often in the different rooms of the office? I am very seldom in the rooms of the draftsmen.
31. Whom do you consider to be the superior officer there—have you not generally in each room a person who takes charge of the room? Mr. Trengrouse was the oldest officer in that room, but I am not aware that he had charge of it.
32. In a room containing some five or six gentlemen, who is generally regarded as the superior—the one who receives the largest salary? I should imagine so. The next officer in rank to Mr. Whitton is Mr. Mason, who has a room by himself.
33. I suppose there are seven or eight gentlemen receiving from £100 to £500 a year in one room—who would be the superior? I should imagine the officer with the highest pay; but I do not know what officer (if any) has charge of the draftsmen's room.
34. Would you be able to furnish the Committee with all the evidence taken in the case of Mr. Nealds and his dismissal from office? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
35. And also the evidence in the case of Mr. Ridley? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
36. Who was it that investigated the charges against Mr. Nealds? The case was investigated before a Board consisting of the Auditor General, Mr. Moriarty, and Mr. Shepherd, barrister.
37. Will you furnish the Committee with a list of the articles, with their probable value, that have been ordered from England without tenders being called for, since the 10th of January, 1862? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
38. And also a list of the articles tenders for the supply of which have been called for in the Colony, but which articles have been ordered from England? Yes, I will. (Vide Appendix.)
39. And also copies of the advertisements calling for such tenders? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
40. Also copies of all tenders received in the Colony, as well as all correspondence between the Government and any person or persons either in the Colony or in England, with reference to the supply of these articles? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
41. Are you aware whether tenders are called for in England for the supply of articles ordered there, or are the orders sent to an agent to get executed as he thinks proper? In most cases I know tenders are called for.
42. Mr. John Fowler has something to do with these things, has he not? He is employed to examine and inspect railway materials.
43. Who receives tenders in England? The Colonial Agent.
44. That is Captain Galton? No, Mr. Hamilton.
45. There has been a quantity of rolling stock imported into the country, of which I obtained a return (prepared by yourself, I suppose) at the commencement of the last session? Yes.
46. Do you know whether tenders were called for the supply of that rolling stock? I should not like to be positive on that point.
47. Will you furnish the Committee with all correspondence with reference to the importation of those articles? I will. (Vide Appendix.)
48. I am confining myself to the rolling stock of the railway? Yes; there are composite carriages and low-sided wagons.

* NOTE (on revision).—I now find that salary was stopped from Messrs. Trengrouse, Hall, and Fearnside, on one occasion, for being absent from the office without leave.

49. About £49,000 worth of them, I think? Yes, exclusive of charges. I will refer to the date of this return; I have very likely a copy of it in the office.
50. I want also a copy of the instruction sent to England, whether the order be given by the Colonial Agent or by Mr. John Fowler? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
51. Are you aware that a draftsman in your department sued a gentleman in the District Court, for work performed as an architect in the construction of a private building? I think I have heard of it out of doors, but it never came before me in an official way.
52. Do you remember who that person was? The one I refer to is not now in the department; he has since gone home to England; he was in the Roads Department under Mr. Bennett—I refer to Mr. Beazeley.
53. Where did he perform the work? I do not know, I think it was at Balmain, but I have a very faint recollection of it.
54. Did you ever hear of the action Hall v. Hinchcliffe, in which Hall was nonsuited? Never to my knowledge. My recollection of the case of Mr. Beazeley is that he gave assistance in building the house where he was living, and that the party arranged to make some allowance for his services.
55. That was at Balmain? Yes.
56. It came out at the Police Office? Yes.
57. How long has Mr. Louis Robertson been in your office, do you know? Not very long. From memory I should say about two years.* He was only a temporary clerk, I believe.
58. Or a temporary draftsman, which? A temporary draftsman.
59. You have many of them, have you not? Not many, I think.
60. Quite as many as there are on the Estimates? I think not.
61. I think you will find that there are five on the Estimates, and that you have five temporary draftsmen employed? I do not know; I see so little of the officers in the Engineer's department.
62. I believe there was a wooden house at the back of the premises occupied by the department before the removal? Yes.
63. Have you any plans of the premises now occupied by the Works Department? We have no building for the Works Department; the premises occupied by the department are only private houses.
64. But have you no plan of the houses you use as a Works Department? We had a plan of the houses before we entered them.
65. Does it shew the wooden house? Yes, the whole of the premises.
66. Will you furnish the Committee with that plan? Yes.
67. By Mr. Dalgleish: You say that the granting of leave of absence is left with the Minister? Yes, but there is no rule of the department respecting it. It has been an understood thing in this department that the head of the branch could give a day's leave of absence without applying to the Minister; but this is not usually acted upon. Applications for leave of absence are almost invariably submitted to the Minister. In cases of illness the application must be accompanied by a medical certificate.
68. Is that the rule invariably? Yes.
69. Have you the certificates on which leave of absence was given at such times as officers have been sick? Yes, I believe so.
70. Will you furnish them—a list of absences from the office, with the medical certificates? Yes, if possible.†
71. You say you were not acquainted with any cases of drunkenness in the Works Department, until the matter was brought under your notice by a question asked by me in the House? No, I was not aware of it till then.
72. Do you know of any fight taking place in that department? No.
73. Do you know a clerk of the name of Goodchap? Yes.
74. Do you know one of the name of Forde? Yes; I recollect now that a slight quarrel occurred; I understood that one struck the other in the face.
75. You now remember, then, that a fight did take place in the department? It was not a fight, I believe? Some altercation took place, I understand, and one struck the other in the face.
76. Was one of these officers prevented from attending to his duties on this account? Not in the slightest degree, to my knowledge. In fact I saw the two officers immediately afterwards.
77. Neither of them was prevented from attending to his duty? Not to my knowledge at all.
78. Do you know an officer named Micklethwait? Yes.
79. Is he in Sydney at present? No, he is in the north as a district engineer.
80. Has any inquiry been made into the charges and statements in reference to the drunkenness of that officer? He has not been examined himself.
81. Have any inquiries been made into the truth of the assertions made with regard to that officer? A general examination took place into the conduct of the whole of the officers of the department, including his; but he has not been examined himself.
82. Has the evidence taken before Mr. Whitton and Mr. Moody been copied? Yes, that was copied.
83. Do you produce a copy of the first evidence taken? Yes.
84. Has the evidence taken before the Minister for Works not been copied? No, I sent the original to the Executive Council.

85.

* NOTE (on revision):—I now find he was appointed on 21st June, 1860.

† NOTE (on revision):—On inquiry I find that this information cannot be supplied, as no record is kept of the number of cases.

John Rae,
Esq.
13 Oct., 1863.

- John Rae,
Esq.
13 Oct., 1863.
85. By the Chairman: Is it not usual to take copies of these things for the use of the office? Sometimes, but we get the originals back again. The former was copied to be laid upon the Table of the House, at Mr. Dalgleish's request, I believe.
86. By Mr. Dalgleish: In sending in the names of the officers you have promised, will you distinguish between those provided for on the Estimates by distinct salary, and those paid otherwise? Yes.
87. Have you a copy of the plan of the Penrith railway bridge? I believe there is one.
88. Will you produce it? Yes.
89. Have you a plan in the office of the Menangle bridge? Yes.
90. Will you produce a copy of it? Yes.
91. Have you copies of the drawings of the different buildings for station masters and stations on all the lines of railway? Yes.
92. Will you produce copies of the principal ones? Yes, or the originals.
93. Of the stations and station houses? Yes.
94. And goods sheds? Yes.
95. Have you a copy of the plan of the Singleton bridge? Yes.
96. Will you produce it? Yes. If you get the originals you will be satisfied, I suppose; it will take a long time to make copies.
97. Do you remember a sum being placed upon the Estimates for a bridge over the Hunter River, at the Falls, West Maitland? Yes.
98. Have plans been made for the construction of that bridge? On the same spot, do you mean? I cannot say I have seen them. I will enquire at the office to refresh my memory.*
99. Have plans been made for the bridge at Pitnacree? Yes, I have seen them.
100. Have tenders been called for the erection of the bridge there? Yes.
101. Have tenders been accepted for the bridge there? Yes.
102. Will you produce them? Yes, all the information necessary. (Vide Appendix.)
103. And also a copy of the vote? Yes.
104. By the Chairman: Will you send in the cost of the different station houses, a statement of the alterations that have been made since the contracts have been taken, the amount of the lowest tenders, and whether those tenders have been accepted, and the cost of the alterations that have been made? Yes. (Vide Appendix.)
105. And who supervised the works and drew the plans? Do you mean for any particular period?
106. I mean for the last two years and a half—that would be from January, 1861, until the 1st of July in this year? Very well; I will furnish the information as far as possible. (Vide Appendix.)

Mr. Louis Robertson called in and examined:—

- Mr. L.
Robertson.
13 Oct., 1863.
107. By the Chairman: You have been a draftsman in the Works Department? Yes.
108. Were you a temporary draftsman, or did you receive an appointment? I was upon the staff.
109. How long were you on the staff? I have been about three years and a half in the department; it was at the beginning of the present year that I was placed on the staff.
110. What salary were you receiving? I was getting £100; but for the first two years, or two years and a half, I was getting but £52 a year.
111. And for the last half year you have been receiving salary at the rate of £100 a year? Yes, I have been receiving £100 a year since the beginning of this year.
112. Did you receive this letter from the Works Department (letter shewn to witness)? Yes.
113. You also wrote to Mr. Arnold in answer to that letter? No.
114. But you wrote a letter to Mr. Arnold after you had been examined? Yes.
115. Stating that you had not given full evidence? Yes, and that all the evidence I had given had not been taken down.
116. Who were the persons conducting the inquiry? Mr. Whitton and Mr. Moody.
117. And they did not take the whole of your evidence down? They did not take the whole of my statements down.
118. Did you request that they should take them down? Not all of them; I requested that they should take down one or two things.
119. Do you know any evidence you gave that was not taken down—did Mr. Whitton ask you if you had written a letter which appeared in the Empire newspaper? Yes, Mr. Whitton asked me if I had written a letter which appeared in the Empire in my name. I told him that I had written it. He said it looked like a letter written by Mr. Gardiner and signed by me. I told him it was written to him in answer to a letter from Mr. Gardiner, and that I was not aware the letter was intended to be published until I saw it in the paper.
120. Is there anything else in reference to your evidence? Then Mr. Whitton said it was nothing of the sort; he said it was written to get up a charge of drunkenness. He looked at the letter, and asked some questions as to Mr. Fearnside not being able to make some calculations, and Mr. Whitton requested me to make those calculations.
121. Could not Mr. Fearnside make the calculations? Not at the time.
122. Did you make them? No, Mr. Gardiner made them.
123. You were present, then? Yes.
124. Who receives the largest salary, Mr. Fearnside or Mr. Gardiner? Mr. Fearnside.

125.

* NOTE (on revision):—The plans are now produced.

125. Go on, if you please? Mr. Whitton asked me how long I had known that—meaning the making of these calculations—and I said a long time. I said I understood geometry, algebra, and trigonometry. He asked upon what occasion Mr. Fearnside required the use of the middle ordinate. I told him I did not know, but that he came to Mr. Gardiner to ask him how to do it. Mr. L.
Robertson.
13 Oct., 1863.
126. Well? Mr. Whitton said Mr. Fearnside was not required to know how to calculate the middle ordinate, nor the forty-seventh proposition of the first book of Euclid.
127. Was it necessary to use these things? He could not calculate the middle ordinate unless he knew the forty-seventh proposition of the first book of Euclid, because it is calculated by means of that proposition.
128. Have you anything else to say with regard to your evidence? Mr. Whitton asked me if I had ever seen Mr. Gardiner drinking in the office. I told him that I had not. Mr. Whitton asked me if I had ever seen Mr. Gardiner drink even a glass of water in the office. I said "I do not even remember seeing him do that." Then afterwards Mr. Whitton asked me if I had seen any one drink in the office. I said I had seen Mr. Barton drinking.
129. Do you mean drinking to excess, or do you mean taking a glass of beer or wine at lunch? When Mr. Whitton asked me the question, he said "drinking." I said I had seen them drinking. I have seen Mr. Barton drink so as to make himself flushed. I have known him to drink four or five half-tumblerfuls of wine during the whole day.
130. What are the office hours? From 9 o'clock until 4.
131. And how many half-tumblerfuls of wine have you seen him drink during that time? About four or five.
132. Have you ever seen any other person drinking? Yes, I have seen others drinking in the office.
133. Have you ever seen Mr. Micklethwait drinking? No.
134. Nor Mr. Hall? No, I had not an opportunity.
135. What are the names of the gentlemen in the room with you? Mr. Barton and Mr. Drewett.
136. Have you seen Mr. Drewett drinking to excess? No.
137. How was the drink generally brought into the room, do you know? Well, the messenger generally brought Mr. Barton's wine in.
138. In what quantity at a time? Generally a bottle of wine at a time, and nearly every day. So that generally there were two bottles of wine in the office.
139. By Mr. Wilson: What was the name of the messenger? Fitzgerald.
140. By the Chairman: Was that the boy? There are three messengers.
141. One quite a lad? Yes.
142. It was not that one? No, it was the second one—the one under Mr. Collins.
143. Used Mr. Drewett to get drink in that way by the messenger? Mr. Drewett generally drank with Mr. Barton, and they had it brought in together.
144. Then there was a bottle of wine a day between the two? Mr. Drewett also sent out for beer occasionally; he seldom drank wine; it was Mr. Barton who drank the wine; Mr. Drewett drank beer.
145. What quantities of beer have you known him to drink a day? Not more than a bottle during the day.
146. By Mr. Wilson: Did you drink any of the wine or beer? I have drunk one glass of wine during all the time I have been in the office, and that was upon one occasion when I had undergone a painful operation upon my hand, and was not able to work. Mr. Barton then gave me a glass of wine, and that was the only time I drank wine or beer in the office.
147. By Mr. Gray: Did you ever see Mr. Barton unfit for duty in consequence of drinking? I think I have seen him often unfit for duty. Sometimes I do not think he could have had a very clear head to do his duty.
148. Owing to what he drank? Owing to what he drank.
149. Has that been upon more than one occasion? Yes.
150. Can you state upon how many occasions? No, I cannot say the number of occasions.
151. Was it of very frequent occurrence? Not that he drank so much, but it occurred many times.
152. He drank so much that he was unfit for duty? He must have muddled his head so that he could not do his work properly.
153. Did you ever see him in such a state that you would call him tipsy? No, not that I would call tipsy; some people might when he was in that state call him tipsy; he did not stagger.
154. He appeared to carry on the duties of his office tolerably well, did he? Well, when he had been drinking he did not seem to do much work. He generally worked up in our room.
155. He did not do much work? Not at that time.
156. He seemed to neglect his work, I suppose you mean? He seemed as if he did not feel inclined to do any.
157. Then you have seen this on more than one occasion? Yes, on more than one occasion.
158. By the Chairman: Was there any evidence that you tendered that was not inserted? I was asked by Mr. Whitton what I saw Mr. Drewett and Mr. Barton drink, and I told him I had seen them drink wine and beer.
159. Was that evidence put down? No, none of these statements. I was asked by Mr. Whitton whether I drank anything myself. I told him that I was a teetotaler, but that once, when I was unwell, I had a glass of wine. Mr. Moody asked me if I knew anything of

- Mr. L. Robertson.
13 Oct., 1863.
- of "Suffolk Punch." I said I saw nothing of it in any place in Mr. Drewett's room, and that I was not in that part of the office where "Suffolk Punch" was acted. I do not think he put down that I was not in the room. When I stated that I saw Mr. Micklethwait under the influence of liquor, I said that I put water on the back of his head, which was not recorded until I insisted upon having it written down. Upon that occasion I stated that Mr. Micklethwait was complaining of going to sleep over his work, and this was not put down in the written evidence. These are the statements I made, which were not put in the evidence.
160. Were the draftsmen in your room fully employed? I was in Mr. Drewett's room.
161. Were the draftsmen fully employed—Mr. Barton, Mr. Drewett, and yourself? There was plenty of work if they attended to it.
162. Did they do as much as you think they ought to have done? No, I should say not.
163. Did Mr. Barton and Mr. Drewett do as much as one ordinary draftsman would do? No, I do not consider they did, if the one draftsman worked steadily all the day.
164. Mr. Barton was sometimes in the office, sometimes in the field, was he not? Yes, he was sometimes in the office, sometimes in the field.
165. About how long has he been in the office now since he was last in the field? I do not exactly know how long he has been away. Ever since we have been in the new office.*
166. When Mr. Barton was absent, was any other draftsman put in his place? No.
167. Then there were only you and Mr. Drewett in the room? When Mr. Barton was away there were only Mr. Drewett and I in the room.
168. Do you know anything of the long room for draftsmen—do you consider there was as much work done in the room when only you and Mr. Drewett were there as when Mr. Barton also was present? Well, I think not.
169. Then even when Mr. Barton was present Mr. Drewett did not do as much work as he ought to do? No.
170. You do not know how they performed their works in the other rooms, I suppose? I often had occasion to go into the long room, but never worked down there.
171. In your casual visits to that room, how did the gentlemen there seem employed? They used to seem at work when I went down, but I often caught them turning to their work as if they had just previously been talking.
172. Could they see you approaching? No, but they could hear me.
173. Then they did not know who it was that was coming? No.
174. Did you ever see Mr. Micklethwait shew Mr. Drewett an advertisement he intended to put in the paper, with reference to carpenters and engineers? Yes, I recollect him bringing that advertisement up to Mr. Drewett's room.
175. And shewing it to Mr. Drewett? He read a part of it to Mr. Drewett.
176. Do you remember the conversation that took place between Mr. Micklethwait and Mr. Drewett on that occasion? I do not remember the particulars; I recollect that Mr. Drewett tried to persuade Mr. Micklethwait not to insert the advertisement.
177. Do you know whether an advertisement of that sort appeared in the newspaper? I never saw it, nor have I heard of one like it appearing in the paper.
178. Do you remember Mr. Gardiner drawing your attention to Mr. Drewett's appearance, considering that it was stupid? He did call my attention to it once, but it was after Mr. Drewett had gone out of the room. I was then working in another room along with Mr. Gardiner for a short time.
179. You had not then an opportunity of seeing whether he was really stupid in his appearance or not? No.
180. Do you know whether Mr. Drewett was aware of the disorderly state of the long room? There occurred there one day a fight between Mr. Hall and Mr. Deering, and I know he knew of that because I was in the room with him at the time, and we heard the noise beyond in the long room. The stools toppled over, and after the fight others came up and spoke to Mr. Drewett of it in my presence.
181. Did he go down to the long room then? No, he seldom went there; he generally sent me for what he wanted there.
182. Do you know whether Mr. Barton often went into the long room? He seldom went into the drawing room.
183. Did Mr. Barton work in the long drawing room? He did for the first two or three months I was there; but he has not been working there for the last two years and a half.
184. Then he could scarcely know the state of it? He had no opportunity of knowing the state of the department there. I know he knew about the fight between Mr. Hall and Mr. Deering, from people telling him about it.
185. Did you ever hear him speaking of it? I have heard him and Mr. Drewett talk of it together.
186. The wooden office was removed from the old premises occupied by the department to the new ones? Yes.
187. And is still placed in the back yard? It is placed in the back yard.
188. When you occasionally went into the drawing room, did you experience an offensive smell? Never.
189. Were there any water-closets near the drawing room? Not nearer to the drawing room than the main building. They are in the middle of the yard, about fifteen feet from the building.
- 190.

* NOTE (on revision): Mr. Barton was in the office before I came. The last time I recollect Mr. Barton going into the field was about two and a half months ago, when he went with Mr. Whitton up to the north.

190. How were they constructed? With the ordinary cesspool.
191. Were there any offensive smells in the drawing room from these closets? If there was it could not be owing to the dampness from the water-closets getting into the building, because they were on piles about six or eight inches in diameter, and the building was raised from the ground.
192. Giving a free current of air beneath? Yes, there was space enough for anyone to crawl under.
193. Are they now erected on the same principle? Not on piles.
194. But nevertheless there is a free draught of air through it now? Yes; it is now put upon lumps of wood about a foot in diameter and about eighteen inches deep.
195. Since the removal to the new offices, Mr. Barton has had a room of his own? Yes.
196. Have you seen any quantity of drink—wine, spirits, or beer—taken into his own room? Not into his own room, but I have seen it when he was in Mr. Drewett's room.
197. In what quantities? I have known a dozen or more to come in at one time.
198. That was when Mr. Barton and Mr. Drewett were working together? Yes.
199. Did you give this in your evidence? No.
200. Did you let the Minister for Works know of it? I was not examined. I expected to have been examined and cross-questioned upon the evidence I gave, and then these things would have come out.
201. What was your reason for not giving this evidence when you were examined? Because I was not aware of the general nature of the inquiry. I was led to suppose it referred only to Mr. Hall and Mr. Micklethwait.
202. But then were you not asked with reference to any other person in the office? Only with reference to them.*
203. Have you often seen drink in that quantity brought in? Not often.
204. More than once? Not in such large quantities as came in then.
205. Who brought it? Some stranger; I do not know who he was.
206. Could you name a messenger that you have seen bring in wines, spirits, or beer, more than once for these persons? Yes—Fitzgerald.
207. Did he generally bring it? He generally brought the drink in.
208. What is the boy's name—his mother lives upon the premises, does she not? Fitzgerald's mother lives on the premises. There is a boy, but I do not know his name; it is Garvin or Garwan.
209. Did you ever see him bring in beer or spirits? No, not that I recollect.
210. What is Fitzgerald's mother? She is the housekeeper.
211. And Fitzgerald is messenger? Is messenger.
212. Did you ever see Mr. Gardiner offend or insult any gentleman in the office? Never during the time I have been there.
213. Have you seen others needlessly insult Mr. Gardiner? I have heard them speak in a very nasty manner of him, but never knew them insult him to his face.
214. What have you heard them say of him? I have heard Mr. Drewett ask Mr. Barton two or three times not to give Mr. Gardiner work, and to report that there was nothing more for him to do.
215. For the purpose of getting him dismissed? Yes.
216. Have you heard the same with regard to Mr. Trengrouse? I have heard Mr. Drewett say they ought to give the old fool a pension and get rid of him.
217. Referring to Mr. Trengrouse? Yes.
218. Have you heard Mr. Micklethwait insult Mr. Gardiner and challenge him to fight? I have heard in the office that he did so.
219. Who mentioned it in the office? Mr. Mackay mentioned it once. Mr. Telmon also spoke of it. He told me that if there was any inquiry he would let these things be known; that he would tell of Hall's and Micklethwait's carryings on in the office, and besides he would tell about Mr. Micklethwait insulting Mr. Gardiner and offering to fight him. Besides Mr. Telmon informing me of this, he came into the room to Mr. Doherty and Mr. Gardiner in my presence, and said that Mr. Mackay had been speaking ill of them to the contractors, in an injurious manner, and one of the contractors told Mr. Mackay that he ought not so to speak of gentlemen behind their back.
220. How do the draftsmen in this office come into contact with the contractors? The plans are generally exhibited in the long room where the draftsmen are.
221. The plans are there for the purpose of contractors taking out the quantities? Yes.
222. Have you ever been present when contractors were taking out the quantities? Once or twice, but not to stop there at all.
223. Do you know anything of the Burwood Station-house? What—the plans of it?
224. Yes? No, I do not; I have seen the plans.
225. Have you seen the house? Yes.
226. What time would it require to take out the quantities? Not a morning.
227. More than two hours? No, I do not think it would.
228. Have you heard that any of the draftsmen in the office waste their time in talking to the contractors, instead of going on with their own duties? When Mr. Telmon came up that time, he told me he intended to tell about Mr. Mackay wasting his time in talking to the contractors. This was whilst Mr. Hall was away that he told us this.
229. Have you heard of chloride of lime being used in the long room? No, I never heard of it until I saw it in the papers.
- 230.

*. NOTE (on revision):—Besides being asked about Mr. Hall and Mr. Micklethwait, I was asked about Mr. Gardiner, Mr. Drewett, and Mr. Barton; but the questions and answers were not written down.

Mr. L.
Robertson.
13 Oct., 1863.

Mr. L.
Robertson,
13 Oct., 1863

230. Do you think it was necessary to use it in consequence of the stench arising from the water-closets? No, I did not hear of it until I saw it mentioned in the papers; there was no stench from the closets even in the yard.
231. And no disinfecting fluid was required? No; there is not the least smell.
232. Then you are sure it would not require above two or three hours to take out the quantities of such a building as the Burwood Station? Yes.
233. Do you know what description of work Mr. Hall has been performing for the last two years and a half—whether he has been exclusively engaged on station-houses? Exclusively upon station-houses.
234. Has he an assistant? Yes, Mr. Mackay.
235. How long has Mr. Mackay been acting as Mr. Hall's assistant? Ever since he has been in the office. He came about the same time as I did—about three years and a half ago.
236. And he then commenced to act as Mr. Hall's assistant? Yes, except for a very short time he has ever since acted as Mr. Hall's assistant.
237. Have you ever seen the works of Mr. Trengrouse? Yes.
238. Is he a good draftsman? The finest in the office. There were no plans in the office that can equal his made three or four years ago.
239. What has he been engaged on latterly—what work? Making out copies of the land plans that accompany the deeds when the Government are taking land for railway purposes.
240. That is a duty which I believe is considered the most inferior draftsman in the office should be engaged in? Yes, and besides he generally used to make calculations of the quantities to be taken.
241. He has not been engaged on any large plans latterly? No, exclusively upon that kind of work.
242. But you have no doubt as to his qualifications to be engaged on the most extensive works in the department? No, not the least.
243. Is it not strange that he should be engaged on trifling matters, being an officer of such ability, and whilst inferior men are employed on extensive works—did you ever hear any allusions made to this? No; I only know that Mr. Drewett and I have heard that Mr. Whitton has an ill feeling towards him, and I cannot ascribe it to anything else.
244. I believe Mr. Trengrouse is the only officer in the department whose salary has not been increased? I think so.
245. Do the draftsmen or other officers often have leave of absence? They could get it if their requests were reasonable, but not if they asked for it too frequently.
246. But there is no rule for granting leave of absence? I do not know, but I believe there is some rule for allowing a certain amount of absence on leave in the year, though I do not understand the rule.
247. You were there three years? Yes, more than three years.
248. Do you know how many days you were absent? I cannot say.
249. Were you absent often? Very seldom. Besides the general holidays that we had, I do not think I was absent more than about twice throughout each year.
250. How many days at a time? One.
251. Then with the exception of general holidays you only got leave of absence for about two days in each year? I believe so; it was about that; I cannot exactly say.
252. Did you ever hear of any gentleman in the office who happened to be absent whose time was stopped from his salary? There was an occasion at the time of some races when some gentleman stopped away, and had part of his salary stopped; I believe Mr. Trengrouse had his salary stopped at that time.
253. Were there any other cases of the same kind? I think Mr. Hall had his salary stopped on one occasion.
254. Has Mr. Hall been often absent from the department? I cannot tell that, because he was not in the same room.
255. What works have you been engaged on? Chiefly in making drawings for bridges and viaducts.
256. Is that considered better work than making plans such as Mr. Trengrouse has been making? Yes.
257. Then you should have been engaged in such work as Mr. Trengrouse has had, and Mr. Trengrouse on superior work? I should think he ought to be engaged on superior works, being a better draftsman.
258. Who was engaged in drawing the plans of the Menangle Bridge? Mr. Drewett.
259. How long was he so engaged? A long time; they were engaged on it before I came to the office.
260. And how long since you came to the office? Well, I should say more than six months, I should think, and they have been engaged on little parts of it up to the present time.
261. Who do you mean by they—was there any one besides Mr. Drewett? Others have had something to do with it in the way of making tracings and such things.
262. Have they had two or three finished plans? There are two sets of designs, besides lots of other sketches, altogether making a roll of about a foot in diameter.
263. Can you tell me how long it took Mr. Drewett to draw the plans? I cannot.
264. On the whole do you think the draftsmen in that department are fully engaged? I consider that they had plenty of work to do.
265. But did they do it? I cannot say as to the people down in the long room.
266. But you have no doubt that Mr. Drewett and Mr. Barton did not do more than one ordinary draftsman should do? None whatever.

- 267. And Mr. Drewett is the head draftsman in the establishment? Yes, he is looked upon as the chief draftsman, and has the highest salary. Mr. L. Robertson.
- 268. Was there any head man in the long room, or who was looked upon in the department as the person in charge of that room? There was no head of it at all not down there. 13 Oct., 1863.
- 269. Are you dismissed? I am not aware that I am; I am suspended.
- 270. You have not been taken on work since, have you? No, not since.

TUESDAY, 20 OCTOBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. DALGLEISH, | MR. GARRETT,
MR. MORRIS.

JOHN LUCAS, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Alexander Campbell Budge, Esq., called in and examined:—

- 271. By the Chairman: What position do you hold? Clerk of the Executive Council. A. C. Budge, Esq.
- 272. You received a summons from this Committee to produce some documents? I did.
- 273. Do you produce them? No; those papers were withdrawn from my custody by Mr. Holroyd yesterday morning, before the receipt by me of the summons from the Committee. 20 Oct., 1863.
- 274. Did you apply to Mr. Holroyd for them afterwards, and let him know that you had received a summons from the Committee to produce them? No, I did not.
- 275. Then those documents not being in your possession at present, you are not in a position to produce them? No.

Mr. Louis Robertson again called in and further examined:—

- 276. By the Chairman: You were examined before the Committee the other day? Yes. Mr. L. Robertson.
- 277. Have you been dismissed? Not that I am aware.
- 278. Suspended? Yes.
- 279. Was the only reason given for your suspension that you had written a letter to Mr. Gardiner? That is not stated in my letter; it states that I am suspended in consequence of disclosures made in the evidence. 20 Oct., 1863.
- 280. You believe that is the reason of your suspension—that you wrote a letter to Mr. Gardiner? I wrote a letter to Mr. Gardiner.
- 281. Was it at his request? It was in answer to a letter —
- 282. Which he wrote to you, wishing you to communicate with reference to something that took place in the department, and you, not expecting that Mr. Gardiner would publish your letter, wrote to him? Yes.
- 283. Has any complaint been made of you since you have been in the department? I am not aware of any; if there has I have never been made acquainted with it.
- 284. Have you ever received any reprimand from any superior officer? Never since I have been in the office.
- 285. By Mr. Garrett: Have you a copy of the letter with you? No.
- 286. By Mr. Dalgleish: You stated that you saw Mr. Drewett drinking beer? Yes.
- 287. Mr. Drewett is the chief draftsman in that room? Yes, I believe he is.
- 288. In the room where you were? Yes.
- 289. You said you had not known him drink to excess? Not what I should consider to excess.
- 290. What do you mean by drinking to excess? By drinking to excess, I mean when a man gets thoroughly tipsy—when he staggers.
- 291. Did you ever see Mr. Drewett that he could not do his duty, as you considered, from the effects of drinking? I have seen him stupid from the effect of what he has drunk.
- 292. At what hour in the morning did Mr. Drewett come to the office as a rule? He used to come at half-past 9 and occasionally at 10.
- 293. What is the proper time for coming to the office? 9.
- 294. Was he very attentive to his duties—did he spend the principal part of his time in drawing? I should say he spent about a third of his time at work, at a rough estimate.
- 295. How did he spend the rest of his time during office hours? Occasionally he had the papers reading, at other times he was talking to Mr. Hall and Micklethwait about various matters, and he was often away from the office.
- 296. Absent from the office during office hours? Yes.
- 297. On public business? No, on his own business.
- 298. You say he read the newspapers in the office during office hours? Yes.
- 299. What newspapers did he read? Generally the Herald and Empire; he used to waste a good deal of his time in searching for old plans.
- 300. That was office business I presume? That was office business.
- 301. Mr. Drewett and Mr. Barton used to be in the same room? When Mr. Barton was in the office he used to be in Mr. Drewett's room.

- Mr. L. Robertson.
20 Oct., 1868.
302. When they were together did they attend to their duty—or in what way did they spend their time? They generally used to be talking about various matters, reading the papers, and disputing about political questions.
303. Disputing about political questions in office hours? Yes.
304. Do you remember any particular conversation on political matters? Not in particular; they used to discuss the merits of the speeches of different Members.
305. When they were doing this they were not attending to their work, they were not drawing at all—this was not a conversation at intervals, but a kept up conversation? A kept up conversation.
306. I think you said you had heard Mr. Drewett speak disrespectfully of Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Trengrouse? Yes, I heard it very often.
307. Do you remember anything derogatory to them he was in the habit of stating during the time you were in the office? I heard Mr. Drewett say to Mr. Barton, when Mr. Gardiner came into the office last, that “there was that Irishman come back again; he wondered what Whitton was about in allowing him to come back again;” and I heard him call Mr. Trengrouse an old cut-throat and an old fool very often.
308. What kind of work was Mr. Drewett generally engaged on—what description of plans? Bridge drawings.
309. Did he make original designs for the bridges—viaducts I presume you include? Bridges and viaducts; he used to copy them from books of plates or old drawings.
310. From engineering works? Principally from books containing nothing else but drawings.
311. He did not make out original sketches of plans? He did not make original plans.
312. You say he got up his drawings for bridges and viaducts from books of drawings in the office? From books of plates in the office.
313. Is he in the habit of calculating the strains on different parts of the bridges? I have not known him; in fact I do not think him competent.
314. Some one must calculate the strains on the bridges, I presume? I have not known any one in the office to calculate them.
315. Do you mean to say that bridges for railway traffic are made without any calculation as to the strain upon and the strength of those bridges? Yes.
316. They are made by rule of thumb? By rule of thumb. They are copied from books, and the calculations of other people are depended upon.
317. Do you know if Mr. Drewett understands the principles of mechanics? He does not understand the first elements of mechanical science at all.
318. Is he a mathematician? No.
319. Is he a good hand at practical calculation? He is even a bad hand at that. He was far worse when I first went into the office than he is now.
320. Does he compile the whole quantities of the bridges he designs? Occasionally, but Mr. Gardiner and myself have taken out a great many of them; when he did any he generally gave them to Mr. Gardiner or me to check.
321. I presume it is usual to have them checked? Yes.
322. He does take out his own quantities? He does take out his own quantities in a way.
323. Who generally takes out the quantities—is there any person in particular to whom this work is allotted? No particular person; it is considered to be Mr. Drewett's duty to do it.
324. You say Mr. Drewett occupies a good deal of time in searching for plans—Is there not a regular plan book and a regular place for depositing the plans, so that they may be found in a moment? There is no particular place—any one takes them as he likes; they are scattered over the office.
325. This must lead to great loss of time? Yes. I have spent two days in succession in searching for plans, and I know Mr. Drewett has done the same. Mr. Doherty spent a day in searching for a plan along with me.
326. Both Mr. Doherty and yourself have spent a whole day in searching for one plan? I have spent two days in searching for a plan, and Mr. Doherty has spent a day with me.
327. Were matters always in this state in the office? In respect to plans; there has been no regular method of keeping plans in my time.
328. Do you remember the occasion when Mr. Gardiner was reported by Mr. Drewett to Mr. Whitton, for having used threatening or disrespectful language to him? Yes, it was on the 13th July, I think.
329. That was after Mr. Gardiner had reported Mr. Hall and Mr. Micklethwait for drunkenness? In the question you just now asked me you referred to Mr. Drewett's report?
330. I say did Mr. Drewett report Mr. Gardiner after Mr. Gardiner had reported Mr. Hall and Mr. Micklethwait for drunkenness? Yes, a long time after.
331. Were you present when Mr. Gardiner spoke to Mr. Drewett on that occasion? I was not in Mr. Drewett's room, but I was in the room with Mr. Gardiner when he went to Mr. Drewett's to speak to him. On that occasion Mr. Drewett brought some tracings of Mr. Gardiner's plans with “error” marked on them in large red square letters, and put them on the table before him.
332. What plans were they? Some plans I think referring to the Mudgee road.
333. Were they plans connected with the Railway Department? No, the Roads Department.
334. Were they plans that Mr. Drewett had any control over? He had nothing to do with those plans.
335. They must have been searched out and put there for the purpose of irritating Mr. Gardiner? I cannot say they were searched out; I believe they were put there for that purpose, for there was nothing to be done to them.

336. Was Mr. Gardiner much excited? He did not appear to be much excited.
337. Were you in the same room as Mr. Gardiner? Yes, at that time.
338. Did Mr. Gardiner speak to you about this matter at the time? He said something about it after he came out from Mr. Drewett. He said Mr. Drewett was a good fellow; he had nothing to do with this—meaning the error—and referred him to Mr. Barton.
339. He exonerated Mr. Drewett from having had anything to do with it? Yes.
340. When Mr. Gardiner spoke to Mr. Drewett was he excited—did he use any loud language? I could not hear any loud language, though his door was open, and his door was next to ours. I heard the murmuring of voices, but it did not sound as if there was any loud talking.
341. You did not hear any violent words? I did not.
342. Could you have heard them if they had been used? I believe I could.
343. You say Mr. Gardiner did not appear to be at all excited when he came in? No, he seemed better pleased than when he went out.
344. You say Mr. Drewett referred him to Mr. Barton? Yes.
345. Who is Mr. Barton? Engineer for trial surveys, I believe.
346. Is he the gentleman who made the survey of the Valley of the Grose? I believe so.
347. Was that survey ever completed? I think it was completed, but I do not think it was ever used; it was found to be impracticable to carry the railway up that valley.
348. You do not know that of your own knowledge? No, only from what people say.
349. You said in your last examination, that you saw Mr. Barton standing at a window with a glass of wine or other liquor in his hand, and drinking to Mr. Hall in another part of the building? Yes, I did. Mr. Hall was in the long room in the yard, and Mr. Barton was in Mr. Drewett's room at the top of the house, and could just see through the window into the long room.
350. You saw him yourself? Yes, I was in the room at the time.
351. I think you said you had known Mr. Barton to have a dozen of wine brought into the office at once? Yes, I have.
352. Did Mr. Barton make any motions of encouragement to Mr. Hall, in consequence of this scene that had taken place? It was about three days after Mr. Gardiner reported about Mr. Hall, and he drank to him as if congratulating him upon having burked the inquiry.
353. Of course you could not tell that? It was evident from the way in which he did it.
354. That was your impression? Yes, from the way in which it was done.
355. You say you have known Mr. Barton to be flushed from drink? Yes, I have.
356. But you have not seen him tipsy? Not what I call tipsy.
357. What do you call tipsy? When a man is staggering about.
358. What do you mean by being flushed with drink? When a man's face is quite flushed up with it—when he has had enough drink to incapacitate him for work—to muddle his head.
359. You think when a man is flushed with drink he is not fit to do his work—does your experience justify that? I have never been drunk myself.
360. Has your experience of those who have been flushed with drink been that they were not capable of doing their work? They never did their work whether they were capable or not.
361. Did I understand you to say that you have frequently seen Mr. Barton unfit for work? I have often seen him in that state.
362. What kind of work does Mr. Barton do in the office, seeing he is Engineer for trial surveys? He generally has something to do with the plans he sends out to the surveyors. A great part of his work is calculating quantities of earth-work.
363. He calculates the quantities of earth-work—the surveys of which he has made in the field? Yes, for trial lines.
364. Was any other person engaged with him in this way? Mr. Gardiner.
365. Is that considered to be scientific work? It is considered to be pretty fair work—work that requires a little science to do it. Mr. Trengrouse, junior, was on it for a time.
366. Mr. Gardiner, you say, used to make these calculations with Mr. Barton? He used to check Mr. Barton's work.
367. Did he find Mr. Barton's work correct, do you know? He used to say he very often found it incorrect; but I have no other proof than his saying so.
368. You have heard Mr. Gardiner say that Mr. Barton's work was not correct? That it was not always correct.
369. Have you ever heard of any trouble being given by the inaccuracy of Mr. Barton's calculation? I have heard of inaccuracy in calculating the area of land taken for railway purposes at Penrith, and I believe Mr. Barton made those calculations.
370. Are you able to calculate the areas of cross-sections? Yes.
371. And the contents of earth cuttings? Yes.
372. Areas of blocks of land? Yes.
373. You could do that yourself? Yes.
374. You would be competent to form an opinion of another person's competency in that respect? Yes.
375. Are you capable of doing the general work that Mr. Barton was engaged upon in the office? I think I am.
376. So that you are capable of giving an opinion from your own knowledge? Yes.
377. What salary does Mr. Barton receive—do you know? I do not know what his salary is. I think it is something like £800 a year; I cannot say.
378. Was Mr. Barton fully occupied in the office? He very often was not in the office, and he used not to stick to work very much when he was in the office.

Mr. L.
Robertson.

20 Oct., 1863.

- Mr. L. Robertson.
20 Oct., 1863.
379. What do you mean by "he very often was not in the office"? Sometimes he was not there all the day, and sometimes he was away half the day.
380. During the time he ought to be engaged in his work? During the time he ought to have been in the office; sometimes he used not to be there at all, and sometimes he went away just after dinner-time.
381. Was he fully occupied when he was in the office? No, not always; he used not to work very hard.
382. How used he to fill up his time in the office? In much the same way as Mr. Drewett; he used to have others in the room talking with him; he used to read the papers, and that sort of thing.
383. What particular papers did he read? He used to read the Empire and occasionally the Herald; he also received the Bathurst Times, the Lachlan Observer, and some others.
384. You say you have seen as much as a dozen of wine come into Mr. Barton's office at one time? Yes.
385. In what part of the office did Mr. Barton keep his wine? He used to keep it locked up in a press in Mr. Drewett's room.
386. That is the room in which he was employed? Yes.
387. Did his friends assist him to drink it? Mr. Drewett used to help him occasionally, but I do not exactly remember any one else drinking it.
388. Independently of this he used to have wine in at luncheon time? Yes.
389. He did not confine his drinking to the time of luncheon? Not to the time of luncheon or any time in the day.
390. Did you ever see him under the influence of drink in the office? I cannot mention any particular time.
391. Was Mr. Micklethwait in the same room? No, in the long room generally.
392. That is the room where Mr. Gardiner was employed? Yes.
393. And Mr. Hall? And Mr. Hall.
394. You say you have seen Mr. Micklethwait drinking in the office? No, I do not remember.
395. Perhaps I made a mistake—Did you ever see him under the influence of drink? Yes, he was generally not what I should consider sober, and two or three times I have seen him regularly under the influence of drink.
396. Did you ever see him sober in the office? If I did it was very seldom, for he generally stunk of brandy and looked as if he had been drinking very much.
397. Was he on very intimate terms with Mr. Drewett? Yes, they were very great friends; they were on visiting terms with each other.
398. Was Mr. Drewett made aware of the report Mr. Gardiner made against Mr. Hall and Mr. Micklethwait? Yes; Mr. Micklethwait came up into Mr. Drewett's room and was talking of the report Mr. Gardiner had made on the same day that the report was made.
399. Was he complaining of the report? Yes, but I do not recollect the words he said.
400. Did you ever see Mr. Micklethwait working in the office? Occasionally I have seen him in the long room.
401. He was not working as a rule? He was a great part of his time out in the country.
402. I mean when he was in Sydney, while he was in the long room? I often saw him when I was down there.
403. Did he ever work in the room where you were employed? Yes, I recollect his working once in our room.
404. Was he working as a draftsman? He was plotting some section.
405. Is he a neat draftsman? No, a very bad draftsman.
406. Is he a correct draftsman? I think not, for on that occasion he could not plot the section from his own levels.
407. That is why you think he was not a good one? Yes, he could not plot his own work from his own level book.
408. Do you think his inability was caused by drink? I think it must have been.
409. Did he smell of drink when he was doing that work? I do not exactly remember that, but he generally did.
410. He generally did his work in the long room? Yes.
411. Did you ever see him at work in the long room? Yes.
412. Did you ever enter the long room when Mr. Hall and Mr. Micklethwait were in the small room, at the end of the long room? I have been into the long room, and have heard people in that room when the door has been sbut, and I have noticed that Mr. Micklethwait and Hall were not in the long room.
413. You have not seen them in the small room at the end of the long room? I have seen them come out together.
414. Did you ever see them drinking in the small room? No.
415. Had they the appearance of having been drinking when they came out? Yes, they looked like it.
416. What was this small room used for? Keeping plans, paper, chains, and other things.
417. A kind of store room? Yes.
418. So that their business would call them there? Only occasionally, to get a plan; it would not call Mr. Hall there, for he had nothing to do with the plans that were in there.
419. Do you know Mr. Doherty? Yes.
420. Have you seen his work? Yes.
421. Is he a neat draftsman? Not a first-rate draftsman, just passable.
422. What work was he employed upon? He was employed upon making tracings of plans; he very often used to distribute the quantities of earth-work on the sections from the disposal sheets.
- 423.

423. Was he working in the same room with you? He was for a short time—during the time we were in the new offices.
424. Have you seen Mr. Doherty drinking? No.
425. Have you seen him the worse for drinking? No.
426. Have you seen Mr. Trengrouse drinking? No.
427. Have you seen him the worse for drink? Never.
428. Do you know, or did you know, a draftsman of the name of Deering in that office? Yes; a draftsman of that name came about the same time that I did, but he was not there long.
429. Do you know if Mr. Deering and Mr. Hall ever fought in that office? Yes; I heard the noise caused by the fight, and I heard, the same day, people coming up and talking about it.
430. That Mr. Hall had been fighting with Mr. Deering? Yes.
431. In the office? In the office.
432. Do you know that Mr. Deering has denied that in the newspaper? I have heard it said that he did, but I have not seen the letter.
433. Have you known Mr. Hall to fight, or to have disturbances with any other draftsman in the office? No, I do not recollect anything of the sort, except that there was a little bit of disturbance between him and the Frenchman. The Frenchman said he had been called a criminal, or something of that sort; that is the only thing of the kind I recollect, but that I was told—I did not see that.
434. When you gave your evidence before Mr. Whitton and Mr. Moody, did you complain that your answers were not put down as you gave them? Yes; I wrote a letter to Mr. Arnold, stating that it was the case.
435. Did you complain to Mr. Whitton at the time you gave your evidence, that it was not put down? No, I asked him to put down two or three things which were not.
436. Had you a copy of the evidence you gave? No.
437. Was it read over to you? Yes.
438. Did you object to it at the time? I objected to those things being left out—that one thing was put in and another was not put in.
439. Have you seen drink brought into the office by the messengers? Yes.
440. In what quantities? I cannot say what quantities; I have seen them fetch it in a basket, and I think in a carpet bag; I could not tell the quantity in it.
441. Did Mr. Gardiner drink in the office? Not that I am aware of.
442. How many persons were there in the long room? Mr. Telmon, Mr. Hill, Mr. Micklethwait, when in town, Mr. Trengrouse, junior, Mr. Mackay, Mr. Fearnside, Mr. Gardiner, and Mr. Doherty.
443. Have you seen chloride of lime put about the floor of the long room? No.
444. Have you ever observed it when it has been there? No, I never heard of it till it was mentioned in the House.
445. Have you observed foul smells from drink when you have been there? No.
446. Have you experienced foul smells from any other cause? No, I have never experienced any disagreeable smell of any sort in the office since I have been there.
447. By the Chairman: Is it not usual for draftsmen to take out the quantities in the work they have designed? It is—at least it is so in our department; I do not know how it is in other places.
448. Is Mr. Drewett considered a sort of eaves-dropper in your department—has he ever been detected listening at the doors? Not that I am aware of.
449. Has Mr. Drewett ever been absent from the office? Yes, very often.
450. Has he been absent in consequence of sickness? Sometimes; very often he used to go away in the afternoon.
451. Have you known him to be absent above a day at a time? I have known him to be absent from sickness for two or three days.
452. Did that happen frequently? Yes, it occurred a good many times.
453. Do you know a gentleman of the name of Mann in the department? I did know him; he is up the country now.
454. Was he a draftsman in your office? Yes; and a kind of surveyor too I think.
455. Have you seen any of his work? Yes.
456. Have you seen Mr. Trengrouse, junior's work? Yes.
457. Was Mr. Mann or Mr. Trengrouse the better draftsman? I should say that Mr. Trengrouse was the better of the two.
458. Have you seen any work from Mr. Mann sent into the office? Yes, I have seen some of his plans—plans of pieces of land which he has been to survey have been sent into the office.
459. Have they been found to be correct? I think I recollect one occasion when his work was not found to be correct; it was some plan in reference to some station ground.
460. Were his plans generally creditable? They were not good specimens of draftsmanship; I never had an opportunity of examining into their contents myself, therefore I do not know about their accuracy.
461. Were you in the office when Mr. Mann received his appointment? When he received his appointment to go out on the surveys I was in the office.
462. Do you know whether he was ever in the field, before practising survey? He used to go out occasionally to do little pieces of work, but he never had any large job I think.
463. Do you know where he acquired the art of surveying? No I do not.
464. Was it generally considered in the office that he was qualified to go into the field as a surveyor? I do not know; I never heard any one express an opinion upon it.
465. Do you know whether Mr. Mann has had his salary increased? He had his salary increased when he went up surveying.

Mr. L.
Robertson.
20 Oct., 1863.

- Mr. L. Robertson.
20 Oct., 1863.
466. Do you know what increase he received? I am not aware what was the increase he received.
467. Do you know whether Mr. Trengrouse, junior, has had his salary increased? Yes, he had his salary increased once when he was there; he had it increased I think the beginning of this year.
468. Is Mr. Trengrouse, junior, a good draftsman? Yes.
469. Who do you consider the best draftsman in the office? I consider Mr. Trengrouse, senior, the best draftsman in the office.
470. Was he generally kept to the best work? I think he generally had the easiest work.*
471. The most inferior? The most inferior.
472. Such work as should be given to the most inferior draftsman? Such work as boys could do.
473. Do you know whether there are any plans in the office which have been drawn by Mr. Trengrouse, senior? There are some plans belonging to the Campbelltown line, but I could not exactly specify them.
474. Are there some plans kept secret in the office? Not that I am aware of.
475. Who has charge of the plans? No one in particular.
476. You have already said that they are not properly arranged? They are not properly arranged; they are all over the office—some in one room and some in another.
477. How many sets of plans were drawn before the Menangle bridge was decided upon? Two sets were made, besides other sketches and drawings.
478. Is it usual to complete a set of drawings in the engineering department before some design is decided upon—is it not usual to make sketches and estimates, and then, when the matter is decided, to finish the drawings? Yes, and then make up the regular drawings.
479. Nevertheless you have known two complete sets of drawings to be made of the Menangle bridge? Yes, the details, quantities, and everything taken out—one for a wooden viaduct, with laminated arches, and the other for that now up—iron girders, with stone piers.
480. By Mr. Morris: What are the peculiar duties you have to perform? Making drawings for bridges and viaducts.
481. Who was the head of the room you were in? Mr. Drewett.
482. Had not Mr. Drewett the charge of these plans which you say were always in such disorder? It was considered that he had charge of part, if not of all of them.
483. The irregularities which you have detailed, have they been going on for any great length of time? Yes, most of the time I have been there.
484. How long have you been there? Three years and a half, or more.
485. Did it never occur to you to represent to the head of the department these irregularities? I did not consider it my duty to represent them, as I was in such a subordinate position.
486. But nevertheless you have represented it to other people, though you did not consider it your duty to represent it to the head of your department? I never made any representation about it.
487. Have you not represented it to Mr. Gardiner? Not that I am aware.
488. What then was the tenor of the letter which has been referred to? Yes, I did mention that about seeing Mr. Micklethwait tipsy.
489. Did it not occur to you that, being in the pay of Government, it was your duty to represent anything that was being done in the office of an improper character, to your superior officer? I did not think it my duty; in fact I did not give it a thought.
490. If you were in private service, would you not consider your conduct very reprehensible, if you were not to represent to your employer anything you saw going on amiss in his office? I did not consider it to be my duty to make complaints.
491. Do you consider that you have a great amount of conscientiousness, under all these circumstances? I consider that I have as much as any one else.
492. These expressions to which you have referred, of "cut-throat" and "fool"—did you retail them to the parties to whom they were applied? No, I did not.
493. Have you been on bad terms with Mr. Drewett? I have not been on bad terms with anybody in the office.
494. You never by your manner expressed to the parties themselves your disapproval of their conduct? I have never participated in it; I have always kept myself clear of it.
495. You have managed to keep good friends with all? Yes.
496. Do the clerks or gentlemen in your office go out to luncheon? They are supposed to have luncheon in the office; a good many of them I think go out.
497. Does Mr. Drewett have luncheon in the office? He very often does; he often goes out when Mr. Whitton is not there.
498. Used Mr. Hall to have luncheon in the office? I do not know; he is in another room.
499. This drinking, has it not mostly occurred during luncheon? Yes, most of it on the part of Mr. Drewett; Mr. Barton used to drink at all hours of the day.
500. What did Mr. Barton drink? He used to drink wine generally—sherry.
501. You having observed Mr. Barton so closely, perhaps you can say what quantity he drank—did he drink a bottle? I have known him drink four or five half-tumblers of wine, somewhere about that, I do not know exactly; I know he used to drink a good deal.
502. You have said that much of the work done by gentlemen in the office, by Mr. Drewett and others, is not very accurate—was that performed by Mr. Gardiner very accurate? I am not aware of how his work was performed; I seldom had anything to do with his work.
503. Did you ever see any of the drawings made by him? He was not engaged upon any regular drawings; I have seen sketches made by him.

504. Would you call Mr. Gardiner a good draftsman? I never had an opportunity of testing him; he was mostly engaged in taking out quantities and in making tracings.
505. In boy's work? In making tracings.
506. That is a kind of thing a boy could do? Yes.
507. Is Mr. Gardiner very good at taking out quantities? Yes, Mr. Gardiner is a first class mathematician.
508. How are you able to judge? Because I understand mathematics, and I know he is far superior to myself.
509. Is there much difficulty in taking out quantities? There is not much difficulty if everything is square; it depends upon the shape whether there is much difficulty in it.
510. Can you tell the names of the gentlemen who have been suspended as well as yourself? Mr. Doherty, Mr. Trengrouse, senior, and Mr. Hall.
511. What were Mr. Hall's peculiar duties? Making drawings for station buildings.
512. Was he a good hand at that kind of thing? His drawings seem to be done pretty well.
513. Then it appears that three of the best draftsmen in the office have been suspended, Mr. Doherty, Mr. Trengrouse, and Mr. Hall? I do not consider Mr. Doherty a first class draftsman; Mr. Hall is middling, but not first rate; Mr. Trengrouse is first class.
514. What things were left out, in the evidence taken by Mr. Whitton and Mr. Moody, of the evidence you gave? I was asked by Mr. Whitton if I had ever seen Mr. Gardiner drinking, and I said no; that was left out. He asked me if I had ever seen any one else drinking; I said I had seen Mr. Barton and Mr. Drewett drinking; that was left out. He asked what I had seen them drinking. That was left out, and a number of other things.
515. You were being examined, then, with regard to the conduct of Mr. Barton and Mr. Drewett? So it would appear from the way he put the questions, but my answers were not taken down.
516. You mentioned just now that there were two sets of drawings made for the Menangle bridge as though they were not necessary, but were not these two different plans? Yes, two different kinds, one made for a wooden bridge and the other for iron girders.
517. They were not made simultaneously? No; I do not see why detailed and finished up plans should have been made.
518. You seem to have a very low opinion of Mr. Micklethwait—I understood you to say that you have seldom seen him sober? Yes, what I call perfectly sober.
519. Are you really able to judge—are you very intimate with Mr. Micklethwait, or have you come much into contact with him? I have seen him very often.
520. Did you generally sit in the same room with him? No.
521. Are you able to distinguish between a gentleman being of a nervous constitution, and being what you call perfectly sober? What do you mean by a nervous constitution?
522. A constitution in which a person will tremble and shake as persons often do when under the influence of drink? I think I could judge whether a man was suffering from drink or from disease.
523. You could? I think so.
524. By Mr. Dalgleish: Did you not say you smelt the drink? I did.
525. By Mr. Morris: I apprehend you could smell a very small quantity of brandy? Yes.
526. Mr. Micklethwait, according to your account, is so unsuited to his office as to be unable to plot his own work from his own level book? Yes, I recollect an instance where he could not plot his own work from his own level book.
527. Did that arise from his incompetency—I mean mental or scientific incompetency—or did it arise merely from some temporary cause? It must have arisen from his own mistakes of some sort or other.
528. In the level book? Yes, or something of that sort.
529. Are you yourself very attentive to your duties—are you always at your post? I was generally very regularly there.
530. Were you ever absent at all from your duties? Not unless I had leave of absence.
531. Used you to have your luncheon in the room? Yes, I always took my luncheon with me.
532. Did you take wine? I think I had only one glass of wine while I was in the office, and then I was not on duty.
533. Do you consider it a very great crime for the gentlemen in an office during luncheon time to take a glass of wine? I should say not.
534. Had you many opportunities of observing Mr. Gardiner's conduct while he was in the department? During the last six or eight months that he was there.
535. Is he of a quarrelsome disposition? Not that I am aware of; he never quarrelled with me or with the other gentlemen in the office.
536. Were you in the same room? Part of the time—six or eight months.
537. Was he given to the use of vituperative expressions? Not that I am aware of; he used to conduct himself in a proper manner.
538. Were Mr. Drewett and Mr. Barton the only gentlemen in the office who occupied their time in reading the daily newspapers and in discussing politics—is it not the practice in the public offices for gentlemen to occupy their time in that way? It was general in their room. I have not had an opportunity of observing anywhere else.
539. Is it not the rule of the office you are in that the gentlemen belonging to it may not read the newspaper out of doors, but only in office hours? Not that I am aware of; I believe that is the opinion of people out of doors.
540. I wish to ask you why, having observed these irregularities, which if substantiated were of the grossest kind, it never occurred to you that you should make them known to the head of your department? It did not.

Mr. L.
Robertson.

20 Oct., 1863.

Mr. L.
Robertson.
20 Oct., 1863.

541. How can you then expect that any person, finding you to be of so weak a moral resolution and character, will employ you—what dependence could any person place upon you? I did not consider it to be my duty to report these things, as I was in such a subordinate position; I was the lowest in the office.

542. By the Chairman: You thought there were plenty of gentlemen receiving a larger salary than you, and that if they chose to pass it over it was not your duty to report it? Yes.

543. Had you heard that complaints had been made to Mr. Whitton as to the conduct of gentlemen in the office, and that he had told the person complaining to mind his own business? I had not.

544. By Mr. Morris: Mr. Drewett was the head of your room? Yes.

545. And Mr. Drewett's conduct, as you have represented it, was very gross? Yes.

546. Did it not occur to you that it was your duty to represent to Mr. Whitton the conduct of a gentleman who was so much trusted by himself? I did not consider it my duty to make reports.

547. You considered it was your duty merely to do your work and to receive your pay? Yes, for doing my work, and doing it properly.

548. That is the only idea you have of serving the Government? If I had been in a position where I should have considered myself at liberty to report, I should have done so.

549. Supposing you had seen a theft committed by Mr. Drewett—plans taken away or copies given to contractors in some way that was very irregular—would you have represented it? I should consider that such a thing ought to be represented, but I did not know whether it was my place; other persons were in the office—Mr. Barton was in the office.

550. But Mr. Barton's conduct you say was very irregular, Mr. Hall was not very much to be trusted, Mr. Micklethwait was not very much to be trusted, several other gentlemen were not very much to be trusted,—how then could you expect these gentlemen to complain one of the other? I did not consider it my duty to do so.

551. By Mr. Dalgleish: Have you been employed to pour water on the head of Mr. Micklethwait? Yes.

552. Was he then drunk or sober? I should say he was regularly tipsy.

553. Have you had other occasions where you have been brought intimately into contact with Mr. Micklethwait when he has been in that condition? Not in that way, but I have seen him on other occasions when he has not been sober.

554. On that occasion had he been called for by Mr. Whitton, and was he going to see him? I am not aware.

555. When you required leave of absence, to whom did you apply—did you apply to Mr. Drewett in the first instance? Generally to Mr. Drewett; he had the power of giving leave of absence.

556. So that in fact he was the head of that department? He was head of the draftsmen.

557. By Mr. Morris: Did you ever come in contact with Mr. Whitton? I used to meet him sometimes; I never had anything to say to him.

558. Was he accessible in his manner? Yes, I never had anything particular to say to him.

559. Did you ever see anything in Mr. Whitton that would lead you to suppose, if you had reported any gross impropriety to him, he would not have listened to you? Yes, because I knew those parties who have carried on these things are Mr. Whitton's fastest friends.

560. That is not an answer to my question—I ask you did you ever see anything in Mr. Whitton's conduct that would lead you to suppose he would not listen to any complaint of impropriety that might have been made? No, only that I know they are all friends of Mr. Whitton.

561. Do you imagine that no person would blame a friend if he had committed an impropriety? I considered that I should not have gained anything, and rather lost something by reporting these things.

562. If you had represented any of these improprieties, could you not have supported your representation by other evidence? No, I was the only person in the office there.

563. Then every person in the office besides yourself misbehaved himself? There were only two in that office—Mr. Barton and Mr. Drewett, and Mr. Barton was often away, and there were only us two together.

564. Nevertheless, it never occurred to you to represent the conduct of either of these gentlemen, for fear of not being able to support your representation? I never considered that I ought to report these things, and they would have denied them if I had done so; there was nobody to support me in my statement. I never told these things to any one.

565. Not to Mr. Gardiner? Not of Mr. Micklethwait, only of Mr. Drewett.*

566. By Mr. Dalgleish: Did you ever make these observations to me previously? No.

567. Would you have told them now unless you had been asked? No.

568. Do you know other persons who have complained of this bad conduct who have been dismissed in consequence? Yes, Mr. Gardiner.

569. Have you any reason to suppose that you would have been used better than Mr. Gardiner, if you had complained of persons who were your superiors in the office? No.

570. By Mr. Morris: Why do you suppose that Mr. Gardiner was dismissed for making complaints? Because they seemed to take a thorough dislike to him after the thing was done; they spoke ill of him, and tried in every way to get rid of him.

571. Had you been in possession of evidence that might have been taken with regard to Mr. Gardiner? No.

572.

* Revised:—Only of Mr. Micklethwait.

572. Do you know of any of the evidence taken by the head of the department with regard to Mr. Gardiner's own conduct? No, the only evidence I have seen is that which has been published in the papers, and I did not pay much attention to that. Mr. L. Robertson.
573. By Mr. Dalgleish: Did you ever see any other plans of iron bridges than those of the Menangle and Penrith bridge? I have seen none other but sketches of Mr. Drewett's relating to the same thing. 20 Oct., 1863.
574. You have never seen sketches of iron bridges by Mr. Gardiner? No, not by Mr. Gardiner; I have seen one sketch by Mr. Barton, of the elevation.
575. Are you aware whether Mr. Gardiner made out the plans of the bridges, and the quantities of the iron bridges? I do not know anything about it, but I have heard him say he did.
576. Was not Mr. Gardiner employed in the office prior to your being there? No, he came about the same time that I did.
577. In the first instance? Yes.
578. What room was he employed in? The long room.
579. The same room that you were in? I was there about a couple of months.
580. Did you see his drawings then? He was making original sketches.
581. Were they for iron or wooden bridges? I do not know; I do not recollect seeing any iron ones; I know there were some for stone viaducts.
582. Did you ever hear any fault found with the work Mr. Gardiner was employed upon at that time? No.
583. The work he was then employed upon was for first class lines, before they were altered to chief lines? Yes.
584. Have you been employed in a private office? Yes, in Mr. Blackett's office.
585. Would the same conduct be tolerated in Mr. Blackett's office that was tolerated in this office? I should say not.
586. Were clerks in Mr. Blackett's office allowed to have drink there? They would not have been if it had been known.
587. Have you seen drinking in that office? Yes.
588. By Mr. Morris: Did you ever expostulate with these gentlemen with reference to their conduct? How could I expostulate, seeing I was in so low a position, and that they were all in positions above me.

Mr. William Anthony Trengrouse called in and examined:—

589. By the Chairman: You were in the Railway Department? I was. Mr. W. A. Trengrouse.
590. What department are you now in? I am now in the Lands Office.
591. For what period were you an officer in the Railway Department? About eight years. 20 Oct., 1863.
592. Were you in the Railway Department before it fell into the hands of Government? Yes, about twelve months.
593. Who was the Chief Engineer at that time? Mr. Wallis.
594. Was Mr. Brady his assistant? He was.
595. Did Mr. Brady continue in the Railway Department after Mr. Wallis left? Yes.
596. Was he there after Mr. Whitton took charge of the Railway Department? He was.
597. You and your father were in the department at the same time? We were.
598. Were there any other draftsmen there? No, we were the only two.
599. Was any complaint made about your work? I never heard of any; they were rather pleased with it at first, when I was in that employment.
600. Were there any disputes then in that department? Never.
601. Do you mean to say that you and your father did all the work required in that department? We did all the work.
602. Until Mr. Whitton arrived? Until Mr. Whitton arrived.
603. And for a long time after? I think it was about a month after Mr. Whitton came that the present staff came here.
604. What salary were you engaged at? £156 a year.
605. What salary were you receiving when you left the department? £200.
606. After how long service? Eight years.
607. How many draftsmen were in the department when you left? Ten, including myself.
608. There are only five on the Estimates—then there are five occasional draftsmen? Yes, they have been there some time.
609. Are any of these occasional draftsmen receiving a higher salary than yourself? Yes.
610. How many of them? Three.
611. Much higher? Yes; one of them has £300 a year.
612. Were you not competent to perform the works the occasional draftsmen were engaged on? Yes.
613. Did you ever perform any such work in the office? Yes.
614. Was any fault found with the work performed? None whatever.
615. When the occasional draftsmen were brought in were they put to superior work? No, to just the same work.
616. Were you put to inferior work after they came into the office? No, I continued at the same.
617. You doing the same work, and being on the staff, receiving a smaller salary by £100 than some of the occasional draftsmen? Yes, one of them.
618. When you left were there any of the occasional draftsmen who received lower salaries than yourself? Yes, two.

- Mr. W. A. Trengrouse.
- 20 Oct., 1863.
619. Who were they? Mr. Telmon and Mr. Doherty.
620. Was Mr. Doherty an occasional draftsman? Yes.
621. What was the name of this occasional draftsman who was receiving a higher salary? Fearnside.
622. Was that one of the sappers? Yes.
623. Was he a competent draftsman? There was nothing particular in his work.
624. Is not he one of the persons who was engaged in the Grose Valley survey? Yes.
625. Has he been in the office ever since? Ever since.
626. As an occasional draftsman? As an occasional draftsman.
627. Were you not in reality the next oldest officer to your father in the department? Yes.
628. Did you feel competent to do any work which was required in the office from a draftsman? Yes.
629. I presume plans prepared by you can be produced, to enable the Committee to judge of your competency? Plenty. I have done plans to be laid before the Executive Council for their approval—drawings of bridges on the Southern line; and I did a great portion of the Menangle viaduct.
630. You are now in the Lands Department? Yes.
631. Was there not a competitive examination for that appointment? Yes.
632. How many applicants were there? A great many.
633. You had to produce some work? Yes, specimens of work.
634. And your work was considered superior to that of any other person? Yes.
635. Do you know whether there were fifty applicants for that office? I could not say.
636. However, your work was considered to be so satisfactory that you received employment? The Surveyor General wanted me to come on at once.
637. What salary are you receiving now? £200 a year.
638. That is the same salary as you were receiving in the Works Department? Yes.
639. Were there not several persons taken on in the office about three years back, at a higher salary than you were receiving? Yes.
640. Were they put upon the permanent staff? No.
641. There was the person you have spoken of as having been put on as an occasional draftsman—Mr. Fearnside, and there were others? Yes.
642. Were there any remarks made in the office as to an occasional draftsman being employed at a higher salary than was being paid to permanent officers who were of equal ability? There were some remarks made about it.
643. Did you yourself feel that injustice had been done to you? I did.
644. What age are you? Twenty-four.
645. Had you been engaged as a draftsman before you entered the department? No.
646. By Mr. Dalgleish: You had been educated as a draftsman? Yes.
647. By the Chairman: I suppose your father taught you? My father taught me a great deal before I entered the Railway Office.
648. What salary had you when you first entered the Railway Department? £156.
649. And you chiefly assisted your father? Yes.
650. Is your father a good draftsman, do you consider? I do consider him one of the best I have ever seen.
651. There are plenty of works of his in the office? Yes.
652. Was there not a gentleman in the Railway Office of the name of Mann? There was.
653. Was he engaged before or after you? After me.
654. How long? About two years.
655. Was he taken on the same salary you were receiving? The same salary.
656. How much? £150 he was receiving when he was taken on.
657. That was less than you? Yes, £6 less.
658. What were his particular duties when he was taken on? Tracing.
659. Was he a surveyor? No.
660. Has he been engaged as a trial surveyor? He has.
661. Do you think him competent to perform the duties of a trial surveyor? I should not think he was.
662. Then his duty in the office before he went into the field was taking tracings? That is all.
663. Do you think he could learn sufficient in the office to make him competent to go into the field as a trial surveyor? Decidedly not.
664. Is it not the fact that the most competent men are required for trial surveyors for railways? It is.
665. Is it not also the fact that even a slight mistake may cause a considerable expense to the Government? Yes.
666. Do you know what opportunities he had of acquiring the art of surveying? No; he was always in the office.
667. You say he could not obtain a knowledge of surveying in the office? No.
668. Was he in reality sent out, with a competent surveyor for the purpose of learning the business? I should think so.
669. Do you know what salary he is getting now? £300 a year.
670. Do you know whether that includes travelling expenses? No, it does not.
671. What does he get in the shape of travelling expenses? £280.
672. So that in reality he is in receipt of £580 a year? Yes.
673. Is it not a rule in the service that persons who receive £280 a year shall keep two horses? Yes.
674. Do you know whether Mr. Mann keeps two horses? I cannot say.
675. Do you know whether he keeps any? I do not.
- 676.

676. You cannot give us any idea of his expenses? I cannot.
677. Has he sent any of his work into the office? I have never seen any of it sent in since he has been out.
678. How long has he been out? Since the commencement of the last year.
679. Certainly there should have been some of his work returned before you left? There was nothing sent in while I was there, up to last May.
680. Mr. Mann has got an addition to his salary of something like £150 since he has been in the department? Yes.
681. And you have received an addition of only £44? Yes.
682. Although you were the oldest officer, and fully as competent to perform your duty as Mr. Mann? Yes.
683. By Mr. Dalgleish: Who is Mr. Mann? A son of Captain Mann.
684. By the Chairman: Can you account for the increase of Mr. Mann's salary? No, I cannot.
685. Are Mr. Whitton and Mr. Barton very friendly with his father at Cockatoo? Yes, very.
686. On visiting terms? Yes.
687. Are Mr. Whitton and Mr. Barton on very friendly and visiting terms with your father? No.
688. Do you know of Mr. Whitton having been absent from his office for three or four weeks, from illness? Yes.
689. Do you know whether he was sailing in the harbour in a sailing boat during that period? He has been out boating, but I cannot say whether he was out with Mr. Barton during that time.
690. During the time he was at home? Yes, during the time he was away from the office he was out boating.
691. Did you ever solicit Mr. Whitton to increase your salary? I did.
692. What was his reply? That he could not increase mine because Mr. Mann had not applied for an increase; that he could not increase one without the other.
693. Then when he increased Mr. Mann's he increased yours also? No; Mr. Mann's increase commenced from the beginning of last year (1862), and mine from the beginning of this year (1863).
694. He increased Mr. Mann's £150, and yours £44? Yes.
695. Why was it that you left the Works Department, to go into the Department of Lands at the same salary? Because the office was in such a bad state that it was unpleasant to be there; the conduct and language was disgraceful.
696. Do you mean that the conduct and language of those in the office was disgraceful to gentlemen? Yes, their conversation and the way they went on.
697. Did they make use of foul and filthy language? Yes.
698. Who did so? Mr. Hall was one and Mr. Mann another.
699. Who else? Mr. Micklethwait.
700. Were you in the room with these gentlemen? Yes.
701. Is that the long drawing room? Yes.
702. How many draftsmen were there in that room? Sometimes there were more than at others—when the surveyors were there.
703. As a general rule? My father was there a portion of the time, Mr. Mackay, Mr. Telmon, Mr. Hall, Mr. Fearnside, Mr. Mann, Mr. Robertson was there a portion of the time, Mr. Gardiner, and myself; Mr. Micklethwait was also there during a portion of the time.
704. Which of these gentlemen have you heard make use of foul language? Mr. Hall, Mr. Mann, and Mr. Micklethwait.
705. Have you ever heard any of the other gentlemen? No.
706. Have you seen them do anything else unbecoming of gentlemen? As regards drinking I have seen a great deal of that going on there.
707. By whom? Mr. Hall and Mr. Micklethwait.
708. Any one else? No.
709. When you say drinking, do you mean that you have seen them drink to such excess as not to be competent to go on with their duties? Yes.
710. Often? Yes, it has often been the case.
711. What used they to drink? Brandy, rum, and ale, sometimes porter.
712. Who used to bring them drink into the office? The messengers.
713. Which of them? Sometimes Fitzgerald and sometimes Garvin.
714. Have you heard any other gentleman complain of their conduct in the office? Mr. Mackay, I have heard him speak of it.
715. How often have you seen this? Frequently, sometimes for days together.
716. Do you mean to say that you have seen Mr. Hall and Mr. Micklethwait for days together in the office incapable of performing their duties? Yes.
717. And this repeatedly? Yes.
718. Do you know whether any person complained to Mr. Whitton of the conduct of these gentlemen? My father spoke to Mr. Whitton about Mr. Hall's conduct.
719. What was the reply he got? That he was to mind his own business.
720. Did your father tell you so? Yes; Mr. Hall spoke to Mr. Gardiner about it, and said Mr. Trengrouse had been complaining to Mr. Whitton about him.
721. I suppose after that you did not think it your duty to make any complaints to Mr. Whitton about any misconduct you saw? No.
722. Has your father's salary been increased since he has been in the office? Yes, once.
723. To what? I think from £250 to £350.

Mr. W. A.
Trengrouse.
20 Oct., 1863.

- Mr. W. A. Trengrouse. 721. What is Mr. Drewett's salary? £500.
 725. What is Mr. Hall's? £400.
 20 Oct., 1863. 726. And you say your father is a better draftsman than either of those gentlemen? Yes.
 727. And their senior in the service? Yes.
 728. Do you consider Mr. Drewett a good draftsman? I do not.
 729. Have you seen him drinking at any time? Yes.
 730. Often? No, not often.
 731. Have you ever seen him the worse for drink—so much so as to be incapable of performing his duties? Yes, but he was very nervous—a very little upset him.
 732. Has he ever been caught at the doors listening—at Mr. Whitton's? Yes.
 733. Eaves-dropping? Yes.
 734. By whom was he caught? I have seen him listening.
 735. At Mr. Whitton's apartment? Yes.
 736. Do you know Mr. Barton? Yes.
 737. Have you ever seen him indulging in drink? I have seen him drinking.
 738. Much? Not anything to speak of.
 739. Have you ever seen him in such a state as to be unable to perform his duty? No.
 740. What have you seen him drink? I have seen him drink spirits and wine.
 741. At what hour of the day? During office hours.
 742. Not during luncheon time? Yes.
 743. And at other than lunch hours? Yes.
 744. How used the drink to come in—by the bottle, or by the glass? By the bottle.
 745. Have you ever seen more than one bottle brought in at a time? I have seen wine brought in by the case to Mr. Barton.
 746. You say you do not consider Mr. Drewett a good draftsman? No.
 747. Is he better now than when he came to the office—has he improved? He has much improved since he has been there.
 748. Did he come direct from England to take his position in the office? Yes, he was one of Mr. Whitton's staff.
 749. He has been colonised? Yes.
 750. Is he quick at drawing? No, very slow.
 751. Is he correct in his figures—in taking out? No.
 752. Have you known him to make errors? Yes, frequently.
 753. Who has detected the errors? In going through quantities—I have worked out the quantities—Mr. Drewett has not been able to check them, and I have been obliged to call Mr. Robertson in to check them.
 754. Is Mr. Robertson a good draftsman? He is a very good draftsman.
 755. He was receiving a very low salary? Yes.
 756. Have you made similar mistakes to Mr. Drewett? No.
 757. Do you know what has been Mr. Hall's duty since he has been in the office? In architectural drawing.
 758. For stations? Yes.
 759. Has he had an assistant? Yes, Mr. Mackay.
 760. Have you known Mr. Hall to be engaged in taking out the quantities of stations? Yes.
 761. You know the Burwood station? Yes.
 762. And the station at Ashfield? Yes.
 763. How long would it occupy you to take out the quantities of one of those places—could you do it in a forenoon? Yes, it would be about a morning's work.
 764. Does it come within your knowledge that Mr. Hall has been three weeks taking out the quantities of one of those small stations? He has been a long time, I could not say the time.
 765. Have you known him make gross mistakes about the construction of those stations—for instance, do you remember his designing the goods warehouse at Penrith, and the contractor throwing up his tender in consequence of mistakes made in the drawings? Yes.
 766. Government incurred a serious loss in consequence, £100 or £150? I believe they lost money in consequence.
