LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

ROBERT STEWART.
(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 28 July, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The following Petition of Robert Stewart,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner's father, William Stewart, arrived in this Colony as a free settler, in the early part of the present century, and was for many years employed in command of vessels in the Colonial trade, during which time he was frequently consulted by Governor Macquarie on the subject of coast navigation, and on several occasions directed by His Excellency to examine and report upon particular localities.

That the said William Stewart received from Governor Macquarie a promise of a grant of land, under which, about the year 1816, he took possession of a portion of land near Broken Bay.

That the land so selected forms a belt, bounded by a precipitous range of hills on one side, and by the back water of the Hawkesbury River, directly facing "Long Island," on the other.

That, on the 16th of May, 1816, an order was given by Governor Macquarie to measure two hundred acres to the said William Stewart, but owing to the peculiar and distant position of the land so selected, no surveyor reached that part of the country up to the time of Petitioner's father's last and fatal departure in the service of the Government.

That, in March or April, 1820, said William Stewart, under special instructions from Governor Macquarie, fitted out at the Commissariat Stores, and sailed to examine the coast south of Twofold Bay, from which expedition he never returned, and the only information ever obtained was furnished in a report made by Robert Johnston, R.N., to Major General Macquarie, and published on the 15th December, 1821, by order of Sir Thomas Brisbane, by which it appeared by statements of the natives of the Clyde, that Mr. Stewart and his boat's crew had been cut off by the natives of Twofold Bay.

That your Petitioner's family continued in possession of the property in question, making various improvements, and depasturing stock thereon, up to the time of their departure to a distant part of the country, in 1831, your Petitioner being a minor at the time, and under indentures of apprenticeship to Mr. E. Hunt, and nearly six years of the term unexpired.

That the land in question, which your Petitioner, as heir-at-law of the said William Stewart believes he has equitable claim to, is now for the most part unoccupied and unalienated.

That your Petitioner applied to the Secretary for Lands for a grant of such land, but his application has not been complied with on the grounds "That no such order is recorded, nor can it be discovered that such land was ever measured or even selected in the situation referred to."

That your Petitioner is not aware of any instance of the "order" to select or "measure" land given by a Governor of the Colony being repudiated by any subsequent Government order or regulation, or defeated on any mere technical grounds, and conceives that no grounds exist for any such exception in your Petitioner's case; and therefore your Petitioner prays that your Honorable House will take the foregoing premises into your favourable consideration, and grant such inquiry into the facts as may be deemed necessary for the ends of justice.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

ROBT. STEWART.

ROBERT STEWART.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on the 11th August last, "to inquire into and report upon the Petition of Robert Stewart,"—"with power to send for persons and papers,"—have agreed to the following Report :—

Your Committee having examined the witnesses named in the margin, and documents herewith appended to the evidence, are of opinion that sufficient evidence has been adduced to shew that a grant of 200 acres of land was promised to William Stewart, by Governor Macquarie, in 1816.

Surveyor General,
Mr. Richard Driver, Senr.,
Mr. Rob. M'Intosh,
P. F. Adams, Esq.,
W. Elyard, Esq.,
Mr. George Peck,
Rob. Stewart, Esq., M.P.,
Mr. Wm. Webb,
Mr. R. Melville.

That the family of the said William Stewart made a selection of land at the Hawkesbury River, opposite Long Island, and retained possession for several years.

It appears further to your Committee that, although the selection was vacated about the year 1831, but a very small portion (not exceeding 10 acres) of the same has since been sold by the Government; and although reasons for the vacation have not been fully shewn, yet your Committee are impressed with the belief that circumstances beyond the control of the Petitioner prevented the prosecution of his claim at an earlier period.

Your Committee, therefore, believing that the said promise of grant has not been fulfilled, nor adequate compensation received in lieu thereof, beg to recommend the Petitioner to the favourable consideration of the Government.

THOMAS H. MATE,
Chairman.

Legislative Assembly Chamber,
Sydney, 20 October, 1863.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

PETITION OF ROBERT STEWART.

THURSDAY, 27 AUGUST, 1863.

Present :—

Mr. ALLEN,		Mr. LUCAS,
Mr. CUNNEEN,		Mr. MATE,
Mr. W. FORSTER,		Mr. SUTHERLAND,
	Mr. TERRY.

THOMAS HODGES MATE, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

The Petitioner, Mr. Robert Stewart, appeared in person.

Walker R. Davidson, Esq., called in and examined :—

1. By the Chairman : You are Surveyor General? Yes.
2. Are you in a position to give any information to the Committee respecting the claim of Mr. Robert Stewart, who appears to claim a portion of land, for which he has petitioned? I have got some information here about the land. I cannot find any record in the office of the promise of 300 acres to Mr. Stewart. There is a promise from Governor Macquarie of 200 acres at Illawarra to one William Stewart, who is described as a mariner. We have no record of any promise of 300 acres at all.
3. Has that been measured? We do not find that any measurement has taken place upon this order. There is no quantity of land measured for William Stewart at Illawarra.
4. Can you state whether it was the practice in those days to allow persons having promises of land in one locality to select in another? I daresay it was permitted.
5. Have you anything in your office to shew that such was the practice? No doubt such things have occurred in the office, but I could not refer to any particular case.
6. You say you have nothing in your office to shew that the land was measured, as promised? The land does not appear to have been measured at the Five Islands—the 200 acres promised to William Stewart.
7. Have you any papers you wish to hand in? I have the original order of Governor Macquarie in favour of Mr. Stewart, described as lately a mariner, for 200 acres at the Five Islands. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix.)
8. By Mr. Cunneen: Is there any record of a promise having been made by Governor Macquarie in 1816? No record except this.
9. By the Chairman : Have you any other documents to hand in? I have the correspondence that has occurred between the department and Mr. Robert Stewart, and a tracing of the locality where the land is claimed now. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix.)
10. Are you aware whether that land is occupied now—at Long Island? Long Island is not occupied now, and I do not think this land has been sold either.

W. R.
Davidson,
Esq.

W. R.
Davidson,
Esq.

27 Aug., 1863.

11. By Mr. Cunneen: Are you aware of any instance in which an order to select land given by a Governor of the Colony, has been repudiated? I am not aware of any, though there may have been some cases in which the persons to whom land was promised have not obtained it, because a notice of 3rd October, 1826, stated that all claims to land ought to be made before a particular period, and that all claims not so made were to be forfeited.
12. By Mr. W. Forster: How long have you been in the public service? Thirty-three years.
13. Then you have a recollection of this? No, I have only such information as I can gather from official records.
14. When did you first inquire into this matter? Two days ago.
15. You have no recollection of the documents? None at all.
16. Your attention was not called to it before? No, not until I got the summons to attend here.
17. In consequence of this inquiry you looked into the papers? Yes.
18. This is all the evidence you can find? Yes, the case was looked into before, when Mr. Stewart first made his application.
19. What was the decision then? That he did not seem to be entitled to the land on account of this notice from the Government, that no land that was not applied for within a certain period would be granted.
20. In consequence of this notice Mr. Stewart's claim was considered to have lapsed? Yes.
21. On no other grounds? No.
22. Would you have considered then that if that notice had not been published it would have been a just claim? I think the claim to 200 acres would have been a just claim; that does not appear to have been measured anywhere.
23. Regarding this paper as a promise by the Government, do you think the promise has been fulfilled in any way? I do not think it has.
24. Do you think it quite just, under all circumstances, to apply the principles of that notice to all claimants? I do not know what the object of the Government in issuing it may have been.
25. These promises were regarded in early times almost as grants—were they not? No doubt they were.
26. And I suppose but for the notice you have alluded to, you would have considered it almost a marketable claim? No doubt. The paper bears Governor Macquarie's signature.
27. On the supposition that the House would sanction a claim of this kind, are you aware whether we should expose ourselves to a great number of other similar claims? I do not think it likely.
28. You would not judge so from any evidence in your office? No, I think this is a solitary case.
29. By Mr. Stewart: You are not aware whether the land applied for is alienated? The land up the Hawkesbury is not alienated.
30. Yes? Some land in that neighbourhood is, but not I think opposite Long Island.
31. The direction of the Governor, on the paper you have handed in, was to select the land at the Five Islands? Yes.
32. Now is there any particular locality that the name Five Islands would indicate? No particular locality, except merely the Five Islands.
33. Supposing the person applying for the land had stated it was opposite Long Island, would not that be very likely to cause that difference in the description in the order to measure? I do not think that could be the case, Five Islands and Long Island are so very different. Besides there are other grants, all described as at the Five Islands, particularly described in that paper signed by the Governor.
34. Supposing a person to occupy a piece of land facing Long Island, and a surveyor to be in the locality, do you think he would have been justified at that period in measuring 200 acres under that order? I do not think so.
35. Now he would not? Not at any time I think.
36. Do you know the probable value of land in the locality of Long Island? Well I should think it very inferior; it is a very broken and rocky country.
37. Supposing the right to get 200 acres measured at the Five Islands, do you think it is not likely a person selecting at Long Island might fancy he had a right to get it there, having an order for 200 acres to be measured? I should think no one except the Government could change the locality.
38. The change would not be for land of greater value—it would be inferior land; and the person in fact so selecting his land would be selecting something very inferior? No doubt.
39. Therefore on that score there would be no objection? No.
40. If he had selected superior land there would probably be some objection to comply with it. Are you aware that during the period from 1816 up to 1820 any measurements of land had taken place near Long Island, or within a number of miles of Long Island? There are some small portions measured about Long Island.
41. Were there any measured at that period? I cannot state positively as to the period.
42. If I were to state positively that there was no land measured up to 1830, within ten miles of Long Island, are you in a position to state that that was incorrect? I know a number of isolated spots have been measured from time to time, but at what period I do not know.
43. In that case a person placed in occupation of that land would not be likely to have a surveyor sent specially to measure it? No, I do not think so.
44. Do you know any cases where land was held for a number of years without being measured? Yes, all over the Colony.
45. For how long a period—ten or fifteen years? Perhaps some may have extended to that period.

46. Do you know of any case in which the order you allude to, of the 3rd October, 1826, was made to apply? I am not aware of any particular case; but then I have not been in a position to know that.

W. R.
Davidson,
Esq.

47. You know what that order is? Yes, I have a memorandum of it here. I have not seen it in the Gazette, but I believe it was to this effect: that all persons holding orders for land, who had not made selections, were required to do so by, I think, the 1st January, 1827, on pain of forfeiture; and there was a subsequent notice of 3rd October, 1827, which stated that all orders for lands, of which selections had not been intimated, as required by the notice of the 3rd October, 1826, were thereby cancelled.

27 Aug., 1863.

48. Are you aware that that only applied to those having rights to land created after the arrival of Sir Thomas Brisbane? I was not aware of that.

49. You are not aware of its being used in any case as an objection to a direct order given previously? No; I have been away from head-quarters so long that I am not in a position to know.

50. Are you positive as to the land not being alienated in the locality of Long Island? I will not speak very positively, but I had occasion to look at the map the other day, and I did not observe any charted at Long Island.

51. Would the land opposite Long Island, as indicated on the tracing you have handed in, assuming it to be a narrow belt, backed by a range of hills, much exceed 200 acres in area? It looks larger than Long Island, which contains, as nearly as possible, 200 acres.

52. By the description given on a chart or map, I saw two portions of 100 acres, and 10 acres appeared to be marked off as sold? Very likely; I did not look at it with a view of observing what land was alienated there.

53. If this land, as described, was occupied by the applicant and his family, it would be material to shew whether it corresponds with the position of land now alienated from the Crown, and the date when it was so alienated? Of course that can be ascertained.

54. In your experience you know of no case where a direction to measure, given by a Governor, has not been complied with? No.

55. You know of no similar order to this lying in your office uncomplied with? I do not.

56. And if 200 acres were not measured in accordance with that order, it would be an exception to anything you are aware of? I do not know of any case besides this.

57. Do you not think it very likely you would have heard something of it, if there had been such a case in your office? No, I have been a very long time away from the office; for twenty-five years I was out of the way of obtaining any information of that kind.

58. Then the information you can give is, that the order to measure this land has never been complied with? That order appears never to have been complied with. There is no trace of the measurement of 200 acres for William Stewart at Illawarra.

59. And the land applied for at Long Island is of a very inferior character to the land indicated in the order to measure? Without speaking positively I believe it is a very broken country, and the fact of its not being taken up would lead one to suppose so.

60. By Mr. Terry: Is it usual to carry out these orders? I should think it just to carry out an order of that kind, if it has not been complied with.

61. By Mr. Stewart: Are you aware of an order or Act passed in 1833, to empower persons in possession of land to receive grants of such land, irrespective of their original authority to occupy? I am not aware of it.

62. The Court of Claims was established at that period? Yes, I recollect that perfectly. I reported on most of the cases when that Court was established first. I was then in the office.

63. Are you aware that many of those claims were acknowledged when there was no original authority shewn? There were a great variety of claims. I can hardly recollect the circumstances now. The books will shew.

64. Was it not established principally — ? Principally to clear up disputed titles.

Mr. Richard Driver called in and examined:—

65. By the Chairman: You are a very old colonist I understand? I am.

66. Do you recollect as far back as 1820? Yes, 1808 if you require it.

67. Do you recollect about 1820 special instructions being given to a person of the name of Stewart to fit out an expedition to explore the coast southward of Sydney? I recollect going on board the "Elizabeth Henrietta" brig, which was commanded by a brother-in-law of mine, and Mr. Stewart reading his letters of instruction to the master.

Mr. Richard

27 Aug., 1863.

68. Do you recollect hearing anything more of the expedition? Yes, I know he started on the expedition, and he slept on board the brig the night before, down in Watson's Bay. He and Mr. Cunningham, the master of the brig, had been acquainted for many years.

69. Do you know whether he returned? No, he did not.

70. He has never been heard of from that day to this? There was some rumour that some of the native blacks had reported that he and his boat's crew had been killed by the blacks near the Pigeon-house; but that was mere rumour.

71. Did you know anything of the family since that—where they lived? The first I recollect they lived in what is now Castlereagh-street.

72. Do you recollect their taking possession of any land? I do not.

73. You are not aware whether they took possession of any land pursuant to an order or promise from the Government? I am not aware of their taking possession of it.

- Mr. Richard Driver. 74. By Mr. Stewart: Do you recollect about the date the expedition started? About March, 1820.
75. The beginning of 1820? Either March, or the first week in April; it could not have been later than the first week in April.
76. Do you recollect the number of the party? Yes, six persons besides your father.
77. The expedition, you were led to suppose, was fitted out under the direction of the Government of the day? Yes, they were provisioned by the Government, and fitted out entirely by the Government.
78. At the Commissariat Stores? Yes.
79. You are aware that for many years there was an impression that some of the party would again return—there was a doubt whether they were not held in captivity by the natives? There was a doubt that some of them might be alive. There were frequently rumours of persons being seen to the southward. It was even said that a woman was alive for many years, that was in the "Trial" brig, that was cast away in Trial Bay.
80. Would any promise given in favour of a party holding an order for land, be complied with if an application was made to the Government afterwards? It was always customary to comply with it.
81. Do you know any instance of an order to measure land, given during the period of Governor Macquarie's Government, being refused subsequently? I do not.
82. They were in all cases complied with? I have known orders that have been seven and eight years old purchased, and the land afterwards measured and granted.
83. Then the fact of the order being given was considered equal to a grant? The party bought on that title.
84. Then even assuming that no possession was taken of the land upon that order, do you think the order itself would be valid? Yes. I recollect the late Mr. Daniel Cooper, of the house of Cooper and Holt, purchasing a 2,000 acre grant from a person who brought a little vessel, and had got an order for it; but the man had never been out of Sydney, and that was granted.
85. You have known a number of instances? Yes, many.
86. You have never known of any refusal? If a person had once selected land there might sometimes be a dispute in the Land Court, but the decision was generally in favour of the person to whom the land was originally promised.
87. Supposing the person had not taken possession of land, he would be entitled to take possession of that quantity at any period? Yes; there were a number of persons who had been attached to the 73rd, who came back after ten or a dozen years, and had their land given them. I know an instance in my own family where the order was made in 1819, and the land was not measured till 1823. There was only one Assistant Surveyor then (Mr. Mein) and he could not perform all the duties—he had so many things to attend to. For instance, he was away in Van Diemen's Land for six months at one time.
88. The person alluded to being an old resident for many years in the Colony, would it be at all out of the way if he had applied for 200 or 500 acres—would he not be entitled, under the then regulations, to receive land? I do not know exactly what the regulations were. The Governor gave what quantity he thought proper.
89. Do you think a person, in the position of Mr. Stewart, would have received — ? I should have thought he would have received 500 acres if he had applied for it, because he commanded a Government vessel at one time.
90. Are you aware of Mr. John Rowley having engaged to be one of the party? I am not. I recollect the names of two of the parties—Humphreys and Meredith.
91. They were young men—natives of the Colony? Yes.
92. Do you recollect the circumstance of Mr. Rowley receiving 200 acres of land as an assistant going over to Bathurst in 1819? I recollect his receiving a grant of land as an assistant in going up to about as far as Goulburn is now.
93. With Mr. Throsby? Yes.
94. Are you aware that he received 200 acres of land for only about fifteen days' service on that particular occasion? Yes.
95. And that Mr. Throsby received 1,000 acres? He received a grant, which is at the present time called Throsby Park, on the banks of the Wingecarribee.
96. If Mr. Stewart and his party had succeeded would it not be likely they would have been rewarded with land? I should imagine that each of the men that accompanied him would have had at least 100 acres. There were very few in those days who did not get their sixty acres of land if they made a claim.
97. You are not clear as to the objects of the expedition? I understood it was more particularly to explore Jervis Bay, as Governor Macquarie had some idea of forming a settlement there, and Bateman's Bay also, but Jervis Bay in particular. I know from conversations I have heard the late Mr. Simeon Lord have, that he was always advocating the cause of having a fishery at Jervis Bay, and I believe Governor Macquarie thought of having a settlement there.
98. At that period it would be a very dangerous expedition to go down to those places? Yes, many vessels that went for cedar, even to Illawarra, were obliged to come away with a portion of their crews murdered by the blacks; and at Shoalhaven also the blacks murdered portions of different crews.
99. Do you know how many years Mr. Stewart had been in the Colony? I do not. I know he was here in 1805.
100. He was then engaged in nautical pursuits? Yes, I think he was then in command of the "Lady Nelson."
101. In point of fact he was a colonist of some eighteen years standing at the time the order alluded to, in 1816, was given? I should say he was.

102. By the Chairman: I think you said about twelve or fourteen years was the longest period you knew, for which promises of grants had remained in abeyance? That is the longest period I can speak of positively. There is an instance opposite these Chambers, where a person was promised a grant of land; and the late Mr. Burdekin having erected those fine premises on it, had to allow him a year's compensation. The man was away above thirty years. Mr. Richard Driver.
27 Aug., 1863.

103. I think the land in that case had been measured? I think not, for they very seldom measured town allotments at that time. When you got an order for an allotment you went and fenced it in. Mr. Wild, the father of the then Judge Advocate, took possession of the piece of land I speak of, finding that the owner was out of the Colony, and I think Mr. Burdekin purchased that title. Then when the owner came with the promise in his pocket his claim was admitted, and Mr. Burdekin allowed him an annuity. I think he had been an old soldier in the 102nd.

104. By Mr. Terry: Was it customary in the old days of the Colony for the Governor to give grants of land for each of the children of a family? Yes, the old grants run in this manner—so many acres to yourself, and so many for each child.

105. Do you know about the time that was discontinued? At the close of Governor Macquarie's time—at the end of 1821. He gave up the Government on the 1st December, 1821.

106. By Mr. Stewart: The cases you allude to were where parties were present and able to make their application? Yes, I have known numbers of persons, and have frequently seen them as late as 1823, going up to draw their provision from the Stores; and I know those men never went near their land, and sold these small grants in 1830. They never took possession, but only got the order for so many months' provision from the Stores, and they went and drew it.

107. If an order for land was made at the Five Islands, do you think there would be the least objection to a person selecting under the authority of the Governor in any other place under that order? I imagine not. On application I have known land allowed to be taken in another portion of the Colony when the person wished to have the site altered.

108. It was by no means an unusual thing then for an order to be given in 1815, and the land not to be measured in 1820? No, it was almost impossible to have it measured. As I stated before, Mr. Mein was the only Assistant Surveyor there was. Mr. Oxley was generally away on discovery. It was not till about July, 1821, that the late Mr. Henry Dangar was appointed an Assistant Surveyor.

109. Then a delay in the surveying of land, extending over three or four years, was not at all a blameable delay on the part of the person to whom the promise was made? No. The lines of many of the farms on the Liverpool Road were altered, years after they had been occupied, when the survey was made.

WEDNESDAY, 2 SEPTEMBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. HART, | MR. LUCAS,
MR. SUTHERLAND.

THOMAS HODGES MATE, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Robert Stewart, Esq., M.P., appeared on his own behalf.

Mr. Robert M'Intosh called in and examined:—

110. By the Chairman: I believe you have been a great many years in the Colony? Yes, since the year 1814. Mr. Robert M'Intosh.

111. Had you any knowledge of a person named William Stewart, a mariner? Yes.

112. Do you recollect his being engaged by the Government in an expedition to the southward, to survey the coast? I understood so—my father was storekeeper at the time. 2 Sept., 1863.

113. Will you have the goodness to state to the Committee what you know of the circumstances? My father was storekeeper in 1819 or 1820, and Mr. Stewart had an order from the Government to my father to fit him out with provisions, rations, and various things out of the store. He did fit him out, and he went away with a whaling or sealing boat. He had two of Humphrey's sons with him, and a son of his own. I am not sure, but I think his name was Sam Stewart. It was about the year 1820. I think I knew Mr. Stewart about 1817.

114. Were you personally acquainted with him? My father was. I have seen him several times. I had not any business with him, for I was a boy at the time, but I knew him perfectly well; he was a short, stout, thick man.

115. Are you aware whether he had a promise of a grant of land, or whether he had possession of any land at that time? I do not know anything about a promise of a grant of land. I believe there is some land at the Hawkesbury River which he claimed, where Mr. Thomas Edwards was; I know Mr. Edwards was living there.

116. Did you ever hear any more of him after he started on that expedition? No. I heard that nothing was ascertained of what became of them, but it was believed they were lost. I have often heard my father talk of him, because he was intimately acquainted with him. I heard

- Mr. Robert M'Intosh.
2 Sept., 1863.
- heard that the boat and all were lost. There was some talk some years after of something being found, whether it was the boat or not I am not sure. There were some pieces of a boat, but I do not think it could be the ascertained whether it was the boat or not.
117. By Mr. Hart: How old were you when you first knew Mr. Stewart, senior? I was born in 1809, and I knew Mr. Stewart in 1817; then we lived in Cockle Bay.
118. By Mr. Stewart: You recollect clearly my father going away? Yes; and I know that Humphrey's sons, David and Frank, went with him.
119. You knew them well? Yes.
120. From your knowledge of the circumstances, do you believe they went away with the direction of the Government? That was what I understood, more particularly from my father who said they were going on a discovery for the Government. My father said Mr. Stewart had an unlimited order to have whatever he required from the Government Store. He said it was a curious order.
121. That would indicate that it was a service respecting which the Government felt confidence in him, and that he went on the public service? Yes, the order was to the dry stores, and my father was the storekeeper. Mr. Cordeaux was the Commissary at the time, and he fitted him out. It was talked of a great deal afterwards by Mrs. Humphreys, who lost her two sons.
122. Had your father a grant of land at that date? My father had 200 acres of land at Pitt Water.
123. Was it at all an unusual thing at that time for a person to have an authority to take up land, and for the land not to be measured at once? My father did so at Pitt Water. He took possession of 200 acres at Pitt Water, and it was measured afterwards by a person named Jemmy Mayne, a surveyor. He was on it some time before it was measured.
124. He was on it some years before it was measured? I think not more than a year or a year and a half. A good deal of it was cleared, and a house was built on it before it was measured.
125. You resided on the lower part of Pitt Water? Yes, some years.
126. Do you know the locality at the lower part of the Hawkesbury (Mr. Stewart pointed out the position on a tracing)? Yes, I know that particularly well; I have been there a number of times.
127. Do you recollect a portion of that being occupied? Yes, the portion where this red line is (referring to the tracing) was occupied by Edwards.
128. Were there buildings on it? Yes, the small house they lived in, a pigstye, and other buildings.
129. Do you know of stock having been there? Yes, a few; I saw a few they were milking—perhaps five or six head.
130. Do you know how far these cattle ranged? Yes, down to a place called Mud Island.
131. And towards the Flat Rock? Yes, they went both ways down to the back of Long Island.
132. About what year was it you were in that neighbourhood? I was there in the years 1822-3-4, and 5.
133. Do you know of any land being measured there about that period? None near there. The first I knew to be measured was a piece purchased by Francis King and R. W. Robertson—100 acres.
134. This is where you saw the house (referring to the tracing)? Yes, at Kangaroo Point.
135. The cattle ran up here (referring to the plan)? Yes, the place is so bluff they cannot get round here.
136. By Mr. Hart: Whose cattle were they? I understood they were Mr. Edwards' cattle; he was in charge of them, and was milking them.
137. By Mr. Stewart: They were under his control? Yes, he had the house and an American cornhouse; he had moved from the upper part of the river.
138. Did you know that before this Mr. Edwards was a seafaring man? I understood he was.
139. He had left his farming? Yes, he was living near Wiseman's Ferry when I first knew him. He had a farm, which he said he owned. I saw him building this place, for I was repeatedly up the river.
140. You were not aware whether he was a seafaring man or not, except from hearing it? I understood it from him. I always understood he was a sailor.
141. You are not aware how these cattle were taken up? No, I do not know.
142. You were never informed that they came round from Sydney by water? No; I have seen them there, and I have seen Edwards' people milking them. I have been there in the evening, and I have been there all night waiting. He made a garden there, and the remains of it are there now.
143. By Mr. Lucas: Was it usual for persons to take possession of, and set down upon, land in those days, without any conditions? No, it was not usual at that time; but since then it has. I never knew of any squatting in those days; people always had some permission or authority from Government. Since then there has been a deal of squatting.
144. At this time you never knew a person to take possession of Government land without some authority from Government? No.
145. By Mr. Hart: Have you any idea when the change took place—when parties took possession without authority? Not particularly. For the last thirty years they have been squatting on Government land, and even on other people's.
146. You do not refer to Mr. Robertson's "Crown Lands Alienation Act" when you say people take up land without authority? I do not understand the question.

- 147. You do not refer to the free selectors of the present day? Not at all.
- 148. By Mr. Stewart: Do you recollect about what date the land at the Point you have spoken of was disposed of? I do not recollect the date, but I was at the sale. It must have been about thirty years ago.
- 149. Do you recollect where Mr. Stewart and his family were living previous to his leaving? Yes, at Kent-street, in Cockle Bay, where I used to live.
- 150. Do you know the date when Mr. Edwards left that place? I do not.
- 151. Do you know who succeeded him? It went waste. I never knew any one there after that till there was a ferry across.
- 152. That was some years after? Yes, it went waste. I was up and down there with Mr. Peacock, and I saw the houses all knocked about, and the land waste.
- 153. A person residing in Sydney would find some difficulty in keeping a place of that kind in order? Yes, he must have some trustworthy person there, and that would be attended with expense.
- 154. Do you remember Mr. Farrell, my stepfather? Yes.
- 155. Do you remember the circumstance of his leaving Sydney with my mother, about the period? No; I remember your mother getting married to Mr. Farrell.
- 156. You are aware that they did leave Sydney? Yes, but I do not know for what reason.
- 157. You do not know where they went? No.
- 158. If they went to Port Macquarie about 1829 or 1830, there would be no possibility for them to control the property without very great disadvantage or loss, at that distance? They would have had to pay some one to take charge of it, for there was nothing to induce any one to go there. There is scarcely any agricultural land there, only a little bit of a garden of about an acre or an acre and a half.
- 159. A person would not select it unless he had some special object in view? Not as a farm—it is a ridge, and a little bit of a flat from the washings from the hills of about an acre or an acre and a half.
- 160. A person entitled to select 200 acres of land at Illawarra, would not be likely to select that land in lieu of it? I should think the 200 acres there would not be worth 50 acres at Illawarra. It is very rocky and steep there.
- 161. You think a person having a right to 200 acres of land at Illawarra, would not have been likely to have made an exchange? Not without he had some other object than agriculture.
- 162. Looking to the value of the land? Certainly not, for there are not more than twenty or two and twenty acres worth fencing. It is all a ridge sloping to the water, with the exception of the little washing from the hills.
- 163. Have you been there lately? Yes; about two years ago I was at Brisbane Water, and I crossed over in the punt.
- 164. Is the place occupied now? Yes, there are some little houses there, called Government houses. A man named Pinkerton put me across, and he was living in one. I think Coles is living in one; he has a son-in-law who runs the mail. In fact I stopped in one of them the night before I crossed over.
- 165. Do you know whether my father followed the sea? Yes, he used to be always coasting in vessels. He used to go to the Straits, and brought up furs and skins.
- 166. If it were thought desirable to examine the coast between Twofold Bay and Port Phillip, would he have been as likely a person as could have been found at that time to undertake it? He would have been a very proper person, as he used to be always coasting, and going to the Islands for skins and other things.
- 167. You knew he was engaged in that way? Yes, he always followed the sea, and I understood that your brother also followed it.

M'Intosh.

WEDNESDAY, 9 SEPTEMBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. CUNNEEN,

MR. TERRY.

THOMAS HODGES MATE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

---

Mr. R. Stewart in attendance.

Philip Francis Adams, Esq., called in and examined:—

- 168. By the Chairman: You are an officer in the Surveyor General's Department? I am.
- 169. And you appear here on the part of the Surveyor General? Yes.
- 170. For the purpose of handing in certain papers having reference to Mr. Stewart's claim to a grant of land? Yes.
- 171. Do you produce those papers? I beg to hand them in.
- 172. Is there anything else in your office that this Committee ought to be in possession of, having reference to this claim? No, that is all. Mr. Davidson handed me these papers last night before he went away, and if there had been any others he would have given them to me at the same time.

P. F. Adams,
Esq.
9 Sept., 1863.

- P. F. Adams, Esq. 173. Are you aware of what these papers consist? Yes, I have read them over, and will read them to the Committee if they desire it. (Witness reads the papers Nos. 1, 2, and 3, handed in.)
- 9 Sept., 1863. 174. You are not aware whether these 300 acres were ever measured? No, I have never seen the previous papers in this case, as Mr. Davidson has taken all the previous steps.
175. By Mr. Stewart: These are all original papers? Yes.
176. There are no other papers having reference to this claim, in the Survey Office? No, I think not. I can, however, ascertain what search has been made; but if there had been any they would have been with these, and I do not think it likely that others will be found. I see by a note on one of these letters, that the previous papers have been produced and laid before the Committee.
177. The papers previously produced have reference to another promised grant of 200 acres, and have nothing to do with this matter; that is why I ask if there are other papers referring to this 300 acre promise? I should not think there was, or they would have been produced.
178. These papers would indicate that they were original orders, and consequently that no intermediate documents could exist? It would seem so.
179. There was nothing likely to appear between the order for the grant, and the communication and reply in 1827? No, I should say not.
180. These papers have come, I believe, from the Colonial Secretary's Office? Yes.
181. On requisition from your office? Yes.
182. It would appear from that communication that there was a willingness on the part of the Government in 1827, to comply with the application, and carry out the original order? A note on the application says that after the date of the order for the grant, Mr. Stewart was drowned, and that nothing was done towards taking possession of the land.
183. This note then indicates the knowledge of the Surveyor General of the fact of Mr. Stewart having been drowned? Yes, certainly.
184. And that would account for the land not having been taken up? No doubt.
185. And these papers are all that would be likely to be in your office, unless the land had been taken up and granted in the usual way? Yes.
186. If the land had been taken up you would have had some record of it in your office? Yes, we should have had all the papers.
187. The Surveyor General regarded the claim as a clear and just one in 1827, and if anything had been done since then you would have had some record of it in your office? Yes, I think so.
188. The reply to the application requiring the applicant to shew his authority for making it, clearly evinces the willingness of the Government to comply with the order at that time? No, I think there would have been no objection to it if the land had been taken up at the time, for there was the order for it.
189. Do you know of anything that has occurred since then to make that order invalid? No, nothing. I know very little of the case, only what I have gathered from these papers.
190. But in any case where an order for a grant of land has been made, is there anything any Government notice or proclamation that would make such order invalid? I am not aware of anything of the kind.
191. By Mr. Terry: Do you know of any case in which an order has been made for a grant of land, and in which, after the lapse of many years, the order has been complied with, and the land granted? I could not state any cases from memory, but I believe this has been done.
192. Do you know what the custom of your office is in such cases? No.
193. By Mr. Stewart: Are you aware of any persons, in whose favour an order has been made, being refused the land after the lapse of years? Not directly; but there are several cases in which the land must have been refused.
194. Can you instance any one case? Yes; there was Mr. Bell's case—was not he refused his grant?
195. That was a different case, for he had allowed the land he claimed to be out of his possession, and in the hands of another person, for more than twenty years? Yes.
196. Whereas in this case the land was never selected? Precisely.
197. You know nothing of this case yourself? No.
198. And any further information, if there be any, will be in the Colonial Secretary's Office? Yes.
199. Where these documents came from? Yes.
200. By the Chairman: How were these papers produced? I do not know.
201. I mean, was it on an application from your office to the Colonial Secretary's Department? Yes, I suppose so; but I know nothing of the matter.
202. Nor of the former papers? No; they were produced by Mr. Davidson.
203. You are aware that the former papers produced by Mr. Davidson have nothing to do with these 300 acres mentioned in the letters you have laid before the Committee? I have not seen those papers.
204. Will you look at this list (List A No. 1 handed to witness)? Yes.
205. What does it purport to be? A supplementary list of settlers and free persons who received grants in 1816.
206. Do you see the name of William Stewart there? Yes.
207. Will you read the entry? William Stewart—residence, Sydney—recommended by the Secretary of State—200 acres—District of Five Islands—master mariner.
208. By Mr. Stewart: You see that this has no reference to the 300 acres mentioned in the papers you have produced? No, it is a distinct grant.
209. Not in any way indicating that the two are the same? No.

210. The one being for 200 acres in 1816, and the other for 300 acres in 1819, the two must be distinct? Altogether distinct. P. F. Adams,
Esq.
9 Sept., 1863.
211. Are you aware that about that period grants of land were given to various persons for services rendered by them to the Government? I could not say.
212. You are not aware of the circumstance of Mr. Throsby having received a grant of 1,000 acres of land in 1819, for having passed over the ranges from the Cowpasture to Bathurst? I am not aware.
213. Such a grant, if it exists, will be found in your office? Yes.
214. But personally, you are not aware of its existence? I am not; I have no knowledge of the old records of our office.
215. Are you aware that land that had been promised remained unmeasured for a number of years after the order for grant had been made? The lands were all measured before my time; but I remember nothing beyond the last ten years. At that time all the land for previous grants had been measured.
216. Nothing has ever come under your notice to shew that land remained for a long time unmeasured after an order for selection had been made? No.
217. If there were a notification issued by the Governor in May, 1819, setting forth that more land had been promised up to the previous June than could be measured up to the date of the notice, and that consequently no new applications for grants of land would be received until June of the following year—would not that indicate that the land had not been measured up? I do not know of such a notification having been issued; but these are questions that would be more satisfactorily answered by the Surveyor General, because he knows all the circumstances of the department for the last thirty years, and he is the better able to reply satisfactorily on matters relating to the early practice of the department, than a person of more recent appointment—comparatively a new hand, and who has never had anything to do with these old matters.
218. You yourself have no knowledge of such a notification? No; but if you require anything that has passed through our office, we shall have it, or some record of it, and it shall be produced.
219. And in reference to these 300 acres there are no other papers? I have no reason to suppose so.

FRIDAY, 11 SEPTEMBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. ALLEN,		MR. HART,
MR. CUNNEEN,		MR. SUTHERLAND,
MR. W. FORSTER,		MR. TERRY.

THOMAS HODGES MATE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

The Petitioner, Mr. Robert Stewart, appeared in person.

William Elyard, Esquire, Principal Under Secretary to the Government, called in and examined:—

220. By the Chairman: The Committee have requested your attendance here to-day to see if you can afford any information relative to the claim of Mr. Robert Stewart, to a grant of land alleged to have been promised to his father years ago, or if you have any documents in your office relative thereto, which you can produce? The letter which I received from the Clerk of the Assembly requested me to bring a memorial of William Stewart, master mariner and free settler, to His Excellency the Governor, dated 18th February, 1819, together with the affidavits therein referred to. I have had search made among the records of the office, of that date, but I am unable to discover the memorial which is referred to. All the papers on the subject that could be traced, were sent to the Lands Department, and I believe have been produced from that office. I have brought with me a copy of a letter, which is the reply to the memorial in question, shewing that it was received. I think, however, this letter is already before the Committee. W. Elyard,
Esq.
11 Sept., 1863.
221. You have searched and you cannot find the memorial? No.
222. Nor any of the affidavits? No. If the memorial had been found the affidavits would no doubt have been with it. I brought a copy of the answer with me, not knowing that the Committee had seen it, to shew that the memorial had been received by the Government. It states, "I have it in command to inform you that His Excellency has received your memorial, dated the 18th instant"—which is the date of the memorial referred to.
223. By Mr. Stewart: Are you aware whether any order of this description has been annulled? Notices have at different times been issued by the Government, cancelling orders for land not acted upon by selection. But at the same time, if circumstances, or the absence of information that such a claim existed, prevented its being preferred at an earlier date, I am aware of no reason why it should not be entertained.
224. Can you name any instance in which an order of the Governor to take up land has been so cancelled? I cannot, but I have no doubt there are such.

Mr. George Peat called in and examined :—

- Mr. George Peat.
11 Sept., 1863.
225. By the Chairman : You have been a good many years in the Colony? I have.
226. Had you any knowledge of a person named William Stewart, a mariner? Yes, I knew him quite well.
227. About what time did you know him? I have been referring back to different things, and I think it is somewhere about forty-four years ago, more or less a little, but I cannot say the date exactly.
228. Do you recollect how he was employed, whether in a private capacity or as a Government servant? Yes, I remember when he was captain of coasting vessels here, and have heard that he was captain of large vessels before he came to this Colony. A good deal of his time he lived private.
229. Are you aware whether he was employed by the Government? Yes; I fitted out his boat that he went away in, in the time of Governor Macquarie. I fitted the boat out comfortably for him to go away to the Five Islands and down that coast.
230. You are aware he did go on that expedition? Yes, I am certain of that; I could swear to it. I repaired the boat for him for that purpose. He was employed by Governor Macquarie.
231. Did you ever hear of his return? No, he never returned, and nothing certain has been ever heard of him since. It appeared when he went away there was a very heavy gale of wind from the south-west, and veering round to the north-west, and the natives saw him beating to try to get up to the Five Islands, trying all day to get in with the land. The Governor sent Mr. Batty, a gentleman that used to get his living by shooting—for pheasants' tails were very dear in this country at that time, and he could go among all the wild blacks and talk their language—and Mr. Batty brought word back to the Governor that the blacks had seen Mr. Stewart beating backwards and forwards all day, and that at night it came on to blow very heavy, and we never saw anything more of him, and we all thought he had foundered that night.
232. Do you know where his family were living then? Next door but one to me in Kent-street, just above the Old Company's wharf.
233. By Mr. Cunneen : Did Mr. Stewart leave Sydney in the service of the Government? Yes, he was employed by Governor Macquarie to go exploring to the Five Islands. Captain Stewart we used to call him, being captain of vessels here for many years, and I believe he was captain in the navy in England. That was always the name he went by. Mr. John Black, who was in the Bank of New South Wales for many years, knew him perfectly well, for he was often at his father-in-law's house—Mr. Lord. He was a great acquaintance of Mr. Lord's; he used to be there nearly every day.
234. By Mr. W. Forster : Do you know anything of any land having been promised to Mr. Stewart by the Government? I understood Captain Stewart was going away on a surveying expedition, at the request of Governor Macquarie, and that he was to be paid in land, and the people that were with him also.
235. Who was to pay them? The Government—Governor Macquarie.
236. And Mr. Stewart did not come back again? Never.
237. What was the service he was expected to perform? He was going surveying down the coast, to see what land and what timber there was.
238. Did he do the surveying he promised to do? No, the blacks gave Mr. Batty to understand what I have told you.
239. How long ago was all this? I think about forty-four years, more or less.
240. You do not say that Mr. Stewart did his part of the contract before his death—do you? No, I cannot say he did any part of his contract, for he never came back.
241. Would you, under the circumstances, consider that his family were entitled to this land? Well, I should suppose so; if it pleased God to take him he could not help that. He left a large family behind. He was a clever man, and able to perform his agreement if he had lived.
242. Supposing you agreed to pay a sum of money to another person to do something which he did not do, in consequence of his dying before he could do it, would you think you were bound to pay the money without the equivalent? I think that would be a different case. If it pleased God to take him he could not perform his agreement, and his family were left destitute in the world, and fatherless.
243. Do you think the Government are to be bound in regard to contracts by different rules from those that would apply to private individuals? I think that is to be left to your own opinion. I should think it very hard if I undertook a speculation, and was taken from all my family, and they were left on the world destitute. I should think the Government would be so feeling as to give them some compensation.
244. Do you know whether grants of land in those days were generally accompanied by conditions, for instance that the parties should settle on and improve it? They were sometimes.
245. Do you know whether that was so in Mr. Stewart's case—whether he was expected to settle on the land and improve it? Yes, I believe he was.
246. That would have been a condition of the grant then? Yes, I think so.
247. Do you know whether his family offered to undertake that part of the conditions, to settle on and improve the land? No, I cannot say I am so well up in the subject as to give any answer to that.
248. Do you know whether they made any claim upon the Government at all in those days? I do not know.
249. By Mr. Terry : Did Mr. Stewart fit out his vessel at that time at his own expense? Yes, at his own expense. The boat was his own.
250. Do you know if in those days the Government gave the children of public servants land?

- land? Yes; in those days land was granted all by the Governor himself; he had the power to do everything.
251. And he did it? He gave land to any person he thought worthy of it.
252. By Mr. Sutherland: Are you aware whether the services that Mr. Stewart had performed before, for the Government, was what he received the promise of a grant for, or was it for what he was to perform for them? I did not know his business so far as that.
253. Was Mr. Stewart doing anything for the Government previous to the time he went away in this vessel—had he been in the Government service in any way before? He was, I believe, in the Government employment as master of a vessel here.
254. Then is it not likely that Mr. Stewart got the grants or promises of grants for services he had performed previous to his going away? I cannot recollect anything of that.
255. Was it not usual in those days to give grants to free settlers, or to any person that was able to go on the ground and occupy it? Yes, Governor Macquarie had power to do anything he thought proper.
256. Was not Mr. Stewart a man who was likely to get a grant at that time? I should suppose so.
257. Not taking into consideration at all the services he was to perform when he went away? He could have got a grant if he had applied, without going away I should think. Governor Macquarie would give land to any person who was inclined to go farming, but they were not bound to go on it, though most people did so. Land was often given in compensation for services to the Government.
258. If Mr. Stewart was to be paid in land for the service he was then to perform, he would not get the grant until he performed that service—would he? I should suppose not. I understood that the expedition was proposed to Captain Stewart by Governor Macquarie. I do not know whether it was the case or no, that he was sent for by letter, and he agreed to go, on what terms I cannot say, no further than that I understood from the people that were going with him that they were to have certain grants of land—100 acres a-piece—and also that Captain Stewart was to have a grant; but I cannot say if that was true. Captain Stewart never told me his business at all. I knew no further than I understood from others. It was to be a speculation—looking for cedar—looking for land—and exploring the coast from the Five Islands away to the southward towards Twofold Bay, or somewhere there.
259. By Mr. Stewart: You carried on business as a shipwright at that period? Yes.
260. On your own property? Yes.
261. You were residing near where Mr. Stewart and his family resided? Yes.
262. You still reside on the same property that you were carrying on your business on at that time? Yes.
263. Was it generally supposed that the party were fitted out at the Commissariat Stores? No, the boat was fitted out at my own place, but she went round to the Stores afterwards; what she went for I do not know.
264. The boat was the property of Mr. Stewart? Yes; he paid me for repairing her.
265. It was generally understood, was it not, that the expedition went away by direction of Governor Macquarie? Yes, it was Governor Macquarie that employed Captain Stewart to go on this expedition.
266. If Captain Stewart had a grant of land twelve months before he left, it would not have anything to do with any claim he might have for the work he was to do afterwards? That would be a different case. I do not know whether he had any land before that. If he had that would have nothing to do with the grant he was going to get.
267. If he performed any services he would have an additional grant, irrespective of any grant then existing? Yes, I should suppose so.

Mr. George Peat.

11 Sept., 1863.

Robert Stewart, Esq., M.P., examined:—

268. By the Chairman: You are the Petitioner in the case referred to this Committee? I am.
269. You claim to be heir-at-law to William Stewart, referred to in your Petition? Yes, I am his only surviving son.
270. You state that your father received a promise of a grant of land about 1816, and that in pursuance of that promise he took possession of land near Broken Bay? Yes, as I have been informed—for I was only an infant at that time, only born that year—about that time my father took possession of land at Broken Bay, given to him for some services and information he had given to the Governor of the day. Some years after that I resided on the place stated to have been given to him. It was occupied and I believe kept in possession on the part of my family up to about the latter end of the year 1830, or the beginning of 1831, at which time my mother, having married again, left for a distant part of the country, and the land became abandoned. I made some inquiry a few years after, when I was of age, but could not ascertain that any documents existed in reference to the land. I gave up all further inquiry at the time, considering the land having for some time been unoccupied scarcely entitled me to pursue my claim. I since—a few months ago—ascertained from a source that I felt would justify me in renewing my claim, that my father left the Colony in the service of the Government wholly, and in no way on his own account. I then made application to the Secretary for Lands for a grant of this land so occupied. In reply to that application I was informed that no such land being charted the application could not be complied with; but I was at the same time informed that in the office an authority to take up 200 acres was registered, which authority is before the Committee. Conceiving that the authority might possibly be intended to be used for that locality, I felt that in either case I was justified in petitioning the House. The order so made in 1816 is, as the Committee may see by the form signed by Governor Macquarie, a distinct order for 200 acres of land, but it does not name the locality that I have made my application for; it is stated to be in the district of Five Islands.

271. By Mr. Hart: Did your father receive that promise in consideration of the services he was to perform in surveying the coast? I believe he was authorized to take up this land in the then usual way by the personal authority of the Governor.

272. What was the consideration? I believe he had rendered some information to the Governor in reference to Brisbane Water and some of its branches, which he had examined, and had subsequently had a number of men and freighted timber from there.

273. Do you consider that the evidence which Mr. Peat has given the Committee on the point is correct? I do not. I think Mr. Peat can only give evidence clearly as to repairing the boat, and their going away.

274. Have you any recollection of 100 acres of land being promised to each of the crew of that vessel on their return? I have no recollection of any of the circumstances. I was not old enough at the time to know anything of them; but I have reason to believe they were promised a much larger amount, for I find that Mr. John Rowley, who was to have been one of the party, and only declined going the night before they left, by an order dated June, 1819, received 200 acres of land, as an assistant to Mr. Throsby in making a new communication between the Cowpastures and Bathurst.

275. Had that any reference to this surveying expedition? It had this reference to it, that Mr. Rowley was to be an assistant some time after with my father, and he informed me that the expedition was to occupy months, and that he expected to have been very fully remunerated by the Government.

276. Mr. Rowley's grant appears to have been in consideration of his having performed certain services? Yes; but in consequence of his having received such a grant for such a comparatively small service, he considered that he would have been rewarded proportionately for a service likely to occupy several months, as this was. The first I knew of the order to my father to select 200 acres, which I just now referred to, was when I received the reply to my application in June last. I was not aware of this order before that. Some time after I had made my application, in searching in my endeavour to get the original order authorizing the outfit of my father and party, I ascertained the existence of the grant of 300 acres. That is named at Illawarra. That of course contains, as members will be aware, some additions that were worth, at the time, more than double the amount of the grant itself. It provides for a family, then numbering six, and two Government men who were rationed, at the time equal to 100 acres each. The addition then to the 300 acres would have been equal to 600 acres for the family, and 200 for the men; that can never now be obtained by the family, because the system has passed over.

277. By Mr. Terry: Where was the land located that your father took possession of? That was at Broken Bay. I believe that to have been a distinct grant. I would say further, that from all the information I have received Governor Macquarie did give grants of land about the Hawkesbury that were entered in the books of Mr. Mein, then Deputy Surveyor General, and were not measured or charted for some twenty-five years afterwards. Of these the Government had no proper record, and I believe this grant at Broken Bay was similarly circumstanced. I believe an entry did exist in the books of Mr. Mein, but in consequence of there being no regular register, and my family not continuing to occupy it, it was never measured.

278. Was it valuable ground? It was not particularly valuable. The position was one that would only have been taken up by a seafaring man. It lay in a good position with reference to the harbour of Broken Bay. My family had some cattle there, but it would not run a great number, and that was perhaps one reason why it was not kept in possession by my stepfather's agents. I presume the 200 acres at Illawarra was a distinct grant; and I have no doubt that at that time my father could have sold that land as well as the other 300 acres of land subsequently given. I believe these were both as marketable, in his position, as land at the time could be, because there are no conditions annexed to this grant of 300 acres. Certain persons at that time—soldiers and others—had grants on condition of occupying; others had grants, like Mr. Rowley and Mr. Throsby (who had 1,000 acres), without conditions.

279. Can you name any instances where land was sold in that way? I believe nearly all the sales of that day were made on the strength of promises of grants. I believe your family at this day holds a large amount of land of that description, purchased from the original grantees. I believe my father would have been perfectly at liberty to have disposed of this grant, but it was his intention, when he returned, I believe, to settle down, and take up any other grant his additional services might have entitled him to.

280. A grant would have issued in case of his selling to any other individual? Yes, they would have known of it. This grant never reached the Surveyor General's department.

281. Did your father receive any money consideration from the Government at that time? I believe not. I believe he never got anything from the Government but these two grants. The land he held in Sydney was a purchase. I believe his position would have entitled him to receive various grants of land for himself and family. The delay in making application for grants in these cases arose no doubt from the uncertainty regarding my father's fate. He left Sydney on this expedition a few months after this second grant; and many years passed over before anything was known as to what had become of him. My mother was seven years before she married again, and then without any certainty as to the termination of the party. Many persons thought they would ultimately be found somewhere on the South coast, wrecked, and unable to make their way to Sydney. When my mother married, a new interest was created, and nothing was ever done with respect to these grants.

She

She never made any application, or received any assistance from the Government for her family. Upon finding the second grant I applied to the Secretary for Lands to take such steps as would enable me to get the land. If my mother had made application before the departure of Governor Macquarie, who knew all the circumstances, no doubt she would have got all that was then promised, and something more; but the family were put to inconvenience in a way that no other family probably in the Colony were situated.

R. Stewart,

11 Sept., 1863.

282. By the Chairman: Are you aware whether your mother ever took any steps to have this first grant of 200 acres confirmed to her, or measured? She never did, not being aware of its existence; in the locality they had possession of no land was measured up to the year 1830. I can state that no land was measured within a number of miles of the locality of the grant at Broken Bay up to the year 1830.

283. And therefore there was no possibility of getting it measured before the family had left it? No. A number of farms in that locality were not measured for many years after that; that I am aware of, of my own knowledge.

284. By Mr. Cunneen: When did you make inquiry, in the first instance, of the Government of the day, concerning your father's claim? The only inquiry I made was in the Surveyor General's Department. I caused an inquiry to be made about the year 1837 or 1838, and could find no trace of any promise or documents existing.

285. In 1838 you applied? I did not apply formally, but caused, through a surveyor here, an inquiry and examination of the books to be made, to see what information I could get to ground my application upon.

286. What induced you to apply again—a second time? From having obtained in the mean time the proof of my father going away specially in the Government service.

287. What did you ascertain about the claim on this second application? I then ascertained that a promise of a grant lay in the office for 200 acres.

288. As soon as you ascertained these facts did you take action to get your claim recognized? I petitioned the House.

289. Was it your own fault, or was it on account of the Survey Department not having given you information when you first applied on coming of age, that you did not prosecute the claim then? I should have urged the claim if I had known that it then existed in the office.

290. If you had obtained the information then that you subsequently obtained, would you have then prosecuted your claim? I should.

291. It was solely because, on investigating the matter, you could not get this information, that you did not do so? Yes.

292. By Mr. Forster: When did you first become aware of this claim that you are now making—not the new claim, but the one the Committee is appointed to consider? I only became aware of the fact of the promise for these 200 acres, existing in the reply I received to Mr. Pennington's application in May last.

293. You had no idea at all of its existence before? No.

294. Did you never hear any of your family mention it? My mother at all times stated that the family had a claim against the Government of some kind, and presumed I would be able to get it when I came of age. She said my father had been promised land by the Government, and she felt we would get it.

295. Did she tell you why she had not prosecuted the claim? No.

296. She never placed any evidence respecting it in your possession? There were some papers the contents of which I do not know. When my mother married again, my step-father had authority from Home to take up land, and he was disposed to go to the country when opportunity offered. At this time I was partially residing at Broken Bay, at the place I allude to in my petition, and my mother left in my possession; and they were left with a person named Edwards that had a farm some distance off, some papers in a small case. What they were I do not know; but the case contained, I know, tracings and particulars of some surveys, and some other papers. These remained there until I think about the year 1836.

297. You never looked at them? Not during that period. At that time I was nearly of age, and my seven years apprenticeship to Mr. Hunt had nearly expired. Captain Ascough, the uncle of Sir Charles Nicholson, purchased the farm on which this man Edwards, that had these papers, lived, and he was coming to Sydney in one of the little vessels that traded there; and Edwards thought it a good opportunity to forward this case of papers to me. The vessel was lost on her passage down, and all the parties drowned, so that the contents were lost, whatever they were.

298. You think it likely these papers related to this claim? Probably some of them did.

299. Are you sure they would not have contained evidence adverse to your claim? It is very possible; I do not know what they contained.

300. Can you be certain no substitution was made for the original promise to your father? I feel quite positive he never received any land in substitution; I believe he never, during twenty years or more that he was in the Colony, received anything from the Government in consideration of his services. He was master of a Colonial Government vessel, I believe, for a time, and of course he got his salary in that position, but that was all.

301. You heard the evidence of Mr. Peat;—do you think there is any ground for the statement he makes, that your father was to have received land—the land in question—in return for certain services in surveying the coast? No; I think Mr. Peat confuses that with the idea that he would receive remuneration in land for such services.

302. What is your impression in regard to this grant—was it to be a free grant for no consideration whatever? I believe at that time all persons residing in the Colony received land, if they applied for it.

- R. Stewart, Esq., M.P. 303. It was the custom to give grants to persons coming to the country? Yes.
- 11 Sept., 1863. 304. Perhaps these grants may have been accompanied by conditions of improvement or settlement? Most of them were not. Some of the military had grants on those conditions.
305. Do you think, if your father had got this land, it would have been burdened with any quit rent? I believe not; it would have been perfectly clear I think. I believe he could have sold each of these grants previous to leaving Sydney, and would have received the market price at once. I believe the success of his expedition—as in the case of Mr. Throsby, who received 1,000 acres for much less services than his would have been—would have entitled him to full remuneration for all he might have done for the Government.
306. The grant then was simply a sort of bonus for coming to the country? That was the usual way. I think the grant sets out in its particulars almost clearly what it is. He is assumed to become a settler; and it states that, in consideration of his family, he will have additions that are named.
307. By the Chairman: That is the second grant? Yes.
308. By Mr. Forster: If your mother was cognizant of your claim in any way at all, how came it that she did not prosecute it for this long period? I believe my mother for a long time had hopes of the party returning—up to the time of her marrying again; at all events she never felt sure they would not return.
309. Were the crew of the vessel ever heard of afterwards? The only account I ever saw of their fate was published, by order of the Governor, in a report from Mr. Johnstone, of Annandale, who stated that he had ascertained from the natives of the Clyde River that Mr. Stewart and his party were cut off by the natives of Twofold Bay. They had lost their boat, and were endeavouring to make their way overland, in which endeavour they were cut off. That was a report made to the Government in December, 1821, and published in the Government Orders.
310. Did your mother dispose of any of your father's effects, or treat them as her own property, after these seven years? Yes; she treated all the chattel property as her own.
311. How was it then that she did not think of selling this claim, if it was saleable? My mother never knew of its existence, I believe.
312. I thought you said she was aware of it? She was aware that some promises had been made for services my father had performed.
313. You do not seem to be quite clear why, after the seven years, she did not inquire further into the matter, and prosecute the claim, if there was one? I think then a new interest had arisen; she had married a second husband, and that created a new interest, and she did not perhaps feel that it was her place to persevere in reference to the claim of the former family.
314. You are not positive as to her reason for not doing so? No; she left Sydney shortly after marrying again, and never returned to it, except on one occasion, on a visit.
315. By Mr. Cunneen: At what period did your father leave Sydney? About April, 1820.
316. Was this grant, or promise of grant, made four years before? Yes, in 1816.
317. Then it could not have been on account of services he was going to do after he left Sydney? No, certainly not.
318. The performance or non-performance of the service which he had to do, had nothing to do with this grant? Nothing whatever.

Present:—

MR. ALLEN,		MR. W. FORSTER,
MR. CUNNEEN,		MR. LUCAS,
	MR. SUTHERLAND.

THOMAS HODGES MATE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

The Petitioner, Mr. Robert Stewart, appeared in person.

Mr. William Webb called in and examined:—

- Mr. W. Webb. 319. By the Chairman: Have you been many years in the Colony? Forty-five or forty-six years.
- 25 Sept., 1863. 320. Are you acquainted with the country about the Hawkesbury? I am pretty well. During the first seven years I was in the Colony I was engaged in the boating trade, dealing up the river.
321. Were you acquainted at all with the system of granting lands, or the survey or measurement of lands, in practice in those days? I have taken several people up there, and have selected land for them. I made it my business to look out land for such people as were entitled to it. Some of them stayed there, and others left, not being able to make a living off the land, but I never knew the lands to be measured till Mr. Felton Mathew came up there in about 1830; he was the first surveyor that came there.
322. By Mr. Allen: Did you know Mr. William Stewart, a mariner, many years ago? I remember hearing his name, that is all; I knew there was such a gentleman. I remember his going out, I think for the Government, to look for some of the rivers that were not then open, but it is only from hearsay, and that very loosely. I remember one gentleman, of the name of Adam Clink, having land at the Hawkesbury in 1819. He was taken ill and went to the Castle Hill Mad-house, and during the time he was there some one else else took possession of his land, and he had to get leave to make another selection. His Mr. W. Webb. land was not measured till 1832. A person named Woodbury also, on the north side of the river, did not get his land measured till 1832; I know that because he wanted to mortgage it, and had no title to it.

323. Could he have sold his interest in it? People used to sell their interest in land in that way, but they never could give a clear title till the land was measured.

324. Would residence and occupation at that time entitle them to the land? Yes, I never knew any one to be turned off; all those that remained on the land, or made any improvements, kept the land.

325. And afterwards, when it was surveyed, they got a good title? Yes.

326. By Mr. Stewart: About that part of the country there were no measurements made from the year 1819 till the time you speak of? No; I never knew any measurements made there till then, except at one place—at old Sergeant Webb's—well up the river. He had his land measured, but that was on account of a dispute he had about the land with Governor Macquarie, who sent the Deputy Surveyor, Mr. Mein, to measure it.

327. Between the punt at Wiseman's Ferry and the Heads there were no measurements made till 1830? I never knew any measurements before that. I took a gentleman named Warner, who selected a piece at One Tree Hill, and he lived there ten years, and never had it measured; his wife got it measured, and received the grant afterwards.

328. Then it was no unusual thing for a person who settled in 1816, to find in 1830 that no measurement of his land had taken place? No.

329. Supposing a person had held possession fourteen or fifteen years—would that entitle him to the usual grant? I think if a person resided on the land at all he could have kept it. It was only when he abandoned his land that he got no grant.

330. Do you know a place called Long Island? I do.

331. Were you ever round the passage between that and the main? Yes. I never knew that to be selected for a farm; it is very indifferent land.

332. You do not know of its being occupied? No.

333. Do you recollect any person being resident on the island? No; there was no one living there till beyond Mangrove Creek, twenty-five miles up the river.

334. Do you know how persons, having orders from the Governor to select land, exercised their authority? It was something in this way:—You got an order from the Governor—perhaps a verbal order—or you might attend a meeting, as I am attending here, and be told Mr. So-and-So, your land is granted; then you made a selection where you liked, and applied to Mr. Oxley, and Mr. Oxley or Mr. Mein would give you a piece of paper directing you to select where you liked, and you marked the trees and took possession.

335. Supposing about the period of 1816, a person had the authority of the Governor to take up land in the locality opposite Long Island, that would be all he would have to show for it? The Governor's order would be sent to Mr. Oxley, and would be entered in his books, or in Mr. Mein's, for Mr. Oxley was often away; he was away for twelve months in 1819. At that time land was chiefly selected on the Hawkesbury on account of the water carriage, as bullocks were then very expensive. Mr. Oxley or Mr. Mein would give a memorandum on a piece of paper, mentioning the name of the person entitled to select the land, and the holder of that would describe what locality it was in.

336. That document would be sufficient to hold the land upon? Yes. I rather think it was entered in the surveyor's books at the time.

337. Are you aware that some of the people who selected land on the Hawkesbury in those days were told that there were no entries, except in Mr. Mein's books? It was always understood that the selections were entered in the surveyor's books. Mr. Mein was considered the principal man in Mr. Oxley's absence.

338. After that, when he was out of the Government service, are you aware whether any persons were unable to get any information? Yes, there was always some clamour about it.

339. Owing to some defect in the mode of entry? I cannot say; I think it was from the want of a surveyor. I believe they had no surveyor after Mr. Mein died but Mr. Oxley, till Mr. Felton Mathew came.

340. In the case of an order to select at the Five Islands, as Illawarra was then called, would it be an unusual thing to hold that over for some years? Yes; many persons held their orders over till they got sufficient funds to go and settle; many held land who had no funds to go on it.

341. Then if a man had received an order for land at Illawarra in 1816, and held it over, he would not be debarred from taking it up some years afterwards? No.

342. Then in fact an order to select land remained good for a number of years? Yes, I always considered so, till Governor Darling made an order that all persons holding orders should select their land by a certain time.

343. During Governor Macquarie's time, and for some years, after, his orders were considered valid? Yes.

344. There would have been some difficulty, at that period, in settling immediately at a place like the Five Islands? No. I imagine it was only from want of funds that people did not settle.

345. But if a person did not desire to settle for some years he would not be debarred from selecting his land when he did wish to settle? No.

346. Are you aware that in many cases these orders were sold from one to the other? Yes, I have bought one myself.

Mr. Robert Melville called in and examined:—

- Mr. Robert Melville. 347. By the Chairman: Have you been many years in the Colony? I am a native of the Colony—fifty-nine years of age.
348. Do you know the country about the Hawkesbury? Yes.
- 25 Sept., 1863. 349. Do you recollect anything of the system carried on in the early days of the Colony, from about 1816 to 1820, with respect to the granting of lands and taking them up and surveying them? I do. In those days I think the order went to Mr. Mein, the surveyor—I think he was surveyor at that time, I will not be sure—and he authorized the party it was granted to to take up a certain portion of land.
350. How long was allowed for the measurement of it? I do not think there was any certain time allowed. I know my father had a grant, and it stood a number of years before it was measured; I remember the time of its being measured perfectly well.
351. Do you know whether he had applied to have it measured, and experienced any difficulty in getting it measured? I could not say whether he ever applied to have it measured.
352. You have known parties reside on their land for years without having it measured? Yes, numbers of people at the Hawkesbury and Pitt Water. I do not think there was any one else besides Mr. Mein to measure it; he measured my father's grant, and some others, with the assistance of some working men.
353. Were you acquainted at all with the lower part of the river opposite Long Island? I am particularly acquainted with all of it. I know it all since the year 1820.
354. Do you know of any persons who selected there? Mr. Peat.
355. Do you know where he selected? He selected ten miles up the river, opposite to Mud Island. There was another person by the name of Edwards settled down on a part called Kangaroo Point in those days.
356. Are you aware whether he settled down there on his own account or for any one else? No.
357. Do you know how long he was there? He was there some years; I could not say positively the time; I was going backwards and forwards there regularly at the time.
358. Could you tell about what year he left—anything near the time? I think it must be thirty-seven or thirty-eight years since he left it, more or less.
359. You do not know whether he selected for himself or whether he was sent by any one to take possession? No. He had good farms of his own adjoining Mr. Wiseman's, at Wiseman's Ferry, and he left them and came down to Kangaroo Point, and lived there for some years.
360. Near Mr. Peat's selection? Opposite, on the north side of the river.
361. By Mr. Stewart: Mr. Peat had not selected at that period? No.
362. He purchased since, on the purchase system by auction, in 1831 or 1832? I am not aware whether it was a purchase or a grant.
363. Do you think it was earlier than 1831 or 1832? No.
364. Edwards had then occupied the place many years? Yes, long before Mr. Peat came there.
365. Do you think it was likely a person leaving his own property would have settled down on the place without he felt he had a right to it? I should say not.
366. He would not run the risk of being turned off by the Government—he would not be so likely to do it as a man without means? No, he had good farms of his own.
367. He would not be a likely man to place himself in a position to get into trouble for occupying contrary to the Government regulations? No.
368. Do you recollect the circumstance of my father going out of Sydney? Yes.
369. In about what year? I could not positively state—I think between 1818 and 1820.
370. You knew some of the party that went with him? I knew four besides your father—two young men named Humphreys, a man by the name of Conroy, and your brother.
371. Do you think, if any of the party had ever returned, you would have known of it? I am most sure I should.
372. Did you understand at the time whether they had any connection with the Government in the object of their departure? There were various reports flying about; it was reported that your father was going in search of cedar, and it was reported, also, that he was going on a surveying expedition for the Government. Those were merely the reports that were going about.
373. He had some experience of the coast, so that even to search for cedar he would have been a very suitable person to go? Yes, I should say in those days there was not a more experienced man on the coast.
374. Did you know that Edwards was a seafaring man before he settled? Yes.
375. Are you aware whether he had ever been to sea with my father? No, I could not say.
376. Do you recollect any cattle being on the property at Broken Bay? Yes, at Kangaroo Point.
377. Do you know whether any of those cattle were taken from Sydney? Yes, some of them were young ones your mother sent.
378. Could cattle then be taken there by any other means than by water? I do not think they could.
379. It was a peculiarly isolated place? Yes; I travelled there once overland with a blackfellow, but it was a fearful road.
380. The easiest way to take them was by water? Yes.
381. Can you recollect cattle being there after that? Yes.
382. I suppose you were up and down the river frequently? Yes.
383. Do you recollect my being there? Yes, I recollect your living with Mr. Edwards on the place.

384. You do not know of any land being surveyed about that place—say between 1820 and 1830—up to the time of Mr. Peat going and buying land there? No.
385. Do you know of land having been held at that time by persons who had merely the authority of the Governor to select? Yes, I got one myself. Mr. Robert Melville.
25 Sept., 1863.
386. Did you take up the land, or sell it? Took it up.
387. Could you have held that order over for some time—you were not bound to select at once? I think I got almost one of the last grants that was given—among the last—and when I got the order to select I did so at once. I sent the letter of selection to the Surveyor General's Office, and in about three years after I got notice that the land would be measured, and to attend, if I wished to do so.
388. Supposing my father, some three years before he left, had got authority to take up land, would it be at all an unusual thing if a delay occurred for two or three years before the land was measured? It would be quite as likely as not; I think there was always a delay.
389. Supposing he had authority to take up land at Kiama, there would be some difficulty to get the surveyor there for a year or two, if there was only one surveyor? I do not think Kiama was hardly known anything about at that time much.
390. Then in the case of an authority to select there, it would have been some years before the land was surveyed? Yes.
391. It would have been almost impossible to have it surveyed within a year or two? Yes. If Kiama was known then, it was merely by the sawyers fetching cedar. I brought cedar from Wollongong in the early days.
392. At that time there was very little land surveyed there? There was no land surveyed there; it was all Government land, open to anybody.
393. Those that had authority to take land, unless they resided on it, would not be able to maintain possession—there being no surveyor they could not get it entered on the books? It was not likely.

139, King-street,
9 April, 1863.

Sir,

On behalf of Mr. Robert Stewart, M.P., I have the honor to address you with reference to his claim to a grant of land at Broken Bay, in the Parish of Cowan, and County of Cumberland.

This land, which comprises 500 acres or thereabouts, was originally promised to my client's father by Governor Macquarie, as a reward for services rendered by him with reference to the survey of the navigation of Broken Bay and the estuary of the Hawkesbury. Mr. William Stewart, the father, came to this Colony as a free settler, in the early part of the present century, and was for many years, and up to the time of his decease, the commander of a ship in the Colonial trade; and he was much consulted by Governor Macquarie in matters relating to the navigation of the coast. About the year 1820 Mr. William Stewart was employed by Governor Macquarie to make a survey and exploration of the coast to the southward of Port Jackson. From this voyage he never returned, and, from information furnished to the Government, it is supposed that he and his crew were cut off by the natives; but his fate was never clearly ascertained.

The promise of the land in question is presumed, as was common at that day, to have been a verbal one; in fact a license to occupy, with the promise of a grant if improvements were effected. Mr. Stewart took possession of the land about the year 1816, and effected various improvements thereon in the way of fencing, and erection of huts and stockyards upon the land, and went to considerable expense in transporting stock to it, which he depastured thereupon. Mr. Stewart continued in possession and occupation of the land until the date of his last and fatal expedition in the service of the Colonial Government in 1820. Upon his father's disappearance my client took possession of the land (about 1822), and continued thereon some seven or eight years, when he quitted it in consequence of the removal of his family to another part of the Colony. He, however, left some persons in occupation on his behalf, and the land never was in fact actually abandoned. Its isolated position placed it out of the track of Government surveyors, which accounts for its never having been charted in the name of him or his family. The land is still unoccupied, and nearly the whole of it is still unalienated.

My client is the eldest and only surviving son, and heir-at-law of the original promisee.

Of Mr. William Stewart's original occupation, there does not appear to be any record extant; but that he was not a squatter upon, or occupier without license of Crown land, is shewn by the fact that there was a continuous occupation for nearly fourteen years by him and his son, and that at a time when the law was strictly enforced against trespassers upon Crown land, no attempt was ever made to dispossess them. My client, however, rests his claim upon much higher ground than this, which pre-supposes that his father made an illicit encroachment upon Crown land, of which the authorities were lax enough in the geographical ignorance of those days to permit his usurpation. He makes his claim on the ground that his father had rendered important and acknowledged services to the Government, for which he and his family have never had to this day the customary requital of a grant of land, and that he actually lost his life in the Government service. He never had the opportunity of urging his claim through his having been cut off in the prime of life; and had his life been spared to do so, the authorities would probably have at once admitted it, as they oftentimes admitted claims far less meritorious.

The

The land in question forms a belt, bounded on one side by a precipitous range of hills, and on the other by the back water of the Hawkesbury, and directly facing Long Island, as shewn in the accompanying sketch. According to the best of his recollection, my client occupied all the accessible land between the two points marked with a cross in the diagram.

I shall be happy to furnish any further particulars in which you may consider my statement to be deficient, and to substantiate it, if required.

I have, &c.,
W. G. PENNINGTON.

The Honorable
The Secretary for Lands.

No such order is recorded, nor can it be discovered that such land was ever measured, or even selected, in the situation referred to. This application cannot, therefore, be entertained.

I may mention incidentally, that an order was given by Governor Macquarie for 200 acres, on the 16th May, 1816, to one William Stewart, and that I find, on reference to the original order of Governor Macquarie, that Stewart was a mariner, and that he desired to take the land at the Five Islands. It cannot be found that any land was measured or granted on this order, and it may be, should the indefinite naming of the locality be deemed no selection, as it really is not—that that order became cancelled under the notices of the 3rd October, 1826, and 3rd October, 1827.

W.R.D.

Sur. Gen. Office,
29 April, 1863.

Inform Mr. Stewart of the state of the case.—JOHN R. 14 May.

Pitt-street, Sydney,
23 April, 1863.

Sir,

I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy of an authority, granted by His Excellency Governor Macquarie in the year 1819, authorizing the issue to my father, the late William Stewart, master mariner, of a grant for (300) three hundred acres of land, and to request that you will be pleased to cause such steps shall be taken as will enable me now to obtain a grant in my favour, I being the only surviving son and heir to the William Stewart alluded to.

I have, &c.,
ROBT. STEWART.

The Hon. John Robertson,
Minister for Public Lands.

Secretary's Office,
22 February, 1819.

Sir,

I have it in command to inform you, that His Excellency the Governor has received your memorial, dated 18th instant, with the affidavit therein referred to; and His Excellency, in consequence of the statement therein contained, and in consideration of your having a numerous family to support, desires me to inform you, that he will give directions for a grant of 300 acres, situated in the district of Illawarra, to be made to you; and that in your capacity of a settler, in consequence of this grant, you and your family, and two Government assigned men, will be victualled from the King's Stores, for twelve months.

I am, &c.,
J. T. CAMPBELL.

Mr. Wm. Stewart,
Master Mariner and Free Settler, Sydney.

THE order, of which a copy is attached, is not recorded in this office, and Mr. Stewart might be invited to produce the original. It obviously points to the same intention to grant land to Mr. William Stewart, mariner, to which reference is made in my blank cover report of the 29th ultimo. The production of the document, of which a copy is now appended, places the claim of Mr. Stewart, notwithstanding the lapse of time, in a more recognizable position.

Sur. Gen. Office,
29 May, 1863.

W.R.D.

Pitt-street, 11 July, 1863.

Sir,

I have the honor of addressing you on the subject of my application, dated 28 May, in reference to a grant of land given by Governor Macquarie to my father, W. Stewart, on the 22nd February, 1819, and to request that I may be favoured with your decision at your earliest convenience.

I have, &c.,
ROBT. STEWART.

The Honorable
The Minister for Lands.

If this case were prima facie a good one, it would of course be necessary, as suggested, to inquire into the genuineness of the alleged order, of which the copy is produced. But I do not think the claim is prima facie a good one—the mere lapse of time alone, now closely verging on half a century, ought to place Mr. Stewart out of Court. Nor do I quite perceive in what sense, as stated by the Surveyor General, this claim is now more recognizable than it was before. The whole matter amounts to this—that Mr. Stewart claims 500 acres of land on the Hawkesbury River, and all he has to shew for it, is an alleged promise to his father of 300 acres (never selected, and therefore void) at Illawarra.—30 July.

The Assembly has appointed a Select Committee to inquire into this matter.—JOHN R.

(Paper handed in by Mr. R. Stewart, M.P., 20 October, 1863.)

Department of Lands,
Sydney, 30 May, 1863.

Sir,

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 9th ultimo, on the subject of Mr. Robert Stewart's claim to a grant of land at Broken Bay, in the parish of Cowan, and county of Cumberland, stated by you to have been originally promised to his father, by Governor Macquarie, as a reward for services rendered by him with reference to the survey of the navigation of Broken Bay and the estuary of the Hawkesbury, I am directed by the Secretary for Lands to inform you, that no such order is recorded, nor can it be discovered that such land was ever measured or even selected in the situation referred to, and that, therefore, Mr. Stewart's application cannot be complied with.

2. I am, at the same time, to enclose an extract from a report from the Acting Surveyor General, relative to an order which was given by Governor Macquarie, for 200 acres, on the 16th May, 1816, to one William Stewart.

W. G. Pennington, Esq.,
139, King-street.

I have, &c.,
S. B. WARBURTON,
(For the Under Secretary.)

Extract referred to.

" I MAY mention incidentally, that an order was given by Governor Macquarie for 200 acres, on the " 16th May, 1816, to one William Stewart, and that I find, on reference to the original order of Governor
" Macquarie, that Stewart was a mariner, and that he desired to take the land at the Five Islands.
" It cannot be found that any land was measured or granted on this order, and it may be, should " the indefinite naming of the locality be deemed no selection—as it really is not—that that order
" became cancelled under the notices of the 3rd October, 1826, and 3rd October, 1827."

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

ROBERT STEWART.

(PETITION—CLAIM TO LAND AT ILLAWARRA.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 5 January, 1864.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The following Petition of Robert Stewart,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner's father, William Stewart, arrived in this Colony during the time that the British Government authorized the Governor to grant land, and the assistance of Government assigned men to rations from the King's Stores, to persons settling in the Colony with their families.

That about the year 1819, the said William Stewart made the usual application for a grant of land, which application was complied with ; but previously to the land being measured and charted, he was specially employed by Governor Macquarie to make a survey and exploration of the coast to the southward of Port Jackson, and that from this voyage he never returned, he and his crew being either lost at sea or cut off by the natives.

That your Petitioner, shortly after coming of age, in the year 1838, caused an inquiry to be made in the department of the Surveyor General, for any record of a promise of a grant in favour of the said William Stewart, but he could not at that time obtain any information on the subject.

That a few months since, your Petitioner ascertained for the first time certain facts in reference to the departure of his father from Sydney in the service of the Government ; he applied to the Colonial Secretary for copies of any correspondence that had taken place between the Government and the said William Stewart about the year 1819, and obtained the following, which is a copy of a record in that office :—

“ Sir,

“ I have it in command to inform you that His Excellency the Governor has received your memorial dated 18th instant, with the affidavit therein referred to ; and His Excellency, in consequence of the statement therein contained, and in consideration of your having a numerous family to support, desires me to inform you that he will give directions for a grant of 300 acres, situated in the District of Illawarra, to be made to you, and that in your capacity of a settler, in consequence of this grant, you and your family, and two Government assigned men, will be victualled from the King's Stores for twelve months.

“ I am, &c.,
“ J. T. CAMPBELL.

“ Mr. Wm. Stewart,

“ Master mariner and free settler, Sydney.”

That your Petitioner being fully satisfied that this promise was still in full force, to the extent of the quantity of land named, immediately made the following application to the Minister for Lands :—

“ 28 April, 1863.

“ Sir,

“ I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy of an authority granted by His Excellency Governor Macquarie, in the year 1819, authorizing the issue to my father, the late William Stewart, master mariner, of a grant for (300) three hundred acres of land, and to request that you will be pleased to cause such steps shall be taken as will enable me to obtain a grant in my favour, I being the only surviving son and heir of the William Stewart alluded to.

“ I have, &c.,
“ ROBT. STEWART.

“ The Hon. John Robertson,

“ Minister for Public Lands.”

That no reply having been made thereto, your Petitioner sent the following letter :—

“ Sir,

“ I have the honor of addressing you on the subject of my application dated 28th April, in reference to a grant of land given by Governor Macquarie to my father, Wm. Stewart, on the 22nd February, 1819, and to request that I may be favoured with your decision at your earliest convenience.

“ I have, &c.,

“ ROBT. STEWART.

“ The Honorable the Minister for Lands.”

That your Petitioner never received any reply from the Minister for Lands to the foregoing application.

That your Petitioner believes there is no instance of any promise of a grant similar to the promise made in the foregoing letter of 22nd February, 1819, having been declared forfeited, but that the Government has, on the contrary, at all times, recognized and fulfilled such promises whenever the fulfilment thereof was applied for.

That your Petitioner is the only surviving son of the late William Stewart.

Your Petitioner prays that your Honorable House will take the foregoing premises into your favourable consideration, and grant such inquiry into the facts as may be deemed necessary to the furtherance of the ends of justice.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

ROBT. STEWART.

CLAIM OF ROBERT STEWART TO LAND IN ILLAWARRA.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, for whose consideration and report was referred, on the 16th February last, “the Petition of Robert Stewart, presented by Mr. Tighe on the 22nd December, 1863,—‘with power to send for persons and papers’”—before whom, on the 18th of the same month, Robert Stewart obtained “leave to appear personally, or by Counsel, or Agent,” and “to produce and give evidence”—and to whom, on the 23rd of the same month, was referred the “Report from the Select Committee on the Petition of ‘Robert Stewart,’ brought up on the 20th October last,”—have agreed to the following Report:—

Your Committee having examined the Witnesses named in the margin,* and the documents herewith appended to the evidence, are of opinion that sufficient evidence has been adduced to shew that a grant of 300 acres of land, at Illawarra, was, in the year 1819, unconditionally promised, by the authority of Governor Macquarie, to the Petitioner’s father, William Stewart.

* W. Elyard, Esq.
W. R. Davidson, Esq.
M. Fitzpatrick, Esq.
Mr. R. Driver, senior.
Mr. R. McIntosh.
Mr. R. Melville.
A. C. Budge, Esq.
R. Stewart, Esq., M.P.
J. Rowley, Esq.

It appears to your Committee that shortly after the grant was promised, William Stewart was employed by the Government to command a vessel engaged in an exploring expedition of the coast, and that while so engaged, he, with his crew, was lost at sea.

It further appears to your Committee that the Petitioner, upon attaining his majority, in the year 1836, made inquiry for any record of a promise for a grant to his father, which his surviving parent led him to believe was likely to be found in the Government Offices; at that time no such record could be found, but subsequently (a few months ago) documents were accidentally discovered to be in the hands of the Government, which, in the opinion of your Committee, clearly prove that the grant before mentioned was promised.

Your Committee, therefore, believing that the said promise was not carried out, nor any compensation given in lieu thereof, beg to recommend the Petitioner to the favourable consideration of the Government.

ATKINSON A. P. TIGHE,
Chairman.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

CLAIM OF ROBERT STEWART TO A GRANT OF LAND AT ILLAWARRA.

FRIDAY, 19 FEBRUARY, 1864.

Present :—

MR. TIGHE,
MR. MORRIS,
MR. MORRICE,MR. RAPER,
MR. DALGLEISH,
MR. LOVE,

MR. SADLEIR.

ATKINSON ALFRED P. TIGHE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

The Petitioner, Mr. Robert Stewart, appeared in person.

William Elyard, Esq., Principal Under Secretary, called in and examined :—

1. By Mr. Stewart: Have you the original of a document containing the promise of a grant of land to William Stewart, dated 22nd February, 1819? No; all that could be traced in the Colonial Secretary's Office was the record of a letter, dated 22nd February, 1819, a copy of which I brought to a Committee before which I was examined some time ago. The Committee were, however, already in possession of a copy, as explained in my evidence given on the 11th September, 1863. W. Elyard,
Esq.
19 Feb., 1864.
2. Will you state the purport of that letter? It is addressed to "Mr. Wm. Stewart, Master Mariner and Free Settler, Sydney," and states that, in consideration of his having a numerous family to support, directions would be given for a grant of 300 acres in the District of Illawarra, to be made to him; and that, in his capacity as a settler, in consequence of this grant, Mr. Stewart and his family and two Government assigned men would be victualled on the King's stores for twelve months.
3. That document would not have appeared without the authority of the Governor, I presume? No, it is written by direction of the then Governor.
4. Are there any other documents bearing on that promise? None that I am aware of.
5. Some other papers were handed in? Not by me; they must have been obtained from the Lands Department, to which the papers, connected with the claim, that could be traced, were transferred.
6. You hold in your hand an application made by George Williams? It purports to be by George Williams, dated 28th March, 1827.

- W. Elyard, Esq.
19 Feb., 1864.
7. That is the original of a letter recorded in your office? Yes; but it is one of those I have referred to as having been transferred to the Ministry of Lands.
  8. Will you state the purport of it? Mr. Williams applies for a copy of the authority for 300 acres of land, promised to Mr. William Stewart on or about the 1st day of January or February, 1819.
  9. Is that (referring to another document) a letter from the Surveyor General to the Colonial Secretary, in reference to the application of Mr. Williams? It is a memorandum on the subject, from the late Mr. Oxley, who was Surveyor General, reporting on the application of Mr. Williams.
  10. Is there also a reply to Mr. Williams? I see by a note on it, that an answer was sent to Mr. Williams, requesting him to shew his authority from Mr. Stewart for making the application, and also to state what proof he had of Mr. Stewart's being alive.
  11. Would you assume that that reply indicated a willingness on the part of the Government of the day to acknowledge the claim, if shewn to come direct from Mr. Stewart? No, I should not conceive that it did so; it simply required further information. In the mean time, I suppose, any question affecting the claim to the land would not come under consideration.
  12. If it had been considered that the period had elapsed for making the application, would they not have made such a reply at the time? That does not follow, because the whole of the circumstances under which the application was made were not before the Government.
  13. It is evident that then they considered it an open claim? Yes, if it can be so viewed, from no opinion being expressed on it.
  14. Do you know of any case of a similar promise coming through your department? I cannot state any from memory; but as a general rule, all claims were barred by non-selection under the Orders issued on the subject, dated 3rd October, 1826, and 3rd October, 1827.
  15. Will you look at the Order of 3rd October, 1826, and point out what part of it would bar this claim? It states that, on the failure of persons to notify their selections by a certain date to the Surveyor General, they will be considered to have forfeited their claim.
  16. Does that allude to a promise of a grant? It alludes to persons who were authorized to select grants without purchase.
  17. Does the whole effect of that not bear on promises under the Government of Sir Thomas Brisbane, and not apply to grants from previous Governors? I do not see that there is any exception. There is also an Order of the 5th April, 1827, which is referred to in the notice of 3rd October, 1827.
  18. You cannot call to mind any case that has been disposed of upon an order of the Governor of this character? I do not recollect them, but I have no doubt there are many.
  19. By Mr. Morris: Have there been any other applications, similar to this of Mr. Stewart, ever before your office in former days? I believe there have been such applications.
  20. Do you know of any that have been granted? I cannot state from memory. The land business has been transferred for some years to another department, and, of course, cases of recent date, for dealing with which precedents would be referred to, have not come under my notice.
  21. Can you inform the Committee whether the late Mr. Stewart's family ever received any consideration on account of the loss of his life in the Government service? I cannot.
  22. Could you ascertain? I do not know how it is to be ascertained; they may have received land without any record being in the Colonial Secretary's Office.
  23. If his family made any application to the Government, for consideration on account of the loss of the life of the head of the family, surely that application must have been made through the Colonial Secretary's Office? If made at any recent date but before the formation of a Department of Lands, it would; but formerly applications may have been made to and dealt with by the Governor, without being recorded in the Secretary's Office.
  24. If anything had been granted to Mr. Stewart's family, there must have been some record of it in the Colonial Secretary's Office? This does not follow. Land may have been given without any record of it being in the Colonial Secretary's Office.
  25. Could you inform the Committee how they could ascertain? Not unless it is shewn in any way in the Surveyor General's Office. If land had been given in compensation for any service, the order might express that it was in consideration of such service; but land might have been given without stating the reasons for granting it.
  26. By Mr. Sadleir: If money compensation had been given, it would go through your office? If there had been any correspondence on the subject it probably would; but I am not aware of any. I desired that all documents connected with this claim should be searched for; but the only one which could be found, besides those transferred to the Lands Office, was the letter I have already referred to.
  27. By the Chairman: A Mr. Williams, in the year 1827, applies to the Government for a copy of the original order to select the land, and there is a note by one of the officials, to the effect that if he has occupied the land a copy may be given to him—it may be assumed he has a right to a copy, I suppose that means—but that if he has not occupied it, it may be presumed he merely wishes to dispose of the order. Might we not learn from this that, in the year 1827, this order was a saleable article, and had a merchantable value, in the opinion of the writer of that note? I think it is very likely that a person's interest or supposed interest in any particular thing might have been disposed of; but of course the person purchasing under such circumstances would take the risk of his obtaining it.
  28. By Mr. Morris: By whom was that memorandum made? By General Darling, the Governor.
  29. Surely it is evidence on the face of it that, in the year 1827, that order was available to whoever had a right to receive it? You will see that reference was made to the Surveyor General for report, and Mr. Williams was called on to shew whether he had any authority from Mr. Stewart for making the application.

30. Is it not clear from that minute, that the proclamation of 1826 was not supposed to operate against that land order? It implies an impression on the mind of the Governor, I conceive, that such documents were sometimes used improperly; and that if there was any reason to assume this to be the intention of Mr. Williams, the copy should not be given. If he was in the occupation of the land, and required it in support of his claim, there would have been no objection to his having a copy.

W. Elyard,
Esq.

19 Feb., 1864.

31. By the Chairman: Supposing the original promise had become void in consequence of these proclamations, do you think in that case the Government would have taken the trouble to inquire what authority Mr. Williams had for making the application? The claim of Mr. Stewart was not precisely under consideration at the time, but the application of Mr. Williams to be furnished with a copy of a letter addressed to Mr. Stewart. I do not think that involved any opinion with reference to the claim of Mr. Stewart.

32. By Mr. Stewart: The reply of the Surveyor General does not in any way indicate that the claim had come forward? He merely states that an order was given for land, that Mr. Stewart was drowned many years ago, and that he believed he intended to take his land at Illawarra.

Walker Rannie Davidson, Esq., Surveyor General, called in and examined:—

33. By Mr. Stewart: Do you recollect an application being made, dated 28th April last, by myself? Yes.

34. Was anything done in your office in reference to it? I think I reported on the matter.

35. Do you remember a further application, dated 11th July, being forwarded to your department? Yes.

W. R.
Davidson,
Esq.

19 Feb., 1864.

36. Are you aware that to those two applications no reply was ever made to me? I am not aware, but I think there is a minute of Mr. Robertson's, saying that the Assembly had appointed a Select Committee to inquire into this matter.

37. Do you know of any case where a promise similar to this has been refused? I do not know of any promise being refused, not at this moment.

38. You think, on the face of it, it bears all the appearance of a promise that would, in the ordinary course of things, be fulfilled? Yes, I think it is a just claim, and appears never to have been satisfied.

39. There would be proof in your department if it had been satisfied? We have searched very carefully, and find no proof that it has been satisfied.

40. By Mr. Morris: Do you know of any application similar to this having been granted? I cannot recall any case of the kind. When the Court of Claims was established, many claims were put through that Court.

41. By Mr. Stewart: Do you know of any claim, where an original authority to select existed, that was passed through the Court of Claims? I know of none.

42. No instance came under your notice of any claim having been refused? No.

43. By Mr. Sadleir: This order of April 5th, 1827, seems to be an order that applicants must send in to the Surveyor General the situation of their land, otherwise they forfeit it? There was a notice of that kind.

44. Would this grant come under that order? No doubt it was intended that the lands ought to have been selected within a certain period.

45. By Mr. Stewart: Has it come under your notice that persons were at that period simply told verbally to go and select? No, I think it was generally accompanied by an order. It is probable the order was given when the party had examined the locality where he was desirous of making the selection. Probably he might receive the promise of a grant, and be allowed some time to examine any localities where he would select.

46. By the Chairman: Referring to the words of the original promise: "The Governor * * * desires me to inform you that he will give directions for a grant of 300 acres, situated in the District of Illawarra, to be made to you"—Does it appear from that, that he had the privilege of choice, or that the Government might have said, "You shall have this particular 300 acres and no other"? I do not think that after they had fixed upon the locality, they could change it without the authority of the Government.

47. By Mr. Morris: Do you think it was a specific portion of land he was to have? I do not think so. The selections were made and described by the parties as nearly as possible, and they were pencilled on the maps as near the localities as possible, until the lines were afterwards determined by the surveyor. It was almost like free selection in the present day. Of course sometimes confusion arose when the lines came to be marked on the ground.

48. By Mr. Stewart: In point of fact, the person in whose favour that promise was made could have selected anywhere in that district? Yes.

49. And the surveyor would give him the quantity in any part of that district? Yes, if there were no other objection to it.

50. By the Chairman: That is not exactly an authority to select—it is an absolute promise of a grant? I think so.

51. By Mr. Morris: Therefore the Government themselves, according to that authority, were bound to have selected the land for Mr. Stewart—and we can well understand that Mr. Stewart, being a mariner, would be likely to have few opportunities of selecting it for himself—It would seem that the Government were bound to select it for him—does that appear to you? I do not know about the Government; the surveyor might have had authority to select for him.

- W. R. Davidson, Esq.
19 Feb., 1864.
52. Does it not appear to you that, according to this promise, the Government, through their officer, were bound to have selected the land for him? The letter says, directions would be given for a grant of the land.
53. Then is it not clear that the Government have neglected to do what they promised to do? Yes, it would appear they ought to have taken action in the matter.

Michael Fitzpatrick, Esq., Under Secretary for Lands, called in and examined:—

- Michael Fitzpatrick, Esq.
19 Feb., 1864.
54. By Mr. Stewart: Do you recollect the circumstance of an application made by me, dated 28th April, coming under your notice? I believe I saw it as it passed through the office.
55. Do you know any case in which the promise of a grant, similar to the one that application is made to carry out, being refused? There have been thousands of cases of the kind.
56. That have been refused? Yes.
57. Can you name one? No, I cannot at this moment. It was, I might almost say, of daily occurrence in days gone by, dating back to the regulations issued by Governor Darling for disposing of such claims.
58. You cannot give us any instance? No, not without searching for it.
59. From recollection you do not know of a case you can name? No; it is twenty or twenty-five years ago since the cases were frequent. My late experience has had nothing to do with promises of that kind.
60. You only speak from what you suppose has occurred? It was a common practice to deal with cases of this kind under those regulations. General Darling, shortly after his arrival in this country, issued a notice—a sort of warning—to all persons having claims to grants of land, that where they had not made their selections they were to do so by a certain date, within twelve months; and at the end of twelve months, he issued another notice, which had the effect of abrogating all these old claims, where they had not been made within the period prescribed.
61. Did you see a second application from me, dated Pitt-street, 11th July? Yes, I have no doubt I saw the original of it.
62. Are you aware that neither of these was ever replied to? No, I am not. There was a reply, I think, sent to your first letter; I believe this instruction of Mr. Robertson was acted upon—"Inform Mr. Stewart of the state of the case. 14th May."
63. Are you aware of the second application having received a reply? I think it very likely; I am not sure. There has been no decision by the Minister since, because the case has been before Parliament.
64. Is this notice, bearing date 3rd October, 1826, one of the regulations you allude to? Yes, that is the first one.
65. Can you point out any part of that, in your estimation, annulled the grant of Governor Macquarie? I believe that this is what the practice of late years has been founded on, taken in conjunction with the subsequent notice of 3rd October, 1827, which indicates the intentions of the Government as follows:—"It is hereby notified, that twelve months having now elapsed since the date of the notice above referred to, any authority for receiving land granted anterior to 3rd October, 1826, which has not been acted on, will, according to the intention expressed in the said notice, be considered to be cancelled, and consequently will not be acted upon."
66. That bears altogether upon the first notice? It refers to it. It states that certain warning having been given, it is the intention of the Government to act up to the former notice; and it has been acted upon from that time downwards.
67. What I wish to get at is, where that bears on a direct grant, or promise of a grant, to any person—whether it is not directed to secondary grants under Sir Thomas Brisbane? It alludes to Sir Thomas Brisbane's grants, because that was the then preceding administration. But the second notice is general, and alludes to all.
68. By Mr. Morris: Will you read the other notice? (Notice of 3rd October, 1826, read as follows):—"Colonial Secretary's Office, October 3, 1826.—It being necessary to complete the arrangements for the 'granting and sale of lands,' with as little delay as possible, His Excellency the Governor is pleased to direct as follows, viz.:—1st. Persons who received authority from the late Governor Sir Thomas Brisbane to purchase lands, and who have not yet notified to Government the situation and boundaries of the land they wish to obtain, are required to do so by the 1st day of January next, or the authority to purchase will be considered void. 2nd. Persons who were authorized to receive grants without purchase, and who have not yet notified the situation and boundaries of the land they may have made choice of, are required to lay before the Land Board, by the 1st November next, satisfactory proof that they possess the necessary means to stock or bring the land into cultivation, according to the scale laid down in paragraph 10 of the Regulations, No. 35, dated the 5th ultimo, in default of which the authority will be considered as cancelled. Should the proof of their capital be satisfactory, they will immediately receive authority to select the land, the situation of which must be notified to the Surveyor General by the 1st of January next, in failure of which they will be considered to have forfeited their claim. 3rd. Persons who have not paid the stipulated deposit for lands which they have agreed to purchase, or who have not complied with the conditions on which grants have been made to them, need not apply for additional land, as the due fulfilment of the engagements they have entered into will be an indispensable preliminary to further indulgence.—By His Excellency's Command, ALEXANDER M'LEAY." Now, by way way of explanation, I beg to remark that the first paragraph of this has special reference to Sir Thomas Brisbane, because under his administration alone were these authorities to purchase granted. There is one clause devoted entirely to purchases. Then the second clause is general, and is limited to no date or administration in particular.

Michael Fitzpatrick,
Esq.

19 Feb., 1864.

69. By Mr. Stewart: The Governor's name having been previously used? To designate a particular class of cases. One clause relates to purchases authorized by Sir Thomas Brisbane, the other to orders to select grants of land without purchase. As a rule it became a sort of formula in the department, that the first action taken with reference to an alleged claim to an old grant was this: Ask the Surveyor General whether there is a record for the authority to select?—Secondly, was any selection made? If he said there was an authority and no selection, it was at once considered cancelled, and the letter in reply to the applicant became almost a stereotyped letter, that under the Regulations of October, 1826 and 1827, the grant was cancelled; and this has been a start point for all Governments from that time downwards.

70. Do you know of any instance recorded in the Colonial Secretary's Office, of a grant being cancelled through that? I cannot recollect particular instances, because they are so numerous. If there had been a solitary case I could remember it perhaps.

71. Can you recollect any case where the documents relating to it existed only in the office of the Colonial Secretary, and of which you had no record in the department of which you are Under Secretary? We have no records of any of these grants in my department. There are numbers of cases where there is no record except what is called the Order Book in the Surveyor General's Office. The Lands Office has no record of any of these promises. The Survey Office only has a record of them.

72. Have you had any applications for a grant, when the documents on which the application is founded are to be found only in the Colonial Secretary's Office, and of which there is no record in your department? I look upon the Lands and Survey Offices as separate departments. If you ask whether I know of any case where the documents appear for the first time from the Colonial Secretary's Office, and where there is no record to be found in the Survey Office, I answer that I do not.

73. Do you know of any instance of a document similar to this having been produced, and an application made upon it, and you have had no record in your department? Every application of the kind that can have come up since the Lands Department was created must have been of that character. We have no correspondence relating to these old grants except what has been handed over from the Colonial Secretary's Office. The record is in the Order Book in the Survey Office.

74. Have you any record of this? I am aware there is a record of a promise to your father.

75. Is there any record of the promise of a grant of 300 acres? I think the Surveyor General reports that there is an order in the office for that area.

76. In point of fact, both the date, quantity, and name of the district, differ? The name of the district differs, but it is the same locality. What is now called Illawarra used to be called the Five Islands.

77. This promise is dated in 1819, and the quantity is 300 acres at Illawarra, whereas the order produced by the Surveyor General is dated in 1816, and the quantity is 200 acres at the Five Islands—? Which is the same locality as the other.

78. By Mr. Morris: You do not know that it is the same man? I think it extremely probable it is.

79. By the Chairman: In the notices of 3rd October, 1826, 5th April, 1827, and 3rd October, 1827, do you notice any distinction between an authority to select and a claim to purchase land—does it make any distinction between that and an absolute promise of a grant, the Governor having given directions for a grant to be issued for a specific quantity of land? I notice no difference between an absolute promise and what you call an authority to select; they are the same things. The notice of 1827 deals with the whole of these. It seemed to be the intention to make a clean board of all outstanding cases; and that is how the Lands Department has always read it. It is our start point.

80. It was the custom of those days to give authority to certain persons to go and select land. After they had selected the land they gave the descriptions in to the Government Office. Three several notices were given referring to these authorities, saying that unless the selections were given in by a certain date they would become void. How were these authorities to select granted—were they granted in this manner, that the Governor would give directions for a grant of so many acres to be made to the party applying, at a certain place? It is a specific number of acres always, but not a specific place, only a district, that is named.

81. If any one went to the Governor and asked for authority to select land, would the Governor comply with that request by saying, I will give directions that a grant shall be issued to you for so much land? That promise was always recorded in the Survey Office, and the man had the land, subject to the regulations of the time.

82. This seems to be an absolute promise that he would give such a direction? That of course is qualified by the regulations of the time. He never did give such directions.

83. By Mr. Stewart: They never reached your office? As far as the Surveyor General's Office is concerned, there is no record of any such authority for any grant of the kind.

84. By the Chairman: Now we will suppose this grant of land in question had been made void by these notices, how would you account for this fact, that a certain person, in the year 1827, named George Williams, represented himself as the agent of this William Stewart, and applied to have a copy of this original promise given to him, and that the Governor thereupon noted that, if this person had occupied the land, a copy might be given to him, but if not, that it might be presumed he merely wished to dispose of the order. If the Governor

Michael Fitzpatrick,

19 Feb., 1864.

Governor did not recognize that order as valid at that time, and liable to be fulfilled when called upon, why did he consider that it was a merchantable commodity and might be sold in the market. If it had no value, it could not have been sold in the way the Governor seems to suppose it would be? I think if a certified copy of that order had been given by the Colonial Secretary of the time, any unwary person would buy it as a merchantable commodity; but I would point out that General Darling looked upon the fact of land being occupied as prima facie evidence that the order was still good; because the land could not have been occupied unless selected, and the fact of occupation would have been held to be, in all human probability, selection; whereas, if it had not been occupied the order would have been of no use; therefore General Darling knew what he was about when he wrote that minute.

85. Then this person, Williams, is further called upon to prove by what authority he represents Mr. Stewart, and what proof he has of Mr. Stewart being still alive. If the thing was void in consequence of these proclamations, why would the Governor call upon him to shew his authority? For this reason: that if the land was occupied, prima facie the land was selected, and the party would be called upon to make out his case; but when Williams comes and asks for the document, the Governor very naturally asks what is his interest in asking for it.

86. It was not occupied? I do not know; but if it had been occupied, then, prima facie, the claim was good. Then came the next question:—What right had Williams to ask for a copy?—They seem to have suspected some trick, and were on their guard in dealing with him.

87. By Mr. Stewart: You will see by the memorandum of the Surveyor General, reporting on Williams' application, that the Governor was aware of the position of the matter? —

88. By Mr. Dalgleish: Does not that letter of the Surveyor General, taken in conjunction with the minute of the Governor, alter your opinion of the case? No, it does not alter my opinion of the case. Do you mean that the Governor had data here to see at once that the case was invalid?

89. No, the Governor had data to shew that William Stewart had a promise, and he seems to have been willing to recognize it if Mr. Stewart was alive? I think it shews that Mr. Stewart, if he had been alive, would have been called upon to make out his case, to shew that he had made a selection. I do not think any Government would have decided the case, as it then stood, absolutely against Mr. Stewart, without giving him an opportunity of shewing that he had made a selection.

90. Did you give any evidence in the case of James Ralfe, a surveyor, that came before this House? I do not remember it.

91. Did you give any evidence in the case of Mr. Sims Bell? Yes.

92. Was that case similar to this? No, not at all; it was a case of a different class.

93. Would the same proclamation not bear on Mr. Sims Bell's case? Perhaps it would, but I thought it was barred without reference to that; it was a weaker case even than this.

94. Is this your note:—"If this case were prima facie a good one" and so on? It is.

95. I wish to call your attention to these words:—"But I do not think the case is prima facie a good one; the mere lapse of time alone—now closely verging on half a century—ought to place Mr. Stewart out of Court." Do you not think these documents dated in 1827, the application of a person professing to represent Mr. Stewart, the note of the Governor, and these other documents, shew that the claim may be considered to have been made at any rate in the year 1827? I do not. When I wrote that minute I had not these papers, but I do not think they alter the case at all, because this does not come from Mr. Stewart, or any one belonging to Mr. Stewart. For anything shewn to the contrary, it may be an attempt on the part of some person to get a grant wrongfully.

96. It is a claim set up by a person purporting to represent Mr. Stewart, in 1827, whether rightly or wrongly? I can hardly see that. These papers were not in my department until after the Committee sat, and therefore it is probable if I had seen them I would have qualified that language and alluded to this matter. But it does not alter my opinion of the case at all.

97. How long may a claim be in abeyance, supposing the party to be a minor? I cannot say that; that is a question of law.

98. You have given your opinion on a point of law in this minute? No, not on the point of law, but on the individual case. I am prepared to give my opinion at any time on any individual case. I have merely said the lapse of time—nearly half a century—was sufficient to bar the case. There is no statute of limitations that I know of for a thing of this sort.

99. By Mr. Morris: Is not this a case of a very peculiar nature, inasmuch as this Mr. Stewart left Sydney upon the Government service previous to the time that he could have selected the land, and was lost in the Government service—does not that alter the case extremely, with regard, at any rate, to the liability of the Government to take a very liberal view of it. It would have altered it if, within some reasonable period after the loss of the late Mr. Stewart, somebody, on his behalf or that of his family, had made the selection, or asserted the right to make a selection. In thinking over this case, which I am sure I do quite dispassionately, it simply comes to my mind in this shape:—In the first place, there is an order given for land, which land is never selected; and on the other hand, a claim is promoted to land in another part of the Colony, and of different area, for which there is no authority. As to the first case, the order must clearly be considered by the regulations of the time, and by practice and common sense, to be void, from the fact of no selection having been made; and as to the other, there is no authority to base it upon. That is all I can see in the case.

100. Supposing, from want of sufficient records in the proper department, the heirs of Mr. William Stewart were not able to ascertain that there was any authority at all, until the lapse lapse of these fifty years to which you refer, what then would you say? Nothing that I have not said already. I think the claim could not have been sustained. I could make out a case myself for a Sydney town allotment if these principles are to be sustained. My father had a promise of a Sydney town allotment which he never selected.

Michael Fitzpatrick,
Esq.

19 Feb., 1864.

101. Surely this is a different case:—A person receives a promise of a grant, is sent on a dangerous service, loses his life, and leaves no record behind —? He did leave a record behind.

102. Where? Here is the order recorded in the Survey Office.

103. What order? The order for this grant of land.

104. Is it so—can you point out where it is so recorded? Here is what I consider the record. The Surveyor General states, in reference to Mr. Stewart's first application, that no such order is recorded, but he states that there is a record of an order given by Governor Macquarie for 200 acres, in 1816, and that Mr. Stewart, who was a mariner, desired to take it at the Five Islands. My impression—my conviction is—that this is the same case. The letter of 1819 seems to me quite consistent with the order of 1816. My view of it is, that it has been either a renewal or an enlargement of the first promise.

105. By Mr. Stewart: There is no record of it? There is no record that I know of in the Survey Office of a promise of 300 acres; but I think the two things hold together quite consistently. First, there is the order by Governor Macquarie, in 1816, which Capt. Stewart desired to take at Five Islands—the same district that is now called Illawarra. He was engaged in his profession, and perhaps that may explain the fact of his not having acted upon this order for these three years; but three years after, he makes some special representation to the Governor, the nature of which does not appear, but it was probably either to revive this order or to enlarge it, and he gets 300 acres in the same locality.

106. By Mr. Dalgleish: You think this document—the memorial referred to in the letter of 1819—might have been a recital of his services? Yes, perhaps it was. It was evidently something that induced the Governor to take a liberal view of the case, for there are two other advantages given besides the simple grant of land named in the first order, namely, that his family and two Government men should be victualled from the King's stores for twelve months.

107. By Mr. Stewart: I think you stated that the character of the documents is identical. Do you see any resemblance at all, except that they are grants of land made at various periods to the same individual—anything in the terms or conditions? The language used in one case is stronger, certainly, than in the other. One appears to be a mere record of an order, but the other is a promise that a grant will issue. It was the practice of the Government to record every promise of whatever character, and it has been the practice since not to recognize any claim which is not based on such an order.

108. Is it a rule that these old claims are considered void? I think, primâ facie, if a claim of that sort sleeps for fifty years it is not a good one. I would not commit myself to the principle that lapse of time only can bar it.

109. Was it usual, at the period when these grants were promised, to give two different grants to one individual? Yes, it was frequently the case.

110. Then would it not be possible that these two should be different, seeing that these two documents vary in every particular? No, they do not vary in the locality nor the name of the grantee.

111. By Mr. Dalgleish: As a matter of fact, are the Five Islands and Illawarra the same district? The locality now known as Illawarra was known as the Five Islands years ago, and very old colonists sometimes speak of it as Five Islands yet.

112. By Mr. Morris: Supposing, as you state, that this memorial did relate to 200 acres of land, and also set forth other claims on the part of Mr. Stewart, and the Governor then consented to settle the claim for 200 acres and some other claims, by giving him 300 acres, is it not likely, looking at the peculiar words of this notice, which says "he will give directions for a grant of 300 acres, situated in the district of Illawarra, to be made to you," that really the grant had been decided upon by the Government, and that Mr. Stewart, leaving immediately after as he did, left with the understanding that the Government would survey some particular place? Certainly not, until he had made his selection. No Governor in the Colony ever did such a thing. No grant could issue till the place was selected.

113. Could you state what were the general words? The Governor wrote just what he liked. The phraseology would not be the same in all cases. All these promises, however phrased, were communicated to the Surveyor General, who made an entry of them in a book called the Order Book, and when in later years we come to deal with these claims this is our start point; if it does not appear there, it is not valid.

114. By Mr. Stewart: It appears that in this case, the document proving the promise of the grant existed in the Colonial Secretary's Office, but never reached the Survey Office? If the promise of these 300 acres is a different transaction, it seems never to have reached the Survey Office.

115. By Mr. Morris: I apprehend this memorial and the affidavit referred to, must be in the Executive Council Office? No, they should be in the Colonial Secretary's Office, if they exist at all. All the old correspondence is in the Chief Secretary's Office. Having been myself the incumbent of the office of Clerk of the Executive Council for some years, I am sure they do not exist there. There were no more papers there than could be put into a large box. It is not the practice of the Executive Council to keep documents at all. Every paper is returned to the department it comes from, as soon as the Executive Council have done with it. The oldest correspondence I have seen is in the Colonial Secretary's Office.

116. No doubt these papers do exist somewhere? It is very possible.

Michael Fitzpatrick,
Esq.

19 Feb., 1864.

117. They would not have been destroyed? Not intentionally. The fact is, that until Mr. Macleay came here there was no system of keeping records. You are aware that the late Mr. Smith Hall was employed for some time trying to arrange the old records of the country, which are in a very confused state.

118. By Mr. Dalgleish: I think you recognize in this particular case something out of the usual course—that Mr. Stewart having had this grant made immediately before starting on an expedition to serve the Government, and not returning, and leaving no memorial with his family of this promise of grant, they were not in a position to make a claim? They were in the same position at any hour after his death as they were previous to his death.

119. This claim, you observe, is based upon a document accidentally discovered in one of the offices of the Government, and I want to point your attention to this fact, that, until it was so discovered by the present Mr. Stewart, the heirs of Mr. Stewart, master mariner, to whom the promise was made, had no means of knowing this promise of grant was ever made to him; his family were for years in the greatest uncertainty as to his fate, and even now his fate is wholly unknown;—Do not these circumstances take this case out of the usual category, so that, if this case were acted upon, it would not form a precedent for the revival of old grants? That would depend upon what ground the claim was put. If it is sought as compensation for services rendered by Captain Stewart, certainly it would not.

120. This is a peculiar case, and an exception to the rule? Yes, to that extent.

121. It is an exception to the proclamation? No.

122. That proclamation could only apply to those who were cognizant of having made application for a grant of land, or who were cognizant of having paid a deposit on a purchase. Then if Mr. Stewart's family were unaware of the promise of grant, and were not parties to the proclamation,—namely, they had not paid for any portion of land,—it is clear they are outside that proclamation. I think you will see it is an exceptional case? It is to that extent.

123. I would wish you to give the Committee your opinion of the case, based upon the facts which I have just recited? Perhaps it is a matter on which my opinion is of very little value, as it has no bearing on official practice.

124. Does it, in your opinion, take this case beyond the pale of that proclamation? No; but I think the circumstances make out a prima facie claim why the Government should treat this as a special case. If you are merely asking me my individual opinion, I should say I would not give much weight to a claim of this sort, which has slept for fifty years. Persons not knowing of the existence of a claim of this sort for so long a period are not much the worse if the claim is rejected.

125. By Mr. Stewart: The application made on my behalf by Mr. Pennington, was dated 9th April, 1863, and the application I made was dated 28th April. Do you not think the reason of my not having had a reply to this was that they were considered identical? I cannot say without reference to the original papers.

126. You have treated this claim as identical with one that had previously been made to your department? You mean the claim to 300 acres as identical with the claim to 500 acres—it is possible.

127. Supposing the existence of the authority for these 300 acres was not known at the time the first application was made, how is it possible any intimation could have been given of it;—the moment it was known an immediate application was made upon it. Does not that place it in rather a different position to that of a case where the information was for some time in the possession of the person making the application? To a certain extent it does. In the one case the delay proceeds from wilful neglect, in the other from ignorance. What I meant to say just now was, that a person who has been for fifty years ignorant of such a claim, loses nothing by not getting it. The only thing for consideration, it seems to me, in this case is this, that if it is assumed that Captain Stewart left without letting anybody know of the existence of this document, and as he never returned, there is something by which the Government of its grace may be moved to recognize his services. That is putting it in a different position; but putting it officially, the claim is wiped out by these proclamations.

128. Can you account for my not receiving a reply? I think the reason you did not receive a reply, probably, was because the Assembly had appointed a Committee to inquire into the matter.

129. The Committee was not applied for till two months after this application? I cannot say; I am taken at a disadvantage, not knowing such a question was to be asked.

130. By Mr. Dalgleish: You admit that if the facts were as I have before stated—that Mr. Stewart, master mariner, the person referred to, should have left the port with these documents in his possession, leaving no trace of them with his family—that does take the case out of the ordinary pale? It would form a ground for taking it out of it, as a matter of grace.

131. It would not be a parallel case to the one you have referred to, where, you say, you might have preferred a claim to a town allotment? No. I have myself, perhaps as the result of long dealing with these cases, a strong feeling against reviving these old claims.

132. By Mr. Stewart: Perhaps because they involve considerable trouble to the department? No, it is not a question of trouble, if you will believe a public officer on such a point as that, but because the public have to be considered as well as the individual. I have myself spared no trouble in sifting such cases, and have sometimes even been the means, in cases which involved a good deal of trouble, of gaining a different decision on an old case, because I believed there was right in it.

Mr. Richard Driver called in and examined:—

133. By Mr. Stewart: You are an old resident of the city? Yes.
134. Do you recollect circumstances that occurred in 1819 or 1820? Yes.
135. Do you recollect about that period a person named Stewart, a mariner? Yes.
136. Can you recollect the circumstance of his leaving Sydney for the last time? I do; it was early in 1820.
137. Will you state any particulars you know, to the Committee? I remember I was on board the brig that Cunningham's father commanded, lying in Watson's Bay, on the night before your father went away; he and his crew slept on board that night. He had a whale-boat and six persons with him, going on an exploring expedition to Jervis Bay, I believe.
138. Are you aware whether they were fitted out by Governor Macquarie? I understood they had six weeks' supplies from the Government; Macquarie was Governor at the time.
139. You are not aware that any of them ever came back? Never. I heard a rumour that they were destroyed near the Pigeonhouse by the blacks.
140. There was no positive proof as to their fate? No.
141. Do you know, as a matter of practice in those days, if a grant had been promised of this character:—"I have it in command to inform you that His Excellency the Governor will give directions for a grant of 300 acres, situated in the district of Illawarra, to be made to you; and that in your capacity of a settler, in consequence of this grant, you and your family, and two Government assigned men, will be victualled from the King's Stores for twelve months,"—would that grant be a saleable commodity? The order would.
142. As an authority for any person to take it up? Yes.
143. And the provisions for the family and Government men might be obtained without even taking possession of the land? Yes; I have seen persons going to the stores and drawing a month's rations, who never went near their grants.
144. Seeing that this promise of land at Illawarra is dated in 1819, it would have been difficult for Mr. Stewart, being a mariner and engaged in his profession, to have selected his land and got it measured before he left on this exploring expedition early in 1820? I think it would. In fact, in those days it was impossible to get your land measured if you wished it. Mr. Mein was on duty in Van Diemen's Land, and Mr. Evans, the only other surveyor, was in the Bathurst country. My stepfather had an order for land which was not measured for six years afterwards.
145. Mr. Stewart was a person having considerable experience on the coast? Yes.
146. And would be a man likely to be selected to make an examination of any new district on the coast? Yes.
147. By the Chairman: Would the Government notices that used to be published in those days, with regard to people making their claims for promises of grants, be pretty well known by the community? Yes, they would be rather extensively known, considering the limit of the Colony; there might be some remote places where they would not be known.
148. Supposing the Government at that time published a notice, saying that certain grants would become void unless certain conditions were fulfilled, and the grants did become void, would the previous order have been saleable in Sydney, or do you think the general public would have had such a knowledge of the fact as not to buy such an article? I think persons would have bought, because many of the grants were afterwards recovered. I knew an instance of a gentleman who sold a promise of a grant of 2,000 acres, to the Waterloo Company, for 9d. an acre.
149. They would have bought, because they believed they could afterwards induce the Government to fulfil the grant—not because they were in ignorance of these proclamations? I think they would have bought, even if they had known of them.
150. By Mr. Stewart: Do you know of any instance of a promise of grant, such as I have described, being refused? No, except in one or two instances, where men had been promised grants of land and were afterwards found guilty of crimes.
151. You do not know any instance of the Crown taking advantage of the time, and declaring them void? No, I do not. I have known people—soldiers and others—who have left the Colony for years, and carried the order for their land with them, and then have come back and got it.
152. Supposing Mr. Stewart had left the Colony altogether, and returned ten years afterwards with this promise in his pocket, do you think there would have been any objection to give him the land, notwithstanding this notice that grants would become void after a certain time? No, I think the grant would have been obtained.
153. By the Chairman: Do you know of any persons who left the Colony, and came back and got their grants, between 1819 and 1827 or 1828? Yes, many of them; for instance, a young man, named Taylor, who enlisted as a boy here in the 46th.
154. And had been away —? From the time the 46th left till about 1833.
155. When did the 46th leave? About 1817, I think.

Driver.

19 Feb., 1864.

Mr. Robert M'Intosh called in and examined:—

- Mr. R. M'Intosh.
19 Feb., 1864.
156. By Mr. Stewart: You are an old resident here? Yes, I came here in 1814.
157. Do you recollect circumstances that occurred in 1819 or 1820? Yes.
158. Was your father then employed by the Government? Yes, he was storekeeper in 1820.
159. Do you recollect Mr. Stewart, a mariner, my father? Yes.
160. You knew something of the circumstances of my family—where they resided at that time? Yes, in Cockle Bay, in Kent-street, in 1817, '18, '19, and 1820.
161. Do you recollect my father going away in 1820? Yes, in a sealing-boat or a whale-boat, on the part of the Government, and my father supplying him with rations and stores, on the order of the Governor.
162. Will you state the circumstances? What I recollect clearly was that my father came home one day, and said he had an order to supply Mr. Stewart with things to go on discovery; it was an unlimited order, he said, to give him whatever he wanted. Mr. Stewart got things from the store and went away. I also knew two young men who went with him.
163. Was it concluded by your father that the outfit was for the purposes of a Government expedition? That is what I understood—that he went on discovery to look for land or rivers or something to the southward.
164. Do you know whether he or his party ever returned? No, I always understood they were lost.
165. If they had returned, you would have been likely to hear of it? Yes.
166. I suppose the stores you allude to were what are called the Commissariat Stores? Yes. There were two stores; my father was in what were called the Dry Stores.
167. The vessel went alongside the store and took in her outfit? Yes, she came alongside the stores and took in her supplies.

Mr. Robert Melville called in and examined:—

- Mr. R. Melville.
19 Feb., 1864.
168. By Mr. Stewart: You are an old resident of Sydney? Yes.
169. Did you know my family? Yes, perfectly well.
170. Do you recollect my father leaving Sydney with a party? Yes.
171. The last time he left, when he never returned? Yes.
172. Are you aware whether he went away on the part of the Government? It was so reported.
173. You knew several of the party? Yes, I knew four.
174. If any of them had returned you would have known it? Yes.

FRIDAY, 26 FEBRUARY, 1864.

Present:—

MR. DANGAR, | MR. MORRIS,
MR. RAPER.

ATKINSON ALFRED P. TIGHE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

R. Stewart, Esq., M.L.A., appeared in support of the Petition.

Alexander Campbell Budge, Esq., called in and examined:—

- A. C. Budge, Esq.
26 Feb., 1864.
175. By the Chairman: You are the Clerk of the Executive Council? I am.
176. Have you searched the records of your office for any memorial from William Stewart, dated 19th February, 1819, directed to His Excellency the then Governor? I have searched carefully from 1825, when the Executive Council was established—that is five years after the date of this memorial—but I have found nothing bearing upon the case in any shape.
177. By Mr. Morris: What would have become of the papers belonging to the former Governors—the Governors before the year 1825? I cannot say—but suppose they should be in the Colonial Secretary's Office—the Colonial Secretary being also Registrar of Records.

Robert Stewart, Esq., M.L.A., examined:—

- R. Stewart, Esq., M.L.A.
26 Feb., 1864.
178. By the Chairman: Are you the heir-at-law of the late William Stewart? I am the only surviving son.
179. When did you first become possessed of any knowledge with respect to this promise of a grant? The first I knew of it was in consequence of an examination I had caused to be made at the Colonial Secretary's Office, for papers or correspondence between my father and the Government, some time in the latter part of April of the last year. I had petitioned that a promise from Governor Macquarie to my father to issue a grant, dated the 22nd February, 1819,—

180. I understood you to say that last April was the first time you had any knowledge of the existence of this promise of a grant? I was not aware—I had not the least knowledge of any such document existing previously. R. Stewart,
Esq., M.L.A.
181. At the time your father left Sydney, to go upon this exploring expedition, was your mother living? She was. 26 Feb., 1864.
182. Had you any brothers or sisters grown up? I had a brother older than myself, who went with my father and was lost with him. I was then the eldest. I had a younger brother and a sister.
183. Did you ever hear your mother speak of any promises the Government had made to your father in any way? My mother stated, on various occasions, that there was a promise existing, and that she believed the family would get the advantage of it when I came of age.
184. Having this knowledge when you became of age, how is it that you did not set yourself in motion to ascertain whether such documents existed or not, your mother having told you there was a likelihood of some such thing being in store? Shortly after I was of age—about 1838—I caused an inquiry by a surveyor, and went myself on one or two occasions to the Surveyor General's Department and made an examination and inquiry, but could find no trace of any documents or entry either marked upon the charts, or in any other way, to indicate that any such promise had been recorded. Finding that to be the case I gave up further inquiry, believing that, as years had passed over, any documents that might have existed must have been lost.
185. Did you mention to any of the persons in charge of the papers—any of the authorities—that you were searching for documents of this nature? I named in the office the object of my inquiry.
186. Did the Government cause any search to be made, or assist in the search? None, beyond affording the means of examining the books and charts.
187. You took all reasonable means within your power to ascertain whether any such documents existed or not? I did.
188. And it was only through an accident that you afterwards found out such a document was in existence? Only in consequence of the examination I have previously mentioned.
189. Did your father leave any papers or memoranda behind him when he went from Sydney? He left a number of papers.
190. Who had charge of them? My mother.
191. Did you ever examine them? I was too young before the time of my mother leaving Sydney, to examine them as to their contents. Most of them, or many of them, had reference to my father's nautical pursuits. I had some papers that were in the care of a person residing at the Hawkesbury, who had passed many years at sea, under my father, and had become a settler. He had a small case which was said to contain documents of value. I have some distant recollection of the character of the case—it was not very bulky. About the time that my apprenticeship expired—the latter end of 1836—this person, in whose charge the papers were left, forwarded them to me in a small vessel that was coming to Sydney, and the vessel was lost. The uncle of Sir Charles Nicholson was in that vessel. The papers, whatever they contained, were destroyed.
192. Was the brother who went with your father, older than yourself? Yes.
193. Was he married? No.
194. Then you are his heir-at-law? I should be if he had been of age when he was lost, but he was not.
195. By Mr. Morris: What was your age at the time of your father's death? Between four and five.
196. Is your mother alive? No, she has been dead many years.
197. Did your father leave a will? I think not.
198. There are no trustees? No.
199. Then of course you were wholly in your mother's care? Wholly.
200. Did I understand you that your mother left Sydney? She left Sydney, and went to Port Macquarie.
201. Did she take away your father's papers? Yes.
202. Did you ever get the papers she took? I presume they were not the whole of his papers; she considered that the papers of most value were intrusted to this particularly intimate friend, who was in fact my guardian, and had taken possession of this property on the Hawkesbury for which I have previously petitioned.
203. Have you been able to ascertain whether your father did select these 300 acres—did he fix upon the site? I have no doubt he did fix upon the site; but the deficiency in the Survey Department in that day would prevent the possibility of his getting it surveyed.
204. Are there no old residents in Illawarra, who knew your father? There were none settled there at that time, except a few sawyers; but Mr. Berry informed me that my father had given him some information, previous to his leaving the Colony to go to England, with reference to Shoalhaven, but his absence from the Colony for two years prevented his having any knowledge of the circumstances that followed, in reference to my father leaving Sydney in the service of Government.
205. Was this a Government vessel in which your father went? It was his own vessel.
206. Chartered by Government? No, he was supplied by the Government, as stated by Mr. McIntosh. He had an order from Governor Macquarie to be supplied with such stores as he required, from the Government Stores. I have reason to suppose that his outfit was a subject that Governor Macquarie felt a considerable interest in, because a Mr. Rowley, who had previously received 200 acres of land for acting as an assistant to Mr. Roseby, in going overland to Bathurst, was to take charge of a land party in connection with the expedition my father sailed on; and the reason of his not going was the sudden illness of his wife the day before, and some other person had to take his position. 207.

R. Stewart,
Esq., M.L.A.
26 Feb., 1864.

207. Did that land party proceed? They were all lost. The land party was to go in the boat or vessel, to communicate with the southern country that had a year or so before been discovered—the Maneroo country—the expedition was to open up the communication with the sea. It was supposed that a river emptied itself into the sea on the south-eastern or southern coast, and the land party was to make the communication complete. So I was informed by Mr. Rowley.

208. Was this expedition partly at your father's expense or wholly at the expense of Government? With the exception of the boat, I should presume the Government supplied all the necessary material for keeping up the party.

209. Have you seen any official documents by which we can learn the exact objects of this expedition on which your father went? I have not. I have caused a search, as I before stated, in the Colonial Secretary's Office, with the view of obtaining a copy of such documents, if they existed, but I could find none. I also made an inquiry of the Commissariat, and an examination was made there, but they appear to have no records there of that date. It appears that the Commissariat remitted yearly the returns, and that previous to about 1824 or 1825, no regular entries or records can be got at.

210. On what date did your father sail? Early in the year 1820.

211. Then that would be the year after the order for the land was given? Yes; but I see by a public notice in the Government Gazette, that persons having authorities to take up land, called locations, were informed that the number was in excess of the means of measuring, and that no new applications would be received during the year 1819.

212. There is such an intimation as that? There is a general order issued by the Governor, directing persons not to apply that year; and this being a very distant part of the country, I can easily account for it not being charted.

213. What I want to know, and what I think the Committee would like to know is, what proof there is that your father went upon a special mission on behalf of the Government? The proof I offer to the Committee is the statement of Mr. M'Intosh and of Mr. Driver, who knew personally the circumstances of their departure; and the statements that were made by Mr. and Mrs. Peat to the former Committee, of their knowledge that they did go in connection with the Government. It was with the view of obtaining official proof that I caused the examination before alluded to. I may say when I found this copy of the promise to issue the grant, I inquired of all the persons I could think of for information, and it was subsequent to that period I met Mr. Driver, and for the first time knew that he was able to give me the information upon the matter which I have placed before the Committee.

214. Who is this person who applied, as agent for your father, for the land? I have no knowledge of a person of that name; and I presume that that application was made with the view of defeating my family of the rights that he knew to exist there. At about that period my mother married, and I have concluded that this person must have had information that a promise of a grant lay in that office, and that finding it had not been applied for on the part of the family, thought this would be a ready means of obtaining the advantage.

215. You know nothing whatever of this party? Nothing; I never knew of the application till I obtained these documents. It appears that he did not renew his application when he was called upon to shew his authority from Mr. Stewart.

216. By the Chairman: Did it ever occur to you, or did you take any advice as to whether this would be a proper matter to bring before the Court of Claims? I did not; and I do not think it is such a case as the Court of Claims was established to deal with. That Court was, I think, established to deal with property that was held in possession where there was no other claim, or where there were opposing claimants. I would have gone to the Court of Claims for the land for which I previously applied through Mr. Pennington, because that had been held by my family; but possession had been relinquished by my being apprenticed and my family going into the country; and as I held no papers, I thought I should be scarcely justified in going to the Court of Claims; and shortly after it was given up, Government had sold 10 acres of one portion, and 100 acres of the other.

217. That was of some other land? Yes. What I am now referring to I knew nothing of till I heard of it in April last; when I did obtain this information I felt inclined to petition the Governor upon it, thinking he was the proper person to carry out the promise of a former Governor. Before taking any step in that direction, I had a personal communication with the Minister for Lands, Mr. Robertson. I shewed him a copy of this paper I had obtained, and requested him to inform me which was the best way to bring it under the notice of the Government. He said, "You had better make your application to this department, and then we will require to know why the delay has taken place." It was upon that statement I made the application dated 28th April, to which application I received no reply, and I again made the application dated 11th July, 1863. To neither of these did I receive any reply, and the Minister having gone out of office, I did not feel justified in renewing my application to his successor. It was upon that ground I thought it desirable to petition the House. It appears that in the Lands Office, by some extraordinary proceeding, this application was jumbled in with one that had been made in my favour by Mr. Pennington for land occupied at Long Island on the Hawkesbury; and the Committee will judge from the examination of Mr. Fitzpatrick the other day, that he appears still to hold that it was one and the same thing.

218. But the land on Long Island had been occupied all along? For twelve or fifteen years.

219. Twelve or fifteen years from the present time? No, it was abandoned by the parties in possession some time after my family went into the country in 1831.

220. It had been occupied twelve or fifteen years previously to 1831? Yes, if I had been of age, or kept in possession, I should have had no trouble to get a title in the Court of Claims, irrespective of any promise.

R. Stewart,
Esq., M.L.A.

26 Feb., 1864.

221. The date of that application of Williams is 1827? Yes, June, 1827, I think.

222. When Williams made this application to Government, as agent for your father, for this land, was this land on Long Island then occupied by your family? It was; I was residing there at the time. That land was in possession of my father some years before the date of this application, and I believe that land was given to him, as other land was then given, by personal authority to take possession, for information he had given to Governor Macquarie respecting Brisbane Water and Mangrove Creek.

223. This land was generally known to be the property of your family at the time Williams made this application for the grant of 300 acres? It is not likely it was generally known in Sydney, because few people in Sydney knew anything about the place.

224. Was it generally known to persons acquainted with the neighbourhood? Yes, the land was generally known more by the name of the person who had charge of it, Edwards, who had property in other parts of the district, who was properly my guardian. The stock was also under his control and direction. I presume, from the reply made to the application of Williams, that there was no question about it at that date. It appears that Williams, in order to get it, required only an authority; and the statement of Mr. Oxley, in reply to the Colonial Secretary of that day, that nothing was done by Stewart before his death, or by his family since, as to his possession, was an indication that if I had been of sufficient age to take possession of the land, I could have had the 300 acres at Illawarra, and had it measured at any time the surveyor might reach that part of the country. The promise is one peculiarly worded.

225. These promises of grant, such as Williams applied for, I suppose could be sold from one to another, without any trouble, in those days? I believe they were so sold at that time.

226. Then if your mother had applied for this promise of grant, as you say she was aware that some such promise existed—as you suppose so from what you have often heard her say, that you would get it when you came of age—would she not have got it? I am not quite sure that she would. I think if she had taken possession of the land, she would not have been disturbed in it, but that no grant would have issued until I had come of age.

227. What reason have you for supposing that that would have been the course adopted? I think the person asking for it would have been required to shew an authority from my father.

228. Would the wife be obliged to shew this promise? To sell it I think she would.

229. Upon what do you form that opinion? I know of no case of a widow selling a promise.

230. Do you form your opinion from specific experience, or from a mere common sense view of the matter? From what I believe would have been the course adopted.

231. Not from any knowledge of a similar case? No; I think my mother was not aware of the precise position in which the promise had been made.

232. If she knew that a promise had been made and could have converted that promise into cash in the market, it seems strange that she did not take advantage of it, in the same manner as she would have done if it had been a cash balance at the bank? I do not think she desired to sell it, but to keep it until I came of age.

233. Have you ever heard her make any remarks upon that point? I passed so little time with my mother from my very early life, that I cannot tax my memory with any remark of that kind having been made by her. From my sixth or seventh year, till I was apprenticed to Mr. Hunt, I passed on the Hawkesbury; shortly after I was six or seven years old my mother left Sydney, and never returned. I never saw her but once after that date. She went away to Port Macquarie, a distant part of the country, with which communication was then very infrequent.

234. I understood you to say that you had heard her say more than once that there was some promise of land which she intended to reserve for your benefit until you came of age? She had some impression; indeed I think she was clear upon the subject that there were some documents existing that would enable me to get property.

235. And she seemed to be under the impression that she would have no right to get that grant for her own special benefit? That appeared to me to be her impression.

236. How do you judge that that was her impression? She did not appear to have been desirous of parting with her property, or she would have parted with this place on the Hawkesbury instead of allowing it to go out of their hands.

237. Do you judge from the remarks she made? Her desire was to retain any rights we might have for our own benefit. No doubt her view would have been that I should have divided with my sister and brother.

238. Where are they now? My brother is dead—my sister is still living.

239. Did your brother marry? Yes.

240. Is there any family left? Yes.

241. Has your sister any family? Yes; she is in Port Macquarie.

TUESDAY, 8 MARCH, 1864.

Present:—

MR. DALGLEISH,

MR. DANGAR.

ATKINSON ALFRED P. TIGHE, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

The Petitioner, Mr. Robert Stewart, appeared in person.

Mr. John Rowley called in and examined:—

- Mr. John Rowley.
8 Mar., 1864.
242. By Mr. Stewart: You are acquainted with matters that occurred in the Colony in 1819 and 1820? Yes.
243. Were you engaged on some occasions in exploring the country? Yes, in 1818, 1819, and 1820.
244. Then you have had some amount of experience in that? A little.
245. Were you engaged by the Government, or remunerated by them in any way? I was remunerated by the Government, but I was not engaged by them. It was a private expedition, undertaken by the late Dr. Throsby, to look for a cattle station. When we got to the top of Mittagong, we could see the plains where Throsby Park is now. It was more like a gentleman's park, in fact, than bush country. We proceeded on then to Wollondilly and returned.
246. Is that in the county of Argyle? Yes; I think Wollondilly is twenty-one or twenty-two miles from Berrima.
247. That was the first discovery? That was the first that was known to any person except blacks.
248. You were rewarded for your services? Not on that occasion.
249. On some subsequent occasion? Yes. A little after that we went round to the Bathurst country—headed the mountains all the way—and Mr. Throsby got 2,000 acres of land, and I got 200.
250. Do you recollect Mr. William Stewart? Yes.
251. Do you recollect the circumstance of his fitting out an expedition, or being fitted out by the Government, to proceed down the coast? Yes; I was to have gone with him, but fortunately I did not.
252. Do you recollect about what time that was? I think some time about March or April, 1820.
253. Was that for the purpose of exploring on the part of the Government? Yes; that was in 1820, after we came back. It was arranged between the Government and Mr. Throsby, who was the head of the party that made the south-west discovery, that an effort should be made to see whether we could get communication with the sea from the new country. We had heard from the blacks that there was a good road from Maneroo, and those places, and only one mountain to ascend—which was the fact—and we were to have met Mr. Throsby at Yass or some of those places.
254. Were you to take charge of a party and separate from the expedition that went by water? Yes, I was to have had a party of three or four men, and some native blacks as guides.
255. Some occurrence took place—the illness of your wife, I believe—which prevented your going? Yes, she had heard that it would be likely to be a dangerous expedition, and she fell sick; and that was the reason I did not go.
256. It would, in fact, be a very dangerous expedition at that period? Yes, no doubt of it.
257. The coast was then very little known? Very little.
258. Did Mr. Stewart and party proceed? Yes, they left in a large boat—what they termed a sealing-boat.
259. A boat suitable for going along the coast? Yes.
260. Did they ever return? It was never known that they ever returned; no doubt they were all killed by the blacks at Twofold Bay, from what I have heard since, and the boat was burned.
261. Were they to some extent fitted out by the Government? They were fitted out by the Government.
262. Then it must have been a Government expedition? Yes, no doubt it was; Mr. Throsby was the author of it. After Governor Macquarie had been to this new country, and seen the capabilities of it, he would have been very glad to have got communication from it with the sea.
263. Mr. Stewart had some considerable experience on the coast? Yes; he was to have gone to Twofold Bay and have landed near there, and to have gone up every inlet, to see whether there was any river that he could have traced into the interior.
264. It was an expedition of some importance to the Government? No doubt of it; it was thought so in those days.
265. If Mr. Stewart had been promised a grant of land previous to leaving Sydney, would anything in any regulation you know of that occurred afterwards, have prevented him having that grant if he had returned? No, if he had returned he would undoubtedly have got his grant. No doubt he was going on the same "lay," as they term it, as I was—to get a grant of land.
266. That would be in addition to any grant that might have been promised previously? Yes; no doubt he would have had the same as I had. I went across to Bathurst in 1820 for Commissioner Bigge, round the south-west country, and took him to Lake George; and for that I had an additional grant of land, besides my former grant.

267. And these grants, or promises of grant, were considered final when once given, and the Government never cancelled them? Never to my knowledge. I had an order for mine directly. Mr. John Rowley.

268. Do you know any instance of a promise of a grant in these words:—"I have it in command to inform you, that His Excellency the Governor has received your memorial; and His Excellency, in consequence of the statement therein contained, and in consideration of your having a numerous family to support, desires me to inform you that he will give directions for a grant of 300 acres, situated in the district of Illawarra, to be made to you"—? 8 Mar., 1864.

That was the sort of thing we all used to get. If Mr. Stewart had that in writing it was almost as good as the grant itself in those days; he could go and dispose of it as he liked; in fact I sold my order to Mr. Jenkins, and he had the grant drawn out in his name in the Surveyor General's Office.

269. Then, in fact, except the mere form of the grant, such an order as this was considered final in every way? Yes.

MEMORANDUM.

WITH reference to the Colonial Secretary's memorandum of the 29th instant, desiring to be informed, for His Excellency's information, whether Mr. William Stewart, master mariner and free settler, has availed himself of an order of 300 acres of land, given in his favour by General Macquarie, on the 22nd February, 1819, by taking possession of the land,—the Surveyor General begs to report, that the Mr. William Stewart alluded to in the order of General Macquarie was drowned many years ago, shortly after the date of the order. Mr. Stewart, it is believed, intended to take his land at Illawarra, but nothing was ever done, either as to possession before his death or by his relations since.

Committee Rooms,
Sydney, 26 February, 1864.

Sir,

I have the honor, as Chairman, to inform you that the Select Committee of the Legislative Assembly, on "Claim of Robert Stewart to Land in Illawarra," will meet on Thursday, 3rd proximo, at 11 o'clock, in No. 3 Committee Room, and will be glad to receive any information relative thereto you may be willing to afford.

Should you find it inconvenient to attend, will you be good enough to favour the Committee with a written answer to the enclosed manuscript?

I have, &c.,

ATKINSON A. P. TIGHE,
Chairman.

The Honorable
James Martin, Esq., M.P.,
&c., &c., &c.

In the year 1819 a promise of a grant of land was made in writing, by authority of the then Governor, to one William Stewart. The promise was made absolutely, viz.:—"That he would give directions for a grant of 300 acres, situated in the district of Illawarra." Shortly after the promise was made, the promisee and his eldest son (a young man) were lost at sea, while employed in the colonial service; the former leaving a widow and three children (infants), viz., two sons and one daughter.

At this time, it was customary to buy and sell similar promises for grants, the Government recognizing the purchaser as the party in whose favour the grant was to be made out. No transfer or sale having been made in this case, and the grant never having been made out, who became the rightful owner of the written promise upon the death of the promisee? If it became the property of the heir, would the widow and other children have a claim of any kind?—and if so, would it at all affect the case whether the inheritance was derived from the father or the son, who was lost with him?—and if it would, is it to be presumed, in the absence of all proof, that the father died first?

If the document became the property of the widow and children, then in what proportion?

Does the fact of no claim having been made since 1827 disentitle the descendants of William Stewart to any consideration now? The surviving children were infants at the time of their father's death, and the eldest, upon coming of age (having reason to suppose that some promises had been made to his father) unsuccessfully searched the public records, and made due inquiry to ascertain if any public records of the kind were to be found. He could get no information in the matter, and only a few months ago, the missing documents proving the promise were accidentally found.

Attorney General's Office,
9 March, 1864.

Sir,

I do myself the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th of last month, requesting my answer to certain questions in reference to the claim of Mr. Robert Stewart, now under the consideration of a Select Committee of which you are the Chairman.

In reply, I beg to say that I have considered the points submitted to me, and I am of opinion that as a mere promisee of a grant of Crown land, Mr. William Stewart had (as has been several times decided by the Supreme Court) no transmissible interest in such land, and that consequently neither his heir-at-law nor any other person can maintain any claim, either at Law or in Equity, against the Crown, in respect of the promise in question. It has, however, been the practice of the Crown, in such cases, to consider the heir-at-law as having a moral claim, and grants have in many cases been issued to such heir under circumstances like the present. On the assumption that the facts are as submitted to me, Mr. Robert Stewart is, in my opinion, the heir-at-law of his late father; as the presumption of our law is, where father and son are dead, and it is not known which died first, that they both died at the same moment, and neither transmitted any rights to the other. Mr. Robert Stewart, therefore, is the heir-at-law; and if the Government should in his case act on the authority of precedents in like cases, he is, it seems to me, entitled to the benefit of the promise made to his late father, and to such benefit I do not think that the lapse of time in the way stated has disentitled him.

In conclusion, I wish to say that the press of other engagements prevented me giving this answer at an earlier period.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MARTIN,
Attorney General.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MR. JAMES M'INTOSH.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 8 September, 1863.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of James M'Intosh, of Redfern, in the City of Sydney, gentleman,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner is the eldest son and rightful heir of Robert M'Intosh, Bandmaster of Her Majesty's 46th Regiment of Foot, formerly resident in Sydney, deceased.

That in the year 1814 your Petitioner's father became the purchaser of an allotment of land, with a messuage thereon, situate in George-street, Sydney, and thereupon entered into possession thereof, then and now known as the "Bull's Head" public house.

That your Petitioner's father was bonâ fide in possession of the premises on the 30th day of June, 1823, and remained so until the time of his decease, in November, 1829, and was therefore entitled to a grant thereof in fee simple, from the Crown, under the proclamation of His Excellency Sir Ralph Darling, dated 8th day of June, 1829.

That your Petitioner's father, on the 21st of August, 1827, made application to the Colonial Secretary for a deed of grant of the premises in question, which was answered by a letter, dated the 23rd September, 1829, intimating that it should be attended to in its turn, agreeably to the proclamation of the 8th of June, 1829.

That shortly afterwards, that is to say, on the 3rd of November, 1829, and before the deed of grant issued, your Petitioner's father died intestate. A deed of grant was prepared in his favour, dated the 4th of May, 1836, the Government not being aware of his death.

That one Robert M'Intosh, of Lane Cove, then assuming to be the eldest son, was in possession of the said premises, by virtue of letters of administration granted to him by the Supreme Court of New South Wales, in November, 1830; your Petitioner being at that time an infant of thirteen years of age, and incapable of asserting his rights.

That the said Robert M'Intosh, by a memorial to the Commissioners of the Court of Claims, dated the 5th of May, 1834, and numbered 522, Register No. 1, made his application for the grant of the same allotment of land, as heir-at-law to the deceased Robert M'Intosh, which said memorial was duly entered and recorded in the books of the Court of Claims, for hearing according to the rules of the Court.

That on the case being called on before the Commissioners, neither the applicant, counsel, or attorney attended to prosecute the claim. By order of the Commissioners the case was struck out as abandoned, on the 4th of November, 1835.

That by a letter, dated 20th April, 1836, and transmitted to the Colonial Secretary for the time being of the said Colony, by the said Robert M'Intosh, he, the said Robert M'Intosh, falsely and fraudulently represented himself to be the promisee of 1829, whose application for the said grant had been acceded to in the year 1827, the promisee of 1829 being the father of your Petitioner, and who had been dead for six years, he having died on the 3rd of November, 1829.

That a grant issued accordingly on the 4th day of May, 1836 (without any report having been made by the said Commissioners of the Court of Claims), to the said Robert M'Intosh, in ignorance of the death of the Crown's promisee of 1829, and believing him to be the same person to whom they had promised the grant, through the false and fraudulent representation contained in the letter of the said Robert M'Intosh, dated the 20th of April, 1836.

That

That your Petitioner at the time of the advertising, and before and after the issue of the said grant, was out of the Colony, in Van Diemen's Land, or he would have lodged a caveat against the issue of such deed. Your Petitioner at that time was under eighteen years of age.

That your Petitioner's father and mother were united in marriage in the year 1807, at St. Michael's, Dublin, in Ireland. That the said Robert M'Intosh is illegitimate, he having been born out of wedlock, previous to the marriage of your Petitioner's parents.

That on your Petitioner's return to this Colony, in the year 1842, the said (so called) Robert M'Intosh, claimed to be solely entitled to the said property, under the deed of grant so fraudulently obtained.

That your Petitioner thereupon filed a bill on the Equity side of the Supreme Court, praying for the distribution of the personal estate of his deceased father, which was abandoned by reason of the defendant's answer as to the "Bull's Head" property, being that he held the same by right of a deed of grant obtained honestly as heir-at-law of the deceased. This suit was decided in 1848.

That your Petitioner, with the permission of Her Majesty's Attorney General, in the year 1850, caused a writ of scire facias to issue out of the Honorable the Supreme Court of the Colony, for the cancellation of the said grant, on the grounds that the defendant was not the legal representative of the said deceased, he not being born in wedlock, but that your Petitioner (James M'Intosh) was and is the eldest son and lawful heir of his deceased father, and that the said (so called) Robert M'Intosh obtained the deed of grant by fraud.

That the defendant filed a general demurrer to the writ of scire facias, which was, after argument, disposed of by the judgment of the Court, which was delivered by His Honor Sir Alfred Stephen, Knight, &c., Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, on the 2nd day of April, 1851, in favour of the said defendant; the Court holding that the deed of grant was a nullity, and that the writ of scire facias was unnecessary and improper; the grant being issued in error, and by misrepresentation, to a dead man, and that therefore the grant was simply void, without proceedings of any kind. His Honor further held, that it was hardly necessary to cite authorities to shew that there could be no grant without a grantee, and that the writ shewed that the defendant in this case was neither the grantee nor the representative of the grantee, and that the writ seemed to be not sustainable by principle or precedent.

That in the month of June, 1851, at the sittings for the trial of causes, at the Supreme Court, the material question as to heirship was determined by the verdict of a jury of four persons, tried before the Chief Justice aforesaid, in favour of your Petitioner, as to the illegitimacy of the so called Robert M'Intosh, in which trial an affidavit, made by the defendant in the month of May, 1851, as to the day of his birth and christening, was put in as evidence in the cause, which proved against him in the said trial.

That in the month of September, 1851, on the 10th day thereof, at the sittings, the Court delivered judgment in the demurrer to the third count of scire facias, in favour of the plaintiff; that the defendant did, by a successful personation, cause the Crown to deliver the said grant to him, the said defendant; the Crown at the same time believing that they were delivering the same to original promisee, the said Robert M'Intosh, deceased, and that he, the defendant, thereby made himself grantee.

That on the 24th day of September, 1851, the Court allowed the said defendant to raise two issues on the said demurrer, which was set down for trial on the 15th day of March, 1852, before His Honor the Chief Justice and a jury of four persons, which case was tried on the 15th and 16th days of March, when the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff on both issues, with leave to enter 1s. damages, if it should be found necessary, to make the verdict complete.

That the defendant, on the 20th day of March, 1852, moved for a new trial and arrest of judgment, which was argued before His Honor the Chief Justice, on the 22nd and 23rd of April. The arrest of judgment was refused by the Court. The argument for the new trial was argued. The Court reserved their judgment.

Fraud.

That a count was then added to the plaintiff's scire facias, raising the issue of heirship, which was afterwards tried during the sittings in June and July, 1852, before His Honor the Chief Justice and a jury of four persons; the issue was to determine who was the eldest son and heir of the said Robert M'Intosh deceased. That after the trial three-fourths of the jury found for the defendant.

That after this verdict the Court granted the defendant a new trial upon the other issues (judgment having been deferred in the mean time) but which trial was never proceeded with, the issues being immaterial; in addition to which the Attorney General, on the dismissal of a motion made for a new trial by the plaintiff, called in the scire facias, since which no proceedings have been taken in the matter.

That your Petitioner, in carrying on the above suit, exhausted all his means, and has not been able from that period up to the present time to prosecute his just rights; having also met with a serious accident, by having his right leg shot away in Victoria, on board ship, by a cannon, which occasioned him further serious delay and expenditure, and since his return to this Colony he has been endeavouring to re-open the matter, without success.

That your Petitioner having made application to the Honorable the Minister of Lands to have his case referred to the Court of Claims, for inquiry and report as to your Petitioner's right to a grant of the land situated in George-street, measuring one rood eight and three-quarter perches, known as the "Bull's Head" property, has received in reply a letter from the Department of Lands, dated the 14th August, 1863, informing him that this was not a case for the Court of Claims.

That

That your Petitioner having thus failed to obtain relief on the Equity side of the Supreme Court, by the decision given in May, 1848, and having also failed to repeal the grant so falsely and fraudulently obtained by the so-called Robert M'Intosh in the scire facias action, notwithstanding his (the Petitioner's) having had a verdict given in his favour, and notwithstanding the judgment delivered on the 2nd April, 1851, shewing that the grant was a mere nullity, is now left without remedy, unless your Honorable House will interfere in his behalf.

Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly prays that, as the Honorable the Minister for Lands has been applied to, and refused to allow your Petitioner's claim to be referred to and reported upon by the Court of Claims, your Honorable House will take your Petitioner's case into consideration, and grant to your Petitioner such relief as to your Honorable House shall seem proper, your Petitioner being left without remedy in the premises, unless your Honorable House will interfere in this behalf, by granting to your Petitioner a Committee of inquiry into the whole circumstances of your Petitioner's case. And your Petitioner further prays to be allowed to be heard at the Bar of your Honorable House, and to produce authenticated documents and records of the Supreme Court in support of his application for redress in the premises. And that your Petitioner may be allowed to call and examine witnesses, and that the proper officer of the Supreme Court may be called upon to produce the records, judgments, and verdicts, delivered by His Honor the Chief Justice, in the scire facias case of 1850, number 1861, "The Queen v. M'Intosh."

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

Dated this twenty-second day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three.

PROGRESS REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on the 4th September last, “to consider and report upon the Petition of Mr. John Busby,”—“with power to send for persons and papers, and also to report the Minutes of Evidence taken before them from time to time to this House,” and to whom, on the 29th of the same month, was referred for consideration and report, the “Petition of Mr. James M‘Intosh,”—have agreed to the following Progress Report:—

Your Committee having examined the Petitioner, Mr. John Busby, and witnesses in the margin,* also having considered the documentary evidence attached, find that Mr. J. Busby accompanied his late father, J. Busby, Esquire, Civil Engineer, to this Colony, in the year 1824; and that, in the letter of appointment from the Secretary of State to his father, a promise was made as further inducement for his father to emigrate with his family, “That if any of your sons, who may proceed with you, take with them capital to the amount of £500, they will be considered as settlers, and have grants of land, with the usual indulgence of convict labour, if approved of.” This arrangement appears to have been of a special character.†

* W. Elyard, Esq.
W. R. Davidson, Esq.
H. Connell, Esq.

† Q. 66.

That Mr. J. Busby, on his arrival in the Colony, or shortly after, obtained a Government situation, by which, according to the regulations then in force, he was, while holding such situation, debarred from taking land; and that, although the free grant system was abolished in 1831, yet the granting land under promise from the Secretary of State was still continued, and that Mr. Busby, on the faith of this, applied, on his resignation of office in 1835, for a grant of land, but was refused by Sir R. Bourke on the plea, “That His Excellency the Governor did not consider the expression in the Despatch of the Secretary of State therein referred to, as amounting to a promise;” and adding, “That it may be possible that had you been of the proper age, and unprovided with employment at the time when free grants were made, you might have obtained one; but His Excellency does not consider you have any claim, &c., unless by express promise, when an entirely different regulation for obtaining land prevails in the Colony, and free grants are abolished.” (Appendix B.)

Mr.

Mr. Busby subsequently applied to Sir G. Gipps and the Minister of Lands, but was informed that they could not disturb the former decision. On applying to Sir W. Denison he advised Mr. Busby to petition Parliament, which Petitioner has done at the earliest period possible, it appearing that the original letter to his father, marked No. 1, was mislaid in the public offices of the Colony, (Appendix No. 2); and that Mr. Busby had to appeal to the Secretary of State for a copy, which was not received until 6 August, 1861. By this loss or neglect Mr. Busby laboured under considerable disadvantage in his applications.

It further appears that several persons, as may be seen by the evidence attached, who were in somewhat similar circumstances, having held Government appointments, received grants of land of various extents at the expiration of their tenure of office as recent as 1836, some of whom had no capital whatever, it being evident that this condition was relaxed in many instances. Mr. Busby, however, at the time of his application was, as he states, in possession of a capital of £700, out of which, in consequence of the refusal he received, he was obliged to purchase land on the Hunter River to the amount of £293, where he resided for some time.

That your Committee conceiving as others have received grants of land under somewhat similar circumstances, they would respectfully recommend Mr. John Busby's case to the consideration of the Government.

RICHD. SADLEIR,
Chairman.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

PETITION OF MR JOHN BUSBY.

ERRATUM.

Page 3, paragraph 1, of Progress Report, last line but one—omit “ if approved of”

Busby, sq.
t., 1863.

Government would not give land to any one in the public service, but promised the parties they should get it when they left. A gentleman in the same department applied for land, and they wrote him back, saying “ When you leave the service you will get the land.”

9. Who told you that? The gentleman himself told me all about it. There were two who received land under similar circumstances. The late Mr. George Miller and Mr. Connell. I know some got it before they went into the service; in fact some got two grants.

10. And others got it after they left the Government service? Yes.

11. Did you apply for a grant of land after you left the public service? I did.

12. To whom did you apply? To the late Governor Sir Richard Bourke.

13. What was his answer? That he did not consider the letter from the Colonial Office amounted to a promise.

14. Did you apply to any other Governor? Yes, I renewed my application to Sir George Gipps, without mentioning that I had applied to his predecessor,—in order that he might come to the question with an unbiassed mind; however, he finding I had applied, without entering into the merits of the question, refused my application. I applied also to Sir William Denison, who said he felt a delicacy in interfering where so many had gone before him, and his advice was that I should apply to the present Government.

15. The promise contained in this document is conditional upon your taking out £500 with you? I believe very few did that—I know I did not; but when I left the public service I had £700.

16. Were you obliged to purchase land in consequence of this refusal? I was not obliged, but it was my taste to employ my time in that manner, and I purchased land in the Hunter district.

17. You purchased land with your capital? Partly.

- J. Busby,
Esq.
16 Sept., 1863.
18. How much did the land cost you? It was in the very bad time, and it came to only a small sum—it cost me £293.
19. That sum would have stocked your Government land if you had got it? It would have gone a considerable way towards it.
20. Do you know what was the value of Government land at that time? I have been offered an order to select at as low a price as 2s. an acre.
21. What was the Government price or value? No one had money to buy land with in those times.
22. Was no price set by the Government upon land? I think £1 an acre.
23. What year was that? 1845.
24. How many acres could you have claimed if your claim had been allowed? I do not know.
25. Have you no idea what quantity of land you could have claimed under this promise? There were certain rules. I think it was about two sections. I know many got grants without any conditions at all.
26. What did Sir William Denison tell you to do when you applied to him? He said he felt a delicacy in giving an opinion upon a matter which his predecessors had declined to entertain, and advised me to apply to the existing Government about five years ago.
27. Did you apply to any Ministry? I went to Mr. Murray, who was then Secretary for Lands and Works, and he said that, after search had been made in the public offices, the document could not be found.
28. That document was missing? Yes.
29. Have you that communication from Mr. Murray? Yes. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix.)
30. Did you apply to any other Minister? Yes, I applied subsequently to Mr. Robertson, and he said he could see no reason to re-open a case which had been decided.
31. By Mr. Stewart: You think two sections of land was the quantity to which you were entitled under the conditions upon which you came out? I think so. I know one gentleman who came out at that time who said he had not a sixpence, and he got four sections, but he was a courtier and I was not.
32. In addition to the land, you were to receive, according to that document, the usual amount of convict labour? Yes.
33. You did not make the application for some years? I did not make the application for some years, until I left the Government service.
34. At that time grants were not given as they had been when you first became entitled? No land was granted after 1831, excepting where a previous promise had been made, and Government then fulfilled their promise when they thought fit.
35. Your claim arose in 1823? Yes.
36. What was your reason for not applying before? Because Government would not give land to any one who was in the public service, until they left it.
37. You were engaged in the mean time in the Government service? Yes, ten years.
38. By Dr. Lang: When did you leave the Government service? In 1834.
39. You are aware that the practice of giving grants of land had been discontinued for three years at that time? Yes.
40. Except in cases where special promises could be pleaded? Yes, that was what Governor Darling—I think it was—said to this Mr. Miller to whom I have referred, “We cannot give you land while you remain in the public service, but when you leave it you will get the land.”
41. If you had left the Government service before the practice of giving grants of land was discontinued, you would have had an unquestionable claim? I should think so; that is, supposing I had the means to come up to the regulations.
42. By Mr. Raper: These regulations were to the effect that, by bringing £500 cash with you, you would be entitled to a grant of land, and other indulgences? Yes.
43. You say you did not bring that money with you? No; but Governor Darling extended the time to the period of our leaving the service, and it is upon that I lay claim to the grant. I then was qualified, for I had more than the sum.
44. You say there have been instances of other officers receiving grants? Yes. I do not know how many. Dr. Douglass got one the other day, after the Secretary of State had refused it to him. The reason assigned for not giving it to me was that the Governor did not consider it amounted to a promise. Whether he meant to say that the Secretary of State did not know what he was writing, or that he was humbugging me, I cannot say.
45. You cannot say what promises these persons you have referred to had? It was under a general promise they received their grants.
46. By Dr. Lang: When did these gentlemen leave the public service? I cannot say exactly.
47. You cannot say whether it was before or after? I know it was in the time of Governor Bourke, for the system of grants was discontinued when he came.
48. By the Chairman: Have you any documents proving that Governor Darling extended this time? No, but I have no doubt there is some record of it in the Colonial Secretary's Office. Government found the attention of their officers was diverted from their public business by their own private matters, and that they actually, in some cases, employed the public money in their private speculations.
49. Have you anything else you wish to state to the Committee? Only that I have spent double the amount stipulated in the purchase of stock and implements. I find merely from memory that I can account for more than £1,000.
50. Where did you buy your land? In the district of the Hunter.
51. And you have spent more than £1,000 in the purchase of land and stock? Yes, and improvement.

52. You were then compelled to become a settler, because of the refusal of this grant of land? There was no compulsion; it was my taste; I thought it a very desirable thing. I promised myself more satisfaction from it than I found it yield. J. Busby, Esq.
53. By Mr. Stewart: Can you name any persons who got a grant of land after these regulations? Yes, the two I have mentioned—the late Mr. George Miller, and Mr. Henry Connell. 16 Sept., 1863.
54. Do you know at what time those two arrived? Mr. Miller a little before myself, and I think Mr. Connell about the same time.
55. They were in the public service some years, and subsequently received a grant of land? Yes, but they never settled upon their land—they sold their orders.
56. You think you were equally entitled to a grant? I think I was more entitled, for I possessed the means to settle upon the land—and they sold their orders.
57. By the Chairman: How long did you continue on your property at the Hunter? Between eight and nine years. I was previously settled on the Williams, where I lost a considerable sum by being flooded out.

William Elyard, Esq., called in and examined:—

58. By the Chairman: You are Principal Under Secretary? Yes. W. Elyard, Esq.
59. Do you know the object of your being summoned here? To produce the correspondence relating to a petition presented to the Legislative Assembly, on the part of Mr. John Busby. 16 Sept., 1863.
60. Have you any documents bearing upon that question? The petition appears to refer to a claim which he considers he has to a grant of land under some arrangement made in England with his father before he came out. I find on record that an application was made by Mr. John Busby, jun., in 1837, during the government of Sir Richard Bourke, and that a reply was given, of which this is a copy. (The witness handed in the same. Vide Appendix.)
61. Have you any other documents bearing upon the case? No. I see that, in the Report of the Committee in 1837 on the subject of the tunnel for supplying Sydney with water, reference is made to the terms on which Mr. Busby, senior, was engaged in England, and to a promise of a grant of land, but that seems to have been to himself; I do not find any mention made of his sons.
62. Have you ever seen this letter (handing letter dated Downing-street, 29th March, 1823, to witness), containing a promise to the father as to his sons, if they came out? Yes. This no doubt is the letter referred to in the reply given by Sir Richard Bourke.
63. Are you aware that that letter was mislaid in the public office in this Colony, and that Mr. John Busby had to apply to the Secretary of State for a copy of it? It appears that Mr. Busby applied to the Colonial Office in Downing-street, for a copy of the letter addressed to his father respecting his appointment as Mineral Surveyor in this Colony, and that a copy of it was sent out to the Governor by his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, and forwarded to Mr. Busby. In this letter the words quoted in the petition to the Assembly will be found.
64. Are you aware whether any persons who came out under a similar promise received grants after they left the public service? Persons in whose favour reserves were made during the government of Sir Thomas Brisbane had them converted into grants.
65. Do you recollect any person, under a promise from Home, receiving a grant after leaving the public service? I am not able to state from memory. Such a promise would most likely be acted upon.
66. Do you know whether Governor Darling extended the time for these grants to any of these parties who had come from Home under a similar promise, and had held situations in the public service? I am not able to answer that question without reference. They would perhaps know better in the Surveyor General's Office. I do not think such promises were usual. The arrangement with Mr. Busby appears to have been of a special character.
67. Did Mr. Busby make any subsequent application to other Governors, are you aware? I am not aware of any, excepting that already referred to.
68. By Dr. Lang: You are not aware of any person having received a grant of land in consequence of a promise made previous to the discontinuance of free grants, while that person was holding a Government appointment? I cannot state that such was the case from memory.
69. By the Chairman: Will you have the goodness to search into the records of your office, and see if there have been any such cases? This information might perhaps be more readily furnished by the Lands Department. I think they were not so strict latterly in considering the holding of Government appointments as an objection to the grant of land. Many valuable allotments in the neighbourhood of Sydney were granted by Governor Darling to public officers. During the government of Sir Thomas Brisbane, persons who came out to settle in the Colony brought letters from Downing-street, authorizing grants of land to be made to them in proportion to their means, and such persons received grants, although in several instances appointed to offices by the Governor. In other cases land was reserved, as before mentioned, with the understanding that it would be granted at some future date.
70. By Dr. Lang: Would such indefinite promises have effect after the discontinuance of the free grant system? I should think they would, providing the delay had not originated with the party. For instance, if a person had an authority and might have selected land, but omitted to do so, I imagine that the claim would not be admitted, but otherwise I think any promise would have been acted upon. Of course I can now only state this as a matter of opinion.
71. By the Chairman: Do you not think the circumstance of a gentleman going into the Government service and remaining in it for some years, would at that time have been an obstacle to his obtaining a grant of land? Yes, unless under the circumstances I have before referred to.

- W. Elyard, Esq.
16 Sept., 1863.
72. Are you aware whether there was any regulation to that effect? It was the rule; I do not know that there was any specific regulation.
73. By Mr. Stewart: It was acted upon for some years? It was during the government of Sir Thomas Brisbane, with the exception of the cases of those who came out to obtain land; but I am not certain that it was not deviated from in the time of General Darling; I rather think it was.
74. By the Chairman: Have you any idea of the scale of grants according to capital? It was tested by the number of prisoners a person was able to maintain free of expense to the Government. If he could take one man he received 100 acres; if ten men, 1,000; if twenty men, 2,000. During the government of General Darling, the settler was required to prove before a Land Board the means he possessed, by which the extent of the grant was determined.
75. Was there any scale as to the amount required to support a prisoner? No. Of course if any one undertook to support a prisoner he must find the means of doing so, either out of his own capital or by obtaining credit. The object was to relieve the Government of the cost of maintaining these prisoners, as well as to establish the claim of the settler to land.
76. Have you any idea of the value of land at the latter part of General Darling's time? I could not say, for the value of land has varied so much at different times. General Darling left in 1831, and I do not think at that time land was of any great value, except perhaps in towns. The upset price of Crown land was at one time 5s., raised to 12s., and subsequently to £1 per acre.

Present:—

MR. CUNNEEN,
MR. DANGAR,

DR. LANG,
MR. STEWART.

RICHARD SADLEIR, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Walker Rannie Davidson, Esq., called in and examined:—

- W. R. Davidson, Esq.
22 Sept., 1863.
77. By the Chairman: You are the Surveyor General of the Colony? I am.
78. You know the object of this Committee? Yes, I am aware that it is to inquire into the claim of Mr. Busby for a grant of land.
79. Are you aware of any instance where a party having received a promise of a grant of land from the Home Government, has come out here, entered the service of Government, and, after leaving the service, has had a grant issued to him? I know one case—that of the late Mr. George Miller.
80. He had been in the Government service, and afterwards received a grant? Yes, he was in the Commissariat Department.
81. Are you aware of any other case? Mr. White had a grant, but I think he received it while he was in the Government service. He had a promise.
82. He received it on a promise from Home? Yes.
83. Was there any scale for these grants at all? Yes, I believe it was according to the capital the parties at the time held.
84. Have you any idea of the Government value of land at the time Mr. Miller received his land? Mr. Miller was promised the land in 1823, and he received it in 1836. His grant was 2,560 acres. Land was merely of nominal value; there were no Government sales until the 1st August, 1831.
85. By Mr. Stewart: The upset price was 5s. at that time? I think the regulation came into operation on the 1st August, 1831.
86. When that came into operation, 5s. was the upset price? Yes.
87. Do you think Mr. Miller did not receive his grant while he was in the public service, in consequence of his holding a Government appointment? Yes, I think so.
88. Are you aware that many gentlemen in the public service were debarred from that privilege? Yes. Mr. Harrington's was another case; he did not receive his grant until he left the service.
89. He subsequently did receive a grant? He did receive a grant, I know.
90. Gentlemen coming out in the public service after a certain date—after 1825—were, in consequence of holding appointments, precluded from that privilege? Yes, after that it ceased.
91. In those cases they received the land after they had left the service of the Government? Yes. Mr. Harrington received his under a particular order from the Secretary of State; Mr. Miller received his from the Governor.
92. Do you know whether, in Mr. Miller's case, that was conceded by the Colonial Government, they considering his claim sufficiently strong? Yes, by the Colonial Government.
93. By the Chairman: Do you know whether General Darling issued some notice intimating that these promises were extended in the case of officers in the Government service? I am not aware of any notice of that kind.

Henry Connell, Esq., called in and examined:—

- H. Connell, Esq.
22 Sept., 1863.
94. By the Chairman: What is the date of your arrival in the Colony? In 1825, during the month of April of that year.
95. Did you come out here as a settler? Yes; at least I came out to the Colony at the request of an uncle, Mr. Rowland Walpole Soane, who was then residing at Hobart Town, Van Diemen's Land.
96. Did you bring out any promise of land? I brought out an order from Earl Bathurst.

97. Why did you not get that grant at once? I obtained the order to select soon after my arrival in the Colony, but having omitted to describe the boundaries of the land so selected, which I was not aware at the time was incumbent on me to do, the order was subsequently cancelled by Sir Richard Bourke.

H. Connell,
Esq.

22 Sept., 1863.

98. Did you enter into the public service? Yes, I got an appointment under Major Ovens, who was the Governor's Private Secretary.

99. Did your being in the public service prevent your getting the land? No, Sir Thomas Brisbane was then on the eve of leaving the Colony, Major Ovens had died, and I had an offer from Mr. Lithgow to join the Commissariat.

100. I understood you to say that Sir Richard Bourke refused to give it you? Yes.

101. On what ground? Because there was no record of the selection; although I had selected it, the particulars had not been sent in to the proper office at the time.

102. Whose fault was that? It was chiefly owing to my own negligence, or omission to do what appeared to be necessary.

103. Did you subsequently get a grant of land? After a great deal of trouble on my part, the Government allowed me to refer my claim to a Court that then existed for the settlement of such cases, and they decided in my favour.

104. What quantity of land did you receive? 600 acres.

105. Do you know of any one besides yourself receiving a grant of land under similar circumstances? I am of opinion that many persons received grants of land under circumstances similar, or very nearly so, to mine; I am however unable to particularize more than one, namely, that of Mr. George Miller, who served in the same department with me (the Commissariat) for many years.

106. Did he receive a grant of land after he left the service? I think it was in the interval between his leaving the Commissariat Department and taking the office of Manager of the Savings' Bank.

107. Would you consider the latter as a Government office? I think it was not generally considered so at that time.

108. Have you any idea of the quantity of land he received? I think two sections, 1,280 acres.*

109. Was there any scale of grants at that time? Land was generally granted in sections in proportion to the means applicants possessed of cultivating it. The minimum grant consisted of 640 acres, the maximum grant 2,560 acres; but exceptions were very often made in the quantities, arising from peculiar circumstances.

110. Have you any idea what was the value of Government land at that time? The value of land varied very much, from 10s. to £2 an acre, and it generally depended on the quantity offered for sale, the purchaser having the liberty of selecting in any of the surveyed districts.

111. That was the market value, not the Government value? The market value.

112. Had you any assigned servants in addition to your land? No, I did not require any.

113. Had any others? Not that I am aware of at that time. In the early days I believe parties had the privilege of getting them and other indulgences, but the practice began to be discontinued soon after my arrival in the Colony.

114. By Mr. Cunneen: Do you know anything about the claim of Mr. John Busby for compensation on account of land he considered he was entitled to? No, I do not know the particulars connected with it, further than that I understood from him, when he was in the Commissariat, that he had a promise or an order when he came out with his father, and I know he was under the impression that when he left the Commissariat, whatever quantity of land he could shew he had the means of cultivating, to the extent of £500, would be granted to him.

115. You had a written order from Earl Bathurst? Yes, I brought out a written order.

116. Are you aware whether Mr. Busby had a written order? I believe his father had an order embracing the members of his family; I think he stated so to me—I speak merely from his own statement; I have otherwise no knowledge respecting his claim.

117. By Mr. Stewart: You think it would be the same in effect whether he or his father had a promise that he should receive certain privileges? Yes, I think it was stated that his sons were to get grants of land in proportion to their means.

118. If the father had such a promise, would it not be equally as binding as if each member of the family had the promise? Most assuredly.

119. And the parties would feel equally entitled to claim it? I think so.

120. At that period a regulation had come into operation which prevented gentlemen receiving grants of land during the period of their holding office? It was generally understood so. I recollect, during the time I was in the Private Secretary's office (from whence emanated all authorities connected with grants of land), promises of grants or reserves were repeatedly made to naval surgeons upon their retiring from the Government service, as Surgeon Superintendents of convict ships; and I am aware that many afterwards obtained the land so promised.

121. By Dr. Lang: Do you recollect what was the date of Earl Bathurst's order that you brought out with you? I rather think it was dated in the year 1824, because I arrived here in 1825.

122. When did you get your grant eventually? In Sir Richard's Bourke's time; it was subsequently confirmed by Sir George Gipps.

ADDED (on revision):—On consideration, I think it very probable that Mr. Miller received the maximum grant of 2,560 acres, and that the figures above quoted by me rather represented the amount he sold the land for, namely, £1,280, being at the rate of 10s. an acre.

- H. Connell, Esq.
22 Sept., 1863.
123. Are you aware of any instance in which the sons of settlers, bringing out orders from Earl Bathurst, got grants of land from the Government in virtue of a general promise, such as that given to Mr. Busby? I am unable to specify any instance, although the impression on my mind is very strong that such instances have occurred. I was a good deal connected with the land business, for I was in Major Ovens' office when I first landed.
124. But you do not recollect any instance? I do not recollect any particular instance.
125. Are you aware whether there were cases in which the sons of immigrants, bringing out orders from Earl Bathurst, got orders from the same quarter subsequently to their arrival? I cannot speak positively on this point—orders may have been subsequently obtained.
126. You have stated that the price of land was £1 to £2 an acre—what particular time do you refer to? About the period of Sir Richard Bourke's administration. A friend of mine obtained £1 per acre for 640 acres. I myself got 12s. an acre, and Mr. Geo. Miller, I believe, 10s. an acre; while others, with small grants, obtained as much as £2—the several purchasers having the liberty of selecting where they pleased.
127. By the Chairman: Then you are quite clear, that though free grants ceased these promised grants were given? I only refer to Mr. George Miller as a proof of that. There is scarcely a doubt in my mind, as far as I can recollect.
128. Have you looked at this petition of Mr. Busby—that part in which there is an extract from the promise made with respect to the sons? I am not aware of any of the particulars, further than from having to-day read Mr. Busby's petition.
129. You will see an extract from the letter of the Home Authorities, in which there is a promise to Mr. Busby's sons—do you think that promise should stand? Most decidedly. I do not see how the grant of land can be equitably withheld from Mr. Busby, always provided that he has the requisite means, in accordance with the promise made his father. I would be disposed to go further even, and give it as my opinion, that if Mr. Busby is enabled to shew that his means were exhausted whilst making fruitless efforts to obtain the land promised him, he would even then be entitled to the land or its value.
130. By Dr. Lang: Do you think that condition allows of a grant being made to the sons at any future period, when they might accumulate property in the Colony? It is a very difficult question to answer; because if it were so, the matter might remain open for an unlimited time. I am of opinion that there should be a reasonable limit, and that Mr. Busby should have applied for the land soon after leaving the Government service, or give a satisfactory explanation why he did not do so; the delay, however, if any, is likely to be prejudicial to himself alone.
131. Does it not seem to imply, from the form of expression—"who may proceed with you and take with them capital to the amount of £500"—that Earl Bathurst meant to pledge the Government to a grant of land if they took out that capital with them? Certainly the words would seem to bear that construction, but I cannot see what possible difference it could make whether a settler brought the capital with him to the Colony, or received it from his friends on arrival, as in my case, or accumulated it on the spot.
132. There is an ambiguity about them? Yes; it was not so worded in the letter I brought out, or in many of the letters I have seen.
133. By the Chairman: Did your letter specify any capital? No, it merely said in proportion to the means I shewed of being able to bring the land into cultivation.
134. Are you aware whether Mr. Miller had any capital? I do not think he had—but I only give it as my opinion. He entered the Commissariat when he arrived here in Mr. Wemy's time, and was ordered soon after to Melville Island, Torres Straits; he remained there some time, and then came back to Sydney. After some years he joined the Savings' Bank, and then received the grant. Either in Sir Richard Bourke's, or Sir George Gipps' time he brought the case before the Government, and managed without much difficulty to get the order to select.
135. He seems to have received a large grant—Do you think he produced evidence to shew that he had the necessary capital? I do not think he brought forward any evidence of capital. I am of opinion he had not any capital at that time. I think the small rate pay of the Commissariat department simply allowed its officers to exist, without saving, and I am pretty sure he had no means from Home.
136. Had you any amount of capital when you received your grant? I had no funds of my own; but the relation already referred to guaranteed that the necessary amount, equal to 600 acres of land, should be forthcoming when the Government approved of my claim. This guarantee I forwarded with my application to Mr. Lithgow, Assistant Commissary General, then acting for Major Ovens, during the illness of the latter, and the land was accordingly granted.
137. They were not very particular at that time? No, by no means—rather the reverse; land was freely granted to females as marriage portions, to military pensioners, and many others.
138. You think persons received these grants not having capital? I am of opinion that many persons did.
139. Government did not press the proof of capital? Proof was generally required of the means applicants possessed of bringing the land into cultivation, but it was not very rigorously enforced, and a good deal of laxity on the part of the Government in such matters prevailed at that time. Many persons brought out to the Colony, from Home, furniture and goods of various kinds, which were generally invoiced at double and treble their market value, thus enabling them to increase their capital, nominally of course, and obtain the largest grants allowed, viz.—2,560 acres. The calling for proof of capital, indeed, appeared to me at the time to be a mere matter of form.

PETITION OF MR. JOHN BUSBY.

APPENDIX.

(To Evidence given by Mr. John Busby, 16 September, 1863.)

A. No. 1.

M. 1125.

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 6 August, 1861.

Sir,

In compliance with the request made in your letter to the Under Secretary of State, I am directed to transmit to you, the copy of a communication made to your late father, from the Department of the Secretary of State, in 1823, respecting his appointment as Engineer and Mineralogist to this Colony, which has been received in a despatch dated 20th May last.

John Busby, Esq.,
17, Stanley-street, Sydney.

I have, &c.,
W. ELYARD.

Received, 8th August.

Downing-street,
29 March, 1823.

Sir,

I am directed by Lord Bathurst to acquaint you, in reply to your application to proceed to New South Wales, as Mineral Surveyor and Civil Engineer, that His Lordship feels disposed to authorize the Governor of that Colony to issue to you the sum of £200 per annum, on the condition of your giving the Government the benefit of your services for 200 days in each year; such salary to be continued to you for three years from the date of your employment in the service of Government, after your arrival in New South Wales; at the end of which period the Governor will be instructed to allot to you a grant of land as a remuneration for your services, in case he shall feel satisfied with your conduct during your residence in the Colony.

I am, moreover, to point out to you that no house will be provided for you, unless your whole time throughout the year is devoted to the public service, and that you must not under any circumstances expect to receive rations for yourself and family. In the event of your acceding to these terms, a passage will be forthwith ordered for yourself and your family, on board some vessel sailing from the river for Port Jackson.

I am also instructed to acquaint you, that if any of your sons, who may proceed with you, take with them capital to the amount of £500, they will be considered as settlers, and have grants of land, with the usual indulgence of convict labour.

Mr. John Busby,
95, Grass Market, Edinburgh.

I am, &c.,
R. WILMOT.

A. No. 2.

Office of Lands and Public Works,
25 September, 1856.

Sir,

With reference to your memorial, I have the honor to inform you, that no correspondence on the subject of your claim to a grant of land can be traced, either in the office of the Colonial Secretary or in that of the Surveyor General; but if you favour me with copies of any that did take place, the matter shall be further inquired into.

John Busby, junr., Esq.,
34, Burton-street, Sydney.

I am, &c.,
T. A. MURRAY.

(37-4662.)

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 7 October, 1837.

Sir,

In reply to your letter of 18 May last, submitting your claim for a grant of land, I have the honor to inform you, that His Excellency the Governor does not consider the expression in the despatch of the Secretary of State therein referred to as amounting to a promise. It may be probable that, had you been of the proper age and unprovided with employment at the time when free grants were made, you might have obtained one, but His Excellency does not consider that you have any claim to a grant on the cessation of your employment, unless by virtue of an express promise, when an entirely different regulation for obtaining land prevails in the Colony, and free grants are abolished.

Mr. John Busby, junr.

I have, &c.,
E. DEAS THOMSON.

Sydney, 12 October, 1863.

Sir,

When I had the honor to meet the Committee on my claim, it did not occur to me to adduce the case of my relative, Mr. Jas. Busby, when asked if I had brought capital to the Colony. We came together, and were alike without means. This fact was not deemed an obstacle. He stated his purpose to remain, and got his grant of 2,000 acres, as may be seen in the records of the Survey Office. We both expended more than double the sum required by the rules, and relieved the Government of the expense and control of so many convicts. The Government, when convinced that the purpose was bond fide, was not rigid, although many abused its bounty. Had the importation of capital been a sine qua non, no Australian could have obtained land by grant. It may be suggested that I could not reasonably have hoped for it under the proviso of bringing capital. I answer that no idea then existed of the discontinuance of grants, or that such an objection would be urged. The Board for investigating claims were liberal in their estimate of the assets of claimants, but, although it might be assumed they were imported, did not question the fact.

I have, &amp;c.,

JOHN BUSBY.

Richard Sadleir, Esq., M.P.,
Chairman of the Board.

MR. JOHN BUSBY.
(PETITION OF MR. JAMES M'INTOSH.)

FINAL REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on the 4th September, 1863, "to consider and report upon the Petition of Mr. John Busby"—"with power to send for persons and papers, and to report the Minutes of Evidence taken before them, from time to time, to this House," to whom, on the 29th of the same month was referred, for consideration and report, "the Petition presented by Dr. Lang, on the 4th September, from Mr. James M'Intosh"—before whom, on the 6th October, 1863, Mr. Robert M'Intosh obtained "leave to appear in person, or by counsel or attorney, in reference to the Petition of the said James M'Intosh"—and before whom also, on the 25th November, 1863, Mr. James M'Intosh was "allowed to examine witnesses in the room personally, and to call for papers, and otherwise conduct the inquiry in the matter on his own behalf"—have agreed to the following final Report :—

Your Committee, having examined the witnesses named in the margin,* and allowed the petitioner, James M'Intosh, in support of the petition, and Robert M'Intosh against the petitioner, to appear and support their views of the case, are of opinion that James M'Intosh is not, as he represents himself to be, either the heir at law or the eldest brother, but appears throughout to be acting in the assumed capacity of agent for the family, although Thomas Barker, one of the Trustees, is still alive, as it is evident there were children born in wedlock before him, namely, Mary, now Mrs. Wilson; John, now deceased, who has left a numerous family; of whom some are sons, and who willed all his property to his wife, now Mary Jane Bawn; also Eliza, now Barnes. The property in question was held under lease implying a promise of grant to one Sergeant Daniel Humm, and purchased from him by Robert M'Intosh, senior.

- * Mr. J. Stewart.
- Mrs. M. Wilson.
- C. B. Stephen, Esq.
- F. J. Garrick, Esq.
- Mr. G. J. Crouch, junr.
- W. G. Pennington, Esq.
- Mrs. M. Bawn.

Your Committee find this to be a very complicated case, it having been already twice tried in the Supreme Court, once in the year 1850, to repeal the grant, because it was alleged to be obtained by fraud, <sup>228, 253.</sup> when it was decided against James M'Intosh. The grant having been issued, through misrepresentation, to a dead man, was pronounced a nullity, and did not therefore require repealing, the estate being being still in the Crown. Another issue was raised that the estate 367, 369. was not void, but voidable, the Jury having determined that the grant was fraudulently obtained.

The case was again tried in 1852, on the question of heirship, the father, Robert, having died intestate; at least his will, which it is
 140. asserted he had made, not having been found, and it being alleged that Robert M'Intosh was illegitimate. This trial, however, was decided 232. in favour of Robert by a majority of the jury.

A new trial was granted to James M'Intosh, but, owing to 259. some error of his solicitor, was never gone into.

On this issue the Attorney General decided that the case could not be re-opened, as there was no precedent on the books for so doing.

369. A new trial was also granted to Robert, which never took place.

Upon the question of re-opening the case, Mr. Garrick considered, while, he said, he has no doubt of the integrity of his claim, that James M'Intosh is barred by statute of limitation from a fresh 269, 271. trial; that although a promise was made by the Crown, yet the Court held that a promise was not an interest in the land, even although the party be in possession, and that the case was not one for the Court of Claims.

Mr. Pennington, however, conceives that the present Attorney General may be induced to take a different view of the case from his
 376. predecessor, and issue a fresh scire facias, so as to enable James M'Intosh, 315. or the rightful heir, if Robert be not the heir, to proceed to a new trial. He is of opinion that there has been a failure of justice in this, 370. and that through no fault of the prosecutor.

Your Committee, therefore, finding it is not a case for the Court of Claims—that the deed issued to Robert M'Intosh is of no value, being a nullity, as issued, through misrepresentation, to a dead man—that the property virtually lies in the Crown—that, according to the Proclamation of June, 1829, the Crown gave assurance to all parties who had fulfilled the conditions attached to grants that they would issue deed of grant—that Robert M'Intosh, by frequent payments from the rental of the estate to the other children of the family, through the Trustees, before he received said grant, as alleged falsely, did thereby acknowledge their interest in the property—and that both solicitors examined (Messrs. Garrick and Pennington), consider there has been a failure of justice in the case,—would respectfully recommend the whole matter at issue to the reconsideration of the Crown in the way suggested by Mr. Pennington, who thinks the proper way to raise the question again is for the Crown to grant a scire facias, which he considers is a matter entirely in the discretion of the Attorney General. The said Robert M'Intosh still retains possession of the property.

RICHARD SADLEIR,
 Chairman.

122. About what date? I shall be forty-nine the 2nd of next June.

138. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Did you ever hear father and mother say what age he was when they landed in the Colony in 1814? No.
139. Were you in Parramatta when my father died? Yes, and before our father's death some time.
140. Did he send Mrs. Burns to Sydney for his box and papers before his death, and say his will was made, and his family all provided for? I will tell you as it happened: I was living with Mrs. Dickson, the sister of the late Surveyor General, Mr. Oxley, and that lady, when my father was ill, went to see him, as he was staying at my sister's. She had previously said to me, "Mary, do you know whether your father has made a will?" I said I did not; so she went to my sister's, where father was very ill, and was lying upon the sofa in the front parlour. He said he was very ill; and she said "You have a large family, you had better get your will made, and I will send to Dr. Sherwin who was attending my father." My father died on the 3rd November, 1829, and was buried on the 5th. A few days after, my sister came to Mrs. Dickson crying, saying that when they came down to breakfast in the morning Robert

- Robert was gone, and they had found the keys hanging in the chest; Mrs. Dickson said she would send the constable after him, and that he would be transported. My sister said she did not wish to do that, but that she would see him, and try to arrange matters.
145. By the Chairman: Do you know yourself that Robert had taken them? I did not see them, but my sister said he had taken them. Mrs. Mary Wilson.
15 Dec., 1863.

156. Do you remember that the defendant said, that if he were allowed to take out letters of administration he would secure the widow with a small portion of £40 a year for life, and divide the property among the family? Yes, I recollect Mrs. Burns coming down to Mrs. Dickson's, and saying that my brother was going to make arrangements with us for taking out letters of administration, and I went to Sydney to a cottage in Castlereagh-street.
157. To Mr. Carter's, the Master in Equity? Yes.
158. What did you go there for? To make arrangements with him to divide the property. He said our stepmother should take £40 a year, and that he would divide the rest among the family.

164. What did he tell you in 1836? He said the Governor had given him a grant of the property—that it was his, and that he would not give me any more quarterly money.
165. What did you do then? He told me he knew I could not go to law, as I had no money. I asked him why he did not give it me—that he had no occasion to take it; my husband was a respectable man, and of good connections. He said he was not obliged, and he would not give it me.
166. Did he stop all the other money? He did not give it to the others, and my sisters had to go to service.
167. He kept the little ones? For a time, but they soon went to service. Charley was twelve when he went to do for himself.
168. You know that John got his quarterly money under this trust deed? Yes.
169. If I read this—this is a conveyance—can you recollect anything about it? If I can remember it I will say yes, if not I will not. (Mr. M'Intosh read the document and handed it in. Vide Appendix.)
170. By the Chairman: Did you ever see that document before? I cannot remember these words exactly. I remember the gentleman reading a paper. I do not know what it was, but it was that my brother was to administer to the property.
171. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: You remember that the property was to be divided? Yes, and that the money was to be £6 12s. 6d. a quarter.
172. By the Chairman: Did you ever see Mr. Barker or Mr. Gray? No, I never went to them; my brother John went several times to them. Robert said to me, "If you do anything, you cannot do anything to me, but to Mr. Barker."

191. Did you bring a baby with you in your arms to my place before you were married? Yes.

198. Did your husband mortgage it to one George Watson, a butcher? That was a long time after.
199. For £250 or £150? I do not know how much it was. You said you would give the ground instead of the money, as your wife would not allow you to pay the money. You did not sign the conveyance for some time, and you then threatened you would not give a conveyance unless my husband let you have a paddock of oats that was worth £20.
200. Did you ever redeem that land? No, we did not wish to redeem it.
201. What did you do with the money that arose from the mortgage of that land? It went towards a lawsuit; this property was then in the hands of the Court.
202. Did you not mortgage it to raise money to bring an action against me? Some of it—only my part.
203. Are not these papers and documents you have talked of part and parcel of the lawsuits already tried in the Supreme Court? At the beginning—the first part of it.

208. You lost in the lawsuit all the property I gave you? You never gave me money; you took away my money.
209. You say that Mrs. Dickson, when my father was ill, came down and examined the box of papers? No, I did not say Mrs. Dickson; I never knew that she saw the box; she went to my father, and said he had a large family, he had better make a will —
210. You know nothing of that of your own knowledge? I heard it from her.
211. Was not that all stated in the Supreme Court? It was all mentioned in that last case.

213. Were you not present, and did you not give evidence? Yes.
214. Did you give evidence on oath in the Supreme Court, in 1851, about the pillow-case, the papers, and the things you have stated just now? Yes; the Judge asked me, and I gave answers the same as I have done now. I could not say the year it was in; I think about twelve years ago.

TUESDAY, 22 DECEMBER, 1863.

Present:—

MR. CUNNEEN, | MR. DANGAR,
DR. LANG.

RICHARD SADLEIR, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. J. M'Intosh appeared in support of the Petition.

Mr. R. M'Intosh appeared to oppose the Petition.

Cecil Bedford Stephen, Esq., Judge's Associate, called in and examined:—

215. By the Chairman: You have been summoned in the case of M'Intosh to produce certain papers from the Supreme Court? To produce the Judge's note-book and judgments. C. B. Stephen,
Esq.

216. Do you produce those documents? I have been desired by the Chief Justice to read this statement to you. (The witness read the same, viz.:—) 22 Dec., 1863.

"The Chief Justice will, with pleasure, furnish the Committee with a copy of his notes of the evidence in the case mentioned; but he conceives the principle to be of importance that a Judge's notes are not public property, nor accessible except as a matter of courtesy—not in any instance of right. As to the 'judgment' mentioned by the Committee, if the formal judgment be intended, the Chief Justice has not the custody of such records; and if the written reasons for that formal judgment be meant, such papers are published always by the newspaper reporters, and are not in the Chief Justice's possession in any other form."

217. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: In what month in 1850 did the first scire facias issue to repeal this grant? I know nothing about the scire facias. I have the printed judgments outside if you wish to read them; they are simply extracts from newspapers, and the Chief Justice desired me to say that it would be inconvenient for me to leave them here, as they are constantly being referred to.

218. Is that in your handwriting (handing a paper marked B to witness)? No. I went through the note-books, and made a memorandum wherever I found any entry relating to M'Intosh's case; I wrote it out, and signed it myself, and this appears to be a copy made by Mr. Crouch.

219. Can you tell the Committee is that the first proceeding that was taken by me? If this is a correct copy of the memorandum made by me (which I do not know, but presume it is), the first mention of Reg. v. M'Intosh in the Chief Justice's note-book is under date of 3rd August, 1850.

220. There might have been a scire facias issued before this—you cannot tell? I do not know of any.

221. Can you tell the Committee when the Chief Justice delivered the first judgment in this scire facias? No. I have a scrap-book, containing the printed judgments cut out of the newspaper, outside.

222. Have you any record of the verdicts that were given in these scire facias cases? They will be with the Prothonotary.

Francis James Garrick, Esq., called in and examined:—

223. By the Chairman: You have been summoned here to give evidence in the case of F. J. Garrick, James M'Intosh? Yes. F. J. Garrick, Esq.

224. Do you know anything of the case? I know a great deal about it; but I do not know upon what points you desire to be informed. I will answer any questions that may be put to me. 22 Dec., 1863.

225. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: I believe you were an articled clerk to Mr. Andrew Hardie M'Culloch, when you had my case before you? I was.

226. Do you know of your own knowledge when my first scire facias issued? I do not; it issued, I believe, before I went into the office.

227. My second or amended scire facias, are you aware that it issued on the 3rd August, 1850? Not of my own knowledge.

228. Are you aware that the scire facias that issued on the 3rd August, 1850, issued on the ground of fraud? I believe a scire facias issued on the ground of fraud, which scire facias that was I do not remember.

229. Just look at that (handing a paper to the witness) and see if that will refresh your memory? That does not refresh my memory as to dates, because I am ignorant of dates.

230. Did you draw out that case? Yes, the case was drawn by me for the opinion of counsel, Mr. Manning.

231. Did you draw that from other papers? Yes, I drew it from other papers that were before me. I have no doubt that the statement in that is correct, but when you ask me of my own knowledge I am unable to state anything. I have no personal knowledge, and as it is some years ago I cannot recollect dates.

232. After that verdict of March, 1852, it states here, which is perfectly true, "I can say of my own knowledge" — ? I recollect of my own knowledge the count being added raising the

F. J. Garrick, the issue whether Robert M'Intosh was the heir at law or not. I do not know whether it was in 1852 or not; it was after the determination of the other issue. The question whether Robert M'Intosh was heir at law was determined in Robert M'Intosh's favour.

Esq.
22 Dec., 1863.

233. Was the heirship in this case tried twice? Not to my own knowledge.

234. Do you know what this issue was that was tried here? I believe there was a prior issue, but I cannot speak to that of my own knowledge.

235. Are you aware that the issue tried here was, "Who is the eldest son and heir of Robert M'Intosh"? I believe that was the prior issue that was found for you.

236. This is the last thing that was tried—who was the eldest son? Yes, that was the last, but I believe there was a prior issue on the records of the Court.

237. It was of a different nature—was it not upon the illegitimacy of the defendant? That I cannot tell; I cannot speak from my personal knowledge. I believe it had reference to the same question, but how the language of the scire facias or count was framed I cannot recollect.

238. By the Chairman: Did I not understand you to say that this was the case you got up for Mr. Manning? Yes.

239. That does not prove a fraud? That proves nothing.

240. What we want to get at is this question—whether James M'Intosh is the heir at law or not? Of which fact I have no knowledge.

241. Will you look at that (handing witness the petition referred to the Committee)? I have read that, and I believe all the facts therein stated to be correctly stated. Of my own knowledge I know nothing; I believe there was a prior issue as to legitimacy, which was determined in favour of James M'Intosh, and there remained that issue upon the records of the Court when the sci. fa. was amended by adding another count.

242. Are you aware whether there was another trial in 1852, raising the issue of heirship? I do not know of my own knowledge, but I believe there were two issues, both substantially to the same point, one on the record of the Court in favour of James M'Intosh, the other in favour of Robert M'Intosh; whether they were technically worded in the same way I do not know.

243. By Dr. Lang: But both of the cases involved the same point? I believe substantially they did. I do not know whether the issue was worded in the same way—whether he was son or not, or whether he was heir or not; I do not know what shape it assumed.

244. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Have you any recollection of the trial of 16th March, 1852—this (handing witness a newspaper extract) may call it to your recollection? No, I have not a personal recollection of that trial, though I was in the office when it took place.

245. You do not recollect any judgment in this case being delivered? Only the judgment refusing to grant a new trial on the ground of the application being made too late; you having omitted to count the Sunday, which the Court held to be fatal.

246. Have you any recollection of that judgment having been delivered (handing a paper to witness)? This determines the grant to be a nullity, being in favour of a dead man.

247. That was the first judgment that was delivered in Court—have you a recollection of that? Not a personal recollection; I have a broad recollection of the fact happening.

248. Have you any recollection of the decision of the Equity Court in the case of M'Intosh? None whatever of my own knowledge.

249. Can you speak from the papers you have seen, as to what estate my father held in the land? The Court decided that such interest was no estate at all. (Mr. James M'Intosh handed in a paper, marked B 1.) Newspaper reports of judgments are generally received as correct, and are referred to by counsel.

250. Did you see anything among the papers in the course of the proceedings to shew that this land was in trust? Yes, I saw something, I forget exactly what it was; I think it was a deed signed by Robert M'Intosh; I am not sure.

251. I may refresh your memory—had you a deed of lease and release from M'Intosh to Mr. Barker? I think it was a memorial to Mr. Barker and some one else.

252. Purporting to be executed by the defendant to Thomas Barker and Charles —? Yes.

253. Was it registered? Yes. It was the memorial I saw—I did not see the original.

254. Have you any knowledge whether the trustees acted under it? I have heard that Robert M'Intosh made payment of the rent to Thomas Barker, and I think I have seen receipts for the rent signed by Mr. Barker.

255. Have you seen these (handing to witness the several papers marked E, F, G, H)? Yes, I recognize these as receipts I have seen before.

256. Are you aware, from your knowledge of this case derived from the papers, whether this property at my father's death formed part of the real or personal estate? The Court has decided that the interest which Robert M'Intosh held at his death was nothing; therefore my opinion outside of that is nothing. The Judges came to similar decision in the case of Cockcroft v. Hansey, and they also subsequently decided in the same way in a case of my own, Guy v. Holt.

257. Was the material question in the scire facias action as to the interest of my father in the land? If my recollection is correct, no question as to the nature of his interest in the land arose.

258. What was the question before the Court? A scire facias to call upon Robert M'Intosh to shew cause why the grant should not be repealed, on two grounds, one of which was that it was obtained by fraud, with the collateral issue that he was not heir at law. I think I can explain the whole matter from the first, if the Committee wish it. I believe the first count was to repeal the grant on account of its having issued to a dead man. You were beaten upon that, because the Court held that a grant to a dead man was a nullity, and did not require repealing. Then, I believe, there was an issue as to Robert M'Intosh being a F. J. Garrick, son, but whether heir at law I do not know, which issue I believe was found in your favour. Then there was an amended issue on the scire facias whether Robert M'Intosh was heir at law or not, which was determined in his favour. I think on the determination of that issue the Court directed a new trial, which was never gone on with. Esq.

not

22 Dec., 1863.

259. By the Chairman: What was the objection to the new trial? According to the rules of Court you have to make application for a new trial within so many days of a verdict, and the Court held that Sunday counted as one of the days, whereas it had been treated as a dies non by Mr. M'Culloch.

260. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: Was not that case tried after? Not to my knowledge.

261. Was there not a verdict for the Crown after? That verdict for the Crown, as you call it, and the verdict for you, is the same thing.

262. Did you conduct the case for Mr. James M'Intosh when you were at Mr. M'Culloch's? No, Mr. Young did.

263. From your knowledge of Mr. Young, do you believe that he conducted the case honestly and justly? I decline to answer the question.

264. In what you had to do with it did you do your best for him? What little I had to do of course I did.

265. Did he come to you shortly before he came to this House, to bring an action for him? Yes.

266. Has he paid you a sum of money? Yes, a small one.

267. And all this pile of papers you have been looking at has been before you as his attorney—as a lawyer? Yes.

268. Did you bring any action against me? No.

269. Why? Because he was barred, I thought, by the statute of limitations.

270. I believe you were in Mr. Rowley's office, and another gentleman was in the same office? Yes.

271. And you gave James M'Intosh the opinion that he could not go on with the case? Yes; but I had no doubt whatever of the integrity of his claim, and that the land is not yours.

272. That is your personal opinion? You have been pressing me for it, and that is my answer.

273. You are his lawyer? I beg to say that I have no interest in the case, and that I am leaving the Colony, probably for good.

274. Do you recollect, when you were in Mr. M'Culloch's office, that I offended you in some way? Not that I know of; I do not think you ever offended me in my life.

275. When the case was tried was the verdict for me or for James M'Intosh? For you.

276. Was not John M'Intosh heaped up—was not the main pinch——? I do not know what you mean by the main pinch of the case. I believe it was always understood that you were not the heir at law.

277. On the pinch of the trial—when Sir William Manning was engaged—did you not introduce John M'Intosh? I am sure I forget. I think he had something to do with it.

278. Did you ever obtain a verdict in his favour in your office in any shape? I believe one verdict.

279. What was that? I believe the substantial question whether you were Robert M'Intosh's son, upon which issue I think it will be seen in the record a new trial was granted.

280. You did not prosecute it? I believe not.

281. Was there ever a verdict given to me except the one given to the Crown? Not to my knowledge.

282. By the Chairman: I think you mentioned that John M'Intosh's name was mixed up in this trial? I believe so.

283. You do not consider him as heir at law? James M'Intosh was treated as the first one born in wedlock. I believe there were three before him—Robert, a girl, and John.

284. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: In the trial of the question of the heir at law, did you put in these documents and papers? I do not know what evidence was put in; the case was conducted by counsel, and anything that was put in will speak for itself, as it will be marked by the Clerk of the Court in the same way that Mr. Palmer now marks any papers handed in.

285. Can you recollect how many cases you conducted for James? I think two issues of fact and one of law.

286. Did you ever obtain any costs against me? I think not. I believe we never got any costs, but I think there was one case in which you were liable to pay costs, but there were cross claims, and they were settled in that way.

287. Was there ever a verdict found for James? Yes, or a verdict for the Crown, which comes to the same thing.

288. Can you tell how the scire facias came to be got rid of? I believe, but I only know from hearsay, that you got it called in.

289. Do you know that the Attorney General called it in? Of course it would be the Attorney General who would call it in, but through your instrumentality.

290. You do not know of your own knowledge that it was through me? No, I only heard it was through you.

291. Did Mr. M'Culloch object to its being called in? That I do not know.

292. You know nothing about the equity suit that was not tried through your office? No.

293. The only law proceedings taken through your office was this scire facias? Yes.

294. There were two issues upon that, one in my favour and one in favour of Mr. James M'Intosh? Three issues—two of fact and one of law.

295. Was it an issue of fact as to the heir at law—was that one issue? Yes.

F. J. Garrick, 296. The other was a verdict for the Crown? Yes.

Esq.

297. By Mr. Cunneen: Can you inform the Committee for what reason the Court held the grant to Mr. Robert M'Intosh a nullity? Because it was made to a dead man—to a non-entity.

22 Dec., 1863.

298. If the deceased Robert M'Intosh had obtained the grant before his death, would such grant have been valid? Yes.

299. He dying without obtaining such grant, through negligence, would his heir at law have an equitable claim to a grant of land from the Government? He would have no better equity than the other children, because the Court decided that the interest of Robert M'Intosh had, when he died, was no estate at all—he had no descendable interest.

300. I believe it is represented that he had not that interest, because he had not taken out the grant to which he had a right if he had taken the necessary steps? Yes. It is a pure fiction of law—one of those things which we cannot account for.

301. Have you any idea who was the heir at law of Robert M'Intosh? I have an idea, but no knowledge of my own on which to base that idea. I have merely formed an opinion from having made myself acquainted with the evidence during the progress of the case.

302. By the Chairman: If the deceased had no interest whatever in the property, how can there be an heir at law to it? There cannot be an heir at law, but the Court had not at that time decided he had no interest. The suit of M'Intosh v. M'Intosh went upon the assumption that he had an interest, but in the case of Cockerroft v. Hansey, which was confirmed by Guy v. Holt, it was decided that there was no interest.

303. As it has been decided by the Court that there is no interest in the estate, how can there now be an heir at law? That you have to determine.

304. By Dr. Lang: Was it not frequently the case that land was in the occupation of parties, in the olden time, without any formal deed from the Crown? Yes, in numerous instances.

305. Does not the law recognize such occupation as constituting a right on the part of the holder? It would depend upon the fact of whether the Crown issued a lease to that individual. If a person were in occupation upon a simple promise from the Crown, the Court held such an occupation is not an interest in land.

306. There must be a formal deed? There must be a lease.

307. By the Chairman: This is nothing but a simple promise? No.

308. By Mr. Cunneen: I would call your attention to the third paragraph of the petition. (The witness read the same.) Do you know whether he was entitled to such grant? I have no doubt he was.

309. Then if he failed through inadvertence to take out the grant before his death, would not the heir at law have a right to take out the grant after death? The Court decided not.

310. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: If the Crown sent a letter to the persons in possession, and told them they should have a grant in their lifetime, would they then have a right? The Court held not; they held that a promisee has no right in land, whether the promise is by writing or parol.

311. If I were in possession and asked the Crown for a deed of grant, and it were given me, could any representative of the family oust me? The Court have decided that they cannot. In Cockerroft and Hansey it was decided that the Government had a right to prefer any one, even a stranger, who was in possession.

312. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: That is in cases where a man gets a grant honestly? Of course; fraud will re-open anything.

313. By the Chairman: Suppose it to be obtained by fraud, should not the Crown pursue the matter? Yes, they did so by scire facias, and James M'Intosh was virtually beaten.

314. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: On what ground? That you were too late for a motion for a new trial.

315. By the Chairman: Could the Crown still re-open the case? It is supposed the Crown can do anything.

316. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: Could not James M'Intosh re-open the case if he chose to go to a lawyer? These are nice points to decide upon. I think he could have capsized the whole thing if he had returned to the Colony a year or two earlier, so as to have stayed the statute of limitations.

317. I believe you were present at the last trial? Yes.

318. You have seen James M'Intosh and myself? Yes.

319. You have seen us all present together? Yes. I am not quite sure whether I saw your sister; I think I did, if she is the person who is now outside; I do not believe I have seen her since.

320. Do you see any family likeness between James M'Intosh and myself? I think there is a strong family likeness.

321. Were we examined in the Court? Yes; James M'Intosh shaved off his whiskers to look unlike you, and he then looked as much like you as it was possible to do.

322. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: You have known the M'Intosh family as long as you can recollect? Some of them.

323. Do you know that the defendant is Robert M'Intosh's son? How on earth can I know?

324. Can you say he is? No.

325. Could you say John M'Intosh was? Certainly not. (Mr. J. M'Intosh handed in a certificate of baptism, marked I.)

326. By Mr. Cunneen: Will you look at the paragraph in the petition at the bottom of the second page? (The witness read the same.)

327. Is it usual, in applying to the Court of Claims, to do so through the Minister for Lands? I think that would be the proper course; he has charge of the department, and he would refer refer the matter to the proper Court, which is the Court of Claims. I do not think I ever had a case, but I believe that would be the usual course. The Court of Claims can only entertain an application for a grant where no grant has issued; but if a grant has issued, the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims determines.

F. J. Garrick,
Esq.
22 Dec., 1863.

328. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: If the grant has issued wrongfully? They have no jurisdiction to inquire.

329. By Mr. Cunneen: Do you think this is a fit case to go to the Court of Claims? Certainly not; the Court of Claims has no jurisdiction to entertain it, because, suppose they found all the facts, they are not competent to give relief.

330. What is the difference between this case and those that are entertained in the Court of Claims? In this case a grant has issued; on the cases that the Court entertains, they decide whether the grant shall or shall not issue, and whether it shall issue to particular individuals or to certain others.

331. By Mr. Dangar: Was not Tawell's case something like this? I really forget the particulars of that case. (Mr. J. M'Intosh handed in certain documents.)

Mr. George John Crouch, junr., called in and examined:—

332. By the Chairman: You are summoned here in the case of M'Intosh v. M'Intosh? I am.

Mr. G. J.
Crouch,
junr.

333. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Have you all the papers in the scire facias actions? I produce all the papers from the Supreme Court in the case of the Queen v. M'Intosh.

334. Can you shew the Committee the judgment in the first case? We keep no record of the judgments delivered.

22 Dec., 1863.

335. From what date have you the proceedings? From the 3rd August, 1850; I produce the whole of the records in the Queen v. M'Intosh, No. 861, for which I received the summons. I have here the præcipe, dated 3rd August—that is the commencement.

336. How many verdicts have you? There are two trials.

337. What dates are they? The first trial took place on the 11th, 13th, and 14th June, 1851, and the second the 15th and 16th March, 1852.

338. When was the other trial? There were only two trials.

339. Have you the process book with you? No, I have not.

340. Who was the first trial given to? The verdict was given by three-fourths of the jury, by consent of both parties; on the first issue for the defendant, and on the second for the Crown. Here is the record itself (producing the same), with the Associate's endorsement.

341. What was the issue at the first trial? Whether the defendant was heir at law, and whether he did procure such grant by representing him to be such heir, and had the same issued to him upon faith in the truth of such representation.

342. Who was the next given to? It did not resolve itself into a question of heirship in the second trial. In this trial it was found that the defendant did represent himself to be the original Robert M'Intosh, and that the Governor issued the grant upon the supposition that the defendant was such original Robert M'Intosh.

343. And not only that he was not such Robert M'Intosh, but was a stranger to the blood of the M'Intoshes? No.

344. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: Under that, did my attorneys move for a new trial? I find a notice of motion for a new trial "on behalf of prosecutor," filed on the 19th June; and a notice of motion for new trial by defendant on the 20th April, 1852. The new trial was granted in the latter case, on the 29th September, 1852, but it was not continued; there was a nolle prosequi entered by the Attorney General.

345. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: You have no account of this trial which took place on the 10th, 11th, and 12th July, 1852? I have no record of any such proceedings.

346. Have you any documents, dated 24th August, 1850? Yes, I find a demurrer by defendant, Mr. M'Intosh, to the scire facias, and a demurrer by the defendant, the Honorable John Nodes Dickenson, both dated on that day. (The witness handed in demurrers.)

347. Have you any document dated 11th August, 1850? I have not.

348. Have you any dated 24th September, 1851? I find pleas to the third count of the scire facias were filed the 24th September, 1851. (The witness handed in the same.)

TUESDAY,

TUESDAY, 5 JANUARY, 1864.

Present :—

MR. DANGAR,
DR. LANG,MR. MORRICE,
MR. STEWART.

RICHARD SADLEIR, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. James M'Intosh appeared in support of the Petition.
Mr. Robert M'Intosh appeared in opposition to the Petition.

William George Pennington, Esq., called in and examined :—

W. G.
Pennington,
Esq.

5 Jan., 1864.

349. By the Chairman : You are the Secretary of the Court of Claims? I am.
350. Do you produce the records of that Court? I produce the register of memorials presented under the original Court of Claims Act.
351. Is there anything in it referring to this case of M'Intosh? I find an entry, "No. 522. Robert M'Intosh, Lane Cove, Cumberland. Land in George-street called the 'Bull's Head.' Date of memorial, 5th May, 1834"; and there is a memorandum in the book now produced to this effect—"Struck out, there being no attendance."
352. That is the only reference there is to it? Yes. I have not the original memorial in my custody, but I could have procured it if the Committee had so desired. I doubt, however, if it will be found to contain more information than is contained in this book.
353. By Mr. J. M'Intosh : Is it a usual thing when a man puts in an application for a grant through the Court of Claims, to follow it up? Certainly.
354. After it is tried and decided, how does the Commissioner give a certificate? The duty of the Commissioners is to send in a report to the Governor. They are the officers to whom the Government delegates the investigation of these claims.
355. Was that done in this case? No, it appears not; it appears that the applicant did not proceed with his claim—that he abandoned it, I suppose.
356. Can you say of your own knowledge that the Commissioners never did give a certificate in that case? If the Commissioners had made a report, it would have appeared in this book.
357. By the Chairman : In fact it does not appear to have come before the Commissioners at all? No.
358. By Mr. J. M'Intosh : The case was called on, was it not? I cannot say; I should rather think from the entry that it was called on, and the applicant not being in attendance the case was struck out.
359. By Mr. Stewart : It is usual in these cases to appoint a day for the hearing of the case? Yes, the application is always published in the Gazette. It has always been the practice to give notice of the claim for two months in the Government Gazette, to give the opportunity for caveats and counter claims to come in, and at the expiration of the two months it is usual for the Commissioners to appoint a day for taking the case into consideration. This memorial, I presume, was advertised for two months, and a day appointed for the hearing, on which day no one attended.
360. It was then struck out? Yes.
361. By Dr. Lang : Does that preclude the case from being revived? No, the party might have presented another memorial, or applied to have his former memorial reheard.
362. By Mr. J. M'Intosh : If that grant had issued on that memorial, would it have been to Robert M'Intosh, of Lane Cove? It is impossible to say—that was entirely in the discretion of the Commissioners. If the Commissioners thought the counter-claimant had the juster claim of the two they would have reported to that effect, and the grant would have issued to the counter-claimant.
363. If the grant had issued upon that memorial, would it not have been in accordance with it, to Robert M'Intosh, of Lane Cove? No doubt it would, but that is not the question you put just now.
364. Can you say from your own knowledge that the grant was made to Robert M'Intosh, of Sydney, his heirs and assigns? I never saw the grant, I think.
365. It speaks so in nearly all the papers? Yes, I suppose it would be so.
366. You are acquainted with the verdicts that were given in the scire facias cases—some of them? I know them from having read the newspaper reports.
367. Do you recollect one on the 16th March? Perhaps it would be better for me to give the Committee, from my recollection, a sort of synopsis of the case. Mr. James M'Intosh consulted me professionally some time ago, and I then entered fully into the case. About the year 1850, or 1851, Mr. James M'Intosh obtained a scire facias to repeal a grant made to his brother, upon certain grounds—among others, that of the grant having been fraudulently obtained. To that scire facias, I believe, there was a demurrer, which demurrer was determined in favour of the defendant, on the ground that the scire facias shewed the grant to be a void grant. Upon that, I think, the scire facias was amended—to the best of my recollection—and another issue was raised, that the grant was not void but voidable; and that issue was determined in favour of the Crown. Well, then, the issues raised by one of the defendant's pleas were tried in the Supreme Court, I think about the year 1850. I recollect the trial very well, for I think I was in Court at the time it was tried. The issue raised in that case was, that Robert M'Intosh was not the heir; in fact, it was a question of heirship—who was the heir at law. The jury, after a very long trial, found a verdict in favour of the defendant; that is to say, they found the issue of heirship in favour of Robert M'Intosh, the defendant.

368. That was the second trial of heirship? No, the first trial of heirship. James M'Intosh, the prosecutor, applied to the Court for a new trial of that issue, and through some blunder of his attorney—I do not know who was his attorney at that time, Mr. M'Culloch, I think—through some blunder of his attorney, or of the attorney's clerk, he failed in getting a new trial.

W. G.
Pennington,
Esq.

5 Jan., 1864.

369. On what grounds? The application was not in time, or some purely technical ground; so that the Court never heard the case for a new trial argued upon the merits. However, in that trial there was only one issue raised. There was another issue raised as to the fraud in obtaining the grant. That issue was tried, I think, in the following year, if I recollect right; and from the evidence produced in that case, the jury, I believe, found a unanimous verdict for the Crown; that is, that the grant was fraudulently obtained; that the authorities had been deceived by Mr. Robert M'Intosh's personation of his father, and that the Crown was misled by his statement—believed Robert M'Intosh, father and son, to be one and the same person—in giving Robert M'Intosh, the son, a grant that was intended for the father. That issue having been found in favour of the Crown, Robert M'Intosh then applied for a new trial, and the Court, I think some months afterwards, granted a new trial, and that new trial, for some reason or other which I am unable to discover, but which Mr. M'Intosh, the prosecutor, can possibly explain, never took place, and there the matter rests; that is to say, the case stands thus:—One issue, the issue of heirship, was tried, and found for the defendant; no new trial could be had of that issue, from the blunder of the attorney. The second issue was tried, and found for the Crown; a new trial was granted, but no new trial has ever taken place.

370. By the Chairman: Then, in fact, the Crown only can proceed now—have you any idea of the case? The opinion that I have formed of the case is that there was a failure of justice, and that through no fault of the prosecutor—although through his attorney, and therefore probably his own—he had been prevented from obtaining a fair trial of the question of heirship; and then, moreover, he ought to have gone to a new trial on the question of fraud; but justice, it seemed to me, would have been substantially satisfied by directing a new scire facias to issue. I, as his attorney, applied to the Attorney General to issue a new scire facias, but the Attorney General declined to issue a new scire facias, because he said there was no precedent in any of the books for a second scire facias to issue in respect of the same matter of complaint.

371. By the Chairman: That seems to have stopped the thing altogether? Yes.

372. Are you aware that the opinion was that there was no fraud at all in the matter, and that the Chief Justice ruled that he was the heir, and that it was not a fraud though he did get the deed improperly? On the question of fraud the jury certainly found a verdict in favour of the Crown, and, as I understood the case, the Court ordered a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against evidence. I think that was it.

373. By Mr. Stewart: In what way does the case now stand in reference to the last proceedings in the Supreme Court? As to the first issue of heirship, it failed altogether; as to the second issue of fraud, a new trial was ordered, and the prosecutor, according to the rules and practice of the Supreme Court, ought to have set it down for trial at the sittings then next following. Ten years having elapsed since that new trial was ordered, the prosecutor is of course entirely out of Court.

374. That will leave the parties altogether as they originally stood? The original scire facias is entirely dead and gone—it is impossible to revive it.

375. By the Chairman: Is it impossible for M'Intosh to proceed now to a new trial? It is impossible.

376. By Dr. Lang: Do you think the question can be raised in any other way? I think the proper way to raise the question is for the Crown to grant a scire facias. I think it is a matter entirely in the discretion of the Attorney General, and it is possible that another Attorney General might take an entirely different view of it from that taken by his predecessor.

377. By Mr. Stewart: The Crown are the only parties now to move in it? The Crown are the only parties to raise the question at law; there is a possibility of raising it in a Court of Equity, but it is very doubtful.

378. By Dr. Lang: Do you think it likely any issue can be arrived at from the proceedings of any Committee of this nature? No, I do not think it can be attended with any useful result. The Committee might recommend a rehearing of the case before the Court of Claims, but it is very doubtful whether the Court of Claims would try a question that had been already determined by a jury.

379. By the Chairman: Do you think it is a case that the Court of Claims can entertain at all? No, because the only ground upon which the Court of Claims can entertain it is that the grant is a void grant, and that the property is in the Crown, and it is the Commissioners to say to whom the Crown shall grant it; but they could only arrive at that by trying the question of fraud again, and that they would not do; for though a very good tribunal to try ordinary claims, it is not a good tribunal to try complicated questions of fact.

380. By Mr. Stewart: Are you aware of any such cases having come before and been disposed of by the Court of Claims? No, I do not think it likely there has been such a case—I do not know of such.

381. It would be difficult to bring the question before the Court of Claims if there were no precedent for it? I can see no grounds, after a case has been once tried by a jury, to resubmit it to the Court of Claims upon the same point.

382. By the Chairman: In fact the Court of Claims cannot supersede the judgment or decision of a jury? No.

383. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Was this case ever before the Court of Claims? Yes, the record shews it.

W. G.
Pennington,
Esq.
5 Jan., 1864.

384. But the Court had no opportunity of inquiring into it? No.
385. By Mr. Stewart: In fact, according to that, the grant was issued without the intervention of the Court of Claims? Yes, I suppose the party found he could get his grant without coming to the Court of Claims, and he did so.
386. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Are you aware that the grant was advertised in the Government Gazette? I know nothing except what I see in this book.
387. Are you aware of the practice of the Government at that time? No.
388. In the case of a death was it referred to the Court of Claims? I cannot say for certain.
389. You are Secretary now of the Court of Claims? Yes.
390. In the case of a death, where a man had a promise of a grant of land, would it be referred to the Court of Claims? Yes, certainly.
391. This case never was referred to you—never was tried by you? I know many grants are issued which do not pass through the Court of Claims—it is a very common thing.
392. They are issued to the original applicants? No, it is very often they are issued to the heir at law.
393. By Mr. Stewart: If the Crown saw no difficulty the grant could be issued? Yes, it is entirely in the discretion of the authorities.
394. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: Do you know that the Court of Claims is only for the purpose of investigating a case where there is a dispute? No, it goes much further than that. However, the Act of Council expressly describes the functions of the Court of Claims. The Commissioners of the Court of Claims may be called upon to advise the Government in any case.
395. After the deed has issued from the Crown? Not after the deed has issued, of course.
396. You have spoken about the scire facias—do you know whether there were two or three? Only two trials.
397. One as to the heir at law, and the other was a verdict for the Crown? Yes.
398. Are you aware that it was the Attorney General or the Queen who issued the scire facias in the Queen v. M'Intosh? Yes, because a scire facias can only issue in the name of the Crown.
399. When the Crown got the verdict, was not the verdict in the hands of the Attorney General? No, in the hands of the prosecutor of course. A scire facias is a—
400. Was not the scire facias in the hands of the Attorney General, to act as he thought fit? I presume so.
401. Do you know the reason he withdrew it? No.
402. Did you see anything written by the Chief Justice in the paper? I read the paper, but perhaps it would be wasting the time of the Committee, to state matter of which I have no knowledge except from the newspaper.
403. If a person has been at law for ten or twenty years, and had the assistance of Sir William Manning, Mr. Darvall, and all the head men of the Colony, to prosecute his case, do you mean to say that he has not had fair justice done to him? I thought there had been a failure of justice in this case, because Mr. James M'Intosh had been prevented a new trial in consequence of the neglect of his attorney.
404. Would you think there had been a failure of justice when the case had been conducted by the leading members of the bar, and prosecuted for ten or twenty years? That is a matter of opinion.
405. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: In cases that are referred to the Court of Claims—is it not where there is a grant issued? Where the Crown has made a promise, it is the duty of the Commissioners to advise the Crown to whom a grant should be issued.
406. In this case has there ever been a grant issued in point of law? Yes, there is a grant to Robert M'Intosh, which I suppose is a good grant until it is impeached.
407. Is it the case or not, that where a grant is obtained by fraud it is void? Yes, certainly.
408. It passes no legal estate to any one? No.
409. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: It is void as a matter of law? Yes, of course.
410. By Mr. Stewart: That is a matter of clear law? No doubt; that was the question sent to the jury—to try whether the grant was obtained by fraud or not.
411. On that question a new trial was granted? Yes.
412. By the Chairman: What was the decision of the jury in the trial of fraud? A verdict for the Crown.
413. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Is it the case, where a verdict is given for the Crown, that the benefit of that verdict goes to the subject? It is the Crown prosecuting by James M'Intosh.
414. What is the object then of a subject taking out a scire facias, if the verdict is for the Queen and he does not get the benefit of it? These are really only matters of legal opinion, and many of them are points upon which the Committee are just as well informed as a professional witness.
415. Is it not for the benefit of the subject? Of course it is like any other prosecution. (Mr. J. M'Intosh handed in a paper. Vide Appendix A 2.)

Mrs. Mary Jane Bawn called in and examined:—

Mrs. Mary
Jane Bawn.
5 Jan., 1864.

416. By the Chairman: Do you know what you are summoned here for? No.
417. You do not know what the case is? Yes, a little—not exactly.
418. About the two M'Intoshes—about some disputed property? Yes.
419. Are you a relation of the family? A sister.

420. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Was your former husband summoned on this case? He was summoned on a case in 1851. Mrs. Mary Jane Bawn.
421. A scire facias case? Yes.
422. As a witness for James M'Intosh? Yes. 5 Jan., 1864.
423. Did he give evidence upon it? I believe he did; that I cannot say—I was not present.
424. By the Chairman: Do you know anything of the trial yourself? No.
425. What do you know of this case personally—of your own knowledge? I cannot say I know anything at all, scarcely. I know my husband has received money from his eldest brother as regards his property, both here and in Van Diemen's Land. We received money here, and timber there.
426. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: What was it for? As regards rent for the "Bull's Head."
427. In consideration of what document did you receive it? My husband had a trust deed, and I always understood that it was from that that there was a settlement.
428. By the Chairman: A settlement between Robert M'Intosh and your husband? Yes.
429. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: And all the other members of the family? And all the other members of the family as well. Sometimes Robert has paid his brother £10 a quarter; it was less than that at some other times, but I could not say what it was. We went to Van Diemen's Land, and his brother owed my husband some money, and he wrote him for it, and said timber would suit him as well as money, or better, as he was making up furniture, and Robert sent him some cedar.
430. Did he receive it from the death of his father up to 1836 without its being stopped? That I cannot say; he received it some time before I was married. At one time, prior to our marriage, he said he had not received the quarter's money.
431. Do you recollect, when you came back, Robert saying why he had stopped the money? When my husband came back his trade was very bad, and he said that with what little money was coming to him he would make a start in. He asked Robert for the money that was due to him, and Robert said he could not give it him just at present, but that in a little time he would try and give him some. He did give him some money at this time, and some time afterwards he told my husband the Government had given it to him—meaning the property. My husband, in answer, said, "How could the Government give it to you?" A little dispute took place, and Robert went away. We never got any money from that time.
432. By the Chairman: In what year was that? I could not tell you; I have a very bad memory.
433. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Did he tell you that he had got a grant? He said Government had given it to him, but he did not mention the word "grant."
434. By the Chairman: All you know about the matter is, that this money was given for a certain period, that after that time it was withdrawn, and that Mr. Robert M'Intosh said the Government had given him a grant? He did not say anything about a grant; he said Government had given it to him.
435. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Can you tell the Committee whether there was one trial or whether there were two trials of heirship? I believe there were two; I know there was one in 1851, for I had a child born in 1851.
436. By Dr. Lang: You are the sister of Mr. J. M'Intosh? No, I am the widow of John M'Intosh, his brother, and now the wife of George Bawn.
437. It was of your former husband you were speaking just now? Yes.
438. By the Chairman: Have you sons by John M'Intosh? Yes, I have had a very large family.
439. How many sons have you? I had fifteen children in all by John M'Intosh.
440. How many sons by John M'Intosh have you alive? Five.
441. Did John M'Intosh make a will when he died? Yes.
442. To whom did he leave his property? To me.
443. Entirely? Entirely.
444. In that will is there anything respecting this property—the "Bull's Head"? That I cannot say. I have the will at home, or the probate.
445. Can you furnish that to the Committee? Yes.
446. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: You are the sole executrix? Yes; the will was signed and drawn by Mr. Norton.
447. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Did your husband in his lifetime admit me to be heir at law of my father? He told me he did, because he could not shew what the law required—the register of his age. He told me he was about eighteen months or two years old when he came to this Country.
448. By Dr. Lang: He was an older brother than James M'Intosh? Yes.
449. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: Was he older than Mary M'Intosh? Yes.
450. By the Chairman: What was the date of your husband's coming out? That I cannot tell you.
451. How old was he? Forty-eight, but Mrs. Robert M'Intosh said he was forty-nine, and his age is put down upon his tomb as forty-nine.
452. When did he die? On the 14th May, 1860.
453. By Mr. J. M'Intosh: Your husband could not shew his registry of baptism? No, he could not; he was not born here.
454. Could he shew that he was the son of Robert M'Intosh? No; he had not his register.
455. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: You were married to John M'Intosh? Yes.
456. Do you know whether he was a brother of mine? I always supposed he was.
457. Do you know of your own knowledge that he was the son of Robert M'Intosh, the band-master of the 46th regiment? Yes.

- Mrs. Mary
Jane Bawn.
5 Jan., 1864.
458. That was your belief? Yes, and my father's belief.
459. Had you known John M'Intosh from a child, before you were married to him? I knew him a number of years.
460. Did you know my father? Yes, I knew your father.
461. By the Chairman: Did you know his mother? I cannot remember his mother, but my mother remembers her perfectly well.
462. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: Did you know me also? Yes.
463. Am I the son of Robert M'Intosh? I cannot say that.
464. Do you know anything to the contrary? No.
465. Did you ever hear anything to the contrary till this lawsuit commenced? No. I heard that your sister, Eliza —
466. By the Chairman: Did you ever hear of any doubt of his being the son of Robert M'Intosh, until the trial? I cannot say.
467. By Mr. R. M'Intosh: Did you ever hear John M'Intosh say that John Stewart came in the ship with us? Yes.
468. Did you ever hear him mention the name of the ship? Yes, the "Windham."
469. Did you or your husband give James M'Intosh lately a bond or agreement, which he has put in here? Not that I know.
470. Had you one in your possession? The trust deed?
471. Yes. Did you give it him lately? Yes.
472. The one you gave him is the one you have spoken of? Yes.
473. By the Chairman: When did you give him that deed? When he came from Melbourne.
474. Would you recognize that paper (the deed handed in on a previous day was produced) — is that it? * This is it.
475. On what date did he come back from Melbourne? I think more than two years since.

---

* NOTE (on revision):—This answer is incorrect, inasmuch as I did not say "This is it." I said "I doubt it." I have since inspected the bond, and found it is not the deed I gave Mr. James M'Intosh. The deed I gave him is a trust deed, and is now in the possession of Mr. Owen, solicitor, Elizabeth-street.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MR. N. L. KENTISH.
(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 14 July, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The humble Petition of Nathaniel Lipscomb Kentish, Gentleman,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That a Petition was presented to your Honorable House, by the Honorable Member for Bathurst, on the 22nd September, 1861, setting forth a case of extreme injustice under which your Petitioner has, even at that remote date suffering, namely, under a false conviction of "calumny"; on which conviction your Petitioner had been sentenced by the Government to "summary dismissal from his office of Clerk of Petty Sessions at Molong, and from the public service," notwithstanding that up to that time he had enjoyed an unblemished reputation two and thirty years as an efficient and faithful servant of the Crown, in England and Australia—his alleged offence consisting wholly and solely of having "unjustifiably, on insufficient grounds," charged a brother officer with "blasphemy," and alluded to him as "a brawler and a sot," whose company he shunned.

That the said Petition was, by vote of your Honorable House, ordered to be printed, but such order having been rescinded, and the Petition not having been yet taken into consideration, Members of your Honorable House are but little aware of the several and extraordinary, but serious, facts following, six in number, each of which is fully established by the evidence taken by two Select Committees on the original Petition on this matter, presented to your Honorable House by the Honorable Charles Kemp, so long ago as May 3rd, 1860, but still in abeyance, viz:—

1st. That the letter, purporting to be the judicial report of the Molong Bench, drawn up in open Court by Luke Homan Siphthorpe, C.C.L., and subscribed by that gentleman, and by other three Magistrates, was officially addressed to the Honorable Colonial Secretary, on the 11th of September, 1859, under the vehement verbal protest from the Bench, of the Chairman, Robert Johnston Barton, Esquire, who then and there, in open Court, denounced that letter as an untruthful and unjust representation "in the teeth of the evidence," constituting the proceedings of that Court of Petty Sessions and of magisterial inquiry "a mockery of justice," to which document that gentleman and Justice—the senior Magistrate of the district—persistently and indignantly refused to attach his signature, as fully explained and reiterated in his evidence given before the Select Committee, January 25th, 1861, at pages 11, 12, 13 of "Proceedings of Select Committees, on the first Petition of Mr. N. L. Kentish."

2nd. That the said letter, purporting to be the judicial report of the Molong Bench, which had as a Magisterial Court of Inquiry been constituted for that occasion virtually a Court of Criminal Judicature, falsely intimated that your Petitioner had been convicted by the Molong Bench, of falsehood, of malice, and of slander, upon which false and wicked representation your Petitioner was forthwith sentenced by the Government to "summary dismissal from his appointment, and from the public service," and was accordingly dismissed, without one moment's notice, from his office, in the interior of the Colony, nearly 200 miles distant from Sydney, his successor—Mr. John Joseph Davies—having been gazetted a week before your Petitioner heard of his dismissal, and one day before that intimation was notified to the Molong Bench;—the letter of the four reporting Magistrates having stated, with deliberate falsehood, that "the whole of the charges, viz., blasphemy, brawling, and sottishness," brought by your Petitioner against Mr. Richard Blunt

Mitchell, "had been directly and positively contradicted by all the witnesses, six in number, who had been examined before the Molong Bench," and that "they, the subscribing Justices, deemed your Petitioner's imputations on Mr. Mitchell's moral character, malicious and mendacious," but that in fact, and in truth, it is abundantly "proven" by the evidence of all the witnesses examined before the Select Committees of two Parliaments (inclusive of that of the Chairman of the Molong Bench, and of two other Magistrates—Mr. Sibthorpe himself being one of them) that instead of your Petitioner's charges against Mr. Mitchell having been "directly and positively contradicted by all the witnesses," not one of the charges was contradicted even by a single witness; but on the contrary, it will be found that all three were affirmed and established by the most positive testimony, the truth of which was within the personal knowledge of the Chairman and other Magistrates, at that time on the Bench.

3rd. That a report was "brought up" and laid on the Table of your Honorable House on the 19th of April, 1861, by Alexander Dick, Esquire, Chairman of the second Select Committee, on the Petition of May, 1860, in which report it is affirmed by the Committee, in these words, namely,—that "there was nothing to justify the Magistrates of the Molong Bench, in reporting that your Petitioner's charges were malicious and mendacious."

4th. That that report having nevertheless omitted to state that "those charges had been fully substantiated, and directly and positively affirmed and established as 'proven,' "by the evidence given before the Molong Bench," and the Committee having entirely ignored every material circumstance which it was appointed for the express purpose of inquiring into and reporting upon, for the information of the Legislature and of the Government—having omitted even to state whether your Petitioner's three charges against Mr. Mitchell were well founded or unfounded; whether his official accusation of Luke Homan Sibthorpe, and other three Magistrates of the Molong Bench, of perfury and conspiracy, to defeat the course of justice by information upon oath, is a well founded or unfounded charge; or whether the official letter, addressed judicially by four of the Magistrates present at the inquiry in the Police Court of Molong, to the Honorable Colonial Secretary, condemning your Petitioner in the very strongest language, and perfectly acquitting Mr. Mitchell of each and all of Petitioner's three imputations,—is a truthful, just, and bona fide communication, or, as alleged by Petitioner, mala fide in both respects, and based on deliberate wilful perjury, committed officially by Magistrates in their judicial capacity, for the express purpose of deceiving the Government in two several respects, viz.:—1st, by the honorable acquittal of a culprit convicted before them, on the strongest uncontradicted testimony of numerous witnesses of extreme depravity, and of heinous offences of the deepest dye, impossible to a gentleman, and disgraceful to a Government officer, as surpassing in profanity and atrocity any conduct ever before heard of in Christian or mortal man, viz., that of continually and habitually invoking eternal damnation on his drinking companions, and on the whole human race; and by the condemnation, as guilty of calumny, of malice, and of falsehood, of an unoffending, experienced, and well accredited Government officer, who had but properly rebuked and resented the intense insult of the miscreant, and had done right in bringing the vile conduct of that Government officer (being a junior in the same service as himself,) under the notice of the Honorable Colonial Secretary.

5th. That the Chairman of the Select Committee (who himself drew up the report to the Legislative Assembly,) for many weeks promised to move its adoption, but always allowed his motion to lapse, until the dissolution of Parliament on the 11th of May, 1861. That, on the reassembling of Parliament on the 3rd September, 1861, after continuing for a week or two to elude the duty which, by usage of Parliament, falls upon the Chairman of every Select Committee, Alexander Dick, Esquire, at length positively refused to move the adoption of his own and Committee's Report, which report, although before the Legislative Assembly more than two years, has not yet been taken into consideration.

6th. That since that period the said Chairman of Committee, and each of the two Honorable Members (Silvanus Brown Daniel, Esquire, and George Markham, Esquire,) who in Committee, with the Chairman, drafted, agreed to, and almost exclusively are responsible for the report, have all three resigned their seats in Parliament, and are now filling appointments in the service of the Government. Under these intolerable and almost incredible, but authentically and officially established, circumstances, whilst yielding implicit assent to the just and important declaration enunciated by the Government in the Under Secretary's letter to the Magistrates of the Molong Bench, dated September 15th, 1859, in these words (worthy of the most impartial of just and learned Judges)—"If Mr. Mitchell's character be as reported, he is unfit for his appointment; and if he be innocent, Mr. Kentish ought to be punished for charging him unjustly with such a character." But protesting that that admirable doctrine has been deliberately violated, your Petitioner humbly prays that your Honorable House will be pleased to take into its just and earnest consideration, the anomalous and cruel case of your Petitioner, who has been a sufferer the last four years under a notoriously false conviction of "slander"; and in his advancing years, after a life spent in the faithful service of the Crown, has been dismissed, ruined, and disgraced by the Government of New South Wales for that very conduct which in Britain would have been honored with official commendation, namely, for rebuking and complaining of unparalleled infamy in a depraved junior in the same service as himself; and that you will be pleased to cause this, his earnest Memorial, together with his Petition of September, 1861, to be taken into consideration, with a view to the enforcement of strict justice, which has been so long palpably outraged with respect to himself, not only who asks for no other redress than would be given him by a jury of his country as compensation pensation for having been deprived of his appointment, ruined, and disgraced for years under a false conviction, but with respect also to the several parties convicted, by the evidence taken before two Parliamentary Committees, of the heinous crimes of which they are publicly and officially accused on the oath of your Petitioner, but passed over in silence in Mr. Dick's report. In particular, your Petitioner implores, that as his strange case has already been before Parliament and before the present Government three years and two months, and all the evidence of the two Select Committees has been in the hands of Honorable Members upwards of two years; and further, as the usual privilege of addressing the Committee on the evidence previously to the drafting of their Report, was positively denied to your Petitioner, your Honorable House will be pleased to constitute itself a Committee of the Whole on this case, the evidence being before you, and Petitioner being able, orally or by evidence in writing producible, to establish all or either of the allegations of his Petitions, should further explanation on any point be required. And your Petitioner further and most earnestly prays that, on his allegations being thoroughly established to the entire satisfaction of your Honorable House, you will be pleased to recommend to His Excellency the Governor to command that it be notified to the public, in the Government Gazette, that your Petitioner's character, as a gentleman and Government officer of thirty-six years' standing, is unblemished—that he has been disgraced and ruined and expelled from his appointment, and from the public service, under a false conviction of "slander," revoked by the Government on the recommendation of your Honorable House, and that the loss of income and disgrace, distress, and suffering inflicted on him three years and nine months, have been wholly unmerited, and in violation of the righteous and eternal principles of truth and justice.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MR. THOMAS COOK.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 4 August, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of Thomas Cook, Justice of the Peace, late of the River Williams, now residing in Sydney,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner was deprived of the salary as Police Magistrate of the Upper Williams River District, in 1843, without any misconduct, and without any compensation being allowed for loss of office, although recommended by the Legislature of that period to the extent of a year's salary, but which has never been realized. This claim your Petitioner applied for in December last, by the advice of several Members of both Houses of this present Parliament, and forwarded to the Chief Secretary, accompanied, as suggested, with a truthful list of your Petitioner's Colonial services; but no satisfactory acknowledgment of such correspondence having been made to that application, your Petitioner most respectfully requests that your Honorable House will be pleased to take the matter into your impartial consideration, that justice may be done. Your Petitioner would not have pressed so much for this inquiry, had not the Colonial Secretary disappointed your Petitioner, in a promise he made before your Petitioner left the District for Sydney,—that your Petitioner should be appointed to some suitable situation under the Government; and believing the Colonial Secretary to be sincere, your Petitioner waited on from month to month at considerable expense, trusting to the Chief Secretary's oft-repeated promise during the last three years, when, at last, without any explanation or expression of regret, the Secretary-in-Chief threw your Petitioner off; a circumstance your Petitioner felt keenly at the time, and still feels the inconvenience of.

This interview, when the Colonial Secretary abandoned your Petitioner to his own resources, occurred in the private room of the Premier's office, where he had invited your Petitioner the day before to meet him on friendly terms and to talk over matters.

The cause of your Petitioner leaving the Country District for Sydney, was in consequence of an Act of Parliament transferring the duties of the Commissioners of Crown Lands to the Clerks of Petty Sessions, an event which deprived your Petitioner of the office of Commissioner of Crown Lands, which your Petitioner had held for four years over the Districts of Dungog, Port Stephens, and Clarence Town. The loss of this office compelled your Petitioner to move to Sydney, in expectation of the appointment promised in the year 1859—the result of which your Petitioner has endeavoured to lay before your Honorable and learned Assembly; considering it painfully hard, after serving the Government, in the wild bush, for upwards of twenty-five years, to be thrown at once upon the tender mercies of the world, without some provision for old age, although at the period alluded to, as now, your Petitioner was able and willing to do duty. Your Petitioner desires to add, that for upwards of ten years your Petitioner performed the duties of Police Magistrate without the slightest remuneration from the Government, and for the long period of twenty-five years had control of the police and all official matters affecting the District or its inhabitants.

And your Petitioner prays your Honorable House, upon the premises, to grant him such redress as to the wisdom of your Honorable House may seem expedient.

And your Petitioner shall ever pray.

WILLIAM BLAND.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 29 September, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.
The Petition of William Bland, Surgeon,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner arrived in New South Wales in the year 1814, and has ever since resided in the practice of his profession in the City of Sydney.

That your Petitioner having observed at a comparatively early period, the great abuses that then prevailed in the administration of the Government of the Colony, and the urgent necessity for a thorough reform of its political, as well as of its judicial system, took the liberty to address two letters through the Governor of the Colony—the late Major General Macquarie—to the Right Honorable Earl Bathurst, then Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, in the year 1819, setting forth these abuses, and substantiating his statements with undeniable documentary evidence.

That, in consequence of these representations, Earl Bathurst was pleased to appoint a Commission of Enquiry into the state of the Colony generally, under an able and eminent barrister, Mr. Commissioner Bigge, on whose recommendations a Legislative and Executive Council was conceded to the Colony, and the Courts of Justice recognized and improved, while a variety of abuses of long standing and of great grievance to the community, were swept away, and the censorship of the press abolished.

That, on the establishment of the Benevolent Asylum, or Colonial Poorhouse, about forty-five years ago, your Petitioner spontaneously assumed the arduous and important duties of the medical attendant of the Institution, thereby superinducing upon it the character of a general hospital for the free and other inhabitants of the Colony, performing a vast number of important and delicate operations, which had previously been unknown in the medical practice of the Colony, upon the sick pauper inmates of the institution, and rendering it his personal, incessant, and entirely gratuitous services, for upwards of twenty-five years; thereby conferring inestimable benefit upon the community, and saving the Government and the public a large annual expenditure during that whole period, for medical attendance on the poor of the Colony.

That during the administration of their Excellencies Sir Thomas Brisbane and Sir Ralph Darling, your Petitioner was instrumental, in great measure, if not exclusively, in establishing the Sydney College, an educational institution that has since merged into the Sydney Grammar School, and that during the period of its separate existence, educated a large number of the Colonial youth, who are occupying prominent situations throughout the Colony; and that your Petitioner was thus enabled to render inestimable services to this community.

That during the interregnum that ensued, from and after the departure of Sir Ralph Darling, and the arrival of his successor, Sir Richard Bourke, when the whole population of New South Wales did not exceed eighty thousand souls, a formidable attempt was made by certain of the principal inhabitants of the Colony to get the waste lands of this vast territory declared of no assignable value—or rather as being dear at sixpence an acre—with a view to their being appropriated and divided among themselves in princely domains; and that at a later period, during the last Session of the purely Nominee Legislature, which expired in 1842, an Act was passed authorizing the Governor to borrow two millions sterling, at six per cent., for the promotion of immigration, and to charge the interest of the same, amounting to £120,000 (one hundred and twenty thousand pounds) sterling, per annum, on the ordinary revenue of the Colony; and that on both of these occasions your Petitioner was mainly instrumental in preventing the carrying out of measures that would otherwise have proved disastrous and ruinous to the Colony.

That, at a subsequent period in the history of the Colony, when its population had greatly increased, and its resources been extensively developed, your Petitioner was also mainly instrumental in the formation of the late Patriotic Association of New South Wales, the whole correspondence of which, with the Parliamentary Advocate of the period—Mr. Charles Butler—was exclusively conducted by your Petitioner, who thereby prevented the enactment of a Constitution, devised in the mother country, but entirely inapplicable to the circumstances of the Colony, and had consequently no small share in securing for it the free institutions it now enjoys.

That in these diversified and long continued efforts for the welfare and advancement of the Colony, extending as they have done, over nearly half a century, your Petitioner was unavoidably subjected to much personal inconvenience and to serious pecuniary loss—to the loss of numerous friends, whose political sentiments happened to differ from his own, and the determined hostility of numerous and powerful enemies.

Your Petitioner therefore humbly prays that your Honorable House will be pleased to take the premises, and especially the claims they establish on your Petitioner's behalf, into further and favourable consideration.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c., &c., &c.

MR. SAMUEL GORDON.
(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 29 September, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of Samuel Gordon, of Macquarie Road, in the City of Newcastle, in said Colony,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That a Company or Corporation, called the Australian Agricultural Company, was some years back endowed with large territorial grants in this Colony.

That the said Company, or its conducting Managers, in the year 1862, induced your Petitioner and a large number of other men to come to Newcastle, upon certain promises and agreements, which, in the case of your Petitioner especially, were systematically violated, and there is now £76 of a year's salary, or wages, withheld from Petitioner.

That, besides ill-treating your Petitioner in regard to his salary and other matters, the said Managers required him to defraud the Coal-miners of said Company of their weights.

That said Managers further damaged the trade in, and reputation of, the coal of Newcastle, by shipping coal containing dirt, which they agreed with a number of the Miners to send from the pit, at a cheaper rate than that agreed upon with said Miners for good coal, before they embarked for Newcastle.

That, not satisfied with thus inducing a large number of men to come to this Colony from Victoria, upon promises and agreements which they did not mean to fulfil, they then induced another large body of men to come from Adelaide, whose services were not really required, except by way of a competition with the services of the men from Victoria, and by these practices great losses and sufferings have been entailed upon the men and their families.

Petitioner humbly submits that this Company has forfeited the right to hold the possessions originally conferred upon it.

Petitioner therefore humbly prays that your Honorable House may be pleased to address the Crown to revoke all charters and grants hitherto made to, or conferred upon, this Company, and to take such other steps in the matter as to your Honorable House, in its wisdom and justice, may seem meet.

And your Petitioner will pray.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 6 October, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned, Hugh Henry Rose Lockyer, of Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner is the son of the late Major Lockyer, an old colonist and a faithful public servant.

That your Petitioner has been engaged, during the greater part of the last six years, in the Department of the General Post Office, as Mail Guard, but that the services of this class of officers being dispensed with in January last, he was thrown out of employment.

That your Petitioner, while in the discharge of his duty, had the misfortune to sustain a compound fracture of the left leg below the knee, by being thrown from the coach when in charge of the Mails containing remittances to the amount of many thousands, in paper and gold.

That your Petitioner, in consequence of this accident, is incapable of physical exertion in ways that might otherwise be open to him; and his medical advisers are of opinion that he will never again be fit for any employment requiring active bodily exertion.

That your Petitioner being entirely destitute of pecuniary means, and unable to obtain any employment suited to him in his present state, therefore humbly prays your Honorable House to take the premises into favourable consideration, and grant such relief as may seem meet; and your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

MR. JOSEPH COLLITS.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 November, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Joseph Collits, of the Bugabigil Run, Lachlan River, Wellington District, grazier,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner did, on the 30th day of December, 1861, purchase from Messrs. James and William Rankin (the original lessees), the Bugabigil Run, Lachlan River, Wellington District, together with two thousand head of cattle thereon, more or less, for the sum of £3,500.

That your Petitioner had for some time previous been in negotiation with Messrs. James and William Rankin for the purchase of the Bugabigil Run, and the final arrangements for the purchase were only concluded on the 30th December, 1861.

That on or about the 24th day of December, 1861, a proclamation was issued by the Government, declaring a very large tract of country in the Lachlan Pastoral District to be a gold field, under the denomination of "The Lachlan Gold Fields."

That for some months in the early part of the year 1862, an exceedingly large population—between 20,000 and 30,000 people—occupied a great portion of your Petitioner's run (so lately purchased from the said James and William Rankin) for the purpose of gold mining, and thereby deprived your Petitioner of the grazing advantage of the most valuable portion of the run, to your Petitioner's very serious loss.

That on the 19th September, 1862, a letter was addressed to your Petitioner from the Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands to the effect that the Chief Commissioner for the Western Gold Fields having applied to have withdrawn from lease that portion of the Bugabigil Run lying within five miles of the Lachlan River, and that the rent for which your memorialist would be liable would be charged upon the reduced area of fifty square miles. That although at that time no proclamation was issued withdrawing such portion of the run, yet your Petitioner's run was thereby virtually reduced to that extent, and that such reduction took away from your Petitioner the frontage to the Lachlan River, which was of very considerable value to your Petitioner for grazing purposes. That your Petitioner would further urge that in consequence of the withdrawal of the said river frontage, that portion of the run remaining to your Petitioner is, from the absence of water, rendered almost useless and incapable of carrying stock.

That by proclamation of 28th April, 1863, in the Government Gazette, a very large portion of your Petitioner's run has been absolutely withdrawn from lease.

That in consequence of the proclamation of the Lachlan Gold Fields, and the occupation of your Petitioner's run by a large gold mining population, your Petitioner was deprived of the advantages of his run, and your Petitioner could not depasture thereon the cattle he had just then previously purchased for a large sum.

That in consequence of such withdrawal from his run, and the occupation thereof for a long time by so large a population, your Petitioner has suffered great loss by the death of cattle and otherwise, which loss your Petitioner would not have suffered had his said run been left undisturbed.

That your Petitioner respectfully submits that by the withdrawal of the said run for the purpose of gold mining a large revenue has accrued to the Government, by means of the selling of portion of the land so withdrawn from lease, by fees charged on the granting of business licenses and miner's rights to occupy and work thereon, and that such revenue has been obtained by the sacrifice of your Petitioner's pastoral property.

Your Petitioner therefore humbly and respectfully prays that your Petitioner's case may be taken into consideration by this Honorable House.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

MRS. MARY SINGLETON.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 29 December, 1863.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Mary Singleton,—

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner is the widow and sole legatee under the will of the late Benjamin Singleton, of Singleton, Hunter's River, miller.

That, in 1836 or 1837, the then Government of the Colony having determined to remove the police business of the District of Patrick's Plains from Singleton (where it had been carried on from the first establishment of a Court for that district) to Munimbah Creek, at which place Mr. John Cobb had promised a piece of land, on which to erect a Court House and Lock-up, a contract was made and buildings even completed, and by directions of the Government, were taken possession of by the then Police Magistrate.

That the inhabitants of the district, being inconvenienced by the position of the new Court House, assembled in public meeting, when His Excellency the Governor was addressed to the following effect:—"That Mr. Benjamin Singleton agreed to build a Court House and Lock-up, similar in plan and specification, in the town of Singleton, on condition that the house and land at Munimbah should be given up to him, and that meanwhile he would provide accommodation for the sittings of the Bench of Magistrates and the Clerk of Petty Sessions in a room adjoining his mill." To this address a reply was received from the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, under date 3rd December, 1838, that the offer was accepted.

That, on the 11th March, 1839, the site in the town of Singleton on which it was proposed to build the new Court House, &c., was approved, and the whole (with the important addition of three feet in the height of the room made at the request of the Magistrates) was on the 30th of August, 1841, handed over to Percy Simpson, Esq., Police Magistrate, and it has since been occupied for the use of the district.

That the cost of the Court House, &c., at Munimbah, by contract, was £625, but the addition alluded to was so much added to the value.

That Mr. Cobb, finding his expectations on giving the land at Munimbah were not likely to be realized, refused to give any title to the property, so that your Petitioner's late husband did not and has not received the equivalent promised for his outlay.

That your Petitioner is prepared to shew that she is the person entitled to receive compensation for the Court House now in the continuous possession and occupation of the Government upwards of twenty-two years, and for which no consideration has yet been given by the Government, but she is unable to enter the Courts of Law to prosecute her claim.

Petitioner appeals to your Honorable House, and prays that such relief may be granted as to your Honorable House may seem meet.

And, as in duty bound, Petitioner will ever pray.

MR. CYRIL CECIL.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 2 February, 1864.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled.
The Petition of Cyril Cecil, of Snails Bay, Balmain, in the Colony of New South Wales, Merchant,—

RESPECTFULLY AND HUMBL Y SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner is and has been a merchant carrying on business in the City of Victoria, in the Colony of Hong Kong, and also trading with several of the Colonies of Australia, and is now a resident of Balmain, in the Colony of New South Wales.

That your Petitioner arrived in this Colony in the month of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, for the purpose of settling mercantile accounts with his agents, Messieurs Molison and Black, of Bridge-street, Sydney, brokers and commission agents. That your Petitioner did not find the said accounts in a satisfactory state, and could not get a statement of them, although he frequently demanded them; and was, in consequence, obliged to have recourse to lengthened legal proceedings in the Supreme Court of New South Wales.

That the said legal proceedings, in the shape of an action and cross-action—Messieurs Molison and Black being plaintiffs in the former, and your Petitioner plaintiff in the latter—were conducted before His Honor Sir Alfred Stephen, Knight, C.B., Chief Justice, in both of which verdicts were severally recorded for the plaintiffs—to wit, for Messieurs Molison and Black in the first action, and for your Petitioner in the second.

That at the commencement of one of these actions, to wit, on the twenty-eighth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, His Honor the Chief Justice aforesaid, on taking his seat on the Bench, declared that this was a case which should be settled by arbitration, and that Judges should have the power to compel litigants to go to arbitration; and when your Petitioner objected to such mode of disposing of the matter, and after a Jury had been duly empannelled, His Honor the Chief Justice repeated his former opinion, told the Jury that this was a case which should not have been brought into Court, and this he continued to repeat day after day during the progress of the trial, thus prejudicing, your Petitioner fully believes, the jury against him, as they were aware that he resisted arbitration in the matter, and as such a mode of dealing with the case was strongly urged by Matthew Henry Stephen, Esquire, Barrister-at-law, son of the said Chief Justice, who acted as counsel for the said Messieurs Molison and Black.

That during the progress of the trial, to wit, on the 29th day of May, in the year aforesaid, His Honor the Chief Justice, having observed your Petitioner conferring with his counsel, declared from the Bench, and in open Court, that your Petitioner was putting "a falsehood into the mouth of his counsel," a remark which filled your Petitioner with surprise and consternation, elicited a strong remonstrance from the counsel engaged on his side, and, in the opinion of your Petitioner, considerably influenced the minds of the Jury against him.

That,

That in a case tried before the Court in Banco, on Tuesday, the thirteenth day of October instant, Mr. David Lawrence Levy being plaintiff, and Messieurs Molison and Black defendants, His Honor the Chief Justice said (in open Court), in reference to the matters in litigation between Messieurs Molison and Black and your Petitioner, that in his (the Chief Justice's) opinion, gross fraud was committed on your Petitioner's side; and when pressed by counsel who individually was guilty of fraud, he (the said Chief Justice) stated as his belief that the fraud was committed by your Petitioner.

That on application for a new trial before their Honors the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Wise, and Mr. Justice Milford, the Chief Justice stated that I had consented to arbitration. This your Petitioner most solemnly and emphatically assures your Honorable House was not the case—your Petitioner never consented to such a mode of settling the matter in dispute, but consistently resisted arbitration, as he can fully prove by most reliable evidence, should your Honorable House grant him an opportunity.

That your Petitioner has been refused a new trial mainly on the above ground, and further that, if granted, it would take up the time of the Court for ten or twelve months to go through the matters in dispute, an objection which, your Petitioner respectfully submits, is not only frivolous in a legal point of view, but improbable in fact, and highly prejudicial to the interests of your Petitioner, who submits he is entitled to every opportunity of getting ample justice.

That your Petitioner, in consequence of these several expressions of opinion on the part of the learned Judge, believes that his character as a mercantile man and a gentleman has been seriously injured, and that his position all through the said legal proceedings has been damaged thereby.

That the ends of justice have not, in consequence, been fairly and impartially carried out; that such conduct is likely to create or foster a prejudice in the minds of foreign merchants against commercial transactions with the Colony; and finally, that your Petitioner has been subjected to great pain, to probable loss of position, and to positive injustice, thereby.

And your Petitioner, therefore, prays that your Honorable House will take the premises into your favourable consideration, and accord him that justice which to your Honorable House may seem meet.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

MR. THOMAS BELL GIBBONS.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 16 February, 1864.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Thomas Bell Gibbons, Storekeeper, of Burrowa,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That, in the early part of the year 1858, James White, of Ballagama, Culaman, on the Yuglo Creek, in the District of the Lachlan, applied to the Government for the lease of a block of land, which he described as lying two and a half miles east and west of Narragugal Springs, on the Magpie Creek, and three miles north and south of the said springs.

That the said James White, in company with Thomas White, his brother, pointed out to Mr. Commissioner Beckham, the land in question, they being on the ground at the time, when Mr. Beckham took out his map and suggested some alterations in the boundaries, remarking that they would then secure all the good land in the vicinity.

That a period of nearly three years elapsed before White received any answer to his application, and he was then informed that he had not clearly defined the boundaries of the run applied for.

That, in consequence of this delay, White waived all claim to the run in favour of your Petitioner, who made application for a lease of it to be granted to him on the 20th of November, 1862, but received no answer to such application for a period of nearly twelve months, when he was informed that his application was waiting the report of Mr. Commissioner Beckham.

That, on the 27th of August, 1863, your Petitioner received a letter from the Government, informing him that the ground applied for formed part of Wyaling, Buddegower, Kolkiberti, Wallandry, and Yalgogoring Runs.

Feeling assured that there was some mistake, your Petitioner caused the ground to be examined; and from this examination, your Petitioner is fully convinced that the run applied for by him is not embraced in the runs above named.

That your Petitioner has been informed by persons long resident in the locality, that no surveyors have ever been upon the ground during their recollection. Your Petitioner has further been informed that Mr. Commissioner Beckham has only been twice upon the ground—the last time with the brothers White—upon which occasion he expressed his surprise that there was so much fine country there, which voluntary expression of opinion, coupled with his previous ignorance of the country, is quite at variance with his subsequent discovery and report that the whole of the land was under lease.

Your Petitioner, therefore, feeling that he has been aggrieved and damaged in this matter by the conduct of the said Commissioner, respectfully prays that your Honorable House will be pleased to cause such investigation to be entered upon as to your Honorable House may seem meet, and that justice may be done and relief in the premises afforded to your Petitioner.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JOHN LEOPOLD YOUNG.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 31 March, 1864.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of the Colony of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of John Leopold Young, of Kent-street North, in the city of Sydney, in the Colony of New South Wales, Master Mariner,—

SH EWETH :—

That your Petitioner, in the month of August last, whilst chief officer of the steamship "Murray," belonging to Messrs. Byrnes & Company, of Parramatta, was on the fourth of that month directed by their managing clerk, T. C. Chubb, to go on board the schooner "Policeman," and get her ready for sea with all possible speed (the Captain and chief officer not having joined her at that time). Circumstances occurred on the part of Chubb, which led your Petitioner to believe that it was his intention to run away with the vessel and cargo (Mr. Byrnes, who chiefly attended to the Sydney business of the firm, being confined to his bed at Parramatta, by serious illness).

That your Petitioner, acting under the belief before mentioned, proceeded to Parramatta in the night-time, and communicated his suspicions to Messrs. Byrnes, when a messenger was despatched to Sydney, who had Chubb apprehended; he was committed for trial, found guilty of forgery, and received a sentence of five years hard labour. Chubb was also committed to take his trial for an attempt to poison Mr. James Byrnes, which trial was to have taken place on the 17th December last, but was postponed until the 31st March next, and your Petitioner was subpoenaed to attend on the latter day, under a penalty of £100.

That since the first trial, which was concluded on the 1st October, 1863, your Petitioner has been out of employment in his profession, although he has had opportunities of being master of a ship, and also as chief officer; but having to attend and give evidence, as before stated, such employment could not be accepted with any certainty of his being in Sydney at the appointed time.

That after the postponement of the trial in December last, your Petitioner applied to the Honorable the Attorney General for compensation for loss of time and expenses of board and lodging, and received on the 9th January £10 (ten pounds), which is the only money your Petitioner has had from the Crown Law Officers for a period of five months, during which time he has been out of employment, except on a few occasions, the profits of which did not exceed £1 16s.

That your Petitioner having been prevented from following his profession, has been compelled, in order to pay for his board, lodging, &c., to dispose of his watch, nautical instruments, as well as his clothes, and, as may be presumed, has suffered much in mind and circumstances.

That your Petitioner was advised to address the Honorable the Colonial Secretary for pecuniary assistance towards his maintenance and support, and wrote to him on the 15th ultimo, and has since been informed that it is not in his power to grant your Petitioner's application.

That your Petitioner, during his long detention in Sydney, has made many appeals to the Messrs. Byrnes for assistance; but notwithstanding the services rendered to them, whereby their vessel and cargo was saved, the sum of £6 only has been given, the vessel and cargo being of the estimated value of from £1,000 to £1,200.

Your Petitioner being in the greatest distress, and having been threatened to be ejected from his lodgings, most respectfully submits his case to the favourable consideration of your Honorable House, in the hope that such relief will be granted as may be thought fit.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 1 April, 1864.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales.

The Petition of Michael Kearns, of Wiseman's Creek, near Bathurst, Farmer,—

HUMBLY SHEWETH, AS FOLLOWS :—

1. That your Petitioner, on the fourteenth of January, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, purchased from the Crown forty acres of unimproved land, situated at Wiseman's Creek, in the County of Westmoreland, selected by your Petitioner as a purchase under the thirteenth section of the Land Alienation Regulations, dated first November, 1861.

2. That your Petitioner thereupon paid to James Byrn Richards, Esquire, the District Agent for the Sale of Crown Lands, the sum of Eleven Pounds, namely, Ten Pounds for the Land, and One Pound for the Deed.

3. That your Petitioner obtained receipts in duplicate therefor, one of which was given to Mr. W. G. Thompson, the Bathurst Postmaster, and was by him forwarded to the Colonial Treasury, on the fourteenth January, 1862; the other of which was given to the said James Byrn Richards, on the eleventh of February, 1864, to be by him forwarded to the Surveyor General, and was enclosed in the letter, a copy whereof is set forth in the 10th paragraph of this Petition.

4. That on the second June, 1862, your Petitioner received a letter from W. R. Davidson, Esquire, the then Acting Surveyor General, informing your Petitioner that the said conditional purchase, made by your Petitioner on the fourteenth January, 1862, was cancelled by the Government, on the ground that it was within the Campbell's River Gold Field.

5. That on the twenty-eighth October, 1863, your Petitioner received another letter from the said Mr. Davidson, informing him that the land your Petitioner had applied for was found not to be within the Campbell's River Gold Field, as had been supposed, and that the above-mentioned cancellation had been revoked.

6. That between the said seventh of June, 1862, and the said twenty-eighth of October, 1863 (an interval of sixteen months and twenty-one days), your Petitioner had been compelled to make arrangements incompatible with the above-mentioned free selection.

7. That on your Petitioner's selection being cancelled, your Petitioner made several personal but unsuccessful applications at the said Bathurst District Land Office, for the repayment to him of the said sum of Eleven Pounds.

8. That on the second December, 1863, your Petitioner instructed his Solicitor to address the said Mr. Davidson the following letter :—

" Bathurst, 2nd December, 1863.

" W. R. Davidson, Esq.,
" Acting Surveyor General,
" Sydney.

" Sir,

" Mr. Michael Kearns, of Bathurst, has placed in my hands your several communications of the seventh June, 1862, and twenty-eighth October, 1863, the former of which informed my client of the cancellation of his conditional purchase of 40 acres of land, situate at Wiseman's Creek, upon the ground that the land was within “ the Campbell’s River Gold Field (under which purchase my client paid a deposit of £11),

 “ the latter informing my client that with reference to your former communication, the “ cancellation referred to had been revoked.

“ I am instructed by my client to say, that upon receipt of yours of 7th June, “ 1862, he ceased to occupy the land in question, and he considers that he is entitled to “ a return of the amount of deposit money paid by him to Mr. Richards, for which he “ holds that gentleman’s receipt; and it is for the purpose of requesting the return of “ the amount so paid, viz., £11, that my client instructs me to make this application, “ which, I trust, will meet at your hands with a favourable reception and early “ attention.

“ Touching that part of your letter where you state that the land applied for is “ not within the Campbell’s River Gold Fields, my client informs me that the land which “ he selected is now being worked by miners, many claims having been opened out upon
 “ it, and that it would now be useless to him for cultivation purposes. Trusting that you “ will see the justice of my client’s demand for the return of the amount of his deposit “ money,—

“ I remain, Sir,

“ Yours obediently,

(Signed) “ GILBERT WRIGHT.

“ P.S.—Cancellation cannot be revoked. My client cannot now be restored to “ his former position, as he has made arrangements incompatible with it.”

9. That to this letter no reply having been made, on the 6th January, 1864, your Petitioner instructed his said Solicitor to address the said Mr. Davidson the following second letter :—

“ Bathurst, 6th January, 1864.

“ W. R. Davidson, Esq.,
 “ Acting Surveyor General,
 “ Sydney.

“ Sir,

“ Referring to my letter of the 2nd December, 1863, addressed to you, “ touching my client Mr. Michael Kearns’s claim for the return of a sum of £11, being “ an amount paid in respect of a piece of land free selected by him, but which afterwards “ turned out to be portion of the Campbell’s River Gold Field, would you be good “ enough to favour me with a reply to my communication, and state whether my client “ may expect the amount above referred to to be refunded ?

“ Yours obediently,

(Signed) “ GILBERT WRIGHT.”

10. That to this letter no reply having been vouchsafed,—on the 11th February,
 1864, your Petitioner instructed his said Solicitor to address the said James Byrn
 Richards the following letter :—

“ Bathurst, 11th February, 1864.

“ J. B. Richards, Esq.,
 “ Agent for Crown Lands, Bathurst.

“ Sir,

“ I beg to enclose you your original receipt, dated 14th January, /62, a “ duplicate whereof was, pursuant to the Regulations, received and transmitted to the “ Colonial Treasury on the same day. This receipt shews that Michael Kearns paid you “ £11, being a deposit of 5s. per acre for forty acres of land, situate at Wiseman’s Creek, “ selected as a purchase under the Regulations of 1st Nov., /61.

“ By two several letters, each dated 7th June, /62, addressed by the then Acting “ Surveyor General—the one to my client, the other to yourself—this conditional purchase
 “ was cancelled, for the reason in the said letters stated. I enclose you copies of two “ several letters, dated respectively the 2nd December, /63, and 6th January, /64, “ addressed by me to W. R. Davidson, Esq. For the reason stated in these letters, my “ client is desirous of obtaining the repayment of the sum of £11, paid by him to you
 “ on the 14th January, 1862.

“ Between the last-mentioned date, and 28th October, 1863, my client has made “ arrangements incompatible with his free selection; and I request that you will be good “ enough to submit to the Surveyor General, that it is not competent for the Govern“ ment to cancel the conditional purchase on the 7th June, 1862, and afterwards revoke
 “ that cancellation on the 28th October, 1863. By the former communication the con“ ditional purchaser became entitled to his deposit, the bargain having then become null
 “ and void; and it was not in the power of the Acting Surveyor General, by his letter of “ the 28th October, 1863, to set up again, and enforce by his attempted revocation of “ that date, a bargain which had been abandoned by his own letter of the 7th June, “ 1862. I have therefore to request, on the part of Mr. Kearns, the repayment of this “ sum of £11; and that you will represent these facts to the Surveyor General.

“ I am, Sir,

“ Yours obediently,

(Signed) “ GILBERT WRIGHT.”

11. That this letter was, with one of the said duplicate receipts for £11 referred to in the third paragraph of this Petition, duly forwarded to the said W. R. Davidson, by the said James Byrn Richards.

12. That no reply having been given to the communication referred to in the tenth paragraph of this Petition, your Petitioner instructed his said Solicitor to address the following letter to the Honorable the Secretary for Lands:—

“ Bathurst, 2nd March, 1864.

“ To the Honorable

“ The Secretary for Lands,

“ Sydney.

“ Sir,

“ In the matter of Michael Kearns' conditional purchase of 40 acres, I do myself the honor to transmit four enclosures, namely:—No. 1,* Copy receipt given by Mr. J. B. Richards, Agent for the sale of Crown Lands, Bathurst, whereby that gentleman acknowledged to have received from the above-mentioned Michael Kearns the sum of £11, being a deposit of five shillings per acre on 40 acres of unimproved land, situated at Wiseman's Creek, in the County of Westmoreland, selected by a written application, as a purchase under the 13th section of the Land Alienation Regulations, dated 1st November, 1861, and £1 fee for the grant, a red ink duplicate of which was forwarded to the Postmaster, Bathurst, within 7 days of the date thereof, for transmission to the Colonial Treasurer, the Postmaster transmitting the same to the Treasurer on the 14th January, 1862, and the original of which receipt was forwarded by me to the said J. B. Richards, on the 11th day of February last.

“ No. 2,† Copy letter from me to Mr. W. R. Davidson, Acting Surveyor General, dated 2nd December, 1863.

“ No. 3,‡ Copy letter from me to the said W. R. Davidson, dated 6th January, 1864.

“ No. 4,|| Copy letter from me to said J. B. Richards, Agent, &c., dated 11th February, 1864, enclosing the original receipt and copies of the two letters lastly above referred to, for the purpose of being forwarded to the proper office in Sydney.

“ Referring to this correspondence, my client instructs me to represent that no reply has ever been made, either to his frequent personal applications, or to three several communications, although the money was paid on the 14th January, 1862—upwards of two years ago.

“ Since receiving the Surveyor General's letter of the 7th June, 1862, my client has made, as he was compelled to do, arrangements for the occupation of other land, which would be incompatible with, and prevent his completion of the conditional purchase.

“ The cancellation having been made, cannot, without the consent of the conditional purchaser, be withdrawn and uncanceled.

“ My client's contract to buy and the Government contract to sell was a mutual and bilateral contract—it was not unilateral with the Crown; and having been annulled by the vendor, by the letter from the Surveyor General, of 7th June, 1862, it could not be unrescinded by the Surveyor General, by his letter of 28th October, 1863.

“ The patience of my client having been exhausted, by correspondence with subordinate functionaries in your department, he has instructed me, as a last resource, to address you, as the now head of the department; and I am instructed to ascertain from you, whether, when a purchase is cancelled by the Government, the money paid thereby becomes forfeited to the Government?—in other words, is the honesty or conscience of the Government of a different quality to that which regulates the dealings between private individuals?—or is the Government without honesty or conscience?—if so, which, the late, or the present?

“ I have the honor to be,

“ Sir,

“ Your most obedient Servant,

(Signed)

“ GILBERT WRIGHT.

13. That on the seventh of March, 1864, the receipt of the letter last referred to was acknowledged.

14. That your Petitioner, notwithstanding that two years and three months have elapsed, remains without reply or redress in the premises.

Your Petitioner therefore humbly prays your Honorable House to cause an enquiry to be made into the truth of your Petitioner's allegations; and should they prove true, that your Honorable House will afford your Petitioner that relief and that justice to which he respectfully submits he is entitled, but which the Honorable the Executive Government have hitherto pertinaciously refused to him.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament now assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned, late Foreman of the Stationery Department of the Government Stores,—

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner was employed in the Government Store Department for upwards of sixteen (16) years, during four (4) of which he held the appointment of Foreman of Stores.

That upon a re-arrangement of the Department in 1861, your Petitioner was appointed Foreman of the Stationery Branch, which situation he held until June, 1863, when, in consequence of a further re-arrangement having been effected by the late Government, the services of your Petitioner were dispensed with.

Your Petitioner has for the last eight (8) months, and is at the present time out of employment, and therefore suffers serious injury from the loss of his situation.

Your Petitioner begs further to state that, although he has been promised employment when an appointment suitable to his age and qualifications becomes vacant, no appointment has yet been offered to him.

In consequence of the great inconvenience arising from want of employment, and as your Petitioner was not removed from the public service from incapacity to perform his duties, or from misconduct on his part, he begs your Honorable House will take his case into your favourable consideration.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 19 April, 1864.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Eliza Milford Callaghan, of Sydney,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner is the widow of the late Mr. District Judge Callaghan, who accidentally met with his death, while on Circuit, on the 28th November, 1863.

That for a period of twenty-two years your Petitioner's husband held various offices under the Government of this Colony, with satisfaction to the public and credit to himself.

That by the untimely death of her husband, your Petitioner and her three young children are now left in a state of almost entire destitution.

That under the regulations promulgated under the Act 4 and 5 Gul. IV, cap. 24, your Petitioner's husband would have become entitled to a considerable superannuation allowance on his retirement from public duties.

That your Petitioner has applied to the Executive Council for a pension, precedents for such a grant appearing on the Estimates of Expenditure yearly submitted to your Honorable House, but that she has been informed that the Ministry did not feel themselves in a position to submit her application to the consideration of Parliament; at the same time stating that their refusal would not preclude your Petitioner's application to your Honorable House.

Your Petitioner, therefore, prays that the premises may be taken into favourable consideration, and that your Honorable House will grant her such relief as under the circumstances may seem meet.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

MR. JAMES DOYLE.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 26 November, 1863.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of James Doyle,—

SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner was stopped by two armed men on the Queen's highway, near Reid's Flat, on the Fish River, on the 19th day of February, 1862, and robbed of a large amount of money and property.

That on the following day to that on which the robbery occurred, the account of the robbery reached the officer in charge of Police, Goulburn; and that on the following day, viz., 21st February, your Petitioner called on the same officer, requesting him to take some steps in the matter; that the said officer refused to do so, and did not act at all in the case.

That your Petitioner then applied to the Goulburn Bench in order that a search warrant might be granted, to have some of the places searched in the locality where the robbery occurred; but, to your Petitioner's astonishment, such request was refused by the Bench.

That your Petitioner has, since the robbery occurred, been put to great expense and loss of time, by having had to travel eight hundred and eighty miles in order to prosecute parties taken up on suspicion, but who, upon being tried, were found not to have been guilty.

That your Petitioner rests assured, that if immediate steps had been taken by the Police authorities at Goulburn they would have recovered the greater part, if not the whole, of the property taken, and perhaps captured the robbers.

That on account of the Police authorities at Goulburn not having acted at all on this occasion, your Petitioner feels justified in praying for such relief as your Honorable House may think proper to afford.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

HUMBLY SHEWETH :—

That your Petitioner's late husband, Campbell John Pegus, faithfully served

That, during the period of the above service, your Petitioner's husband suffered many privations in the discharge of his duties, especially during three years of his super-

That your Petitioner's late husband, the said Campbell John Pegus, died on the

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

ALEXANDER BRAND.
(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 22 April, 1864.

To the Honorable the Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Council assembled.

The humble Petition of Alexander Brand, late of Nattia, near Berrima, in the County of Camden, now of 165, South Head Road, in the City of Sydney,—

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioner, in the year A.D. 1845, was employed by Ann Cutter, late of Nattia, in the County of Camden, in the Colony of New South Wales, licensed victualler, to build for her that house and premises known as the "Fitzroy Inn," situate at Nattia, in the County of Camden, in the Colony of New South Wales aforesaid, for which Petitioner received, in part payment, from said Ann Cutter, a promissory note for £250 sterling, bearing interest until paid. And Petitioner erected also other buildings for £100 sterling, making in all the sum of £350 sterling and interest accruing thereon.

That the said promissory note was admitted by said Ann Cutter to be due to Petitioner, in presence of Samuel North, Esq., Police Magistrate, and Alfred Cheeke, Esq., Barrister-at-law, and they advised Petitioner to take a lease of said "Fitzroy Inn" and premises from the said Ann Cutter, she, the said Ann Cutter, being willing to sign a lease of same in favour of Petitioner, to secure payment of the said promissory note and the interest accruing thereon.

That your Petitioner did obtain a lease for 14 years of said premises from the said Ann Cutter, and also a lease of 150 acres of land belonging to the said Ann Cutter, as advised by said Samuel North and Alfred Cheeke, Esqs.

That, in the year 1854, your Petitioner relet for three (3) years the aforesaid house and premises to Bartholomew Rush, with 100 acres of land, at the yearly rental of £100 sterling per annum; and Petitioner appointed Charles Throsby, junr., of Throsby Park, near Berrima aforesaid, his agent, to receive the rent thereof from the said Bartholomew Rush, which said rent the said Charles Throsby received, amounting to £300 sterling, for which said rent, nor for any part thereof, did he the said Charles Throsby account for to your Petitioner.

That the said Bartholomew Rush, after that his said lease had expired, remained in possession as tenant, at the said yearly rent of £100 sterling, and continued to and did pay the said yearly rent to the said Charles Throsby, until the first day of July, 1860, when the said Bartholomew Rush vacated the premises.

That before the said Bartholomew Rush vacated the said premises, and during the period of Petitioner's lease from the said Ann Cutter, an alleged release was forged by the said Charles Throsby, stating that Petitioner had released him from paying said £300 sterling, whereas your Petitioner had not released, but repeatedly requested a settlement from said Charles Throsby, but could not and never did obtain one from him.

That two other acts of forgery were committed by the said Charles Throsby, namely:—the transfer deed of the "Fitzroy Inn" had your Petitioner's name on it, and also the name of Ann Cutter, both in the handwriting of the said Charles Throsby.

That the said Charles Throsby, in the year 1858, went to England, and after he had returned to this Colony, told your Petitioner that he (Charles Throsby) had used for his own purpose the money he had received belonging to Petitioner; your Petitioner repeatedly afterward went to him to demand a settlement, but always found him intoxicated and unfit to transact any business.

That the said Charles Throsby died in the year 1860, having previously, in his last will and testament, appointed Mr. Billyard, the solicitor, one of his executors. Your Petitioner sued said executors in the District Court at Sydney, for £200 sterling, and the case was heard before the then Chairman of said Court, Mr. Arthur Todd Holroyd. During the said trial, said Mr. Billyard stated that Mr. Oliver Throsby saw Petitioner sign the release, whereas when the said Mr. Oliver Throsby was duly sworn and examined, he stated that he did not see your Petitioner sign any document; and notwithstanding the said Mr. Oliver Throsby's sworn testimony, the said Chairman of said Court dismissed the case, and said he did not believe, without explaining as to what he did not believe—and, when, passing the decision, ordered Petitioner out of Court; this was at Mr. Holroyd's last sitting.

That, on the 22nd day of December, 1853, the said Ann Cutter made her last will and testament, bequeathing to Petitioner the house and premises and said fifty (50) acres of land, as well as part of her personal effects, which said will was duly attested by three witnesses, namely, R. S. Montgomery, of Berrima, surgeon, John Finimore, of Nattia, blacksmith, and James Kinmore, of Mittagong, wheelwright.

That the said Ann Cutter departed this life on the 20th day of November, 1858, without revoking her said will. Petitioner then employed Messrs. Bradley and James, of Sydney, solicitors, to administer to said will, and gave it to them for that purpose, which said will is now in possession of Mr. Henry Burton Bradley, the remaining partner of said firm.

That, some time after your Petitioner had employed said solicitors to prove the said will, thirty-six horses belonging to Petitioner were stolen from his enclosed paddock and driven to Camden, where Petitioner found (19) nineteen of them in a paddock belonging to Sir Wm. McArthur, and Petitioner then claimed them as his property, and had them taken possession of by the police authorities; and the police authorities had possession of them several days; then Petitioner took proceedings against the parties for horse-stealing, and when the case of horse-stealing was called on for trial, Sir Wm. McArthur—Messrs. Hassell and Palmer sat as Magistrates—Sir Wm. McArthur called the Magistrates, Messrs. Hassell and Palmer, into a private room, where they remained a considerable time, and when they came out and were again seated upon the Bench, they dismissed the case and directed the horses to be sold, at same time fined your Petitioner in the sum of £4 sterling for the keep of said horses in one of Sir Wm. McArthur's paddocks. Petitioner then told them to sell one of his horses and pay the expenses, but they refused, and Petitioner had to pay them or go to gaol. Petitioner protested against the decision, and wanted to appeal to the Supreme Court, and requested said Magistrates to allow Petitioner three days to go to Sydney for that purpose, which they objected to, but ordered the horses to be then and there sold, which was done. Petitioner went to the sale and claimed the horses as his property, and protested against the sale. Petitioner was assaulted, and his life threatened and endangered; the attorney for Charker and others was in attendance, urging parties to purchase the said horses.

Shortly after, your Petitioner went to some of Sir Wm. McArthur's tenants' farms, to seek for the other horses that had been taken from his farm; he then found another working mare in possession of Samuel Sheather, one of Sir Wm. McArthur's tenants, which Sir Wm. McArthur and his stockman had sold to Samuel Sheather for the sum of £30 sterling, for which Sheather shewed Petitioner a receipt signed by Apps and witnessed by Galvin at the "Camden Inn." When Petitioner claimed the mare in the paddock at Sheather's farm, which had been lost from Petitioner's farm for upwards of twelve months, Samuel Sheather said to Petitioner, "If you take that mare from me "I will be ruined; she is the best working mare in Camden, and none others of my "horses will work, nor could I draw a cask of water from the river only with her."

Then other two horses that were stolen from Petitioner's farm at the same time, Petitioner found them in possession of John Buckman, of Mittagong, branded with Buckman's son-in-law's brand. Buckman then stated that he got them from Dr. Sherwin's nephew, known as Ned Kieth, and the said Ned Kieth, I am creditably informed, led the mare found in Samuel Sheather's possession to Camden, and disposed of her at "Camden Inn" to Apps, and that she run in Sir Wm. McArthur's paddock till Apps sold her to Samuel Sheather.

That at same time Mr. Charles Nicholson, J.P. at Berrima, seized ten milch cows, that were decided by Judge Carey and a Jury as the property of Petitioner; and the said Charles Nicholson, J.P., ordered his men to drive them 10 miles from the enclosed paddock of Petitioner into the yard of Berrima, and directed the said cattle to be kept within the prison yard gates for upwards of three (3) weeks, and thus ruined the said cattle, and could have no other intention than to ruin Petitioner, who had to pay for the food they had, or they would have all died.

That for the two last mentioned horses, that were branded with Buckman's son-in-law's brand upon them (namely, John Izard), Buckman obtained a summons for Petitioner to appear before the said Mr. Charles Nicholson, J.P., for Buckman's expenses and trouble, as also for branding and keeping in his paddock the said two horses. Mr. Charles Nicholson fined your Petitioner the sum of £4 10s. sterling, and Mr. Charles Nicholson said that if Buckman had charged three times as much he should have had it awarded him.

That a charge of false imprisonment was got up against Petitioner by Mr. Walsh, attorney at Goulburn—one of Charker's attorneys—for the police taking Charker, junr., who had the stolen horse in his possession; but a just and impartial Jury, and Judge Carey, decided the verdict for Petitioner.

That

That previous to the horse in the unlawful possession of James Charker being stolen, one of the party that stole the horse stole another mare from one of Petitioner's enclosed paddocks. Your Petitioner found her in the bush, tied to a tree; he unloosed her, when Petitioner was attacked by five ruffians. One, the man that had the cart, knocked him down; when Petitioner was on the ground he was jumped upon by said man and party, and kicked, &c. Bartholomew Rush, with seven of his men, yoked the mare in the cart to go to Moneroo; the man that had the cart was living in Rush's house at the time. Next morning Petitioner went to Berrima Court, before Mr. Burke, and laid the charge of horse-stealing and assault. A warrant was issued for the horse and the man. The police went about twenty miles from where the cart had come from, namely, "Fitzroy Inn," Nattia, and they found the mare yoked in the cart; they took the man and the mare to Berrima. The mare was placed in the gaol yard for a week, when Mr. H. Oxley, J.P. and M.P., sat as Magistrate. Mr. George Allman, of Yass, was retained by Rush and man that had the cart. The case of assault and robbery of the horse was laid by Petitioner, who proved the horse to be his property, and likewise proved the assault. Mr. Henry Oxley dismissed the charges, and wished to give the mare to the robbers; but Mr. George Allman, the aforesaid attorney, ordered the mare to be delivered to Petitioner, which was done. Petitioner was severely injured by the assault, but no redress was to be had.

That your Petitioner summoned to appear before His Honor Judge Carey, at the first sittings of the District Court held in Camden (in sittings 1859), several persons who had Petitioner's horses in their unlawful possession, and amongst them the aforesaid Samuel Sheather, when Petitioner proved the mare to be his property, and recovered a verdict for the sum of twenty-five pounds sterling (£25), being the value of the aforesaid mare in the estimation of His Honor. Immediately after the said decision by His Honor, Mr. James McArthur, of Camden, came into Court and requested the Judge to grant a new trial in the horse case of Samuel Sheather, as he (Mr. James McArthur) had an important witness to bring from Moreton Bay, when His Honor Judge Carey stated that the amount of the verdict must be paid into Court before a new trial could be granted; and the said new trial or cause of action was removed from Camden to Picton, and afterwards from Picton to Parramatta, and from Parramatta to Sydney. The £25 was given in a cheque, which was objected to by the Judge, and the cheque was withdrawn, but not replaced with cash. When the case came to Sydney Court neither Sheather nor the mare was brought to Court, but Sir Wm. McArthur said they were at Gundagai. Your Petitioner gave Sheather notice. Petitioner believes the case is still pending.

That your Petitioner detected Alfred Weakley, one of Sir Wm. McArthur's tenants, accompanied with James Reed, stealing from Petitioner's enclosed paddock four of Petitioner's working horses. He went to Berrima Court, before Mr. Charles Nicholson, J.P., and applied for a warrant or summons against Weakley and Reed, but Mr. Charles Nicholson would not grant either. Petitioner afterwards found the said horses in Sir Wm. McArthur's paddock.

That about the same time Petitioner detected the mare in Samuel Sheather's possession, Petitioner had another horse stolen from his enclosed paddock by James Charker, Bartholomew Rush, and George Cutter. As they stated—one stole, one became purchaser, and the other became witness. They all knew the horse belonged to Petitioner, who immediately pursued and overtook the said horse, on the high road, about 20 miles on the Sydney side of Goulburn, where Petitioner told the police that the said horse was his property. The police then took possession of the said horse, as well as James Charker, junr., who had him yoked in his dray. They took them to Goulburn, and the case for horse-stealing was heard before Mr. Zouch, Police Magistrate, and the horse was proved to be the property of Petitioner, and was delivered to Petitioner by order of Mr. Zouch and the Chief Constable.

Immediately after the delivery of the said horse to Petitioner, a constable was ordered by Mr. Zouch to request Petitioner to stop whilst Mr. Walsh (solicitor for Charker) and Mr. Zouch went into a private room, where they remained about 3 quarters of an hour. That meeting was after the Magistrate had left the Bench a considerable time, and the horse in Petitioner's possession upwards of an hour, when Mr. Zouch came outside the Court-house, in the yard, and ordered a common constable to take Petitioner's horse from him, when Petitioner refused to give up the horse, but the horse was taken by force. Although the Chief Constable had refused to have anything to do with the affair after delivering the horse to its proper owner, namely, your Petitioner, nevertheless the horse was again handed to Charker, and yoked in his dray, although Petitioner offered a bond, if required.

Your Petitioner instituted proceedings against Charker and others for horse-stealing, at the Police Office, Sydney, when the case was heard before George Hill, Esq., and Capt. John M'Lane, Esq., when they fully committed George Cutter, who was represented to have sold the horse to James Charker, to take his trial at the Criminal Court for horse-stealing; but Mr. Lutwyche, the then Attorney General, refused to prosecute criminally, but requested Petitioner to employ an attorney, and Petitioner would obtain his horse.

That Petitioner employed his solicitors—Messrs. Bradley and James—to recover the said horse from said James Charker, and paid them the sum of £40 sterling for that purpose, and the case was tried at the Supreme Court, Sydney, on — before Sir Alfred Stephen, Chief Justice, and a Jury of four (4), when the said case was dismissed; afterward a new trial was ordered, but was neglected by the Petitioner's attorneys, and your Petitioner was at that time unable to attend, for which he had a certificate from the surgeon that attended him. So soon as Petitioner was able he came to Sydney, and appeared in Court, and stated the case to His Honor Sir John Nodes Dickinson, Esq., then Acting Chief Justice; and His Honor directed Petitioner to appear personally at the next term, at the same time give James Charker notice that a new trial was to be applied for. His Honor said that he would see that justice should be done to your Petitioner, but previous to the said term being held His Honor Judge Dickinson had departed from this Colony.

Your Petitioner appeared on the first day of the term, as directed by Sir John Nodes Dickinson, before the three Judges, and moved for a new trial of the horse case that was in the unlawful possession of James Charker, of Nattia. The Chief Justice (Sir Alfred Stephen) during the argument, said that the case against James Charker being a stolen horse, ought to have been tried by a Jury of twelve (12) instead of a Jury of four (4)—that admitting all faults, and that whatever injury might be done to Petitioner, the rules of the Court must be adhered to. Your Petitioner stated as it was not Petitioner's fault nor neglect, but that of his attorney's; but the case for a new trial for the horse found in the unlawful possession of James Charker was there and then ordered to be struck off the paper. Petitioner, as directed by Sir John Dickinson, gave Charker notice, but he did not appear.

Your Petitioner deposited the title deeds of the above-mentioned fifty (50) acres of land that he held as collateral security from the aforesaid Ann Cutter, which was willed to Petitioner by the said Ann Cutter, into the hands of Mr. Buckland, one of the partners of Sir Daniel Cooper, Buckland, & Co., who had supplied Petitioner with goods for many years, but was not owing him nor his partners any money; but believing the firm consisted of honorable men, caused Petitioner to place the deeds in their hands. When Petitioner asked Mr. Buckland to return the deeds to him, Mr. Buckland said he had given them up under a protest, but Petitioner could not and never did obtain any further redress from said Mr. Buckland.

That your Petitioner obtained verdicts before His Honor Judge Carey and a Jury, against the following parties:—At the District Court at Berrima, from which place the horses were stolen: Edmund Burke, Esq., J.P., one horse, £20 (stolen); Henry Oxley, Esq., J.P. & M.P. (stolen) spring cart; Mr. Terry, one timber carriage, £10; Mr. Thompson, of Camden, 2 horses (stolen)—that was sold at Sir Wm. McArthur's unlawful sale of Petitioner's horses; Bartholomew Rush, one horse, do.; James Ford, furniture, &c., £18; Charles Brooks, 1 gig, £10; 10 milch cows, by Walch, attorney, Goulburn; one cart found in the unlawful possession of one of Mr. Oxley's tenants, £16. At the District Court, Camden, before His Honor Judge Carey, Samuel Sheather, and Sir Wm. McArthur:—One mare (stolen) £25—a new trial granted, still pending; Wheeler, one of Sir Wm. McArthur's tenants, 2 horses, settled; Hershog, one horse, value £30, settled; a constable, one horse, settled; Chief Constable, one horse, not settled; Samuel Ward, butcher, (5) five horses, not settled; Mr. Harrison, blacksmith, one horse, not settled; other horses not yet ascertained.

That your Petitioner has released his estate from sequestration, but your Petitioner, having been deprived of all his property or means, is unable to prosecute the aforesaid parties.

Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly prays your Honorable House will appoint a Committee to investigate the charges contained herein, and thereby grant your Petitioner such relief as your Honorable House may think fit.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

TOM DIGHT MACKENZIE.

(PETITION OF.)

Ordered by the Legislative Assembly to be Printed, 29 March, 1864.

To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of Tom Dight Mackenzie, of Paddington, late Sub-Collector of Customs, at Albury, in the Colony of New South Wales,—

SHEWETH:—

1. That on the 10th day of April, 1854, your Petitioner was appointed to a clerkship in the Colonial Treasury.
2. That on the 1st day of March, 1857, he was transferred to the Customs Department; and, on or about the 1st June, 1860, was appointed Sub-Collector at Albury, at a salary of £300 per annum, on condition of his paying his own travelling expenses.
3. That on the said conditions he proceeded to Albury, where he remained until the month of September, 1861, when, by order, he returned to Sydney, where shortly after arrival he was put on duty as a landing-waiter, which he continued to perform until the month of July, 1862.
4. That after the month of April, 1862, the salary which was voted to him by your Honorable House, was not paid to him, but his monthly cheque was reduced to the rate of £225 per annum; and he has been unable to ascertain by what authority his salary was so reduced and withheld.
5. That in consequence of the Collector's informing him that he required lockers, your Petitioner consented to act in that capacity, under the promise that he should resume his position as landing-waiter on the first vacancy, and the Collector authorized him to, and he did, inform Mr. Still, the landing-surveyor, to that effect.
6. That on entering on duty as a locker, your Petitioner was placed in charge of the bond of Sir D. Cooper & Co.; thence was removed to that of Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, & Co.; and lastly, was placed in charge of the Argyle Bond, which had hitherto employed two lockers.
7. That on the 31st day of October, 1862, a cargo of sugar, ex "Celine," consisting of 6,773 bags, as appears by entries in the stock-book, was placed in bond by Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co.
8. That on the 4th February, 1863, the last warrant for delivery of said sugar (being for 25 tons, and accompanied, as your Petitioner has been informed, by a re-weigh order for an anticipated balance) was written off in said stock-book as delivered.
9. That your Petitioner was placed in charge of said bond on the 5th day of February, 1863, and no warrant or other paper for delivery of, or otherwise concerning, the said sugar, ever passed through his hands, which an inspection of the stock-book will fully prove.
10. That your Petitioner was informed that there had not been found enough sugar in the bond to satisfy the last warrant for 25 tons, and that Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co. had overpaid to the amount of £15 10s. 11d.
11. That your Petitioner received a letter from the Collector, calling upon him, "by direction of the Honorable Treasurer," to pay into the hands of the Chief Clerk the sum of £15 10s. 11d., in order that the same might be refunded to Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co.
12. That your Petitioner wrote the Collector, and fully explained the impossibility of his knowing anything of the matter, and requested that the same explanation might be forwarded for the re-consideration of the Honorable Treasurer; but the said explanation was returned to him and never submitted to the Honorable Treasurer, whom, your Petitioner believes, was ignorant of the true state of the case.

13. That your Petitioner's cheque for the month of August was withheld from him, and he was informed the amount of £15 10s. 11d. had been paid over to Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co.

14. That your Petitioner, acting under advice, wrote to the Collector, requesting to be informed if the cheque was so withheld and appropriated by his direction, and received from the Collector an answer in the affirmative.

15. That your Petitioner was peremptorily forbidden by the Collector to communicate with the Treasurer, and, smarting under the injustice, acting under advice, and with no other apparent means of obtaining redress, your Petitioner wrote to the Collector, informing him that he should proceed at law against them for the recovery of the cheque so unjustly withheld.

16. That your Petitioner received a letter from the Collector, informing him that his letters written in the matter of the cheque had been laid before the Executive Council, and that they had decided that your Petitioner be dismissed for insubordination, and that he was therefore dismissed accordingly.

17. That subsequently to your Petitioner's dismissal the amount of £15 10s. 11d. was refunded to him, and the Collector informed your Petitioner's friends that your Petitioner was a good and efficient officer, and he would do anything to recommend him to any other department.

18. That your Petitioner was desirous of having the stigma of dismissal removed from his name, and solicited an inquiry into the case, which, as your Petitioner is informed, the Collector did, and still does, determinedly oppose; and preferred other charges against your Petitioner, in support of which he sought signatures to officially prepared papers, but of the nature of the charges so preferred your Petitioner has never been informed.

19. That your Petitioner has never been charged with neglect or imperfect performance of his duty by others than the Collector, whose demands it was impossible to comply with; and he has suffered great loss and injury by reason of the injustice and persecution to which he has been subjected. Your Petitioner, therefore, most humbly prays that your Honorable House will cause an investigation to be made into his case, and that justice may be done.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly, appointed on the 1st instant, “to inquire into the allegations contained in the Petition of Tom Dight Mackenzie, and to report thereon,” have agreed to the following Report :—

Your Committee have examined the witnesses named in the margin,* and have arrived at the conclusion that the Government were justified in removing Mr. Mackenzie from the Customs Department.

W. C. Still, Esq.,

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE PETITION OF

TOM DIGHT MACKENZIE.

THURSDAY, 7 APRIL, 1864.

Present:—

MR. GARRETT,
MR. TERRY,MR. TIGHE,
MR. SMART.

THOMAS GARRETT, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Tom Dight Mackenzie called in and examined:—

1. By the Chairman: You are the person who petitioned the Assembly, in reference to your dismissal from the Customs service? I am.
2. You were appointed on the 10th April, 1854, to a clerkship in the Treasury? I believe that was the date.
3. On the 1st March, 1857, you were transferred to the Customs Department? That date also I set down from memory; I believe it was that day.
4. In what capacity did you act until June, 1860? I was in the long-room a portion of the time, and ultimately I was made Registrar. I had the keeping of the registrar with which the Auditor General is furnished.
5. On the 1st June, 1860, you were appointed Sub-Collector at Albury, at a salary of £300 a year? I speak of that also from memory; I believe it was on or about the 1st June.
6. And you proceeded to Albury, and remained there till September, 1861, discharging the duties of Sub-Collector? Yes.
7. On or about that day you were ordered to return to Sydney, and did so return? Yes.
8. And shortly after, you were put on duty as Landing Waiter? Yes.
9. You performed those duties till the month of July, 1862? I did.
10. You state, in paragraph 4 of your petition, that in April, 1862, the salary paid to you was reduced to £225 per annum? It was. I will not be positive about the date, but the production of the pay abstract will set that right. I believe I received at the rate of £300 a year for the month of April, but I am sure I did not afterwards.
11. Did you make any application to ascertain for what reason this reduction was made? I asked the Collector one day what was the reason; I do not remember the precise answer he gave, but there was at the time some little disagreement between him and the Government, and he said, "The Government will do nothing for me—they will do just as they like"; or some expression of that kind, but I do not know exactly what it was.
12. In July, 1862, you took, at the request of the Collector, the position of Locker? I did. The fact was they were not much in want of Landing Waiters at the time—business on the wharves was rather slack—and Mr. Duncan sent for me, and told me they were short of Lockers, while the Landing Waiters had nothing to do;—would I become a Locker, or some expression of that kind. I said, certainly I would; and I took on myself the duties of a Locker, with the understanding that I should resume my position as Landing Waiter as soon as my services were required in that capacity.

Mr. T. D.
Mackenzie.
7 April, 1864.

- Mr. T. D. Mackenzie.
7 April, 1864.
13. As Locker you took charge of the Bond of Sir Daniel Cooper & Co.? I did.
14. And subsequently that of Gilchrist, Watt, & Co.? Yes. I was given to understand there were disagreements in these Bonds—I do not know from what cause. It appears that the Locker in charge of Gilchrist, Watt, & Co.'s Bond and the men and the managers were all at odds, so much so that they did not speak to each other; and a request was made to Mr. Still, as the head of that branch, that the Locker might be removed, and I was the person selected to quell this disturbance; and I went there and did so. I was subsequently transferred from that Bond to another, where there was a like disturbance—the Argyle Bond, which employed two Lockers.
15. With regard to the 7th paragraph of your petition, will you explain the circumstances respecting the cargo of sugar ex "Celine," therein referred to? Of that I myself know nothing. I only know that in the book there appears an entry on the 31st October, 1862, of a cargo of sugar, ex "Celine," consisting of 6,773 bags; I know it appears in the book, and that is all I know about it.
16. Did you receive a warrant for delivery of the balance of that sugar on the 4th February? I was only put in charge of that Bond on the 5th February, and, on taking charge of that Bond, I did not know anything of the books; they were strange to me, as I was to the Bond. By-and-by inquiry was made, and in course of time there was a dispute about this sugar being small in quantity. Then I was referred to the books, and I there found a warrant written off on the 4th February for 25 tons.
17. Was that the last portion of it? It appears there was not enough sugar to satisfy this warrant for 25 tons; but it appeared, from subsequent inquiries I made, that when the duty was paid on the 25 tons of sugar, there was at the same time a reweigh order. They imagined in this particular case they had more than 25 tons of sugar remaining in the Bond, so they paid on 25 tons, and sent a reweigh order, which is as much as to say,—weigh the remaining sugar in the Bond, let me know what there is, and I will pay the duty; but in this case it appears there was not sufficient sugar to satisfy the warrant for 25 tons.
18. Were you in any way responsible for that deficiency? I cannot conceive how it is possible I could be, inasmuch as I never saw a single pound of it—never received nor delivered a pound of it.
19. By Mr. Tighe: Was there much short? I forget what the quantity short was, but I am given to understand the deficiency was not at all excessive.
20. By the Chairman: You received a letter from the Collector, calling upon you to pay into the hands of the Chief Clerk the sum of £15 10s. 11d., in order that the same might be refunded to Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co.? I did.
21. What action did you take on receiving this letter? I wrote to the Collector—perhaps I should say I saw him before writing. I went immediately to him with my books, and saw him in the long-room, and pointed out this particular entry. However, it was not satisfactory, and I then wrote a letter, setting forth, as well as I was able, the whole particulars of the case, shewing that I could not be expected to be responsible for this deficiency, and requested at the same time that the letter might be forwarded —
22. Have you a copy of the letter you received, calling upon you to pay this money? I have.
23. Will you hand it in? Yes. (Letter handed in. Vide Appendix.)
24. Have you a copy of the letter you wrote in reply to this? I have a draft, but I cannot say positively it is a correct copy. The original is at the Treasury.
25. You wrote the Collector with regard to this matter, and requested the Collector to submit your explanation for the reconsideration of the Treasurer? I did.
26. What was the reply? I received the same letter in return, with a minute upon it, setting forth that which I now forget. I have not a copy of it, but it was to the effect that the matter had been repeatedly submitted to the Honorable the Treasurer—I forget in fact what it stated, but the conclusion was that the surcharge must be enforced.
27. You have not a copy of the Collector's answer? I have not.
28. You received your own letter back minuted? Yes, with a turned-down corner. That letter, with the minute upon it, I handed to Mr. Smart at the Treasury, and left it with him.
29. What was the date of the reply? That I cannot tell you.
30. By Mr. Smart: Nor the date of the letter you sent to the Collector? I imagine it was on or about the 20th July; it might have been a day or two after.
31. By the Chairman: You wrote on or about the 20th July, in reply to the letter you received on the 7th July? Yes; I had seen the Collector two or three months between the receipt of the letter demanding the payment of the money and my reply.
32. What was the substance of what passed between you and the Collector on these occasions? I went to Mr. Duncan with the books, and shewed him that I had never received a paper of any kind or sort, for the receipt, or delivery, or reweigh, or anything belonging to the sugar. The only portion of the sugar I ever saw (and I did not know at the time it was that sugar) was one afternoon about 4 o'clock, I saw the men belonging to the several Bonds up-stairs passing down bags of sugar, and I went to them and told them they would have to put them back again.
33. On what ground do you make the statement in the 12th paragraph of your petition—that you believe the Treasurer was ignorant of the true state of the case? I think neither the Treasurer nor any other man would have endeavoured to enforce that surcharge upon me if he had known the whole circumstances of the case; and my chief reason for believing that was, because my explanation was returned to me and withheld from the Treasurer.
34. By whom? By Mr. Duncan.
35. Was the minute on it in the Collector's handwriting? I believe so; it was signed by him.

36. When you waited on the Treasurer afterwards, did he then profess ignorance of the circumstances of the case? The Treasurer said he would see Mr. Duncan, and I presume he did so. Mr. T. D. Mackenzie.
37. Did he say at that time that he had not seen Mr. Duncan, and was not acquainted with the circumstances of the case? I do not think he said so—no; but this was long subsequent to my writing that letter. 7 April, 1864.
38. Then the £15 10s. 11d. was stopped from you? It was.
39. And you wrote to the Collector in reference to that stoppage? I did.
40. Have you a copy of that letter? I have not a copy of it; I have here what I believe to be a copy, but should not like to put it in as such; the original is in the Treasury I have no doubt.
41. In the 15th paragraph you say you were peremptorily forbidden by the Collector to communicate with the Treasurer? Yes.
42. Was that a verbal communication? It was a letter sent round, I believe, to all hands, brought by a messenger, informing them that any person communicating with the Treasurer, unless through the medium of the Collector, would expose himself to his displeasure or something of that kind, or that he would take it as a personal affront.
43. By Mr. Tighe: You were not specially forbidden in this particular case? Yes I was; I asked Mr. Duncan to allow me to go to the Treasurer.
44. By the Chairman: What was the reply? I was not allowed to go.
45. When was that? After the letter I have alluded to was returned to me.
46. You wrote to the Collector, informing him that you should proceed at law for the recovery of your cheque? I did.
47. Did you receive any reply to that communication? The only reply I received, was a letter from the Collector to the effect that my letter, together with one written previously, had been submitted to the Honorable Treasurer, and by him laid before the Executive Council, and they had deemed it fitting to dismiss me from the public service.
48. You were dismissed on a minute of the Executive Council? I suppose so.
49. Have you got a copy of that letter? I have the letter itself. (Handed in. Vide Appendix.)
50. You subsequently received the £15 10s. 11d.? I did.
51. How did you receive it? I received it through the medium of a friend.
52. Do you know that your friend got it from the Government? Yes, I have a letter that will satisfy you on that point I think. (Handed in. Vide Appendix.)
53. You state, in the 17th paragraph of your petition, that the Collector subsequently spoke to friends of yours and said you were a good and efficient officer, and he would do anything to recommend you to any other department? I can produce the friends to whom he said so. He went even further than that; he said he had not a man in the establishment that he could put to take my place.
54. Will you give the names of those friends to whom you allude? Mr. Joseph A. Knight and Mr. B. P. Campbell.
55. Are they in Sydney? Yes.
56. Are they officers of Customs? They are not.
57. By Mr. Terry: Are they officers of the Government? No, not connected with the service at all.
58. By the Chairman: In the 18th paragraph you say you solicited an inquiry into the case? I did; that was what I waited on the Treasurer for.
59. You state the Collector opposed this? That he most certainly did.
60. On what ground do you state that the Collector opposed this inquiry? I sought it in every imaginable way.
61. Did you seek it from the Collector himself? I can hardly say that.
62. On what do you base this statement, that the Collector opposed this inquiry? I was informed by everybody whom I consulted in the matter.
63. Have you made any written application for an inquiry, either to the Treasurer or the Collector? I called on the Treasurer personally and solicited it.
64. Did the Treasurer decline? The Treasurer said he would see Mr. Duncan.
65. Did you see the Treasurer subsequently? I think I saw the Treasurer a second time, if my recollection serves me, and he said that in the interim he had seen the Collector, and his determination was to let the dismissal stand.
66. Acting on the advice of the Collector? I do not know that.
67. On what do you base the statement in your petition, that you were refused inquiry? I petitioned the Executive Council.
68. Have you that petition? I have not.
69. Have you the reply to it? I have. (Handed in. Vide Appendix.)
70. That does not exactly clear up the statement here, that the Collector did and still does oppose the inquiry;—I wish to know on what grounds you base that statement? I do not think I have had anything from the Collector himself. I called at the Custom House on one occasion, and wished to see him, and he refused to see me.
71. Who informed you that the Collector opposed the inquiry? I do not recollect any person positively telling me he did, but I have said to various persons that I could not get an inquiry, and they have said, "No, of course he will not give you that."
72. In the 19th paragraph you say you have never been charged with neglect or imperfect performance of duty by others than the Collector? I never have had any charge laid against me for neglect of duty, except by the Collector himself.
73. What impossible demands did the Collector call upon you to comply with? It frequently happens that, when there is a large landing of spirits, they get sometimes as many many as a hundred and fifty casks of various sizes on the wharf at the same time; the consequence is, the Landing Waiters are hard at work gauging, and in the afternoon the carters come in helter-skelter to the Bond with these casks, and put them in the yard as fast as they can get them off their drays. On one particular occasion I was there till nearly 5 o'clock when they were bringing in these casks of spirits, or wine, or whatever they were, and, as was absolutely necessary, these casks were put within the gangway of the door until the morning, and afterwards taken out, sorted, and stowed away. It happened that on this occasion Mr. Duncan came down in the morning with Mr. Russell; and the Collector, looking into the Bond, made a complaint about the casks being left in that way in the gangways. I explained how it was, that they had only come in overnight; but the Collector insisted they should have been stowed away that night. I explained the impossibility of doing it, if I had a hundred men. He said, "Then get a hundred men, and I will bear you out." Now I have no authority to get men; I have no more control over the men in the Bond than you have, and if I asked a man to do anything, and his master told him to do otherwise, I could not help it.

Mr. T. D.

7 April, 1864.

74. What Bond was this? The Argyle Bond.

75. Was that the only occasion? Speaking about the books, Mr. Duncan told me—and you must bear in mind I was just come into the Bond—that I ought to know the contents of the stock books, four of which were in use; and he said that if he had charge of the Bond he would go himself and put his hand on anything in any one of these Bonds in the dark. Now I find it will sometimes take, even the men who stowed the things away, an hour or two to find a cask or other thing.

76. Do you remember any other cases in which he called upon you to do things that were impossible? No, only that he has complained of me without reason.

77. Have no complaints been preferred against you in respect of your duty while in the department? The only complaint I ever had, except those by the Collector himself, was when the Sugar Company's men charged me with being drunk on duty one night. They came down with drawback goods, and after I had done all that I had to do as Landing Waiter, they wanted me to sign certain papers with which I, as a Custom House Officer, had nothing to do. As Landing Waiter I signed the necessary papers for the Custom House, but they brought down another paper on which they get a receipt for the goods from the master or mate of the ship, and they wanted me to sign this paper as having received them.

78. You had not received them? The goods were put on board the ship, but I had nothing whatever to do with the receipt of the captain or mate; it is a separate affair altogether.

79. Was the charge preferred in a formal manner to the Collector? It was.

80. What was the result? I was acquitted of it.

81. By the Collector? By the Collector or the Treasurer, Mr. Weekes. The chief grievance was, that on the following morning I had permission from Mr. Still to be absent from my post on the Flour Wharf, and finding me off my post they thought I was negligent of my duty. Mr. Still had omitted to direct any one to take my duty, or the officer instructed had neglected to come; at all events there was nobody on that post, and that was what gave them the great offence.

82. Did Mr. Knight inform you it was upon the Collector's recommendation the £15 was remitted? I do not know that he did; he might have done so.

83. Are you aware whether it was on Mr. Duncan's recommendation you were appointed Sub-Collector at Albury? I suppose it was. But instead of being promotion to me it was a positive disadvantage, because I sold off my furniture and broke up my establishment in Sydney, and put my wife and family in quarters till I could make arrangements at Albury. However, on my arrival there, I found no place where I could live except an inn, and I was at the double expense of living at the inn and keeping my family in Sydney.

84. Are you aware of the cause of your being recalled from Albury? I do not know more than appears on the face of this paper. (Telegram handed in. Vide Appendix.)

85. You came in pursuance of this telegram? Yes.

86. Did Mr. Duncan subsequently inform you of any other reason? Mr. Duncan told me a great deal about irregularities of mine down there.

87. What was the nature of those irregularities? I never heard of anything at all more than what Mr. Duncan told me.

88. Do you recollect what the Collector told you? He told me something about my irregularities, but this was said in good humour, as something not of serious import. I admit that, living in the place in the way I did, and being continually thrown into company, I might have been a little extravagant in my actions sometimes; but you must bear in mind I never neglected my duty, for I had no duty, and I submit I am not to answer for the whole of my conduct, whether on duty or off.

89. Were you aware whether it was the intention of Mr. Cowper and Mr. Weekes to dismiss you on your return? I never heard a syllable of it; I was expecting to be sent back again.

90. By Mr. Smart: Have you heard nothing of it to the present time? Mr. Duncan told me so afterwards.

91. By the Chairman: Mr. Duncan told you it was the intention of Mr. Cowper and Mr. Weekes to dismiss you? No, it was said Mr. Cowper was going to send for me a long time ago.

92. For the purpose of dispensing with your services? I do not know what for.

93. He did not state it was for the purpose of dispensing with your services? I had not an idea of it.

94. When you were appointed a Locker, were you appointed over the heads of the other Lockers? No, I was not; I was afterwards appointed a Locker, and then I found I was made Chief Locker, but there was not the slightest farthing advantage in it; it was a situation I would not have accepted if I was entering the service.

95. Are you aware that Mr. Duncan's conduct in appointing you Chief Locker was made the subject of remark in the Assembly? I saw an account in the papers that Mr. Dangar, I think, asked some questions with reference to the matter. Mr. T. D. Mackenzie.
96. By Mr. Terry: Are you aware of any ill feeling existing towards you by Mr. Duncan? 7 April, 1864.
I cannot conceive Mr. Duncan's conduct towards me to emanate from anything but the worst feeling.
97. You state that the sugar ex "Celine" was bonded before you became a Locker? The sugar was bonded, according to the entry in the stock book, on the 31st October, 1862, and I was placed in charge on the 5th February, 1863.
98. And the date of the last warrant was 4th February? Yes.
99. When was it delivered? I do not know. It was all delivered before. That was the last warrant which was not satisfied.
100. Then there was no sugar in the bond when you went there? There was some sugar in the Bond, but what there was I do not know.
101. Is it not customary for the Lockers in charge of Bonded Stores to take a note of where goods are stowed away? No, it is impossible; they are continually shifting them.
102. Have you stated the irregularities you were charged with at Albury? Mr. Duncan told me it was in consequence of my drinking; that is all I ever heard of.
103. Do you know of any one else who gave information as to your drinking? No.
104. You did not drink? I will admit that, living in an inland town like that, I sometimes gave way to certain extravagances, but generally speaking I was an abstainer altogether.
105. You did indulge sometimes? Yes, sometimes I did.
106. By Mr. Tighe: You took charge of this Bond on the 5th February—was the sugar delivered before that day? I do not know.
107. Was there any sugar in the stores on the 5th of February? There must have been some.
108. Was there much? I do not know.
109. You would deliver it after the 5th? No, if they had come to me to deliver any sugar on that warrant I should not have delivered a pound. It is all written off as delivered. I dared not deliver a pound of sugar on that warrant.
110. Then it was never in your charge? Never. Mr. Brock, the Assistant Locker, told me he had the delivery of the whole of that sugar at the time.
111. Who had charge of this reweigh order? As I have stated in my petition, no paper of any kind or sort passed through my hands. Mr. Still came and asked me for the warrant and for the reweigh order. I made search, and amongst the warrants put away I found this warrant of the 4th February, and on further search in another place I found the reweigh orders.
112. You were asked to deliver up these? I was, and I did deliver them up, both the reweigh order and the warrant.
113. Did Mr. Duncan apply for them subsequently? No.
114. By Mr. Terry: Did you take delivery from the former Locker on entering into charge of this Bond? No, there is no stock-taking or anything of that kind; it would be an impossibility; we merely go in and take possession.
115. You do not know what is in the Bond at all? No more than you do, when we take possession of it. Of course by referring to the stock books you could ascertain.
116. What guarantee have you that the former Locker may not have disposed of goods in Bond? None whatever. That was where I found myself getting into trouble; and when I found the Collector was determined to enforce upon me whatever deficiencies there might happen to be, I told Mr. Still I would not have an assistant at all.
117. Is it not absolutely necessary the person in charge should know the particulars of the goods in the Bond? It would be very desirable, but I do not know how the thing could be done.
118. By Mr. Smart: In either of the interviews you had with me as Treasurer, did I state to you that it was not for this deficiency in the sugar only that I intended to recommend your dismissal? You did; you gave me to understand it was not for this deficiency—it was for drunkenness.
119. Did I not tell you it was for what I considered repeated acts of insubordination and drunkenness? I thought you told me I was dismissed for drunkenness, on the report of Mr. Duncan.
120. Did I not tell you one of the causes was repeated acts of drunkenness when on duty, and insubordination to your superior officer? No, I do not recollect that.
121. You admit it in the 16th paragraph of your petition, that it was for insubordination? Yes, but insubordination is not drunkenness. I understood you to say it was for drunkenness I was dismissed.
122. This matter of the sugar was not the only neglect on your part? I was charged also with a deficiency in a thousand cases of gin. That was the reason I came to the determination of having no assistant.
123. You have stated you were Principal Locker at the Argyle Bond? Yes.
124. And during the time you were there you gave a receipt for a thousand cases of gin? No, I did not give a receipt for them.
125. You entered them in your books? Yes.
126. Were these received into the store? Two of the shipments were short, or at any rate a certain number of cases. Mr. Jones and another gentleman who had the landing of these cases both positively swore they had counted them, and that they had carted away 1,000 cases of gin. We then made a search in the bond—I myself did—and found them numbered consecutively from 1 up to 1,000; but they had fifteen in excess on board the

- Mr. T. D. Mackenzie.

- the ship, and I found these were the very numbers we required to make up the shipment.
127. Did you count the gin into the store? I could not do that.
128. What was your duty then? I left that to my assistant, and it was in consequence of this deficiency that I told Mr. Still I would no longer have an assistant.
129. Was the quantity that went into the store checked on this occasion? It might have been.
130. Was it so? No.
131. By Mr. Terry: Whose duty is it to do so? When I had an assistant I always kept to the in-door work myself, and when carts came with goods I directed him to look out for them.
132. By Mr. Smart: Did I not tell you, at the interview you had with me, that your conduct at Albury, which was very much complained of by the Chief Secretary, was one of the reasons that induced me to take the step I did in respect to you? No.
133. And that you had committed yourself so frequently in the department, while on duty, that I could look over it no longer? I never heard a word of it.
134. Were you not charged at the Police Office for drunkenness during the time you were engaged as Locker? Never in my life.
135. Were you not charged for an assault on a woman, when you were supposed to be under the influence of drink? I endeavoured to prosecute that woman for perjury, but could not get the Magistrates to listen to me, although I had four witnesses.
136. Were you not charged with using beastly language and for being drunk on duty on the wharf? I was never charged for beastly language in my life.
137. Was not evidence in support of that charge given before the Collector? I was charged with drunkenness, but never with beastly language. I am not in the habit of using beastly language.
138. You said you did not believe Mr. Duncan took any step nor recommended the return to you of the money you were mulct of? At any rate he took good pains to enforce it upon me.
139. Did not Mr. Duncan tell you it was my order to do so? Yes.
140. Had you no reason ever to suppose that Mr. Duncan did all he could to induce me to remit the money? I have information which I must keep to myself; I have good reason to believe he was doing all he could to force it on.
141. That is your handwriting, is it (letter, dated 2 September, 1863, addressed to the Collector of Customs, exhibited to witness)? Yes.
142. Did you not state to Mr. Duncan, in that letter, your regret at the evident inefficiency of his endeavours to procure the return of the surcharge upon you? I did, but I wrote that letter with the conviction that the Collector of Customs had never tried to relieve me of this surcharge; because he told me himself he never told me he would do so—he denied having ever told me he would do all he could to relieve me of it. I had reason at that time to believe that when the recommendation for the surcharge was sent to the Treasurer, the query returned by him was “Does the Collector desire this?” or some query of that kind; and that the Collector, in reply, answered most positively yes, or decidedly, or certainly, or some word of that kind.
143. By Mr. Tighe: Do I understand you rightly that you wrote that letter under the knowledge or supposition that Mr. Duncan had made no effort to relieve you of this surcharge? Mr. Duncan told me he would do all he possibly could to relieve me of it, but I had reason to believe he never did anything at all. Mr. Duncan told me, as plainly as ever he spoke, he would do all he could to relieve me of this surcharge; and he also told me afterwards, when I had written that letter, that he had never told me anything of the sort.
144. By Mr. Smart: You say there were two cases deficient out of the thousand cases of gin—was it not fifteen? No, they were all bonded but two; I think there were two short in the shipment, not more.
145. Were they not fifteen short at the time you signed for the whole quantity? I never signed for the quantity at all; they were only entered in the book; that is the ordinary course.
146. Were there not fifteen cases short when the thousand cases were entered as received? No.
147. Only two? We had none of them then; we did not know what they were. If a warrant is brought to me this morning, I enter that in my book—so many cases, such and such a ship, and all particulars; we then receive these cases as they come, perhaps twenty to-day, 500 to-morrow, and so on, in dribblets, as it may be convenient to break them out of the hold; they may not be all received for a fortnight. When we have got the whole shipment we count them, the light ones are filled up, and the empty cases put by. If they are short, the deficiency falls on the ship; the Government have nothing to do with it.
148. I ask you distinctly were they not fifteen cases short? No.
149. By Mr. Terry: Is it customary to enter in the books the whole number of cases, whether received into the Bond or not? Yes, as appearing on the face of the warrant; we enter the warrant, whatever it may be.
150. Is it the duty of the Locker to sign the Landing Waiter's receipt for the goods, as having been taken into Bond? Yes.
151. Did you not sign for fifteen cases more than you had received? No.
152. By Mr. Smart: How many cases did you sign for more than you received? I do not remember the number now. I think there were two short; there may have been three.
153. Is not the Locker instructed to account and sign for every case he receives? We did not sign for anything. I believe there is a new system now; the Lockers sign for the loads separately as they come in. That system was established by myself, in fact; the suggestion emanated from me.
- 154.

154. In the printed instructions published in 1859, before you were a Locker at all, are you not required to give a receipt? I do not know that it is there; at all events, I know it was never practised. Mr. T. D. Mackenzie.
155. By the Chairman: By you? By any one. 7 April, 1864.
156. By Mr. Terry: If there are any short, who is responsible? I do not know. The carters will come in and throw their goods off the drays into the yard without notice from any one, particularly at dinner time, so that it is difficult to keep a check.
157. By Mr. Smart: You were on duty at the Bond during the receipt of these thousand cases of gin? I was.
158. Were you there between 1 and 2 o'clock? I was always there; I never left the Bond.
159. Did you see the carters unload their drays without anybody checking them? No; I should not have allowed it if I had.
160. Do you not know it was the fact that they did unload between 1 and 2 o'clock? Yes, by the confession of the men themselves.
161. By Mr. Tighe: You were dismissed for insubordination—did your insubordination consist of any other acts beyond writing these letters? No; I asked the Collector himself if I had ever said a word offensive to him, and he told me no.
162. That was the only charge against you? That was the only one I am aware of; I know of no other.*

William Augustine Duncan, Esq., Collector of Customs, examined:—

163. By the Chairman: You are aware of the circumstances connected with the dismissal of Mr. Tom Dight Mackenzie from his position as Locker in the Customs Department? I am. W. A. Duncan, Esq.
164. Have you the correspondence relating to that dismissal? I have the correspondence (which I obtained at the Treasury) on the subject. 7 April, 1864.
165. Have you the minute of the Executive Council submitted by the Treasurer, recommending Mr. Mackenzie's dismissal? I have. (Read, and copy handed in. Vide Appendix.)
166. Have you the letters, addressed by Mr. Mackenzie to you, complained of as disrespectful? I have. (Two letters, dated respectively 1st August and 2nd September, read, and copies handed in. Vide Appendix.) To shew what my feeling was towards Mr. Mackenzie, though it was my duty, in consequence of the order of the Treasurer, to deduct this amount from Mr. Mackenzie's salary, I took upon myself, at my own risk, to give this order:—"The surcharge should be deducted from this cheque, but I have no objection to let it lie over till next month, if Mr. Mackenzie desires it."
167. Have you any other documents that were used for the information of the Executive Council? I have the letter in which I reported the matter to the Treasurer, dated 4th July, 1863. (Read, and copy handed in. Vide Appendix.)
168. Did you conceive it to be the locker's duty to have checked the quantity of goods he received when he took charge of this Bond? No, not to take stock. It would be utterly impossible to do that; and we have a means of getting rid of that difficulty.
169. This sugar was received into Bond before Mr. Mackenzie's time? Yes, but I believe a large portion of it was delivered in his time. He was answerable for his own accounts as well as for those of his assistant. The chief complaint against him was his not returning the order for the reweigh of the balance, there being no balance to reweigh, in order that I might take steps to see how the large deficiency had occurred.
170. Is it the fact that that reweigh order was never returned at all? It was never returned at all in any shape whatever.
171. Then the statement made by Mr. Mackenzie, that he returned it to Mr. Still for the purpose of being submitted to you, is not correct? It certainly never was submitted to me. To shew how I was puzzled in consequence of Mr. Mackenzie's neglect, there is a memorandum from Mr. Powell, Custom House Agent, to this effect:—"I have sent the certificates to the Locker at the Argyle Store for signature. Mr. Mackenzie declines to sign, and has referred me to Mr. Eldershaw, who also objects." So that, in point of fact, I was placed on the horns of a dilemma.
172. Is that with regard to the gin or the sugar? The sugar. Here is a letter from Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, applying for this refund, dated 23 June, 1863; they state that the sugar was weighed out of the Bond by the Locker, short of the quantity they now claim; and on the corner of this is a memorandum from the Warehouse-keeper, stating he sent the usual reweigh certificate, which was not returned.
173. Have you had any correspondence with Mr. Still respecting this reweigh order? I have here a memorandum from Mr. Still. (Read, and copy handed in. Vide Appendix.) I may mention, with respect to what Mr. Mackenzie has said about every article shewing a deficiency, that sugar as often shews a surplus as a deficiency, as it attracts moisture rather than repels it, and therefore is often over the import weight.
174. Mr. Mackenzie states in his evidence, that he handed this reweigh order to Mr. Still, together with the warrant;—the question I put now is, is that statement correct? Not so far as I am aware. Mr. Still was, I believe, in Van Diemen's Land at the time.
175. Have you had any correspondence with Mr. Still on the subject? I have had some correspondence with Mr. Still on the subject; but this was after a claim had been made for a refund of the duty. What I complained of all along was, that the reweigh order was not returned when the delivery was made. 176.

* ADDED (on revision):—And I was informed by the Premier and Attorney General that there was no other charge against me than writing that letter.

- W. A. Duncan, Esq.
7 April, 1864.
176. Did you ever ask Mr. Still for the reweigh order? Mr. Still was not the person; he had nothing whatever to do with the reweigh order; he was not in Sydney at the time the last of the sugar was delivered; the reweigh order should have been returned to the Warehouse-keeper. Whether Mr. Mackenzie weighed out the sugar or not, it was his duty, as the Locker in charge, to ascertain what quantity was delivered, and what quantity was left for duty, and send that back to the Warehouse-keeper. It is quite necessary in these cases for me to make very searching inquiry, and unless I am furnished with the proper documents I cannot do so. I now hand in the document Mr. Mackenzie says he handed to the Treasurer, which, he says, would have explained the whole transaction, and which I sent back with a memorandum upon it. I may mention that the gentlemen under Mr. Still generally write to me through him. (Letter read, and copy handed in. Vide Appendix.) The facts that the letter is in Mr. Mackenzie's handwriting, and of my memorandum being upon it, prove it was the document Mr. Mackenzie left in the Treasury.
177. What is the date of that letter? 27th June, and my answer is dated the 1st of July.
178. Did you ever receive from Mr. Mackenzie a letter in which he complained of this surcharge being made, dated on or about the 20th July? These (alluding to papers before witness) are the letters as I got them from the Treasury, and I see no such letter among them. I am quite sure if Mr. Mackenzie or any other officer had written anything which he requested to have referred to the Treasurer, I should at once have sent it on. I certainly did give the order Mr. Mackenzie refers to, directing any communications with the Treasurer to be made through me, for I found the department becoming almost ungovernable, by officers rushing to the Treasurer continually with their own private matters. I found it would be impossible for me to govern the department if an officer could go and make any verbal statement without my knowledge, and I did issue the order stating that any officer having correspondence with the Treasurer should correspond through me, and I would be happy to forward any letter, no matter how much it might disagree with my own views.
179. Is there any letter of the character of a remonstrance which Mr. Mackenzie desired to have sent to the Treasurer? There is one here which I have read, in which he expresses his regret at the failure of my efforts to have the surcharge remitted; and with respect to that, Mr. Mackenzie has stated that he meant this ironically, because he had reason to suspect I had not done so. What he stated is perfectly true—that I told him that I never made any such promise; but at the same time it was in consequence of my recommendation that the £15 10s. 11d. were returned to Mr. Mackenzie.
180. Is there any letter of the 20th July there, such as I have stated? There is no such letter as that. The letter Mr. Mackenzie handed to the Treasurer is here, and I have read it. I am quite sure Mr. Mackenzie cannot produce any letter of his to me, asking me to refer his case to the Treasurer, if I did not so refer it.
181. There is no letter then, amongst that correspondence, dated on or about the 20th July, remonstrating against the course pursued, and requesting to have the letter laid before the Treasurer? Nothing at all corresponding to it, nor do I believe such a document exists. Here is one of the 2nd July—perhaps this may be the one Mr. Mackenzie means. I see this also has a memorandum of mine. (Read, and copy handed in. Vide Appendix.)
182. To whom ought the reweigh order to be returned? To the Warehouse-keeper.
183. Not to Mr. Still? Not to Mr. Still; he has nothing to do with it whatever. The deficiency should have been reported to Mr. Jones, who was acting for Mr. Still during his leave of absence, which extended from the end of December, 1862, till the beginning of April, 1863. This was omitted by Mr. Mackenzie, as well as the return of the reweigh order to the Warehouse-keeper.
184. Are you sure there is not a letter on or about the 20th July there? No, I see nothing of it. There is a letter I have not read, but which I think it necessary I should read, dated 26th April, 1862, forwarding a large amount of evidence taken on oath in the Custom House. That evidence must be at the Treasury somewhere. I was not able to get it this morning, but it must be in existence, and can be produced if necessary. (Letter read, and copy handed in. Vide Appendix.)
185. What was the decision upon that? The decision is not here, but I think I can state pretty nearly the effect of it from memory, namely,—that as the evidence was somewhat conflicting or contradictory, although the strength of it was against Mr. Mackenzie, the Treasurer would give Mr. Mackenzie the benefit of the doubt; at the same time admonishing him that if similar conduct ensued he would be dismissed.
186. Was it in consequence of that conduct that Mr. Mackenzie's salary was reduced from £300 to £225? No; in fact there was no sum at all on the Estimates for Mr. Mackenzie. The moment the Sub-Collectorship at Albury ceased, the salary ceased of course. The Government usually try to provide for officers displaced in that way; but I may state distinctly, that Mr. Mackenzie was recalled from Albury in consequence of a statement made by Mr. Cowper to Mr. Weekes. One day when I was in the Treasury with Mr. Weekes, Mr. Cowper came in. He had just then returned from a trip to Melbourne and Moama, on something connected with the Border Customs duties, and he began to joke with me about Mr. Mackenzie (whom I had recommended strongly for the Sub-Collectorship at Albury), saying he was seen rolling about the streets there drunk. Some conversation passed, and the result was that Mr. Weekes requested me to telegraph for Mr. Mackenzie's return, and also to direct him to forward the information mentioned in the telegram. I was not to tell him what was to be done, but I understood the Government intended to dismiss him immediately on his return. I may say I have always had a friendly feeling to Mr. Mackenzie; he is a man of some ability when sober, and all along I have taken great interest in him. Instead of oppressing him, as he now pretends, I have really gone beyond proper bounds in screening him from punishment. This is a letter I wrote to Mr. Smart, when he was Treasurer,

Treasurer, dated 2nd September, 1863. (Read, and copy handed in. Vide Appendix.) I believe these are all that are material in the correspondence. There is a list of the weighing of the sugar, and a statement of the deficiency from the warehouse, which I will not trouble the Committee to read. W. A. Duncan, Esq.
7 April, 1864.

187. With regard to your statement as to Mr. Mackenzie having delivered some portion of this sugar by the "Celine," have you any memorandum shewing the quantities he did deliver? I have no memorandum here, but I have always been under the impression that a considerable portion of it was delivered by Mr. Mackenzie. I think in the correspondence he admits that, although he has stated the contrary in his evidence.

188. Did Mr. Mackenzie refuse to sign the certificate demanded by Mr. Powell? From Mr. Powell's statement I believe he did.

189. What was the nature of the certificate? It is something to the effect that the sugar was weighed and that there was a certain deficiency. It is clear I ought to have had the signature of the previous Locker or of Mr. Mackenzie.

190. Have you a copy of that certificate? I dare say I have the original.

191. Will you produce it? I will. (Copy handed in. Vide Appendix.)

192. Have you any recollection of receiving a letter from Mr. Mackenzie, dated on or about the 20th July, something similar to this (handing a paper to witness, referred to by Mr. Mackenzie in his evidence as the draft of a letter which was returned to him instead of being forwarded to the Treasurer as requested), reviewing all the facts of the case, and entreating you to submit it to the Treasurer, so as to give the Treasurer an opportunity of deciding on the whole facts? I have no recollection of it, nor do I believe I received any such letter. Of course it is possible, but I do not believe it.

WEDNESDAY, 13 APRIL, 1864.

Present:—

MR. SMART,
MR. TIGHE,

MR. DANGAR,
MR. TERRY.

THOMAS GARRETT, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Henry Lane, Esq., Under Secretary for Finance and Trade, called in and examined:—

193. By the Chairman: You received a summons to attend this Committee and produce certain documents relative to the dismissal of Mr. Mackenzie? I did. H. Lane, Esq.
13 April, 1864.

194. What documents have you bearing upon this matter? I have the original papers connected with Mr. Mackenzie's removal, copies of which have been already handed to the Committee by the Collector of Customs.

195. Have you any additional papers? I have a letter which I was specially asked to produce, dated the 20th July, 1863. It is from Mr. Mackenzie to the Collector of Customs.

196. Will you be so good as to read that letter, and any minutes that may be on it? Yes. (Witness read and handed in the letter, together with a minute of the Collector of Customs thereon, a minute by the Honorable the Treasurer respecting Mr. Mackenzie's request for a reconsideration of his case, and the minute of the Collector of Customs in reply. Vide Appendix.) The Collector of Customs waited on the Honorable the Treasurer with these papers; and I do not know anything more as regards the result, than that the Treasurer returned them to me, with additional papers, and directed me to keep them separate from the official records.

197. What is the nature of the additional papers—are they bearing on this matter? They are statements respecting the habits of Mr. Mackenzie, collected by the Collector of Customs.

198. By Mr. Smart: Did you receive the two sets of papers at the same time? Yes, at the same time.

199. Was that statement you read made after the appeal was made to the Executive for his dismissal, do you know? Afterwards.

200. Who had that letter in his possession? Mr. Mackenzie.

201. And he complained about its suppression? Yes.

202. By the Chairman: With regard to that letter of the 20th July, are you aware that it was returned to Mr. Mackenzie? I was not until he told me.

203. That letter of explanation was returned to Mr. Mackenzie with the Collector's minute? Yes.

204. And Mr. Mackenzie waited on you on what date? On the 15th September.

205. Was he aware on the 15th September that he had been dismissed? Yes.

206. Have you any communication of a prior date intimating that to him? I think that a copy of the letter sent is with the first papers. The Executive minute is on the 7th September.

207. The Treasurer's minute is dated the 7th September? Yes; and very shortly after that, a letter was delivered to the Collector stating that Mr. Mackenzie had been dismissed.

208. Before the Executive Council had decided? No, after.

209. The minute of the Executive Council is dated 15th December? That is the date of the confirmation. We could have written to him immediately after the first meeting of the Executive.

210. The first meeting was on the 8th? Yes, the 7th or 8th.

211. He was informed of his dismissal between the 7th and the 15th? Yes.

H. Lane, Esq. 212. And on the 15th he waited on you with this letter of the Collector? Of the 20th July.

213. And you submitted that letter to the Treasurer? At once.

13 April, 1864. 214. And the Treasurer wrote a minute there, and practically confirmed the dismissal? Yes.

215. Have you any other papers relative to the dismissal of Mr. Mackenzie? These (produced) are subsequent papers, which I wish to shew you. They have reference to the removal of the surcharge.

216. Will you be so good as to state the nature of them? A Mr. Knight interested himself on behalf of Mr. Mackenzie, and waited on the Treasurer. The result of the interview was that Knight wrote officially to the Treasurer.

217. Will you be so good as to read his communication? It is dated Sydney, 30th September, 1863. (Letter read. Vide Appendix.) The Treasurer minuted on it, "Collector of Customs, for his report—T.W.S. 1/10/63." The Collector reported as follows, on the 2nd October, 1863:—"Mr. Knight, in pursuing his benevolent object, seems to convey the impression that I am of opinion that the surcharge against Mr. Mackenzie should be remitted as a matter of right. This is quite erroneous. What I did say was, that as Mr. Mackenzie had subsequently brought on himself the severest official punishment, and that as his family were thereby rendered destitute, I thought the Government might, in clemency to them, and in the exercise of a legitimate discretion, remit the pecuniary penalty; and when pressed by Mr. Knight to urge that view upon the Treasurer, I said that I had already made a suggestion to the same effect, and could proceed no further, unless officially called upon to do so. I should be glad to know that Mr. Knight is successful in his application, not as a matter of 'restitution,' as he seems to put it, but purely as an act of grace on the part of the Government." It is signed "W.A.D." The Treasurer decided as follows:—"On account of the distressing position of Mr. Mackenzie's family in consequence of his dismissal from the service, I am disposed to remit the penalty inflicted on him for the short delivery of the sugar ex 'Celeine.' Signed T.W.S., 2/10/63."

218. And the amount was remitted? The amount of the surcharge was remitted.

219. Have you any other matters to place before the Committee? There was a letter presented by Mr. Mackenzie to the Hon. W. Forster, merely recapitulating the circumstances and begging a reconsideration of the case.

220. By Mr. Smart: Was that letter presented to Mr. Forster as Colonial Secretary? As Colonial Secretary. He (Mackenzie) then presented a formal petition to the Honorable the Executive Council, praying for a reconsideration of the matter. (Petition, and minute thereon, handed in. Vide Appendix.)

221. By the Chairman: What reply did he obtain to that (letter to Honorable Colonial Secretary). You need not read the whole of the letter; it is merely a recapitulation of the facts, I presume? Exactly. (Letter of Mr. Mackenzie to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary handed in. Vide Appendix.) It was referred to the Treasurer, whose reply is as follows:—"I understand that the surcharge has been refunded to Mr. Mackenzie; but as the tone of his letters to the Collector was complained of, and has been dealt with by the late Executive as good ground for dismissal, I decline to disturb their decision. G.E.—4/11/63." As regards the petition, I may say that it was sent to the present Treasurer to be dealt with, as will be seen by the notes on it. The Treasurer dealt with it as follows:—"Inform Mr. Mackenzie that his petition has been considered by the Executive Council, who see no reason to disturb the decision arrived at by the late Government. G.E.—16/2/64."

222. By Mr. Tighe: Those memoranda, relating to the habits of Mr. Mackenzie, were put in after the matter was decided upon, were they not? Yes.

223. Then nothing contained in those documents had anything to do with his dismissal in the first instance? No.

224. Mr. Mackenzie seems to wish to convey that he was dismissed in consequence of the tone he adopted in the letters he wrote in reference to these matters—is that a fact—It says, in the 16th clause of the petition, that he was dismissed for insubordination in the tone and manner in which he addressed his superior officers—was that the cause of his dismissal? Yes, but he does not go to the full extent. In complaining of these letters, the Collector referred also to former instances of his misconduct.

225. And those former instances were considered when he was dismissed—were they? Yes, for the Treasurer referred to them in his minute.

226. Then Mr. Mackenzie is not quite correct in what he states in the 16th clause of his petition, which is to this effect:—"That your petitioner received a letter from the Collector, informing him that his letters written in the matter of the cheque had been laid before the Executive Council, and that they had decided that your petitioner be dismissed for 'insubordination'?" It may be correct that the Collector so informed him in his letter.

227. What I want to know is, whether it was simply for the tone of those letters that Mr. Mackenzie was dismissed, or if he was dismissed for other irregularities? I think for other irregularities in addition to the tone of the letter. The paragraph states that Mr. Mackenzie received a letter from the Collector informing him that his letters written in the matter of the surcharge had been laid before the Executive Council; Mr. Mackenzie simply makes the statement that the Collector informed him.

228. Mr. Eagar says in his minute, that Mr. Mackenzie was dismissed in consequence of the tone adopted in those letters. That letter, which you read just now, does not seem to me to be very impertinent in its tone? No, it was another letter (2nd September, 1863).

229. By Mr. Terry: Is it usual, upon the dismissal of an officer, to take into consideration his former conduct, which has already been dealt with? Well, I do not know of any instance of the kind.

230. Has it not been taken into consideration here? It certainly has.
231. Conduct which has already been dealt with by the Government? Yes—past conduct.
232. Is that an unusual thing to do? I am not aware of a similar instance. Fortunately, cases of this kind occur very rarely. H. Lane, Esq.
13 April, 1864.
233. By Mr. Smart: How are you able to get at the opinion that this matter was dealt with in consequence of former cases having been brought before the Government—will you adduce an instance? I do not understand you.
234. Mr. Terry asked you if it was customary, upon the dismissal of an officer, to take his previous conduct into consideration—conduct which had been previously dealt with, and you said “no”? I refer simply to this fact, that an allusion has been made in your minute to repeated charges of irregularity.
235. But had they been dealt with by my predecessor? Yes, some of these had been dealt with. I know of one to which the Collector referred in his letter, and which had been dealt with by your predecessor.
236. As Mr. Lane seems to know what influenced me in the dismissal of Mr. Mackenzie, I would ask him what instances he can adduce to prove his statements—perhaps he can particularize them? I know of one which was referred to by the Collector of Customs in bringing the case before you.
237. But do you know what influenced the mind of the Treasurer in the dismissal of Mr. Mackenzie? No.
- (Preceding questions and answers read by Shorthand Writer.)
238. Do you still adhere to that answer? Yes, I would not modify that answer.
239. Then please to state what influenced me in recommending that dismissal? This is the Collector of Customs' letter to you, and in that he makes reference not only to two offensive letters, but he also states: “I know of no public officer who has received so much indulgence as Mr. Mackenzie. He was recalled from Albury, on the suggestion of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, in consequence of reports of his inebriety, which had reached Mr. Cowper. He was, however, permitted to continue in the service here. Some time after, he was convicted at the Police Office of having assaulted a woman. Still later he was charged with being drunk on the wharf and using beastly language, and evidence on oath was given of the fact; but Mr. Weekes allowed him the benefit of a very slight doubt, in consequence of the evidence being somewhat contradictory. Previously to the fact of the sugar in question, I had repeatedly heard of rumours of his having been seen drunk—rumours, however, which I passed over perhaps a little too lightly, as I really had a kind feeling to the man.” It was, I presume, a report of that kind which induced you in your minute to refer not only to the two letters which were supposed to be impertinent, but also to say—“T. D. Mackenzie, the officer referred to, has been repeatedly charged with irregularities.” I therefore conclude that you have taken these repeated former irregularities into consideration in recommending his dismissal. And I may perhaps call to your recollection that, when you directed me to take measures for his immediate dismissal,—(you were up at the Assembly at the time I received the papers)—I wrote to you stating—“The usual course is to suspend, and then recommend that the party shall be called upon to shew cause why he should not be dismissed. Shall this course be pursued towards Mr. Mackenzie?” You replied, “Mr. Mackenzie's conduct has been so bad that I do not intend placing him under suspension, but recommend his immediate dismissal.” I presume from this that you took into consideration previous irregularities of conduct.
240. The only irregularity of conduct you allude to as having been dealt with is the beastly conversation on the wharf, when Mr. Weekes gave him the benefit of the doubt, and forgave him? Well, there was that case of the old tom; but I certainly did not recollect that at the time.
241. Do you know, of your own knowledge, that that case which Mr. Weekes dealt with influenced me in the decision which I arrived at? I assume so.
242. But do you know it—you have no right to assume things—did I ever tell you so? No, I do not recollect that you ever did.
243. By Mr. Dangar: Was Mr. Mackenzie suspended from duty, pending all those charges, at any time whilst holding a Government appointment? I am not aware.
244. By the Chairman: Are you aware of any other charge beside the one of writing these impertinent letters, the matter with reference to the deficiency of gin, and the charge of drunkenness and beastly conduct, having been preferred against Mr. Mackenzie? I do not know of any other while he was in the Customs.
245. By Mr. Smart: Have you ever heard of Mr. Mackenzie being charged with irregularities during the time he was at Albury as Sub-Collector? There were no charges officially preferred; there were rumours that reached me.
246. Do you know that he was removed from Albury and brought to Sydney? Yes.
247. Do you know the cause of it? He was no longer required at Albury.
248. Have you any record in your office of the cause of his being removed? No.
249. By the Chairman: You do not know the actual reason? No.
250. By Mr. Dangar: Was not the establishment broken up about that time? Yes, when he was withdrawn.
251. There was no necessity for continuing that establishment? No.
252. By Mr. Terry: They did away with the collection of the Border Customs? It had been discontinued some time before.

William A. Duncan, Esq., Collector of Customs, called in and examined :—

- W. A. Duncan, Esq.
13 April, 1864.
253. By the Chairman: You have handed to the Committee the original certificate of this sugar when it was bonded? When the refund was made; and you will see that it wants the Locker's signature, which it ought to have to make it complete.
254. How do you account for that? Neither Mr. Mackenzie nor the other officer would sign it.
255. Is this a proper document without that signature? Under ordinary circumstances it would not be, but having the special authority of the Government I acted on it. It is not regular without the Locker's signature.
256. Who was the other Locker that refused to sign it? The person whom Mr. Mackenzie succeeded. I believe he had no right to do it.
257. You are clear that Mr. Brock had no right? I do not allude to Mr. Brock, but Mr. Eldershaw. I understood that Mr. Mackenzie refused, and said that Mr. Eldershaw was the proper person to sign it, but that when the agent went to Mr. Eldershaw that officer refused, and I think very properly.
258. Have you, since you were last before the Committee, had any communication with Mr. Still about the reweigh order? I have not.
259. Have you obtained it? I asked it from the Warehouse-keeper, who is the proper person to have it, and he said that he never saw it after he issued it. I should like here to make a remark, in reference to an observation made by you on the previous day the Committee met. I think you misunderstood the matter of this reweigh certificate altogether. Mr. Still was not in New South Wales at the time of the last reweigh of this sugar, which I believe was in February. He was in Van Diemen's Land and Melbourne from the latter end of December until the end of March. That being the case, it was impossible that the certificate could have been handed to him at the time the sugar was reweighed. And besides, he was not the proper person to whom the certificate should be given—the Warehouse-keeper is the proper person to receive such certificates. I would draw the attention of the Committee to the 9th and 10th of the Locker's Instructions. It is there stated:—"In complying with warrants for the delivery of weighed goods, you will be particular in not delivering more than the quantity or weight mentioned in the warrant. In regard to sugar and coffee, you will personally superintend the weighing-out, and keep a memorandum of the number of bags and the gross weight." There is no such record in the Customs, of this weighing out, in the case under consideration. The 10th of the Instructions states:—"Should a deficiency, to any considerable amount, appear in any package on a regauge or roweigh, you will invariably write, under the actual quantities, on the back of the 'Requisition,' the cause of such deficiency" [no such thing was done]; "you will also enter the same in the book given you for that purpose, and, at the earliest opportunity, exhibit such entry to the Landing Surveyor." The person acting as Landing Surveyor at that time was Mr. Jones. There is a letter from Mr. Jones handed in, shewing that he knew nothing at all about it. The reweigh order is like this. (Document handed in. Vide Appendix.) That document, which should have been returned, was not returned. It could not have been given to Mr. Still, because he was not in New South Wales at the time, nor for more than six weeks afterwards. To shew that the instructions have not been complied with up to the present moment, I have brought a copy of the Locker's Book. (Copy produced. Vide Appendix.) If the Committee wish it, I will produce the book itself.
260. By Mr. Terry: You promised, last time you were here, to hand in a paper which you sent to all the officers in your department, instructing them to do certain things—a letter of instructions? That (document previously quoted from) is it. The Lockers have one set, and there are separate instructions for Landing Waiters, Tide Waiters, Carmen, and others.
261. From what I understood you to say when you were last before the Committee, I concluded that you had written instructions or orders to various Lockers to sign certain documents or papers, and they all declined to sign them? I think you misunderstood what I said; I do not recollect having said anything of the kind.
262. I think you also said that Mr. Smart recalled those instructions? I think you are alluding to the instructions to officers, to the effect that, when they wished to correspond with the Treasurer, they were to do it through me. I think that was moved for, and printed, by order of Parliament.
263. Have you a copy of that document? No, but I can get one.
264. It was recalled by the Treasurer of the day, was it not? I do not think so. That regulation was in existence before you or I was born; and I can produce an instance of a clerk being dismissed for sending a letter to Mr. Thomson without forwarding it through Colonel Gibbes, who was then Collector of Customs.
265. But did not Mr. Smart decline to act under that order? I do not know whether he did or not.
266. Do you know of any instance of the kind in your own time? I know that some of the officers have gone to the Treasurer since that time, and, knowing how difficult it is to keep things as I would wish them, I have taken no notice of it.
267. You have allowed it—then virtually that order is not in force? It is a dead letter at this moment, but I think it is an order which all Governments ought to insist upon; it is a very old order in the public service, and essential to due subordination.
268. By the Chairman: Was it an order when Mr. Mackenzie entered the public service, that an officer having any complaint to make should complain through his immediate superior, and not to the ministerial head of the department? It has always been an order in the service since I have been in it.
269. Has it, to the best of your experience, been acted upon? I think, generally speaking, it has, but of late it has been broken through by some.

270. In other cases than that of Mr. Mackenzie? Yes, before his case, and since.
271. Then, when Mr. Mackenzie broke through this order, was it re-issued? I am not aware that Mr. Mackenzie ever did break through it.
272. By Mr. Terry: Did you not issue that order to Mr. Mackenzie? Not at all. I sent it to the Landing Surveyor to shew it to the officers.
273. And it was shewn to Mr. Mackenzie? I suppose so, but I am not aware.
274. I think it came out in evidence that Mr. Smart declined to adhere to that? That may be, but I am not aware of it.
275. By Mr. Tighe: Do I understand you rightly in supposing that Mr. Mackenzie was, in the first instance, dismissed simply for his supposed impertinence in this letter; and that, when he applied to have his case reconsidered, these irregularities were adduced as a reason, in addition, why the case should not be reconsidered; or did the irregularities in the first instance form an element in the cause of his dismissal? There was no refusal that I know of to reconsider his case; in point of fact it was several times reconsidered. My letter to the Government will shew what view I took of the matter in reporting it; but there was no refusal, on the part either of myself or the Government, to reconsider anything laid before us. With respect to that letter of the 20th June, I ought to state that I had totally forgotten it. It was not handed to me with the other documents, by Mr. Lane, when I called at the Treasury on the day of the first meeting of the Committee. It has now been produced, but there is nothing in it that alters, or could have altered, my view of the case.
276. When you returned that letter to Mr. Mackenzie, with a minute upon it, of course it was a refusal on your part to recommend the case for the reconsideration of the Treasurer? No, it was to shew that his arguments did not bear upon the case in any way.
277. Then when came the irregularities into consideration—at that time or previously? The irregularity is immediately previous to that—the case of the thousand cases of gin in which fifteen were missing. I will explain that by the Locker's book. This (document previously produced) is a copy of the book, with a daily account of receipts and entries in the margin. It is copied exactly from the book. He makes, upon the 8th July, 997 received, when, in point of fact, there were thirteen of these (and there ought to have been fifteen) on board ship for a month after that.
278. Was that one of the causes for which he was dismissed? That was one of the causes.
279. Was he called upon for an explanation? He was; and his explanation and defence are there. They were sent by me to the Treasurer, along with my report on the case, and Mr. Smart returned them to me with the following minute:—"The evidence taken in this case convinces me that the business in the Customs is conducted in a most irregular and discreditable manner, and I have some doubts as to the propriety of passing over the conduct of Messrs. Jones, Dickinson, and Mackenzie, without punishment. Let them be reprimanded now, and informed that any future complaint against either of them will not be disposed of so leniently by me.—T.W.S., 28/8/63." That, I think, connects this distinctly with the dismissal by the Government.
280. That was one of the causes? So I believe. I cannot say, of course, what was in the mind of the Government. I wish here to lay before the Committee the instructions given to carmen and others, one of which is:—(4.) "On the removal of bonded goods for the purposes aforesaid, you are to be careful not to deliver them at any other place than that to which you are directed, nor into the custody of any other person than such as may be appointed and duly authorized to receive the same, from whom you are to require a receipt." No such receipt was given for any of this "old tom." Mr. Mackenzie made a very severe charge against me for tyrannical conduct, in asking him to do things which it was impossible for any man to do and which would require a hundred men. It is true I did find fault with the way in which the Bond was kept. By the rules of the department, all the packages in Bond are to be set up in tiers, so that you can walk between them and see the ends. I found these packages, however, in the most disorderly state, and reprimanded Mr. Mackenzie. He said, "What can I do? I have not enough of labour; I should want a hundred hands to put the place straight." I might have used some such expression as—"Put on a hundred hands then, and I will support you." Here is the 7th instruction to the Warehouse-keeper:—"In order to prevent confusion and unnecessary delay in searching for goods in the Warehouses when wanted, you are, in conjunction with the Landing Surveyor, to instruct the Lockers and proprietors that all goods be stowed in such a manner as to afford free and convenient access to the several packages; and in case of refusal on the part of any proprietor or occupier of any Warehouse, to make the necessary arrangements for the proper stowage of goods, you are to report the fact to the Collector or Landing Surveyor; and whenever the contents of any package shall be discovered to have been materially diminished by leakage or any other cause, you are to report all the circumstances to the Collector or Landing Surveyor, in order that they may take such measures as may be deemed necessary." The Committee will see from this, that I was merely carrying out the instructions of the Government in requiring the Bond to be in proper order.
281. Was the Bond kept in proper order under Mr. Mackenzie? It never was kept in proper order under him, nor has it been so since. To shew how irregular that Bond has been, I may say that I have had to shut it up twice since Mr. Mackenzie left.
282. Was that disorder in consequence of the lax manner in which Mr. Mackenzie discharged his duty? Yes. No doubt it was a difficult matter, but, as Mr. Mackenzie stated, I said put on a hundred men and I will support you, and so I would have done.
283. By Mr. Tighe: Had this anything to do with his dismissal? I do not think it had.
284. By the Chairman: It is a rule of the department to require that all cases and packages delivered to the Lockers should be counted by them? Yes.

- W. A. Duncan, Esq.
13 April, 1864.
285. By Mr. Terry: Have other Lockers been reduced to a lower grade for not counting? Another Locker (Mr. Brett) has been reduced to a Tide Waiter because he did not count the packages.
286. By the Chairman: Is it usual to hold a senior Locker in a Bond responsible for all deficiencies or irregularities that occur in the management of that Bond? In the Argyle Bond there has been but one Locker. There has been an assistant, as in the case of Mr. Mackenzie, but when an assistant is sent, it is not to assist the Locker in neglecting his duty, but to leave him no excuse for neglecting it. In Campbell's Bond there are two distinct Lockers.
287. And would you hold each responsible for his own acts? Yes.
288. When Mr. Mackenzie went to the Argyle Bond was there an assistant Locker? There was.
289. How many Lockers are there in the Argyle Bond at the present moment? I believe there is only one at the present moment, but Mr. Still knows more about it; I do not know always exactly what is doing at every Bond.
290. When Mr. Mackenzie returned from Albury, did you ask him whether he would prefer an out-door occupation—when he was resuming his duties in the long-room? He never was desired to resume his duties in the long-room.
291. When Mr. Mackenzie returned from Albury, in what position was he placed? He was not placed in any position for some considerable time; the Government declined dealing with his case for some considerable time; and I, on my own authority, employed him as Assistant Landing Waiter; the question of his dismissal was then under consideration.
292. Did you give him the alternative of being employed in-doors or in an out-door capacity? I have now some recollection of having made a suggestion to him that he had better take the lockership, but I did not state the reason. I think he made some objection. The clerks in the long-room, when they heard that there was a probability of Mr. Mackenzie resuming his position among them, made a decided objection to it. No such thing was decided upon, but it was talked about, and I think he rather wished it himself. In order to make things as agreeable as possible to Mr. Mackenzie—without making any allusion to the objection of the clerks—I suggested that he should take out-door employment; I did so out of kindness to him; in fact I always had the most kindly feelings towards him, until his conduct became intolerable.
293. You are not aware that Mr. Mackenzie was directed to resume his position as 7th Clerk in the long-room, on his return from Albury? No. There were several conversations between Mr. Weekes and myself. It was arranged, I think, that he should have the same salary he formerly had, but I do not recollect that there was any direction that he should take his place in the long-room. But I cannot recollect all the circumstances.
294. Is that letter (produced) written by you? It is signed by me. I had forgotten that letter, which gives him his former status, and which probably led to the objection to him by the clerks, and my suggesting to him that he should take out-door employment. He was thoroughly detested in the long-room.
295. Mr. Mackenzie agreed to take a landing waitership? I do not think he was ever appointed to or promised a landing waitership. He acted as Landing Waiter while his claim was being considered.
296. Did Mr. Mackenzie give up his 7th clerkship on condition that he should be a Landing Waiter? I am not aware of it. I cannot recollect any such conversation. I did suggest that he should take out-door employment, and, as I have previously stated, I did it out of kindness to Mr. Mackenzie.
297. By Mr. Tighe: I do not understand how Mr. Mackenzie could be called upon to sign the document if he did not see the delivery of the goods? But he was bound to see the delivery of the goods.
298. But did he not come into the service after the goods were delivered? No, I dare say the duties were paid before he took charge of the Bond; but the last weighings-out were by him.
299. Then Mr. Mackenzie's reason for refusing this was, because he had not an opportunity to examine these goods? I do not know what his reason was. There is nothing but Mr. Powell's memorandum stating that both Lockers had refused to sign.
300. Were you ever called upon for an explanation why this was not signed? Never.
301. By the Chairman: Have you actually received the reweigh order? I am certain that on the 24th June I had not seen it. At a later date it might have been sent to me, but I do not know of it; and as the sugar had been gone five months before, it would have been of no effect then. It was the Locker's duty to balance up his book, and report, which he never did.

William Cathcart Still, Esq., called in and examined:—

- W. C. Still, Esq.
13 April, 1864.
302. By the Chairman: What office do you hold in the Customs? Landing Surveyor and Inspector of Warehouses for the Port of Sydney.
303. Did you ever receive the warrant and the reweigh order for a quantity of sugar landed in the Argyle Bond, to the account of Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Company? I recollect being called upon to report in a matter connected with Mr. Mackenzie's case, and I procured those documents from the Argyle Bond, and forwarded them to the Collector of Customs.
304. When was that? When the case was brought under notice.
305. Do you recollect what month it was? It was when the merchant applied for the refund. It was then, I think, that we took steps; I think that must have been about August last—I believe it was in July or August. I had been on leave in consequence of ill health, and it was some months after I returned, in April.

306. And have you those documents? I have not.

307. What became of them? As I stated before, I sent them on to the Collector; I think likewise that some reference was afterwards made to the officer who had been doing my duty. I am not sure whether, when this after reference was made to him, he sent them back direct to the Collector, or whether he sent them through me, but of this I am positive, that they went back to the Collector, who made up his report from them.

308. By Mr. Smart: And that was about the month of August, you think? I think it was about that time, as far as my recollection serves me. I resumed my duties in April, and perhaps two or three months might have elapsed.

309. Who did you obtain them from? From the Bond—I think from Mr. Mackenzie. It was a warrant for 25 tons, and a reweigh order with no endorsement on it—a mere blank.

310. Then it was an incomplete document? Yes. If I may allude to that matter, from what I can gather it was a kind of exceptional case. That reweigh order seemed to have been taken out in the first instance in anticipation of a deficiency on the cargo, but on the last warrant for 25 tons they could not make up the quantity, so that the reweigh order was waste paper—it was of no use. Again, I might point out that the merchant takes action in those matters; he properly brings that re-weigh order to the Locker, and when finished or endorsed by that officer, he (the merchant) takes it back to the Custom House. Perhaps the officers were waiting for the merchant to take steps in this matter. It was his affair (he met with a loss)—and he might have brought the matter on, the moment the deficiency was discovered, by them applying for the refund of duty.

311. By the Chairman: Is it the duty of a Locker in charge of a Bond to inform the Warehouse-keeper immediately he detects any deficiency in the goods bonded? As I have mentioned, the merchant himself is usually the first to acquaint the Customs when bringing back his regauge or reweigh orders.

312. But is it the duty of the Locker to report immediately to the Warehouse-keeper if he detects any deficiency in the goods bonded? As I tell you—this was an exceptional case.

313. I wish for a direct answer as to whether it is the duty of the Locker or not? It is part of his duty; but there are cases where the merchant would be beforehand with him.

314. Then it is the duty of the Locker to bring this under the notice of the Warehouse-keeper or Landing Surveyor? It would be his duty to bring under notice any considerable deficiency; but there are small deficiencies and losses constantly going on in sugar and other articles, which the Locker does not formally report, because they report themselves, as it were, from the endorsements on the documents used in the routine of our business, and presented hourly at the Custom House.

315. But, independently of that, it is the duty of the Locker to report any deficiency of a material character, the existence of which he may detect? Yes.

316. And was the deficiency in this case what you would consider of a material character? It was rather an undue deficiency.

317. By Mr. Tighe: How is that rule established—by some printed regulations or by custom? It is the practice to bring under notice anything unusual or wrong; but, as I stated before, the merchant generally moves in the first instance.

318. Are you aware of the whole of the facts connected with the delivery of this cargo of sugar? I was absent from Sydney in consequence of ill health when this matter occurred; but there are many things I can allude to. I am perfectly willing to answer any question—I have no partisanship in the matter.

319. Have you seen and examined the books in connection with this matter? I did make some examination when called upon to do so by the Collector.

320. From your knowledge of the mode of managing the department, and of the duties of Lockers and their responsibilities, do you think it was proper to hold Mr. Mackenzie responsible for this deficiency? To surcharge him?

321. Yes? No, I do not think so, from the law placing the responsibility in a very different quarter.*

322. You do not think it was fair to surcharge Mr. Mackenzie with this amount? If he is to be made answerable for that deficiency, I say it is wrong. If there is any other cause to sustain the Collector that of course is a different thing, which I know nothing about.

323. Supposing he had fulfilled all the necessary duties in connection with this matter, he would not have been chargeable for any deficiency? Not without there was supposed to be some collusion with the storekeeper, or fraud or wilful neglect on his part.

324. But supposing he had neglected his duty and not made proper returns, do you think the head of the department would be acting improperly in making him pay this? If you can prove wilful neglect on his part, or collusion with the storekeeper, then, without question, it is in the power of the Collector or the Minister to act severely with him*; but the law clearly points out who is answerable for these deficiencies, and what other steps might have been taken in this case if any fraud is supposed to be mixed up with it.

* NOTE.—I allude to the 65th, 66th, and 67th clauses of the Act, 9th Victoria, No. 15.

Present :—

Mr. GARRETT,
Mr. BURDEKIN,Mr. CUNNEEN,
Mr. DANGAR.

THOMAS GARRETT, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. William Mundy called in and examined :—

- Mr. William Mundy. 325. By the Chairman: You are Locker at the Argyle Bond? Yes.
326. The books now on the table are the books kept in the Argyle Bond? Yes.
327. What do you call these books? The stock books.
- 19 April, 1864. 328. Can you give any explanation about these entries of the sugar ex "Celine,"—do you know anything about it? I do not.
329. As Locker in charge of the Bond, if you had received that book in that state, would you have delivered the sugar upon these entries? After seeing these entries I would have delivered nothing until I saw a fresh order.
330. If you got a reweigh order would you deliver whatever you had in stock? No; one side of a reweigh order shews what balance is supposed to be in bond; then when I receive it, I reweigh the sugar, and whatever I find the actual weight to be I put on the other side, and return the order to the owner or his agent when he calls for it, who then takes it to the Customs Warehouse-keeper and pays the duty accordingly. Sometimes there is a decrease, and I have known an increase; but as far as these warrants are concerned (referring to the entries in the stock book) I should deliver nothing on them, because I consider these are already delivered.
331. Unless you got a reweigh order? I should not deliver anything until the reweigh order had been produced at the Custom House, and a warrant made out for delivery for home consumption.
332. Is this document (exhibiting to witness a paper headed "Extract from Locker's Book at the Argyle Bond") a fair copy of that entry in the book before you? This is a fair copy of the pencil-marks here, and also of the marks made up in ink.
333. Is it true that a reweigh order is not returned to the Custom House by the Locker? It is not generally; but sometimes the merchant's clerk will say, "Will you leave this at the Custom House for me?"
334. Not as a matter of duty? No; many Lockers may take them to the Custom House, but it is not usual; we have no instructions, I believe, to do so.
335. Is the reweigh order made out by the merchant or his agent? Reweigh orders and all orders connected with the Customs are made out either by the merchants or their agents.
336. Is it signed by the Warehouse-keeper before it goes to the Locker? It is; that is the authority we have to act upon.
337. If you, as a Locker, got a reweigh order, and found nothing to reweigh, what would you do with the reweigh order? I should send the document back to the Customs Warehouse-keeper, and he would make it known to the Collector immediately that there was no sugar in the Bond.
338. You would not act upon a reweigh order unless it was signed by the Warehouse-keeper? I could not, upon no order.
339. And if there were no goods to reweigh, you would return it to the Warehouse-keeper with that statement endorsed upon it? Yes.
340. Would it make any difference in your mode of action on a reweigh order, whether it was brought by a messenger or by a merchant's clerk? Not the least. But they are never brought by a messenger or any one connected with the Customs; they have nothing to do with it.
341. By Mr. Burdekin: If a merchant in mistake supposed he had a balance of a cargo in Bond, and obtained a reweigh order, would you think there was any necessity to draw the Collector's attention to the fact that there was nothing remaining? I should have to send the order back if there was nothing in the Bond; if I did not do so, it would not pass over more than a certain time, say three years, before there would be an overtime sale, and then it would be found out.
342. And you would get blamed for not reporting it at the time? Yes.

Mr. Joseph Augustus Knight called in and examined :—

- Mr. J. A. Knight. 343. By the Chairman: You are a friend of Mr. T. D. Mackenzie? Yes, I have known him some years.
344. You interested yourself with the late Treasurer to obtain a remission of a fine imposed upon Mr. Mackenzie while he was a Locker? Yes.
- 19 April, 1864. 345. Could you recollect the purport of any conversations you had with Mr. Smart or Mr. Duncan, so far as they bear upon the character and qualifications of Mr. Mackenzie? Prior to seeing Mr. Smart I had called upon the Collector. My object was to see whether the letter that had been objected to so strongly could not be withdrawn, but Mr. Duncan stated it was quite impossible; and then he went on, after a little conversation—I cannot recollect the exact words, but he acknowledged that Mr. Mackenzie was an efficient officer, and that he was sorry to lose him, and I think he made use of the words, "I do not know at the present time exactly where to look for one to fill his place;" and upon being asked, he said he would have no objection to recommend him for another situation under the Government, meaning, as I understood, other than in his department.

346. You had also, subsequently to that, some conversation with Mr. Smart? Yes.
347. Do you recollect the purport of it? I made a statement to him shewing how very much Mr. Mackenzie and his family were suffering, partly from his dismissal and also from his salary being withheld, and Mr. Smart then wished me to put it in writing, which I eventually did, and the result was the return of the amount stopped from Mr. Mackenzie's salary.
348. Mr. Smart did not express any opinion on Mr. Mackenzie's qualifications or conduct? I do not recollect that he did.
349. Are you an officer of the Customs? No.
350. Do you know anything of the Customs regulations? Yes, I have been doing Custom House work for Mr. Montefiore, my employer, for a long while—six years.
351. With regard to reweigh orders, the merchant or his agent takes the reweigh order to the Bond, having first submitted it to the Customs Warehouse-keeper and got his signature to it? Yes, which I imagine is merely an authority for the Locker to weigh the goods.
352. Supposing there were no goods to reweigh, what would be done with the order? I do not know that such a case ever occurred to me, but if it did I should consider the order valueless, and take it away in my pocket or tear it up.
353. When you obtain a reweigh order from the Warehouse-keeper, what is your next step? I take it to the Locker, and request him to insert upon it the weight of the goods which I have applied to have reweighed. Then, if the weighing of these goods should occupy any length of time, I leave the order, and call next day, or two days after, as the case may be, and then fetch it away from the Locker, and bring it back to the Custom House for the purpose of making out my entries.
354. Supposing there were no goods in bond, and the reweigh order was endorsed "nil," would you leave it with the Locker? No, I think not; I should be inclined to tear it up. I might make the remark that it was very strange there was nothing in the Bond.
355. You never had a case of the sort occur to you? No.
356. By Mr. Burdekin: You would go back to your office and find out how it was there were no goods? Yes. I could cite an instance where a small quantity of sugar was left in bond at Macnamara's Wharf; I knew there must be seven or eight bags left, but I did not know what the weight might be; I saw the proprietor of the Bond, and I asked him if he could tell me the weight of this sugar; he said yes, he would get it weighed for me immediately; so I went to the Locker and asked him if he knew, and he said if I got a reweigh order he would fill it up for me.
357. Supposing a reweigh order was returned to you with "nil" on it, you would go back and examine your books to find out how it was there was no sugar there? I should not think of taking out a reweigh order unless I knew there was sugar remaining in the Bond.
358. And therefore, if it were returned "nil," it would be matter for inquiry? Probably I should make inquiry; but I myself should never think of applying for a reweigh order unless I knew there was a balance remaining; I should not take it on supposition, because in my own stock books I always keep the number of bags, and I know from the number of bags as delivered whether there can be any sugar left.
359. By the Chairman: Supposing you have a cargo of sugar in bond, and after having taken out quantities of it at different times, you finally procure a warrant for 25 tons, and, under the impression there will still be a balance, a reweigh order—if there is not sugar enough remaining to satisfy the warrant for 25 tons, would you take any notice of the reweigh order? Certainly not.
360. If it were marked "nil" you would treat it as waste paper? Yes.
361. Would not the reweigh order be your certificate for the return of duty? No.
362. How would you act to get the duty returned on account of the sugar deficient? In the first instance I would go to the Bonded Warehouse-keeper—I would not trouble the Customs at all at first—to know why that particular quantity of sugar was not delivered; I should not look at all to the Locker.
363. Would you not get the Locker's certificate that the deficiency did exist upon the reweigh order? Not upon the reweigh order, but upon the original warrant for the 25 tons; I should inquire why the warrant was not fully satisfied before I thought of the reweigh order.
364. You speak of how you would act in your present capacity, not as if you were a Locker? Exactly. But I know that in all cases of reweigh orders the Locker has merely filled the document up and given it to me with the weight upon it. I have never known an instance where there has been nothing left to reweigh on a reweigh order, and therefore I do not know what the Locker's duty might be.
365. Supposing you were an officer of the Customs and a deficiency were found upon the last reweigh of the goods, would you not feel it your duty to report that to your superior officer? Undoubtedly to my superior officer I should.
366. Not to the head of the department? Perhaps not immediately to the head of the department, but indirectly to him through my superior officer.

Mr.
J. A. Knight.
19 April, 1864.

W. A. Duncan, Esq., Collector of Customs, further examined:—

367. By the Chairman: Will you state to the Committee the course pursued, and the reasons which regulate it, for the return of a reweigh order? The return of a reweigh order is necessary in order that, in case of any deficiency, the Collector may inquire into the cause. In order to shew this necessity, I may mention that when I took charge of the Customs

- W. A. Duncan, Esq.
19 April, 1864.
- Customs in Sydney I had the Warehouse-keeper's books strictly examined, and I found that over 600 tons of sugar were missing in the different Bonds, representing duty to the amount of some £1,300, which duty has never been paid up to this moment. I immediately wrote this sugar off the books, and the Auditor General surcharged me with it for several successive quarters. I stated that the sugar was never under my care, that it did not exist, and that I would not send in a false return. There were also 700 and odd packages of tea deficient in one Bond, which appeared to have been taken out some two years previously. On that tea, however, I recovered the duty. I mention these facts to shew the dangerous nature of the loose doctrine, with regard to the management of the Warehouses, which on a previous day was stated to the Committee.
368. You state most positively it is the duty of the Locker to return the reweigh order to the Warehouse-keeper, whose duty it is, if there is any deficiency, to report to you? Yes, decidedly so.
369. By Mr. Cunneen: I will draw your attention to the 8th and 9th paragraphs of Mr. Mackenzie's petition;—is it true that the petitioner, as stated in the 9th paragraph, was placed in charge of the Bond on the 5th February, 1863? It is.
370. Is it true, as stated in the 8th paragraph, that "the last warrant for delivery of said sugar" was issued on the 4th February? I believe it is.
371. Then in what way is the petitioner responsible for what happened before he took charge? Because the weighing that last delivery was done partly by him and partly by his assistant.
372. On what day? I have not been able to find out (though I have made several desperate efforts) the exact day on which the sugar was delivered; but that it was delivered partly by him and partly by his assistant I am quite sure; and I hold him answerable because he did not report the deficiency upon finding there was not enough to satisfy the warrant.
373. If it is the fact that the warrant issued and the delivery took place on the 4th, would it not have been the duty of the officer then in charge to have made the report? If he had delivered the sugar undoubtedly it would, but Mr. Mackenzie weighed a portion of it, and his assistant, Mr. Brock, weighed the rest; and Mr. Mackenzie being the Locker of the Bond and keeping the books—the other being merely a temporary assistant—I held him responsible.
374. By Mr. Burdekin: I suppose an officer taking charge of a Bond is not held responsible as to matters that he may find entered up to the day previous to his taking charge—any entry made by the previous Locker he would take as a fact? I should never make him responsible for any act of his predecessor in any way whatever.
375. All the goods in the Bond are not reweighed when a new Locker takes charge? No, it would be impossible.
376. He takes the stock book as containing a true account of the stock? Yes.
377. By the Chairman: Then I understand you that, although from the entry in the book it appears that the last 25 tons was delivered on the 4th February, it was not in fact weighed out till some subsequent day? It appears to be written off in the handwriting of Mr. Eldershaw, the previous Locker; but I do not think he ought to have written it off in that way.
378. If he did so write it off do you think that relieved Mr. Mackenzie of the responsibility of seeing the delivery completed? Certainly not.
379. By Mr. Burdekin: Has there been any charge of neglect against Mr. Mackenzie since the 5th February, 1863, when he came in charge of this Bond, except this one on the day of his entering upon it? There have been several other complaints against Mr. Mackenzie.
380. By the Chairman: As a Locker? Yes.
381. Have we had them before the Committee? Yes, there is that case of the old tom.
382. By Mr. Burdekin: After the 5th February? Yes, long after.
383. Would you hold the principal Locker, where there are two, responsible for any wrong delivery by his assistant? If he could shew that his assistant had been negligent or corrupt he would be punished, but unquestionably the Locker in charge of the Bond—the man who keeps the books—is held responsible for everything. I must hold somebody responsible.
384. If his assistant failed to enter the delivery, and he has not known of the fact —? His assistant never did enter anything in the books at all.
385. By the Chairman: Is that entry of the delivery of 25 tons of sugar on the 4th February in Mr. Mackenzie's handwriting? No, it is in Mr. Eldershaw's handwriting; Mr. Mackenzie came there on the 5th.
386. Supposing Mr. Mackenzie came in on the 5th February, would it have been his duty to have delivered any portion of the sugar found to have been written off by his predecessor on the 4th? He did deliver a portion of it.
387. Was it properly his duty? My impression is that Mr. Eldershaw should not have written this off until the sugar was delivered, but that does not affect the question, because Mr. Mackenzie had a duty-paid warrant to act upon, and did act upon it so far as he had sugar to deliver. I know for a fact that Mr. Mackenzie and his assistant did deliver the balance of the sugar so far as it went.
388. What quantity of that 25 tons did Mr. Mackenzie deliver? I cannot positively state that, because I have not been able to get the papers.
389. You are quite clear he did deliver some of it? I am quite certain of that, and he has admitted it himself. I consider he delivered it all; the other was purely an assistant, not to enable him to neglect his duty, but to do it properly.
390. By Mr. Burdekin: Was this the first occasion of Mr. Mackenzie being a Locker? He had been a Locker in another Bond previously.
391. For a sufficient time to be well acquainted with the duties? He must have known the duties well, because he kept the warehouse register for some years.
- 392.

392. By the Chairman: If Mr. Mackenzie had delivered any of that sugar written off as delivered by his predecessor on the 4th, would he have been subject to dismissal or any other penalties? I think he would have subjected himself to a very severe reprimand if he had done so without making inquiry of his predecessor what quantity he had delivered on that warrant.

W. A.
Duncan, Esq.
19 April, 1864.

393. By Mr. Burdekin: Would the Locker, under such a warrant as this, deliver the sugar at different times? He might deliver it at different times, but it is a very inconvenient practice.

394. By Mr. Cunneen: Although the warrant was issued on the 4th, would the sugar be delivered at any time after that? Yes, it would probably be delivered at intervals on and after the 4th, because sugar is a bulky article, and takes time to weigh and deliver.

395. Do I understand that, although the warrant was passed on the 4th, on the 5th and days following the sugar might have been delivered? Yes.

396. Is that how it happened that Mr. Mackenzie became responsible for what was done under this warrant that passed before he came into office? Yes; the Lockers happened to be changed in the interval between the payment of this duty and the delivery of the sugar; and Mr. Mackenzie, having the duty of weighing out and delivering it, is responsible because he failed to report the deficiency.

397. Then Mr. Mackenzie did weigh out this sugar? A considerable portion of it he certainly did.

398. If he delivered any of it, and found a deficiency, he would be responsible for reporting it? Just so.

399. But if he did not deliver it he would not be responsible? There is no question about his delivering it, either personally or by his assistant.

400. It was delivered after the 4th? Yes.

401. Was Mr. Mackenzie dismissed for not reporting this deficiency? No.

402. What was he dismissed for? The Treasurer, Mr. Smart, fined him to the extent of the duty refunded to the merchant, and of course it was my duty to obey the Minister's order and inflict the fine. I did not do so in the first month, because Mr. Mackenzie made some objection to it; but in the second month I deducted the £15 10s. 11d. from Mr. Mackenzie's salary. He then sent me two very insolent letters, which I found it my duty to lay before the Treasurer, and he was dismissed for that, and for other irregularities, which the Treasurer referred to in his minute. There is a case here in which you will see he miscalculated a lot of gin. Upon the 8th of July he had entered in his stock book 997 as being counted into the Bond, when at that time there were thirteen and ought to have been fifteen cases in the ship, these thirteen or fifteen cases being liable to seizure.

403. Then Mr. Mackenzie was, in fact, dismissed by the Executive Council for writing what were considered improper or insolent letters to his superior officer? And for other irregularities, including this of the old tom.

Mr. William Mundy re-examined:—

404. By the Chairman: If a reweigh order had been brought to you, and the previous warrant had not been satisfied, what would you have done with the reweigh order? I should have given it back to the party who brought it, and made known to him that the other warrant was not completed. The same explanation I should have given to the Customs Warehouse-keeper—that the 25 ton warrant had not been satisfied.

Mr.
19 April, 1864.

405. Would you have deemed it your duty, under these circumstances, to have returned the reweigh order to the Warehouse-keeper or to the Collector? If the merchant's clerk did not come in the course of the day I should perhaps take it over to the Custom House Warehouse-keeper, or it might lie in the office till the next day. Perhaps the merchant's clerk might come next day, and I should tell him there was no more sugar left. That of course would be reported to Mr. Still, and from Mr. Still to the Collector, who would call upon me to shew what had become of the sugar.

406. To whom would you deem it your duty to report the fact of this deficiency? To the Landing Surveyor, Mr. Still, at the earliest opportunity, according to the printed instructions.

---

Mr. Benjamin P. Campbell called in and examined:—

407. By the Chairman: Do you know Mr. Mackenzie? Yes.

408. In any communications you have had with Mr. Duncan, do you recollect whether Mr. Duncan expressed any opinion as to Mr. Mackenzie's qualifications as an officer of the Government? I recollect seeing Mr. Duncan, in company with Mr. Knight, relative to Mr. Mackenzie, on which occasion the Collector expressed himself favourably towards Mr. Mackenzie, so far as to say that in the event of his being able to use his influence to get him an appointment in any other branch of the service he would do so; and he also said he had kept his books with neatness almost to a fault.

Mr. B. P.
Campbell.
19 April, 1864.

W. A. Duncan, Esq., Collector of Customs, re-examined:—

W. A.
19 April, 1864.

409. By the Chairman: Did Mr. Still ever place in your possession the weighing books of the Argyle Bond? Not that I am aware of; but if he did, that would have been in July or August, when they would have been perfectly useless. He stated here that he had produced not the weighing book but the reweigh order; that is barely possible—I have no recollection of it—but if he had, it would have been perfectly useless six months after the event.

410. Did Mr. Jones, the Acting Landing Surveyor, ever report to you the fact of this deficiency? Never.

411. If Mr. Mackenzie had reported it to Mr. Jones, would it have been Mr. Jones' duty to have reported it to you? Unquestionably.

412. Was Mr. Jones the proper officer for Mr. Mackenzie to report it to? There were two officers to whom he might have reported it—Mr. Jones and the Warehouse-keeper. Mr. Jones was then acting for Mr. Still during his leave of absence—but there is a note of Mr. Jones' on the papers, which shews he knew nothing about it.

413. Did Mr. Mackenzie ever report to the Warehouse-keeper or yourself this deficiency? I believe not.

414. You would not have looked to Mr. Brock to report it? No, it would not have been his duty.

415. You have no knowledge where that weighing book is? None whatever.

416. Do you accept it as a sufficient excuse for these entries not being made properly, that Mr. Mackenzie had not time? I cannot accept that as an excuse from anybody.

417. Did he ever put it forward as an excuse? He often complained of the hardness of the work, and I admit that in the Argyle Bond the work is very hard.

418. Do you think it so hard that there was no time to make these entries? I do not think so, because the very appearance of his book will shew he had plenty of time to amuse himself.

419. Is it a proper way of making entries in this book to enter them in pencil? It is not. The Landing Waiters and Lockers are expressly forbidden to write anything in pencil.

420. Did you ever oppose Mr. Mackenzie's application for an inquiry into his case after his dismissal? Certainly not.

421. Are you aware of any such application having been made? I saw Mr. Mackenzie occasionally at the Treasury, when I went there on business, and I concluded he was trying to move the Treasurer with reference to his case.

422. Did you bring any influence to bear upon the Treasurer to stop inquiry? Certainly not. On the contrary, it appears in evidence that it was through my influence he got the remission of the £15.

PETITION OF TOM DIGHT MACKENZIE.

Custom House, Sydney,
4 July, 1863.

Sir,

I have the honor to forward, herewith, an application from Messrs. Metcalfe and Powell, on behalf of Messrs. Scott & Co., for a return of the duty on 3 tons 2 cwt. 21 lbs. of sugar, amounting to £15 10s. 11d., being an over-payment on the cargo of the "Celinie," from Mauritius.

Finding that there was a further deficiency on this cargo of 3 tons 4 cwt. 1 qr. 20 lbs., duty unpaid, and the quantity appearing excessive, I have made a very minute inquiry into the whole case, and the result is that, although there has been very great negligence, and an error of at least 8 bags in number, and a somewhat greater error in the weight, for which the Locker, Mr. Mackenzie, is answerable, inasmuch as he neither checked his assistant's weighings nor reported the deficiency immediately, as he ought to have done, yet I am satisfied that the deficiency, with the above exceptions, was bond fide, and that the importers are entitled to the refund they claim, which I recommend accordingly.

I have, &c.,

Does the Collector intend to charge the deficiency to the Locker?—T.W.S.

I am sorry to be obliged to say that I think the Locker is fairly chargeable with this deficiency, on account of his very great negligence.—W.A.D.—7 July, 1863.

Sydney, 23 June, 1863.

Sir,

We have the honor to enclose over entry certificates for a refund of duty overpaid upon sugar ex "Celinie" @ Mauritius.

The sugar weighed out from the Bond by the Locker is short of the landing weight, the quantity we now claim.

Sir,

With respect to the sugar mentioned in this certificate—1 "Celinie," P. 850, in the Argyle Bond—the Landing Waiter's red book shews 460 tons 14 cwt. 1 qr. 20 lbs. net, as having been bonded in the first instance, out of which duty entries have been passed for 457 tons 10 cwt., and a reweigh taken out for the balance—3 tons 4 cwt. 1 qr. 20 lbs., which reweigh has never been returned to me. I presume from this certificate that there was not sufficient sugar in the Bond by 3 tons 2 cwt. 21 lbs., to cover the last duty-paid warrant, which was for 25 tons, passed on 4th February, 1863, No. 1677; and the reweigh order for the balance was taken out on the same date. If such is the case, it will be seen that there is not only an over-payment, but an actual loss of 3 tons 4 cwt. 1 qr. 20 lbs., besides making a total loss of 6 tons 6 cwt. 2 qrs. 13 lbs.

T.F.—24/6/63.

I invariably have a reweigh for the balance of cargo, which was the case in this instance, being near completion.—T.F.

Can Mr. Jones give any information about this deficiency, which appears excessive for "Mauritius" sugar? The weighing out was during my recent leave of absence.

I regret to say I cannot, for I believe the sugar was very carefully weighed out.

E. JONES.

Memo. :—

This sugar was weighed out during my recent leave of absence. I have had the weighing books examined, but cannot discover any material error. For Mauritius sugar the deficiency appears excessive. The cargo may possibly have contained more moisture than ordinarily. From a memo. from the importers, the loss during a voyage of about two months was nearly eight tons and a half. The sugar was in Bond about three months, and it may be very fairly assumed that the loss would proportionately increase.

Argyle Bond, 27 June, 1863.

Sir,

I regret it is not in my power to give any information in the matter of the "Celinie's" cargo of sugar, further than that, during the other engagement of my then assistant, Mr. Brock, I superintended the weighings initialled by me in the blue book accompanying.

This

This statement of Mr. Mackenzie is not satisfactory. Why did he not report the deficiency when first discovered—and, especially, why did he not return the reweigh order when he found there was nothing to weigh?

W.A.D.
1 July, 1863.

Sir,

Argyle Bond, 2 July, 1863.

In reply to your letter of yesterday, requiring of me further particulars and fuller replies as to my knowledge of the cargo of sugar ex "Celinie," I have the honor to state that, on the personal application of Mr. Still, I handed to that gentleman the warrant of 4th February, No. 1,677, together with the reweigh order, and, at his request, put in writing all I further knew of the matter.

Under the impression that, it is always desirable, in large deliveries and open warrants, that the person commencing should complete them, I left the one in question entirely in the charge of Mr. Brock, in whose care and diligence I have every confidence, and I really was then ignorant of any deficiency; but on being made aware of it did not deem it necessary to return the reweigh order, as it could not be acted on, and consequently I had nothing to endorse thereon.

I trust you will bear in mind that the warrant above referred to was received here, entered in the stock book, and acted on, before I was put in charge of the Bond; and I do hope that my consequent ignorance will remove from my conduct any appearance of negligence.

W. A. Duncan, Esq.,
Collector of Customs.

I have, &c.,

T. D. MACKENZIE.

This statement is still unsatisfactory. If the warrant was received at the Bond before Mr. Mackenzie took charge, the final delivery and the discovery of the deficiency took place under him, and it was his duty to report it immediately.

The reweigh order should have been returned, endorsed "nil," and this no one knows better than Mr. Mackenzie himself, who might fairly be surcharged with the deficiency for his negligence.

W.A.D.
2/7/63.

Memo. :—

I reported to Mr. Jones, acting as Landing Surveyor at the time, that all the sugar was delivered, and, laying the books before him, he requested Mr. Mackenzie, the Locker, to check my additions. Mr. Mackenzie being busy with other duties at the time, at the Bond, deferred attending to it. In the mean time I was removed from thence to the Australian Bond, and did not hear any more about it, till Mr. Still brought the books to me, on or about the 17th instant, to go through the additions and recapitulate the number of bags and weight.

Custom House, Sydney,
2 September, 1863.

Sir,

On the 7th July a surcharge of £15 10s. 11d. was made by the Honorable Treasurer against Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, Locker, in consequence of his gross negligence with respect to the delivery of a quantity of sugar belonging to Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co., on which they demanded a refund to that amount.

At the end of that month, the Chief Clerk, in making up the account of salaries proposed to deduct in the usual way, from Mr. Mackenzie's salary, the amount surcharged. Mr. Mackenzie, however, remonstrated, and as I understood that some effort was being made to reverse the decision, I allowed the matter to lie over for a month, and had the papers again submitted for consideration. Yesterday I however directed the surcharge to be enforced, when Mr. Mackenzie refused the balance of his salary, and this morning I have received from him two letters which prove to me that it is high time his connection with the public service should cease.

I know of no public officer who has received so much indulgence as Mr. Mackenzie. He was recalled from Albury, on the suggestion of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, in consequence of reports of his inebriety which had reached Mr. Cowper. He was, however, permitted to continue in the service here.

Some time after, he was convicted at the Police Office of having assaulted a woman; still later he was charged with being drunk on the wharf and using beastly language, and evidence on oath was given of the fact; but Mr. Weekes allowed him the benefit of a very slight doubt, in consequence of the evidence being somewhat contradictory. Previously to the fact of the sugar in question, I had repeatedly heard rumours of his having been seen drunk; rumours, however, which I passed over perhaps a little too lightly, as I really had a kind feeling to the man.

Even since this affair of the sugar another case of unpardonable negligence has been proved against Mr. Mackenzie, in omitting to count 1,000 cases of Old Tom, for which he has just been severely reprimanded and cautioned by order of the Honorable Treasurer.

With

With all these facts standing against him, he demands, in a tone of insolence, accompanied with falsehood, how it is that the Treasurer's surcharge is enforced; and when I (passing over the tone of his letter) simply inform him that it is my duty to carry out the Minister's decision, he has the audacity to threaten me with "proceedings at law."

You will be good enough, therefore, to lay this new matter before Mr. Smart, and favour me with his directions on the subject.

Enclosure in Collector's letter to Under Secretary of 2nd September, 1863.

*Custom House, Sydney,
26 April, 1862.*

Sir,

I do myself the honor to transmit herewith, the depositions taken at an inquiry into a complaint preferred by Mr. Deloitte, a Clerk in the Sugar Refining Company's Office, against Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, Sub-Collector of Customs at Albury, but at present employed as a Landing Waiter here.

Mr. Mackenzie is charged with drunkenness, neglect of duty, and using language highly unbecoming a public officer.

The evidence is: that the Sugar Refining Company, on Tuesday last, sent a quantity of sugar to the Patent Slip Wharf, to be shipped on the "Breadalbane" for drawback—that, on the arrival of the drays at the wharf, the officer, Mr. Mackenzie, was not there, but that he came shortly afterwards—that he refused to see the goods shipped, or to sign the dray notes, which he threw back to the drayman, McCaffrey, uttering the revolting expression referred to; and finally, that he was drunk and unfit to perform his duty.

The evidence of two of the draymen to this last charge is fully sustained both by the Master and Mate of the "Breadalbane"; and although Mr. Mackenzie denies it, and brings forward some evidence of a contrary nature, I regret to say that in the face of such strong, and, as far as appears, impartial testimony to the fact of Mr. Mackenzie's being intoxicated, I am unable to divest myself of the belief that on this occasion he must have been drinking to some excess.

Two of the other Landing Waiters have volunteered their testimony to Mr. Mackenzie's general good conduct on the wharf, and this is fully supported by the evidence of the Landing Surveyor. These are entitled to due weight, but as they do not in any way meet the particular facts charged, and which I believe to be well founded, I feel it my duty to submit the whole case for the Honorable Treasurer's consideration.

W. A. DUNCAN.

Minute Paper for the Executive Council, recommending removal of Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, Locker in the Department of Customs.

*The Treasury, N. S. Wales,
7 September, 1863.*

A claim for the repayment of £15 10s. 11d., overpaid duty, was admitted by the Treasurer in July last, because deficiency, entitling the claimant to the refund, was proved by the Collector of Customs.

The deficiency was caused by the negligence of the Locker, and the refund was therefore charged against that officer.

The Collector granted some indulgence as regards the time of payment of the refund by the Locker; but the latter, on being pressed for settlement this month, addressed two disrespectful letters to the Collector, in one of which he threatens law proceedings against the head of his department.

Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, the officer referred to, has been repeatedly charged with irregularities; and, on a late occasion, was reprimanded and cautioned for a serious neglect of duty.

The Treasurer is therefore constrained to recommend that Mr. Mackenzie be at once removed from the public service.

T. W. SMART,
Treasurer.

Minute on the preceding paper.

THE Executive Council, after a careful consideration of the several documents herewith submitted, concur in the opinion of the Honorable the Colonial Treasurer, and accordingly advise that Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, Locker in the Department of Customs, be forthwith removed from the public service.

C. No. 1.

Argyle Bond, 20 July, 1863.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 7th instant, calling upon me, by direction of the Honorable Treasurer, to pay into the hands of the Chief Clerk the sum of £15 10s. 11d., the amount of duty overpaid by Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co., on the cargo of sugar ex "Celinie."

I was so astounded at the above, after the explanation I had given of my knowledge of the whole matter, that I have been at a loss to know what I can further plead in stay of the enforcement of this demand on me; but I hope the whole case will be reconsidered by the Honorable Treasurer, and that he will be induced to acquit me of blame.

To that end, therefore, I will recapitulate. The sugar was bonded here 31st October, 1862. The last warrant for delivery, accompanied, as I am informed, by the reweigh order, was entered in the stock book, and acted on, 4th February, 1863. I was placed in charge of the Bond 5th February, 1863. My predecessor's assistant, Mr. Brock, who was also my assistant to the 6th March last, had, as he himself informed me, charge of the delivery, and had in his possession the weighing books used for that purpose, and with which I had nothing whatever to do, nor did I see the reweigh order, or know of its existence, nor of any deficiency in the said sugar, until requested by Mr. Jones to check the addition of the several weighings, but which my other duties in this extensive Bond prevented my doing.

The only portion of the cargo I ever saw were some bags that had been put aside in several Bonds, to be repaired, and of which, at the request of Mr. Evans, in Mr. Brock's absence, I superintended the weighing, and, at Mr. Brock's request, subsequently entered the particulars in his book, which he gave me for the purpose.

From inquiries I have made, I am informed by the Storekeeper that the full complement of bags, viz., 6,773 have been delivered, and for which he holds receipts, and that the deficiency in weight is not excessive, considering the state of the cargo when received in bond; of that, however, I know nothing, nor would compliance with the demand on me—if I had the power—grieve me, but that it is a penalty for a presumed neglect of duty.

I entreat you to submit these facts to the consideration of the Honorable Treasurer, and give me credit for striving at all times, in the performance of my duties, to deserve the credit of being a faithful officer.

W. A. Duncan, Esq.,
Collector of Customs.

I have, &c.,
T. D. MACKENZIE.

Minute by Collector of Customs on Mr. Mackenzie's letter of 20th July, 1863.

I have explained to the Treasurer, as well as to Mr. Mackenzie himself, that he is not charged with anything done or omitted by his predecessor or his assistant, but with having failed to check and correct the weighings—failed to discover that a number of bags had been delivered without weighing at all—failed to report the deficiency on the duty-paid entry; and failed to return the reweigh order for the presumed balance of the cargo.

The arguments in this letter are therefore entirely wide of the question, and form no reasonable ground for its reconsideration. Besides, the merchants must have their refund, and it cannot be made from the public Treasury.

W.A.D.

Minute by the Honorable the Treasurer, respecting Mr. Mackenzie's request for reconsideration of his case.

Ascertain from the Collector if this statement is correct, viz.:—If the same number of bags were delivered that were received in store, and if so, what claim had the importers to refund?

T.W.S.
15/9/63.

Collector of Customs, in reply to Treasurer's minute of 15th September, 1863.

Custom House, Sydney,
15 September, 1863.

The number of bags are said to have been delivered, but sugar is often rebagged, and the number is therefore but little criterion. The whole number were not reweighed by the Locker, as per return.

Under the 73rd section of 9 Vict., No. 15, the importers pay duty at the actual quantities delivered; hence the great necessity for that accuracy in reweighing, which was so lamentably deficient in this case. The whole deficiency represented duty to the amount of about £31. Of this sum Messrs. S. H. & Co. had paid £15 10s. 11d., and the Government being bound by the weighing of its officer, they were entitled to a refund. There remained no sugar in bond to represent the other £15 and odd, which is lost to the revenue.

Sydney, 30 September, 1863.

Sir,

Referring to my interview with you this morning, when you wished me to state, in writing, the nature of my application relative to the dismissal of Mr. T. D. Mackenzie, I have now the honor to state that, from conversation held with the Collector of Customs and Mr. Llewellyn, I gathered that they are both of opinion that the amount, £15 10s. 11d., withheld from Mr. Mackenzie, should be returned to him, and that, although the Collector objects to re-open a correspondence with you on the subject, he will, upon your furnishing him with sufficient authority, express his conviction that restitution should be made. I have therefore to beg that, at your earliest convenience, you will take such steps in this matter as you shall deem most likely to secure the object sought, being very sure that the want of this money is seriously felt by the person on whose behalf I apply.

I have, &c.,

APPENDIX.

C. No. 3.

To the Honorable the Executive Council of New South Wales, in meeting assembled.

The humble Petition of Tom Dight Mackenzie, of Paddington, late Sub-Collector of Customs at Albury, in the Colony of New South Wales,—

SHewETH:—

1. That on the 10th day of April, 1854, your Petitioner was appointed to a clerkship in the Colonial Treasury.
  2. That on the 1st March, 1857, he was transferred to the Customs Department; and on or about the 1st June, 1860, was appointed Sub-Collector at Albury, at a salary of £300 per annum, on condition of his paying his own travelling expenses thither.
  3. That on the said conditions he proceeded to Albury, where, according to instructions, he remained until the month of September, 1861, when, by order, he returned to Sydney, where, shortly after arrival, he was put on duty as a Landing Waiter, which he continued to perform until the month of July, 1862.
  4. That after the month of April, 1862, the salary which was voted to him as Sub-Collector, by the Honorable Legislative Assembly, was not paid to him, but his monthly cheque was reduced to the rate of £225 per annum; and he has been unable to ascertain by what authority his salary was so reduced and withheld.
  5. That on one occasion his cheque was withheld from him for the space of fourteen days.
  6. That in consequence of the Collector's informing him that he required Lockers, your Petitioner consented to act in that capacity, under the promise that he should resume his position as Landing Waiter on the first vacancy; and the Collector authorized him, and he did inform Mr. Still, the Landing Surveyor, to that effect.
  7. That on entering on duty as a Locker, your Petitioner was placed in charge of the Bond of Sir D. Cooper & Co., thence was removed to that of Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, & Co., and lastly was placed in charge of the Argyle Bond, which had hitherto employed two Lockers.
  8. That on the 31st October, 1862, a cargo of sugar, ex "Celine," consisting of 6,773 bags, as appears by entries in the stock-book, was placed in bond by Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co.
  9. That on the 4th February, 1863, the last warrant for delivery of said sugar (being for 25 tons, and accompanied, as your Petitioner has been informed, by a reweigh order for an anticipated balance) was written off in said stock-book as delivered.
  10. That your Petitioner was placed in charge of said Bond on the 5th February, 1863, and no warrant or other paper for delivery or otherwise, concerning the said sugar, ever passed through his hands, which an inspection of the stock-book will fully prove.
  11. That your Petitioner was informed that there had not been found enough sugar in the Bond to satisfy the last warrant for 25 tons, and that Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co. had overpaid to the amount of £15 10s. 11d.
  12. That your Petitioner received a letter from the Collector, calling upon him, "by direction of Honorable Treasurer," to pay into the hands of the Chief Clerk the sum of £15 10s. 11d., in order that the same might be refunded to Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co.
  13. That your Petitioner wrote to the Collector and fully explained the impossibility of his knowing anything of the matter, and requested that the same might be forwarded for the reconsideration of the Honorable Treasurer; but the said explanation was returned to him, and never submitted to the Honorable Treasurer, whom your Petitioner believes was ignorant of the true state of the case.
  14. That your Petitioner's cheque for the month of August was withheld from him, and he was informed that the amount had been paid over to Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co.
  15. That your Petitioner, acting under advice, wrote to the Collector, requesting to be informed if the cheque was so appropriated by his direction, and received from the Collector an answer in the affirmative.
  16. That your Petitioner was peremptorily forbidden by the Collector to communicate with the Treasurer; and while smarting under the injustice, acting under advice, and with no other apparent means of obtaining redress, your Petitioner wrote to the Collector, informing him that he should proceed at law against him for the recovery of the cheque so unjustly withheld.
  17. That your Petitioner received a letter from the Collector, informing him that his letters, written in the matter of the cheque, had been laid before the Executive Council, and that they had decided that your Petitioner be dismissed the public service, and that he was therefore dismissed accordingly.
  18. That subsequently to your Petitioner's dismissal, the amount of £15 10s. 11d. was refunded to him, and the Collector informed your Petitioner's friends that your Petitioner was a good and efficient officer, and he would do anything to recommend him to another department.
  19. That your Petitioner was desirous of having the stigma of dismissal removed from his name, and solicited an inquiry into the case, which, as your Petitioner is informed, the Collector determinedly opposed, and preferred other charges against him, in support of which he sought signatures to officially prepared papers, but of the nature of the charges so preferred your Petitioner has never been informed.
  20. That your Petitioner has never been charged with neglect or imperfect performance of his duty by others than the Collector, whose demands it was impossible to comply with—and has suffered great loss and injury by reason of the injustice and persecution to which he has been subjected.
- Your Petitioner therefore most humbly prays that your Honorable Council will cause an investigation to be made into his case, and that justice may be done.

And your Petitioner will ever pray, &c.

TOM DIGHT MACKENZIE.

8th February, 1864.

Minute by the Honorable the Treasurer on Mr. Mackenzie's Petition of 8th February, 1864.

Inform Mr. Mackenzie that his petition has been considered by the Executive Council, who see no reason to disturb the decision arrived at by the late Government.

C. No. 4.

Paddington, 26 October, 1863.

Sir,

Although I have no claim to your indulgence, further than as an unfortunate man, I calculate on your goodness to pardon my troubling you at this early stage of your ministerial duties, on a subject of which I spoke to you some time ago; and I have the honor most humbly to entreat your powerful interest in causing an investigation to be made into the circumstances which led to my ruinous dismissal from my office.

As briefly as I am able, I will set down the facts resulting so disastrously.

On the abolition of my office as Sub-Collector of Customs at Albury, I was directed by the Honorable Treasurer to resume my former position as Seventh Clerk; but, on a proposition of the Collector, Collector, I agreed to accept the post of a Landing Waiter, in which capacity I acted for a considerable time; and on a subsequent representation of the Collector that he required Lockers pro tem., I agreed to act in that subordinate position; and after having had charge of the respective Bonds of Sir D Cooper & Co., and Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, & Co., was removed to the Argyle Bond, being the most extensive and important Bond in the Colony, and which then employed two Lockers.

By the stock-book it appears that in the month of October, 1862, a large cargo of sugar was bonded by Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co., and that the last warrant (being for the delivery of 25 tons) was written off as delivered before I took possession of the Bond.

It is, I submit, quite clear that no warrant or other paper in any way connected with or relating to the said sugar, ever passed through my hands,—that I had nothing whatever to do with the receipt or delivery of any portion of it nor could I under any circumstances have delivered on a warrant written off as aforesaid.

It appears that, on the last warrant, Messrs. Scott, Henderson, & Co. paid in excess to the amount of £15 10s. 11d., which they called on the Collector to refund, but to which he objected, and insisted on my being surcharged to that amount, although I explained most fully the impossibility of my having any knowledge of the said sugar, and vainly urged the forwarding such explanation to the Honorable Treasurer.

While smarting under the injustice of my salary being stopped in payment of the said amount, and acting under bad advice, I wrote to the Collector, informing him that I should proceed against him for the recovery of my salary.

This was the head and front of my offending, but I am informed other charges have since been preferred, and evidence sought by officially prepared papers; of this however I know nothing.

I know it will be difficult to imagine but that I must have given some grave offence to deserve the persecution to which I have been subjected, but I know of none, save the misfortune of having incurred the avowed personal dislike of the Chief Clerk, which is notoriously fatal to comfort or well-doing in the department.

Had I been allowed to have resumed my position as Seventh Clerk, I should now have been Fifth, at a salary of £275 per annum; or had faith been kept in promise of a Landing Waiter-ship, I would have been content; but on being made a Locker, with a maximum salary of £225, and an evident determination to check my advancement, I applied to the Collector to allow me to exchange into some other department, to which he consented, if I could "find a suitable person." To accomplish this, however, I was not allowed time, and after ten years service find myself thus a degraded man.

I fearlessly court inquiry into my whole course of service in the Treasury and in the Customs. For the former of which the present superior officers can speak, and in the Customs the Collector has, to my friends, admitted me to be one of the best officers in the service.

The whole of my work as a Locker is known to the Warehouse-keeper, who can speak fully on the matter of the (to me) fatal cargo of sugar, and I submit my books in defence of a charge of carelessness or neglect.

I have suffered so much anxiety that I almost fear my ability to make my case intelligible on paper, and will have the honor of calling at your office to-morrow, when, should your leisure afford the opportunity, I will endeavour personally more fully to explain what herein may appear ambiguous.

I have, &c.,

The 1 case made received on the 5th August is a pure fiction, entered to make up the required number. On the 16th July, Mr. Mackenzie writes, "It is quite certain we have received only 985" (vide his note to Mr. Jones)—How then could he make up the 998 by the addition of one case on the 5th August?—W.A.D.

PROGRESS REPORT.

---

THE SELECT COMMITTEE of the Legislative Assembly to whom was referred, on the 11th November last, "the Petition of Thomas Charles Bentley, presented to this House on 24th October"—"with power to send for persons and papers,"—have agreed to the following Progress Report :—

Your Committee have examined eighteen witnesses, but the approaching close of the Session has prevented them taking all the evidence they desired.

Your Committee have not arrived at a satisfactory conclusion as to the authorship of the anonymous letters referred to in the Petition of T. C. Bentley.

Your Committee have found reason, from the evidence before them, to entertain the gravest doubts of the veracity of Sub-Inspector Harrison, and are therefore disposed to regard as unworthy of credit any statements or suggestions emanating from that officer, conveying imputations upon the character of the Bentleys themselves and tending to fix upon them the authorship of the anonymous letters.

But even assuming the truth of Mr. Sub-Inspector Harrison's statements, your Committee are, in that case, compelled to the conclusion, that the course pursued by that officer, ostensibly with the view of obtaining evidence confirmatory of his suspicions, was in the highest degree disgraceful and reprehensible.

Your Committee, during the investigation into the matters referred to them, have been strongly impressed with the conviction that the management of the Detective Police is not satisfactory; and they recommend a more stringent and efficient control than obtains at this time.

One of the witnesses—Signor Cutolo—whose name appears somewhat prominently in the deposition of the Petitioner and his wife, as a suspected party, does not appear, from the evidence taken before your Committee, to have been in the slightest degree liable to those imputations.

Your

Your Committee also express their regret, that the statement that the Petitioner and his wife were themselves the authors of the anonymous letters should have been made by the Honorable Chief Secretary in the House during debate, thus giving a character to the accusation that it would not otherwise have obtained.

Your Committee also beg to state that, in their opinion, no proof of the complicity of the Bentleys has been produced before your Committee.

D. C. DALGLEISH,
Chairman.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.
NEW SOUTH WALES.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE SELECT COMMITTEE

ON THE

PETITION OF THOMAS CHARLES BENTLEY.

FRIDAY, 14 NOVEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER,	MR. LEARY,
MR. DALGLEISH,	MR. MORRIS,
MR. W. FORSTER,	MR. WILSON,
MR. HART,	MR. HOSKINS.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Robert Johnson, Esq., appeared, as Solicitor, on behalf of the Petitioner.

William Elyard, Esq., called in and examined:—

1. By Mr. Johnson: You are the Under Secretary to the Government? I am.
2. Do you produce the depositions of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, and their two servants, forwarded to the Colonial Secretary some time ago? Yes. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.)
3. Will you state the date when that deposition was sworn? The 17th September, 1862.
4. What are the names of the deponents? Thomas Charles Bentley, Julia Bentley, Mary Ryan, and Anna Maria Bradshaw.
5. When was that deposition forwarded to the Colonial Secretary? It was sent with a letter from Messrs. Johnson and Johnson, dated 17th September, 1862, and received on the 18th. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.)
6. Will you state what reply was sent to that? A reply was sent to Messrs. Johnson and Johnson on the 10th October, 1862, of which this is a copy. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.)
7. That is in addition to a former letter acknowledging the receipt? I do not know that there was any former letter. The letter of the 10th acknowledges the receipt.
8. By Mr. Hoskins: Before whom were these depositions taken? Mr. Egan. The attestation is signed "Daniel Egan, J.P."
9. By Mr. Hart: Are there any other papers relating to this case in your possession? Yes, a few other letters and papers.
10. Will you state what they are? One is a letter from Mr. Wrench, dated 10th June, 1862. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.) Another is a letter from Mr. Hellyer, dated 8th October, 1862. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.) A reply to Mr. Hellyer's letter, dated 11th October, 1862, a copy of which I hand in. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.) There is also a statement of Mr. Harrison, Sub-Inspector of Detective Police, relating to this case. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.) There is a short report of the Inspector General of Police, dated 6th October, 1862, on the letter from Messrs. Johnson and Johnson. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.) There is a further letter from Messrs. Johnson and Johnson, dated 3rd October, 1862, merely referring

W. Elyard,
Esq.

14 Nov., 1862.

- W. Elyard, Esq.
14 Nov., 1862.
- to their previous one, which is noticed in the reply to them of the 10th of October, 1862. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.) I have also a paper containing some letters and advertisements offering rewards in this case, which appear to have been extracted from the Herald and Empire newspapers. (The witness handed in the same. Vide List of Appendix.) These are all the papers I have connected with the matter.
11. By Mr. Johnson: Will you state when the report of Mr. Harrison reached the Colonial Secretary's Office, and under what circumstances? I cannot state when it was received; it was not delivered to me that I am aware of.
12. By the Chairman: Can you obtain that information? Only, I believe, by enquiry of the Colonial Secretary. Mr. M'Levie will, perhaps, be able to say.
13. By Mr. Johnson: You do not know the date, or the circumstances under which it came? No.
14. Is it signed? There is no signature; it was, probably, delivered personally.

John M'Levie, Esq., called in and examined:—

- Jno. M'Levie, Esq.
14 Nov., 1862.
15. By Mr. Johnson: You are the Inspector General of Police? Yes.
16. You have received an intimation to attend this Committee to produce documents, if any, relating to the case of Thomas Charles Bentley? I have no documents in my possession in relation to the case, except copies of two letters between my own department and Messrs. Johnson and Johnson, copies of which are on the table.
17. Have you any knowledge of the report given to the Colonial Secretary by Mr. Harrison? Yes.
18. Do you know upon what date this report was given in to the Colonial Secretary? I think it must have been about the middle of June. It was given to the Colonial Secretary by the inspector of the detective police during my absence in the country.
19. Can you fix the date? I cannot fix the precise date, but I think it was about the middle of June, when I was in the Southern District.
20. By Mr. Cowper: It was returned by me when you came back, and was several weeks out of my possession? Yes.
21. Do you remember when it came into my possession again? I handed it to you myself.
22. Not long ago was it? It was in my office some time; and in the meantime I handed it to Messrs. Johnson and Johnson. I think it was in July, for I see that in September the correspondence took place between Messrs. Johnson and myself.
23. By Mr. Johnson: Is that report signed by Inspector Harrison? It is not.
24. Is it in Inspector Harrison's handwriting? It is not.
25. Did you receive it from him as his report? I compared it with a rough report of his. After this was handed to me by Mr. Cowper I called Harrison before me, and had some conversation with him respecting the report, and he shewed me the rough draft of it.
26. Did Mr. Harrison admit that identical report as the report of himself? He did.
27. Do you recollect shewing that report to any other persons than Mr. Bentley before you allowed his solicitor to see it? I do.
28. Who was it shewn to? Mr. Hanson and Mr. Wrench—two friends of Mr. Bentley—who had before that taken a great interest in this matter.
29. Were they not enjoined not to communicate the contents of that report to Mr. Bentley or his solicitors—was it not a matter of secrecy? It was shewn to them confidentially; it was shewn to Mr. Wrench in my own office, and he read it in my room.
30. Did they not become acquainted with its contents with an understanding that they were not to communicate them? It was the understanding.
31. Both with Mr. Hanson and with Mr. Wrench? Yes.
32. I presume it follows from that, that Mr. Hanson was not authorized to make it public in a newspaper? He had no authority from me to do so.
33. Have you the original letter from Johnson and Johnson to yourself? It is in my office no doubt.
34. Will you allow me to read this paragraph in the deposition of Mr. Bentley, and say, as far as you know, if it is correct—paragraph 261:—"On the 14th day of July last, "I wrote to Capt. M'Levie, informing him of the nature of the causes which prevented the "depositions being completed as speedily as I wished?" That is true—I received a notification from Mr. Bentley to that effect.
35. Did Mr. Wrench, in the early part of July last, have an interview with you? Mr. Wrench had more than an interview with me; he had two or three. I cannot say precisely as to the time; he had three I think in all.
36. Had he one in particular in which you stated to him something to this purport—that if he and Mr. Bentley would depose on oath to what Mr. Bentley had stated, the Government would help him? No, I said that if Mr. and Mrs. Bentley would depose on oath to all the statements that had already been brought to my notice, I would then be in a position to bring the matter under the notice of Government.
37. Was it at that time you allowed him to read Mr. Harrison's report? I will not be positive at this moment whether it was on this occasion or not. All the interviews between Mr. Wrench and myself took place in my office, excepting one at his office. He read the report in my office, and it may have been on that occasion.
38. Did you not tell him your communication was strictly confidential? I did.
39. Did not Mr. Wrench protest against the matter being kept secret from Mr. Bentley, and characterize it as an un-English proceeding? I do not recollect—we had a long conversation conversation on the matter, but as to whether such a protest as that was made by Jno. M'Levie, Esq., Mr. Wrench, I do not recollect.

40. Did Mr. Wrench write you a letter on the subject? He did.

41. Have you that letter with you? He wrote me one note—I have got that. (The witness handed in the same.) There are two notes of Mr. Wrench to me, one dated the 9th, and one the 18th July. I saw Mr. Wrench personally after the receipt of the note I have handed in, and said if Messrs. Johnson and Johnson communicated with me on the subject—and subsequently to that I received your letter. This is the second note from Mr. Wrench. (The witness handed in the same.) I think Messrs. Johnson and Johnson's letter follows as a sequence to that.

42. Did you not receive a letter from Mr. Bentley? I did—I received two letters from Mr. Bentley.

43. Will you have the kindness to produce them? The first letter I received from Mr. Bentley is dated 4th July; the next is the 14th. (The witness handed in the same.)

44. Did you answer the first of these letters of Mr. Bentley? I do not think I did; I do not think it required an answer; I was waiting for the depositions. There does not seem to be anything requiring a reply.

45. I mean that nothing struck you as incorrect in the statement contained in that letter to call for an answer? No; it was merely a statement of Mr. Bentley's, that he would send the depositions.

46. I refer to this statement—"Having been informed by Mr. Wrench that you think it necessary that a deposition on oath should be made by myself and wife." You did not make any reply to that? No, I conveyed my views on that point to his friend Mr. Wrench, and waited in compliance with this note.

47. Did you after you had received Mr. Bentley's first letter, again see Mr. Wrench? Between the 4th and 14th.

48. Thereabout? I may have seen him.

49. Shortly prior to the 16th? I may have seen him.

50. Did you not state to Mr. Wrench that you could not grant his request, to communicate the contents of Mr. Harrison's statement to Mr. Bentley, until you had consulted the Crown Solicitor? I did.

51. Do you remember an article appearing in the Sydney Empire, referred to in Mr. Wrench's letter of the 18th? There was an article in the Empire, having reference to the case at the time; I cannot recollect the particulars, but I recollect perfectly well reading an article in the Empire upon the subject.

52. I suppose you remember it sufficiently to know that it contained the substance, and a good deal of the impressions contained in Mr. Harrison's report? It did.

53. Up to that time you had precluded Mr. Hanson and Mr. Wrench from communicating the contents of that report to Mr. Bentley? It was seen by them confidentially.

54. You had not removed that restriction? No, I had not; Mr. Hanson and Mr. Wrench had from the first taken such an interest in the whole matter, that I thought I was justified in shewing them, as the friends of Mr. Bentley, this report in confidence.

55. And at the same time to prevent their making use of it for the benefit of Mr. Bentley? They might make use of it without giving it publicity.

56. But they were not to tell their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, what were the views the police entertained respecting them? They were not prevented from making use of it without giving it publicity.

57. Mr. Wrench states, that he thinks it an unfair thing that his mouth should be shut as respects Mr. Bentley? I did not feel justified in making it public until I had got the opinion of the Crown Solicitor.

58. The gentleman whom you call one of his friends, appears to have done that after you had received Mr. Wrench's letter—of course you had no doubt that the object of his applying to you was, that you would allow him to mention the matter to Mr. Bentley's solicitor—did you not so understand it? I had no doubt that Mr. Bentley's solicitor would apply for the report, which he did.

59. By the Chairman: Will you answer the question—yes, or no? I will, if the question is put in such a form as that I can answer it by a simple monosyllable.

60. By Mr. Johnson: I am not asking what you did afterwards, but I want to ascertain up to what time you refused to remove the restriction from Mr. Wrench, that being the restriction from communicating to Mr. Bentley, or his solicitor, the contents of this report? Let me understand the question.

61. Here we have Mr. Wrench's letter, dated the 18th—"And I must beg of you, as my friend, and also as the head of the police, to allow me free speech in the matter"—did you allow him free speech in the matter on receipt of that? I did not; as I said before, I called personally upon Mr. Wrench, at his office in Pitt-street, and had some conversation with him on the matter. I said, if the solicitors of Mr. Bentley apply for these papers, I shall be in a position to say whether they shall be given to them; but I do not feel justified in giving them up without the opinion of one of the Crown Law officers. I consulted the Crown Solicitor, and upon his suggestion I gave them up.

62. You received a letter from Johnson and Johnson on the 19th July, applying for the inspection of that report? Yes; the copy of the letter is there.

63. You have read this deposition? I have; that statement.

64. This small document? Yes.

65. Is that letter of Johnson and Johnson, of the 19th October, 1862, accurately set out? I believe it is.

66. Is your reply of the 21st July accurately set out? I believe so; I think there was no reply

Jno. M'Levie, Esq. reply to Messrs. Johnson and Johnson's second letter, as I called at the office myself with the papers.

- 14 Nov., 1862. 67. You received another letter from Johnson and Johnson, dated also the 21st July, which is set out in the deposition. That is the second letter? Yes.
68. I believe you placed that report, or a copy of it, in the hands of Johnson and Johnson, for their inspection? I did.
69. Can you state about what date that was? I think it must have been the day following the date of Messrs. Johnson and Johnson's last letter on the second day following.
70. As far as you know, was not that the first time that Bentley had any opportunity of knowing the contents of that report? As far as I know, it was.
71. Had you received any authority from Mr. Bentley to shew that report to Mr. Hanson? Certainly not; I am not aware that Mr. Bentley knew of the existence of that report when it was shewn to Mr. Hanson.
72. Did you remonstrate at all with Mr. Hanson for having violated the confidence which you had reposed in him? I did not.
73. You felt that he had violated it, I suppose? He made the information public as a public journalist, which he had got as a private gentleman.
74. With strict injunctions not to make it public? It was given confidentially.
75. What do you mean by its being given confidentially? That it was not to be made public.
76. You thought he received that information as a friend of Mr. Bentley? It was given to him as such.
77. Have you any other documents in connection with this case? No other documents than those I have just produced.
78. Have you any handwriting that you have ever compared with any of this anonymous handwriting you have in your possession? I have.
79. Will you produce it? (The witness handed in the same.) I have certain letters that have come into my possession, written by a gentleman of the name of Montagu, with which the anonymous letters were compared by me, once.
80. In whose presence were they compared? I think, on one occasion, in the presence of Mr. Bentley.
81. Will you state what took place on that occasion—first when it was? I think that was in April. Mr. Bentley called at my office with Mr. Boulanger, and brought with him a number of anonymous letters that had been sent to different parties, imputing base conduct to Mrs. Bentley; and he referred particularly at the time to a foreign gentleman, a resident in Sydney.

*[The attention of the Chairman having been called to the fact of a gentleman being present, who was taking notes,— Strangers were ordered to withdraw.
After some discussion the parties concerned were called in, and the examination was continued.]*

82. Are you quite certain that you are not speaking of an interview with Mr. Wrench? No; Mr. Bentley was present.
83. And Mr. Wrench was not present? It was either Mr. Wrench or Mr. Boulanger. Mr. Bentley was present, but I am not positive whether it was Mr. Wrench or Mr. Boulanger who was with him. I am positive either one or the other called with him. It might have been Mr. Wrench on that occasion, but Mr. Boulanger called on another occasion; whether it was Mr. Boulanger or Mr. Wrench who called then I could not say.
84. Just endeavour to exercise your memory—did Mr. Bentley ever see you in company with Mr. Wrench? I think he did—at least my impression at this moment is so.
85. Will you undertake to say? My impression is that he did; I may be wrong, but that is my impression at this moment.
86. You may be wrong, I assure you? I am quite sure that Mr. Bentley and Mr. Boulanger called at my office.
87. You are not prepared to affirm positively that you ever saw Mr. Bentley and Mr. Wrench together? I am not prepared to affirm it, but that is my impression.
88. We shall see the value of that impression—did not you shew Mr. Wrench a bundle of letters, which you stated were known to the police to be in the handwriting of Mr. Montagu? Yes. Now you refresh my memory I remember that I did shew them to Mr. Wrench; Mr. Bentley was not present; that removes the impression, for I remember now that Mr. Wrench did call upon me alone.
89. Are you not incorporating what took place in your interview with Mr. Bentley and Mr. Boulanger with what took place between Mr. Wrench and you? Upon recollection, I think that the interview between Mr. Bentley and myself, at which Mr. Boulanger was present, had reference to the form of an advertisement.
90. Just take as much time as is necessary, for I want to get (as far as it is possible from human recollection) exactly what did take place—did you see Mr. Bentley upon this matter at all, except upon these two occasions—one when he called with Mr. Boulanger, and one when he met you in the street? My impression at this moment is, that Mr. Bentley was twice at my office, and that I was once in his residence. He met me in the street, and he asked me into his house; I went with him, and passed up into his drawing-room.
91. When was the first time you ever saw Mr. Bentley; was it when he came with Mr. Boulanger? When I first ordered the detective police to take this matter in hand was at the end of last year, or the beginning of this, and I think Mr. Bentley called with Mr. Boulanger in March or April.

92. Had you seen Mr. Bentley at all before he called with Mr. Boulanger? I will not be positive whether I had seen him before or not. Jno. M'Lerie, Esq.
93. When he did call with Mr. Boulanger, did he not call upon the subject of the proposed advertisement—was it not on the 17th March he called with Mr. Boulanger—on St. Patrick's day? I think it was St. Patrick's day. I myself gave him what I looked upon as a good draft of advertisement, and it appeared the next day. 14 Nov., 1862.
94. You wrote one in pencil? Yes.
95. That fixes the date of that? Yes.
96. Was not the subject of that interview confined to the question of an advertisement in the paper, and a letter to be sent to the Post Office, to be addressed to H. B.? Yes.
97. Did not you express some hesitation as to the difficulty which you expected would be thrown in your way by the Post Office authorities? I did express some hesitation. I gave an opinion as to the difficulties I expected, for the Post Office authorities are very jealous of the interference of the detectives, and, perhaps, very properly.
98. You eventually consented to a detective officer being employed? Yes, to watch outside the Post Office.
99. Did you not write the draft of a letter, to be sent to the Post Office, to be addressed to H. B.? I did.
100. During that interview did Mr. Harrison come in? I think I sent for him.
101. Was it not then arranged that the whole matter should be put into his hands, upon his return from a projected visit to the country? Yes, the interference, or rather the assistance, of the detective police, was to be renewed then; for it was dropped for some time between November, 1861, and the end of February.
102. In the meantime a detective was to be employed to watch the Post Office? Yes.
103. You speak of the assistance of the police being renewed—had you any communication previously with Mr. Bentley as to the subject of employing the detective police; was it not through Mr. Hanson that they were employed? Not through me in the first instance; Mr. Harrison reported to me that Mr. Hanson had been with him and shewn him an anonymous letter reflecting upon the character of a lady. I said, "It is not exactly a public matter, but give him all the assistance you can."
104. I believe one of the letters Mr. Bentley wrote to you, he brought to your office himself, and gave to you there? He may have done so; I do not recollect it.
105. I believe you once saw him in the street? I met him at his own door, and he requested that I would walk up to the drawing-room and see Mrs. Bentley, and hear her own account of the assault that had been committed on her, some nights before at Newtown.
106. Did you see her? Yes.
107. What took place? I had some conversation with Mr. Bentley. Mrs. Bentley first spoke of the matter that occurred at Enmore, followed by some casual drawing-room small talk. I then had a glass of sherry and left.
108. Have you detailed all your interviews with Mr. Bentley? I will not be positive; I saw him twice at my own office.
109. Can you recollect anything taking place at those interviews, excepting what you have just described; I mean in reference to this matter? A good deal took place with reference to the means to be adopted for the discovery of the writer of the anonymous letter. Mr. Bentley proposed offering a large reward, to which I objected, because the public fancy, from seeing such large rewards offered, that the police are not zealous in the discharge of their duty without a stimulus of that kind. He said he would offer £200, and £200 had been offered at the time I saw him in his own house.
110. Were you not in error some time ago in stating that you produced any bundle of letters at all, to Mr. Bentley? The bundle of letters I produced may have been produced to Mr. Wrench; my impression at the time was, that it was Mr. Bentley.
111. What is your impression now? I am not very clear now whether it was Mr. Bentley or Mr. Wrench; it may have been Mr. Wrench.
112. You did not shew this bundle of letters upon two occasions—did you? My impression is that I shewed them when Mr. Bentley called with Mr. Boulanger; I will not be positive.
113. Had not the gentleman, whoever he was—whether Mr. Wrench or Mr. Bentley, to whom you shewed this bundle of letters—some of these anonymous letters with him? Yes.
114. Were they not compared with this bundle of letters by you? Yes; whether it was Mr. Bentley or Mr. Wrench, I cannot say. I took some of the letters and compared them with the handwriting of some letters in my own possession.
115. Did you not express an opinion as to the handwriting, and of some words in particular? One letter in particular, the capital M.
116. Between the letters produced by you, that were undoubtedly Mr. Montagu's, and the anonymous letters, there was a remarkable resemblance, especially in the letter M? The capital M in Mr. Montagu's letters and in the anonymous letters produced to me.
117. Did you not, upon that state of facts, use the expression of this kind: that had one been traced from the other, they could not have presented a greater similarity? I might; at the time they did strike me as very similar indeed.
118. That comparison emanated from yourself? From myself.
119. And that judgment also? Yes.
120. Do you recollect what the anonymous letters were which were then produced to you? They were of various kinds, but all tending to criminate the character of Mrs. Bentley.
121. In the grossest possible way? In the grossest possible way.
122. Have you any of those anonymous letters in your possession? I had, for some time.
123. Have you now? No; you recalled them all. I shewed them to the Chief Secretary. I believe you have them now.

- Jno. M'Levie, Esq.
 14 Nov., 1862.
124. These letters were in a very peculiar style of handwriting? Yes. By-the-bye, I have one with me that I got since; but after all the letters were recalled, it came to my knowledge that one of these anonymous letters had been sent to Government House, and I sent to the Private Secretary with a request that if it were forthcoming he would be good enough to let me have it. Here it is. (The witness produced the same.)
125. What is the date of that? May, 1862.
126. Did you yourself take any other steps in this matter beyond what you have described to the Committee? Not personally; any other steps that were taken were by my instructions.
127. Are you aware of any other facts relative to the case than those you have stated? Except from hearsay?
128. Do you remember the circumstance of an advertisement about D'Apice in the Sydney Morning Herald? I do.
129. Were the police applied to in that matter? Yes; and in my opinion it was traced to the proper source.
130. Were they employed—that is the question? They were employed.
131. Were any proceedings instituted against any person with respect to that advertisement? No; the proof was not sufficient to institute proceedings, but it was in my opinion beyond any doubt. It arose from some little rivalry in love.
132. I only ask you, as a matter of fact, were any imputations, in your opinion, cast upon the Bentley's in that case? Not the slightest.
133. Whoever was the author of that has escaped equally with the author of this other production? No, we have traced it to a more satisfactory termination than the other.
134. But not so satisfactorily as to enable you to act? To prosecute—no.
135. Have you known Mr. Bentley as a member of Colonial society? I never saw Mr. Bentley till March last; but I heard of him as a gentleman who filled the office of secretary to the Australian Club, and afterwards to the Union; and at the time he was elected to the latter office I was told he was nephew to the great publisher of the same name.
136. Has he not borne an unimpeachable character as a gentleman? I never heard anything of him but that.
137. You say you had some impression of having seen Mr. Bentley a second time at your office? Yes, that is my impression.
138. Did he not bring a letter, and deliver it personally, and have some conversation about a reward? If Mr. Bentley, through you, will refresh my memory —
139. Will you look at that letter of Mr. Bentley's (Appendix C., 2);—Did not Mr. Bentley bring that to your office, and hand it to you? I really cannot recollect.
140. Do you not remember the subject of conversation was about a reward being offered? Yes; and I said, "If you put me in possession of sworn depositions of yourself and Mrs. Bentley to the facts, I shall be then in a position to make some communication with the Government on the matter, but without that I am powerless."
141. Did you not say that when you got that you would advise the Government to offer a reward? I said I would put myself in communication with the Government, but of course I could not advise.
142. Did you not say you would recommend? I may have said I would recommend, but I know I told Mr. Bentley I would put myself in communication with the Government, with the view to a reward being offered.
143. You may have said recommend? Yes; but I think those are the words I used, "With a view to a reward being offered."
144. Did he not thereupon recommend that a reward should be offered to an accomplice, and a free pardon; and did you not say you would recommend that also? In such cases the Government has generally offered a free pardon to an accomplice; but I cannot say whether a reward was recommended to be offered to an accomplice. I said, "If this is written by a foreigner, as there is nothing foreign in it, he must have an accomplice," and it was with this view I worded the notice offering a reward.
145. You are now speaking of your interview with Mr. Wrench? Yes.
146. I want you to confine yourself to this interview with Mr. Bentley, and I wish to know whether he did not suggest that a pardon should be offered to an accomplice, and you did not say you would recommend it to Government in that shape? He may have recommended it, and I may have acceded to it.
147. Have you any other documents in connection with this matter, in your possession? No; I have no other documents, excepting the bundle of letters which I shewed either to Mr. Wrench or to Mr. Bentley, for comparison, and which I now produce. (The witness handed in the same.)
148. Do you know whether Montagu is the name of the gentleman who has been spoken of as Mr. Montagu? I have been told that it is not his name—that it is Aaron, or Moses, or some such name.
149. Or Nathan, perhaps? Yes, some such name. I have been told that, but I do not know whether it is true or not.
150. How did you become acquainted with the circumstance of its being supposed his name was Nathan? I was told by some person since this inquiry into the Bentley case.
151. Was it in connection with any police inquiry, or the commission of any crime—any forgery? Not within my knowledge.
152. Do you know in what way Mr. Montagu is occupied—what is his business or profession? I believe he is a musical man. He acts as secretary to one of these musical societies. I first knew him when he was connected with the Sydney Gymnasium.
153. By Mr. Hart: He is a teacher of languages? Yes, I believe so.

154. By Mr. Johnson : Do you know whether he is in the habit of writing musical critiques for any of the newspapers? I have been told so likewise. Jno. M'Levie, Esq.
155. By the Chairman : How did it come to your knowledge that Mr. Hanson and Mr. Wrench were friends of the Bentley's? It came to my knowledge in the first instance, through the inspector of the detective police, who informed me that when these letters were first set a-going they both came to him on the subject, and stated that they were both friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley—that the families were in the habit of visiting at each other's houses—and that Mrs. Hanson was on the most intimate terms with Mrs. Bentley, and had been at her house two or three times in a week. 14 Nov., 1862.
156. Do you think that this incidental mention, by a third party, that two gentlemen were friends of Mr. Bentley was a sufficient reason to induce you to place documents in their hands affecting his character, and which you refused to put into the hands of a greater friend—his solicitor? Mr. Hanson was the gentleman who first spoke to the police on the subject, and he expressed himself very strongly as the personal friend of Mr. Bentley.
157. You had no knowledge of your own that Mr. Hanson was a personal friend of Mrs. Bentley? Subsequently to the conversation with Inspector Harrison, Mr. Hanson told me that he was a friend of Mr. Bentley, and had been for some time.
158. Have you not known cases where persons have represented themselves to be the friends of others, where no such friendship existed? I had no right to suppose that what Mr. Hanson told me was not true.
159. Have you not had an instance of Mr. Hanson breaking your confidence in a most shameful way—did you not give him these documents in confidence, and did he not betray that confidence? Certain documents were placed in Mr. Hanson's hands as a private gentleman which he used as a public journalist.
160. After that had you any great confidence in the honour or integrity of that gentleman? The spirit of public journalism will carry people great lengths.
161. How do you know that Mr. Hanson had taken a great interest in this affair? I have already said from information I got from one of my own officers.
162. That was with regard to the friendship? Yes; and Mr. Hanson told me afterwards that their families were on terms of friendship, and that both himself and Mrs. Hanson were in the habit of visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bentley.
163. That is with regard to their friendship; but you say that Mr. Hanson took a great interest in the matter—how do you know that? Because he put the police in motion in the first instance.
164. Without Mr. Bentley's knowledge? I cannot say; Mr. Harrison told me that he saw Mr. Hanson about the matter first.
165. Is your knowledge of Mr. Wrench's friendship derived from the same source? No, Mr. Wrench told me he had known Mr. Bentley in England; I think he said he was in the same establishment with him in London.
166. Had you any intimation from Mr. Bentley that these two gentlemen were friends of his? I never went to question Mr. Bentley on the subject.
167. I did not ask you whether you went to question Mr. Bentley—I asked you whether you had any knowledge from Mr. Bentley that these two gentlemen were friends of his? Mr. Bentley told me that he had known Mr. Wrench in England.
168. Did he make a similar communication to you with regard to Mr. Hanson? I cannot say that he did.
169. The only knowledge you had of his friendship was that derived from a detective officer? Yes.
170. Do you think such knowledge was sufficient to justify you in taking it for granted that Mr. Hanson was Mr. Bentley's friend? That knowledge, in addition to what the gentleman himself told me. I say that Mr. Hanson told me that the families were on terms of the greatest intimacy.
171. You took your knowledge entirely from Mr. Hanson and one of your subordinate officers? Exactly so.
172. From that knowledge you considered you were entitled to grant these gentlemen a sight of a public document which you did not feel at liberty to shew to Mr. Bentley's solicitor without you first obtained the sanction of the Attorney General? Of the Crown Solicitor—that is the case.
173. So that you felt yourself justified in giving an account of this matter to a public journalist —? I beg pardon; I never said I gave it to Mr. Hanson as a public journalist, but as a private friend of Mr. Bentley.
174. You were aware that he was a public journalist? I was perfectly well aware of that.
175. You are aware that he published certain matters in connection with that case? The papers were not given to him as a public journalist, but as a private friend of Mr. Bentley.
176. Of which you had no knowledge? Of which I had knowledge; I was told so by Mr. Hanson himself.
177. You had no direct knowledge of it? I had no doubt of it.
178. Yet you absolutely refused to allow Mr. Bentley to see this statement of Mr. Harrison until the opinion of the Crown Solicitor had been obtained? Not Mr. Bentley, but Mr. Bentley's solicitors.
179. And you have already stated that Mr. Bentley never authorized you to shew that report to any one, or to take it for granted that any two gentlemen who called at your office, were his friends? At the time the document was shewn, as I have already stated in my evidence, I do not believe Mr. Bentley was aware of its existence; and with reference to the two gentlemen being friends of Mr. Bentley, I had not the slightest doubt.
180. You had no intimation of the fact from Mr. Bentley? Nothing in writing.

- Jno. M'Lerie, Esq. 181. Had you anything verbally? I have just told you that Mr. Bentley said Mr. Wrench was a very old friend, and that they had known each other in England.
182. Was this prior to this document being shewn to Mr. Wrench? Yes.
- 14 Nov., 1862. 183. You had no such assurance in relation to Mr. Hanson? Beyond what Mr. Hanson told me himself; and I had no reason to doubt him.
184. By Mr. Morris: You remember the 25th April, when an assault was said by Mrs. Bentley to have been committed upon her? Yes.
185. That was communicated to you? Yes, it was; after the assault I saw Mrs. Bentley.
186. At that time the detective police, who were in the habit of following Mrs. Bentley, were withdrawn? On that particular day, but they were there afterwards.
187. Does Mr. Harrison, in his written statement, inform you that Mrs. Bentley alleged that she was assaulted upon another day, and that on that day he had a detective watching, and that this detective saw no such interference with her? In the written statement Inspector Harrison handed to the Chief Secretary during my absence, and which was shewn to me on my return. I read it over, and called Mr. Harrison before me. I said, "Some of the facts you reported to me verbally, as they occurred, are not stated in the written report." He said, "Mr. Cowper was anxious to get it in a hurry, as there was some gentleman in the House who had asked a question which he wished to answer." I said, "There is one particular fact omitted. On the second occasion, when Mrs. Bentley stated that she had been stopped at Enmore, near Mr. Josephson's house, while the man was there watching her, you have omitted that." He said, "So I have; it was omitted by mistake. It was drawn up in a hurry, but it is in my diary."
188. By Mr. Wilson: You stated that as a fact—how do you know it was a fact? Because as the circumstances took place they were reported to me.
189. You know that as a fact then, from the statement of the inspector, and not from your own knowledge? Yes. Mr. Harrison told me that after the last assault—I think it was during some holidays—Mr. and Mrs. Bentley requested he would withdraw the man from Enmore, as there was not much chance of anything occurring. "However," he said, "I was determined to see what would occur, and a man was placed there, and he remained there and kept her in view, and he said that no person spoke to her from the time she left Mr. Josephson's till she got into the omnibus."
190. By Mr. Morris: Were not these holidays, to which you refer, in the week on which the previous assault occurred? It was immediately after the first alleged assault.
191. How long was it after the first alleged assault? I cannot say how many days, but immediately after.
192. What holidays do you refer to? Mr. Harrison mentioned the matter, giving as a reason for the withdrawal of the man for escort, the holidays.
193. Surely the holidays were the Easter holidays? They may have been.
194. By Mr. Johnson: You do not mean to say that Mr. Harrison said he had somebody there at the time she was actually assaulted? No person was there upon that occasion.
195. Now I ask you if Mr. Harrison told you that he had a man to watch her upon the occasion subsequent to that upon which she said some one passed her and spoke to her offensively—are you sure that was afterwards? Afterwards.
196. Did anything of the kind ever occur after that? After that.
197. You are quite sure that this transaction was subsequent to the alleged assault? Yes, I am.
198. The date of the assault was the Friday of Easter week? I cannot speak positively as to the day, but it was during the Easter holidays.
199. Take that as an assumed date? You may.
200. I understood you to say that Mr. Harrison told you that he had a man to watch her upon a subsequent date? I am almost sure it was a subsequent date. Mr. Harrison's diary will tell.
201. By Mr. Morris: Have you that diary yourself? No, it is his own private property.
202. By Mr. Hoskins: Is it private property? Yes.
203. Is not the inspector of the detective police required to keep a public diary of the actions of himself and of his subordinates? Yes; the diary of the whole of the detective force is kept in a printed form.
204. By the Chairman: Is the diary which Mr. Harrison keeps transcribed into a public journal? In his office.
205. It is a public document? Yes.
206. That would be a document on which you could rely? ———
207. By Mr. Hart: Does he keep two diaries? Not that I am aware of.
208. By Mr. Johnson: Did Mr. Harrison tell you that it was in consequence of doubting the assault that he sent somebody to watch Mrs. Bentley afterwards? At this time Mr. Harrison began to express some doubts of the whole matter.
209. That is not an answer to my question—did Mr. Harrison state that he sent somebody to watch Mrs. Bentley because he doubted the truth of her statement about the assault? I will not say he made use of that expression, but he said he had a man there at any rate.
210. Was it not about a gentleman who she alleged had spoken to her, had been rebuffed by her, and had left her? There was something about a gentleman who jumped off the omnibus and followed her from Newtown to Enmore, but whether it was at this time or before, I am not sure, but it is word for word in the detective diary.
211. I want to have the impression Mr. Harrison made on your mind—was it not in reference to a gentleman whom, she alleged, she had seen at the concert the night before? I cannot say so.

212. When was it he told you of it—was it after you had heard of the alleged assault? Jno. M'Lerie, Esq.
Yes, after that, for I saw Mrs. Bentley personally at her own house, upon the subject of the alleged assault.
213. Was it after you had seen her that Mr. Harrison told you this? After that—I am positive it must have been after that. 14 Nov., 1862.
214. Of course it would have struck you as a very singular thing that, if he had suspected her before the time of the alleged assault, he would not have watched her on that day? No doubt that was the impression of Harrison in sending the man out—he must have had some doubt of her former statement as to the assault.
215. That was the reason of sending somebody afterwards to watch her? Yes, I dare say.
216. By Mr. Morris: Does not Mr. Harrison state in his report that, at the time of the alleged assault, he doubted her truthfulness? He does.
217. Does he not state that he laid a trap for her? I remember the conversation that took place between himself and me, the morning after I had seen Mrs. Bentley. I said—“Last night I saw Mrs. Bentley on the subject of the assault, and she gives the particulars certainly with great minuteness; and if the circumstances took place as she says they did, she is the coolest woman I ever met, and the circumstances are very extraordinary.” Harrison said, “You will find them still more extraordinary.” He must have had some doubt at this time.
218. Is it not the case that the various members of the detective police dress themselves in a great variety of ways? They do sometimes, in order to detect crime. I have seen some dressed in such a way that I could not recognize them myself.
219. Is there any diary or memorandum kept of the various dresses they wear upon certain occasions? No, but of certain duties they are employed upon.
220. Not of the dresses worn by them? No.
221. Would it not be desirable? As the detective force is looked upon with so much suspicion in this part of the world, perhaps it would be as well.
222. You are aware that detective police have turned out to be engaged in crime which others have been sent to detect? I have had no knowledge of anything of the kind since I have been connected with the police.
223. Have no members of the detective police, or at any rate no persons employed by the head of the detective police, ever been convicted of crime? Do you mean of crime for which other parties have been taken up?
224. Have you not known of cases where they have instigated other persons to commit crime? No.
225. By the Chairman: Armitage's store? That was as base a rumour as ever was circulated.
226. By Mr. Couper: It was not the case, then? It was not the case.
227. By Mr. Morris: Has Inspector Harrison related to you other facts which go to criminate the Bentleys themselves which he has not put in that report? Yes, one other point is omitted; that is, in relation to the letter that went to Government House, which I have produced. Inspector Harrison stated to me, as a most extraordinary thing, that Mr. Bentley seemed to be aware that a letter had gone to Government House—one of these anonymous letters—and on two or three occasions he expressed his surprise that the Governor had not made it known to him; and Mr. Harrison said to me—“It appears a most extraordinary thing that I never heard of this letter going to Government House except from Mr. Bentley himself; how could he know of the existence of a letter?”
228. By Mr. Johnson: Did Mr. Harrison give you a detailed account of what took place about that? About that letter?
229. About the suspicion that some such letter had been sent to Government House? Mr. Bentley stated that he had reason to believe that a letter had gone to Government House, for Lady Young had met Mrs. Bentley on some occasion and passed her unnoticed.
230. Was not the statement to this effect, that having understood that these letters had been sent in all directions where she visited, or was taken notice of, and that Lady Young having, as she supposed, cut her in the street, he had ground to suppose that some such letter had been sent to Government House? Yes; he expressed himself warmly, and said he thought the Governor was acting in an ungentlemanly manner in not making him acquainted with it if he had received a letter.
231. Did he not say he had gone to Government House to inquire about it—was not that part of the communication Mr. Harrison made to you? No; I said to Mr. Harrison, “Go to the Private Secretary, with my compliments, and ask him if any anonymous letter has been sent there, and, if so, ask him if he will be so good as to let me have it.”
232. Can you recollect fully the nature of Mr. Harrison's communication to you, when he appears to have insinuated that a particular letter had been sent to Government House—was it not a mere suspicion that Mr. Bentley expressed—did he not state that as they had been sent in other directions, and as Lady Young had behaved in this peculiar manner to Mrs. Bentley, he had a suspicion that something of the kind had been sent? Mr. Harrison said that Mr. Bentley, from the fact of Lady Young having passed Mrs. Bentley a few days before unnoticed, supposed he had reason to believe that the Governor had received an anonymous letter.
233. That is the foundation of the suspicion that they had sent it there themselves? I am not saying that they had sent it there themselves.
234. When did Mr. Harrison allege that he had this particular conversation with Mr. Bentley? When the letters were going about.
235. Was it in November or July? It must have been after the police were put in action the second time in the matter—that was in April.
236. Was there not, about the month of May last, another somewhat remarkable correspondence

- Jno. M'Lerie, Esq.
14 Nov., 1862.
- pondence with regard to D'Apice, at Government House, about some ridiculous matter of being allowed to wear orders? That had to do with the same matter as the newspaper advertisements signed "Meg Dodds."
237. Had not this something to do with the letter to Government House? No, the letter with respect to Signor D'Apice being allowed to wear some foreign order was sent to me by the Private Secretary, with directions from the Governor to inquire who the person was.
238. Was not that somewhere about the month of May? It may have been about that very time.
239. Did Mr. Harrison tell you that the conversation about the Bentley letter to Government House was at all connected with the conversation about the letter to Government House respecting D'Apice? No.
240. Have you the envelope of that letter to Government House? I have not with me.
241. Do you know whether you have it? I do not think, when the Private Secretary sent it, there was an envelope with it; there may have been.
242. Did you understand that it came through the post? To Government House?
243. Yes? I did so.
244. With the abilities of Inspector Harrison, and the force at his command, do you think it would be an easy thing for two persons, or for one person, while under their surveillance, to write two or three letters, and post them, without detection? I think with the amount of surveillance they exercised in endeavouring to trace out the perpetrators of these anonymous letters, it would have been almost impossible.
245. You believe it would have been impossible for the Bentleys themselves to have done it, after Mr. Harrison's suspicions were aroused? No; my opinion refers to the persons who were suspected, for they were so closely watched, that I think it was impossible for them to have written and posted letters without being observed.
246. Then, when Harrison's suspicions were aroused with respect to the Bentleys, seeing that he had detectives in the house who could watch them, was it not equally impossible for them to write letters without being observed? The detectives were not in the private apartments of the house—they were kept below.
247. There were only Mr. and Mrs. Bentley and two servants in the house;—do you mean to say that Mr. Harrison and his subordinates could not have exercised as vigilant a surveillance with respect to those people as does any in the community? What would be the object of the surveillance?
248. It is a very plain question: Harrison is said to have come to the clear conclusion that the Bentleys were the authors of these anonymous communications;—having come to that conclusion, and having detectives to watch both inside and outside the house, I ask, could he not have exercised as strict a surveillance upon all these inmates as any individuals in the community? Not as regards writing letters.
249. And posting them? And posting them.
250. In the case of another person who was suspected, you come to the exhaustive process that he could not have done it because he was so closely watched? The persons we suspected and watched were a foreigner and an Englishman; and the letters, if written by them, could not have been written without their being together, as they must have been written by one at the dictation of the other.
251. That is a theory of your own? That is a theory.
252. Let me touch your theory a little. Your theory is, that no one of these letters which were posted during the time in question could have been written by the man who wrote them, except in the presence of the man who dictated them? The inference is, that no man could do it without being instigated by motives of reward.
253. I am not asking you about the motives which might have instigated the parties; your theory is, that the letters could not have been written without both these parties being present? The theory goes thus far—Mr. or Mrs. Bentley might have written without the knowledge of the police, though they were in the house, and they might have been posted by Mr. Bentley, because he goes to the club; but in the case of the parties suspected, no letter went from their houses during the time without the knowledge of the police.
254. What was there to prevent your watching Mr. and Mrs. Bentley any more than to prevent your watching the other person to whom you refer? The object—
255. I am not asking the object of the police; I ask you, what was to prevent your watching the Bentleys any more than any other person—why not? God bless my soul! If Mr. Harrison thought Mrs. Bentley posted the letters, could he not know for a certainty of it? Because she was not watched.
256. How could she send them to the post office without the knowledge of the police? The letters might have been posted in twenty different ways.
257. Would you think it the act of a vigilant policeman, having a suspicion that a person who charged others with sending anonymous letters was herself the writer, and having the opportunity of watching the movements of the people in the house, both within and without, did not avail himself of the means? It was not his object—
258. I want to know whether, if Mr. Harrison came to the conclusion that the Bentleys themselves had been guilty of enormity they charged against others, he would have acted with sufficient vigilance in not keeping a watch upon their movements? These suspicions against Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were the suspicions of Mr. Harrison alone; he was not watching Bentley's house, and never communicated his suspicions to his subordinate officers.
259. You are not answering the question? I am answering the question, if you will allow me. The detectives who were watching Mr. Bentley's house had no suspicions at the time.
260. I am not asking about those who were watching about Bentley's house;—would it not be a most remarkable want of duty, in a detective who had come to the conclusion that the persons who had charged others with the commission of this offence were themselves guilty, if

if he neglected to take every opportunity to determine the question? It would be a most gross dereliction of duty. But the detective officers in the house had no suspicions; these suspicions were confined to Harrison. Jno. M'Lerie,
Esq.

261. By Mr. Wilson: Why did not Mr. Harrison take all the steps in his power to find out whether his suspicions were correct;—he was the person employed to find out who were the authors of these letters, and as he suspected that the Bentleys were the authors, why did not he take means to discover them? 14 Nov., 1862.

262. By Mr. Johnson: You come to the conclusion that A, who is suspected of writing these letters, did not write them, because he has been watched so closely as to render that impossible;—that involves a very high degree of surveillance; but why could not the same degree of surveillance have been exercised towards Mrs. Bentley by Mr. Harrison after his suspicion took that direction? That is a question for Mr. Harrison to answer.

263. It is a question for you to answer? Mr. Harrison has a number of duties to perform; if he gave himself entirely to the Bentley case he must neglect them, and confine himself exclusively to their house.

264. Why so? He never communicated his suspicions to his subordinate officers.

265. Why did not he? I do not think he had any right to do so.

266. Why could he not come to you, and say, "The Bentleys have done this; let me have a couple of detectives, and if any more letters come I will prove that they posted them";—would not that be the natural way to act? I do not think so.

267. You think it was a proper thing for a detective officer to come to the conclusion that the Bentleys were guilty, and to take no steps to convict them—is that your opinion? No, it is not.

268. What is your opinion? That Harrison did all his duty in the matter.

269. By Mr. Wilson: You have stated that there were two parties watched by the police—one a foreigner, and one an Englishman; and you have given it as your decided opinion that neither of those parties wrote or posted the letters, because it could not have been done without they had been both together;—now I wish to know distinctly the grounds of that opinion—why could not the letters be written and posted when the foreigner and Englishman were not together? The Englishman I allude to was pointed out to me as the probable amanuensis of the foreigner, when suspicion first pointed at him, and I came to the conclusion that no amanuensis would write a letter except at the instigation of his principal.

270. How do you know there was a principal? Because Mr. Bentley's suspicions pointed to one.

271. Suppose this Englishman had been educated on the continent, and were a thorough continental scholar, could he not have written without the instigation of the other? Yes; but as Signor Cutolo was suspected of being the author, and Mr. Montagu of being the amanuensis, the inference with me was that the letters would not have been written unless both had been present.

272. That was only a suspicion? It was suspicion that pointed them out.

273. It was simply a suspicion that one was the author and the other the amanuensis;—has anything come to the knowledge of the police such as to enable you to make a statement as to the absolute necessity of these two parties being together, or to shew the impossibility of Mr. Montagu being the sole writer of these letters? Nothing whatever.

274. Then there was no absolute necessity for these two parties to be together to enable these letters to be written and posted? The natural inference is, that if one were the principal the letters would not have been written without he were present.

275. According to my judgment you had no right to infer that that was the case;—a certain suspicion was stated to the police, as a ground-work to enable them to ferret out the author of the letter, and they might have had a conviction that there were two persons engaged in it, but what proof had they? From being distinctly pointed out by Mrs. Bentley as the suspected parties.

276. Do you think that the circumstance alone of suspicion having been directed to them would justify the police in taking it as an established fact? Until new ground was taken up.

277. Then the police arrived at this conclusion—that two did not do it in unison, but one may have done it? That is my own opinion now, that it may have been done by a single person, but the inference was that the letters were not written without both parties were present.

278. Then the police had no evidence that Signor Cutolo did not do it, or Mr. Montagu singly. If the evidence of Mr. Harrison—

279. By Mr. Johnson: As far as you know? As far as I know, it may have been written when only one of the two were present.

280. When you say the attention of the police was directed entirely to these individuals in consequence of Mrs. Bentley saying they were the persons, are you not aware that in the first place there was another person suspected? When the letters were first promulgated the name of Mr. Rawack was mentioned; then some circumstances arose that made it almost impossible that he could have been concerned in it; then Signor D'Apice was mentioned, and then Signor Cutolo.

281. Was it not Mr. Harrison who more particularly expressed his suspicion of Signor Cutolo? In one or two conversations I had with Mr. Hanson, Signor Cutolo's name was mentioned by him as strongly suspected.

282. Did he state his reasons? I think he said professional jealousy in the case of all the three persons mentioned.

283. Did he not, in point of fact, make out such a case that he impressed the police with the same belief? Yes; it was my belief at the time.

- Jno. M'Lerie, Esq. 284. A man of your experience would not believe it because some person said so, but from all you heard you formed the same opinion? Yes, I believed at the time Mrs. Bentley was a martyr to professional jealousy.
- 14 Nov., 1862. 285. You looked upon him as a person having a motive? Yes.
286. And being a foreigner you thought he had somebody to assist him? Yes.
287. About this theory of joint action;—could not the foreigner say to the other, "Go home and write me such a letter," and could not the Englishman write it at his own house? Yes.
288. Then the theory of joint action has no application to such a state of circumstances? Not under the circumstances you mention;—they may have acted individually as well as collectively.
289. I suppose one man may have suggested the letter at one place to one person, who may have written it in another place and given it to a third person to post? All those facts are just possible.
290. Or he may have posted it himself? Yes.
291. You do not mean to say that you so closely watched this person that he could not have posted a letter without your knowledge? No, but I know they were not together within certain periods.
292. But they were not so watched as that they could not have written or posted these letters individually? These houses were watched, and there was no communication between them.
293. By Mr. Hoskins: You cannot undertake to say that one of these two persons did not post these letters? No.
294. By the Chairman: There is a great family likeness between these letters? Family likeness?
295. The characters of these letters resemble each other? Some of the letters are in a female hand; most of them are in that style (referring to the letter).
296. The story told in the letters is similar? Yes, base charges against the lady.
297. After the story had once been concocted between two people it could be repeated ad libitum? Yes; one letter purported to be from a lady at Darling Point, for Mrs. Bentley to call upon her to make arrangements to give instructions to two of her daughters.
298. By Mr. Morris: When your suspicions were aroused with regard to the Bentleys, or with regard to some other parties—did you not do what you did in the case of Mr. Montagu and Signor Cutolo, compare the handwriting of the anonymous letters with the handwriting of the Bentleys? No, I had no means of doing so at the time.
299. Have you not yourself expressed an opinion, that the handwriting of the anonymous letters is much more like the handwriting of Mr. Bentley than the handwriting of Mr. Montagu? Take it altogether, that the style is more that of Mr. Bentley.
300. Have you ever seen any letters written by Mr. Bentley—that you know to be written by him—in any hand different from that of the letters you received from him? I have seen letters supposed to have been written by Mr. Bentley.
301. Probably you will be able to give to the Committee, or to get for the Committee, those letters that you suppose were written by Mr. Bentley, and which were in a different hand from his ordinary hand? Yes.
302. Will you have any objection to state in whose possession these letters, the handwriting of which you think so similar to that of the anonymous letters, are? I am in the hands of the Committee; I am not sure that I should be able to produce them without the consent of the gentleman.
303. By Mr. Johnson: I may ask who is the person? I have no objection to mention his name—Mr. Hanson. I produce the letters now. (The witness produced the same.)
304. These three letters which Mr. Hanson provided you with are all anonymous letters, addressed to the Editor of the Empire? Yes. One signed "Truth," one "One in the Secret," and one "Colonist."

TUESDAY, 18 NOVEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. MORRIS,
MR. WILSON,
MR. LEARY,

MR. LUCAS.

MR. HOSKINS,
MR. COWPER,
MR. W. FORSTER,

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Johnson appeared on behalf of the Petitioner.

John M'Lerie, Esq., Inspector General of Police, called in and further examined:—

- Jno. M'Lerie, Esq. 305. By the Chairman: You received a requisition to produce any further papers or documents you might have in your possession relating to this case? I did, and in compliance with the instructions of the Committee, on my return to my office on the last day I was examined, I directed the Inspector of the Detective Police to be prepared to hand me this morning his diary, which I now produce. (Diary produced.) I may say that I have not seen that diary myself; it is sealed up, and I have thought it better not to look at it till my examination is over. I have also to hand to the Committee forms of the weekly duties performed
- 18 Nov., 1862.

performed by the detective police, which I have directed the inspector to fill up from the time I introduced them in May last. (Handed in.) I may as well also state that Inspector Harrison, on receiving my instructions, informed me that in this diary, and mixed up with matters connected with the inquiry in the Bentley case, were private memoranda having reference to other matters; and in order that the Committee might, if they thought fit, take only those matters having reference to the Bentley inquiry, I directed the inspector to transcribe all having reference to that matter, which transcript is here, and the Committee will be able to compare it with his diary. (Transcript handed in.)

Jno. M'Lerie,
Esq.

18 Nov., 1862.

306. By Mr. Wilson: Is there anything in the diary of such a private nature that the inspector would not like it to be seen? The inspector has no objection to the Committee looking at it; but in order to save time, this is a transcript of all having reference to the Bentley inquiry. With reference to the duties performed by the detective police, as entered in the forms I have handed in, perhaps the Committee will be kind enough to bear in mind that the "special duty" there referred to has reference to the Bentley inquiry.

307. By Mr. Johnson: I should like to know the earliest date at which Mr. Harrison communicated to you his alleged suspicion that the Bentleys were themselves the authors of these anonymous letters? In my former evidence I said, that after I had had an interview with Mrs. Bentley, I saw Harrison the next morning and told him of that interview, and at the same time expressed my surprise at the extreme coolness of the lady, under all the circumstances, after such a grievous assault had been said to have been committed upon her.

308. You told me all that before, when I did not ask you, and I do not ask for it now? It was on that occasion that Mr. Harrison first mentioned his suspicion that the Bentleys themselves were the authors of the letters.

309. Cannot you fix the date? I cannot; I did not make any memorandum of it.

310. You only once saw Mrs. Bentley? Yes; on that occasion.

311. Did Mr. Harrison tell you at that time that he was no longer concerned in endeavouring to discover anybody else? He did not say anything of the kind on that occasion.

312. When did he first tell you he was sure the Bentleys were the authors of the letters themselves? Not till my return from the country, when he handed in a written report to the Chief Secretary,—not till then did he state, positively, that that was his opinion.

313. When was it you returned from the country? It was about the end of June.

314. He had given up the case long before that, had he not? I do not think he had altogether abandoned the case before that.

315. In Mr. Harrison's report, he states that, on the 25th April, he left the house, satisfied that Mr. Bentley, and no other, was the author of the anonymous letters, and the whole affair a fabrication;—are you aware that he states that he came to that conclusion on the 25th April? I am not aware of the precise date that he came to that conclusion.

316. As the head of the police, is it not your opinion, that if Mr. Harrison was so satisfied then, he ought to have taken means to detect the Bentleys in sending any further anonymous letters? I am not aware that he did not do so.

317. Are you aware that eight of these anonymous letters were posted after that date? I do not know, of my own knowledge, that such was the case.

318. Would it not strike you as a most unusual and unaccountable circumstance, that the Bentleys themselves could have posted eight of those letters without detection immediately following that period? I think it not at all impossible.

319. Would it not have been a very remarkable circumstance that these people, who were or might have been under the strictest surveillance of Mr. Harrison and his detectives, could have written and posted eight of these letters after he had satisfied himself that they were the guilty parties? They were more likely to have done it afterwards than before, because if that was the conclusion he came to in April, no doubt his surveillance was relaxed, and therefore they would have better opportunities. But I do not know that it was the case then.

320. Then your theory is, that as soon as he was satisfied that the Bentleys did it themselves, he relaxed in his efforts to prove that they were guilty? I did not say so; I said that if he was satisfied that no other parties had written the letters, he may have relaxed his efforts.

321. Do you not think it was his imperative duty to detect them if he believed that they were the guilty parties? I question whether an officer of Mr. Harrison's experience had sufficient legal knowledge as to the consequences to the Bentleys themselves, if he thought they were the guilty parties.

322. I am not asking his opinion as to the legal consequences, but in a matter about which the whole community were excited, and in respect of which there was the highest degree of curiosity, or a much stronger feeling, to find out who were the real authors;—do you mean to say that Mr. Harrison would have done his duty if he had not taken means to detect them? He might have taken means to detect them, but I do not know what he could convict them of.

323. Would it not have been his imperative duty to detect them? Yes.

324. Would he not have had at least equal opportunities to detect the Bentleys as he would have had to detect any other persons? Looking at it as a police officer, I do not think he would.

325. Why not? Because the Bentleys, if the guilty parties, were then on their guard, whereas the parties suspected and looked after before that were not aware of the police being constantly watching them.

326. Are you sure of that? I am not sure of it, but I have no reason to believe they were; my impression is that they were not.

327. Do you know, in fact, whether Mr. Harrison took any steps whatever to detect the Bentleys

- Jno. M'Lerie, Esq.
18 Nov., 1862.
- Bentleys in posting any communication after he had come to the conclusion that they were the guilty parties? I am not aware.
328. Did he tell you whether he did or not? Not to my recollection. In fact, I am sure he did not.
329. Do you know what means he took with respect to the two suspected parties, as to seeing whether they posted letters? I cannot give all the particulars of the means he adopted. He adopted the usual detective means. Mr. Harrison will be better able to explain to the Committee all the minutiae he adopted than I can.
330. Do you know from him whether he put these two parties under such surveillance that they could not have posted letters without being seen? Such was his report to me.
331. Surely he could have put Mr. and Mrs. Bentley under as much surveillance? I cannot say.
332. Why not—Mr. Bentley is secretary to a club, is he not, and lives in Elizabeth-street? Yes.
333. And the detectives were perpetually in his house? Not perpetually.
334. As long as Mr. Harrison chose to have them there? As long as Mr. Bentley required them.
335. Were the detectives ever in the houses of either of the two suspected parties? Not to my knowledge.
336. You only saw Mrs. Bentley on this one occasion that you have spoken of? Only on that one occasion.
337. On that occasion were you not passing the house, and did not Mr. Bentley ask you to step in? Yes.
338. Mrs. Bentley was just about going out—she had her bonnet on? I think she was sitting in the drawing-room, with her bonnet on.
339. Was anything said at that interview about the assault? Yes.
340. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bentley being present? Yes.
341. What was said? Mrs. Bentley described, with great minuteness, the dress, appearance, and even the crest on the ring of the man who assaulted her, and also the figure on the shirt that he wore.
342. What did you say? I listened to the lady.
343. Does your answer mean that you said nothing? I listened to the lady, and put several questions to her. I asked as to the colour of his hair and whiskers, and Mrs. Bentley said she was quite sure he wore false whiskers.
344. Was Mr. Bentley present? Yes, and left the drawing-room and came down stairs with me.
345. Did any other conversation occur at that interview? A little drawing-room small-talk—that was all. Mrs. Bentley did not seem desirous of continuing the conversation in connection with the assault.
346. Did any other conversation take place? Yes.
347. What about? Well, I recollect having said to Mrs. Bentley, "I have a piano in my house that you brought out from England with you." That was part of it.
348. Did you ever have any conversation with anybody else about the circumstances of that assault, and Mrs. Bentley's description of the person who assaulted her? No doubt I had.
349. With Mr. Wrench? Yes.
350. Did not Mr. Wrench give you those particulars of the appearance of the individual who committed the assault? No; my impression at this moment is that I saw Mrs. Bentley before I saw Mr. Wrench.
351. Are you sure of that? No; my impression is that it was the second or third day after the assault was said to have taken place, that I was passing Mr. Bentley's house.
352. Did you not see Mr. Bentley on Monday, the 28th of April, a few yards from your own office? I recollect, since I was here last, that I met Mr. Bentley at the corner of Market-street, near my own office, about that time.
353. Did he not shew you one of these anonymous letters at that time—the letter in which the writer boasts of the assault? I think he did.
354. Were you intending to call on Mrs. Bentley on the day the interview referred to took place? I was not; I was going down to the Chief Secretary's Office, and I was called in by Mr. Bentley, who was standing at the door of his own house.
355. Did you at that interview state something to this effect: Mr. Harrison tells me things are going on much in the same manner; I fear you must be tried very much, Mrs. Bentley? I may have said so.
356. Do you recollect saying so? I do not; it is just possible I did say so.
357. Did she not in reply say, "Yes, I am afraid it is beginning to tell upon me"? Yes, now that you remind me, Mrs. Bentley made a remark of that kind—that the persecution was beginning to tell upon her health.
358. When Mr. Wrench was allowed by you to read this report of Mr. Harrison's, was he allowed, or did he, in fact, make a copy of it? He could not have made a copy of it, because he read it in my own office.
359. Where did Mr. Hanson see it? In his own office.
360. Was it left with him? Yes.
361. How long was it in his possession? I think about twenty-four hours.
362. Then he had an opportunity of taking a complete copy of it? He might have done so, if he would have been guilty of such a breach of confidence.
363. He had the opportunity? Yes.
364. You have observed, I presume, that he was guilty of a most enormous breach of confidence? I do not know that he took a copy of it.

365. You know he commented upon it in his paper? Yes.
366. Do you not think that was a gross breach of confidence? As I said on a former occasion, Mr. Hanson was a public journalist, and, as this had become a public matter, he might have thought he had a right to make use of it.
367. I do not ask what he might have thought, but what you thought. When you had prevented Mr. Bentley himself from seeing this report, do you not consider that it was a gross breach of confidence on the part of Mr. Hanson to publish anything relating to it? As a private individual, I think it was; but as a public journalist he might have thought he was doing right.
368. Without drawing distinctions of that kind, what is your opinion of the conduct of Mr. Hanson—was it not, and is it not your opinion now, that it was a gross breach of confidence? I am of opinion that Mr. Hanson was guilty of a breach of confidence towards me in the matter.
369. Did you ever remonstrate with him about it? I did not.
370. You have had other communications with him since, have you not? Once or twice.
371. Did you never ask him how he came to be guilty of such a breach of confidence? I did not.
372. It does not seem to have made much impression on you? Whatever impression it made, I did not feel justified in making any remarks upon it.
373. How many interviews have you had with Mr. Hanson since he committed that breach of confidence? Not many—not above two.
374. When did they take place? One a few days ago, and the other when the letters I handed in the last day I was examined were given to me—the anonymous letters addressed to the editor of the Empire.
375. When did he give you those letters? I think it must have been in June, before I went into the country.
376. Before you went to the country? Yes. They have been in my possession ever since.
377. For what purpose did he give them to you? Because he suspected Mr. Bentley was the writer of them.
378. Before you went up the country? Yes.
379. Will you state the date when you went up the country? It was the middle of June, I think—about the 14th or 15th.
380. It was before you placed Mr. Harrison's report in Mr. Hanson's hands—you were in communication with Mr. Hanson, with reference to a suspicion against the Bentleys, before this report was concocted? I will not be positive now, whether it was after I returned from the country or before, that I got these letters from Mr. Hanson.
381. By the Chairman: Do you know of any means of refreshing your memory? I do not.
382. By Mr. Johnson: Surely the very sequence of facts must make it unmistakable;—does it not strike your memory at once whether you gave Mr. Hanson this report, as a friend of Mr. Bentley, before or after he had given you these letters as his enemy? I will not be positive.
383. I understood you to say, at first, that these letters were given by Mr. Hanson to you before you went up the country? That was my impression when you first asked the question; but I should not like to be positive, now, whether they were given to me before or after.
384. Were they given to you after you had shewn Mr. Hanson Mr. Harrison's report? No, not afterwards. I have had no communication with Mr. Hanson since then, till the other day. The report was returned by Mr. Hanson to me at my office in an envelope, and from that time till within the last few days I have had no communication with Mr. Hanson.
385. What was Mr. Hanson's avowed object in placing these letters in your hands? Because it was not the first time he had suspected Mr. Bentley of writing anonymous letters. He had some letters of his in his possession, and from the similarity of the handwriting he thought these were written by Mr. Bentley.
386. That communication occurred at the time you were treating Mr. Hanson as Mr. Bentley's friend? Yes.
387. How could you, at that time, consider Mr. Hanson as a friend of Mr. Bentley? Because he avowed himself to be such.
388. When he was furnishing you with the means of convicting him of most disgraceful conduct? He avowed himself as having been the friend of Mr. Bentley.
389. Your justification for shewing this document to Mr. Hanson was, that you understood him to be Mr. Bentley's friend? Yes.
390. By Mr. Hoskins: Did you understand him to be on terms of personal intimacy with Mr. Bentley? From what he said I thought he was. Mr. Hanson was, in fact, the first person who put the police in motion on Mr. Bentley's behalf.
391. By Mr. Johnson: I understood from you, that you were aware from Mr. Hanson that he was assisting you to convict the Bentleys of being the authors of these anonymous letters? He was not assisting me at all. He put the letters into my hands, and said he suspected they were written by Mr. Bentley, at the Australian Club.
392. You do not mean to say that when he placed these letters in your hands, it was not for the purpose of assisting the police in bringing this matter home to the Bentleys? It was nothing of the kind. He said he suspected, from the real handwriting of Mr. Bentley, that these letters that he handed to me were written by him.
393. I thought you stated that he had given you these, which he suspected to have been written by Mr. Bentley, on account of the similarity of the handwriting to that of the anonymous letters? No; Mr. Hanson said to me at the time, that he was of opinion that Mr. Bentley was in the habit of writing anonymous letters, and that from the similarity of his

Esq.

- Jno. M<sup>r</sup>Lerie, his handwriting to those which he handed to me, he thought they had been written by him.
Esq.
394. What had that to do with the matter, unless he was suspected to be the author of these other anonymous letters? That was Mr. Hanson's opinion.
- 18 Nov., 1862. 395. Expressed to you at the time? Yes.
396. And nevertheless you placed this document in his hands, and left it with him for twenty-four hours, upon the assumption that he was a friend of Mr. Bentley's? Yes.
397. Having at the same time, and afterwards, declined to shew Mr. Bentley or his solicitor the same document? Mr. Bentley never applied for it.
398. Well, his solicitor? I gave it to his solicitor.
399. Did you not decline to give it to his solicitor till you took the advice of the Crown Solicitor? Yes.
400. Did you not keep him waiting for it several days? It was given to him the next or second day after the application.
401. By the Chairman: You previously gave it to Mr. Hanson without any such delay? Yes.
402. By Mr. Johnson: Did you yourself observe any similarity between the anonymous letters that Mr. Hanson gave you and the ones in question in this case? Not between them and the letters in question in this case, but between them and Mr. Bentley's handwriting I did.
403. My question is, did you see any resemblance between the anonymous letters Mr. Hanson gave you and the anonymous letters in question in this case? No such comparison was made by me.
404. Cannot you answer the question in direct terms? Not having made the comparison, I did not, of course, see any similarity.
405. I understand, then, that you did make a comparison with Mr. Bentley's true handwriting, and that you thought there was a similarity between the two? Yes, I did, and I think so still.
406. Are you quite sure that you never expressed an opinion that Mr. Bentley's handwriting in these anonymous letters that Mr. Hanson gave you (assuming them to be his) was more like the handwriting of the anonymous letters connected with this case than Mr. Montagu's;—have you not expressed an opinion that the handwriting of these three anonymous letters which Mr. Hanson gave you (upon the supposition that they were Mr. Bentley's writing) is more like the anonymous letters in question in this case, than Mr. Montagu's handwriting? I have never said so.
407. Is your memory very bad? No, I believe I have a tolerably retentive memory.
408. Have you not said so in your examination here the other day? I do not think so. If I have said so, I must have misunderstood your question.
409. By Mr. Morris: Do you not remember that when I first got out these letters from you at all, I asked if you had not yourself said that you had seen handwriting of Mr. Bentley's which was more like the anonymous letters than that of Mr. Montagu, and that was one of the reasons that led you to suppose they were the authors of these letters themselves? The comparison of the anonymous letters handed to me by Mr. Hanson was made with the original letters of Mr. Bentley; and if I gave such an answer as that, I must have intended to convey that the handwriting of the anonymous letters given to me by Mr. Hanson was more like the original handwriting of Mr. Bentley than the anonymous letters in question in this case.
410. By Mr. Johnson: Are you able now to state with distinctness when Mr. Harrison was first employed upon the second occasion? I think it was in March.
411. Was it not after the 17th March? It was in the month of March, after Mr. Bentley called upon me.
412. You told us that before? I did not keep notes of all these things.
413. Are you able to recollect now whether Mr. Harrison told you that he had detected Mrs. Bentley in a falsehood, as to her having been met by a gentleman before or after the alleged assault? After the alleged assault.
414. By Mr. Morris: Did Mr. Hanson not furnish you at one time with some anonymous letters that he alleged to have been written by Mr. Montagu? No; he mentioned to me a quarrel he had had with Mr. Montagu. He said Mr. Montagu had been in the habit of writing musical or theatrical critiques for him, and he found him false once, and had ordered him out of his office.
415. Did he ever say he had been dismissed from the office for writing anonymous letters? No; he said he had for some time written either musical or theatrical critiques for the Empire, and that, finding he was not what he represented himself to be, he ordered him out of the office.
416. Did Mr. Harrison ever lead you to suppose that Mrs. Bentley was the victim of her husband in this matter, with regard to these anonymous letters? He never mentioned any thing of the kind to me; he said that it was between them. On more than one occasion he expressed his opinion to me that it was between Mr. and Mrs. Bentley—that they were both mixed up in it.
417. Did he tell you of any circumstances connected with the distress and anxiety of mind that Mrs. Bentley had exhibited to him on the subject, almost admitting that she knew all about it—in fact actually admitting that she knew all about it—but that she was under an oath not to divulge it? Mr. Harrison mentioned to me one morning that he had been at Mr. Bentley's house, that Mr. Bentley had left the room at ten o'clock, and that he had remained till one or two o'clock in the morning, and that Mrs. Bentley, during that time, had made some extraordinary disclosures to him.
418. By Mr. Wilson: Did he tell you the nature of those disclosures? He did not.

419. Do you recollect the date? No.
420. Do you know the month? It was in May or June, before I went to the country.
421. In your evidence, on Friday, you stated that an application was made to you to lay the Bentleys' case before the Government, and that you then stated that you would do so on the Bentleys making their statement on oath? I did.
422. Was Mr. Harrison's statement made on oath? It was not.
423. Why did you put the simple statement of Mr. Harrison before the Government, and refuse to place any other person's statement before the Government unless it was made on oath? From all that came within my knowledge, I never thought Mr. and Mrs. Bentley would make deposition to these facts.
424. Surely you must have considered a detective's word was equal to an ordinary citizen's oath, when you put them on an equality in that way? Mr. Harrison's statement was borne out by other facts.
425. Did you think, at the time, that it was borne out by facts? I did.
426. What was your personal knowledge of those facts? I only knew them from the police reports made to me.
427. You knew nothing about the facts connected with the case, except on the statement of Mr. Harrison? I did not, except from the impression made on my own mind by the interview with Mrs. Bentley at her own house.
428. Did you conceive that that impression was sufficient to enable you to refuse any one else's statement besides Mr. Harrison's unless it was on oath? It went a long way with me. The imperturbable coolness of the lady convinced me that the assault could not have taken place.
429. Under any circumstances, do you think it justice that such a thing should be done? It is a question for the opinion of the Committee.
430. I am asking your opinion; of course you may decline to answer the question if you choose? It is a matter of opinion.
431. I would like to get your opinion? Perhaps looking at it from two different points of view, opinions might be different. Looking at it from a police point of view, I think it is justice.
432. Have the police any right to look upon it in any other point of view than that of a desire to do justice? I think they have done their duty in the case.
433. I was asking a question whether it should not be their only desire to do that which is just? Precisely so.
434. Why could you not have placed statement against statement? No doubt Mr. Harrison, if necessary, will make oath to all the statements contained in that paper of his now.
435. Why did you not ask him to do so? I will do so if you like.
436. I am talking of your conduct in the case up to the present time—you refused to take the Bentleys' statement except on oath, but you receive Mr. Harrison's statement not on oath? Mr. Harrison's statement was made and handed to the Government before I came from the country. If I had been in Sydney, it is just possible I would have suggested the propriety of its being made on oath.
437. Do you not think that at the time you asked Mr. Bentley to make his statement on oath, you might have asked Mr. Harrison to corroborate his statement on oath? It might have had more the appearance of fair play certainly, but I have no doubt he will make oath to it now.
438. What grounds had you for requiring the statement of the Bentleys to be on oath? Facts that came to my knowledge.
439. Will you be kind enough to tell us how you came to know those facts? Only from information I received.
440. Then you know of no facts except those stated to you by the police? Except one—the conduct of Mrs. Bentley when I saw her at the interview I have spoken of, and that made an impression on my mind that the lady had never been assaulted as she described.
441. Will you state what that conduct was? The coolness with which she described the man so minutely, even the crest upon the ring he wore, and the positive assertion she made that he wore false whiskers.
442. I think you stated before, that she said she thought he wore false whiskers? No, she said she was sure he had false whiskers.
443. What was the description she gave of the ring? She said it was a white cornelian, with a crest—a stag's head, or something of that kind; she described the crest, and also the figure of the shirt he wore—she said he had a figured merino shirt on.
444. That was not very difficult to remark? A lady who was being assaulted in the gross way she alleged, would be hardly likely, I think, to notice such matters so particularly.
445. Did you never hear of a lady, under such circumstances, being able to recognize and swear to a man;—did you never hear of a woman being able to assail the murderer of her husband, and hold him till help arrived? Such cases may have occurred.
446. I refer, for instance, to the case of Mr. Noble, who was killed in this city, some years ago, when his wife seized the murderer and held him? I was not in Sydney at the time.
447. By the Chairman: What reason have you to believe that Mr. Harrison will swear to all his statements, if necessary? I have no reason to doubt that he will do so; I have no doubt he will do so if required.
448. By Mr. Wilson: It has been stated that Mr. Harrison offered to place detectives in the boarding-houses in Sydney—are you aware whether there is any truth in that statement? I never heard of it.
449. Has Mr. Harrison power to do so? Not without my knowledge.
450. Is it ever done? Not to my knowledge.
451. It never has been done? Not with my knowledge.

Jno. M'Levie,
Esq.
18 Nov., 1862.

- Jno. M'Lerie, Esq. 452. Is it in Mr. Harrison's power to employ persons to detect crime without your knowledge or concurrence? If he hires them of course they must be paid, and I never pay any one who is employed without my authority.
- 18 Nov., 1862. 453. Is it not possible that he should do so? If he does, he pays them out of his own pocket.
454. Does he not get private rewards in some cases? Yes.
455. Could he not pay these persons out of money coming to him in that way? He might.
456. Are you aware, as a fact, that these men are employed by the detectives without your being consulted? I am not aware of it.
457. Have you heard that such is the case? Mr. Harrison frequently gets information from people in the town, no doubt.
458. Are you aware whether Mr. Harrison or any of the other detectives pay men themselves for services rendered or information given? If they do it is out of their own funds.
459. Are you aware whether they do so or not? Yes, I am aware they do.
460. Some time ago, in Cockerell's case, it was proved at the trial that a man of very bad character, named Grant, was employed by the detectives;—was that man employed with your sanction or concurrence? That was during Mr. Singleton's time. I think he must have been paid by Mr. Singleton himself. I cannot pay a farthing without the sanction of the Government.
461. How was this man Grant paid? I do not recollect. I do not recollect any application for a sum to pay him, and therefore I conclude he was paid by the police themselves.
462. Do you recollect about two detectives being employed in the case of the Bucknells? Yes.
463. Were those men employed with your sanction? They were employed with the sanction of the Government.
464. They were allowed to go and hire themselves in the Bucknells' employment with the sanction of the Government? They were; I got the sanction of the then Chief Secretary, Mr. Watson Parker.
465. By Mr. Morris: With regard to your conversation with Mrs. Bentley—did Mrs. Bentley not say to you that the man who assaulted her told her to observe him well, and to tell Mr. Harrison that he wore a gold ring with a cornelian heart? Now you mention, I remember that she did say so. She said that after he had withdrawn his hand from her bosom he said, "Now, madam, you will know me again—there, you may tell Harrison that I wear a ring of this sort," shewing the ring with a cornelian heart or something of that sort.
466. By Mr. Johnson: Did not Mrs. Bentley represent that he used the words "gold ring with a cornelian heart"? Yes, that was the expression.
467. Was it a heart or an anchor? Either a heart or anchor.
468. Then her description was given from what she stated the man himself said—not from her own inspection? No, from what he told her; but she described the figure on the shirt from her own observation.
469. By the Chairman: Mrs. Bentley had related this matter to two or three people prior to speaking of it to you? Yes.
470. She had seen Mr. Harrison? Yes.
471. And no doubt she had related the matter to him, and also to Mr. Bentley? Yes, no doubt.
472. So that her excitement must naturally have worn off? That would depend upon the nature of the assault and the temperament of the lady.
473. By Mr. Leary: I do not know whether you have told us what was the nature of the assault? She said that he put his hand into her left breast, and tore the nipple so that the blood flowed.
474. By Mr. Morris: Did Mr. Harrison tell you Dr. Brereton's opinion? He did; he recited a conversation between himself and Dr. Brereton.
475. Could you relate that? Yes; he said Dr. Brereton had spoken to him of this assault, and said that, being the medical attendant of the family, he went to suggest that he, as medical attendant, should see the wound. Mr. Bentley objected to this, and said that before consenting he would consult Mrs. Bentley. Dr. Brereton saw Mr. Bentley subsequently, and Mr. Bentley then said that Mrs. Bentley had a delicacy in shewing her breast, and would not allow him to see the wound.
476. Did Mr. Harrison tell you whether Dr. Brereton had expressed an opinion as to any peculiarity of Mrs. Bentley's mind? No, I do not think he did.
477. By Mr. Johnson: Could that have occurred and you could have forgotten it? No, I am almost sure nothing of the kind took place.
478. By Mr. Wilson: Talking of the assault, you stated in your previous evidence, that Mr. Harrison had placed men at Enmore, and that these men did not see the assault? No, I said that after the assault, and on a subsequent visit of Mrs. Bentley's to Enmore, a man was placed there, who saw Mrs. Bentley leave Mr. Josephson's house without being accosted by any person; but on that occasion, after returning from Enmore, she told Mr. Harrison that she had been accosted by a man who requested her to go to Cook's River.
479. Will you tell us the name of the man placed by Mr. Harrison at Enmore? It was either Saunderson or Camphin.
480. One of the regular detectives? Yes, who had been in the force for years.
481. Did any of these men ever make any statement to you on the subject? No, all the reports to me came through the inspector.
482. Do you not think that, as this was a very important matter, you might have got some written statement from those detectives who were employed in the matter? The matter certainly has assumed an importance, but I did not attach so much importance to it at first; I had more important matters to attend to at the time.
- 483.

483. Are you aware whether any of the letter-boxes in the city have been examined by the detectives, or any other parties, with the view of seeing what letters were there—the iron pillars? I think on one occasion Mr. Harrison reported to me that a letter was seen to be put into one of the iron pillars, and that he waited, or caused some person to wait till the pillar was opened, to see what letters were there. I think a report of that kind was made. Jno. M'Levie,
Esq.
18 Nov. 1862.
484. How could he see what letters were there? He wanted to see the handwriting.
485. Had he any authority to examine the letters put into any letter-box in the city? No.
486. He assumed this power to himself? No doubt.
487. Were any of these letters opened? Certainly not.
488. Have you ever heard that these letters were opened by the detectives? Never. They could not have been, for I know the post office authorities are too particular to allow it.
489. He does not appear to have applied to the post office authorities. I suppose you are aware that it is generally a boy that opens these pillars and takes out the letters, and Mr. Harrison, I presume, would go to that boy and demand to look at these letters? To look at the superscription merely.
490. You are not aware whether or not any of them were opened? I should think not, certainly. I hardly think any police officer would dare to do such a thing.
491. You cannot tell, of your own knowledge, whether any of these letters were opened or not? No; but, as I said before, no officer of police would dare to open any letter.
492. Are you aware that the Editor of the Empire newspaper offered to publish Mr. Harrison's statement in extenso in that newspaper? Yes, I am aware he did.
493. Had he any authority from you to make such an offer? None.
494. Then if Mr. Hanson had that statement, so that he was able to publish it, he must have obtained a copy during the time it was in his hands? Yes, I suppose so.
495. And he had no authority from you to copy that document? Certainly not.
496. By Mr. Leary: On the occasion that you have spoken of, when you had some conversation with Mrs. Bentley with respect to the assault, it was two days after the assault? I say two days; it may be more or it may be less.
497. You state that, in relating the circumstances of the assault, the lady appeared exceedingly cool, considering what had happened? I did.
498. And on that ground, and that being your only personal knowledge of Mrs. Bentley's conduct in the matter, you believe her account was a falsehood? My confidence was shaken, I must say.
499. Was there any prevarication in her statement? I did not cross-question the lady—she made her own statement to me.
500. Had you any reason to doubt the truth of her statement, except that she was very cool in her manner? I had reason. My impression was that the assault had never taken place.
501. Why? From the lady's manner, and the little importance she appeared to attach to it, looking at the indecent nature of the assault as well as the wound inflicted.
502. You have stated before, that one reason of your disbelief was in consequence of Mrs. Bentley being so well able to remember the description of the cornelian ring; but now, in answer to Mr. Johnson, you state that the man who committed the alleged assault directed her attention to it;—under ordinary circumstances, is not that a sufficient explanation of a thing of that kind? Not to me, it is not.
503. By Mr. Johnson: Is it not a vastly different thing whether she asserted that she had observed it herself, or whether she said she had heard it described? There is a difference.
504. Had you not seen Mr. Harrison between the time of the alleged assault and your interview with Mrs. Bentley, and had he not described to you her statement with respect to it? Yes, I saw Mr. Harrison on the morning subsequent to the alleged assault.
505. Did not his report substantially concur with what Mrs. Bentley told you herself? In most particulars it did. Mrs. Bentley gave me some particulars as to the man's having false whiskers—that Mr. Harrison did not mention.
506. I would wish to know whether Mr. Harrison professes that this is the diary (referring to the diary previously produced) he keeps day by day? That is his diary.
507. Does he profess that these are the identical entries made day by day, and that there is no previous writing from which he copies? That is what I understand from Mr. Harrison—that they are made day by day.
508. And that there is no preceding writing down of the occurrences mentioned? He does not carry that in his pocket, and no doubt he makes notes.
509. Do you understand from Mr. Harrison that these entries are made at the various successive times, being on the very days that the occurrences referred to took place? I will not say they were entered on the very day —
510. Or the following day, at furthest? It is, as I understand it, a diary of the circumstances as they occurred, but whether entered on the same day or the day after I will not say.
511. By Mr. Hoskins: Are they not placed before you every morning? No, I never saw that diary till I opened it on this table this morning.
512. By Mr. Johnson: It would be a very singular thing, would it not, if this diary mentions the receipt of a letter two days before it was received? Yes, it would certainly.
513. By Mr. Forster: I want to know what reason there is for the extraordinary influence Mr. Hanson seems to possess over the police? Influence! I think it is quite the reverse, judging from his writings.
514. Is he an agent of the police? An agent! Well, if he is the writer of these articles that appear in his paper, he is anything but an agent.
515. Are you sure he is not employed by the detective police? I am not aware that he is.

- Jno. M'Lerie, Esq.
18 Nov., 1862.
516. How does it happen that he comes to you and gets these important documents handed over to him to do what he chooses with, and that such confidence is placed in him by the police? I think I have explained that already. He was professedly the intimate friend of Mr. Bentley, and Mr. Wrench was the same; and as two friends of Mr. Bentley, who took very great interest in the action of the police in the first instance, they were shewn these papers.
517. I think you said Mr. Bentley never authorized you to consider Mr. Hanson his friend? I do not think Mr. Bentley ever mentioned his name.
518. You took Mr. Hanson's friendship for Mr. Bentley from his own statement to the police? From the interview when the police were first put in motion, and his subsequent action in the matter.
519. From what has happened now, would you believe Mr. Hanson's word another time? I should not like to trust him with any papers that I wished to be kept secret.
520. Did it never strike you that Mr. Hanson's object was simply to get news for his paper? No, I did not think so at the time. My impression was, that he acted purely from a feeling of interest in the family of Mr. Bentley.
521. I suppose you will be more careful in dealing with public journalists another time? Rather.
522. By Mr. Hoskins: Had you been in communication with Mr. Hanson about the Bentleys' case before Inspector Harrison's report was drawn up? Daily, almost; at least, during the time the inquiry was going on; there was an interval of two or three months and then it commenced again. Mr. Hanson, in fact, accused the police of not using proper exertions.
523. Did Mr. Hanson ask you to allow him to peruse Mr. Harrison's report? He did.
524. Did he ask you to allow him to take it to his office? I think he did; he said he would return it to me next day.
525. Did he take it to his office? Yes, and returned it the next day.
526. Did you, when you handed that report to him, request him not to make the report public? Yes; I said that the only person who had seen this report was the Chief Secretary, but that as Mr. Hanson was the avowed friend of Mr. Bentley, I had no objection to shew it to him, and also to Mr. Wrench.
527. You shewed it to him in your office, but also allowed him to take it away? He did not read it in my office.
528. You allowed him to take it away? Yes.
529. You told him you considered it a private communication, and that he was not to make use of it as a journalist? I said nothing about his journal, but I did say it was a confidential communication.
530. Do you happen to know whether, a few days subsequently, there was a leading article in the Empire, in which the principal facts detailed in that report were published? I saw that leading article, and was much surprised at it.
531. Then of course you consider that Mr. Hanson, in publishing those remarks, was guilty of a breach of confidence? I think so.
532. Have you been in the habit of furnishing Mr. Hanson with any information in reference to any of the mysterious crimes in the detection of which the detective police were engaged? No; I never furnish journals with any police information.
533. Has not Mr. Hanson been frequently at your office, importuning yourself or the detectives to furnish him with information? I never saw Mr. Hanson at my office above once or twice in my life.
534. Will you be kind enough to tell me why the detective police were stationed at the Post Office? Because I suggested to Mr. Bentley that, in order to discover the writer of these anonymous letters, a letter should be placed in the Post Office, addressed to H. B., and an advertisement inserted in the papers, requesting H. B. to call for it, and in order to discover who would call, a detective officer was placed at the box to hear it called for.
535. By the Chairman: Did you, or Mr. Bentley, or Mr. Plunkett, suggest this? I think I suggested it, and gave a copy of the letter that was to be written.
- [Mr. Bentley here stated that he prepared the draft of a letter to be placed in the Post Office in the way suggested; that he called upon Captain M'Lerie, and requested that a detective might be placed in the Post Office to see who called for it; that Captain M'Lerie raised some objections, but after some demur gave way to his (Mr. Bentley's) wishes, and wrote out a draft which he thought better than the one proposed by Mr. Bentley, so that, as he said, H. B., if he did call, might have something to read.]
536. By Mr. Hoskins: Did the detective so stationed at the Post Office see any person call for the letter? He did. A person who is one of a firm of stationers in the Market buildings, the initials of whose name were H. B., called for the letter and opened it, and when he had read it threw it away. We found that this man was in the habit of calling for letters addressed to H. B.
- [Mr. Bentley said that perhaps he might be allowed to state that the advertisement was so clear that no person could have called for the letter it referred to unless wilfully. It ran to this effect—that the person who had addressed a letter to Mr. Plunkett, on musical topics, was requested to apply at the Post Office for a letter addressed H.B., as he had written his own name so indistinctly that it could not be deciphered.]
537. Do you know the person who called for this letter? The detective police saw him afterwards, and ascertained that it was merely a piece of idleness on his part.
538. Do the detective police know this man? Yes.
539. Do you know him? Yes, he is a stationer in the Market buildings.

540. Would there be any difficulty in getting this man to give evidence? None whatever. Jno. M'Levie,
Esq.
541. After this man had received this letter, was any other letter with the initials H.B. again deposited in the Post Office? No, not after that—to my knowledge.
542. How long was the policeman stationed there? Only a day or two. 18 Nov., 1862.
543. Are you in the habit of allowing the detective police to assist in unravelling mysteries of this kind? No, it is not a police duty at all. You will observe that, throughout the police records I have handed in, this is called a "special duty." But it appeared to me that circumstances in connection with this case as detailed were so diabolical, that, at the request of Mr. Bentley, I allowed them to go on a second time with it.
544. In looking through this diary, I find the police as frequently employed on "special duty" as general duty? That is because there were two men employed on this duty for two months.
545. What were their names? Saunderson and Clark part of the time, and then Saunderson and Camphin.
546. Have the detective police been employed in any other cases of this kind besides this of Mr. Bentley? Yes, in the D'Apice case, occurring at about the same time.
547. Are the detective police paid by the parties for performing these duties? No.
548. Do you think it consists with the duty of detective policemen paid for the detection of crime, to be employed in the service of private individuals? At the time that this case was undertaken with my sanction I looked upon it as a most diabolical crime.
549. Have you formed the opinion that the writer of the anonymous letters sent to the Governor was the same person as the person who wrote these letters which you say Mr. Hanson gave you? There is a great similarity in the style, though it is a feigned style, in the formation of the letters.
550. Do you yourself think that these anonymous letters were all written by one person? I have not seen them all.
551. All that you have seen? No; I think one of those I saw was plainly written in a female hand. With that exception I think they were all written by one person.
552. Have you formed any opinion as to the authorship of these letters? I have.
553. You form that opinion from information you have received from your subordinate? Yes.
554. Have you any objection to state whom you believe to be the author? I said before that I believe the authorship of these letters rests with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley.
555. I understood you to say also that Mrs. Bentley had been followed by the police—how long were the police in the habit of dogging Mrs. Bentley? As long as she requested them to follow her, and on one occasion when she did not request them.
556. How long was that? It extended over a month or two.
557. Did the detective police dog——? Not "dog"; they went for the protection of Mrs. Bentley.
558. Had she been assaulted in the streets frequently? She had been assaulted once.
559. Were the two persons who were suspected of the authorship of these letters as closely watched by the police as Mrs. Bentley was—this foreigner and the Englishman? They were watched, but I cannot say precisely in what way they were watched; it was reported to me that they were watched.
560. You never asked the detective police in what way they did it—whether they followed them when they left their houses or when they returned? No. I have reason to believe it was done effectually.
561. I did not understand you clearly, in reply to Mr. Johnson, why Mr. Harrison relaxed his vigilance in the Bentley case after the month of April, seeing that several anonymous letters were sent subsequently? No doubt his suspicions were aroused as to the authorship of the letters, and also as to the truth of the statement as to the alleged assault.
562. Did Mr. Harrison communicate to you his reasons for forming the opinion that the Bentleys themselves were the authors? Yes.
563. Do you remember what those reasons were? One reason was, that on the occasion when Mrs. Bentley said she had been spoken to by a man at Enmore, no man was near her; and another occasion was the finding of a card on the dressing-room table in the bed-room.
564. A card? Yes, a visiting card of Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, with something written on it in the anonymous handwriting.
565. I understood you to say that Mr. Harrison placed detectives in the house, to exercise surveillance over some person or persons, whether Mrs. Bentley or other persons? I beg your pardon; they were not placed in the Bentleys' house as a means of surveillance over them, but at the request of Mr. Bentley, to discover the persons who were the authors of these letters, and who had threatened to assault Mrs. Bentley.
566. Have there been other instances where policemen have been put in people's houses in this way? At the request of the parties—never without the sanction of the owners.
567. Do you happen to know whether the detective police are in the habit of carrying about blank search warrants? I know they are not, and never have been since I have been connected with the detective police in Sydney.
568. By Mr. Cowper: Did you ever sign a blank warrant and give it to a constable? Never; I never signed even a blank summons. I would as soon think of cutting my hand off.
569. Do you know of its ever having been done by any Magistrate? Only on one occasion, in connection with what transpired in a Committee of this House, and I was perfectly thunderstruck when it came to my knowledge.
570. By Mr. Lucas: I understood you to say, Mr. Harrison had no power to place detectives in lodging-houses or private houses, without your instructions or consent? No.
571. Do you think you have power to do so? Certainly not; it would be done only at the request of the owners of the house. 572.

- Jno. M'Lerie, Esq.
18 Nov., 1862.
572. Either in a lodging-house or any other? Yes; the police are the servants of the public, and have no right to interfere in private matters.
573. By Mr. Hoskins: Do you happen to know whether the detective police are in the habit of searching lodging-houses or boarding-houses, indiscriminately and frequently, without procuring search warrants? They are, and they must do; they are obliged to do so for the detection of crime.
574. Have they the power to do so? Not without the consent of the keeper of the house. If the lodging-house keeper says they cannot come in without a warrant, of course they could not do it.
575. Do they, in every instance when they search a lodging-house, first ask the occupant whether he will give permission? They do. I think there has never been a complaint on the matter made to me. They are generally allowed to do it without interruption, but I know an instance where, in a "cross" lodging-house, kept by a man who was a "cross" man himself, they were not allowed to go in without a warrant.
576. Have you ever heard complaints of the detective police searching houses without authority? Never, and I have therefore reason to believe that whenever they do do so it is with the authority of the owners of the houses.
577. By Mr. Johnson: Did you say just now that you thought the letter sent to Government House, and the anonymous letters which Mr. Hanson gave you, were in the same handwriting? I said there was a similarity of style.
578. Then, in point of fact, you have compared the anonymous letters with these three letters that Mr. Hanson gave you? Yes, the only one I saw—the Government House letter.
579. When did Mr. Harrison first tell you of this alleged occurrence at Newtown, of Mrs. Bentley having stated that a man spoke to her when there had been no such occurrence? The day after.
580. Can you fix the date? I cannot; it was merely in the course of his daily report to me of his duties.
581. Was that after you had seen Mrs. Bentley? It was after I had seen Mrs. Bentley.
582. You are sure of that? Yes.
583. By the Chairman: With regard to this lodging-house matter—Is there anything to prevent Inspector Harrison placing or obtaining a person to be placed in a lodging-house without your consent, not connected with the detective police—could he not by his influence obtain a respectable man to change his lodgings and go into some house where he might wish him to go? It is quite possible.
584. And whence he could make reports to the inspector who placed him there? It is perfectly possible.
585. Did you ever hear of a matter of that kind being carried into effect? No.
586. Is it not frequently done in police tactics? I have known it to be done at Home.
587. Would you consider it a breach of police duty to allow it to be done? I would set my face against it, because I consider it would be an interference with the privacy of individuals that I would not approve.
588. Have you any reason to say positively that Mr. Harrison has never taken such a course? I cannot say. His zeal may have carried him to that length—certainly not with my knowledge or consent.
589. With respect to the conversation that has been alluded to as having taken place between you and Mrs. Bentley, you stated in the first instance that Mrs. Bentley had given the particulars of the crest on the ring? Yes, that was my impression until the fact was recalled to my mind.
590. You remember now that she did not describe the crest from her own observation? She said the man held up his hand and named the crest to her.

Mr. Thomas Charles Bentley examined:—

- Mr. T. C. Bentley.
18 Nov., 1862.
591. By the Chairman: There is a petition which has been presented to the House—are you the person who presented that petition? I handed in that petition.
592. There is a letter here marked J. H. T., addressed to the Editor of the Empire? I never saw that letter till it was shewn to me by Captain M'Lerie last Friday.
593. There is another letter also addressed to the Editor of the Empire? I never saw that letter until it was produced last Friday.
594. Here is a third letter? Neither had I seen that.
595. Then you positively deny any knowledge of these letters? I positively deny it, except that I have a letter, in something like that handwriting, that Mr. Hanson gave me, asking me to endeavour to trace the author for him, and he also asked me if I thought it was Mr. Henry O'Brien's handwriting.
596. Can you produce that? I can. I cannot find it at this moment, but I will endeavour to produce it.
597. When did you become acquainted with Mr. Hanson? When the ship "Castle Howard" came into port he came on board the ship, his wife being related to the wife of the captain, and when he heard my name, he asked me if I was in any way related to Bentley the publisher, and I then learnt from him that he had kept a bookseller's shop at Reigate, at the time a portion of my family were resident there, and when I lost a relative; he happened to know something of the circumstances of her death. In that way we became casually acquainted.
598. Mr. Hanson introduced himself to you on that occasion, and in that particular way? Yes. 599.

599. This afterwards ripened into intimacy? Gradually we called upon each other. Mrs. Hanson called on Mrs. Bentley and I then called upon Mr. Hanson. One day, when I was passing down Pitt-street, I saw a hand before me with an envelope, and heard a person say, "Do you know that, Mr. Bentley?" and I saw some writing similar to that which Mr. Wrench had shewn to me a few days before. Mr. T. C. Bentley.
18 Nov., 1862.
600. Whose hand was this? Mr. Hanson's. I identified the writing with some writing that I had seen at Mr. Wrench's office, and asked him what it was. He told me it was an anonymous letter about Mrs. Bentley. I asked him the nature of it. He said that he had dismissed it from his mind, like all anonymous letters, and destroyed it. Struck by the similarity of the writing I had seen at Mr. Wrench's, and also at some extraordinary conversation and questions that had been put to us by Mr. Black, I asked Mr. Hanson if he would allow me to have the envelope. He gave it me, and I went to Mr. Black's office, and I said, "Mr. Black, Mr. Hanson has given me this envelope, and has stated that it contained an anonymous letter traducing Mrs. Bentley. You have been putting some very extraordinary questions to us of late—have your questions any bearing on such proceedings?" He said at once that they had, and he went to a drawer at one side of his office, and handed me the letter, which I produce. (Anonymous letter, No. 1, handed in and read.)
601. By Mr. Morris: What was the date of that? The postmark is May 17, 1861.
602. By the Chairman: Are any of the allegations in that letter correct? None whatever. Mr. Black stated to me that Mr. Aldis had also received a letter, and no doubt if I called upon him he would give me that one also. I called on Mr. Aldis, and he stated that Mr. Black's statement was correct, and if I would call upon him next day he would bring the letter into town. I called next day, and he gave me this letter, posted July 2, containing the same statements as in the previous letter. I may state that I cut off the bottom of that envelope, in consequence of Mr. Clark Irving wishing me to supply him with the handwriting, and not wishing him to come into contact with Mr. Aldis, I thought the words "George-street" would be quite sufficient, without giving him any names. (Letter No. 2 handed in and read.)
603. I was asking you with regard to your intimacy with Mr. Hanson, of the Empire office? A short time after that, Mr. Hanson brought me a letter which he had received, in which he was requested to meet Mrs. Bentley at a certain place where she was to make an assignation; and in consequence of Mr. Hanson having brought it to me, I considered that he had acted in a straightforward and manly manner, and in consequence of that I formed a friendship for him, and Mrs. Bentley, at my solicitation, used sometimes to visit at Mrs. Hanson's. But I feel it my duty to state, as far as Mrs. Bentley is concerned, that all friendship with regard to the Hansons emanated from myself, and that she was friendly with them only at my solicitation, and in consequence of my having believed that Mr. Hanson was my sincere friend.
604. You had every reason to believe he was your friend? I had.
605. What was the first intimation you had that you had no right to consider him in that light? The leading article in the Empire newspaper of the 18th July. I was going to Mr. Johnson's office on the morning that article appeared, and I left Mrs. Bentley making this complaint, that she should refuse to teach Mr. Hanson's daughter any more, as she thought it very improper for parents who placed their children under instruction to let them neglect it, and therefore if Miss Hanson was not more regular, she should refuse to teach her any more.
606. Did you ever inform any of the officers of the police force that Mr. Hanson was your friend? At the time Mr. Harrison took this matter in hand he knew it, because Mr. Hanson had placed this matter in his hands, and he most likely would know it, because I made no disguise in the matter, but Mr. Harrison made it a necessity (i.e., made it a sine qua non) that I should enter into no communication with Mr. Hanson whatever in respect to matters which transpired in connection with the case.
607. Did Mr. Hanson ever lead you to suppose in the slightest degree that he thought you were the writer of certain anonymous letters that he had received? On the contrary, after the publication of my letter, I called upon him, having heard that there were some rumours about Mrs. Bentley being a monomaniac. I had addressed a letter to Dr. Brereton, to which I had a reply, which is stated in the depositions, in order that his attendance upon Mrs. Bentley might at once set aside such an absurdity. I also addressed a letter to Mr. Hanson, asking him to fix the date when Mrs. Hanson first informed Mrs. Bentley of the contents of the anonymous letter, in order that the Honorable the Colonial Secretary might be fully convinced that such a rumour was an absurdity; and he told me I had no need to trouble myself about such rumours, for it was of very little consequence what Mr. Cowper or anybody else thought.
608. The statement that Mrs. Bentley was a monomaniac was made after Mr. Hanson had acquainted the police with his suspicions that you yourself were the writer of the anonymous letters? I cannot say.
609. Can you fix the date of this conversation? I can; it was after the 14th of June, and before the 21st.
610. When did you receive any more of these anonymous letters, and from whom? On the 29th October, when I reached my house from the club, Mrs. Bentley informed me that she had had a letter from a Mrs. Morris, asking her to call upon her in reference to giving musical instruction to her children, and she asked me to which Mrs. Morris it could refer. I stated that from the description in the letter I was quite at a loss to form an opinion; but I went down to the Australian Club to look at the Directory, and failing to find any address, I spoke to Sir William Macarthur, asking him if he knew this Mrs. Morris purporting purporting to live at Muringa Lodge. He assisted me to look through the Directory without any effect, and I afterwards asked Mr. Griffiths if he could give me any information, as Mr. Lamb's house was mentioned in the letter, and as I believed him to be on terms of intimacy with that family. I was then leaving the club, when the hall porter informed me that Mr. Hanson and another gentleman wished to speak to me. I went into the strangers' room, and Mr. Hanson said, "Here, I want to see you; read that letter;" and he placed in my hands this letter. (Letter handed in and read.)

Mr. T. C.
Bentley.
18 Nov., 1862.

611. By Mr. Johnson: Perhaps it would be more convenient to produce at once all the anonymous letters in question which have come to your hands. Do you produce the following, including those you have already handed in:—

612. You produce these? I do. (Letters handed in.)

613. By the Chairman: Have you found the anonymous letter that you stated you would hand in to the Committee? I have. (Letter handed in and read.)

614. Have you any knowledge of that letter, otherwise than as having been placed in your hands by Mr. Hanson? No.

615. You stated that Mr. Hanson said he believed that letter was written by Mr. Henry O'Brien? Yes, then a Member of Parliament. I laughed at the idea; and I think, if my memory does not fail me, that Mr. Hanson stated he had taxed Mr. O'Brien with writing such letters; but I will not speak positively as to that. I speak positively as to the fact of Mr. Hanson's having stated that he believed it to be written by Mr. O'Brien.

616. By Mr. Johnson: With respect to these three anonymous letters that Mr. Hanson handed to Captain M'Leerie, are you at all acquainted or au fait with the subject referred to in them? No; I scarcely know now the contents of them.

617. Will you read them, and say if you are acquainted with the political topics alluded to in those letters? (The witness read the letters referred to.) Certainly not.

618. Were you aware of the circumstance of Dr. Lang having been horse-whipped in the streets? I did hear of it just after I landed in the Colony, by a Mr. M'Donald, I think it was.

619. Have you ever taken any active part in politics at all? Not in the least. I have never argued upon them.

620. Have you ever addressed the papers at all on any subject? I never wrote a letter to the papers in my life except with my name attached.

621. Have you done so on political subjects? Never.

622. By Mr. Morris: Do you remember an occasion when yourself and Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Harrison were speaking of Mrs. Bentley's father? I cannot recall any such conversation, or any allusion to Mr. Monk, before Mr. Harrison.

623. Were you ever in Italy—you and your wife? For five or six months we were there. Mr. T. C.
Bentley.
624. Was your wife born in Italy? No, in Devonshire.
625. Was she ever in Italy previous to your marriage? She never left England until she was married. I left England in consequence of my health. I was ordered to travel in Europe. 18 Nov., 1862.
626. What led you to suppose the Jesuits had anything to do with this particular persecution? I never did suppose the Jesuits had anything to do with it. Several* of my friends suggested that the Jesuits wished to turn away my two servants, who are Roman Catholics, and have been with us now for two years; but I have always stated my opinion that there was nothing to shew that it was a religious persecution at all. Towards the close of it, I was informed that one of the suspected parties had been brought up in a College of Jesuits, and it was, therefore, suggested that the Jesuits might have something to do with it. But I argued against that freely on these grounds, that if the Jesuits had any object to accomplish, during my residence abroad they would have had full opportunities of making any attacks they chose; and I also stated that we had been married now five or six years, and until Mrs. Bentley had made a public appearance in the musical world we had never had any annoyance of any kind whatever, and under these circumstances, I could not see any necessity for putting a religious aspect on a circumstance that did not on the face of it appear so. I did state that if the Jesuits had anything to do with the matter, and if one of the suspected parties was a Jesuit, it was because he was using power at a distance of 16,000 miles away from his superiors without their knowledge or consent; but so far as regards any religious body having anything to do with it, I have never believed anything of the kind.
627. By Mr. Johnson: With whom did that discussion take place? On several occasions Mr. Boulanger has suggested that the Roman Catholics had something to do with it, but more particularly Mr. Harrison has done so. I have asked Mr. Harrison what object the Jesuits could have—if they had anything to do with it they must have some end in view—and he has told me in several discussions that I did not know the Jesuits, that for the smallest ends they would use the most powerful means. I said that since I had been in this Colony I had met with nothing but friendship. Soon after I landed, I was elected Secretary of the Australian Club, and when I sent in my resignation, I left the Club, I believe, with their kind wishes, and was elected unanimously by a large Committee, consisting of twenty-five gentlemen of the Union Club. And if the Jesuits had anything to do with it, their opportunities would have been greater and their efforts more successful by attacking me than by attacking Mrs. Bentley. He said, "Take, for instance, the case of a house, and they want that house to come down by a given time; if by directing a small stream of water underneath the foundations they can accomplish their object, do you think they would be fools enough to come round by the front door, to create suspicion, when they could carry on their operations 'in secret'?" He then said, "You should read the 'Wandering Jew.'" I said I had not done so, and it ended in Mrs. Bentley's asking him if he had the book; he said he had, and he afterwards brought it. I did intend, if I could have got a copy, to read it in the original; but to Mr. Harrison principally I am indebted that my mind has been imbued with any idea that the Jesuits have had anything to do with the matter.

THURSDAY, 20 NOVEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER, MR. W. FORSTER, MR. HOSKINS,		MR. LEARY, MR. MORRIS, MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. WILSON.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. R. Johnson appeared as Solicitor for the Petitioner.

Sub-Inspector Charles Edward Harrison called in and examined:—

628. By the Chairman: What are you? Sub-Inspector of the Detective Police. Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
629. How long have you held that position? Sub-Inspector since the 1st of last March. I was Inspector of the Detective Police since May, 1858. I was absent from the force about two years, and I had been Sub-Inspector of the Detective Police before that, since 1855. I joined the police in 1854. 20 Nov., 1862.
630. You are aware of the object of this inquiry? I am.
631. By Mr. Johnson: When did you first enter the police? In May, 1854. I think it was in May.
632. Have you been in the police force ever since then? No, I was away from it for about two years, up the country.
633. What occupation did you follow during that interval? Storekeeping; I had stores on the diggings.
634. What occupation did you follow before you went into the police? Before I went into the police, various occupations. 635.

* Revised:—Several of my friends suggested the Jesuits, and wished me to turn away my two servants, &c., for nearly two years.

- Sub-Inspector O. E. Harrison.
20 Nov., 1862.
635. Will you describe them? I have been a draper's assistant, in a wine and spirit store, a sailor—that is all.
636. You never followed any other occupation than those three? No, except in the police; but previous to joining the police in 1854, in 1853 I was for five or six months in the gold escort.
637. Were these all the occupations of your life; you have been a draper's assistant, in a wine and spirit store, a sailor, connected with the gold escort, and since in the police,—have you never followed any other occupation whatever? No other.
638. When did you first engage to investigate the Bentley affair? The latter end of last year; I do not know the date.
639. What was the exact date of your first employment on that case? I do not know.
640. How was that, did you not keep a diary? I did not keep a diary last year.
641. When did you first commence keeping a diary? I left off keeping a diary for some time, and took up the matter again at the beginning of this year; at least, at the latter end of last year I began to keep a diary, the diary being a private one. I never kept a diary in connection with the police force. The diary that is here now is strictly a private one, and I never thought it would be applied to the use it has been.
642. By the Chairman: To what uses has it been applied? I was informed, the night before last—to begin with—when the Inspector General spoke to me about certain dates—
643. Just continue what you were saying about the night before last, in answer to the question I asked you? I was informed by a Member of the House, that the diary given to the Inspector General, in confidence, merely to be used with reference to certain extracts, had been taken away by a Member of the Committee, and hawked about town for other purposes than I had —
644. Who told you that? I decline to answer the question.
645. And yet you make this assertion? That I was so informed.
646. By a Member of the House? Yes.
647. By Mr. Wilson: You decline to tell who was your informant? It was told to me in confidence.
648. You make a direct charge against officers connected with this Committee? I said a Member of the Committee.
649. You make a serious charge against a Member of the Committee, such as you would not like to have made against you without the power of rebutting—
650. By Mr. Morris: What Member of the Committee was it who, you were informed, had taken this diary about the city? —
651. By the Chairman: You refuse to state what Member or person it was who made this charge to you? Who stated that fact to me, if fact it was; he told me in confidence.
652. He was not a police agent? Not to my knowledge.
653. He did not give you this information as a police agent? He is a Member of the House, and gave me this information as a friend, I presume.
654. You state positively that you did not get the information as a police agent? I did not.
655. You refuse to make any farther statement as to this charge of your diary having been hawked about the town? I have told you all that passed on the matter, Mr. Dalgleish.
656. I am the Chairman of this Committee, if you will address me as such? I did not ask the name of the party.
657. Yet you make this statement upon the statement of a party whose name you decline to give? Yes.
658. Then we may take the statement for what it is worth—an anonymous statement and an anonymous letter are alike in value, I suppose? It may be so.
659. You have not dreamed it? I have not dreamed it.
660. You are certain you were informed of this matter? I am.
661. You sometimes think you dream, do you not? I do not understand you.
662. In some of your remarks upon this case, do you not say I might have been dreaming—do you not make the remark that shews you are in the habit of dreaming? It may be so; that is not a diary kept for police purposes, but my own private diary—it contains private matters as well.
663. Are you aware that Captain M'Lerie, in his examination before this Committee, stated that the diary was public property? I am not aware; if he did state so, he was incorrect.
664. Was he not called upon to produce that diary as a public document? I am not aware.
665. By Mr. Johnson: Do you not, as part of your official duty, keep a diary of your proceedings? I do not.
666. And never did? No, never.
667. Have you ever represented to your superior officer that you did keep a diary? No, I have not.
668. Do not add to the mystery by those shakes of the head; give us an answer—yes or no? I have not.
669. Did you keep a diary during the last year—the year 1861? I did not.
670. Of any kind? I did not.
671. Did you for the preceding year? I did not.
672. Did you ever keep a diary till you made this diary here present? Yes.
673. When? Some years back.
674. How many years ago is it since you entirely ceased to keep anything in the shape of a diary, public or private, till the commencement of this year? About seven years.
675. Before you were in the police? Yes.
676. Since you have been in the police have you never kept a diary, public or private, or anything in the shape or substitution of a diary, excepting the book now produced? No.
- 677.

677. Do not misunderstand me;—did you keep no rough memoranda on paper from which you might have made entries afterwards into a book? Yes; I might have made many memoranda respecting any matter in hand, but no diary that after the matter was over I retained.
678. Have you any papers of any description—scraps of writing of any sort relating to the entries in this diary? No, I have not, to my knowledge.
679. Were the entries in this diary copied from scraps of paper, or made from your memory direct into the book itself? Both. Some of the entries there have been made from particulars that I have put down at the time on a piece of paper, when I have not had an opportunity of making the entry in the book. The entries were not all made on the dates therein set down, because I was particularly occupied; sometimes the second and even the third day afterwards I have made some of these entries—whenever I had an opportunity I made these entries. I generally kept it very closely entered up—as soon as I could after the circumstances transpired; but I may say that in some instances there might be one, two, or perhaps three days elapse without my making an entry.
680. In those cases would you make an entry from memory, or would you copy the paper you had previously written? I cannot say; in many instances I wrote from memory, and I believe in many instances from some notes that I had taken at the time.
681. Have you in your possession any of the rough notes or memoranda which assisted you in making out this diary? I have not.
682. What have you done with them? As I entered them in my diary I used to tear them up.
683. Have you anything which formed the foundation of this record in your diary? Do you mean in regard to the Bentley case in particular?
684. I mean in regard to the Bentley case? Memoranda that I myself have made?—I do not think I have.
685. You have not? I think not.
686. Where did you get this book from? Sands & Kenny's.
687. When did you buy it? I do not know whether it was—I think it was the end of last year.
688. Will you swear you did not buy it this year? I might have bought it on the first or second of the year.
689. Might you have bought it on the second of the year? I might.
690. Did you get a bill for it? No; but I will tell you who gave it me. I got it from Mr. Harris, who is, I believe, the manager of the printing department of Sands & Kenny; he got it and brought it home to the house where I stayed, and where he also resided.
691. Are you able to swear that you had this in your possession in the first week in January? I believe so.
692. Can you undertake to say so? No, I would not swear that I did.
693. Is it possible that you were not in possession of this book until six or seven days after some of the entries bear date in it? I do not know.
694. Is it a possible case? It is possible that I got it the first week in January.
695. Is it possible that you got it in the middle of January? No; I got the book at the first of the year, but I cannot tell you exactly the day; there may have been some of the entries made back, to bring the book up to the first of the year—such may be the case; I do not know that it is so.
696. I see there are entries here on the 1st January—look at that entry on the 9th January, and tell me if you had that book in your possession at the date that was made? (The witness referred to the book.) I believe so.
697. Will you undertake to say you had? No, because my memory does not carry me back so far.
698. Is your memory so bad, that you cannot tell whether you got a diary in which entries are made on the 1st January, before the date on which those entries purport to have been made? I may have had the diary before the 1st January. I may have had the diary by me, and not have made the entries at the time; that was not the course I pursued—I used to enter them up.
699. Had you any manuscript entries of any kind in the early part of January that you would have had recourse to, to copy into this book? Yes, I might have had.
700. Just look at your first folio, where the first entry is made, 1st January:—"Remained in the office, writing, all the morning; sent the men to Randwick races, and by water to Hunter's Hill regatta."—That was not a very important thing to enter at all if you were making a retrospective review? I do not know; I am in the habit at the office of giving the men their duties to perform for the day, and I am likewise in the habit of putting down on slips the particulars of the duties.
701. "Strolled about the city during the afternoon"—Now I can imagine a man who made a most minute diary on the day the thing took place, putting that down, but I cannot imagine one making such an entry nine days afterwards? I do not know that it was nine days afterwards.
702. Will you undertake to say it was not? No.
703. Is your memory of such a class, that with the book in your hand you cannot say whether you made that entry on the day on which it bears date, or whether you made it nine or ten days afterwards? I am satisfied in my own mind—yes.
704. Will you undertake to say — ? I will not undertake to swear, but I believe I did not.
705. Your memory is not sufficiently clear to enable you to say whether such an insignificant thing as that was entered on the day when it purports to have been made? The fact of its being so insignificant a matter to record may account for my not remembering it; perhaps if it were more important I should do so.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

20 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison. 20 Nov., 1862.
706. By the Chairman: It looks exceedingly as if the entry were made to impress the reader with the fact that the diary was made at the time? I had no idea that it would ever be out of my hand.
707. By Mr. Piddington: You have admitted that you have made entries in that diary of a retrospective character? Yes; there may have been times when I have not made entries in it for two or three days.
708. Can you charge your memory whether that is one of the entries you describe? No, I cannot.
709. By the Chairman: Do you limit the time to three days? No.
710. What limit do you place upon these retrospective entries—was it a month? No.
711. Are you sure that a month has not intervened between any of these entries? Yes.
712. You are perfectly sure of that? Yes.
713. In fact you would swear that? Yes.
714. By Mr. Johnson: Did you ever make any entries in this book at a time so distant that you might have mistaken the day of the occurrence? I think not.
715. I suppose you have a very distinct memory of the transactions of the Bentley case? I have, because I was very interested in it.
716. You remember when you were informed of the assault upon Mrs. Bentley, at Newtown? Yes.
717. That was the Friday in Easter week? Yes.
718. Do you remember that the day following that, a letter came according to your expectation that it would come, to corroborate the fact of the assault having taken place? I do not know whether it was the following day—a letter did come—I do not know whether it was the following day or not.
719. You had a conversation on the night of the assault, had you not? With whom?
720. With Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
721. Allow me—I will read an entry to you. On Saturday, 26th April, you say—“As I expected, from the tenor of our conversation last night, Bentley called at the office and shewed me a letter”—Just look at that (handing the diary to the witness)—what night do you refer to when you say “from the tenor of our conversation last night”? The night previous, I believe.
722. What do you mean by “believe”—have you any doubt? So it states.
723. You say you have a good memory of the Bentley case, and that when you heard of the assault you had a conversation that night? Yes, considerable.
724. And you enter in that book on the next day—“As I expected, from the tenor of our conversation last night”—Now do you refer to the Friday night as the night of the conversation? Yes.
725. Do you refer to the following day as the day when you saw the letter? I do not know. As I made this entry on the Saturday night —
726. I do not ask you when you made the entry, but I ask you, do you refer to the conversation on the night of the assault, and to the letter on the following day—why do you hesitate? I do not understand you.
727. I will see if I can make it plainer—do you refer in that entry to these two facts—that you had a conversation which excited your suspicion on Friday, which was verified by seeing a letter you expected on Saturday? Yes.
728. You do—is that a truth? Yes.
729. Why is that hesitation? I do not understand you clearly now.
730. You must be a stupider man than you ought to be for your office? I wish to understand your question fully before I answer it, that I may answer it correctly.
731. The conversation here spoken of in the entry of Saturday—did it take place on the night previous to Saturday? Yes.
732. Then it follows, from that, that you saw the letter you expected would be sent on the following day—the Saturday? I do not know whether it was the Saturday. I saw the letter—Mr. Bentley brought the letter.
733. Read the entry—is that a true entry? The whole of it is true.
734. By the Chairman: Is that identical entry true? Yes, it is true—I believe it is true.
735. By Mr. Wilson: Will you explain what you mean by “on the following day”? —
736. By Mr. Morris: I will point out to you, to shew that the entry must be right, that in the letter reference is made to the next Tuesday—this being Saturday—so that it must evidently have been the day you saw the letter—it could not have been some other letter received closer to Tuesday.
737. By the Chairman: I think it an extraordinary thing you cannot answer the question—(the witness referred to the diary)—do you assert that to be true? Yes.
738. As it appears there? Yes.
739. By Mr. Wilson: Will you explain what you mean by “the following day”—in your own words —
740. By the Chairman: Explain the entry in your own way? “The following day.” I have not got to what it says about the following day.
741. I do not think the words occur there? That is why I did not answer the question before; I was looking for those words.
742. By Mr. Johnson: It is a misapprehension of Dr. Wilson’s—the words “following day” do not occur, but it comes to the same thing. Are the entries that are contained in these two pages—Friday, 25th, and Saturday, 26th—the narrative of the occurrences therein written, true? They are true, but whether the entry was made as on Saturday, was written on Saturday, or on Sunday the following day, I do not know.
743. Was it written either on Saturday or Sunday? I believe so; I cannot say whether

I might have written it in the middle of the night—it was on or about that time, but whether it was on the day itself I cannot say.

744. How many days have you a doubt about—you said just now it was written either on Saturday or Sunday—is that true? At that time I was very particular, and entered in my diary when the circumstances occurred whenever I had opportunity.

745. Is it true, as you said just now, that if you did not write it on Saturday you did on Sunday? Probably on Saturday—it might have been on Monday.

746. By the Chairman: That is not an answer—was it Saturday or Sunday? I cannot say.

747. You cannot say whether it was on either? It might have been on the Saturday, or it might have been on the Monday.

748. By Mr. Johnson: Might it have been later than Monday? No.

749. Is this a positive statement? No, I used to enter it up when I had time, and I always had time within three days.

750. Then your statement is, that this was written either on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday, when the facts were clearly within your own recollection? Yes.

751. Whether it was entered on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday, would make no difference as to your knowledge of the truth of that statement itself? No.

752. Is it true, as entered in that journal, that on the Friday you expected such a letter as you say came on Saturday would come? I do not recollect now if I expected it on the Friday; as the entry is there so it was; I cannot recollect now.

753. The entry is—“As I expected, from the tenor of our conversation last night, Bentley called at the office, and shewed me a letter which Mrs. B. had received this day, “acknowledging the assault”? Yes.

754. Now you say your memory was perfectly clear—at all events when you made the entry—you could not be mistaken as to the truth of the entry? There might be a mistake.

755. Of what kind? There might be an error in it with regard to some remark, or some particular fact that had occurred, but with regard to the truth of the statement as therein set down, I will swear to it.

756. Will you swear that on the day following the description to you of the assault, this letter was shewn to you? I will not swear it, because I do not recollect.

757. Is that the book (handing the diary to witness)—It states here it was on the day following? I believe it was on the day following.

758. Is your journal to be relied upon to that extent, seeing that the statement is there—can you say that on the day following, the letter was shewn? I believe so.

759. Have you no greater confidence than that in your diary—look at the terms of it—“from the tenor of our conversation last night”—a letter is brought to me this day? I think I can recollect the conversation that took place.

760. Do you recollect seeing the letter? I was more interested in the facts that night than I had been before.

761. In the fact of the assault? In the case than I had been before.

762. Then, of course, that would be an additional reason why you should have a clear recollection whether you expected seeing the letter on the following day? I might not have recalled the circumstance that I expected any letter would come until it was brought back to my memory by the letter coming.

763. What do you mean by this entry—“As I expected, from the tenor of our conversation last night, Bentley called at the office and shewed me a letter which Mrs. B. had received this day”—Now, whenever you wrote that, did you not mean the night before the time you were writing? No, I might not; because, if you will allow me, I will explain. If that were written on the Sunday, it would not mean the night before I made the entry—it alluded to the conversation on the Friday night, and not to the night before I made the entry, because that would be the Saturday night.

764. You must, in making this entry, have meant Friday night, whenever you wrote it? Yes.

765. And then, the day you received the letter was the day following that night—why do you hesitate? That I received the letter?

766. By Mr. Piddington: That Mr. Bentley shewed the letter you expected to see? That would be on the Saturday.

767. By Mr. Johnson: I want to know is it true? Yes.

768. Then it is true that he shewed you the letter on Saturday—why do you hesitate? I am endeavouring to recollect under what circumstances Mr. Bentley shewed me the letter.

769. Here is the diary—do you intend to throw discredit upon the entry of yourself? I do not.

770. How is it you have so much hesitation in saying whether these two circumstances you have entered here—the circumstance of your being informed of the assault on the Friday, and the circumstance that, on Saturday, you were shewed the letter that, from the conversation, you expected would be shewed to you—why do you hesitate to say that that is a true statement of what took place? Because I would like to satisfy myself from memory whether these entries were made on the day, or the day following, or the day after, or whether any thing intervened that prevented my writing.

771. By Mr. Piddington: Whether they were entered at the time or not, these entries refer to the correct dates, whenever you entered them? Yes.

772. Then that cannot affect your statement? No; but I was thinking whether it was possible I might have made a mistake.

773. By Mr. Johnson: With respect to what? With respect to the date when Mr. Bentley shewed me the letter.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
20 Nov., 1862.
774. By Mr. Morris : There is a passage in this diary which says—"As I expected, from the tenor of our conversation last night, Bentley called at the office and shewed me a letter which Mrs. B. had received this day, acknowledging the assault"—which is underlined—"stating, at the same time, she would never be able to identify him, and that he intended to be at the Philharmonic concert on Tuesday night next." Is it likely that, when you mentioned Tuesday night next, that could have been the day previous to the concert? I think not.
775. By Mr. Johnson : Have you the least doubt about the truth of that entry, that a letter was received "this day," that is, Saturday, whenever you wrote it? No.
776. The time of writing the entry is really immaterial? Yes.
777. Is it true that letter was shewn that day, April 26th? I believe so.
778. Is it possible it is not true? That a letter was shewn to me?
779. On that day? That a letter was shewn to me?
780. I shall have to ask you many similar questions, and I hope for the sake of the public time you will answer them more readily, or we shall be a month with you alone—wherever it was written you believe it was written on Saturday? I do not know. I cannot say whether it was written on Saturday or Sunday, but it was written before the Philharmonic concert.
781. Perhaps it was written on Tuesday? I used to enter up my diary —
782. Was it written before the Philharmonic concert—do not recede from that? Yes, I have every reason to believe it was.
783. By Mr. Piddington : Then it must have been written on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday? I have no doubt upon the subject.
784. By Mr. Johnson : When do you believe you made the entry? I cannot say positively even when I believe I made the entry.
785. Have you no belief on the subject? Yes, that I made it on the day there set down, or within two days afterwards.
786. I want to know is it your belief that you made it on the Monday—do you believe you made it on the Monday? I do not know.
787. I do not ask what you know—I ask now what you believe? I have no recollection on what day it was made; I believe it was made within two days.
788. Why do you say it was within Monday? From memory, and I recollect that about this time I used to be very particular in entering up the facts of the case at every opportunity I had, for my own information.
789. Just look at your Monday's entry, and tell me whether that entry itself was written on the same day that the Saturday's entry was written (handing the diary to the witness)? It looks as if this entry were not made at the same time. Part of this entry may have been made on Monday night and part on Tuesday morning. I may have been interrupted when I was writing, and have been called away to attend to some other matter.
790. What I want to know is, whether the pages in your diary, comprising Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, were all written at the same time or not? No, I do not think they were.
791. Were you always two or three days in arrear in entering these things? I do not know that these entries were all made on Monday. I wrote on Monday afternoon what occurred in the early part of the day, but the latter part of the entry may have been made on the following morning or some part of the following day.
792. You think the Monday's entry was entered, the earlier portion of it, on the Monday, the latter portion of it on the following day? I think so, but cannot say positively that it was the case. This portion of the Monday's entry might have been made on Tuesday morning, the other in the afternoon.
793. You think they were all made on Monday and Tuesday, or Tuesday afternoon? Yes, I have every reason to believe so.
794. Was the Sunday's entry written on Monday? I cannot tell.
795. Look at the writing—do not you see some difference in the style of the writing, I mean in the colour of the ink or in the nature of the pen. It looks like it close to the end of one page, and the commencement of the other—does it not strike you, as if you had finished and shut the book, and then at another time taken it up again and recommenced? The inks are of different colours, and the writing does not appear to have been written at the same time, but I do not think it was written at different times, though one might have been written in the morning, and the other in the afternoon or night, or perhaps the middle of the night.
796. Do you recollect, in your report which you laid before the Colonial Secretary, giving a statement as to your conversation with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley on the day of the assault, and following it by this statement—"On the strength of this belief I again saw Bentley, and on the same evening"—that is, the evening of the assault—"I made some indirect remarks as to the motives of the assault. I did so for the purpose of confirming my suspicions; and if correct, I knew Bentley would write a letter next day, probably detailing the particulars of the assault, for the purpose of confirming Mrs. Bentley's statement." Is that true? That is as true as the diary.
797. I have no doubt it is? I have taken the particulars of the report I furnished the Colonial Secretary from the diary.
798. I am not drawing a comparison between things which I consider are identical—but is it true? Is what true?
799. "I did this for the purpose of confirming my suspicions, and if correct, I knew Bentley would write a letter next day, probably detailing the particulars of the assault, for the purpose of confirming Mrs. Bentley's statement. The following afternoon Mr. Bentley waited upon the Inspector General with a letter confirmatory"—I ask is that statement true? I believe so.

800. Have you any doubt about it? No, such was the case, but I must at the same time remark that what is there written is taken from my diary. I referred to the book when I wrote it, and if there is an error in this, the same error will appear in my book. An error in one will be in the other—that is, if there is an error.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

801. Do you remember the conversation with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley about the assault? Yes.

20 Nov., 1862.

802. When you made the entry of the 25th April on that subject, were the facts fresh in your memory then? With regard to the facts of the assault—yes.

803. They were then supplied, in reference to that topic, in your report to the Colonial Secretary, by the entries in your journal? Yes.

804. Will you tell the Committee what Mrs. Bentley described particularly in reference to the man's ring? That he said to her, "You can look well at me, so that you will know me again, and you can give a description to Harrison, and tell him that I wear a shirt with 'foxes' heads on it, a gold ring with a cornelian heart, or a cornelian stone."

805. Was it the word "heart"? I do not know whether it was the word "heart," or "stone," or "anchor."

806. Or an anchor? Something cornelian.

807. We will go to those two words, "heart" and "anchor,"—you say you made your report to the Colonial Secretary from the entry in your journal? Yes.

808. Is that true? Yes.

809. You are sure of that? Yes.

810. Quite sure of that? Yes.

811. What was it Mrs. Bentley said—was it "heart" or "anchor"? I cannot tell at the present moment—I do not recollect.

812. Will you swear the word she used was not "anchor"? No, I will not; it was something remarkable in the ring; it was a cornelian something.

813. It was a gold ring with an anchor in cornelian? I think it was a cornelian heart.

814. Is it possible you described it to the Colonial Secretary as a cornelian anchor? I do not know how I described it at the time.

815. In your entry, from which you say you made that report, it is described as a heart, and in your report it is described as an anchor—will you swear you took one from the other? Yes, I will swear I took one from the other, but I may have made a mistake. Mrs. Bentley did describe it as a gold ring, with either a heart or an anchor, but I cannot remember now which it was she told me.

816. You have it written down here, at the time you say it was fresh in your memory—a gold ring with a cornelian heart? Even there I might have made a mistake.

817. You might have made it correct if you were writing from memory when you wrote this report to the Colonial Secretary, but you could not have made a mistake if you were copying from this diary? —

818. By Mr. Cowper: This report was not in your handwriting? No.

819. In whose was it? A cousin of mine.

820. By Mr. Johnson: Did you read it before you gave it to the Colonial Secretary? That I do not know.

821. You do not know whether you read over your own report to the Colonial Secretary before you gave it him? No; but it was hardly a report; it was written in a hurry, and was not signed, and —

822. Who wrote it? A cousin of mine.

823. What is his name? Ferdinand Ponder, book-keeper at Armitage's.

824. By Mr. Wilson: Has he any other employment? No.

825. Is he not in the employment of the police? No, and never was.

826. Did you never employ a person of the name of Ponder to assist you in the capacity of a detective of police? No.

827. How did it get into your diary that you engaged a person of that name on February 26th? I do not recollect that his name is mentioned at all in the diary.

828. You have an entry here—"In the evening I met J. Ponder, and explained to him the assistance I wished him to render me in detecting — and he promised to assist me in every way"? Very possibly, but not in the employment of the police.

829. You had been employing him to assist you in detecting? I do not know what the matter was—it might have been of a private nature. He is a cousin of mine, and may have assisted me, but he has never been in the employment of the police; it may have been a private matter.

830. It may have been a private matter? I mean a family matter.

831. Refer to your own diary of the 26th February? (The witness referred to the diary.) I do not know to what it alludes, but such is the case, such took place.

832. You state here that he has agreed to assist you in detecting —? Some matter.

833. Was he receiving pay for that? Never.

834. Did you consult the Inspector General of Police before you engaged Ponder to assist you in detecting? I never engaged him, and he has never been engaged. There are a large number of persons in the city who assist me, in some instances, I suppose, from friendship to myself, in others for the public good, and Mr. Ponder would assist me in this way, without remuneration.

835. I am not asking you how he was remunerated, or if he was remunerated in a pecuniary way, but in your diary I see an entry that Ponder assisted you in detecting? It might have been some private family matter.

836. By the Chairman: Would you not recollect it if it were some private family matter? I may recollect to what it alludes—in fact, I do now.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
20 Nov., 1862.
837. You mention that you walked home with him, and explained your views more fully? I recollect now to what it alludes—at least I believe so.
838. Was it a family matter? I am not prepared to state.
839. By Mr. Wilson: Do you ever engage other persons, or do other persons assist you in detecting offenders? Yes, frequently.
840. Do you consult the Inspector General of Police before you enter into any agreement? I never enter into any agreement.
841. Do you mention to him the names of the parties you wish to assist you? No, because I do not wish to bring their names before the Inspector General of Police; they get no remuneration, but do it, I suppose, out of friendship to myself.
842. Are not the detectives in the habit of engaging persons in assisting to detect crime, whose names do not appear before the public? Not to my knowledge.
843. I will give an instance in point: I suppose you are aware that some time ago a man of the name of Grant was employed by one of the detectives in Cockerell's case? I was not aware; I was not here at the time.
844. Have you heard of it? I have seen Cockerell's pamphlet, and heard remarks made on it, but I was not aware that Grant was employed on it, that he was ever in the police force, or ever received pay.
845. I believe it has not been contradicted that he did receive pay? I am not aware of it.
846. Did you ever know of any similar case of any person receiving pay from the Government, or from individual members of the police, for assisting in the detection of crime? Yes, I have myself given parties pay for information.
847. Did the Government refund that money or pay out of pocket? No, they have not done so.
848. Did you ever apply for it? No, in no instance have I applied for a shilling.
849. Are you in the habit of consulting the Inspector General of Police before you engage parties? I do not engage parties. Parties come to me and say, "I am in possession of such and such information, regarding such an offender, or such parties; I am hard up—I want money; you must make it worth my while, and I will let you have it; if not, I shall keep my information to myself." I would not let a criminal escape for a few shillings, pound, or even five pounds, and of the money I have so paid I have never had a shilling back.
850. Do you not think it hard that you should be called upon to pay that money? I have often thought so, but I have never made any application for it; my salary is sufficient for my wants.
851. Are there no persons employed but detectives without the knowledge of the Inspector General of Police? I cannot answer for my men, I can only answer for myself; I am not aware that such is the case or has been the case.
852. How much do you pay in the course of a year for information such as you have mentioned to us? Do you mean taking one year with another?
853. Give us the average of what it will cost in the year? I dare say my expenses, where I do not get back the money I expend, would amount, one year with another, to £100.
854. I am asking for this particular expenditure? You mean paying for public information?
855. Yes? Some months it will be 5s., 10s., £1, or even £5; but, taking the year round, I could not say how much.
856. By Mr. Piddington: Is that entry referring to the name of Ponder in your diary connected in any way with the Bentley inquiry—you say you recollect what it refers to? Yes, some part of it; yes, I believe so.
857. By the Chairman: Ponder has been employed in the Bentley case? No.
858. He gave assistance in the Bentley case? No, I do not say that.
859. What do you say? I refer to the entry in the diary; there is a conversation there that took place with Ponder. I believe some conversation that passed between us regarded the Bentley case, but I would not be positive such is the case.
860. By Mr. Cowper: Who is the Tom Metcalf mentioned about some robbery business? He was a clerk at Chisholm's; he is in a bank at Albury now.
861. By Mr. Piddington: Do you recollect, when you consulted Ponder on February 26th, whether you referred to the Bentley case, or asked him to assist you in the detection of the mystery? No, I cannot say whether such was the case.
862. I thought you stated just now that you distinctly recollect the subject? Yes, I believe the Bentley case was the subject of conversation at this same time, but in what way I cannot say.
863. Do you recollect any other subject that connected itself with your conversation with Ponder? Yes.
864. That subject is not connected with the Bentley case? No.
865. Though you can recollect one branch of the conversation, you cannot recollect what was said in connection with the Bentley case? I believe at this time we had some conversation about the Bentley case, but what it was I cannot say.
866. Then your memory serves you with respect to one topic of conversation, but it does not serve you with respect to the other? It does serve me with respect to both, but I do not know to what extent it went with regard to the Bentley case.
867. Or whether there was any definite application to Ponder for his assistance, with regard to that particular case? I might have referred to some assistance that I might require—to something I might ask him to do for me in the case.
868. By the Chairman: Did you ever ask him to do that something afterwards? No.
869. By Mr. Johnson: Whom do you say you bought that diary from? Sands & Kenny.
870. You mentioned some name at the head of the printing department? Mr. Harris.
871. When do you say you bought this? It might have been the last week in December or the first week in January.

872. Did you pay for it? I did.
873. How much? I really forget.
874. Have you bought more than one Lett's diary since the middle of last December? I have not; I think that is the only one I have bought in my life.
875. Who did you pay? I got some other books at the same time; I paid Mr. Harris.
876. By Mr. Piddington: You did not buy the books at Sands and Kenny's? No; Harris brought them. I think I wanted a diary, and a volume of Bulwer, and he brought them home for me. I have an account at Sands and Kenny's, and whether I paid for them in that account, or whether I paid Harris when he brought them home, I cannot say.
877. By the Chairman: Did you not say before that they were put down to Harris's account? I cannot say whether they were put down to Harris's account, or to mine.
878. By Mr. Piddington: You said Harris was in the employ of Sands and Kenny? Yes.
879. Are you in the habit of buying goods from persons in the employ of storekeepers, and not from the parties themselves? Under the circumstances of Harris and myself staying in the house together, and his having been eight years in the employ of Sands and Kenny, I would say to him, "I want so-and-so—will you get it for me?" and he has got it and brought it to me, and I may have paid the money to Sands and Kenny, or I may have paid him for it.
880. You say you have an account with Sands and Kenny? A trifling account.
881. How is it that having an account with them, you buy goods of their shopmen? I explain that staying in the same house I may have asked him to get me what I wanted. I do not say this occurred more than once; it may have occurred on two different occasions. I may have said, "I want so-and-so—will you get it for me?" and he has said, "I will get it for you to-morrow." That would save me calling.
882. Does Harris bring you an account for the goods when he delivered them to you? There are no goods in question.
883. It is a book? Yes.
884. Did Mr. Harris bring you an account—an invoice—of the book? I do not recollect whether he did.
885. You buy books without an invoice from a person in the employment of another person, and yet at the same time you have an account with the person who employs him? No, I do not buy books, nor did I buy books in that way; I asked Harris to bring me the book from Sands and Kenny, which he did. Whether I gave him the money when he brought it, or whether it was put down to my account, I cannot say.
886. By Mr. Johnson: Have you received an account from Sands and Kenny this year at all? That I do not know. I know I do not owe them anything, but I cannot say whether ———
887. Do you keep the accounts that are delivered to you? I do. The amount was only trifling; it would not be more than 25s. at the most.
888. Were you engaged in the Bentley inquiry about the 26th February? I think so. I do not know whether that was about the date when I was engaged in it.
889. Were you engaged in it until after the 17th March—I mean upon the second occasion that you were engaged? I do not know whether it was the 17th March. I took the matter in hand upon my return from Raymond Terrace.
890. Was not that considerably later than the 17th March? I do not know the date; the date is there. I believe it to have been in March.
891. You said Ponder made these extracts which have been laid before the Committee? Yes.
892. Did he extract them from the journal himself? He did not; he wrote them as I read the extracts from the journal; as I read it so he wrote it. There may be several remarks in the report that—you mean the extracts from the journal.
893. That is what I said? I thought you meant the report—that is my mistake. No, Ponder did not write the extracts from the journal; the extracts from the journal were written by a clerk in the Detective Office.
894. These extracts from the journal were made by a clerk in Captain M'Lerie's office? Yes.
895. Did he make them from the journal itself? He did not; he made them from the copy I gave him.
896. Did he see the journal? He did not.
897. I will go back to the report—you say that Ponder wrote the document you gave to the Colonial Secretary? Yes.
898. Did he copy it from the journal? He did not; there were matters in it I did not wish even to come to his knowledge. I took that portion of the journal which related to the case, and as I dictated it to him so he wrote it.
899. Then this report was made up in this way: You had the journal in your hand, and you dictated from the journal as you thought fit, and then he copied what you said—that is the way that was done? Yes.
900. Did he have any opportunity of inspecting the journal himself? He did not.
901. Or of seeing the book? He might have seen it in my hand. No one else saw it till it was brought here; I always kept it under lock and key, and never shewed it to any one.
902. Can you account for the circumstance that there are no entries at all in this journal on the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th of January—can you account for that circumstance? No; I do not recollect the reason.
903. Although there are these very immaterial entries on the 1st? I do not know. I might have been away out of town for some days, or I might have been engaged in the suburbs. I might not have had time. I might not have made notes, and my memory might have failed me on those days, and consequently I left it blank. I do not know why I did not make entries on those days.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
20 Nov., 1862.
904. I am not asking you possibilities, but can you from recollection state how it is that there are no entries in this journal from the 2nd to the 8th of January inclusive? I cannot.
905. Nor why these three apparently very immaterial matters are entered on the 1st? I cannot.
906. January 11, 12, and 13, are all in blank—can you account for that? I cannot.
907. You say you did not entrust this book to Mr. Ponder? I did not.
908. Or any other person? No.
909. Have you had any conversation with Captain M'Lerie on the subject of this case since he was examined here? The case has been mentioned—I have only seen Captain M'Lerie twice since. I have been very busy up at the Sessions.
910. Have you had any conversation about what took place while he was before the Committee? No, not any particular conversation.
911. Did he say anything about your journal—did he tell you it was left here? Yes.
912. What did he tell you about that? He told me he had given my journal in to be used for reference to compare the extracts from it with it. I was annoyed that the journal had not been brought back. I look upon it as a private one. I had no idea it would be brought here for that purpose, but that it would be simply used as a reference. Captain M'Lerie informed me that it was not before the House, and that I could get it back again.
913. Captain M'Lerie is not very favourable to this inquiry I believe? I never heard him express any strong opinion either one way or the other.
914. Did you not hear him express himself to this effect: That he was very glad that Mr. Dalgleish's motion had failed? Very possibly he did.
915. Do you recollect such a thing? Yes, I believe he did.
916. Tell what took place between you and him? I cannot recollect the conversation that took place. I only see Captain M'Lerie for a few minutes in the day. The matter may have been spoken of and dropped again. I cannot repeat all the conversations that took place with the Inspector General of Police; they are not of a private nature.
917. Do you remember making an entry in your journal about it? I may have done so.
918. Do you recollect making it? I do not.
919. I will enlighten you. On the 28th October did you see Captain M'Lerie? That I do not know.
920. Did you see him after Mr. Dalgleish's motion lapsed by the Assembly being counted out? I see him every day—twice a day or three times a day.
921. Do you recollect conversing with him on the subject? I do not recollect.
922. I will read this to you:—"Dalgleish's motion came on in the House to-night for a Select Committee to inquire into the Bentley case, and no doubt to his great disgust there was no house, as there were not sufficient members present to form a quorum. This was done on purpose, and M'Lerie was in great glee when he informed me of the fact." He might not have expressed himself so; it might have been from his manner; he might have been in great glee about something; he might have been in a good humour, laughing at the time.
923. That is what you mean—that he informed you of the fact, and was in an excessive state of good humour? I do not mean even that.
924. Don't you mean that he expressed himself very much delighted and almost elated by the circumstance that this inquiry was likely not to be granted? I really do not recollect what took place.
925. By Mr. Wilson: Will you tell us how you know this count out was done on purpose? I have been so informed by some of the Members of the House.
926. By the Chairman: Some of the Members of the House are in constant communication with you? I see some generally every evening.
927. Will you tell me where you were when that particular Member of the House told you your diary was being hawked about town? I was in the town—not in the House—in the street.
928. Where were you? In the neighbourhood of King and Pitt-street.
929. You were not in the House? I was not.
930. You still decline to mention the name of the Member? I do not think I would be justified in doing so, as I was told it in confidence.
931. By Mr. Johnson: Look at your entry of the 4th April, and tell me if that entry was made on the day it bears date? I do not know. I cannot give you any further particulars with respect to these entries than I have done. I know lately I have been so busy that in some instances with regard to these entries, I have not entered it up for a fortnight or three weeks; but I have kept the particulars of the occurrences of the day by making notes in the evenings, and have entered them in the diary when I have had time. I am speaking of the last two months or so; but at this time, in connection with the Bentley case, I was most particular, and entered it at the moment, if I had time.
932. Do you mean that statement, that some of the entries have not been made for a fortnight or three weeks after the occurrences, to apply to any of the Bentley entries? No, lately; I am speaking of those within the last two months.
933. About that entry of the 4th April—tell me if the entry itself is true? Yes, the entry is true.
934. Did that letter contain threats? I cannot say.
935. You say so there? I think I have a right to explain with regard to some of these letters. I only got the contents of these letters from Mr. Bentley reading them for me. The letters were so written that I could not read them; he read them, and that very clearly. He used to read them, and from his reading I knew the contents; I could not say whether they were so.

936. You say the letter contained threats—now read a little further down—you say “The letter was addressed to the house in Elizabeth-street, and had a 2d. stamp on, evidently intended to be posted in the first instance.” Is that true? Yes; so I recollect without referring to the diary, if that was the date.
937. Now, Sir, is that the letter (handing letter, marked K)? I do not know.
938. Will you swear it is not—you had better look at it? No.
939. That is not the letter? No, it was a threatening letter. What the threats were, or their purport— That is not the letter I there allude to.
940. Will you swear that is not the letter Mr. Bentley shewed you that was left upon the window-sill of the staircase? He may have shewn that letter as having been found on the window-sill of the staircase, but that is not the letter I here allude to that was found in the house.
941. What letter do you allude to? A letter containing threats. That is not the letter.
942. You say, on Mr. Bentley going to look, he found the letter upon the window-sill? So he informed me.
943. Is not that the letter he shewed to you as the one he found? No.
944. That you will declare? He may have shewn this as having been found there, but that is not the letter that he told me he had found on the window-sill, which letter contained threats.
945. Is that the letter—the letter you have now read—the one I produced does not contain threats? This is not in the same handwriting—the handwriting is of a different character—I recollect the particulars of that letter.
946. Tell me what you recollect particularly of that letter? I have only read this part—(referring to the letter) I have not read the other. If my memory does not—
947. Excuse my stopping you one moment. You say you recollect the circumstances of that letter—tell me what circumstances you do recollect? I recollect a letter was received; purporting to come from a party who was willing to give Bentley information if he kept the appointment; and I had some conversation with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley about the propriety of doing so; at the same time I said I looked upon it as another ruse, and did not believe in his letter. I believed so.
948. You believed so—had you any doubt? I have had many doubts about this matter—you will not say that is the letter yourself.
949. Will you find the entry in your journal relating to that circumstance? I do not know that there is any entry. There is the journal; it is but a small one, and if I mentioned every circumstance it would not contain all. I had other matters besides the Bentley case—I did not take this for that case in particular.
950. Then although you made an entry on the 4th April about the letter said to have been found on the window-sill, you say you recollect that the letter I have produced is a distinct and different letter, and the conversation about it—? The conversation about the letter making the appointment.
951. About that letter (Letter marked K)? I believe the letter was similar in purport to this, but I cannot say whether that is the letter or not.
952. About what period do you say that letter was shewn to you? I cannot say. It was all on or about the same time, but I cannot recollect.
953. Will you declare that the letter that was found on the window-sill, had a stamp upon it? From memory I cannot say—so it is stated—what is there I believe to be true.
954. Will you undertake to say that is not a false statement? It is not a false statement—but whether I saw the envelope of the letter with the stamp, or whether it was Mr. Bentley who informed me of the circumstance, I cannot say. I believed in Mr. Bentley fully at the time. I believed in everything he said.
955. Do you mean to tell the Committee that you entered this as having heard it from him, or that you entered it as a fact that you observed yourself? I believe I observed it myself, but I cannot say for certain whether that was the case.
956. How was it you happened to be at the Bentleys on the 4th April? I do not know.
957. Did Mr. Boulanger fetch you? I do not know; he might have done. Mr. Bentley fetched me himself.
958. Was he there when this letter was shewn to you? That I cannot say.
959. Have you read the depositions of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, and their servants? I have.
960. Do you observe in that deposition the letter which you say they shewed you as found on the window-sill? I do not recollect anything about any letter in particular in the deposition. I ran through the deposition, and I find the deposition in the main, correct. There was no part of the deposition that I know myself to be false, excepting with regard to searching the roof of the house, and that with an aboriginal tracker. That is the only mistake I found in it. It was the morning after the parties had said they had been concealed in the roof. Mr. Bentley said I went and searched the loft and roof with a native tracker. I had one detective with me; he was a big Scotchman.
961. Is this what you refer to—the 171st paragraph: “On the next morning (Wednesday, the 23rd day of April last) Mr. Harrison, according to his promise, came to our house with an aboriginal native tracker, and they both went up into the loft together, but I heard nothing of the result of their inquiries. Mr. Bentley was not at home at the time.” Is that the only part of the deposition which you say is incorrect? That is as far as my own knowledge of it goes.
962. Are not the facts stated in this deposition—leaving that paragraph out of the question—as far as you know, stated with truthfulness? Yes, as far as I know. Those matters that I do know about, are stated there as they were stated to me by Mr. Bentley about the time they

- Sub-Inspector they occurred. I do not know whether it was on the same dates. In the depositions, as far as I know, from beginning to end, there is nothing I can say is incorrect, except this about the aboriginal tracker.
- C. E. Harrison.
- 20 Nov., 1862.
963. You brought a big Scotchman on that occasion who had not been before? Yes; I think he was well known. Mr. Bentley knows him well enough.
964. What is his name? Clark.
965. Did you see Mrs. Bentley upon the occasion of your taking Clark to the roof? From memory I cannot say whether I saw Mr. or Mrs. Bentley.
966. Or neither perhaps? Yes.
967. Was Mrs. Bentley giving a lesson at the time? I do not recollect; she might have been.
968. When were you first engaged in the Bentley matter at all? At the latter end of last year, when Mr. Hanson first spoke to me about it.
969. It was put in your hands by Mr. Hanson? By Mr. Hanson and Mr. Bentley. I saw Mr. Bentley at Mr. Hanson's house.
970. Had you not seen Mr. Hanson before you saw Mr. Bentley? Yes, I must have done; it was that took me to his house about the matter. I was there to see Mr. Bentley. I got a note, I think, from Mr. Black, through Mr. Ronald, that Mr. Black wished to see me about some anonymous letters; and I then got some anonymous letters from Mr. Hanson. I went to the Empire Office, and he made an arrangement with me to come to his house.
971. By Mr. Cowper: What Mr. Black was this? Of Molison and Black.
972. By Mr. Johnson: A member of the Philharmonic Committee? Yes.
973. Did you not upon that first occasion of meeting Mr. Hanson and Mr. Bentley, express your opinion that it was not the work of an Englishman? I did. So I believed as the facts then stood; so I believed for a long time afterwards.
974. Did you not lead them to suppose you suspected some person in particular? I could not well do otherwise from the facts laid before me; they pointed only at one man.
975. I do not ask you that—I ask whether you did or did not? Yes.
976. You made some unsuccessful inquiries on the subject of the investigation? Yes, I did for about a month, I think.
977. You took some of these anonymous letters into your possession—did you not? Yes, two or three—three, I think—I do not recollect how many.
978. Had you more than one interview with Mr. Bentley at that time? Yes, I think so; I think I saw Mr. Bentley again.
979. When and where? I do not recollect. Not at his house, but at Mr. Hanson's house, or in the street. I am not certain that I did.
980. How long do you say the matter was in your hands at that time? I do not recollect—I think about a month or two. I think I was away from town during a week or more of the time.
981. What steps did you take during that month, as you say I think that it was about that portion of the time that you had no diary? I do not recollect what steps I took.
982. You do not recollect what steps you took? No; there was nothing definite in the case then. I had other matters to attend to. Mr. Hanson said this was of a strictly private nature. I do not recollect what steps I took in the matter. I know whatever steps I took ended in nothing, and so I informed Mr. Hanson.
983. Do you mean to say you cannot tell what steps you did take? I do not recollect.
984. Not any steps? I cannot recollect. One of the steps I believe I took was to put Mr. Cutolo under surveillance.
985. Did you do so? I believe I did.
986. Who did you employ for that purpose? I do not remember. The matter went out of my hands at that time. I do not recollect what steps I took.
987. Not of any kind? No; out of the great number of steps I do not remember what steps I took in particular.
988. I do not say what steps in particular—tell me one step. Did you put Mr. Montagu under surveillance? At that time, no. I do not think Mr. Montagu's name had been mentioned at that time.
989. You can tell nothing more of what you did during what you say was a month? I may be mistaken. I do not say it was a month; it might have been ten days. I do not recollect how long I had the letters in my possession.
990. Did not Mr. Hanson reproach you with not doing your duty in the matter? He did.
991. What did you say to him? I was very near doing something to him when he made that remark. I said nothing, and walked away.
992. Although he reproached you with doing nothing, you cannot say what you did? He did not reproach me with doing nothing.
993. You said he did? That was not what he said. Mr. Hanson said, "Well, have you been successful in finding out these parties?" I said, "No, I have not been successful yet; this is a matter of time, it cannot be found out so soon as you expect." Mr. Hanson said, "You are a friend of Cutolo's, and you have thrown us over the bridge; if I had sent you a cheque for £50 at the time I sent that letter, this matter would have been unravelled long before this, but now we will put it into other hands; there are other parties taking an interest in it, and we shall find it out without your assistance." I then washed my hands of it until Mr. Boulanger and Mr. Bentley subsequently came to the Inspector General.
994. Mr. Hanson was very warm in expressing his suspicions against Signor Cutolo? I do not know that he expressed himself warmer than Mr. Bentley on the subject, for I had no conversation with Mr. Hanson during the time I had the letters and was making inquiries. It was from the conversation I had with Mr. Bentley and Mr. Hanson, when the matter was placed placed in my hands, that I acted. The facts stated then went one way. I took steps then on the strength of the information I received, and on the strength of these facts in particular. Mr. Hanson and I had no conversation on the matter, nor have we had since, when I undertook the matter from Mr. Boulanger.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

20 Nov., 1862.

995. You had no conversation with him? During the time I undertook the matter I had no conversation with Mr. Hanson on the subject. He once or twice stopped me and asked me how did the case go on, with a sneer and a laugh, and I made him some answer.

996. You are not able to say whether Mr. Hanson warmly entered into the idea that Signor Cutolo was the guilty party? I was informed so by Mr. Bentley; from my own knowledge I do not know it.

997. Did you hear anything from Mr. Bentley, or Mr. Hanson, about suspicion having at first fallen upon another individual? No, I did not. Signor Cutolo, Mr. Montagu, and Mr. San Juste were the persons who were pointed out to me as the authors.

998. Were you asked to get the handwriting of all the professional people? No, but I said I would get it, and I did.

999. You were not asked? It may have been a subject of conversation with regard to getting it; I know I expressed my intention of doing so. All the steps I took in the matter, up to a certain time, Mr. Bentley was aware of, and the men I employed in it; I kept nothing from him.

1000. Was it not in November, 1861, that the case was first put into your hands? I think it was November; I will not be positive.

1001. Did Mr. Hanson and Mr. Bentley give you certain particulars of the case which led you to believe that Cutolo was the man? Yes.

1002. What did they tell you? I really cannot recollect what they told me at that time.

1003. Can you recollect the substance? It was about some conversations that had taken place with Signor Cutolo, and about Cutolo being present when certain remarks were made, or when Mrs. Bentley was introduced to certain parties, and that those parties had received letters with regard to Mrs. Bentley, and that there was nobody there who could have done this unless it were Cutolo. There was always something pointing to Cutolo in the matter, all throughout. The small facts I do not recollect.

1004. Are they not correctly detailed in Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's deposition? I do not know.

1005. Are not the facts set out there in substance what they told you? I do not know.

1006. You read the deposition? Yes; still my head does not contain all that is contained in that deposition. Probably I did not take an interest in that part, but only in that which concerned myself particularly. It may be so.

1007. Do you know when Mr. Boulanger arrived in Sydney? I do not.

1008. You state in your report that he arrived just about the 18th March? So I was probably informed at the time; I do not know of my own knowledge.

1009. Who informed you? It might have been himself—it might have been Mr. Bentley who said Mr. Boulanger came at a certain time.

1010. Did he not come earlier than that? He might have done.

1011. You took charge of the case, did you not, upon the understanding that it was not to be divulged that you were engaged in it? No.

1012. You did not? There was an arrangement made by Mr. Bentley, Mr. Boulanger, and myself; after what had passed between Mr. Hanson and myself, I would not have Hanson to deal with in the matter any more, as he was too hot-headed to have anything to do with the case; I said that he would be impatient, and that I would not have anything to do with the case if he had, and that the fewer entrusted with the matter the greater the chance of success. Mr. Bentley agreed to this, as well as Mr. Boulanger. Mr. Aldis, Mr. Wrench, and Mr. Black, being frequent visitors at the house, and Mr. Bentley saying that he placed every confidence in them, I did not throw any obstacle in the way of their being made aware of the steps that were being taken.

1013. Did you not yourself come to the conclusion that Mr. Montagu had been assistant to whoever was the writer of the letters. Was it not your theory that Mr. Cutolo was the instigator, and Mr. Montagu the amanuensis? It was Mr. Bentley's theory, not mine.

1014. Did you ever adopt that theory? Yes, I believed it to be so; from the facts put in my possession by Mr. Bentley it could only be in that way.

1015. In your opinion? Yes, it could only be in that way: that Mr. Cutolo was the author and Mr. Montagu the amanuensis, and that Mr. San Juste was the one that used to go round and put the letters in the post.

1016. What steps did you take to detect these parties? I put them under surveillance night and day.

1017. All three of them? Yes; I do not know whether they were all under surveillance at one time. I cannot say they were all under surveillance at the same moment.

1018. Whom did you employ to keep them under surveillance? Detectives Downham, Clark, Saunderson, Camphin, and ———. At the same time, with regard to the inquiry and the watch I kept upon Signor Cutolo and Mr. Montagu (but on Signor Cutolo and Mr. San Juste in particular), I had the assistance of parties in the city moving in the same circle with themselves, who rendered me every assistance in the matter. I had the assistance of scores who took quite as great an interest in the matter as myself, and got particulars from them.

1019. When did you first put Signor Cutolo under surveillance? Directly I took the matter in hand.

1020. How long had you him under surveillance? Off and on, till I came to the conclusion that he was innocent.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
20 Nov., 1862.
1021. When did you come to that conclusion? Directly after the assault on Mrs. Bentley.
1022. What sort of surveillance did you put him under? I had him watched during the day, and had his house watched till he went to bed. He was watched again in the morning, and it was observed who went to his house and left it; and the same with Mr. Montagu.
1023. You said "off and on"—what do you mean by that? I had the matter in hand a long time, and from the time I first took it in hand, I had not Signor Cutolo under surveillance every hour up to the time that I felt convinced he was innocent, because I had not the means to do it.
1024. Then he was not under continual surveillance? He was always under surveillance, but not watched about.
1025. What is the difference between always under surveillance, and watched about? A very great difference.
1026. Will you explain? By watched about, I mean that a man is ordered to follow a person wherever he goes. A man can be under surveillance without that.
1027. In what way? If a man who is under surveillance, meets another in the street and speaks to him, the person to who he has spoken is perhaps followed, or kept under the eye of the police for a day or two.
1028. I want to know whether if you are not continually watching a man, he may not do something when he is not watched that it is important to you to know? You cannot tell that.
1029. By Mr. Piddington: This watching of Signor Cutolo was a sort of irregular surveillance? Yes.
1030. By the Chairman: Was Signor Cutolo so watched as that you knew every time he went to the Post Office? I cannot say so.
1031. Do you know whether he ever went to the Post Office during the time you had the matter in your hands? No.
1032. Do you know whether he ever posted any letter? I was not constantly watching him.
1033. Are you in a position to say that your men so watched him as to be able to say whether he ever posted any letters? I am not in a position to say so.
1034. Did you understand from them that they did so watch him that he could not have posted letters without their seeing him? I know I have every confidence in the men that I placed there—I trusted them.
1035. That is not the question? I cannot answer the question; I cannot say that I know Signor Cutolo never posted any letter.
1036. I ask you whether, from reports of your men, you know that Signor Cutolo was so continually watched, that he could not have posted any letters? No, I do not say so.
1037. That is not pretended? I might have posted letters; he might have done so for a long time before being caught; but for the surveillance placed over him, something must have been discovered, even if he had not been caught posting letters.
1038. What do you mean by saying that Mr. Montagu was so watched that he could not have posted letters without your men seeing him? I do not say that; but that seeing they were posted for the purpose of seeing whether he posted any letters, and not having seen him do so, I presume he had not.
1039. You have not been informed that Cutolo was watched to that extent? No.
1040. Or Montagu either? No; but they were closely watched, and the men knew what they were about, and their object in watching them. I never heard of their reporting that a letter was posted, because I had taken steps to provide for that if it had been done.
1041. Could they so watch them as to be certain of the fact? No, it is impossible.
1042. Are you aware that Mr. Montagu posts a great many letters? I am not aware that he does. Mr. Montagu or Signor Cutolo might have written the letters when they went to give lessons, and might have left them behind to be posted by some other person likewise in the conspiracy. There were so many said to be mixed up in the conspiracy that it was impossible to say.
1043. With all the surveillance you were able to give, they might have posted them themselves? They might have posted every letter, but I do not think they did.
1044. They were not watched so as to make that a matter of certainty? No, because I do not believe it could have been done; it might have been but I do not think it could have been done; I do not think it took place.
1045. Would there have been any great difficulty in watching Mr. Bentley from the time you suspected him to be the writer of the letter, to see if he posted any letter? Yes.
1046. What would have been the difficulty? Bentley was rather too quick for us; he used to jump into a cab and rattle off. I did try him two or three times but he went off in a cab, and I lost him, and there the matter ceased. I was not aware of the matter till it was too late; if my suspicion had been awakened sooner I should have had a better case.
1047. Did you put him under surveillance? I did, for three or four days.
1048. Will you give me the particular date of this? I cannot.
1049. Have you any entries in your journal with respect to this? I may have; I can give you the names of the officers who watched.
1050. Who were they? Sanderson and Camphin.
1051. What directions did you give them? To watch Bentley and see whether he posted any letters. This was on or about the time of the publication of the affair in the newspaper—just before that.
1052. I want you to fix the date when you put Bentley under surveillance? I cannot until I have the papers here.

1053. The 4th June—you did not put him under surveillance before that? It was on or about that time, or a little before. Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.

1054. Cannot you fix it nearer than that—was it before the 4th June you put him under surveillance? I do not know. 20 Nov., 1862.

1055. That was rather an important matter. I should think you would have entered that; you have put down that your suspicions of Bentley were confirmed the 26th April? At the time of the assault.

1056. That was the day after—how do you account for so important a matter as that being omitted in your diary? Because I do not recollect whether I gave a special order with regard to Bentley being put under surveillance. I think one of the officers told me he had been keeping his eye upon Bentley for some days previous, and I told him he had better continue to do so. I recollect passing by the Club, and saw the officer there waiting, who said Mr. Bentley had just run against him and did not know him. Whether I gave an order to the effect that he was to be put under surveillance I cannot say.

1057. What did you mean by saying that you would give the names of the officers who were employed for that purpose? I ought to have said who were engaged for that matter.

1058. You said who were employed? I should have said engaged.

1059. They took this upon themselves, of their own motion, without any instructions from you? I have told you —

1060. Did they take this duty upon themselves without instructions from you? To watch? They told me they had watched, and I told them to continue. I may have given some instructions with regard to it before, but I forget.

1061. Did they at any time take this office or duty of watching without your instructions? I cannot say.

1062. What do you mean by saying they told you they had done so, and you told them to continue it? I do not mean to say that they told me they had been watching Bentley positively, but I say I believe that was the case—they had an eye upon Bentley. They had suspicions of their own that I was not aware of at the time. All the steps they took in the matter on their own account I cannot — They may have taken steps they did not report.

1063. Did they tell you they had been watching Bentley? Yes; and I told them to continue it.

1064. Had they your instructions to do so at the time? I do not know. Do you mean did I give a special order to any man to watch Bentley?

1065. I did not say anything about a special order; I say when these men told you they had been watching Bentley, had you, prior to that, given them instructions? I do not think I did so. I think they gave me some information respecting Bentley, and I told them they might as well continue watching him.

1066. When was that, before or after the assault? After the assault; Bentley was aware of everything before the assault.

1067. When you came to the conclusion that Bentley, and no one else, was the author of the letters, did you then put him under surveillance? I did not. I put Mrs. Bentley under surveillance.

1068. Did you detect her in posting the letters? No; because she was not constantly watched. I put her under surveillance with regard to the statement she made of parties stopping her on the road, to see whether that was the case, not with regard to posting the letters, for I suspected Mr. Bentley of posting the letters.

1069. You having formed the opinion that Mr. Bentley posted the letters, did you put him under surveillance—that is a plain question? I did not put him under surveillance as I have there stated the particulars.

1070. Where? About that time—I do not recollect —

1071. Shew me where you have put it? (Handing the diary to the witness.) I do not know that it is there.

1072. What do you mean by “as there stated”? As you were questioning me, and as I have now stated.

1073. Did you say “now”—did you not say “there stated”? No, I did not. I was alluding to what you said.

1074. Did you use the word “there”? I may have used the word “there.”

1075. By Mr. Piddington: It was not correctly used—you mean to say that you should have used the words “as now stated”? Yes.

1076. Was that after the letter was published? It might have been on or about the time.

1077. The letter was not published till a month and eleven days after the assault—did you put him under surveillance before the beginning of June? The letter was published on the 4th of June. I did not put him under surveillance at that time. I thought of doing so, but I adopted another course; he was not under surveillance till this occasion, which lasted over two or three days. That was a considerable time after the assault took place at Newtown; it was just before I gave the case up altogether.

1078. It was five weeks after? I do not know.

1079. When did you give up the case altogether? When the letter appeared in the newspaper.

1080. You say you gave up the case as early as the time when the letter appeared in the paper? Or soon after. When I say I gave up the case, I mean I took no further steps in the matter to unravel it. I then looked upon the case as finished.

1081. Why did not you, when you say you came to the conclusion that the Bentleys themselves were the authors of this business—that Bentley himself wrote and posted the letters—why did you not take means to convict him? I did take certain steps in the matter.

- Sub-Inspector 1082. What steps did you take? A number of steps.
 C. E. 1083. Let us know them? I cannot give you the particulars of the steps I took.
 Harrison. 1084. Do you mean you can not—do you mean because you are prohibited? Not so. I followed a certain course in the matter which I thought would lead to the unravelling of it. It was a matter of time, and the case finished sooner than I expected; had it gone on longer I believe I should have had a better case.
 20 Nov., 1862. 1085. How did it finish? It finished when that letter appeared in the paper. The Colonial Secretary was informed that the police had been employed in the matter, and I stated then—it was the first time I had done so—who I believed the authors to be, and I looked upon the case as concluded, for I did not see any chance of success to induce me to pursue any further steps.
 1086. I wish you to inform the Committee what is your justification or excuse, when you came to the conclusion that Mr. Bentley and no other was the writer of the letter, and that he was the man who posted them, for not taking such steps as to detect him in posting the subsequent letters? With regard to Mr. Bentley himself, I do not know why I did not put him under surveillance at the time, as well as Mrs. Bentley.
 1087. You cannot explain that? No.
 1088. Do you not think the most obvious thing in the world was to have watched him to see whether he posted any more letters when you suspected him of posting them? That would have been one course, but I thought I knew a better one.
 1089. Could you not have pursued that as well—was there anything to prevent your pursuing that obvious course? I might if I had men, but at that time I was reduced to two men.
 1090. Do you mean to put it on the ground that you had not sufficient men to adopt this course? I do not; it might have, or it might have been others. I marked out a certain course of action for myself, and I used to follow it, and I could not do everything. I marked out what might have been a better course.
 1091. What were the steps you did take? Then?
 1092. I mean after the 25th March—when you say you became convinced that Bentley and no one else was the author of the letters—what steps did you take? To satisfy myself.
 1093. You say you had satisfied yourself—that you were thoroughly satisfied yourself—now I want to know what steps you took to satisfy the public? On the day of the assault I felt satisfied it was the case that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were the authors, but I wanted proof for fear I might be mistaken in the matter, and I got those proofs.
 1094. Did you take any steps to enable you to lay before the public the proof of the guilt of the Bentleys? I did—to lay before the public. No.
 1095. Your individual satisfaction was of no importance—I ask you, did you get any proofs to lay before the public? I did not.
 1096. Did you take any steps to get any? Yes, I did.
 1097. What steps did you take? I have told you I took those steps in the matter. I was there pretty constantly. I paid particular attention to the conversations that were passing on matters in connection with Mrs. Bentley, but with regard to getting evidence conclusively against Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, legally, I had no means of taking any.
 1098. By Mr. Fiddington: The steps amounted to merely the impression produced on your own mind from circumstances arising? Yes; I had no proofs against the Bentley's but what was conclusive to myself—of legal evidence I had not a tittle.
 1099. By Mr. Johnson: Do you profess to have ascertained any fact which you could lay before the public as shewing that the Bentleys were the guilty parties? No, I do not; nor can I.
 1100. Have you a single circumstance to relate, except what depends upon your own statement? With regard to what?
 1101. With regard to verifying your suspicions of the Bentleys? Yes, certain particulars can be confirmed.
 1102. Tell me what they are—have you ascertained that they can be confirmed? I know of one, for instance: After the alleged assault, the following time that Mrs. Bentley went out to Newtown to give lessons, in addition to the officer, who she knew accompanied her, in order that if she were spoken to by anyone she might make a signal to him, I sent another to watch Mrs. Bentley, and directed him not to let himself be seen, and he did so.
 1103. So he informed you? So he informed me. He said he concealed himself in the bush, close to Mr. Josephson's gate, and having watched her from the omnibus to the house, he waited until her return, and nothing took place—at least he told me nothing had taken place. Mrs. Bentley informed me the same evening, or the following day, that coming from Josephson's, when she had got to the gate, a man stopped her, and told her that I was waiting for her at Cook's River, and that she felt inclined to go, but that then she thought it might be only a ruse, and finally made up her mind that she would not go. She told the man she would, and then passed down the road. I then, when Mrs. Bentley informed me of this, saw the officer, and asked him whether anyone had spoken to Mrs. Bentley at all, and he said that no one had accosted her at all; that she had stopped at the gate a second or two to fasten her glove.
 1104. That was a circumstance you omitted to mention in your report to the Colonial Secretary? There were a great many other circumstances.
 1105. That is a circumstance? Yes.
 1106. The question I asked you—whether you could state any facts you could prove—is there anyone to corroborate your statement, that Mrs. Bentley told you anything of the kind—that rests entirely upon your statement? Yes. I do not think Mrs. Bentley would deny it.
 1107. I think she would—if she did not I would no longer have anything to do with her case. I am asking you to point out any circumstance tending to prove the guilt of Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, that does not depend entirely upon your own assertion? I cannot.

1108. You see that depends entirely upon your own assertion. Did not Mrs. Bentley at this time—that is, a week after the assault—that you had men watching her for her protection—was she not fully given to understand that? She knew it for a long time previously.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
20 Nov., 1862.

1109. Did she not know it at that time? Yes, a man used to follow her at a distance; she used to ask who the man was who would follow her on a particular day, and I would tell her. Both she and Mr. Bentley knew all the men who were employed in the matter.

1110. Did you not have a discussion with Mrs. Bentley, and did she not complainingly or reproachfully say that you had omitted to send some man to watch her? She might have said so; I do not know.

1111. Do you not recollect her mentioning that she was convinced of it, from having turned round and looked at a particular spot? That may have been the case. I do not recollect it.

1112. Was she not fully aware that she was seen from the time she left her house till the time she returned to it? They could see if Mrs. Bentley were assaulted.

1113. Yet you say she told you, at the time she knew she was watched, that something had taken place which had not taken place? Yes, but the policeman might have been a couple of hundred yards away.

1114. For the purpose of watching Mrs. Bentley? Not for the purpose of watching her, but of seeing whether any one accosted or assaulted her. I proposed to Mr. Bentley that I should send an escort with Mrs. Bentley, and I gave as a reason that if any person assaulted her again, as we could not find him in town, she might give the signal to the detective, who would see who he was, and find out his object, and that this would give a clue to the affair. Mrs. Bentley was then anxious to know who the officer was who would accompany her, alleging, as a reason, that if she did not know him, she would not know to whom to give the signal. On this account I made her aware of the officer who was going out with her each time, so that there might not be a mistake.

1115. Was it not fully understood that she was not to be out of sight of your officer, from the time she left her house till she reached Mr. Josephson's, and from the time she left Mr. Josephson's till she reached the omnibus? No.

1116. What was the purpose of stationing a policeman there at all? When she got into Mr. Josephson's grounds there was no chance of meeting any person there; it was the bush.

1117. That was the very place where the assault took place? The party stopping there had been on the main road, and had watched her getting out of the omnibus, and up to Mr. Josephson's gate, and then walked away; and when Mrs. Bentley had given the lesson, he met her at the gate again. She had never been interrupted in Mr. Josephson's ground.

1118. You state that she had never been molested in Mr. Josephson's grounds—was not her statement that she was assaulted in Mr. Josephson's grounds? That was afterwards.

1119. By the Chairman: Was not this person watching to prevent another assault? The assault had not taken place. This escort went with Mrs. Bentley up to Easter week. On the Friday of Easter week he did not go with her—on the day when this assault took place—because she said she was not going out that week.

1120. Do you know the distance from the road to Mr. Josephson's house? The house is in sight, but a good step down the avenue. It is not the wild bush you have to walk through.

1121. By Mr. Cowper: Is it a quarter of a mile? No; when you turn in at the gate there is a bit of scrub, through which you go to the house.

1122. By the Chairman: Could you see any one from the highway to the house without going into the grounds? I do not think you could from the highway; I think you could from the side of the fence.

1123. By Mr. Johnson: After all, the object of sending your men, as agreed upon by you, was to accompany Mrs. Bentley, in order that they might identify any one who might speak to her, during any part of her progress from her own house to Mr. Josephson's or back? Yes.

1124. Then she was aware that she was to be watched to that extent? Not that she was to be watched, but that an officer was to accompany her.

1125. I do not mean to say that she was to be watched, but to be guarded,—that the officer was to be in the way to know if any one did speak to her? Yes.

1126. And yet you say she told you a falsehood with respect to being assaulted under those circumstances—Will you answer that question? From the officer's statement Mrs. Bentley must have told a falsehood, or the officer must have told a falsehood.

1127. Or else you? Or else I must have told a falsehood.

FRIDAY, 21 NOVEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER,
MR. W. FORSTER,
MR. HART,
MR. LEARY,

MR. LUCAS,
MR. MORRIS,
MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. WILSON.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. R. Johnson, Solicitor for Petitioner, also present.

Mr. Charles E. Harrison called in and further examined:—

1128. By Mr. Johnson: Am I to understand that you still persist in saying that you compiled this report which you sent in to the Government, from the entries made in your journal—that you, in fact, had that journal in your hand when you compiled

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
21 Nov., 1862.

Sub-Inspector compiled your report? Yes, it is compiled from the journal; perhaps not word for word, because many things that may have struck me may appear in the report which are not in the journal; and there are things entered in the journal that do not appear in the report.

C. E.
Harrison.

21 Nov., 1862.

I may not have thought it worth while to mention them.

1129. Can you account for the remarkable omission that is shewn, by nothing being stated in your report with regard to the long statement Mrs. Bentley had made as to a man she had met, when you knew that she had not, in point of fact, met him? No, I cannot; except this, that there was a great deal concerning Mrs. Bentley that was constantly taking place, and of which nothing was said in the report. I did not go into every circumstance in the report, but only mentioned what I thought was the most particular.

1130. But that particular circumstance—can you account for omitting so salient a point? No, I cannot.

1131. Is there any entry in your journal—if there is I have not observed it—in reference to the anonymous letter sent to Government House? I do not know. There may be an entry of the fact, made at the time when I received information of it. I may have made a note of it at the time I was made acquainted with the fact, but I am not sure that there is; I was not aware that such was the case until I was so informed by Captain M'Lerie. He gave me the first information that such a letter had been sent. Mr. Bentley, however, told me that he believed that such a letter had been sent, and asked me to ascertain the fact from Captain M'Lerie. I told him that I would do so, and I then mentioned the matter to Captain M'Lerie.

1132. Is there any entry in your journal on the subject of the conversation you had with Mr. Bentley, relative to this anonymous letter, or of the fact of your having learned that such a letter had been received? I do not know. I forget at this distance of time; but if I could ascertain about the time when the conversation took place, I could soon find out by referring to the diary.

1133. If there is such an entry, will you be good enough to find it. I believe that you have recently been through this journal with the gentleman who made this synopsis of the case which is now before the Committee? I have been through the more particular parts of it, but certainly not through the whole of it. I only referred to those parts that I thought of importance. There are many parts of the diary that I have not seen since they have been written.

1134. Did you not state that the gentleman who made these extracts, and framed the synopsis of the case from your journal, did so from your dictation? No; he made it from a copy of the entries from the journal with which I furnished him. All the extracts from the journal were copied in the first instance, and that copy I gave into the hands of the clerk, to make a fair copy from. I did not hand, or even read the journal to him, but simply gave him a copy of the entries from which he made the extracts submitted to the Committee, and not Colonial Secretary's report.

1135. By the Chairman: Have you brought that copy with you? No, I have not.

1136. What has become of it? I believe it has been destroyed. I have, however, some papers with me, bearing on the case, that I thought the Committee might wish to see.

1137. By Mr. Johnson: Then, as I understand you, this is the fact:—You yourself made the extracts from your journal, and gave them to a clerk in Captain M'Lerie's office, who from them made up this report? Not exactly. I did not make the extracts. I was very busy at the time, and had no leisure to make the extracts, and I got Mrs. Harrison to make them for me.

1138. What have you done with that copy which was made by Mrs. Harrison, and given by you to the clerk—what was his name? Mr. M'Martin.

1139. And given by you to Mr. M'Martin, from which to make this synopsis? I destroyed it.

1140. Why? I did not think it necessary to retain. I could have no object in retaining so many copies when I held the original.

1141. Then Mr. M'Martin, who drew up this report, never saw your journal? He did not.

1142. Has anybody else seen it? Yes, they may have done so.

1143. Can you name any person besides your wife who has seen this journal? Yes. I recollect one circumstance in connection with this journal. I was in conversation one day with Mr. Boulanger—

1144. I do not wish to act unfairly with you; all I desire to know is whether any other person besides Mrs. Harrison has seen this journal? Yes, there has.

1145. Who? Mr. Boulanger.

1146. When did he see it? I cannot say the exact time, but it was about the time when he was a frequent visitor at Mr. Bentley's, and just about the time when his visits to them ceased. If the Committee will allow me, I will explain how it happened. I had some conversation with him, and some occurrence that had taken place at Bentley's was mentioned. Mr. Boulanger said that the occurrence took place at a certain date. It was something that had transpired at Bentley's, but I forget what. I told him that I did not think that was the date. We then had some discussion in regard to the time when the occurrence took place. Ultimately Mr. Boulanger said that he had made an entry of the matter, and that he would look in his diary, and see whether he or I was correct. I saw him some short time afterwards, and then he again mentioned the circumstance, saying that he had not been able to look for the date in his diary, as the case in which it was enclosed was locked, and he had lost the key. He deplored having lost the key, as he said he did not know where to get another. I told him where he could get one, and he then asked me, as I knew the place, to take his diary and case, and get a new key for it; and he told me that, when it was unlocked, I could see whether he was right or not. I got a key made, and opened the case of the diary, and referred to this matter. There were one or two trifling entries—such as, "went to Bentley's on such a date"—but nothing of any great importance. As to the matter in question, I forget whether he was right or whether I was. He afterwards came to my office, and I then then shewed him my diary, and compared the dates of the circumstances referred to. I then fitted my diary into the case belonging to his, but I found it too big. I asked him where I could get a case, and he told me where he had bought his; and I subsequently went and bought one for myself, so as to have the diary under lock and key.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

21 Nov., 1862.

1147. Had Mr. Boulanger an opportunity of reading anything in your diary? He had not.

1148. Had he an opportunity of seeing whether there was any writing in it or not? Yes, of course he had. I believe I was writing in it at the time when he came into my office.

1149. Can you name anybody else who has seen your diary; that is, is there anybody in a position to say that the entries you made were correct—that they were correct accounts of what then transpired; so as to give greater weight to what you say in respect to it? No one to my knowledge has ever seen any entry I have made in it. I never had the slightest suspicion when it was written that it would even be looked into, and always kept it under lock and key, so that no one should see it.

1150. Can you name any person who has seen it in the month of February last? No, I cannot.

1151. Can you mention any person who saw it in the month of March last? No, I cannot.

1152. Can you name any person who saw it in the month of April last? No; many persons may have seen it, and no doubt did see it, but I cannot name any person who has seen it to read it; in fact, I kept it out of the way, so that it should not be read; it was generally kept locked up in my private room. Parties may have seen me writing in it, making entries, but I have never shewn it to anybody.

1153. Have you been able to find any rough memoranda or note of the different transactions detailed here from which the entries were made? No; if I had any—and it was seldom that I had—I always destroyed them at the time, after making the entry.

1154. Have you any other writing, in the shape of letters or notes, that you could produce, as shewing how these entries were made—I tell you candidly that I never saw a series of entries such as these without some interlineations or erasures, and these have none? No, I have not. I may remark here, however, that whenever anything, which I considered interesting or important in the Bentley case, took place, I would make an entry of it at the first opportunity I had, on the same day. During the whole time I was engaged on the Bentley case, I was most particular in entering all the facts that came to my knowledge, if possible, on each particular day when it occurred; since then, I have not been so particular, and of late I have not made the entries on each particular day. I now generally make a note of what I require to enter, on a slip of paper, and when I have a few of these accumulated, I enter them all up together; at that time, however, I was so much interested in this case that I was very particular about entering up everything as it occurred.

1155. By Mr. Hoskins: So that when any remarkable occurrence, as you may have considered it, occurred, you took care to note it down at once in your journal? Yes.

1156. As soon as it occurred? No, as soon as I was made aware of it. There were some of the circumstances that I was not made aware of until some time after they took place; but there were so many remarkable circumstances connected with this case, and constantly occurring, that it is very probable that I may have omitted a good many of them.

1157. By Mr. Johnson: Look at that letter—take it in your hand and read it? I have done so.

1158. Is that the letter referred to in your journal as the one you expected to come, and which did come as you expected, to verify the assault? I do not know whether that is the precise letter, but it was a similar one to this.

1159. Did you not see that letter? Yes.

1160. And have it in your hands? I am not sure whether I had it in my hands, or whether Mr. Bentley read it for me. There were many of the letters that he shewed me, and which I could not decipher; these he read to me, as he said he was more used to the writing than I was.

1161. He read them to you when you were unable to do so? Yes.

1162. And did you see them when he read them? Yes, I saw them in his hands.

1163. Were they not all put into your hands by Mr. Bentley before they were read? No, not all; in some instances I did not ask to see them.

1164. But in this particular instance was not the letter put in your hands? That I cannot say positively. He generally used to meet me by saying "Here is another letter," and then, when I would answer to that, he would say "Let me read it to you; I can make it out better than you." Sometimes he would read, and I would not know whether it was a letter or anything else he had in his hand. Of course I have seen some of the letters—in fact, most of them—but I have not seen them in all instances.

1165. Then do you mean to say that you did not take the precaution of seeing yourself the letters that were read? In the first instance, I did. I examined them all very closely, but I had a great difficulty in reading them, and then Mr. Bentley would take it out of my hand, and read, saying, that he had got more used to the writing. In other instances again, I did not see him read the letters.

1166. Then occasionally you did not take the precaution of looking at the letters yourself? Yes, in some cases I did not have the letter in my hand at all.

1167. You did not take that precaution? No.

1168. Did you see the letter which you say was the expected letter that you thought would come to verify the assault? Yes.

1169. Did you take that in your hands? I cannot say; I may have done so, but I cannot speak positively.

1170. And when there was a letter arrived which you say you expected to come, to verify the assault, do you really say that you did not take the precaution of examining it yourself in your own hands? I do not say that I did not.

1171,

- Sub-Inspector 1171. Neither do you say that you did? No.
 C. E. 1172. However, on the Friday night mentioned in the diary, you had formed the opinion
 Harrison. that a letter would come to verify the assault, and that Mr. Bentley would write it? Yes, 21 Nov., 1862. I formed that opinion on the same night that I say in my diary that I thought a letter would come. I did not, however, say a letter, but that there would be some corroborative evidence of the assault. That was my impression. I thought the assault would be verified in some way, either by letter or by some other means.
1173. As a matter of fact, is it true that on the 25th you expected a letter to arrive, verifying the assault that was said to have been committed on Mrs. Bentley? I expected some confirmatory evidence of that assault.
1174. But a letter? Yes, a letter or something else to confirm Mrs. Bentley's statement.
1175. But was the letter the mode by which you anticipated that this confirmatory evidence would arrive? Yes, either that a letter, or that some corroborative circumstance would transpire to confirm Mrs. Bentley's statement relative to the assault.
1176. But the letter? Yes. It was a letter that I expected, but I was satisfied then and at other times, that if not a letter, there would be something transpire to corroborate the assault.
1177. Did you, or did you not, consider it highly probable that Mr. Bentley would write a letter to corroborate the fact of the assault on Mrs. Bentley? That Mr. Bentley would write it?
1178. Yes—did you, or did you not? Yes, I thought it highly probable.
1179. Thinking it probable he would write this letter, did you take the least means to have him watched, so as to be assured whether he wrote such a letter or not? No, I had no one watching him.
1180. Will you inform the Committee why it was that you omitted to perform so obvious a duty? I cannot say, except that I had marked out a plan for myself, and that that plan I adhered to throughout. It was no part of that plan to have Bentley watched.
1181. Although you expected that some corroborative evidence would be concocted by him?
 Yes.
1182. And that that evidence would most probably come in the shape of a letter? Yes.
1183. And though you thought this, you took no means to convict him of the offence, should he have adopted such a course of procedure? I did not. I had taken very many different steps in this case, and they had all turned out unsuccessful, and I had then laid down a settled plan, by which only I determined to proceed.
1184. And that plan has also turned out unsuccessful? I do not know that. That remains to be seen.
1185. You do not purpose to adduce any other evidence against Mr. Bentley beyond your own statements? No; but others may.
1186. You think that others may do so? Yes.
1187. Are you aware of any others who will support your statements? I trust there will be some.
1188. Who? Some who will be examined before this Committee, before the inquiry is closed.
1189. Who are they? Everybody who has been in any way connected with the matter.
1190. Can you give me any name? I am not in a position to give you the name of any person in particular.
1191. Do you know a single individual whom you can call to corroborate the statement you make in the latter part of your journal? No, I do not. I have no doubt that many will do so when they are examined; but I do not, of my own knowledge, know that they can do so.
1192. But you think they can? Yes.
1193. Who do you think can do so? Dr. Brereton can.
1194. Who else? Mr. Boulanger.
1195. Any one else? Yes, Mr. Aldis.
1196. Any one else? Mr. Black.
1197. Any one else? Yes, Mr. Hanson and others, I dare say.
1198. Do you know of any others—Can none of your detectives do so? I look upon their evidence as a matter of course; but they know very little of the steps that were being taken. They had simply one particular duty to perform, and that was all, and did not know anything of what I was doing in the matter, or what plan I was pursuing. In fact, they can throw very much less light on the matter than the gentlemen whose names I have just mentioned.
1199. Can they throw any light at all on the matter? I do not think they can. They only know that they had a particular duty assigned to them to perform, and that they were unsuccessful in what they had to do.
1200. In the first place, what do you understand that Dr. Brereton will be able to prove?
 That I am not at liberty to say. I presume he will be examined before the Committee, and can then make his own statement.
1201. Why do you not consider yourself at liberty to mention this evidence? Because certain matters have been mentioned to me in confidence that I do not consider myself justified.
 These very matters that you refer to at the latter part of my diary were written solely for my private guidance, and were never intended to be made public in any way.
1202. By Mr. Piddington: Of what is his evidence confirmatory? Of certain matters when the assault was said to have occurred. He then mentioned certain circumstances to me, which I took to have been told to me in confidence, and not to be spoken of again.
1203. By Mr. Johnson: But when the matter becomes one of judicial examination, you are aware,

aware, I suppose, that there is no such thing as confidence—do you expect him to corroborate this entry in your journal? I took that entry from Dr. Brereton's statement.

1204. What do you expect Mr. Boulanger to prove? That I cannot say.

1205. You do not know any one fact against Mr. Bentley that he can prove? I do not.

1206. Or Mr. Black? No.

1207. Or Mr. Hanson? No.

1208. Or Mr. Aldis? No. I have never exchanged a word with Mr. Aldis since I saw him at the house of the Bentleys.

1209. Then how do you know they can corroborate your statements? I only know that they all interested themselves very much in this matter, and that some of them had been acting for some time in the case as amateur detectives. Before I took the matter up they had had it in hand for some time.

1210. And their amateur operations did not come up to your idea of professional skill? That I cannot say. I am not aware of what conclusion they came to as to the result of their inquiries.

1211. However, they did not have a successful result? I am not aware.

1212. By Mr. Hoskins: Were you induced to form your opinion of Mr. Bentley's guilt upon your own judgment, or upon the opinion of these persons as well as your own? No, I had nothing to do with their opinion. I had satisfied myself on the point, and having made up my mind, I kept my idea to myself, and certainly never mentioned it to any of them. I have been spoken to on the subject, but I never expressed an opinion even at that time; for whatever I may have myself thought, I had no tangible proof, and as the Bentleys had a large circle of friends who were all interested in them, I kept the matter entirely to myself.

1213. By Mr. Johnson: I see there is an entry in your journal about your having received a letter from Mr. Boulanger that did not please you? Yes, I recollect something of the kind.

1214. Where is that letter? I think I destroyed it at the time I made the entry. It was only a note of a few lines, but I forget what it alluded to.

1215. Will you refresh your memory by a reference to the diary? Yes. (Witness refers to the diary.) I recollect now the contents of the letter.

1216. Is that letter that you say did not please you, now in existence? No. It was a letter that had nothing to do with this case. It was a private letter; it had reference to a private matter of his own. His wife had committed an assault upon Mrs. Nott, of Lyons Terrace, and he wanted my advice upon the subject. He wished to know from me what steps he had best take in order to prevent the recurrence of such a nuisance in future. I had promised to call on him on the evening previous to receiving this letter, in order to talk the matter over with him, but being otherwise engaged, I did not go. On the following morning he wrote me a note, speaking rather sharply about breaking my promise in not keeping my appointment, and saying that he considered his business as of quite as much importance as that of the Bentleys. It was about a matter entirely concerning myself, Mr. Boulanger, and Mrs. Nott, the only reference to the Bentleys being, as I say, that he said he considered his business as important as the Bentleys.

1217. Did he not on some other occasion complain of your want of management, or of your want of vigilance in the conduct of the Bentley matter? No, he did not, not to me; but Mr. Bentley told me that upon one occasion Mr. Boulanger had made some remarks upon the case, reflecting upon the way in which I was carrying it on.

1218. Do you not remember his saying something of this kind to you, in answer to an observation of your own,—that the parties concerned in the case were either mad or fools? Yes, I do.

1219. Did he not, in answer to your remark that the parties engaged in this conspiracy were either mad or fools, say to you, "Why, Mr. Harrison, we are all fools"? Yes, he did.

1220. Did you not take that as an imputation on your vigilance? No, I did not. There were other parties concerned in the matter to whom the remark would have just as well applied; but even if he had referred it to me, I should not have given any attention to it.

1221. Are you able to inform the Committee whether the extracts which you have sent in as the extracts from your journal, contain all the matter relative to the Bentley case that is in your journal? They contain all the matter that I conceived to be of any importance. I think they contain everything in reference to the case.

1222. There are certain entries in your journal that are not copied out amongst the extracts? There are.

1223. How then would the Committee have been made acquainted with the facts there recorded, if your journal had not been laid on the table, and they had had only these extracts before them? I consider that every fact material to the case is detailed in the extracts.

1224. Then if the Committee had not had your journal, they would have had only the extracts, with a great many matters contained in that journal left out? Yes, but only private matters—matters that I did not think the Committee would wish to be put in possession of, and that are not material to the inquiry.

1225. By the Chairman: Do you think that you are the person who ought to form an opinion of what the Committee might or might not think material to the case? Perhaps not, in that respect; but as regards the private matters contained in the journal, they affect me only.

1226. Did you make this entry in the diary (Entry of November 15 shewn to witness)? Yes, I did.

1227. Will you read it? Yes. "The Inspector General informed me I should have to give him my diary, to produce at his next examination before the Committee in the Bentley case." I may mention however, that the matter formed the subject of a long conversation between

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
21 Nov., 1862.

Sub-Inspector between the Inspector General and myself, as to whether the diary was to be retained. He
 C. E. told me that it was to be produced only to verify the extracts made from it, and on that Harrison. understanding I gave it up to him. I thought that all he would do would be to refer to the diary to see that the extracts were correctly copied, and that then it would be returned to 21 Nov., 1862. me.

1228. Do you know any means by which the Committee or any one else could refer to this diary in verification of the extracts, without at the same time seeing casually other matters not touching upon the Bentley case? Perhaps I was wrong, but my only desire that it should not be made public was because of the private matters contained in it. I did not look upon it as a police diary at all, but only as a diary for my own private use. I did not think for an instant when I wrote it, that ever it would have been made public; and you are aware that when a man writes privately in this way, there are many things that he would not wish to be seen. That was my only objection in the matter.

1229. I do not understand what you mean by saying that your diary was not to be looked at by this Committee, except only to verify the extracts made? I did not say so.

1230. Will you explain then what you really did say? I say this, that I did not hand the diary to the Inspector General for the purpose of laying it on the table for general reference; but when I gave it to him it was in order that there should be no mistake about the correctness of the extracts. But if they were not satisfactory or there was any doubt about them, the diary might be referred to, and the extracts be compared with the original entry.

1231. But how could the Committee draw a comparison between the extracts and the diary, when, as you admit, there were matters contained in the diary that were omitted from the extracts? Of course they could not compare what was not in the extracts.

1232. Then the diary was useless, if merely for the purpose of comparison? No, these extracts did contain the whole of the facts of the case as they came to my knowledge. Everything is entered there amongst these extracts, except some few minor matters that I might wish to suppress, as they did not bear upon the case.

1233. Then it would seem that you took upon yourself to have laid before this Committee, extracts purporting to be all the facts relating to a certain case, whilst you thought fit to suppress a part of those facts, and so to mislead the Committee? No. I gave every material fact in the extracts. There were the extracts before the Committee, and there was the diary also for reference if I should have omitted anything material.

1234. But did you not say that the diary was before the Committee only for reference, in order to see if the extracts had been correctly copied? That was my idea when the diary was given up; but the Inspector General laid it on the table without any such terms, and the Committee have it there now for reference.

1235. For reference for what? For the verification of the extracts. The Committee can compare the extracts with the entries, and it will then be for the Committee to say whether the entries not extracted are relevant to the case or not.

1236. But how were the Committee to know that there were any other entries connected with this case beyond those copied out in this paper? They had the diary to see for themselves; it came for that purpose—for the purpose of allowing the Committee to see that everything material had been extracted.

1237. But in looking through the diary to see that every entry connected with the case had been extracted, how could the Committee avoid seeing all sorts of entries? Well, they could not very well avoid it.

1238. By Mr. Piddington: Do you assert that you copied out all the material features of the case in the extracts you have laid before this Committee? I do.

1239. By Mr. Johnson: Then you assert that there is nothing in your journal material to the case that is not contained in the extracts before the Committee? I think not.

1240. But why was it, as the Chairman very justly put it, that you took upon yourself to decide upon the materiality of any particular facts, instead of leaving that matter to the Committee? The Committee have everything before them. I did give up everything in any way connected with the case. The extracts in the first instance, and then the diary to verify them by. I had nothing more to give.

1241. Is it not what you express dissatisfaction about, that your diary has been referred to upon points not included in these extracts? No. I did not expect anything but that all the matters referring to the Bentley case would be looked into by the Committee. My dissatisfaction was expressed because I gave it to the Inspector General that reference might be made to it, and because I expected to have it brought back to me again.

1242. By Mr. Morris: But how could the Committee have made use of it if you had taken it away; that I believe was what you insisted upon at your last examination? I admit that I may have been in error in requiring the diary to be returned. But when the Inspector General informed me that my diary would be required for reference, I explained to him that it contained many private matters that I did not wish known. He said it would be only used for reference. When he returned from his examination before the Committee, and told me that he had left my diary there, I asked him if the Committee intended to retain it, and he said, "Certainly not; it is your own private property, and you can get it whenever you wish." It was upon that account that I made the application to have it returned to me.

1243. By Mr. Piddington: Have you any other diary or note-book of an official character in your office? None.

1244. Are you not in the habit of keeping one officially? No, none has been kept in the office until I opened this one, and this is merely a private memorandum book of my own. I keep no official diary, because I report daily to the Inspector General.

1245. Was your only objection to having this diary before the Committee, founded on the fact that it contained many entries of a private and personal nature? Exactly; that was my only objection.

1246. By the Chairman: Do you make any notes or memoranda of matters that occur, in order to assist your memory? No, I do not.
1247. By Mr. Wilson: You state that you report daily to the Inspector General of Police? Yes, when he is in town, or when I have an opportunity of seeing him.
1248. How do you report to him—verbally? Yes, verbally.
1249. Not in writing? No.
1250. Does he take any notice of your verbal reports? I have not seen him do so.
1251. Then there is no means in connection with the police department by which a person could refer back to your reports to the Inspector General of Police, upon this or upon any other subject? No.
1252. You have stated that there is no official diary kept by yourself in the detective department, or by the Inspector General? I have stated so.
1253. By Mr. Piddington: You never kept a diary before you began the present one? No. The object of my starting this one was, that I had found very great inconvenience arising from my not having any record of the date of the arrest of criminals, and I determined to commence at once. I kept it in the first instance for criminal cases; that was the main object with which I started it. After a time private matters got mixed up with these cases, until at last when I got interested in the Bentley case, I kept a regular record of all that occurred in relation to it.
1254. Did you ever disagree with Mr. Boulanger as to the propriety of publishing the particulars of the Bentley case? Yes, I did.
1255. On what grounds was it that you did not wish the particulars to be published? Because having the matter in hand at the time, and being very sanguine of success, I thought the publication of the letters would put all the parties concerned in the conspiracy, upon their guard, and that they would be so cautious that I should not be able to take any steps that would lead to a favourable result. As I had taken the matter in hand, I wished it to be left to me for some time longer, to see if I could make anything of it.
1256. Were you not at one time satisfied that Signor Cutolo and Mr. Montagu were the guilty parties? I was.
1257. Are you so now? No.
1258. What has led to this change of opinion? Circumstances that have occurred in the house of the Bentleys.
1259. Have you any objections to state those circumstances? The particulars will be found entered in my diary.
1260. But I wish to know from you verbally, what the circumstances were that led you to change your opinion, from one of which at one time you had a moral certainty to another that was entirely different? Yes. First with regard to the suspicion I had concerning Signor Cutolo, Mr. Montagu, and Mr. San Just. Mr. and Mrs. Bentley and myself had several long conversations in regard to these gentlemen, and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley explained to me how it was that they had come to the conclusion that these gentlemen were concerned in the conspiracy. They spoke of private parties that had been given at which Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were present, and when Mr. San Just and Signor Cutolo were also invited; and they detailed conversations that had taken place, and remarks that had been made at those parties, in the hearing of one or the other of these gentlemen. A few days after one of these parties, anonymous letters were sent to some person to whom Mrs. Bentley had been then introduced, in which circumstances were mentioned of which no one could have been aware but Mr. San Just, who had overheard the particular conversation referred to. There were so many of these little circumstances mentioned in connection with Mr. San Just and Signor Cutolo detailed to me, all of which went to explain matters mentioned in these letters, that I had such a string of facts placed before me, against them, that I could not have any doubt as to their complicity, assuming what the Bentleys told me to be correct. I did then really believe that Cutolo, San Just, and Montagu, were the parties, until the alleged assault took place, and then I had my belief shaken, and my ideas turned in another direction. The first thing that struck me was a remarkable coincidence that was not to be accounted for, and it was this:—When I found that I was altogether unsuccessful in finding these parties who followed and stopped Mrs. Bentley, I told Mrs. Bentley, in the hearing of her husband, “The first person who stops you, take no notice of his clothes, but get a good idea of his general appearance, and especially notice what articles of jewellery he wears, because no matter how he may disguise himself, he will not be likely to change his jewellery. If you can find this out, I will give directions to some of my men, who will soon have him by that description.” I remember telling her all this; and when the alleged assault took place, it certainly did strike me as very remarkable that the man should, according to Mrs. Bentley’s account, have used the words he did, as if he had heard the directions I had given her. Mrs. Bentley reported to me that the man had said to her, “Tell Harrison that I wear a ring of such a description, describing some kind of ring, and that I have on a shirt with foxes’ heads on it.” So that, in fact, he was repeating the very idea I had in my head when I gave her the directions. This first gave me a suspicion that the Bentleys themselves were the authors of the letters; and then there were a number of other things afterwards that tended to confirm it. Upon this, I went back to the contradictions in some of their other statements.
1261. That was about the middle or towards the end of April last? Yes, at the end of the Easter week.
1262. Can you mention any other facts beyond that coincidence you have detailed, that led you to change your view? There were a number of such facts. For instance, with regard to the concert that was given, and at which Mrs. Bentley was to be present—the man who was said to be her persecutor had sent her a letter to say that he should be at the concert.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

21 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison. 1263. Will you look at this letter (letter produced, and handed to witness);—is that letter, which you have now had handed to you, the letter that was received on that occasion? That I cannot say.
- 21 Nov., 1862. 1264. Will you read it and say if there is in it any allusion of the kind you refer to? Yes; I believe this to be the letter. At all events, the purport of this letter is the same as the one then received.
1265. And this was one of the circumstances that caused you to change your opinion? Yes.
1266. Will you shew the Committee how you connect this letter with anything that subsequently transpired? Yes. A letter was received stating that the man would be present at the concert to be given in the Masonic Hall, at which Mrs. Bentley was to assist. In consequence of this I went to the concert, and I had two of my men stationed in the street—one at the Clarence-street entrance, and the other at the York-street entrance. I was standing at the door near the entrance into the Hall from York-street, when just before the concert was over, Mr. Bentley came to me and said, "The man is here in the place; Mrs. Bentley has seen him, and he held a letter up to her and laughed at her. He has only just passed you out through this door." I said it was impossible, and he answered, "Yes, it is a fact; he has passed you and gone into the street; Mrs. Bentley saw him." I then told him that I had not moved from the spot, and that only three persons had passed me—Mr. Simmons, Mr. Waller, and another—and that they had not gone into the street, but were then in a side room. He said there must be some mistake, and went back into the Hall. After a little he returned and said that he did not think the man had passed this way, but that he had gone out by the other entrance, into Clarence-street.
1267. Did he say where he had got this further information—that the man had not gone out by the door where you were stationed, but by the other? Yes; he said Mrs. Bentley had told him. I asked him what the man was like, and he gave me a description. I then went down to the officers on duty, and inquired if they had seen a man of that description pass out, and they said that no such man had passed them.
1268. Did you ask Mrs. Bentley for a description of the man? I did; but she said that she was so flurried that she could not give me an exact description of the person. She then gave me some vague kind of a description, but she was not positive even about that.
1269. Did Mrs. Bentley say that the man held up the letter and laughed at her? Yes; she said he had a letter in his hand, and held it up this way. It seemed to me a most extraordinary thing, as I had four officers in the room at the time.
1270. Can you mention any other circumstance that led you to this change of opinion? Yes; I recollect one night, when I was in Bentley's house, I heard him calling out down stairs, and I went down to see what was the matter.
1271. Were you on the first floor, or the floor level with the street—the basement floor? I was on the first floor, and Mr. Bentley was below stairs on the basement floor. I heard him call out, and I immediately went down stairs. I asked him what was the matter, and he said he had found the verandah door open leading into a back room, which, with folding doors, is connected with the front room and forms a large dining-room. He said that the door had been forced open, and that he was sure he had fastened it. He had spoken to me about this lock some time previously, telling me that it was a new lock, of a very strong make, that he had got purposely. I had noticed some time before that it was quite new, and not at all knocked about, but I saw afterwards that it was very much battered, as if some-one had been straining at it. He said that the door had been opened from the outside, that some one was there when he came down, and that he must have disturbed them.
1272. By the Chairman: Did you not explain how this door had been broken open? I did.
1273. Did you not explain how it had been opened from the outside? To a certain extent, yes; and, to a certain extent, no.
1274. Will you tell us what you mean by this? I did not examine the door closely that night, but I examined it very carefully in the morning. The reason why I did not was this: Mr. Bentley said he was sure he had disturbed somebody there. I looked about to see if there was any letter, thinking that if the person's object was to leave a letter, and it had not been left, that he would perhaps return. We looked about, but could find no letter. It happened to be a wet night, and I told Mr. Bentley to examine the ground carefully the next morning, as the foot-prints would be sure to be left clearly marked on the soft ground. We did not take a light outside the door, because I thought that if anybody had been there, and opened the door, he would be there somewhere in the neighbourhood, and no doubt watching to see if an alarm had been caused. If we did not take a light about, or shew that any confusion was created, I thought the party might think he was unobserved, and might come back again, if his object was to leave a letter in the house; we therefore just looked round for a letter, but saw none, and then went inside as quietly as possible. I then explained to him, that if the person did not come back that night, that he should examine the back yard in the morning, and that either on the verandah or in the yard, he would be sure, after the wet, to find traces of footsteps on the mould or on the verandah. He said he would do so. In the morning I called again on Mr. Bentley, and I believe he shewed me a tool-chest, which he had placed against the door leading to the verandah for safety, and to prevent the door being opened. This chest had been moved back, as if by the opening of the door it had been pushed away. In the morning, when I went, Mr. Bentley shewed me the mark of footsteps in the verandah, leading from the door down towards the yard and garden; he said, "You see these large footsteps? They must be the steps of the big man with the rough coat and cabbage-tree hat," alluding to the description of a man who was said to have been seen speaking to Mr. Montagu. I examined these footsteps very closely, and then pointed out to him that it was not a large footstep, but two small footsteps, one over the other, so as to increase the size, and make it look like a large footmark. He said that was not the case, that it was a large footmark. I then took him along the track of the footprints for a short distance, until I found one where the two heel-marks were quite distinct. He then admitted that it was so; that there were two footmarks in one; and that it had evidently been done for the purpose of getting the impression of a large footmark. He then said that San Just had small feet, and that he was, no doubt, the party who had made these impressions. I answered that possibly it might be so, but said no more. I then went to the fastening of the door and examined it, and I said at once that I did not see how it had been unfastened from the outside. I tried myself, but could not manage to unfasten the door when the key was in the lock and turned down; that was the way in which it was described to me to have been left on the previous evening; the key was turned down, and then there was a piece of string tied round it and fastened so as to keep the snich of the lock close down; but when the snich of the lock was slightly raised, I inserted a dessert knife under the bottom of the door, drew it up between the fold of the doors by main strength, and so opened the door by raising the snich of the lock. I could find no marks of violence upon the outside of the door, except in one place where two or three shreds of paint seemed to have been slipped off by what appeared to have been a sharp instrument. The lock seemed to me to have been very much battered, but it could not be opened in any other way than that which I took, for it was a very strong and good lock. I had a dessert knife, and I put it under the bottom of the door, and then by main strength I managed to force it up to the lock until it caught the catch and raised it, and the door opened; but in doing so I bent the blade of the knife completely over the handle. The door then retained the impression of where I had opened it with a knife, and there was no similar mark on it before that.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
21 Nov. 1862.

1275. By the Chairman: Were there any marks on the door as if a screw-driver had been used? Yes, there were.

1276. Not such marks as would be caused by a dessert knife? No. There were marks on the door, between the jamb of the door and the door itself, as if a screw-driver had been forced in to prize it.

1277. As if a screw-driver had been inserted? Yes.

1278. Or a jemmy? Yes.

1279. Or a lever of some kind? Not a lever, but a screw-driver or a jemmy.

1280. They both answer the purpose of a lever, do they not? Yes; but I tried that likewise, and I found that, by inserting a screw-driver in the place where the marks were, between the jamb of the door and the door, I could not unfasten the lock, and that by the pressure the two doors were forced closer together, and as the lock went across the doors, of course they would not open. The door could not, I think, be opened in that way.

1281. By Mr. Wilson: Is it not a double door? Yes.

1282. With a lock between the two parts? Yes.

1283. By the Chairman: Could not admission have been gained by inserting a lever between the two doors to force them apart, and then by strong pressure from the outside to force the catch over the lock? I cannot say whether the door might be opened in that way; I only know that I tried to find out how admission had been gained from the outside, and from what I saw I came to the conclusion that admission had not been gained in that way.

1284. Will you look at the entry in your diary on the 2nd April? Yes.

1285. Will you read that to the Committee? Yes. "April 2. Went to Bentley's about 7 o'clock, and Mr. Bentley informed me that directly I left—9 o'clock last night—they went up-stairs into the drawing-room, and on their return to the dining-room, before 1 o'clock, they found a quantity of music torn and scattered about the floor. They were very much alarmed, and determined to leave it until I should visit the house. The music was consequently in the same state as when found on the night previous. On examining the music, I found an anonymous letter pinned between the leaves of one of the torn books, containing threats against Mrs. B. if she did not immediately retire from public life. The writer further said that she could now see that he could obtain admission to her most secret places, and that unless she complied with his request, he would put his previous threat into execution. Poor Mrs. B. was very much alarmed, but I re-assured her, and explained how the case was working better than we could have expected; for it was evident they were getting uncomfortable, while they would risk a chance of discovery by gaining an entrance into her house at that early hour. I then took my leave, and returned to the office, to turn the matter over in my mind and resolve on a course of action for to-morrow." "April 3. After some time I formed a plan, and I this afternoon put it into force. About 5 o'clock I called on Miss Flower, who resides in Castlereagh-street, and whose house is situated directly in the rear of Mr. Bentley's house, and the two yards only divided by a low wall. On the Bentley side of the wall I had found footmarks, likewise on a flower bed. I had satisfied myself the night previous that entrance had been obtained by the back verandah door. This was why I called on Miss Flower and informed her that the house occupied by the Bentleys had been robbed, but the thieves had been disturbed, and out of spite had destroyed a quantity of music. I said that a man had been seen on the wall at the back of the house, and supposed to be one of the thieves. My object was, first, to examine the house at the back; and secondly, to ascertain if either Cutolo or Montagu had been at her house between 9 and 10 o'clock on the Tuesday night; and lastly, that it might indirectly come to their ears, that the police looked on the entry to have been made by common robbers for the sake of plunder."

1286. By Mr. Piddington: Did these circumstances—the detail of which you have just read—take place on the morning after the night when Mr. Bentley called you down stairs? No.

1287. Does the entry, on that particular date, refer to the time the events of which you were explaining in answer to my question? No.

1288. By the Chairman: Did you not then examine their back door upon two occasions? I did; I examined it upon several occasions.

Sub-Inspector 1289. By Mr. Piddington: Will you proceed with your original statement as you were
 C. E. about detailing it to me? Yes; I said that I opened the door with a dessert knife, and that Harrison. I bent the blade back over the handle in so doing. I told Mr. Bentley that I had opened the door in that way; and I also told him, in the presence of Mr. Boulanger, that if the door had been fastened in the way he described, that I could not have opened it even with a knife.
 Before I could open it, I had to get Mr. Boulanger to raise the snich of the lock a little, and it was only when the lock was in a certain state that the door could be opened in the way I opened it.

21 Nov., 1862.

1290. That is the third reason that caused you to alter your opinion; have you any others?
 Yes. On a certain day (it was on a Monday, I think) Mrs. Bentley informed me that she had been alarmed by hearing a noise overhead in the roof of the house—a stumbling noise, she said, as if somebody had tumbled down. I asked her if any one had looked to see what was the matter, and she said that Mr. Bentley had done so. He informed me, at the same time, that he had examined the place and had found nothing, and I then said that they had alarmed themselves very needlessly, for that it must have been the cats scrambling about. He said he did not think so, for that he was firmly persuaded that they had been on the roof previous to that. Some two or three days afterwards Mr. Boulanger left a message for me at my office, asking me to go round to Bentley's immediately. As I was engaged at the time, I did not go round until the evening. When I reached the house
 Mr. Bentley and Mr. Boulanger were there; and one or the other of them said to me,
 "Well, we have got something that will surprise you now." I asked them what it was, and one of them said, "You will need some wine to strengthen your nerves before you hear the news." I again asked what it was, and he said that the enemy had been concealed in the roof of the house for the last two days.

1291. By Mr. Johnson: Is not that term "the enemy" a term of your own? No, it is
 Mr. Bentley's.

1292. Because I see you use it very frequently in your diary? No; it was the term that was always used by Mr. and Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Boulanger, and was meant by them to apply to Signor Cutolo, Mr. San Just, and Mr. Montagu—they were "the enemy," and were always spoken of as such; and as I got interested in the case, I got in the habit of using the same term towards them. Mr. Bentley read a letter which, he said, he had just got from "the enemy," in which it was stated that the party had been concealed there. The letter was handed to me in the first instance; I took it and tried to read it, but could make nothing of it. Mr. Bentley then took the letter and read it, and in it was stated that a man had been concealed in the roof of the house for three days and two nights, or two days and two nights, or some length of time that I do not now remember precisely. At all events, it stated that the man had watched Mrs. Bentley during the night on two different occasions; that he had seen her go into the nursery to quiet a child that was crying; and that, on another occasion, he had seen her go down to the drawing-room, and that on her coming up-stairs she had been attacked with an old complaint, and had been obliged to sit down on the stairs; that he had been in her bedroom, and that he could, had he wished, have then taken her life. I believe this was said, or something to the purport, but I forget the exact words. When he read the letter I told him I did not believe it at all—that the person had never been there, and that it was nothing more than an attempt to intimidate them. He said that he was sure that the parties had been there, and as a proof that they had, he said that Mrs. Bentley had told him that what was said in the letter was correct, and that she did go into the nursery to quiet the child, and that on the night when she went down to the drawing-room she did sit down on the stairs in the way described, and that consequently the person must have been concealed in the house or he would not have seen it.
 I said that it certainly was a very strange circumstance, but that even if the person had been in the house he could not have been in their bedroom, because I had cautioned them very particularly to keep their bedroom door locked. They said they had always followed my direction, and had always locked the bedroom door every night, except only upon that one occasion, when for some reason or other Mrs. Bentley had not done so. I then said that the party, knowing that there was a detective in the house, would not have been bold enough to come down, or that if he had been he certainly would not have gone into their bedroom without leaving something there, either a letter or something of that kind, in order to shew that he had been there, and that he would not have trusted to the simple and doubtful circumstance of the anonymous letter to inform them of the fact; and I said to Mrs. Bentley at the time, "You may depend upon it they would not have let slip so good an opportunity of frightening you." Mrs. Bentley said she firmly believed the person had been there; and there the matter ended. I then went up-stairs and examined the roof (Detective Clarke was with me); and knowing that if anybody had been concealed there for any time they must have left some unmistakable traces of their visit behind them, we examined every part of the roof. The place where the person was said to be concealed was not floored or boarded, but was only lath and plaster and joists, the lath and plaster forming the ceiling of the rooms below; so that if any person had been concealed there he would have had to be very cautious so as to walk only on the joists, for if he had put his foot on the lath and plaster he would have gone through to the room underneath. The first thing I did was, to examine the joists, as it was only on these that a person could tread in safety. There was plenty of dust on them, but I could see no foot-marks printed in the dust. There was a small window, with a frame about this size (showing the size), which gave light to the roof. There was a great quantity of dust, and a very great quantity of cobwebs round this frame, and the cobwebs seemed to me to be all very old cobwebs. I opened this window and went through it on to the roof, but nowhere could I find any traces of a person having been there. There were no tracks of any person having passed along the gutter; and as the roof was a slated one, if anybody had been there he must have walked along

along the gutter. The gutter, too, was full of a green damp mud, caused by the dust that had accumulated in it, and this received and retained any impression that was made on it very readily. My foot-marks were left very clearly in it, although I had taken off my boots in order to move about more carefully. I came back through the window, and of course in passing out and in, as I had done, I brushed away nearly all the cobwebs that had been before accumulated there. I then examined all round the roof, and found no trace of any person having been there at all, let alone for the long time that was mentioned in the letter. There is a trap-door by which to get into the roof, and between that and the window I observed some footsteps. They were small footprints. I told Mr. Bentley in the evening that I had examined everywhere as carefully as possible, and that I could find no trace of any one, either on the roof or beneath it, except only some few small foot-tracks between the trap and the window, and that the impression of the shoe was very like his own. He said "Yes, I went there to look to the fastenings of the window." I then said that I had looked very narrowly but could find no traces anywhere, and that if anybody had been there, their foot-marks would have been sure to have been retained in the dust that lay so thick upon the joists. I then told him that I had come to the conclusion that nobody had been there, and that the letter was nothing more than a threat to intimidate them.

1293. Did Mrs. Bentley after this give you any further proof that the parties had been concealed there as she had described? Yes.

1294. On that day? No, not on that day. On the following day I called again to prosecute my inquiries, and she then gave me one of Mr. Bentley's cards, on the back of which was written, in the feigned hand of the letters, "Mr. Bentley's visiting card." I asked her where she had got this, and she said, "I found it in the dressing-table drawer, and this is a clear proof that the party has been here." She then said, "Are you satisfied now?" I answered, "Yes, I am perfectly satisfied." I then asked her, "Where do you think this card has come from?" and Mr. Bentley said, "San Just may have got hold of one of my cards." After some further conversation he at last said that he believed it had come from Mrs. Heath,* the widow of Mr. Heath the chemist, who took a great interest in Signor Cutolo. He said that it had evidently come from Signor Cutolo, and that he had got it through Mrs. Heath.

1295. Did he state any reason he had for forming this suspicion? No, that was all he stated,—that it must have come from Cutolo, through Mrs. Heath.† I would beg to state, with regard to the occasion when I traced the footsteps in the verandah, that I omitted to state that, on the following morning after he had called me down-stairs in the evening, Mr. Bentley shewed me a letter which he said he had found in a vase that was standing out in the verandah. He said he had taken it out of the vase, and had replaced it with a piece of paper folded like a letter, so that the person, if he came back, might be led to imagine that the letter had not been disturbed. I had two detectives on the watch outside the house—Detective Sanderson on the front of the house, and Clarke at the rear of the house, stationed at the corner of the garden wall, so as to see anything that took place at the back. Directly Mr. Bentley said he had disturbed the parties, before I examined the door or the verandah, or took any steps, I went outside to see if my men were on the watch. I found them both on the alert at their different posts, and I asked them if they had seen any one passing the place. They both assured me they had not, and Clarke, who was on the back of the house, informed me that it was not possible that any one could have got to the verandah door without his knowledge. I then asked him if any one could have passed in through the door leading into the yard, by means of skeleton keys, and he said they could not, because no one had even come up to the door.

1296. Are there any other circumstances that now occur to you, on which you found your change of opinion? Yes; there was another circumstance in regard to the roof. I received, about 1 o'clock in the morning—I forget the precise date, but it was after the first occurrence of the party being concealed in the roof—I received a note, written in a half printed kind of handwriting, telling me that Mrs. Bentley's life was in danger, and that if I would save her, I must search for myself. The note was sent down to my office in the evening, but as I was very busy during the evening I could not attend to it until 1 o'clock in the morning.

1297. Is this the note? It is.

1298. What did you do on receiving that note? When I received it I was very busy. I was just on the point of going out to make an arrest in town, and I was not disengaged until 1 o'clock in the morning. I then took an officer with me and went down to Bentley's house. I think it was detective Carnes that I took with me. I knocked at the door and called Mr. Bentley down. I shewed him the letter I had received, and told him that I had better look over the place. I then searched the house, and I went up into the roof, as it was there that the man was said to have been previously concealed. I then found that the window, through which I had previously passed on the former occasion, was open, the sash being propped up with half a brick. There were a quantity of bricks scattered about on the joists and on the laths between the joists, and I noticed that the plaster in many places, where it came up between the laths, was pulled up and laying about. It appeared to me as if it had been scratched up. It was the lumps of mortar that protruded from between the laths; they had been broken or scratched off, not as if there had been any attempt to make a hole, but as if the person had wished to scatter it over the ground. Upon making further search I found a half-sheet of note paper crumpled up on the floor between the joists. I then came down-stairs and reported to Mr. Bentley what I had seen up there. He said it was evident evident that somebody must have been there, and that the object of the party was certainly to take Mrs. Bentley's life. I said I hardly thought so, but I would return in the morning, and make further search. I had some further conversation with Mr. Bentley, in the course of which I remarked that it was very strange that the persons, if they had been there, had not left something behind them. I said they could not have been there in the night or they must have required a light, since they could not walk about in the dark, as they had to tread from joist to joist, and they would risk going through the ceiling between the joists by a false step in the dark. On the following morning I went up again to the house, in order to search the roof carefully with Mr. Bentley. When I went on the following day, as soon as I entered the house, he called me into his bedroom, and then he said, "Now you see the object of this visit," and he shewed me a hole in the roof of the bedroom, through the plaster of the ceiling, directly over that side of the bed where Mrs. Bentley slept. It was a hole of about the size of a half-a-crown. I asked him how he had discovered it, and he said that little Edith, one of his children, was the first to call attention to it. He said that there was another hole of the same kind through the ceiling of the nursery. He said that it was evident that the persons had made a hole through the nursery first, and then, finding that they had pierced into a room that was not the one Mrs. Bentley occupied, they had then made the hole over the bed. On the previous night I had searched this room, and had assisted him to put the chest of drawers against the fireplace, in order to prevent the parties from coming down the chimney, if they took the fancy to come in that way; but although I searched minutely, I did not then notice the hole in the ceiling. We then went up into the roof, to make a search. In the first instance, I looked round outside on the roof to see where the bricks had been taken from. I could find no place from which they could have been removed. I told Mr. Bentley that I could see no place from which the bricks had been taken. There was a chimney at the end of the roof, but it was built of bright red bricks, but it was quite complete, and there was no place from which any bricks were missing; there was no break at all in the chimney, and besides that, it was built of a different kind of brick from those that were in the house. The bricks in the house were discoloured as if from long exposure to the weather, and had a lot of old mortar attached to them. A good many of them were broken, half bricks. He said that they had evidently been brought in from the roof, and I answered that I could see no place from which they could have been got, and besides I said, "What could be their object in bringing them in?" He said, that perhaps it was to fasten the window open. I asked, "What for?" and he said, "No doubt to facilitate their getting away, in the event of their being discovered." I looked out of the window, but I could see no place from which the bricks had been taken. I did not go out upon the roof, but I leaned out of the window as far as I could, so as to see well all round. I then said, "We had better make a close search in the roof." We looked over the whole of it, and on going over to the chimney, when near to it, Mr. Bentley picked up a slip of paper in which were a few wax matches rolled up. The paper seemed to be the part of a torn note, something like a sheet of note paper that had been written on, and then the written part torn off; a few wax matches were wrapped up in this paper, and on the floor was a gimlet. This gimlet had, about two inches up it, marked as if it had been used to dig into plaster or chalk. We also found an old knife covered with dirt and mud, as if it had been buried for some time;—it was a pocket knife. We then proceeded to look for the holes between the joists through the ceiling. I examined for a long time, but could not find them; I went down upon my hands and knees, and got picking about with the gimlet, but could not find the hole. At last I put the knife through the ceiling, and called out to Mrs. Bentley, "Is that anywhere near it?" She said it was about a foot to the left of the hole. Even with that I could not find the hole, and at last she said, "I will shew you where it is." She then took a long iron wire and passed it up through the hole, and then I saw where it was. 1299. By Mr. Lucas: Then you had some difficulty in finding the hole from the top, where you were? Yes.

1300. Were you led to believe from that, that the hole was made from below and not from above? No, I did not believe that it was made from below; it had evidently been made from the top with a gimlet, but the hole was too small to see anything through it. I said that it was absolutely impossible that the parties could have themselves discovered that they had made a mistake when they pierced through into the nursery, because they could not have seen sufficiently through the hole to know into what room they had got. I know by myself that you could not even see whether there was a hole or not from above, still less to know whether the hole had gone into the nursery or into the bedroom.

1301. By Mr. Piddington: Have you now finished your statement of circumstances that led to your change of opinion? No; I have many other circumstances.

1302. Are they of sufficient importance to be detailed to the Committee? They are of a similar kind to those I have already recounted.

1303. By Mr. Cowper: They are corroborative of the statement you have already made? Yes.

1304. By Mr. Piddington: Will you state succinctly anything in addition that you would wish the Committee to know? I had been in the habit, for some time prior to the Easter week when Mrs. Bentley was assaulted, to send one of my officers with Mrs. Bentley to Newtown.

1305. For what purpose? He went with her so that he might be within call, with a view to her protection in case of an assault, or that she might give the officer a signal in the event of her meeting with the person who had previously annoyed her, or who had been mixed up in any way with the matter. On the day previous to the Tuesday when Mrs. Bentley usually went to Newtown—that was on the Monday,—Mr. Bentley said to me that there would be no occasion for me to send an escort with Mrs. Bentley on the following day, as it being Easter week there would be holidays. On this account I did not send anybody to escort her, and I afterwards heard that she had not gone. On the Friday following I called, about 12 o'clock in the day, at the Bentleys' house, and I found that Mrs. Bentley had gone to Newtown. I made some remark about this, and said something about my not knowing that she was going to give lessons this week; I then looked at my watch, but found that it was then too late to send anybody with her. That was the afternoon that the assault took place. I then told Mr. Bentley that I was very much annoyed that Mrs. Bentley should have gone without an officer accompanying her, and that it had occurred entirely through his having told me not to send, as Mrs. Bentley was not going during the holidays. He said it was entirely his own fault—that it must have been a mistake on his part—that he only meant that I was not to send a man on the Tuesday—and that he must only blame himself for it if anything occurred. This was the very day that was selected for the alleged assault. These facts, and conversations I have had with Mrs. Bentley herself, at different times, with regard to occurrences that have taken place at Home with herself, and being similar to these I have narrated, and other facts that she has alleged to myself, led me to the conclusion to which I came, and my opinion was further corroborated by remarks made to me by Mrs. Bentley herself.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
21 Nov., 1862.

1306. How often have you visited the Bentleys' house during the present year? It is impossible to say how often. During the time I had the matter in hand I was there constantly—certainly every day, and sometimes twice and three times a day.

1307. Were you received there on the footing of a friend, or did you go there only in your official capacity as an officer of police? I went there as a detective officer, simply for the matter I had taken in hand.

1308. Were you ever invited to dinner or to tea? Yes, I have been.

1309. How often? Perhaps on two or three occasions.

1310. How did this occur—were you formally invited? Mr. Bentley would say to me, I want to tell you so-and-so, and if you come up at such a time we can talk the matter over, so come and have dinner with us; or perhaps he would say, you had better come to tea, and then we shall have time to talk about the matter, whatever it was.

1311. How often were you invited to dinner or tea? Specially invited, I think only two or three times.

1312. Was that to dinner or to tea, or to both? They used to have dinner and tea together, at half-past 6 o'clock.

1313. Then you have not dined there more than two or three times? Not invited. I may have been there just about dinner-time, and Mr. Bentley may have asked me to come in and dine with him, but I have not been there under a special invitation.

1314. Did you then consider yourself to have been received by them in the character of a friend or in that of a detective officer? I looked upon myself solely as an officer in the detective force, of whom Mrs. Bentley wished to make use, and to whom consequently she thought it worth while to pay some little attention.

1315. Do you consider that you were treated by Mr. Bentley as a friend or as an official? From his manner, he evidently wished to impress upon me that he desired to treat me as a friend. My own private opinion is different, but that was what he evidently wished to impress on me.

1316. How often were you at their house in the evening during the course of this inquiry? I was there nearly every evening, unless I had some particular matter of police business on hand that required to be attended to. I was there, however, whenever I could manage.

1317. Were you there fifty evenings during this inquiry? Yes, and more.

1318. Was Mr. Bentley always present with you and Mrs. Bentley? No, not always.

1319. Was he usually? Generally at the first part of the inquiry he was, but latterly he was not.

1320. How long did you usually stay when you went there in the evening? Sometimes an hour, sometimes an hour and a half, or two, three, or four hours, or even longer.

1321. Often until 11 or 12 o'clock at night? Yes, and sometimes until 2 o'clock in the morning.

1322. Were you engaged in your official inquiries when you stopped till that hour—till 2 in the morning? I considered myself to be upon duty and looking after the case.

1323. Was it necessary to the purposes of the case that you should stay in the house until that hour, on repeated occasions? No, nor I did not stay repeatedly, but I had a detective in the house, watching, whenever I was there.

1324. On all occasions? I was in the habit generally of taking one of my men with me; but I was by myself with Mrs. Bentley, as the man was down-stairs on the watch for anything that might take place in the house.

1325. Do you consider that Mr. Bentley was absent upon many occasions when you went to the house, in a way that you could not account for? Yes; I did think that he absented himself in an extraordinary way. On several occasions he retired to bed very early, when I did not think there was any occasion for it.

1326. And you were then left alone with Mrs. Bentley? Yes, I was.

1327. Was Mr. Bentley suffering from ill health? Yes, he used to complain a good deal of his health.

1328. Have you ever been engaged in similar inquiries where the parties have treated you in the same manner as the Bentleys did? I have never been engaged in such a case before, and I hope never to be again.

1329. On various occasions Mr. Bentley has himself sought your assistance? Yes, he was constantly sending me notes and sending down persons with messages to fetch me up to his house. He was always sending me messages or notes. If I was absent only a day from his house, I would be sure to receive a letter or a message with some fresh information or some additional facts in connection with his case.

- Sub-Inspector 1330. From your observations in this matter, are you under the impression that Mrs. Bentley was labouring under an excited state of mind—that she was suffering from some strong mental or bodily ailment? Yes, that is my impression. I have at times seen her very strongly excited, so much so as to faint, and she appeared to me generally to have very ill health.
1331. Have you any belief that this state of her health led to a morbid apprehension in her mind, not founded on reality? I do not think so.
1332. You had no reason to doubt the reality of her ill state of health? No, none whatever. I have seen her very ill, and in a very nervous and excited state. There could not possibly be any mistake about the reality of that.
1333. By Mr. Wilson: Have you ever paid attention to psychological subjects generally—subjects relating to the mental state of individuals? I have not.
1334. Do you then consider yourself capable of giving an answer to the question just asked you as to the mental state of Mrs. Bentley? I do not.
1335. Do you consider yourself capable of forming any opinion at all upon the subject? I do not.
1336. By Mr. Piddington: With reference to the particular time when Mrs. Bentley asserted that she was assaulted? Yes.
1337. Did you notice whether she presented the appearance of a person who had been assaulted? I cannot say that I did. I did not hear her complain of any injury. She did not say that she had been hurt, but she told me that the man had thrust his hand inside her jacket rather roughly, and her object in telling me this was to explain a remark made by the man. He said, "Ah! you have got one, too!" Mrs. Bentley said that the man had made this remark, thinking she had a revolver under her jacket. She was very much frightened she said, and she had put her hand on her heart, which was beating very much with the alarm. It was then that the man put his hand in her jacket, saying, "Ah! you have one, too!" She said that it was, no doubt, the same man who had stopped Mr. Boulanger on the Racecourse, for almost the same words were used to him; and as Mr. Boulanger had a revolver, "he no doubt thought," she said, "that I had one likewise." She did not, however, tell me of any wound or injury she had received, except that the man had used her rather roughly.
1338. By the Chairman: When do you state that you took this case in hand? The first time I took it in hand was about the latter end of last year—I think in the month of November.
1339. But the second time? I do not know the exact date, but it was on my return from the interior.
1340. Was it on March the 18th? Yes, I think that was the date. It was on a Tuesday.
1341. And Mr. Bentley, on the 22nd, offered you whatever money you required on account of expenses you might be put to? Yes; when I called upon him he told me he would defray all expense that I might incur.
1342. Did he say that he would give £100 for the discovery of the perpetrators of the outrage? Yes, he said he would give me a good guarantee that that amount should be paid.
1343. Did you take the case heartily in hand at that time? I did.
1344. What then did you mean by the following entry on the 24th: "Took the Bentleys' case in hand," seeing that you had first been spoken to about it on the 18th? It was because I had some other matter of pressing importance then on hand; and I had not the time to go into the case so closely as I wished to do until the latter date.
1345. Then you desired to put yourself into the case in earnest? Yes, from the first.
1346. Then this note I have just read has no particular meaning? No, except this: that when I took the case in hand, there were other matters that occupied my attention, so that I could not give my whole thoughts to the Bentley case. I believe that to be the reason for my making that entry, but I will not say positively that it was so. It must have been something of that kind.
1347. Mrs. Bentley, from the first, placed implicit confidence in you? That I do not know.
1348. Have you not an entry in your diary to that effect? I believe so, but of course I do not know whether she did so or not. She expressed herself in such a way as to lead to the belief that she did.
1349. And expressed a sense of safety when you had taken the matter up? Yes.
1350. And both she and Mr. Bentley paid you more than ordinary attention? Yes, they did.
1351. In fact, so much so, that their attentions became rather irksome? Yes.
1352. They paid you more attention than you, as a detective officer, had reason to expect? I do not know. I have received similar attentions from other parties. There is no reason why attention should not be shewn to a detective officer as well as to any other person.
1353. But what I mean is, that more attention was shewn to you than if you went there merely in your official capacity? Yes, I thought so.
1354. On the 31st March you had an interview with Captain M'Lerie, on the subject of the Bentley case? "Had a long conversation with Captain M'Lerie about Bentley's case, and suggested the insertion of an advertisement offering a reward for any information as to the writers; not in the hope of the advertisement being answered, but to enable me to put in a second and carry out an idea I have formed. Dined with Mr. and Mrs. Bentley and Boulanger at Bentley's house, and arranged about opening the ball to-morrow against the enemy. I have taken an uncommon interest in this case, and in poor Mrs. B. in particular."
1355. And you then suggested that a heavy reward should be offered by the Government for the discovery of the conspirators? Yes, I suggested that a reward should be offered.

1356. You state in your diary that you suggested the offering of a reward, not because you thought that anything would come of it, but merely to carry out some idea of your own? Yes.
1357. What was that idea? I cannot tell you what it was, because it is so long ago that I do not remember clearly what ideas were then passing in my mind; but I can tell you what I think it was. I am not quite certain, but I think it was this: I thought that by offering the reward, if it were Montagu and these other parties who were the conspirators, they would not be their own messengers, but would be compelled to get assistance from other parties to post the letters or to take them about to their different destinations. I thought that the offer of a reward would alarm the chief conspirators, and cause them to visit each other on the morning when the notice appeared, in order to see if by any possibility there were any of those they had employed who would be likely to give information in order to gain the reward. I thought that by keeping a watch upon the suspected parties we might see whether this notice had the effect of bringing them together, and if it did, that would have been a strong item against them.
1358. Did you put such a watch on them at that time? I believe I did.
1359. You say you "believe"—have you any doubt upon the subject? No, I am almost sure I did.
1360. Have you anything in your diary to shew that you did so? I do not know.
1361. Certain printed forms, shewing how each man of your force is disposed of upon every particular day, have been laid before the Committee by Captain M'Levie—if you employed your men in this way, would it be shewn amongst those returns? No, because in these matters the men are returned as being told off to special duty, without specifying the case; so that under the head "special duty" the men may have been told off either to this case or to some other.
1362. In the notice that was published was there any pardon, or hope of pardon, held out to an accomplice other than the actual conspirators, or to any of the conspirators giving information? I do not know whether there was in the first notice issued, but there was one that did so.
1363. Was this suggestion of yours to the Inspector General carried out—did the advertisement offering a reward appear? Yes, I believe so. I drew up an advertisement, which was approved of, and I then took it to Mr. Bentley. I stated my views to him, and explained how I hoped by this means to arrive at important facts. I gave him the advertisement, and he made some few alterations in it, and it appeared on the following day.
1364. On what day did it appear? I cannot give you the date.
1365. If you look at your diary on the 31st March, you will find an entry to the effect that you called on Mr. Bentley, and arranged with him about opening the ball against the enemy? Yes, there is such an entry.
1366. What was it that you then arranged? I cannot say precisely, but the steps I intended to take were then discussed, though I cannot remember the precise object I then had in my mind. I believe, however, that it was with regard to this advertisement. Mr. Boulanger was there at the time, I think, and entered into the discussion with us.
1367. Then the following day was the 1st April? Yes.
1368. And you cannot say whether you set any watch upon Messrs. Montagu and Cutolo? Yes, I say that I am almost sure I did.
1369. On the day the £100 reward appeared in the newspapers? Yes.
1370. On what day was that? That I do not know.
1371. Have you nothing here in the diary that will refresh your memory on that point? There is no entry here of the publication of the reward.
1372. Do you remember the 2nd April? Not particularly.
1373. Will you look at the entry in your diary, and see if anything particular occurred on that day? Yes, there is an entry here.
1374. Were you at Bentley's on that day? I was.
1375. Was there anything particular occurred on that day? Yes.
1376. Were you sent for by Mrs. Bentley, or did you go there on your own account? That I cannot say.
1377. Does not the entry begin, "Went to Bentley's?" Yes, but I may have gone in consequence of being sent for.
1378. Will you now read that entry? (Witness reads extract. See ante, p. 49, q. 1285.)
1379. Did you write that on the same day you are speaking of, and to which the entry refers? I did.
1380. You made that entry on the 2nd April, and the following one on the 3rd April? Yes.
1381. You made it on the day the transaction occurred? Yes, either on the day or during the night after I left. This may have been after midnight, and then, of course, it would have been entered on the following day, but they were always entered before I went to rest.
1382. Because I see this entry of the 2nd April is on the diary page of the 3rd? It is commenced on the page of the 2nd, but being a long entry has run over on to the page of the 3rd—that is the reason.
1383. Will you now read the entry of the 3rd April? (Entry read by witness.)
1384. Now let me ask you, are the contents of that and the former entry true? They are.
1385. Did you see a man upon the wall of Miss Flower's yard? No.
1386. Did you spread a report that Bentley's house had been robbed? I did.
1387. Were you aware that when you did so, you were saying that which was false? I was.
1388. Did you take any steps to find out whose footmarks these were that you saw? Yes, we talked the matter over.
1389. Did you take any steps to discover whose they were? I could not; they were in his garden, in which a number of persons were always moving about.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
21 Nov., 1862.

1390. Could you not have been able to come to some conclusion in regard to the strange footmarks? No, they were not sufficiently distinct; the flowers were trampled and the borders trodden, but there were no distinct footprints. I know that we were under the impression that the party had not gone out by Miss Flower's.

1391. But with regard to the footsteps, were they not distinct enough for you to know whether they were made by a large or a small foot? No.

1392. Did you pay particular attention to them? I did.

1393. And yet could come to no satisfactory conclusion in regard to them? No.

1394. How was it then that you came to make the remark you did in your diary? Because I thought that now I had some chance of success; that by putting a man on the watch I might discover the party, who would become bolder upon finding that he could obtain such an easy entrance into the house; and that before long I should be enabled to take them in the fact.

1395. Was it on this occasion that the back door was forced open? Yes.

1396. Was it on this occasion that the entry took place which I mistook for the entry that you were describing some time back to Mr. Piddington? Yes. I did not examine the place then so carefully as I did afterwards. On this occasion that we are now speaking of, I only examined the door and its fastenings very casually, without making any attempt to open it, as I did afterwards. It was on the subsequent occasion that I went minutely into the examination of the lock and the mode of gaining admission.

1397. Did you not say in your diary that you explained how the door had been opened? Yes, I may no doubt have said that the door was opened from the outside. I may also very possibly have said that it had been opened with a screw-driver, from the marks on it.

1398. By a screw-driver or a jemmy? Yes.

1399. Or by some other strong lever? I do not know that I used the word lever.

1400. But if a screw-driver or jemmy, or a lever of that kind had been used in this way, must not the fastenings of the door have been forcibly wrenched off before the door could be opened? I do not think that a person from the outside would be able to get at the fastenings of the door with a screw-driver or a jemmy.

1401. Yet if the door had been forced open by either the one or the other, would not the fastenings have been forced off before it could have been opened in that way? I think that it might have forced off the lock, except that the lock was new, and was a very strong one; and if a screw-driver or jemmy had been used, I think the door would have broken before the lock would have given way.

1402. Did you satisfy yourself as to the way in which the fastenings had been forced, and the door opened? I believed then that the door had been forced open from the outside.

1403. You would not form such a belief without some grounds? No.

1404. Upon what grounds then did you form it? From the particulars which Mr. Bentley told me, and from his statement that the lock appeared to him to have been battered or wrenched. That was what he told me, but I did not make a minute examination myself.

1405. And do you, in the execution of your duty as a detective police officer, come to a place where a door has been broken open, and pretend to explain how it has been broken open without paying attention to the state of the fastenings? I did pay attention to it, and I say that there were marks on the door that led me to believe that it had been forced. But at that time I took Mr. Bentley's statements so much for granted that I was satisfied that the matter was quite clear, and that entrance had been obtained from the outside. I did examine closely into the state of the lock.

1406. Did it appear to you to have been wrenched? Yes, it appeared to be loose, as if it had been forced. I believed firmly at that time that the door had been opened from the outside.

1407. Do you believe so now? No, I do not. When I came to examine it more closely, and to find out the only way in which I could open the door from the outside, I was persuaded that it had not been opened in that way.

1408. Did you try to force it open with a screw-driver or a jemmy, to see what effect the application of such a lever would have? No; because if an attempt had been made to open it in that way, there would have been some marks of the instrument left behind, and they would have been very different marks from those I saw.

1409. How was it then, that on the 3rd you explained in your diary how the door had been opened? Because I saw marks upon the door, and I took Mr. Bentley's statement, without trying myself to see if the door could be opened in that way from pressure at the spot where the marks were made; and also because the lock presented an appearance of being battered or twisted. It was from these circumstances that I was led to make the remarks which appear in my diary.

1410. By Mr. Johnson: Is not this a pure invention of your own about the battered appearance of the lock? I did not say so.

1411. That is the evidence you have given. (Preceding evidence read.) Were there any marks upon the door on that occasion? I cannot say.

1412. Are you prepared to swear that there were marks which you saw as of a jemmy or a screw-driver on the door on that occasion? I do not recollect, at the present moment, whether there were or not; but if it is stated in the entry in my diary that there were, then the entry is correct and I saw them. The matter was fresh in my mind when I made the entry, and it must have been correct.

1413. Can you say whether there were any such marks on the 3rd April? I do not recollect the day.

1414. On the day when the music was found torn and scattered about the room? Yes.

1415. Did you then examine the door? I did.

1416. And you say that it was Mr. Bentley who told you that the lock of the door was battered or wrenched? Yes.
1417. Now is not all this a pure invention on your part? No, it is not. I have a perfect recollection of a conversation I had with him on the subject of the door, but whether he said the lock was battered and wrenched I am not prepared to assert positively; but he told me something to that effect—that the lock had been strained or tampered with in some way. I know we had a conversation upon the subject, and as I then relied upon all his statements, I was satisfied with the explanation he gave; I did not then doubt him, and at that time I had no doubt upon the subject.
1418. No doubt that the door had been opened from the outside? No.
1419. Then you admit that you may have been mistaken as to the precise words used, but as to the fact of such a representation having been made to you by Mr. Bentley, you cannot be mistaken? No, I believe not.
1420. Something of the kind must have occurred, though the exact words may not have been used? Yes, I think so.
1421. You think so—have you any doubt about it? I cannot recollect the words used, although I recollect the conversation. I cannot say positively, therefore, what particular words were used; I can only speak as to the general effect of the conversation.
1422. Can you say that any one word was spoken then with regard to violence having been used upon the lock on that occasion? I may have been mistaken. It is possible that such words may not have been made use of at that time. I may have been away from the house and then returned to it, and the conversation may have occurred then, but that such a conversation did occur I am certain.
1423. I mean in reference to the entry on the night when the music was torn and scattered about the floor? Yes.
1424. You are quite clear upon that point? Yes.
1425. That such a conversation did occur? Yes, I believe so.
1426. Are you quite certain? As certain as I well can be. I do not recollect the conversation at the present moment, but if it is entered in my diary it must have occurred.
1427. But are you certain that a conversation occurred in which Mr. Bentley stated that the door of the back room had been battered or wrenched, or forced in any way? Yes, I am sure that a conversation of the kind did take place.
1428. With reference to the entry made on the night when the music was torn and scattered? Yes.
1429. By the Chairman: You acknowledge to having upon that occasion spread a false report; by reporting, without any foundation, that Mr. Bentley's house had been robbed? Yes.
1430. And in order to authenticate that report, you invented a tale of having seen a man upon the wall dividing Bentley's yard from Miss Flower's? Yes; but I have some recollection of something having been said of a man having been seen on the wall.
1431. That you had seen him? No, but that Mr. Bentley or Mr. Boulanger—one or the other of them—had seen a man or the shadow of a man on the wall, and that some remark was made to me on the subject of the man having come over the garden wall, and what induced them to think so. I recollect telling Miss Flower these particulars, without, of course, informing her of the exact reason of my coming.
1432. Did you tell her that you had seen a man on the wall? No, but that a man had been seen on the wall.
1433. Will you refer to this passage in your diary? Yes. (Witness read the passage "that a man had been seen on the wall.")
1434. Was not that circumstance of a man having been seen on the wall a pure invention of your own? No, I have a distinct recollection of something of the kind taking place either with Mr. Boulanger or Mr. Bentley, though I do not recollect which of the two. There was something of the kind told me, either that a man had been seen on the wall, or the shadow of a man on the wall. When I went to Miss Flower's, it was for the purpose of ascertaining if Mr. Montagu was in the habit of visiting there, or whether either of the other suspected parties were. If they were, it would have been very possible for one or the other of them to have passed over the wall and so into Bentley's yard. Thus, if they had been there on the occasion of the forcing open the door, it would have been a very strong point of suspicion against them. But whether they had been or not, I thought that if I stated the real circumstances that had transpired, these parties would have been put on the alert, and for that reason I made up the accounts about the Bentleys' house having been robbed. There is no doubt but that I stated what was untrue, but if I did so, it was only because I thought I was justified in taking that course. I considered that the end I had in view justified the means.
1435. Do you remember upon one occasion having a conversation with Mr. Bentley in regard to Miss Flower's, to this effect,—that you would cause a person to be placed in her house as a lodger, in order to be a spy upon the goers and comers? Yes, I told him I thought I should do so.
1436. And do you consider that you have power to place your men, as spies, in the houses of respectable citizens? No, not without the authorization of the Inspector General. In this case I could have done so had I so wished. If I had sent a man it would have been to have watched the parties who went there, to see if any of them ever went over the wall.
1437. Would he have been a detective officer? Yes, but he would have been sent only with the sanction of the Inspector General. I suggested it to the Inspector General, but he desired me to delay this step for a time and try other plans before I adopted this.
1438. On the 4th April you went to Bentley's next? Yes.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
21 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector 1439. About what time? About 7:30 p.m.
 C. E. 1440. Will you read from your diary a statement of what then occurred? "April 3—
 Harrison. "About 7:30 p.m. I went to Bentley's, and left about 9 o'clock. They went up-stairs 21 Nov., 1862. "immediately afterwards. Mrs. B. heard a footstep in the passage, and on Bentley going "to look, he found a letter on the passage window-sill about half way up the stairs. The "letter as usual contained threats, if she persisted in playing in public with Mr. Boulanger.
 "Mr. B. informed me that they must have come through the kitchen and up the stairs, as "the verandah door was not open. The letter was addressed to the house in Elizabeth-street,
 "and had a 2d. stamp on, evidently intended to be posted in the first instance. I hope to "God they may come to the house again, and I would give little for their chance of escape.
 "Bentley and Boulanger are both timid, and fear murder, but I never saw such a courageous "little woman as Mrs. B. She is perfectly fearless."
 1441. You saw this letter? That I cannot say.
 1442. Do you mean to say that you entered this occurrence, detailing the finding of a letter, without having seen the letter? I believe I saw it; but at that time I placed such confidence in Mr. Bentley, that if he had told me he had received a letter, I should have entered it in my diary as being the case, the same as if I had seen it.
 1443. But you do not state here that he had told you he had received a letter? No; that he had got one.
 1444. If he had told you, would you not have so said in your diary; that "Mr. Bentley told me he had received a letter"? No, I should have stated the fact that he had received a letter.
 1445. In conducting your inquiries as a detective officer, do you make entries of matters as facts without first satisfying yourself of the truth of the statements you receive? I could do nothing else but believe him in the first instance, when he came to me of his own motion to make inquiry into his case, and stated to me circumstances which he considered tended to criminate Cutolo, Montagu, and San Just, whom at the time I regarded as the guilty parties.
 1446. But when a detective officer undertakes to conduct an inquiry into a case, does he not do so without prejudice or without favour to all parties? Yes, certainly.
 1447. Does he not look only to the truth, and regard every incident that he comes across solely in the light of truth? Yes.
 1448. Have there not been cases where parties have raised false reports about others, which reports have, upon inquiry, been brought back to and fixed upon themselves—they being the guilty party instead of those whom they had accused? No case of the kind has ever come within my knowledge.
 1449. Have you never had a case, for instance, of a man coming to the police, and stating to them that he had been robbed, when it has been proved afterwards, most conclusively, that he has never been robbed at all? Yes, there have been such cases.
 1450. Is not that a similar case to what you believe the present to be? No; for in those cases all the parties are entire strangers to the police; but in this case there are so many small circumstances coming together, to make anything approaching to a fact, that it is altogether different from a case where you have a distinct fact to start with. But, with regard to the letter, I do not say that I did not see it, but only that I do not remember having done so.
 1451. Was not this an important letter? I looked upon all the letters received as being important letters.
 1452. Was not this a more than usually important letter? I think not.
 1453. Was it not a threatening letter? I hardly remember.
 1454. Is this the letter—(Letter handed to witness)? I believe it is.
 1455. It contains threatening language against Mrs. Bentley? It does.
 1456. The others were not all threatening letters? No.
 1457. Then any letter that contained positively threatening language was of more importance than one that did not, or that merely made allusion to some appointments? No; I looked upon all the letters then as being of equal importance. I no doubt did see this letter, but as to saying whether I had it in my hands and read it, or whether Mr. Bentley read it to me, I cannot do so.
 1458. Did you look at it? Yes, I think I began to read—I tried to read the first part—and then the rest of it was read to me by Mr. Bentley, as I only got on very queerly with it.
 1459. Was Mrs. Bentley at all timid upon receiving this letter—I think you said that she was of a nervous temperament? No, she was invariably very cool over these matters. I asked her if she was at all frightened at the threats held out; and she said no, her only fear was lest any evil should be done to the children.
 1460. Was Mr. Boulanger frightened—he was a very timid man, I believe? I do not know whether he was much frightened at it; but I do not give him credit for any great amount of courage.
 1461. Mr. Bentley was much afraid upon this occasion? I do not remember.
 1462. Will you refer to your diary? Yes. Mr. Bentley often expressed himself as very timid; and Mr. Boulanger said that he was very much afraid that his own house would be entered some time, and that he would be murdered. He used to carry a revolver about with him, and in fact so did Mr. Bentley.
 1463. At whose suggestion was this? At his own.
 1464. Not at yours? He borrowed my revolver: he lent his to Mr. Boulanger, and was then obliged to borrow mine.
 1465. Did you suggest to him the advisability of arming himself? I do not remember that I did; I may have done so; I know I told him he had better keep arms in his house.

1466. Then this threatening letter—which had the effect of frightening two men—did not alarm Mrs. Bentley, but was received very coolly by her? No, I did not say that.
1467. That is the statement made in your diary? Yes, as regards Mr. Bentley and Mr. Boulanger, but not as regards Mrs. Bentley.
1468. Well then, when this letter had the effect of frightening two men, did you not think it your duty as a police officer to look into the matter and examine the letter for yourself? Perhaps it may have been.
1469. But was it or was it not your duty? No doubt it was; but at that time I did not think there was any doubt to be thrown on Mr. Bentley's statements.
1470. Will you read from your diary the entry of what occurred on April 5? "April 5—Was fully occupied all day, inquiring, arranging, and plotting how to circumvent those damned anonymous scoundrels;—their boldness is beyond everything I ever met with. They must be mad or desperate to run such risks, and for what object? It can only be, knowing that Mr. Bentley is a great sufferer and Mrs. B. is likewise in ill health, that they hope to drive them away from Sydney; and the evil reports circulated touching Mrs. Bentley's fame would, to a certain extent, be confirmed. Determined to conceal a detective in the house, and told Clark off for the duty. Called in at B.'s; watched down stairs, in hopes of some-one coming, till 11 o'clock. Detective Clark remains till 1 a.m."
1471. What did this plotting consist of? I do not remember now.
1472. One part of it, however, was to place a detective in the house? It was.
1473. Did you do so? I did.
1474. Did the detective you placed in the house discover any suspicious circumstances in regard to the Bentleys—did he report any such to you? I am not certain whether he did or not, but I think he did. I think it was he who reported to me that he had seen a party, whom he took for Mr. San Just, come up to the corner of the next house, then down a lane, and round past Bentley's front door.
1475. Did that in any way tend to implicate the Bentleys in this transaction? No.
1476. But what I asked you was, whether this officer ever reported to you any circumstance that would in any way tend to implicate the Bentleys in this conspiracy? No, I do not recollect that he did.
1477. If he had done so, you would no doubt have recollected it? No doubt.
1478. And would have considered it a matter of sufficient importance to be entered in your diary? Yes, I think so.
1479. Did any of your men, up to the time when the assault on the Newtown Road took place, ever report to you any circumstance inculcating the Bentleys? No.
1480. On the 6th April what steps did you take towards the elucidation of this matter? I cannot remember.
1481. Refresh your memory with the diary, and read the passage under that date? "I put on a disguise, and shepherded Bentley's house till 2 in the morning without success. Clark and Sanderson have been watching Montagu and Cutolo, and without it leading to any result."
1482. Did you discover anything upon that occasion? No.
1483. Did you watch Cutolo and Montagu on that day? They were watched, but I did not watch them.
1484. Was any report made to you by the detectives employed to watch Cutolo and Montagu, of a suspicious nature, as regarded those gentlemen? Yes, there were one or two facts mentioned to me that looked at the time as if they were of a suspicious character, but I really forget now what they were—they were some very trivial circumstances.
1486. And as such would have had a place with the other facts in your diary? No, I did not enter all these minor circumstances in my diary—I have omitted to make entries for days together when nothing of importance occurred; it was never intended to form a complete history of the case, but was only meant for my own private purposes, and I jotted down material facts here and there for my future guidance.
1487. Admitting that it was for your own private purposes, and to refresh your memory upon important circumstances that occurred in this and other cases, how do you account for it that, when your officers reported to you what you admit to be suspicious circumstances against the gentlemen supposed to be implicated in this conspiracy, you made no entry of these circumstances in the diary? I think if the circumstances had been of any importance I should have entered them. Perhaps they were of importance, though I did not think them so. Surely no blame can be attached to me if, keeping the book for my own guidance, I entered only those facts that I wished to keep before me.
1488. You acknowledge, however, that the report by your officers of a suspicious act on the part of these gentlemen would have been a matter of importance? It would depend entirely upon what the suspicious act was. It may have been that these gentlemen met together in the street, and that they talked together.
1489. Would that have been a suspicious circumstance? Yes, it may have been one when coupled with something else. Sometimes the merest trifle is suspicious to an officer who is employed to hunt up a case, when it would be looked upon as nothing by anybody else.
1490. Will you read from your diary the account of what occurred on the 7th April? "During the afternoon I compared some of C., M., and Mrs. H.'s writing with the anonymous letters. A very strong resemblance between M.'s and them. There can be no moral doubt on the subject. Ordered Sanderson for duty inside the house till further orders."
1491. Who is meant by C.? Signor Cutolo.
1492. And M., I suppose, is Mr. Montagu? Yes.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
21 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector 1493. And who is Mrs. H.? Mrs. Heath, widow of Mr. Heath the chemist.
 C. E. 1494. What did you mean by saying that you had no moral doubt on the subject? I meant Harrison. by that, the writing of some of the letters very much resembled the writing of Mr. Montagu, and that I believed at the time that those letters were written by him.
- 21 Nov., 1862. 1495. By Mr. Piddington: Mrs. Heath is the lady who subsequently married Signor Cutolo? She did I believe; at that time though I was not aware of it. I was induced to compare Mrs. Heath's writing with some of the letters, on account of an observation made by the Bentleys that they (meaning Cutolo and Mrs. Heath) were playing a deep game together.
1496. Whose writing did you compare Signor Cutolo's writing with? Not with anyone's writing, but with some of the anonymous letters.
1497. With which particular letter? That I cannot say.
1498. Can you not point out the letters with which the writing of the three persons you mention—Mrs. Heath, Signor Cutolo, and Mr. Montagu—was compared—(Various letters produced, and laid before witness)? No, I do not remember. The letters were in three different styles of handwriting, and I compared the writing of these three persons with the different writing of the letters.
1499. And did you consider the writing of the anonymous letters to be like the style of writing of these persons? I thought that one of the three styles of writing was similar to a specimen of Mr. Montagu's handwriting that I was furnished with.
1500. This letter, in what has been described to this Committee as in a "peculiar handwriting," is the one I believe that you compared and thought like Mr. Montagu's handwriting? Yes, I believe it is.
1501. Which of the styles did you compare the writing of Signor Cutolo with? I cannot say. Mr. Bentley gave me a letter written in each of the different styles, and I compared them with the handwriting of the parties named. After I had done so I returned the letters to him.
1502. He gave you the original letters, in order to compare them with the handwriting you had of these persons? Yes.
1503. Is this letter now produced similar in style of handwriting to the specimen of writing you had of Signor Cutolo's? I cannot say for certain.
1504. Is this letter the one you compared with the specimen of Signor Cutolo's writing?
 Yes, I believe it is.
1505. What did you compare it with? I compared it with specimens I had of the handwriting of Signor Cutolo, Mr. Montagu, and Mrs. Heath.
1506. And did you find it resemble the writing of Signor Cutolo? There was a faint resemblance.
1507. Is this (writing produced) the specimen of Signor Cutolo's writing that you compared with the anonymous letters? No, I had others; I do not think I ever had this writing in my possession; I had several different specimens of the writing of Mr. Montagu and Mrs.
 Heath, and I compared them with the different styles of writing. The only letter I could find similar in character to these handwritings was the one produced, which was somewhat in the style of Montagu's writing. In fact I considered it to be his handwriting.
1508. Did you rely entirely upon your own judgment, in making this comparison and coming to this conclusion? No; I shewed the two to the Inspector General of Police, and had his opinion on it.
1509. Did he notice the resemblance? Yes; he was of the same opinion as myself—that there was a strong general resemblance of the styles of writing of the two letters.
1510. Did you shew the writing to anyone else? Yes, I shewed the letter and the sample of writing to the Manager of one of the Sydney banks.
1511. Who was it? Mr. Young, Manager of the English, Scottish, and Australian Bank.
1512. Did you shew the writing to anyone else? I may have done so, but I do not recollect just now whether I did or not.
1513. And what was the result of these comparisons? As far as I was myself concerned, I believed that the letter I had of Montagu's was the same handwriting as the round writing of the anonymous letters. I came to this conclusion on a comparison of this style of writing with a letter I had of Montagu's, and which was said to be in his writing. I shewed this letter of Montagu's, and the anonymous letter with which I compared it, to the Inspector General, and pointed out to him what I considered to be points of resemblance, and he concurred with me. I also shewed the two to Mr. Young, Manager of the English, Scottish, and Australian Bank, and he was likewise of opinion that it was the same handwriting—that the same hand wrote the two.
1514. Did you shew Cutolo's writing and the letter with which you compared it, to the same persons? I did.
1515. And did you shew Mrs. Heath's writing to the same persons? I do not know that I did; I think not.
1516. You have made an entry in your diary to the effect that you did? Have I? In that case I did so. (Diary referred to by witness.) No, I say here that I compared the three handwritings, not that I took them to other parties to compare.
1517. Yes, but then I asked you if you had formed your conclusions on your own unaided judgment, or whether it had been by the assistance of the opinions of others; and you then mentioned the names of other persons to whom you had referred the handwriting, and who had come to the same conclusion as yourself? Yes; but the fact of the case was this, that in the first instance, I compared the handwriting of Montagu, Cutolo, and Mrs. Heath with the different styles of anonymous letters. I could find no resemblance between these letters and the writing of Cutolo and Mrs. Heath, and that being the case I do not know if I shewed either of these to the Inspector General; but I did shew him Montagu's, because there

there was a resemblance, and I asked him if he did not see it, and he said, "Yes," he did. I then shewed it to Mr. Young, but whether I took him Cutolo's and Mrs. Heath's writing to compare I do not now recollect.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
21 Nov., 1862.

1518. In making this comparison, did you trust to your unaided eye, or did you submit them to a stronger test, by the application of a magnifying-glass? Yes, I did apply that test. I procured a large magnifying-glass. I took a sheet of clean paper, and laid it down over the writing, so as to examine it line by line, the letter with the specimen; and in this way I made a most minute comparison of the two.

1519. Did Mr. Young assist you in this examination? No, not with the magnifying-glass.

1520. Did he never use the magnifying-glass to make a comparison? That I do not recollect.

1521. Did the Inspector General do so? Yes, I myself shewed him the writing through the glass, and called his attention to what I considered to be the points of resemblance.

1522. So that you subjected the writing to a most searching investigation before you made the entry in your diary that there was no moral doubt in regard to the complicity of Montagu? I had no doubt then; I believed firmly that Montagu was the author of the letters.

1523. And that being your belief, you took every means in your power to prove its correctness? I did. Now I recollect, I think I have in my office the letter of Montagu's that these notes were compared with; I borrowed it for the purpose, and unless I returned it to the party who lent it me, I have it by me still.

1524. By Mr. Johnson: What became of the other subjects of comparison—I mean the supposed handwriting of Mrs. Heath and Signor Cutolo? I do not know; I may have some of them by me now in my office; I know I borrowed a good many specimens from different parties, and many of them I returned after I had done with them.

1525. Did you get any of these specimens from the Bentleys? That I do not know.

1526. By Mr. Morris: Is the letter of Mr. Montagu's, that the Inspector General handed in to this Committee, the one you used in making your comparison? It is not.

1527. By Mr. Johnson: None of these specimens came from the Bentleys? With regard to Montagu, I think not; but I think I got a specimen or two of Mrs. Heath's writing from Mrs. Bentley.

1528. By Mr. Piddington: Your suspicions respecting the Bentleys, are they founded upon a comparison of these letters with the handwriting of the Bentleys? No.

1529. Have you ever instituted that comparison? I have lately.

1530. And are your suspicions strengthened by that comparison? They are.

1531. By the Chairman: What occurred on the 8th April? "Had plenty of time to think over the Bentley case. I get more and more interested in it every day, and have not as yet got one tittle of legal evidence against the guilty parties. Watch, watch, watch, and all to no purpose. But patience! I will succeed eventually, or I shall consider myself unfit to be at the head of the detectives."

1532. Why was this not entered upon the extracts made from your journal? Solely because I did not think it was necessary to do so.

1533. Will you read from your diary what occurred on the 9th April? "Went to Bentley's in the evening; Boulanger was there, and we talked over the prospects of success. Boulanger was for publishing all the letters; we came to high words on the subject, and I threatened to have no more to do with the matter. It was then determined to have no more to do with the thought of making the affair public, and a concert was proposed in aid of the funds of St. Vincent's."

1534. Is it not somewhat remarkable that you should have been opposed to the publication of these letters? I think not; I can assign a reason for so doing. When I had the matter in hand before, my services were abruptly brought to a conclusion by some remarks made to me by Mr. Hanson. He met me in the street, and after some remark upon my conduct of the case, he concluded by saying, that if Bentley had sent me a cheque for £50 I would have taken more interest in the case. I felt very much annoyed and hurt that such a remark should have been made to me after all the trouble I had taken, and I at once withdrew from the case.

1535. Had he offered you a cheque for £50 would you have accepted it? No, I would not.

1536. Is there any similarity between the offer to you of a cheque for £50 and the publication of these letters? No, none; but having had my first engagement in the case brought to so abrupt a conclusion by the intermeddling of Mr. Bentley's friends, and having a second time undertaken it and brought it up to a point at which I hoped to be successful, I did feel annoyed that, by a second intermeddling, I should, by the publication of these letters, be deprived of the success I anticipated in unravelling the mystery. I thought it too bad that, after promising to leave the matter entirely in my hands—for it was only upon that condition that I undertook the case a second time—they should bring all hope of success to a conclusion by publishing the letters, and so putting parties on their guard. I said as much to Mr. Bentley, and he told me that it was not he, but Mr. Boulanger, who wished to have the letters published—that he was very hot tempered, and wanted to have the whole thing exposed to the public. I shewed him how it would upset all my plans, and threatened, if there was any further talk of publication, to at once throw the matter up.

1537. On the 10th you withdrew the man from Bentley's house, I think? Yes. "Withdrew the man out of B.'s house, and set him to watch outside in Elizabeth-street, Clark taking the rear in Castlereagh-street."

1538. So that, up to that time, you had a man watching in the house? Yes.

1539. Had he been in the house from the time you placed him there to the time when you say here that you withdrew him? I think he was there every night.

Sub-Inspector 1540. Do you know that he was from your own knowledge? No, I do not. I know that he
C. E. was ordered to go there every night until further orders, and I believe he followed his Harrison. instructions.

21 Nov., 1862. 1541. What occurred on the 11th—will you read from your diary the account you have there given? “According to promise made to Mrs. Bentley, I sent Sanderson out to Newtown, “ to act as escort to her, remaining there in case any one should be lurking about, and return
“ with her after she had finished her lessons, Mrs. Bentley having expressed a fear that some“ thing might happen to her, the road being very lonely. Called on Mrs. B. at 3 “ o’clock, and found that nothing had taken place at Newtown. Detective Sanderson had “ been round the place—nothing of moment. Ordered him to take up watching again to“ night, inside Bentley’s house. To-morrow night I will withdraw the man from the inside “ again, and place him in the street. I am not too certain, in spite of all B. and Mrs.
“ B. may say, that they are above suspicion—I mean the servants.”

1542. Then at this time you suspected the servants? I did not suspect them, but I was not altogether certain about them.

1543. Mr. Bentley stated that he had every confidence in them? He did, but he could assign no reason for this confidence.

1544. You had had conversations with him in regard to the servants previously to this? I had.

1545. Had you made the particular religion of the servants any part of the suspicion you entertained against them? No, I have no recollection of having done anything of the kind. I do not think that I was even aware of what religion they were.

1546. Did you ever ask Mr. Bentley if his servants were Roman Catholics? No, I think not.

1547. Nor made their being Roman Catholics a reason for suspecting them? No. I see no reason why, being Roman Catholics, they should be mixed up in this more than if they were Protestants. I simply asked him what kind of girls his servants were, and he said they were very good girls—that they went to mass regularly, and that he had every confidence in them.

1548. On the 12th Mrs. Bentley was again disturbed? Yes.

1549. Will you read the entry in your diary of that date? “Questioned Mrs. B. closely “ about the motives for the enemy’s conduct, and got from her all the particulars, from the “ sending of the first letter to Hanson. She said the agony she had endured was great, but “ that she did not feel the least dread of violence, in spite of the threats in the letters. Her “ torture was caused by the aspersions cast on her moral character. I do pity her very much,
“ and I don’t wonder at the interest she creates in all circles; and I sometimes lose patience
“ when I think of the want of success and failure of all my plans. About 9 o’clock I was “ interrupted in my conversation with Boulanger and Mrs. B. by Bentley, who called out “ from the dining-room down-stairs. On going to him I found he was examining the “ verandah door, which was partly open. He informed me he had fastened it on our going up“ stairs, half an hour previous. I went round to Clark, who was stationed in Castlereagh-
“ street, and found no person had got in by the back. We could find no letter. The scoun“ drels have probably been disturbed by Mr. B. going down-stairs. The matter is now “ beyond a doubt; they could not gain admittance by the back or front, as both were closely “ watched by Sanderson and Clark; they therefore either came over Miss Marshall’s wall or “ from one of the adjoining houses. I requested Bentley to make a careful search about the “ premises in the morning.”

1550. By Mr. Piddington: Is that entry in your own handwriting? It is.

1551. By the Chairman: Could admission have been gained from the trap-door leading from the roof, then down-stairs and into the room the door of which was found open? Yes, it could. Anybody knowing the house might have come down that way.

1552. Were your suspicions ever directed to that quarter, as a means by which the person may have gained admission? No.

1553. Did you ever search the house to see if the persons had obtained admission in any other way than through the door? No.

1554. In what way did you come to the conclusion that the party came in by the verandah doorway? From the fact that it was the easiest way of gaining admission into the house. They could get into the yard over the wall of the adjoining houses from the street, whereas it would be impossible to get on to the roof from the street. There were four large houses in a block, and to get on the roof the parties must come from one of the other houses.

1555. Had you any watch upon the adjoining houses? Yes, there was a man stationed on the look-out upon the whole of them.

1556. So that you had the whole neighbourhood under surveillance? Not the whole neighbourhood, but the four houses were.

1557. The whole block, then? Yes, there was a strict watch upon that.

1558. This was the occasion, I believe, when you discovered the footmarks plainly marked in the loam? No, that was on the previous occasion, when the music was torn and scattered about. This was the occasion, I believe, when I saw the two footmarks in one; however, I do not recollect distinctly, but I think so.

1559. Refer to the diary, and refresh your memory? Yes, I am right. This was the occasion when the letter was found in the flower-stand, and when the large footmarks, or the two small footmarks, were seen on the verandah. The previous occasion was when the footmarks were on the flower-beds and over the wall of the garden.

1560. Will you tell the Committee how you went to work to discover the length and breadth of these footmarks? Directly Mr. Bentley pointed them out to me, I examined them very minutely and very closely.

1561. Was this at night, or on the following morning? In the morning.
1562. Did you, before you left at night, give instructions to Mr. Bentley to look into the matter himself in the morning? I did. I had a conversation with him on the subject, and I told him that my idea was, that the parties who had been there were on the alert somewhere at the back, and no doubt in view of the place; and I gave him as my reason for not going out to look about, that I wished the parties, if they were on the look-out, to believe that the letter had not been discovered, so as by making them fancy that their visit was undiscovered, to induce them to come back again, when there would be a chance of their discovery. I told him that if they did not do so, he had better examine the yard, for footprints, in the morning.
1563. You call yourself a detective officer, I believe? Yes.
1564. And I think you have said that it was raining that night? Yes.
1565. Now, if it were raining all night, what effect would the rain have upon the footprints before morning? I do not know that it rained all through the night.
1566. But supposing it did, what would the effect be—would it not be to obliterate the footmarks? No doubt it would.
1567. Did it rain all night on that occasion? I cannot say.
1568. How long did it rain? I know it rained for some time afterwards.
1569. Were they obliterated? I cannot say. I knew nothing of the footmarks until the following morning.
1570. That is the morning after the man had been there? I cannot say if the man was there.
1571. After the time, then, that he was said to have been there? Yes.
1572. What would be the effect of the night's rain, supposing he had been there? In the garden the effect would be to obliterate the footprints; but that would not be the case in the verandah. That was covered in, and of course the footprints coming in from the wet ground would be very clearly marked.
1573. How was the verandah covered in? With curtains hung down in front, so as to conceal the room from parties at the back of the other houses.
1574. Were those curtains drawn at the time? They were closed. The verandah was so closed in that parties at the back, in the other houses, could not see what was going on in the room.
1575. So that no rain could beat in on the verandah? Precisely.
1576. And the verandah was quite dry? I do not say that it was quite dry, but it was sufficiently so to retain any mark that was left on it.
1577. Did the rain beat in? I cannot say.
1578. When you looked out into the verandah to see if any letter had been left, did you see if the rain had beat in or not? I did not examine it for the purpose.
1579. Did you look about outside at all? No, I did not. I have explained before that I did not wish to go outside, because I desired to keep the matter so that, if the parties were on the look-out, we should not alarm them, and that they should return. I told him to look out for marks in the morning.
1580. And were you never to examine for yourself? The reason was, that if the parties were concealed in the neighbouring yards or houses, they would be sure to be watching from the windows, or from some place of concealment, to see if their coming to the house had been discovered, so that if we went looking about with a light for steps and other marks, they would take the alarm and would not return; whilst if we were quiet they might fancy they were not discovered and so would return, and we might get an opportunity of catching them.
1581. Did you say they had got away by the garden? Yes.
1582. Supposing they had done so, and that they were then concealed in the rear of the house, could they have seen you if you had gone out in the verandah, seeing that it was closed in? It would depend upon where they were. The front of the verandah was closed in, but the ends were open.
1583. Could any person in the garden see in at the ends of the verandah? No.
1584. Does the verandah extend the whole length of the house? No, not the whole length, but very nearly.
1585. How far does it extend? There is a verandah to each house in the row of four, with just a break of a short distance between them.
1586. Is there not a staircase leading to the garden? Yes.
1587. And the verandah comes down to the side of it? Yes, and goes part of the way to the end of the house. There is a verandah to each house, so close to each other, that anybody might get from the verandah of one house on to that of the next.
1588. So that a person could stand with one foot on each verandah? Yes.
1589. Did you measure the length and breadth of the footmarks, and compare them with the footprints of Mr. Bentley? No, I did not.
1590. Why? Because he told me they were the footsteps of the parties who had come there that night, and I had no reason to doubt him, especially as he pointed them out to me. He said that he had discovered them the first thing in the morning, and that he had ascertained that they had not been made by the servants or any person about the house. I took notice of the size, and he then made the remark that he thought they must be the marks of the big man with the monkey jacket and cabbage-tree hat, who had been seen talking with Mr. Montagu. I then looked closely into the foot-prints, and found that it was not one foot-mark, but two, one on top of the other, and I shewed Mr. Bentley the impression of the two heel-marks in the one track.
1591. Do you mean to say that there was not the impression of a larger foot below the place where these two foot-prints were? I could not say that. It would be impossible to say what was below.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

21 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
21 Nov., 1862.
1592. You are aware that Mr. Bentley had been making an examination of the ground before you were there in the morning? I am.
1593. Might not he, in making his search, have trodden on the larger foot-print? I do not see how he would have left any mark behind, for unless he had been walking out upon the soft damp mould of the garden, the impression of his foot would not have remained at all.
1594. Were there no foot-steps in the garden? I saw none, except upon the first occasion, when the music was torn and scattered.
1595. Unless the dirt were dry, would not the two small foot-prints have obliterated the large one? No, I think not; they would not have gone so fairly on to it as to obliterate it; besides, if Mr. Bentley had obliterated the foot-mark in making his search, I think he would have told me that he had done so.
1596. Will you look now at your notes of April 12th, and say if you have not said there that the parties must have come in over the adjoining wall? Yes, I have said so.
1597. Why did you come to that conclusion? Because I had the back of the house carefully watched, and I meant by the adjoining wall, the one that separates the two houses—Bentley's from Miss Johnson's.
1598. You thought that the parties had come over there? Yes, I did then.
1599. Then this wall that you allude to is not the wall separating Bentley's from Miss Flower's? No; that wall is the one at the end of the garden.
1600. Then your suspicion at that time was that they must have come in from the next house? Not from the next house, but from the next garden.
1601. Was the next garden similar to that of the Bentleys—had it been recently dug up? I do not know about that, but there was a garden there.
1602. So that a person getting on to the wall would have had his boots dirty and covered with mould? Yes.
1603. And if he had got over the wall, his boots being covered with dirt in this way, would he not have left some marks of dirt upon the wall? He would if he had his boots on, but he might have pulled them off, so as to leave no such mark.
1604. In that case, would he have left an impression of his foot-mark on the verandah? Yes.
1605. Would he not have left much more unmistakable marks upon the verandah, without his boots, than he would have done with them. He would certainly.
1606. And if he had got over the wall with his boots on, he would have left some marks on the wall? Yes. If I recollect rightly, I examined the wall afterwards, and came to the conclusion that there was nothing of the kind—that there were no marks on the wall.
1607. Did you examine the wall for marks? Yes, and Mr. Bentley along with me.
1608. Did anything occur on the 13th April? Yes, Mr. Bentley shewed me a letter he had found in the flower-stand.
1609. Will you read the passage from your diary? "Called at Bentleys about 11 o'clock, a. m., and Mr. Bentley shewed me a letter he had found in a flower-stand in the verandah. It was similar in style to the rest, and spoke of the writer being aware of my being in the house. Last night being a very wet night, muddy footsteps were traced from the yard to the door of the dining-room. I again mentioned my suspicions regarding one of the servants being party to the affair, but both Bentley and his wife begged of me to get shut of such a suspicion at once, as they could depend their lives on their honesty. I shall have them watched for a time at any rate, for the enemy are certainly in possession of all our movements. I withdraw the officer out of the house for one night, and in they come. I never in my life had such a run of actual bad luck, not that I for a moment expect to be beaten in the long run. Placed two officers, one in the house and one in the garden, to remain on watch till 1 a. m."
1610. Will you explain to the Committee how it is that you have left out, from the extracts you have furnished to this Committee, about the half of what appears in your diary? I cannot explain further than I have done—that I did not consider it material.
1611. You had no particular reason for omitting it? No, I had not. I may perhaps be allowed to make a remark in reference to the mode in which these extracts were made. When I was informed that the extracts would be required, I was very busy at the time myself, and I gave the diary to Mrs. Harrison, asking her to make the extracts in relation to this case. She asked me if she should copy out the whole of it, and I said, "No, you can suppress such portions as contain merely private matters—give only those portions which touch more particularly upon the case." She shewed me some of the first part of the extracts she had made, and asked me if that would do. I looked it over, and said "Yes," that was just the thing. She then completed it, and when she had done, I had no reason to doubt that the extracts would be carefully made, and I did not, therefore, compare them with the diary.
1612. By Mr. Piddington: Nor did you mark the portions of the diary that were to be extracted? No; I gave her the diary to make extracts of such portions as she might conceive to be material to the case. If there is any portion missing that the Committee may consider to be material to the case, that is the way in which it happens. When I had got the extracts made, I handed them to the clerk in the Inspector General's Office.
1613. By the Chairman: You handed them to him to get them copied? Yes.
1614. And you then destroyed your original copy? I did.
1615. What necessity was there for destroying it? There was no necessity for doing so; but I did so simply because I did not want to keep a lot of extracts about that were of no use to me. I have papers enough as it is in my office.
1616. In speaking of the servants to Mr. Bentley, did you ask any question relative to their religion? I do not recollect ever having done so. I never recollect the religion of the servants being made the subject of conversation. He said his servants were good girls—that they they went to mass regularly; but beyond that their religion was never mentioned. In fact, when this took place that you are now referring to, I did not know what religion the girls were.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

1617. Up to the 13th April, had you ever gone to Bentley's in disguise? I do not recollect.

1618. Did you ever go there in disguise? Yes, frequently.

21 Nov., 1862.

1619. Disguised in what way? In many different ways. I have gone there in the disguise of a woman.

1620. Was there any necessity for you to go to their house in disguise? Yes, I considered there was, because I found that whenever I withdrew my men from the house something was sure to transpire. That led me to fancy that, by some means, the parties became acquainted with all our movements; and being of opinion that there were a number of parties always on the watch, about the place, I took the precaution of sending in my men to the house in disguise, or going myself in disguise, so that if there were persons on the watch, they might not know that a detective was in the house.

1621. Had not the detective officer the entire run of the house, at the time he was placed there? No, not at that time. They were always very cautious as to concealing the men down-stairs, so that their presence should not be known. And then when the Bentleys went up-stairs to bed, the officer would be in the room below, watching the verandah, in the event of the parties again trying that mode of entry.

1622. Now, on the 12th, when the house was entered in this way, were you present when the door was opened? Yes, of course I was present, and went down-stairs to him directly he called out that somebody was there.

1623. And the door was forced upon that occasion? It was said to be forced, but I do not know whether it was or not.

1624. Did you take any steps to prove whether it had been forced or not upon that occasion? No, not that night; because, as I have already said, I did not wish to move about the premises more than I could help, for fear the parties should be on the alert at the back, and finding the house alarmed should not come back again.

1625. Did you, on the following morning, open the door from the outside with a dessert knife? Yes.

1626. Could you do so again under the same circumstances? I could.

1627. By Mr. Morris: Was not Mr. Bentley present when you opened the door in this way? Yes, and Mr. Boulanger also. When the door was properly fastened I could not open it from the outside, but when the lock was in a particular position I could do so.

1628. By Mr. Piddington: Have you the specimens of the Bentleys' handwriting that you compared these anonymous letters with? Yes, I have; I now produce them.

1629. By Mr. Morris: Did you ever receive a letter from Mrs. Bentley? Yes, I did.

1630. Have you got it? Yes, I now produce it. (Vide List of Appendix.)

1631. When did you receive that? I think it was on a Thursday evening. By a reference to my diary, I find it was on the 19th June, 1862.

1632. Where did you receive it? At Bentley's house. I had just returned from the country, and on my first going into the house she handed me the letter.

1633. Does it bear Mrs. Bentley's signature? No.

1634. How do you know that it is in her writing? Because she gave it me, and told me she had written it. She said, "Here is a letter I have written to you, which I intended to have forwarded to you to Bathurst."

1635. You did not go to Bathurst, I believe? No; the order was countermanded, and I did not go.

1636. Are you in possession of other specimens of their writing? Yes. I produce a memorandum in Mr. Bentley's writing, of certain dates that he wished me to obtain for him (marked B 2); and also a note I received from Mr. Bentley at some time or other (marked B 3); and also a memorandum in relation to Mrs. Heath's late husband (marked B 4).

1637. Had Mrs. Bentley, when you stated that you had been ordered to Bathurst, arranged with you that she should write you a letter to Bathurst? Yes.

1638. When she handed you the letter, did you read it in her presence? I did.

1639. Did you ever have any other correspondence with her? No. I also produce a bill for the tuition of one of Mrs. Bentley's pupils (marked B 5).

1640. By Mr. Piddington: Is it from a comparison of these documents with the anonymous letters, that you arrive at the conclusion that they resemble the writing of the Bentleys? Yes. Some of these lines bear as strong a resemblance to the writing of some of these letters as Montagu's writing does to others.

1641. Have you any other specimens of writing on which you have founded your opinion? No.

1642. Then it was upon these that the opinion has been founded? Yes; upon these and some others that I may have had—memoranda of different kinds in their writing.

1643. But these are the chief documents on which you have formed your judgment? Yes.

1644. By Mr. Morris: Are not these documents in the usual handwriting of the Bentleys? Yes.

1645. By Mr. Johnson: Was not all the handwriting of the Bentleys that you used to compare the anonymous letters with, of the same character as that of the documents now produced? I never used to compare them.

1646. But lately you have compared the anonymous letters with writing of the Bentleys? Yes.

1647. And there was no difference in the style of handwriting you compared and that you now produce? No.

1648. They were all in Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's usual style of handwriting? Yes.

1649. By the Chairman: With regard to these documents you have produced, which

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.

- purport to be in the handwriting of the Bentleys, have you compared them with the anonymous letters, in the same way and with the same assistance as you had when you compared the letters of Cutolo and Montagu? No, I examined these by myself alone.
1650. So that the opinion you now give is your own unaided opinion? Yes.
1651. Is it on that account so valuable as your former opinion? I think it more so. There are circumstances that make my opinion now very much stronger than it was before.
1652. Although before, you considered that there was no moral doubt about Montagu being the offender? Yes; but I place more confidence in my opinion now, owing to other circumstances which corroborate it.
1653. Do you place more confidence in it than you do in the opinion come to by yourself, the Inspector General, and Mr. Young? Yes; I believed then that Montagu was the writer of the letters; but I am almost certain now that they have been written by the Bentleys themselves.
1654. By Mr. Johnson: Was nobody present when Mrs. Bentley told you she had written this letter for the purpose of forwarding it to you to Bathurst? No.
1655. Nor when she gave you the letter? No, nobody.
1656. Have you any other letter in the handwriting of Mrs. Bentley, excepting the one you now produce? No.
1657. Do you know of the existence of any in your office? No.
1658. You have none? I have not.

TUESDAY, 25 NOVEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. MORRIS,	MR. COWPER,
MR. PIDDINGTON,	MR. WILSON,
MR. HART,	MR. LUCAS,
MR. HOSKINS.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Johnson appeared for the Petitioner, Mr. T. C. Bentley.

Mr. Charles Edward Harrison called in and further examined:—

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.
1659. By the Chairman: Do you now produce any letter? I do; a letter I received from a party in the city, who handed it to me as a letter he had received from Mr. Montagu— which he knew to be the handwriting of Mr. Montagu. (Letter handed in.)
1660. That is the letter with which you compared the anonymous letters which were placed in your hands for comparison? Yes.
1661. Will you look at your diary of the 23rd April; it was on that occasion that you examined the roof. On the 22nd the noise had been heard in the roof, and the letter had been received stating that the person concealed there had covered Mrs. Bentley with a pistol, and had observed other—? The noise was heard on the Monday—the 21st, I think.
1662. But it is entered on the 22nd in your diary? Yes.
1663. On the 23rd you examined the roof? Yes.
1664. In what way did you begin with this examination; can you describe to the Committee how you made the examination? I went up through the trap by the ladder leading from the landing into the roof, and I first examined the sky-light window. The sky-light window was as I have stated in the diary. The frame-work was rather a deep one, and there was a quantity of dust on the frame-work—on the window-ledge; it was sloping. On the window itself and the corner of the frame-work there were a number of cobwebs. I passed through the sky-light window on to the roof. The roof is a slate one, and you have to slip down from the window a short distance. There is a parapet wall in front of the house, and when standing down in the gutter of the house you can just barely reach the frame-work of the sky-light. At full stretch I could just reach it sufficiently to pull myself up again. I went on to the roof and examined the gutter, and I examined the slates to see whether there were any marks there, or if I could find any track at all of anybody having passed along the roof of the houses. I went over to the end house each way, and examined the gutters likewise, and found no traces of any one being there; and from the fact of the dust and cobwebs being on the window, I concluded that no one had passed through it but myself.
1665. Did any one go up to the roof with you? Detective Clark.
1666. Any one else? No one else.
1667. Not Mr. Bentley? No.
1668. Then your suspicions were first pointed to the window—that was the first object of your examination? Yes, to see whether they had come by way of the roof.
1669. Did it not strike you that the first point of examination would have been, before you yourself put your foot on this dusty floor, that you should have examined the floor to see whether there were any foot-marks, previous to your going on it? There was no floor, but there was a plank leading to the window.
1670. Did you examine the plank, before you went on it at all? I cannot say that I did.
1671. As you had examined the window, and found that, in accordance with your opinion, no one could have come in by the window, you then turned your attention to the floor? Yes.
1672. And although you and Clark had walked along this dusty plank, and, I presume, back again, you could still discover the traces of Mr. Bentley's footsteps? I did not know they were the traces of Mr. Bentley's footsteps till he told me the fact.

1673.

1673. You could discover footsteps not your own? Yes.
1674. And no other marks? I did not.
1675. You do not know whether you obliterated other marks by your own footsteps? I saw my own footsteps, and likewise those of Detective Clark; and some remarks were made about the fact of the only other footprint, which Mr. Bentley told me was his, as he had gone to examine the window.
1676. So that you, in the first instance, were not aware that there was no indication of any impression of footsteps being there prior to your going to the window with Clark? I do not know. I believe the window was the first place I went to examine, but I will not be positive.
1677. And at this time again you were fully convinced the servants must be in league with the enemy? Yes, for I did not at that time for a moment suspect Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, but I thought somebody in the house must be in league with the enemy.
1678. What kind of cover was on the trap on that occasion—the entrance to the roof? I cannot say.
1679. Was there a covering at all? I cannot say.
1680. Could not any one have obtained access to the roof, without the knowledge of the inmates of the house? By the sky-light.
1681. Without the sky-light—by the trap? Such a thing was possible. Anybody might have got into the house from the lower portion, and got into the roof.
1682. If it was possible, when you were in the house, to break open the door with a jemmy without your knowing it, it was possible to go up there and through this trap-door without coming through the skylight at all? Yes, it was quite possible.
1683. Do you not think that quite as probable a way of getting in as by the skylight? More probable. I never for a moment thought that they came in by the skylight.
1684. Then was it not more probable you would have looked for indications of their entrance from the trap than by the skylight? What indications would I have been likely to have found?
1685. You would have been likely to have looked for footsteps? Yes, had I been aware that they had entered from the lower part of the house, but I wished to satisfy myself how they had entered. I may remark that frequent conversations had taken place between Mr. Bentley and myself, with regard to the roof of one house communicating with the other, and with regard to the skylights on the different buildings forming that block.
1686. On the 25th of April Mrs. Bentley is mentioned in your diary as having been attacked on Mrs. Josephson's grounds? Yes.
1687. You had not any one on the watch then at all? No.
1688. Up to this time had you suspected the Bentleys at all? No.
1689. On the 24th you evidently suspected the servants? I do not know that I did the servants in particular, but some one on the premises.
1690. If not the servants in particular, would you have mentioned in your diary that you had suspicion of the servants in particular. If you will look at your own diary, you will see you say, on the 23rd, "The servants must be in league with the enemy," underlined—Would you make that entry unless you were convinced—? I might not have been convinced of it, but I might have had a suspicion to that effect.
1691. If you had a suspicion, would you put it down in as positive terms as that, underlining every word? I might have done.
1692. Your suspicions assume very large dimensions when you put them down they "must be";—you had no suspicions of the Bentleys up to this time—up to the 25th April? I do not recollect having any suspicions of them then.
1693. What do you mean by this entry in your diary—"That strange suspicion has again returned," underlined again—What suspicion do you allude to—suspicion of the servants? No, of some one in connection with the house—of the Bentleys themselves being parties to the affair.
1694. You do not allude here to the Bentleys in particular? No, I do not think so.
1695. On the 26th, which is only the day afterwards—and in fact it appears (and I would wish you to explain whether it is so or not) that it is the same night, as it goes on, on the 25th, to state this:—"12:30 a.m.—I have just sent Clark down to the house, to watch all night. 26th.—Had very little sleep all night, thinking of this infernal case, and the suspicion grows stronger and stronger, but what could be the motive? I must try back, and look closer at home." Will you explain to the Committee the meaning of that entry? I presume it alludes to the Bentleys themselves, or to one of them.
1696. By Mr. Johnson: Which one—one or both? I cannot say—I do not recollect my thoughts at the time.
1697. By the Chairman: Was that one entry, or is it two distinct entries—Is the entry on these two pages, under the head of the 25th and 26th—were they written at one and the same time? It must be with regard to the Bentleys, but I cannot say whether it was written at the same time or not. It appears as if it was.
1698. I think you stated before, that you had seen Mrs. Bentley faint on one or more occasions? Yes, but I do not know whether it was previous to that or not; I have seen Mrs. Bentley in a very nervous state.
1699. And you were perfectly convinced it was a real faint? I had no suspicion to the contrary.
1700. Did you ever see Mrs. Bentley smoke? I have.
1701. Was it a practice of Mrs. Bentley's? I do not know. I have seen Mrs. Bentley smoke two cigars one after the other.
1702. And drink brandy and water? Yes.
1703. In your company? Yes.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

25 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector 1704. When Mr. Bentley was not present? Yes, and when Mr. Bentley was present, and when Mr. Aldis has been present.
C. E. Harrison.
1705. Did you consider that that was a matter of very great importance in connection with the Bentley case? Not in connection with the Bentley case, yet I did not exactly approve of it.
1706. Is that the reason why you made a memorandum of it in your diary? I probably made the memorandum because it was a rather unusual thing for ladies to do.
1707. Has Mrs. Bentley smoked cigars and drank brandy and water in your company since the date of this entry? She has on several occasions.
1708. On the 27th—but it appears to me almost on the same date—though there is a different date in the diary, it appears as if it were all written at one time. For instance, it goes on in this way:—“Bentley was very fidgety, and asked me to call in to-morrow. 27th.—Very late when I got home last night.” Then I find it goes on to state—“In the afternoon * * * * went to Elizabeth-street. Mrs. B. was very unwell, and fainted. “Bentley said it was palpitation of the heart.” Do you remember that occasion? I do not recollect that occasion in particular.
1709. The night after—I suppose it must be two nights after the attack at Mr. Josephson’s. It is in your diary of the 27th —? I do not recollect that occasion in particular.
1710. I wish you would read this part—the 27th? (The witness read)—“After which I went to Elizabeth-street; Mrs. B. was very unwell, and presently fainted; Bentley said “it was palpitation of the heart; I assisted him in keeping her hands open; she was not violent; he soon became fatigued, and left the bathing of her head to me; I suspected a part was being played, and in a few minutes satisfied myself of the fact; Bentley assured me it was all the result of the attack at Newtown, and called vengeance on the head of the enemy—and how I sympathized with him! A fresh paroxysm returned to Mrs. B., and I knelt beside her, with her head resting on my shoulder and one of her hands in mine, while each pressure of the fingers was returned by her; in about an hour I assisted her up-stairs and laid her on the bed, when she again became insensible, and I came away.”
1711. Is not that a very peculiar entry? —
1712. By Mr. Morris: You remember the circumstance? I do.
1713. By the Chairman: Is not that a very peculiar entry? No, I think not.
1714. Does it mean more than appears on the face of it? No, I think not.
1715. It does not mean that she was shamming the faint? Yes, I think that does appear on the face of it.
1716. That is what is intended to be conveyed—that she was shamming? I would not say she was shamming altogether—that she was not nervous and excited; I would not say that, because from her appearance I believe she was; but still, at the same time, I believe a part was being played, and I am satisfied of it now.
1717. Are you satisfied she did faint? Well, I cannot say. Mrs. Bentley appeared very nervous.
1718. By Mr. Piddington: Will you explain what you mean by “a part was being played”: I do not understand the meaning of the term? That at that time Mr. Bentley had some object in view with regard to this scene—in Mrs. Bentley fainting and myself being there, and afterwards in Mr. Bentley leaving Mrs. Bentley so constantly with me as he did—that he had an object in view in doing so.
1719. By the Chairman: Do you not observe that you have mixed two things together? I cannot exactly explain one without the other.
1720. You there have mixed up the time as it then was and what occurred long afterwards—you have stated that you came to that conclusion in consequence of Mr. Bentley leaving his wife with you so frequently when he was absent? Yes.
1721. But that had not occurred at that time? But still I could not give an answer to Mr. Piddington’s question without — 1722. Had that occurred? No; but I believed a part was being played and this was the commencement of it, from the fact of Mrs. Bentley’s conduct at the time.
1723. I understood Mr. Piddington’s question to be, that he wished you to explain what you meant by “a part being played” at that particular time? Well, I cannot give a fuller explanation of the matter than that I thought this fainting or nervousness of Mrs. Bentley’s was not genuine—that there was an object in it.
1724. By Mr. Hart: When you say “each pressure of the fingers was returned,” do you mean to infer —? That she was conscious.
1725. That Mrs. Bentley was willing that further familiarities should take place? No, I do not know about further familiarities being taken, but that she was conscious at the time that she returned the pressure of the hand, and that this that was going on was not the result of a nervous attack—the closing of the hands—but that Mrs. Bentley was conscious of what took place.
1726. By Mr. Morris: Do you not wish us to infer, on reading, that the pressure of Mrs. Bentley’s hand was confidential? Yes.
1727. By Mr. Piddington: And that circumstance, combined with others, produced an immediate impression, on your mind, of suspicion? Yes; that a part was being played, and that Mr. Bentley was cognizant of the fact.
1728. By the Chairman: Was not Mr. Bentley very sick at the time? No, I do not know that he was; he was constantly complaining of ill health.
1729. Did you think Mr. Bentley himself was playing a part at that time? I did.
1730. Was there anyone present that evening besides yourselves—besides the Bentleys and you? Only the servants.
1731. Were they present? Yes; I believe the servants were in and out of the room, and brought vinegar —

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

25 Nov., 1862.

1732. Assisting to recover Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
1733. Did you place Mrs. Bentley's head on your shoulder yourself? I do not know.
1734. Mrs. Bentley did not place her head on your shoulder? I cannot say; I was supporting Mrs. Bentley, and lifting her on the sofa.
1735. If a lady put her head on my shoulder I should have remembered it; I should think you would have remembered all the particulars of an interesting occasion like this —?
1736. By Mr. Morris: Do you mean that her head was on your shoulder when you were supporting her and removing her? Yes.
1737. By the Chairman: Mr. Bentley was weak, and gave over? So he said.
1738. It did take place? Yes. The servants were present.
1739. What do you mean by this last entry,—that you assisted her up-stairs and laid her on the bed, when she again became insensible, and you came away—Were these familiarities—this pressure of the fingers—again returned at that time. The whole of this entry appears to contain something far deeper than appears on the face of it? No, it contains only what there is stated; I have stated the facts as near as I can recollect them.
1740. What do you mean by these last six words, underlined every one of them, "I am on the right scent now"? Because I believe, as I said before, that Mrs. Bentley was playing a part, and that, to a certain extent, I was to be hoodwinked—that Mr. Bentley was playing off Mrs. Bentley against me for an object of his own.
1741. By Mr. Piddington: What was that object? To hoodwink me with regard to the author of the letters—with regard to the persecution originating with themselves.
1742. Assuming that your suspicions had, in your own mind, an apparent foundation—what effect would that circumstance have had on the supposed parties who wrote these letters—in what way would playing this part have affected you in the inquiry? I thought this at the time,—that Mr. Bentley had a suspicion that I was in doubt, and that, to some extent, I had changed my suspicions from Cutolo, and Montagu, and San Juste, against whom they had been directed, and was looking closer at home; and that Mr. Bentley wished to blind me to the fact, by the course he was pursuing with his wife, that is to say, Mr. Bentley intended —
1743. How would that produce the effect of blinding you—it could not create suspicions in particular? No, but it might make me scrutinize less closely the facts of matters that transpired.
1744. By the Chairman: I think you stated that the entries of the 25th and 26th, in your opinion, had been written at one time? I do not know.
1745. I thought you said you thought so? No, I do not say so; I cannot recollect whether they were or not.
1746. Will you look again, and say whether they were or not—can you give the Committee an opinion on the subject? I cannot; I do not know whether it was written at the same time or not.
1747. By Mr. Morris: Do I understand by this word of yours, "hoodwinked," that Mr. Bentley intended to hoodwink you—do you mean to let the Committee understand this, in plain terms,—that Mr. Bentley was desirous that you should carry on an intrigue with his wife, and therefore shut your eyes altogether, and, in fact, become an accomplice of themselves? I do. This was my suspicion at the time, and the course of conduct I pursued afterwards was to satisfy myself I had not been mistaken.
1748. By the Chairman: Will you look at the 27th and 28th dates of your diary, and tell the Committee whether these were written at once, twice, or three times? I cannot say.
1749. Has that portion which does not relate to the Bentley case been written in that book at a different time from the Bentley entry? There are two or three portions that do not relate to the Bentley case.
1750. I mean one particular portion on the 27th page—is that not apparently a very different ink and very different character of writing? No.
1751. Is it not your own handwriting? Yes.
1752. Is it not a different ink? It seems similar to a portion of that on the 28th. The first portion of the 28th appears in darker ink than the latter portion of it.
1753. And in darker ink than the 27th? In darker ink than some portion of the 27th.
1754. Would you be using two kinds of ink at the same time? I cannot say whether they were made at the same time. They might have been made the same day at two different times. All that I know is that the entries are correct.
1755. Do you ever prophesy, Mr. Harrison—are you a prophet—On the 28th April have you entered a prophecy in your diary? I do not know.
1756. You predicted that which would come to pass, word for word, with the manner in which it did come to pass, on the 28th April, in your diary? I see here that I say—"I shall have both doors of the concert-room closely watched. Mrs. Bentley will report having seen him; but owing to some cause or other, she will be unable to give the alarm until too late."
1757. It occurred in the same way? No, she did not give the alarm too late, but Mr. Bentley informed me that the man had passed out at the York-street door, and it was said afterwards that he had made a mistake as to the door.
1758. Look at your date of the 29th, with your entry of the occurrence, and read down. It there states—"All went off well till just as the concert was over. I was standing in the room at the York-street door, when Mr. Bentley came rushing out, and said that the man who had assaulted Mrs. B., at Newtown, had that moment passed out. The only three people who had passed out of the concert-room were Montagu, Simmons, and J. G. Waller. Bentley pretended to be very much excited, and accompanied me into York-street, to look for him."—Was not this alarm given too late in the way in which you had had predicted it? Yes, if you take it in that way; but it was not owing to the alarm being given too late that the man was not arrested; it was on account of Mr. Bentley having mistaken what Mrs. Bentley told him. The man smiled at her, and held up the letter in his hand to his mouth, so Mrs. Bentley said. I was at one door —

1759. By Mr. Morris: Do you believe any of that? I do not, because, under the circumstances, and after the assault—when the man was in the room, with no possibility of escape, for anybody could have laid hands on him—for the members of the Philharmonic Society were perfectly aware of the persecution that was going on, and the assault which was committed—I say, under these circumstances, Mrs. Bentley would only have had to give the alarm, and point out the man, and he would have been arrested immediately—he could not have got away; instead of which, Mrs. Bentley informs Mr. Bentley of the fact after the man was said to have passed out of the room. Mrs. Bentley had friends there, and the man could not have effected his escape if the least alarm had been given.

1760. By the Chairman: Previous to that, you had anticipated that such a thing would come to pass? I did anticipate that something of the kind would take place.

1761. Do you generally anticipate in such strong terms as these (Extract again read)—that is a very concise prediction? You may call these prophecies, but it was not difficult to anticipate some things, after what I knew. I had a suspicion that Mrs. Bentley was cognisant of all these facts, and I had laid out traps—if I may use the term—to confirm my own opinion in the matter, by making remarks and observations, and throwing out doubts. With regard to the concert-room, I said I did not believe the man would be there, after telling her he would be there; that he would never have courage enough, and that it was only a threat or bounce on his part. I made these remarks with the intention of producing a certain effect, and I felt convinced in my own mind that something would transpire to convince me I had been in the wrong. Frequently that occurred; in a number of cases, no doubt, which are not noted down in the diary. Not half the Bentley case is noted down there.

1762. Had you any detectives in the hall on that occasion? I had.

1763. Who were they? I am not positive, but I think they were Detectives Clark, Downham, and Camphin.

1764. In the hall? Yes, at the doors of the hall.

1765. I ask if you had anybody in the body of the hall? Yes, in the body of the hall; they were inside the hall, but at the doors.

1766. Not dispersed amongst the audience? No.

1767. Was Mr. Ponder there? Yes.

1768. Was he assisting you in detecting on that occasion? No, I cannot say he was.

1769. You stated that he did assist you in the Bentley case—In what way did he assist you in the Bentley case—did he write letters for you? He wrote the report which I furnished to the Colonial Secretary.

1770. I asked whether he wrote letters? No.

1771. He never wrote a letter for you in the Bentley case? I have no recollection of his writing a letter for me; he may have done so; I do not say he has not; he may have made some memoranda.

1772. Will you endeavour to remember, and say if he did not write a letter for you in relation to the Bentley case? No, he copied a letter for me—a letter I sent to Exeter with regard to the case.

1773. Is that the only one he had anything to do with in the Bentley case—he had to do with no other letter, no other memoranda? Yes, he had. In the first instance, when I wished to obtain a specimen of the handwriting of several of the musical profession here in Sydney, at the time my suspicions were against the professionals, I believe Mr. Ponder wrote one or two letters to professionals, asking their terms for giving lessons, so that I might obtain a specimen of their handwriting.

1774. Have you put these specimens of their handwriting before the Committee? I have not got them now.

1775. What did you do with them? I did not take any care of them after I found that the handwritings did not correspond with the anonymous letters. That one of Mr. Montagu's, which did correspond (referring to letter handed in at the commencement of to-day's examination) I kept, but those that did not I had no object in keeping.

1776. By Mr. Johnson: Is this in answer to a letter that Ponder wrote? No; Ponder did not write to Mr. Montagu. I had a specimen of his handwriting.

1777. By the Chairman: In what other way did Ponder assist you in detecting in the Bentley case? In no other way.

1778. After this concert, were your suspicions confirmed with regard to the Bentleys? They were strengthened. Still I pursued a certain course, to satisfy myself I was not in the wrong.

1779. On the 30th April you have made the following entry:—"The game is now in my own hands—the Bentley case is no longer a mystery—the author of the letters is no other than Bentley himself. At the present moment I cannot assign a reason, but the fact is certain." Have you made a copy of this in the extracts you have laid before the Committee? Yes.

1780. Will you explain that paragraph to the Committee? I cannot explain further than this,—that I presume, when I made that entry, I was satisfied in my own mind that Bentley was the author; and being satisfied of that fact, I would take such steps as to prove it. The game had not been in my own hands before that, while I was constantly in doubt; but when I was satisfied in my own mind that Mr. Bentley was the author, I did consider the game in my own hands.

1781. By Mr. Piddington: Do I understand you to state, that the interpretation of the words used in your entry—"the fact is certain"—rests merely on surmises in your own mind? That is all. 1782.

1782. Not on any other evidence;—did it rest on any specific evidence besides the surmises arising in your own mind? It did not.
1783. By the Chairman: On the same day you state:—"Now for my future course of action! What motive had Bentley for leaving his wife with me till 2 o'clock this morning? It was pre-arranged, I will swear; and, if I am not mistaken, it was to ascertain if I suspected aught. If so, she was foiled. They have indeed a Jesuit to play against "now." What is the meaning of that entry? I think the entry explains itself.
1784. Are you a Jesuit? No, I am not. I think the entry speaks for itself. I had a doubt on the night of the concert, when Mr. Bentley came out and said the man had just passed me. I told him such was not the case, and he insisted on it, and I spoke rather sharp on the subject, with regard to its not being so; and it struck me afterwards that Bentley might have obtained the idea that I began to suspect something being wrong.
1785. By Mr. Piddington: That is, that you suspected Mr. Bentley himself of insincerity? Yes; that he might have entertained the idea that I suspected him.
1786. By Mr. Johnson: That Mr. Bentley had begun to suspect that you suspected him? Yes, and on that account left Mrs. B. to see if she could ascertain whether I had any suspicions or not. That was the reason I assigned for Mr. Bentley's conduct in the matter.
1787. By the Chairman: You determined to give the whole of your attention to the Bentleys at this time? I did give as much as I could possibly spare from other duties, and very little sleep I had night after night on account of it.
1788. Did Mr. Bentley invite you home with him on the night of the concert? I cannot say; I believe he did.
1789. I should say this was a most important matter? Yes, but still I cannot recollect whether he invited me, or whether I told him I would come round. I cannot say for certain whether I went—yes, I was round at the house; but I cannot say whether Mr. Bentley asked me to come.
1790. Did you go round to the house with Mr. Bentley? Yes. I do not know whether I went all the way, but I believe I walked down to the house with Mr. Bentley, Mrs. Bentley, and Mr. Boulanger.
1791. Was Mrs. Bentley timid on that occasion? I cannot say.
1792. Did you proffer, in the execution of your duty, to stay at Bentley's on various occasions; and did you consider it necessary to be present at very late hours, in order that you might be present if any attack was made on the premises? I do not know.
1793. Was it on your own motion, or Mr. Bentley's motion, that you stopped till 2 in the morning? Well, that I cannot say.
1794. And yet your suspicions are wholly based on the fact that you were there till 2 o'clock in the morning? I had grounds for suspicion at the time, although I do not remember what the conversation was or what led to it.
1795. Was Mr. Bentley in ill health at this time? The same health he usually was in; I never saw much difference in him.
1796. Had Mr. Bentley any reason to suspect that a gentleman, an officer in the detective police, who had charge of an affair where the honour of himself and wife were at stake, had any right to be looked upon with suspicion in any way whatever—Had he not a perfect right to leave his wife in your company, with the firmest reliance that she would be as safe as with her own father? So he could if it would have assisted the case, but I cannot see how Mrs. Bentley being left with me till that hour assisted the case at all. I should not like to put my wife, under the same circumstances, in the same position. Even though Bentley might have believed he could have trusted me in the matter, there was nothing to be gained by it. But at this time I was under the belief that Mr. Bentley had not trusted me in the matter, but was pursuing a certain course he had laid down for himself, to attain a certain object. He pursued one course—I pursued another.
1797. You were no longer engaged in endeavouring to find out who were the authors of the letters, but in a course of conduct calculated to entrap Mr. and Mrs. Bentley into some particular actions? I do not know whether this was the time that I began to employ the men, who, as I considered, had wasted their time in the Bentley case, in other matters far more pressing, and took the matter more fully into my own hands, but it was somewhere about this time that I did so—that I employed the police in other matters, and took it entirely into my own hands, because I found their time could not be wasted over it any longer.
1798. On this date, the 30th April, I find this entry:—"No business of any consequence doing at the office, and I trust it will remain so for a short time, at any rate, as I must give all my attention to the B.'s." This does not seem as if the police were engaged in other important business? They are always engaged; if nothing particular transpires, they are always engaged in looking after vagabonds and thieves coming into the city and going out of it. Although there may not be much crime going on, still they are always looking after parties likely to commit it. There is plenty to do in that way, even when there is nothing else.
1799. By Mr. Piddington: In preventing crime? Yes.
1800. By the Chairman: On the 30th of April the same thing occurred, that Mr. Bentley again went to bed, leaving Mrs. Bentley and you together till 1 o'clock in the morning, and you have made an entry here that you sat together on the sofa? Possibly.
1801. Did you sit on the sofa the whole of the time? I cannot say.
1802. What is the meaning of the entry that you sat on the sofa—is it simply the detailing of a fact, or is it intended to convey some other impression? It is only intended to convey what you see there.
1803. You sat there simply because the sofa was the most comfortable seat, I presume? Probably so.
- 1804.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector 1804. Did Mrs. Bentley ask you to sit next her on the sofa, or did you seat yourself there
C. E. unasked? I cannot say.
Harrison.
1805. You would remember if she had invited you to sit next her on the sofa? That I cannot say.
- 25 Nov., 1862. 1806. You remember that she pressed your fingers? Yes; and I remember a great deal more.
1807. Tell us what you do remember? Pardon me; there is a great deal I have no intention of telling. What I state is there written; if the Chairman turns it and wishes to know if it conveys anything more, I say no.
1808. Mr. Wilson: The witness has thrown out a very broad insinuation that he knows of other information and other facts which he declines to give the Committee. The witness: That is not what I mean. There are numbers of facts that have occurred that do not appear in that diary, and which I do not myself recollect at the present moment. What there appears is true, and the Chairman tries to insinuate that more is meant than what appears there. There is not more meant than appears there. You ask if there is not some covert meaning in this word or in that word—I say no, there is no covert meaning.
1809. By Mr. Hart: In the observation you made, did you mean to allude to anything prejudicial to Mrs. Bentley's character? No, no more than there appears.
1810. By the Chairman: I asked you if Mrs. Bentley had asked you to sit on the sofa beside her, or if you had gone to the sofa and taken your seat? I cannot say. When Mrs. Bentley and I were together, we were in the habit of sitting on the sofa together. In fact, Mr. Bentley himself would make room for me on the sofa—he would get up and take a chair, and insist on my taking a place on the sofa beside his wife.
1811. This was from the first, was it not? No.
1812. Have you not an entry that the attention of the Bentleys to you was almost irksome? Yes, but not to such an extent as this.
1813. You have stated that they were exceedingly attentive to you on all occasions? Yes, very much so.
1814. And you had never ceased, up to this time, to allow them to imagine that you were their sincere friend? I do not know about being their sincere friend, but I do not know that they had any cause to suspect that I had any doubt. They knew I took a great interest in the case. My thoughts and all particulars were known to Mr. Bentley, and he knew I felt very strongly against Cutolo, Montagu, and those parties whom I suspected at the time; and afterwards, when I had a suspicion of Bentley himself, I was certainly so guarded in my conduct, that I did not wish Bentley to know I had suspected him till I had fully satisfied myself in the matter.
1815. On the 1st of May, you informed Captain M'Leerie, the Superintendent of Police, who the author of the letters was? I do not know what date it was; I did inform him of the fact.
1816. Look at your memorandum? It appears there the 1st of May.
1817. You have also made a memorandum that Mr. Bentley appeared to be playing some deep game? Yes.
1818. Which you had not as yet fathomed? Yes.
1819. And here is the first time you make any mention of this. You say—"He may be laying a trap, baiting it with his wife, for the purpose of inveigling me, and using it against me the moment he finds I know the truth. It is a dangerous game to carry on an intrigue with her, but I must do it, or seem to do so, and we shall see who wins the odd trick"? Yes, I believed it to be a dangerous game to be carrying on.
1820. Why did you carry it on? Because it was the only course I could see open to me. I thought it the best course I could pursue, to arrive at the truth of the whole case. I had formed an opinion of Mrs. Bentley at this time, a strong one in her favour, and I had an idea that she was acting under Mr. Bentley's orders by compulsion—that it went against her inclination to do so, but that she was compelled to do so; and I believe, to a certain extent, that that is the case now. I have not altered my opinion in the matter.
1821. By Mr. Wilson: Will you explain what you mean by carrying on an intrigue with Mrs. Bentley? So far as it there appears. I thought Mr. Bentley was allowing his wife a certain—I do not know how to express it—latitude in the matter, for a particular object, and this I looked upon in the light of a trap to catch myself.
1822. By Mr. Johnson: Will you state what you mean to say Mr. Bentley was desiring his wife to do—was it this,—that he desired her to act as though she wished to commit adultery with you? Oh! no; I do not go so far as that in the matter.
1823. How far do you go? Well, short of that. I do not say that. That never entered into my head, that he ever had an idea of the matter going to such a length.
1824. Do you mean that she was so to act towards you, as to lead you to suppose she was desirous of acting in some improper manner with you, so as to become mistress of your secrets? I did not suppose it, because, from the facts that were taking place, I was satisfied her conduct in the matter was improper, and Mr. Bentley's likewise.
1825. Improper in what respect—do you mean that it was indecent? Not indecent.
1826. Will you explain what you do mean—I want first to know, whether your suspicion was that Mr. Bentley wanted to place his wife to you in such a position that you were to suppose she was ready to carry on a liaison with you? Yes.
1827. That she was to appear to you as a woman of abandoned character? No.
1828. Can you draw a distinction between the two—Are not all these insinuations of yours, entered in your journal, and repeated in your evidence, so entered and stated by you, for the purpose of conveying the impression that Mrs. Bentley was acting a part towards you, to lead you to suppose she was desirous of carrying on some improper intercourse with you? I cannot say how they may read. I had no intention at the time that they should convey such such a meaning, because I had no idea that that book would fall into other hands. It was simply for my own information. With regard to the entries, taking them all in all, from beginning to end, they may assume such an appearance.

1829. Are they not intended in your own mind to convey that impression—are they or are they not? I cannot say what impression they convey to my own mind.

1830. What is the meaning of an entry here—that you must mention the course of conduct you were about to enter upon to your wife? Because I did not wish to conceal the fact from her. Besides, I knew women generally are very shrewd, and can form a better opinion of the conduct of women than men can. That was the reason I mentioned it, and I took her advice on many occasions.

1831. Was it not this: that you thought that you were entering on a course of conduct with Mrs. Bentley of such a character, that if you did not tell your wife beforehand, and she heard of it afterwards, it might excite her jealousy? No, I cannot say—I do not think that had anything to do with it.

1832. What do you mean by the entry, "I must tell Alice"? Because I did not wish to conceal anything from her. She had constant access to my diary.

1833. That is true, is it, that she had constant access to your diary? She had constant access to my diary at all times, and has seen most of the entries—a great many of the entries—there made.

1834. By Mr. Piddington: You have stated before, that the diary was kept under lock and key—now you make one exception? One exception.

1835. By Mr. Johnson: Did you make that exception before? Yes; I believe Mr. Piddington made the remark, "excepting your wife."

1836. Will you declare now that you did not say, not even your wife? I did not say so. I said my diary was constantly under lock and key; but from her I did not keep it, because she had access to my keys likewise. The entries were generally made at home.

1837. What was the course of conduct you supposed that Mrs. Bentley was to pursue, in being the bait with which her husband set the trap for you? I cannot say.

1838. You cannot say!—What do you mean by her being the bait? What I have been stating here—if such was the case, that Mr. Bentley left Mrs. Bentley with me for a particular object, that he was using her as a bait —

1839. A bait for you to swallow? To entrap me for some purpose, either into shutting my eyes to what was going on, or for some other purpose of his own. That is what I mean by a bait.

1840. What do you mean by noting down so minutely in your journal, and I think also stating in your evidence, the circumstance which you state as to Mrs. Bentley smoking cigars and drinking brandy and water—do you enter that as a circumstance which happened to Mrs. Bentley as being derogatory to the habits of a prudent lady? I cannot say derogatory, but certainly as being —

1841. Why was it entered in the journal? It struck me as a thing I am not in the habit of witnessing here in the Colony. I do not know that I have ever seen an instance of it in society before, since I have been here.

1842. By Mr. Wilson: Have you ever seen ladies smoking in other countries? Yes.

1843. You know it is not considered derogatory to their position in some countries? Oh! no.

1844. Have you ever seen English ladies smoking in foreign countries? I do not recollect that I have.

1845. But it is customary for ladies to smoke in other countries? I believe it is.

1846. By Mr. Johnson: What sort of cigars do you allude to? Queen's.

1847. I must ask you to explain? Queen's are very small sized cigars.

1848. Did not Mrs. Bentley herself state, or did you not become aware of the fact, that she used cigars medicinally, for the toothache and tic-doloureux? She told me that when troubled with the toothache she smoked a cigar. When she lit a cigar I thought that was the case, but when I have seen her smoke a second —

1849. Is there an entry in your journal of that explanation of her smoking cigars? There is, on the 26th April. "Last night she lit one while Aldis was there, saying it was the only cure for toothache."

1850. Do you not mean to impute, by the entries in this journal and by your evidence, that the conduct of Mrs. Bentley, while acting as a bait for the trap set by her husband, was highly indecorous and improper? I do.

1851. And calculated to promote the advances of any man who was disposed to do so? Yes.

1852. Will you explain to the Committee how that conduct could be calculated to make you an accomplice with them—Would not such conduct have a directly contrary effect? It might with some, but not with all, providing the party was interested in Mrs. Bentley at the time. Even if he entertained suspicions of their being the parties, he might not make those suspicions public, if he had an interest in Mrs. Bentley.

1853. By the Chairman: Had you such an interest in Mrs. Bentley? No; but I had an interest in Mrs. Bentley, for the reason I have stated.

1854. By Mr. Johnson: And you think this conduct was pursued with the view of letting you know they were themselves the authors of the whole transaction, and so interesting you that you would decline to divulge it? No, I do not think they intended to do anything of the sort; but this conduct was pursued in case I entertained the suspicion—that if at any time a contretemps did come with regard to them —

1855. Your affections would be so engaged to Mrs. Bentley that you would stifle the promptings of your duty? Something to that effect.

1856. And that the husband of this lady was the prime mover in such a contrivance? I do believe so.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector 1857. And his wife the reluctant tool? Yes, I believe she was reluctant.
 C. E. 1858. By Mr. Wilson: Had you ever given Mr. Bentley reason to suppose you were a very Harrison. immoral man yourself? No.
- 25 Nov., 1862. 1859. Had you ever given him reason to suppose that you were in any way, directly or indirectly, such a person as would be likely to enter into an intrigue with any woman while in the execution of your duty? No, nor at any other time.
1860. After you had made up your mind that an intrigue, or something approaching an intrigue, was going on between you and Mrs. Bentley, do you not think it was your duty, as a public officer, at once to take steps to put an end to it? So I should have done, if I had not looked on the matter in the light here explained, and wished to see to what length it would go, for the purpose of unravelling a case so many persons were interested in. That might have been a wrong line of conduct to pursue, but that was my intention.
1861. Do you not think that upholding the public morals is your highest duty? Yes; but I could not see that the public morals could suffer, or that mine could suffer, or that Mr. Bentley's or Mrs. Bentley's could suffer under the circumstances. I looked upon it in the light that we were each playing a part.
1862. Do you think that Mrs. Bentley is an immoral person? No.
1863. Then you must have been doing everything in your power to try and shake her moral principle? Oh! no.
1864. By Mr. Morris: She was trying to shake your moral principle, you say? No, I think that would be going too far; they wished me to think so.
1865. By Mr. Wilson: Do you think any lady of very high moral principle would wish you to think so? No.
1866. Mr. Harrison, you have led me at least to suppose that you considered it a part of your duty to carry on a sort of intrigue with Mrs. Bentley, with or without the knowledge of her husband, whatever the case may be, with the view of trying to ferret out this particular secret? Yes; but fully believing at the time that Bentley was cognisant of all the facts. Had I thought differently of the matter—if it had been simply Mrs. Bentley, I should not have taken any such steps at all; but it was through the belief that Mr. Bentley was cognisant of the fact, that I pursued that line of conduct.
1867. Looking at yourself in your official capacity, would your principles enable you to go to the length of seduction to attain those ends? No; nor any other ends.
1868. By Mr. Piddington: Have you formed any opinion of the object Mr. Bentley had in view, in playing a part in writing these defamatory letters about his wife? That has caused me a great amount of thought; and the conclusion I came to was this,—that when Mr. and Mrs. Bentley arrived here, they had a certain circle of acquaintance, and that one or two of these letters were sent among their personal friends, or those acquainted with them, simply for the purpose of causing an amount of interest in their favour—
1869. By themselves? By themselves—without any intention of the matter going to any great length; but after this they found the interest did increase in their favour, and they got a larger circle of acquaintance,—that some of the gentlemen with whom they were acquainted took the matter up very warmly, and in fact took the matter in hand to find out who this persecutor of Mrs. Bentley was; that they were then obliged to carry it on further than they intended in the first instance,—that these gentlemen then put the matter into the hands of the police, and it then began to assume a more serious aspect, and they were compelled to carry the matter on beyond the limits they had ever intended it should go.
1870. Do you see any even moral compulsion—could they not have ceased to write these letters, supposing they did write them, on your theory? Unless they were afraid that by the fact of the letters ceasing, suspicion should be turned against themselves.
1871. Would not that suspicion be more likely to arise from the continuance of the letters, than from the cessation of them—do you not think that very course was more likely to terminate in a discovery? Yes.
1872. You cannot altogether account then, on your own theory, for the continuance of these letters? No; only in the way I say.
1873. You have no other explanation to give? No.
1874. By Mr. Wilson: Do you not think it natural that a nervous woman, under the peculiar circumstances in which Mrs. Bentley was placed, would look to you as a natural protector, as it were, against the public? Yes.
1875. Well, do you not think that, under these circumstances, being in the habit of seeing you so frequently, she would become more intimate and familiar with you than she would under other circumstances? Yes; if it had gradually increased from the first, but it began too suddenly—it was so sudden that it surprised me, and I was then suspicious that a part was being played, and that there was an object in it. If it had been simply from day to day, I should have thought it was merely a feeling of friendship increasing, but the fact of its commencing so suddenly after that concert more fully excited my suspicions.
1876. I suppose before that, and during that time, you must have been gradually becoming intimately acquainted with many secrets connected with the Bentley family? No; with the exception of matters connected with Mrs. Bentley's childhood, and the priests, and the persecution at Exeter, of which Mr. Bentley gave me a version, and Mrs. Bentley likewise gave me a version.
1877. What was the first familiarity you allude to that astonished you? The night of the concert.
1878. Has it been already stated to the Committee? Yes.
1879. Then I will not ask you to state it again. Before that time do you wish us to infer that Mrs. Bentley was distant with you, or otherwise? No, not distant, but free in conversation.
1880. Did you ever sit with her on the sofa before that? No; I have no recollection of it.
- 1881.

1881. Had you sat with her in the drawing-room before that—or in any of the rooms? I may have been alone with her before that for a few minutes, when Mr. Bentley was absent from the room, or when I had gone in before he had returned from the Club.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

1882. By the Chairman: Would not your being present with Mrs. Bentley when you were dressed in female attire, tend to cause Mrs. Bentley to take more familiarities with you—to forget your sex, in fact? I do not see that.

25 Nov. 1862.

1883. How often were you there in female attire? Only once, and that was not for the purpose of remaining in the house, in female attire. My motive was, that I should not be known in case of the house being watched at the time. Directly I got into the house I took the female attire off.

1884. You did not sit in it? No.

1885. On the 28th March there is an entry in your diary to this effect—"I called at 'Bentleys' in the evening. Their attention exceeds all bounds—it is almost irksome; and as for flattery, Bentley told me that Mrs. B. had got quite cheerful since I had consented to take the discovery of this matter in hand."—That shews they were very familiar with you, I think, and on terms different from what they would be with an ordinary police officer in the execution of his duty, at that early date; is it not so? Yes.

1886. What was the date of the concert? The 29th April.

1887. You say you never sat on the sofa with Mrs. Bentley previous to that? No.

1888. You have stated that Mr. Bentley was in the habit of placing you between himself and Mrs. Bentley previous to that? No.

1889. On the 4th May you made the following entry in your diary:—"I cannot make 'this woman out. That she is a party to this deception is certain; but is she willingly so? and on what footing is she with Bentley? She told me to-night that she was very unhappy, and, laying her head on my shoulder, burst into tears, genuine ones to a certainty." Have you any explanation to give of that entry? It shewed that her bursting into tears was not a part—that it was real. I thought so, too, from her manner. Not only then, but frequently afterwards, I have seen her in the greatest distress; she has gone down on her knees, and buried her head in the cushions of the sofa.

1890. By Mr. Piddington: That appeared to you to be natural? It was natural. I believe this to be natural. And at the same time she has said how wretched and how unhappy she was; and on one occasion she said, "Oh! I wish I could tell you all; but I am bound by a terrible oath in the matter," and other words to that effect. I was then more confirmed in the opinion I had previously formed that Mrs. Bentley was an unwilling party to this.

1891. By Mr. Wilson: Did you ever see a woman in hysterics? Yes.

1892. Often? No, not frequently—a number of times.

1893. You are not very conversant with hysterical affections and their developments? No.

1894. You could not say whether Mrs. Bentley was hysterical on the occasion to which you allude? I think she was not, because she was conversing reasonably on the matter, not in an excited way; and afterwards again the matter would be the subject of conversation, and she would turn the conversation to something else.

1895. Are you aware that hysterics often develop themselves by fits of crying, which last a certain time, and then the parties are as they were before? Yes.

1896. On these occasions, when you say Mrs. Bentley was crying so bitterly, are you of opinion that she was hysterical? No, I did not think so at the time, nor do I think so now.

1897. For what reason? From her manner.

1898. At the same time you say you have not paid much attention to it, and are not a very good judge of such a subject? No.

1899. By the Chairman: Again you go on:—"I must indeed be cautious. Is she playing 'a part assigned her by Bentley? I can think nothing else. And yet am I justified, even 'if this is the case, in pursuing the course I have laid down for myself—will the end 'justify the means I am employing?"—Can you explain this? Because I objected to the course I was employing in the matter, and lending myself to it.

1900. To what? Having the belief that the Bentleys were the parties, and believing they were using me in the matter as I have before explained, I was annoyed with myself for being compelled, through a wish to unravel this case, to lend myself to the matter in the way I was doing, not only at this time but at others.

1901. You believed Bentley was using you to seduce his wife? No.

1902. You do not say quite so much as that? No, nor anything that way I have not said yet.

1903. "Another week will tell me more. I will follow the same course, though something tells me I am running on unknown danger."—What was the danger? I did not know. It was an idea that passed through my mind.

1904. On the 6th May you again prophesy—you predict that which is about to come to pass. You there state:—"About 9 o'clock in the evening I went to the house. She said 'nothing had occurred, but she thought she saw a man watching her. He walked very 'quick, as if to intercept her, but if that was his intention he failed, as she walked too fast 'for him." And you then go on to state, "I am sure that before many days I shall hear 'that something desperate has been attempted, and I think in connection with the roof." This is a most peculiar prediction, and every word underlined? ———

Mr. Johnson: Will you read the whole of it?

The Chairman: "As Bentley told me, he had had the top of his bed covered with wood and lined with tin."

1905. Was Mr. Bentley's bed covered with wood and lined with tin at this time? I do not know whether I had ever examined it, but Mr. Bentley had on numerous occasions mentioned the fact to me, and I asked him why he had the top of his bed so lined.

1906. Will you look at this entry, and say if you made it on the 6th of May or on the 7th of May? I cannot say whether it was on the 6th or 7th.

1907.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.

1907. Will you say whether it was written before this affair came to pass—was the prophecy written after the fulfilment? Certainly not. Although I may not be certain with regard to the dates on which the entries have been made, yet I can positively assert that no entry has been made with regard to any suspicion after the occurrence has taken place.

1908. On the 10th May there is a very peculiar entry —? Allow me to explain, in connection with the roof. Mr. Bentley had frequently remarked to me the fact of his having the top of his bed lined with wood and tin or zinc, whatever it may have been. It seemed extraordinary. I thought it strange, and asked for what purpose could it be done; and Mr. Bentley stated, that at one time a piece of the ceiling had fallen down, and he had had the bed lined, so that if it re-occurred they might not be injured. Still as the ceiling appeared to be sound, I did not place much confidence in what Mr. Bentley told me.

1909. Had the ceiling been mended at that time? Yes; I do not think there was any of it down then.

1910. Was it quite evident the ceiling of that room had been repaired? That I cannot say. I do not know whether I looked, or whether I was up-stairs at the time Mr. Bentley made the remark, or where I was.

1911. It is quite evident this has been intended for a prediction, such as it appears? Yes.

1912. Then we will go to the 9th May—you there state that you “called at Elizabeth-street, in expectation of hearing that something had occurred at Newtown. Bentley went to bed, as usual now, at 10 o'clock, leaving Mrs. B. and myself alone. He never comes down to disturb us after he once goes up-stairs. He constantly carries my revolver, which I lent him, and never stirs about the house without it. Once or twice I have felt assured I heard him at the door of the drawing-room where we sat; in fact, I felt that he was there. “And for what purpose? Patience!” What do you mean by that? I cannot give any explanation of the circumstance; I can only say that I thought he was there; I had an idea he was there.

1913. Are you in the habit of feeling when people are present, when you do not know they are there? —

1914. By Mr. Wilson: Are you what is called a “sensitive”? —

1915. By Mr. Piddington: Through which of your senses did you arrive at the conviction that you felt some one was outside the door? I cannot say.

1916. By Mr. Wilson: Did you ever hear of a person feeling convinced another person was in a dark room with him, without being able to see him or feel him by the sense of touch? No, I never heard that.

1917. Mr. Johnson: It seems to me the word “felt” means “convinced.”

1918. By the Chairman: It is used twice—In the first instance it says, “I felt assured I had heard him,” and then again it says, “In fact I felt he was there?” I do not know; I believe on more than one occasion I thought the same thing.

1919. By Mr. Johnson: Do you mean that you had some evidence of your senses, or that you strongly suspected he was there? I cannot say I recollect what it was.

1920. By the Chairman: Owing to what circumstance was it that Mr. Bentley carried your revolver—was it at your suggestion or his? It was not at my suggestion he carried my revolver.

1921. Carried a revolver? It was not at my suggestion. I may have advised him to keep arms in the house, but it was not at my suggestion that he constantly went about with the revolver in his dress.

1922. On the 10th May you went to Mr. Bentley's, with a fixed determination “to see to what length you could go with Mrs. Bentley”? Yes.

1923. What do you mean by that—did you mean to go to seduction that time? No, you put a wrong view on the matter altogether. I believe I had formed an opinion before this, that Mrs. Bentley was in such an unhappy state with regard to this matter, that it would take very little to make her acknowledge the whole of it; and I went, as the entry is there made, with the intention of trying whether Mrs. Bentley would not make an acknowledgment of it.

1924. And you led the conversation to the anonymous letters? Yes, frequently I did so, and these are the times I allude to when she was in such distress.

1925. What do you mean by this: “She looked at me with her dreamy eyes, and asked me if I could deceive her. She then asked me if I was sure I had heard nothing, as I looked “dull.” What is the meaning of this particular entry, in connection with the former one? With regard to the case, I leading the conversation to the anonymous letters.

1926. What did you call her when you spoke to her—did you say “Mrs. Bentley”? I cannot say.

1927. Were you in the habit of calling Mrs. Bentley by her Christian name? Sometimes.

1928. Your entry is this: “I, this evening, went down to Bentley's earlier than usual, determined to push matters with Mrs. B., and satisfy myself to what extent I could go with her. Bentley left us about 9-30, saying he was going to have a warm bath. After he had retired * * * * Lily, for I have long called her by her Christian name —?” I had some time previous to that, in conversation, called her by her Christian name.

1929. Wait a moment—“Lily and I sat down on the sofa, and with my arm round her waist, we talked over the whole case of the anonymous letters. She looked at me with her dreamy eyes, and asked me if I could deceive her. She then asked me if I was sure I had heard nothing, as I looked dull.” Do you say you were only trying to get some verbal acknowledgment from Mrs. Bentley about something;—what were you doing with your arm round her waist—what part of your duty did that come under? I have said I believed Mrs. Bentley would acknowledge this matter, and I was under that belief for a long time.

1930. And your arm round her waist—what has that to do with it? Well, I could not say. Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
1931. And her looking into your eyes with her large dreamy ones—what has that to do with it;—does this entry mean nothing more than appears on the face of it? No.
1932. It does not mean that you were trying what length you could go in a different way? It does not. 25 Nov., 1862.
1933. Then a man in your position could be sitting with his arm round the waist of a lady, with her dreamy eyes looking into his, without your having any other feeling than simply that you were engaged in endeavouring to discover and trace this case? My intentions were as I have already stated—no others.
1934. What were your sentiments? I do not recollect.
1935. You cannot recollect what were your sentiments when you were sitting with your arm round her waist, and you do not know what prompted you to take that course? I have stated what prompted me to take the course I adopted—that I believed that Mrs. Bentley would acknowledge it.
1936. Just let us see if this is what occurred: "Again I thought I heard a footstep at the door, and I felt Lily tremble all over ——" ? Yes.
1937. "While there was a half wild look in her eyes, and a restlessness which half convinced me I was not mistaken. I left the house, deep in thought, and strolled about the city till 1 o'clock."
1938. When you thought you heard this footstep, did you take any means to convince yourself whether anyone was there or not? No.
1939. You were there endeavouring to unravel this case? I believed it to be Mr. Bentley.
1940. You were there in the execution of your duty, or was it on a visit merely? In the execution of my duty.
1941. And whilst there you heard a footstep? Yes, which I believed to be Mr. Bentley's.
1942. You took no steps to convince yourself, but remained with your arm round the lady's waist? No, I do not say I remained with my arm round her waist.
1943. Do you wish to qualify what you have said? No, I have given an explanation of what I have said there; I can give no other.
1944. You must have had your arm more than round her waist to feel this tremor all over Mrs. Bentley, must you not? It is there stated what took place, and I have given an explanation as far as I can. It related to this fact—that I believed Mrs. Bentley would acknowledge it.
1945. By Mr. Morris: You can read French? Yes.
1946. Do you read French novels? I do not think I have read a French novel these ten years—I do not think I have read a novel at all for years perhaps.
1947. By Mr. Piddington: Not one of Bulwer's? No, I do not think I have read one of Bulwer's for years back.
1948. By Mr. Morris: Why did you purchase a volume of Bulwer when you bought the diary? It was Bulwer's plays, not Bulwer's novels. There is evidence I can lay before the Committee as to the purchase of the diary.
1949. By Mr. Piddington: When did you first see Mrs. Bentley? On the night of my going to the house with Mr. Boulanger.
1950. Do you recollect the date? I do not. It was after my return from up the Hunter—after Mr. Boulanger and Mr. Bentley had been to the Inspector General.
1951. Do you recollect the month? About March, I think.
1952. March last? Yes.
1953. Are you sure you had not seen Mrs. Bentley till March last? I may have seen her —
1954. But you never spoke to her before that? No. The first time I ever spoke to Mrs. Bentley was on the occasion of my going to the house.
1955. And within six weeks of that time you addressed her as Lily, and you state in your diary that you had long been in the habit of calling her so—you became friendly very rapidly? Ten days or a fortnight may be long under some circumstances.
1956. You only saw Mrs. Bentley in March, and on the 10th of May you state that you have long been in the habit of calling her by her Christian name—is not that becoming familiar rather speedily, considering that you were employed as an officer of police? Yes, but I have assigned my reasons for the course that I pursued.
1957. Did Mrs. Bentley ever address you by your Christian name? I cannot say.
1958. By Mr. Morris: Is your name Charles? Yes.
1959. By Mr. Piddington: Do you not think that the entry in your own diary shows that you assumed a familiarity with Mrs. Bentley in a most speedy manner, after being introduced to her on the 22nd March? No, after the time I speak of with regard to this concert.
1960. That must have taken place at some time intermediate between the 22nd of March, when you first saw her, and the 10th of May, when you first state that you had called her by her Christian name? Yes.
1961. Is not that a very short time to account for the extraordinary familiarity you there assume? The familiarity did go on at a very rapid pace from the time I speak of with regard to the concert. Previous to that there was nothing of the kind.
1962. By the Chairman: Will you read this entry of the 11th of May in your diary? (Witness read): "On going to the Detective Office at 1 o'clock this morning, M<sup>r</sup> Martin handed me a letter. It was addressed to Inspector Harrison, Central Police Office, Sydney. I at the same time got some information that induced me to accompany him into Clarence-street. While waiting for him I opened the letter, not having done so before, as the address on the same was printed hand, and I thought it some piece of nonsense. The letter contained these words, likewise in a printed hand: 'Mrs. Bentley's life is in danger; search Sub-Inspector " search everywhere for yourself.' I could scarcely forbear laughing when I read it, and I

 C. E. " should certainly have left it till next day, had I not by so doing been liable to excite Harrison. " suspicions. So taking Detective Carnes with me, I went down to the house, and woke 25 Nov., 1862. " them up. Bentley looked very surprised, &c., when I shewed him the letter, and was " most anxious to know when I received it. I told him when, but he said, 'You ought to " have received it yesterday; do you not see it bears the P.O. stamp of the 9th?' He then
 " said he feared I had received it a day too late, but it was evident that some one of the " enemy had been deputed to take Mrs. B.'s life, and that his heart had failed him, and he " had consequently given information to me on the subject. I went up-stairs and searched
 " the roof. I found the skylight window propped open with half a brick, and a number of " bricks were lying on the floor. The mortar between the joists had been disturbed, and on " the ground I found half a sheet of note paper crumpled. I talked the matter over with " them; and by way of experiment, said it was strange they had left nothing behind, but " that I should return later in the day and make a more careful search, as I could not do so
 " by candle-light. I then took leave, promising to return at 12 o'clock. I sent Detective
 " Carnes home, and went to bed myself at 4.30 a.m."

1963. You had no knowledge of that letter that was received, until such time as it was placed in your hands—you never saw it before? I did not.

1964. Did it come to you by post? Yes.

1965. Did any one suggest to you to go on to the roof, when you went to the house that night? I don't know; I think not.

1966. There was no suggestion from Mr. or Mrs. Bentley to go on to the roof? I think not; I cannot say; there may have been.

1967. It was merely to fulfil your own prophecy that something desperate was going to take place on the roof that you went up? No, something had taken place before that—a day or so before that.

1968. Some three or four days previously, you made a prediction that something desperate would take place on the roof? It was from some cause that I made that prediction.

1969. By Mr. Johnson: You told us the cause was that you had learnt the bed was protected? And the nature of the roof having previously been in question, whether a man had been in concealment there.

1970. By the Chairman: Did you go into any other part of the house that night? Yes, all over the house, and into the garden.

1971. Are there any coal-cellars in the house? Yes.

1972. Were you there? Yes, everywhere.

1973. You were in the coal-cellars—Is there a wine-cellar? Yes, I was in the cellars. If I recollect right, I nearly dropped the candle, frightened by a cat that jumped out of the grating.

1974. You were nervous then? No, I was not nervous; it came suddenly on me.

1975. Is there a grating in front of the cellar? On the pavement in front of the house, I believe there is.

1976. Did you go into the back offices? Yes.

1977. And you discovered nothing in any part of the building that night? No.

1978. Did you go with a candle? Yes.

1979. You paid particular attention to the roof, and you found the ceiling had been disturbed—pulled up for effect, I think you say? I could not say for what purpose it was pulled up. The mortar was pulled up from between the joists.

1980. Was this all over the room? No, in front of the skylight and on each side of the plank that ran to the window.

1981. Did you examine it particularly? I did.

1982. And in your journal, and in your report to the Chief Secretary, you wrote advisedly that it had been pulled up for effect? I thought so at the time, because the mortar between the joists was very rough, and in fact sticking up in pieces like walnuts, and these were pulled up and thrown about, but in no place were the laths laid bare. If the object had been to break through the ceiling, there would have been no object in taking a space half the size of this table and breaking up the mortar all over it.

1983. Then it was on a space about half the size of this table—a space about four feet in diameter? Yes, perhaps not so large.

1984. Could you say that was not in consequence of the repairs that had been effected? I think not, because the dust had accumulated everywhere over this plaster, between the joists, and where the mortar was pulled up it looked quite fresh where the pieces had been pulled up; they looked like white chalk scattered about, shewing that it had been recently done.

1985. You examined the place to see where the bricks had come from? No, not that night—with Mr. Bentley, the following day.

1986. There was a brick propping up the —? Half a brick propping up the window. There were a number of half-bricks lying about.

1987. How many? Well, five or six pieces—whole bricks and half-bricks.

1988. This is the first time, I think, that you had come over, in your investigation, what may be termed material facts—something that could be positively laid hold of; now, what steps did you take with regard to this matter, or what notes did you make with regard to it—did you make any particular notes of the subject, as to how many bricks there were, or as to where they had come from? No; because the following morning, when I went to examine the place more closely with Mr. Bentley, I tried to find out where the bricks had come from. Mr. Bentley remarked that they might have come from the chimney; we looked to the chimney and the bricks were not similar, and there was no place from which bricks

- bricks had been removed; and then Mr. Bentley remarked that they had probably been taken from the chimney outside, or somewhere about on the roof.
1989. What was the difference? The bricks of the chimney were red bricks, and did not present the appearance of having been exposed to the weather, while these did—in fact they presented the appearance of bricks that had been exposed to the weather a long time.
1990. What appearance? They were discoloured. The bricks inside the chimney appeared new, but these presented the appearance that bricks that had been kicking or lying about a yard or old wall would do.
1991. What kind of discolourization do you mean? You can tell a new from an old brick, at least, I think I can.
1992. By Mr. Piddington: Did they appear as if they had been subject to the action of damp? Yes, and wet. You could see the mortar adhering; in fact, they presented the appearance that bricks taken out of a yard, or flower-bed, or lying about, would do.
1993. By the Chairman: Was the house watched by detectives at this time? No.
1994. Were there no detectives there at all? Not to my knowledge.
1995. How was it you did not make a note of this important fact, that the bricks were discoloured—in fact, to bear out your own supposition that they might have come from a wall? Because when I went to search the place with Mr. Bentley, I wanted to find out where the bricks had come from. Mr. Bentley suggested the chimney. I looked out at the other side, and there was no place on the roof where the bricks could have come from, and I was then satisfied the bricks had been brought up from the lower part of the house. I did not believe they had come from any part of the brick-work about the roof. Afterwards I found there was an old wall at the back of the house, with bricks of a similar description, loose, and several bricks gone.
1996. Had the wall not been recently taken down where these bricks were missing? I cannot say, because it was in the middle of the night when I was at the corner of the wall where these bricks were loose—I had not noticed that corner of the wall till the middle of the night. I know it was in the night—it was in the dark that I was there in the garden. Getting up on the corner of the wall I dislodged some of these bricks, and then I looked at them and found them similar to those up-stairs; and then I believed they had been removed from this wall.
1997. You said you did not examine the bricks the same night that you first went into the roof, but the next day—that day? Yes.
1998. Did you examine the wall, to see whether there was any place where these bricks could have been taken from? I cannot say.
1999. If you had made up your mind that they had come from the wall, was it not very natural that you should have examined it to see whether that was the fact? I had made up my mind that they were not bricks from the roof.
2000. You suspected them to come from the wall? No, I did not at that time.
2001. You put it in your report to the Colonial Secretary that you did? I do not think I said I suspected the bricks had come from the wall at the time I searched the house.
2002. You say you can swear there were no holes in the ceiling the night you examined the roof? Yes; after having been up and examined the roof —
2003. By Mr. Johnson: The night you got the letter? Yes. After examining the roof, I came down into Mrs. Bentley's bedroom with Mr. Bentley, and examined the room; and from the fact of this pulling up of the mortar and that over-head, I know I looked to the ceiling on the underneath part—I am satisfied I did so, and I saw no hole in the ceiling. Had the hole been there at the time it could not have escaped my notice. I have no recollection of seeing the hole in the ceiling on the night in question, and I believe now that if the hole had been there then I must have seen it, from the fact of my attention being drawn to the ceiling, from the plaster and that being pulled up.
2004. By Mr. Hart: What was the size of the hole? Between the joists, in the plaster overhead, you could not see it at all, but on the underneath part a piece of the plaster was off about the size of half-a-crown, as if a skewer or something had been thrust from the upper side and had pushed a larger piece out on the underneath side.
2005. By Mr. Morris: Had you a candle when you were up in the roof? That night I had.
2006. Having a light, how was it possible for you to see through—the light being above? I did not see through.
2007. Even supposing the hole were there, it is very obvious that if you had a light above, it would be impossible to see light coming through from where there was no light? I am not speaking about seeing the hole in the ceiling when I was up in the roof.
2008. By the Chairman: Did you turn your attention particularly to the ceiling that night, when you were there the first night—when you were in Mr. Bentley's bedroom did you closely examine the ceiling? I cannot say I did, because I believe —
2009. If you cannot say you did, how do you say you will swear the holes were not there? That was my belief at the time, from the fact of the mortar being pulled up over-head. I know that when I went up into Mr. Bentley's room, probably the first thing I did was to look at the ceiling to see if it was broken through, and if the hole had been there I should have seen it.
2010. Did you not tell us just now, that your attention was not particularly directed to the roof at all? This was after I had been in the roof that I went into the bed-room.
2011. Did you pay particular attention to the surface of the ceiling? I cannot recollect whether I did pay particular attention to it; but from the fact of this being pulled up over-head, in my own mind I am satisfied that would be the first thing I would look at, to see whether any portion underneath had been broken through. I am satisfied in my own mind that was the first thing I did when I went into the room, but I cannot recollect whether such was the fact.

Sub-Inspector

- Sub-Inspector C. F. Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.
2012. Was anyone with you? Detective Carnes.
2013. Did Detective Carnes or you first discover this evident disturbance of the lime between the joists? I did. I do not think Carnes went into the roof; I think he held the light through the trap.
2014. What was it first directed your suspicion to the fact that this mortar had been disturbed? There is the whole of the flooring, with all this rough mortar between the joists—the whole of it discoloured, with thick dust upon it; and there is a patch about half the size of this table with the mortar pulled up. You can see where the dust is and where it is not; the fact was evident of itself that the mortar had been pulled up.
2015. Next day you went to the roof in day-light? In day-light.
2016. Did you find the hole then at once? No, Mr. Bentley told me of it down-stairs.
2017. And you went into the roof, for the express purpose of finding the hole? Yes.
2018. Did you succeed? Yes, after some time.
2019. By what means? Mrs. Bentley was down-stairs in the room—Mr. Bentley first informed me that his little girl, Edith, was the first to inform him there was a hole —
2020. Will you say by what means you discovered this hole in the ceiling—I ask you how you became aware of the existence of the hole, when you went up for the express purpose of discovering it? Mr. Bentley informed me of it.
2021. In what way did you discover the hole? We could not discover the hole from the the upper side till Mrs. Bentley took a wire and passed it up from below. If I recollect right, I put my knife where I thought the hole was; I said to Mr. Bentley “I think this is it,” or “Here it is,” and I passed my knife downwards, and Mrs. Bentley called out that I had made another hole in the ceiling; Mr. Bentley said “Whereabouts?” and, if I recollect right, she said, “The hole is about a foot to the left, but wait a bit,” and directly after, a wire was pushed through the hole.
2022. Did Mrs. Bentley say “about a foot”? I believe that was the remark she made.
2023. It is a curious expression for a lady, to talk about the number of feet or inches —? I only tell you what I believe to be the truth.
2024. You made another hole, in endeavouring to find out where the first was? Yes.
2025. About the bricks being discoloured—Did you see anything in the public prints about the discolouration of the bricks since that? I do not know.
2026. Did you visit the Herald and Empire offices, in order to convince them that the statements made by Mr. Hart, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Dalgleish, were false? I did not.
2027. Then, if you have made a statement to the effect that it is false —? I did go to the Empire office, but it was some other matter of business took me there at the time. I saw Mr. Hanson, and Mr. Hanson asked me some particulars, and I gave him the particulars of the report that I had furnished to the Colonial Secretary.
2028. By Mr. Morris: How is it that you did not describe to Mr. M'Lerie your reasons for supposing the bricks came from the wall outside, and not from any other place inside? I do not think that the subject of the bricks was ever in conversation between Mr. M'Lerie and myself; they may have been, and the principal facts of the case, but I do not know that they were in particular.
2029. By the Chairman: On the 24th October, you make the following statement in your diary:—“Called on Hanson and Bennett, and took my report, to shew them that Messrs. “Morris, Dalgleish, and Hart's, statement in the House, the other night, as to the measurements, was false”? Yes.
2030. “They were perfectly satisfied, and we had a long conversation on police matters”? Yes.
2031. The Empire had a strong leading article on the police and the Bentley case;—was that the same day, or the following day, this leading article appeared? I do not know. With regard to shewing the report to Hanson and Bennett, I did so because it appeared that a wrong idea had got abroad that no one could gain admission by the trap, and that I had measured the same, and stated wrong measurements. I had not. I gave the estimate of the size of the window and the trap, simply to describe by what means admission is gained—I did not see in what way two or three inches could tell one way or the other. It was evident that I had passed myself through both apertures. The report was hastily drawn up, and I gave the dimensions, perhaps, without giving it a thought whether an estimate of them was necessary at all.
2032. Is not the description of the roof a very important part of the case? It may be, but I do not see that two or three inches in the size of these apertures is very important.
2033. Is the position of the beam an important matter? I do not see that it is.
2034. Is not the position of the beam, mentioned in your report, such as would prevent a person standing there or seeing what passed below under certain circumstances? No, not that the beam would prevent it.
2035. What is the reason you mentioned it then? Simply to shew that it was over the trap—not that I thought the beam had anything to do with — 2036. Is it over the trap? Not directly, but it is over one side of it.
2037. Did you not walk up the steps of the ladder without being incommoded by the beam? Yes, and pass through the trap without being incommoded by the beam.
2038. And without changing your position in consequence of the beam? No, I do not think without changing my position.
2039. Is that beam over the trap then? I call it over the trap; but when I made that report, I did not consider the beam had anything to do with it.
2040. You describe the roof as being in such a position that a person must lie flat—that no one could possibly see what was going on down-stairs and in the rooms, without lying flat on the ground, and putting his head through the trap? Yes.
2041. Is that true? Yes. Mr. Bentley—
- 2042.

2042. A single moment—do you state now, that in order to see anyone entering into Mr. Bentley's bedroom, anyone entering into Mr. Bentley's nursery, or the room you have described as the children's room, or anyone sitting on the flight of stairs leading to the bedroom—that, in order to see this from the trap, a person would have to lie flat on the ground and put his head partly through the trap? So I stated.
2043. Do you say that is true? Yes.
2044. If it is not true —? I must have written from the impression I derived from the letter, as read to me by Mr. Bentley. If that was correct, I am correct in the opinion I have described with regard to it.
2045. By Mr. Morris: What was the impression? That the party there concealed was said to have had Mrs. Bentley covered with his revolver the whole time, from the time she left the room, while she was sitting in the drawing-room, going up stairs, and going into the nursery to quiet her child—that he had her covered with the revolver the whole time, and that if she had given the least alarm to the detective in the house he should have shot her. Now I was satisfied, though I did not place myself in the position to look whether such could actually be the case, that no person could have had Mrs. Bentley covered with his revolver the whole of this time, unless he laid down on the ground and put his head partly through the trap.
2046. By the Chairman: Could he keep her covered with his revolver while she was in the drawing-room, even under the circumstances you mention? No.
2047. Could he keep her under his revolver in the interior of the drawing-room at all? I think he might, if he lay on the ground.
2048. Could he see into the children's room under the circumstances? No.
2049. Did you convince yourself of the fact? No, not by laying myself on the ground to see.
2050. It is a complete surmise on your part? Yes, and I believe the surmise is a correct one now.
2051. Have you looked to see whether he could have covered Mrs. Bentley with his revolver while she sat on the steps of the staircase and nursed her child as described? Yes, the trap being over the staircase; but the letter said the man had her covered with his revolver during the whole of the time.
2052. By Mr. Johnson: Where does he say "the whole of the time"? I am stating what Mr. Bentley said to me. If I made a mistake, and the words "the whole of the time" were not used, I made the remarks under that impression—that a man could not have had Mrs. Bentley covered the whole of the time without laying down.
2053. Was not that particular letter you allude to, published in the newspapers before you made your report? It may have been, but I cannot say. I had nothing to do with what was published in the newspapers.
2054. Did you ask Mr. Bentley to shew you the letter he had received? I do not know; I may have seen it.
2055. Did you see it? I cannot say. I may have had it in my hands.
2056. Is it at all likely you would allow such an important letter to pass without your seeing it? No; I may have seen it and read it.
2057. So that you knew the facts otherwise than by Mr. Bentley's reading? I do not wish to impute that Mr. Bentley read otherwise than what was stated. I say that either from my own reading—and, as I said before, I did not use to read these letters, Mr. Bentley could read them a deal quicker—and from Mr. Bentley's reading of the letter, the impression on my mind was, that the letter stated that he had had Mrs. Bentley covered with his revolver the whole of the time, and from that belief I stated that such could not be the case, unless the person lay on the ground.
2058. If he did put his head through the trap could he have covered her the whole of the time? I do not think he could.
2059. How much more of the staircase, as a matter of fact, can you command by putting your head through than by standing upright? I think, by putting your head partly through, you can see into the bedrooms themselves.
2060. Do you think if you could see into the bedrooms themselves—that is, the bedroom opposite this trapdoor—without putting your head through? That is the nursery. Yes, I believe you can.
2061. Could you not see into the other room also? Yes.
2062. By Mr. Piddington: You say you have not made a personal examination of the spot? I never put myself into this position. At the time that this alleged concealment took place there, I was satisfied in my own mind such was not the case. Had I thought at the time that it was really genuine, and that some one had been concealed there, I would have made a more minute examination, but I was so satisfied in my own mind, that I did not make that minute examination.
2063. You did not think it necessary? I did not think it necessary.
2064. By Mr. Johnson: Was not your representation in the report, as to the command that a person could have from the roof of the places where the letter said he had seen Mrs. Bentley, given for the purpose of demonstrating that she could not have been so seen unless the person had lain with his whole body on the roof, and disturbed all this dust? No, that if any person had sat down.
2065. You say lie down? Then there would have been a greater disturbance of the dust.
2066. Was not that what you put it forward for, as shewing that nobody had been there? Shewing that nobody had been there.
2067. By the Chairman: Did you examine the place to see if the dust was removed? Yes, I examined the place, and found the dust was not disturbed.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.
2068. As it would have been by any person lying down there? Then it would have been entirely removed, I presume.
2069. You have made a statement that you believe this hole was made with a gimlet? Yes.
2070. Had you any suspicion as to where that gimlet came from? No; I do not know that, at the time I got the gimlet there, it struck me at the moment; but I know Mr. Bentley had a chest of new tools in a back room in the lower part of the house, and there were similar gimlets in it.
2071. By Mr. Johnson: There were similar gimlets in his chest? Yes; I never compared the gimlets, but from memory I believe there were similar gimlets there.
2072. By the Chairman: Had you a latch-key to Mr. Bentley's house? I had not.
2073. At no time—you had no means of getting in and out of Mr. Bentley's house, except in the usual way? No.
2074. About this gimlet—you are in possession of it? Yes.
2075. What have you done with it? It is at the office.
2076. Did you ever compare this gimlet with gimlets of a similar nature that were in the chest? I did not.
2077. The tool chest was always open to you? I think so.
2078. If you had suspicions, was it not the most natural way of settling those suspicions that you should compare them? Yes, but something occurred that I had not an opportunity of doing so. I thought about the matter afterwards.
2079. Does the detective, that accompanied you, smoke? That I do not know. Some of them do, some do not; I do not know whether he did.
2080. Did you ever suspect these holes were made in the roof from below, or that they were made from the top? From the top.
2081. On the 7th of June, you have made an entry in your diary, and I would like to ask you if it is true. You state: "Went to the office at 10 o'clock. Received a message from Mr. Cowper to attend him at once, Mr. Holt having asked the Premier, if the Government intended offering any reward to discover the perpetrators of the Bentley outrage. I found Mr. Fosbery had informed Mr. Cowper that I could throw some light on the subject. I had an interview with the Premier and Mr. Robertson, the Minister for Lands. Mr. Cowper questioned me on the subject, and, thinking it better to give him all the particulars, I did so, and promised an extract from my diary on Monday. Both Robertson and Mr. Cowper expressed themselves satisfied with my account of the case." Is that so? Yes.
2082. It occurred exactly as you have related it here in your diary? Yes, I believe so.
2083. And the report you gave to Mr. Cowper was a well considered report, founded on your diary? No, I cannot say it was a well considered report, because I had other matters at the time that occupied much of my time, though I forget now what they were, and I recollect the report was hastily written.
2084. But it was taken from your diary? Yes, some of the main facts that I considered to throw a light on the subject, not all the facts, but all the principal ones. I dare say there is some point in the report, that does not appear in the diary, the matter being fresh in my memory at the time. I do not look upon what I furnished Mr. Cowper with as a police report in the matter at all.
2085. But Mr. Robertson expressed his entire satisfaction with your explanation? If not in words he did in manner.
2086. By Mr. Cowper: You drew the inference? Yes; I do not know that Mr. Robertson made any remarks on the subject.
2087. By the Chairman: Is that the way you made notes in your diary, from inferences you drew and put them down as facts? There are the entries —
2088. Perhaps it did not occur at all, in fact you might "feel" perhaps that he was convinced? I have no doubt some remarks must have been made, or I should not have come to the conclusion. I cannot tell what they were.
2089. Just look at the entry—"expressed themselves satisfied"; you do not say here that you took it for granted, but from expressions used by them? I cannot say what the expressions were that were used.
2090. But they did express themselves satisfied? They appeared satisfied. I really cannot tell you what words were used on the occasion.
2091. The words here are, they "expressed themselves satisfied," not "appeared satisfied." Did you give them all the particulars of the case at that interview? All particulars as far as I thought at the time they would throw any light upon the matter. I was not long with Mr. Cowper at that time—a very short time—and I gave him all the particulars as far as I had time to do so.
2092. Had you heard of the Exeter case at this time? Only that version Mrs. Bentley herself had given me.
2093. On the 16th of May, according to an entry in your diary, you went to Mr. Bentley's about 10 o'clock, and Mr. Bentley went to bed shortly after. You then state that Mrs. Bentley told you she had never loved Mr. Bentley? Yes, I recollect the conversation well.
2094. That "she was engaged to him at fourteen years of age, and married to him at seventeen; that Mr. B. had, two days previous to their engagement, made an offer to her "sister, of whom he was very fond"? Yes, I recollect the conversation.
2095. You went to Mr. Bentley's to tea after this? I do not know.
2096. You made no difference in your appearance of intimacy or friendship with the Bentleys' at this time? I do not know that I did.
2097. If it is in your journal that you did go to tea after this, I suppose it is correct? Yes.

2099. And she stated that it was so—that she was only of value to him as being necessary to his wants? Yes. Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

2100. And, to quote from your own words,—“After some moments in deep thought, she said, ‘Oh God! Charlie, would I could tell you all, and you would think differently of me, and then I should not care what became of me. Oh! do promise me that, whatever may occur, you will not think of me with contempt.’” Did this occur? It did. 25 Nov., 1862.

2101. Was Mrs. Bentley in the habit of calling you “Charlie”? No, I do not recollect Mrs. Bentley calling me “Charlie” on this occasion. If it is there she did do so.

2102. But you do not remember it? I do not recollect it. From my own memory I cannot speak with regard to the words used.

2103. Are you in the habit of writing down your reflections in your diary as well as what actually occurred? No, not generally; but in this case I was so interested, as can be seen, since and prior to that, that I made notes of nearly everything.

2104. Here is a soliloquy that took place with yourself—as it usually does on such occasions—in the street:—“After leaving Bentley’s last night I wandered about the town, not feeling inclined to go home, and deep in thought as to the motives of Lily’s conduct. Is what she tells me true? Am I to believe her? Or am I deceived, and is she false as hell? If she is playing a part she does indeed play it to perfection. In spite of a better judgment I do feel an interest in her. I have coolly weighed over all that has passed between us, and can come to no other conclusion than the following:—If she has thus sacrificed herself voluntarily to play out this farce, she is a wretch unfit to receive the least commiseration at my hands. But if, on the contrary, she has been compelled into this course of action by her husband, I must continue to save her from a public exposure.” Now, had you been saving her from a public exposure before this time—had you had the means of exposing Mrs. Bentley before this? No, I cannot say so.

2105. You state here you “must continue to save her from a public exposure”? Is the word “continue” there? The word may be misapplied in the matter. I cannot say more than is there written. With regard to Mrs. Bentley, I had a doubt then. The doubt would often rise in my mind, whether she was the principal mover in the matter, or whether there was something better in the woman, and she was acting under Mr. Bentley’s instructions? That is the only account I can give of the remarks there put down.

2106. You continue stating—“I called in the evening, and remained till late. I watched her closely, and know not what to think. But of this I have no doubt—the game I am playing is a dangerous one, and if she is deceiving me she can at any moment place my life in danger, and I should have no means of clearing myself to the world.”—What is the meaning of that? Something to this effect—that if she was playing a part for the purpose of inveigling me there, so that Bentley, whom I often thought I heard at the door, could turn upon me, alleging some charge against myself in the matter, in connection with his wife, which I should never be able to disprove, he would then have declined to have the assistance of the police any further in the matter, and then the whole weight would fall on myself. That was why I watched her closely, and why I entertained doubts with regard to Mrs. Bentley. At times I thought she was a tool of Mr. Bentley’s, and that what she was doing she was doing unwillingly, and at other times that she was the principal mover in the matter. These thoughts did cross my mind frequently, and it was my wavering between the two that brought forth those remarks.

2107. By Mr. Wilson: One would imagine your conscience would have been checking you with regard to your conduct towards Mrs. Bentley? I stated before that I objected to the conduct I was pursuing, but that I wished to unravel this case, and had no other course. I had not chosen that course myself, but it went against my inclination; and more than that I was very strongly inclined to throw it up.

2108. By Mr. Piddington: You make use of a strong phrase, that your life would be placed in danger. In what way would your life be placed in danger? I presume from the fact of myself and Mrs. Bentley being together at that hour. I did not know Bentley sufficiently well but what he might have opened the door and sent a revolver bullet through me.

2109. By Mr. Morris: Seeing your arm round his wife’s waist? Yes, that was what I meant.

2110. By the Chairman: It is quite evident you did not think Mr. Bentley at all interested in your having your arm round his wife’s waist? I did not know what Bentley’s motives were. Had I known him truly I might have pursued another course, but I wished to arrive at the facts.

2111. On the 20th May, Mrs. Bentley was again with you. She was “in better spirits” and talked of her past life and her love of Italy. She gave me an account of her marriage, and that the clergyman who married them objected on account of Mr. B’s ill health. She likewise told me that directly the ceremony was completed they started for Paris, and she never lay down to rest till their arrival there on the third day. Mr. B. again left her on the following day and was absent for four days.” You state that this conversation occurred between Mrs. Bentley and yourself? Yes.

2112. For what purpose have you entered that conversation thus minutely? For no other purpose than the other conversations and remarks I have entered.

2113. Is it not to shew that Mrs. Bentley was extremely confidential with you? No, in fact I can assign no object for the entries in the diary.

2114. By Mr. Piddington: It tended to confirm the suspicion you had begun to entertain? Just so, and that was why I continued the entries as I went on in the matter.

2115. That was your object, viewing them as prominent topics —? I do not call it an object.—

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.
2116. By Mr. Morris: Was it not rather to shew the very familiar terms you and Mrs. Bentley were on? No, it was not.
2117. By Mr. Hart: Was it not rather to record, as in a looking glass, what took place? If I recollect right, with regard to many of my motives in connection with this case, Mrs. Bentley had, on several occasions, made contradictory statements with regard to occurrences of which Mr. Bentley had given me particulars. Mr. Bentley had given me particulars and Mrs. Bentley had given me particulars quite different with regard to the same occurrences, and it is for that reason I have noted many of these things down.
2118. By Mr. Johnson: Can you point to anything of that kind in your journal? I cannot refer to any particular part of it, but I know that was frequently the fact in the conversations that took place. I have no doubt that had something to do with my noting down private matters, or matters that did not bear on the case.
2119. By the Chairman: You still continued to treat Mr. Bentley in the same manner as before—you shewed no difference to Mr. or Mrs. Bentley? No, I do not know that I did.
2120. You accepted invitations to tea? I do not know that I ever received more than one or two invitations.
2121. There is an entry on the 20th May:—"I met Bentley in the morning, and he was most pressing that I should see him early this evening, to play a rubber at whist." About this time had you any other cases of anonymous letters in hand, excepting those in which the Bentleys' were engaged? No, not thoroughly in hand. I had the matter of D'Apice's, in which I took some steps; but Mr. D'Apice informed me directly afterwards that he had discovered the authors. He gave me the particulars and then I had no more to do with it.
2122. You did not succeed in tracing it to a successful issue? In tracing it home to the parties?
2123. Yes? No, he dropped the case. He knew the parties, and said the matter would cease, or something of the sort.
2124. By Mr. Wilson: Was it Mr. D'Apice or the detective police that discovered the author? It is only a suspicion now. Mr. D'Apice informed me he was satisfied as to the author, and did not care about any further steps being taken.
2125. Did the detective police suggest the author to him? No, the only steps taken in the matter were some that Mr. D'Apice assisted in with regard to himself.
2126. By the Chairman: Were you in communication at this time with Mr. Cutolo or Mr. Montagu? I was not. From the very first I avoided Mr. Cutolo on all occasions, and did so even after I had changed my opinion with regard to him, until lately.
2127. By Mr. Piddington: Did you, with regard to Mr. Montagu? Mr. Montagu I never spoke to in my life until about a month ago at the theatre.
2128. By the Chairman: You state here that Mr. Cutolo left his card at the office, and called upon you, and wished to explain away any suspicions —? That was in D'Apice's case.
2129. You were in communication with him at that time? I was not. Mr. Cutolo and Mr. D'Apice both met in the office at the same time; and after Mr. Cutolo was gone, Mr. D'Apice assured me that though they were sworn enemies, Mr. Cutolo was incapable of anything of the kind.
2130. Had you not previously to that promised Mr. Cutolo all the assistance in your power to clear him of the imputations against him? I do not know whether it was previous to leaving his card that Mr. Cutolo met me at the corner of the street and spoke with regard to the suspicion of his connection with the Bentley case, and I told him I would give him all the assistance in my power to clear him.
2131. By Mr. Morris: Was that after Mr. D'Apice assured you he believed him to be innocent? I cannot say.
2132. By the Chairman: When Mr. Cutolo called with regard to the D'Apice case, the Bentley case was not touched upon? No. Mr. Cutolo brought me an anonymous letter he had received with regard to Mr. D'Apice's order of the Holy Ghost, or whatever it was.
2133. Mr. Cutolo received one of these anonymous letters himself? Yes, with a note purporting to come from Mr. Turville. The note stated that Signor D'Apice had applied to the Governor for permission to wear his order of the Holy Ghost (if it was the Holy Ghost), and knowing that Mr. Cutolo ought to be acquainted with him, and that there were some matters in connection with D'Apice's antecedents, the particulars of which he thought Signor Cutolo could give, he (Mr. Turville) begged of him to furnish him with the particulars.
2134. By Mr. Morris: Was there any similarity between the letters in D'Apice's case and these? None.
2135. By the Chairman: On the 30th May, according to your diary, Mrs. Bentley expressed her conviction that she was in the hands of the Jesuits—was this before or after you had heard of the Exeter case? I cannot tell. I did not hear of the Exeter case, except from Mr. Bentley and Mrs. Bentley, until such time as I received the information which is stated there.
2136. You say she stated she "wished she could give you all the particulars, but she dare not do so." And you go on to say, "I listened to her patiently without making any comments. What the devil is in the wind now?" Yes; I thought it strange, after all the suspicions that they had directed against Mr. Cutolo and Mr. Montagu, I could not understand it being shifted from them to the Jesuits.
2137. On the 31st May you state:—"Called at Bentley's in the evening. Mr. Wrench was "there. Bentley shewed me the letter of apology he had received from the Philharmonic Committee, likewise from Mr. Merewether, which he does not intend answering, as he "thinks it is couched in terms aggravating the insult." Then you go on to soliloquize:—
"I

- "I wonder how the Bentley swindle will end. I do not like my position in the matter at all. When the facts are published, the Empire is sure to make it a handle to attack the police, and then an exposé must take place. And yet I would not like to expose her to public odium, though I fear much she is undeserving of pity." What do you mean by that? I mean what is there stated. I can give no explanation of it. The party referred to as "her" is Mrs. Bentley, because I believed there was some good in Mrs. Bentley.
2138. But no good in Mr. Bentley? I did not believe there was, nor do I.
2139. You were invited to Mr. Bentley's to dinner, were you not? Possibly.
2140. "According to invitation I went to Elizabeth-street to dinner"? Yes, I believe Mr. Bentley told me he would shew me —. We had some conversation about the letters and making the matter public—I forget what it was now. He was going to make a rough draft of the leading facts of the case, or something to that effect—and that was the reason why I was to go down on that occasion.
2141. Did you see them on that day? I have no recollection of seeing them at all.
2142. What occurred? I cannot say.
2143. Did Mrs. Bentley tell you she was an Italian? I recollect Mrs. Bentley telling me on one occasion she was an Italian; I cannot say whether it was on that occasion.
2144. Is this entry true:—"She told me it was true she was an Italian, and she was persuaded that the object of these attacks emanated from Home. She dare not give me the particulars, but this she could tell me, that her own father had wounded her in the side with a knife, and had stood over her with a loaded pistol, and compelled her to sign papers of which she did not know the contents"? She did tell me so, word for word, as there stated.
2145. And then when Mr. Bentley came back, you "led the conversation back to the old gentleman, and Mr. Bentley spoke in such enraptured terms of him, and so contradictory of what Mrs. B. had previously said, that I again had to turn the conversation to prevent her seeing that I noticed her confusion." Do you blame Mr. Bentley or Mrs. Bentley in this matter. If Mrs. Bentley invented these matters in regard to her own father, do you think Mr. Bentley should have all the blame for it? Mrs. Bentley's statement might be true.
2146. And Mr. Bentley still speaks in high terms of ———? One or other might be true; both could not have been.
2147. Which do you think was true? I do not know—perhaps neither of them.
2148. Which did you allow to have an impression on your mind as true? I did not believe Mrs. Bentley at the time.
2149. Do you believe it now? No, I do not, nor a great deal more. My belief has been a great deal more shaken lately.
2150. After dinner what was the conversation about—was it not with regard to publishing these letters? Yes.
2151. And you did not wish the police to be mentioned? I did not. I recollect mentioning that to Mrs. Bentley.
2152. What was your reason? I cannot say what the reason was—nothing much in itself—but I believe it was that I wished to avoid bringing an attack on the Detective Police from the Empire.
2153. You make another prediction here—you state that "Wednesday will be the turning point"? That was the day I believed the publication was to take place.
2154. Was that the turning point? Well, I do not know. I thought it was at the time—that when the whole of the facts were laid before the public, the case would be so glaring that there could be no two opinions; that is, independent of any report from the police, but from the facts themselves.
2155. On the 3rd June you were again at Mrs. Bentley's to take tea? And took tea I think.
2156. Having promised to take tea with Mrs. Bentley—I suppose this still shews that you were keeping up your former appearance and treating them in the same way? Yes.
2157. "I thought Mrs. Bentley half inclined to confess the swindle. She was speaking about her friends, and I could not help saying, 'You will indeed have need of them before long.' She started, and asked me what I meant? I answered, nothing, but that I had a presentiment of evil. She was very much agitated. The tears were trickling down her cheeks, and she begged of me to remember my promise, and to give her a hearing, whatever might occur, and, no matter how appearances might be against her, suspend my judgment for a time at least." What is the meaning of that? What is there stated. I cannot tell you any more, than that the conversation took place, and those are the facts.
2158. Do you not think it is calculated to convey rather more than that to those who would read this entry? No one was ever supposed to read that entry. It was not made for other people to read, but for my own information.
2159. Would it convey a different meaning? I do not know what it may convey to you, Mr. Chairman; to me it conveys what is there set down. I did frequently think, and I think now, that Mrs. Bentley was on the point of acknowledging the affair on several occasions.
2160. On June 4th, I see, you state that "opinion is divided between Cutolo, Mrs. Boulanger, and a fiction." Who is the fiction? That the whole affair was concocted, and the persecution an imaginary one.
2161. By Mr. Hart: In any of your confidential communications with Mrs. Bentley, did you ever press her to disclose the truth? No; I was afraid of going so far, for fear it might be brought against myself; but I have led the conversation in that direction, and I know Mrs. Bentley frequently thought and was satisfied at the time that I suspected them; I was sure of it.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector 2162. By Mr. Piddington: When Mrs. Bentley told you she was an Italian, did she state in what part of Italy she was born? She did not—simply the fact.
- C. E.
Harrison. 2163. Perhaps you never inquired? No; it was a remark made in conversation.
2164. Did she say, "I was born in Italy"? No, she said "I am an Italian."
- 25 Nov., 1862. 2165. When Mrs. Bentley stated that her father had wounded her in the side with a knife, did you feel any doubt whether Mrs. Bentley was in a sane state of mind at the time? No, I cannot say I did.
2166. Have you had any doubts with regard to the sanity of Mrs. Bentley at any time? I have had doubts with regard to the sanity of both of them.
2167. When Mrs. Bentley stated that her father had wounded her in the side with a knife, and had stood over her with a loaded pistol, did she seem to be different in her manner from what was usual with her? No, not different from usual when conversation was going on.
2168. By the Chairman: On the 4th of June, after you state that the opinion of the public is divided between Cutolo, Mrs. Boulanger, and a fiction, you have given what I suppose is a soliloquy of your own:—"Bentley! Bentley! If I am not very much mistaken, you have had twelve months anxiety and trouble for nothing. Your fine edifice, reared at such a cost of falsehood, is about to topple down and overwhelm you."—Is that your entry? It is.
2169. And this is a soliloquy of your own? Yes.
2170. On the 23rd June you have here made an entry—"On going to the office this morning Captain M'Lerie informed me of his intention of submitting my report to Messrs. Hanson and Fairfax, for their opinion, and to make use of as they thought best, "as Wrench was still importuning the Government to offer a reward."—Is that a fact? It is a fact.
2171. Exactly as there detailed? To the best of my belief it is, having been written at the time. My memory does not carry me back to what the conversation was between the Inspector General and myself; but as I have already stated with regard to that diary, every word is a fact. There may be an error of date, or something of that kind.
2172. If Mr. M'Lerie has stated that this report was shewn to Mr. Hanson in confidence he has stated what was not true? I cannot speak as to that; I can only speak of what took place between the Inspector General and myself.
2173. That is correct? That is correct; as true as the rest.
2174. That Mr. M'Lerie stated his intention of submitting your report—bye-the-bye, just state what that report is? I did not look upon it at that time as a report, but it was a paper I had furnished to the Chief Secretary with respect to the case. I never considered that I was called on to give a report. Had I been called upon for a report I should have given a full and particular one. I simply gave that to Mr. Cowper to save time.
2175. "In the afternoon (June 23) I called upon Mrs. B. She was alone and seemed "anxious, and distressed. She said she hoped no further steps would be taken to make a stir with the public, and that she would give anything to recall the publication of the letters. She cried bitterly, and from my heart I felt grieved for her when she told me how she suffered. She begged of me to call in the evening and see Mr. B., and I promised to do so. I then left her."—All this is exactly as it occurred too, I suppose? Yes.
2176. And you told Mrs. Bentley on that occasion that you had long known the author? Yes.
2177. Did you tell Mr. Bentley on that occasion? No. "I told her (Mrs. Bentley) that "I had long known the author, and that now the matter had become so public I could only see "ruin and disgrace in the matter. I said this and much more"—? You asked me whether I told Mr. Bentley then. If that refers to the last time I was at the house, I did tell him then, and I told the Inspector General before I went that I was tired of the part I was playing, and that I was going down to tell Mr. Bentley that I believed he himself was the author of the whole affair, and I did go down and did inform him to that effect, that the whole evidence pointed to him as the author and to no one else. Mrs. Bentley followed me down into the parlour, and a conversation did take place between us, which conversation I believe is stated there, and which is not the same as Mr. Bentley has stated in his deposition. "Her distress "was very great, indeed it amounted to actual agony, and she begged, if disgrace did come, "that it might be to her and not to him." Those were the last words she used. She made use of very strong language, and she was in very great distress. That took place in the dining-room down stairs. It was in the drawing-room that I told Mr. Bentley that the whole evidence pointed at him and no one else.
2178. You had conversations with other people after this? Yes.
2179. And disseminated your own suspicions on the subject to them? I do not think I did. I always avoided turning suspicion against the Bentleys.
2180. When did that conversation take place with Hanson and Bennett, prior to the article appearing in the Empire; did you not then relate to Mr. Hanson your suspicions in the matter; did you not go through the whole case with them prior to the appearance of that article? I cannot recollect.
2181. You can recollect whether you waited on Mr. Hanson? I did, and shewed him my report; that was once. I do not recollect waiting on Mr. Hanson before that.
2182. Did you not see Mr. Hanson before he published the particulars of that report of yours that you submitted to the Colonial Secretary? I do not think I did.
2183. You had no conversation with Mr. Hanson previously to that? I have had only two or three conversations with Mr. Hanson since the affair took place, because Mr. Hanson and I have not been on terms; and I do not think any conversation took place between us latterly until I went down to shew that the estimate of the dimensions of these apertures was not given positively.
2184. I think you have already stated that you have read through the whole of the depositions in the Bentley case? I hurriedly went through them; I cannot say I have read Sub-Inspector them all.

2185. I think you said you found no fault with them? There was this fault, that I noticed in certain parts, that though what was stated was true, other facts which would have given a different colour to the case were suppressed. With the exception of what took place between Mr. Bentley and myself on the last night I was at his house, which is not correctly stated, and the statement that I searched the house with an aboriginal tracker, there is nothing that I can state to be incorrect from my own knowledge.

2186. Did you call at the Herald Office, and have any conversation with the Editor in relation to this case? No. I called on Mr. Fairfax one time to get a copy of Margaret Dodd's writing in the D'Apice case, but whether anything was said about the Bentley case I cannot recollect. It was solely with regard to the D'Apice case that I called upon him.

2187. By Mr. Morris: I wish to recall your memory to the 2nd May, when Mrs. Bentley said she had been interrupted by some person within Mr. Josephson's gate, after the assault—you stated in your examination by Mr. Johnson, that two detectives had gone out on that occasion, one accompanying Mrs. Bentley, and the other to lie in concealment—would you be kind enough to mention the names of those two detectives? The one who lay in concealment was Sanderson.

2188. Who went with Mrs. Bentley? I do not recollect.

2189. If anyone went with Mrs. Bentley, or went on any duty at all that day, there will be a record of it in the book I hold in my hand? Yes, there out to be. I will explain with regard to this book. This is a book kept by the men themselves to enter the duties they are employed upon for their own information.

2190. There is a book called the detective duty book, in which the men make entries? The men keep that book themselves to enter the duties they perform, or any remark they wish to enter. Then there is a daily and weekly record, which is filed. This book I very seldom look into. I have the weekly record, which is in slips.

2191. Do you not think that if two men accompanied Mrs. Bentley on that occasion it would appear here? It may appear there as special duty, without the explanation.

2192. If it does not appear, and if there is no reference in this book to two detectives—? Then I must have been out there myself on that occasion. I have been out with Mrs. Bentley at times.

2193. By Mr. Piddington: Does this book profess to keep a detailed account of the duties of the men? No, it does not. It is a book kept by themselves. I have acted as Mrs. Bentley's escort, and when I have done so it would not be entered in that book; I do not know whether such was the case on that occasion. I know Sanderson was the man I told off to lie concealed in order to watch her.

2194. By Mr. Morris: Does this book not purport to be a record kept by the men of their various duties? It does.

2195. It is meant for the men to enter their various duties in? Yes.

2196. Entries were made on the 2nd May by Sanderson? I have not referred to it.

2197. As a matter of fact, Sanderson says this—"Came on duty at 9; on special duty at Newtown till 4"—But there is no other entry of special duty on that day? Sanderson will be able to give the name of the other who was there, I presume. The second was on a Friday. After this again, on the following Tuesday, I sent a detective with Mrs. Bentley and Sanderson, to lay perdu, and Camphin to the corner of the Newtown and Cook's River Road, so that if Mrs. Bentley took a 'bus and went to Cook's River he might follow her.

2199. Then she told you this before this occurrence? She told me this had happened the time after the alleged assault there, and then it was that, anticipating that it was possible that Mrs. Bentley might go to Cook's River, I sent a detective, on the next occasion of her going to Newtown, to see whether she did; but she did not.

2200. By Mr. Morris: The time Camphin went to Newtown—when you expected she might go to Cook's River—was that the day she alleged she had been spoken to at Mr. Josephson's gate by a man who said you were waiting for her at Cook's River? No; it was the week afterwards that I sent Camphin, thinking after what she had said that she might go to Cook's River. I sent him because of Mrs. Bentley's remark about her having been spoken to at the gate.

2201. By the Chairman: Had this conversation at the gate any reference to Cook's River? Mrs. Bentley stated that a man stopped her there, and told her I was waiting for her at Cook's River; but she said she had a doubt about the truth of what he said and did not go.

2202. That was the reason why you told this man if she went to Cook's River? That was why I sent the third man out the next time she went—a man she did not know; she knew Sanderson.

2203. By Mr. Hart: What date was that? It was on one of the days that Mrs. Bentley went out to give her lessons.

2204. On the 2nd of May detectives Clark, Camphin, Downham, Elliott, and Carnes were on duty in Sydney—were there any other detectives on duty at that time besides those I have named, and Sanderson? No.

2205. Then upon reference to this book you will observe that the whole of them record the duty upon which they were engaged, and none of them state that they were in company with Sanderson—how is that reconcilable with the statement you make, that two of them went with Mrs. Bentley? I can only explain it one way, if that be the case, that I must have gone with Mrs. Bentley that day myself. But, for the satisfaction of the Committee, the matter can be set at rest at once, by calling in Sanderson, who will be at the Detective Office now.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.

Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
25 Nov., 1862.

2206. By the Chairman: Would that reconcile it with this entry in your diary:—"Sent Sanderson to Newtown with orders to conceal himself in the bush, near Josephson's gate, and closely watch Mrs. B. I then sent another officer part of the way out and met her myself, to act as escort from the 'bus to the gate'? Then I was there myself. The man I sent part of the way may have been one of the officers here mentioned.

2207. What about this explanation about going to Cook's River? I have told you why I took these steps.

2208. If Mrs. Bentley did not make that remark until after she returned—if this occurred on the same day, how could you take precautions before you knew she was likely to go to Cook's River? It was from the remark made by Mrs. Bentley that I sent Camphin to follow her to Cook's River, or wherever she might go. Sanderson was the outlying party in the bush. When I began to suspect Mrs. Bentley I sent an officer with her whom she knew, and another whom she did not know. It was from the fact of Mrs. Bentley having reported that a man had stopped her at the gate, and wanted her to go to Cook's River, that I sent Camphin to watch her the next time. With respect to that statement of hers, I had questioned Sanderson, and he had told me that no one had stopped Mrs. Bentley at the gate leading to Mr. Josephson's house; that she stopped a moment at the gate to fasten her glove, but there was no one near her, and he saw her go right away down to the turning into the Newtown Road, without being molested by anyone. I then, the following time, when Mrs. Bentley went out, sent Camphin to wait in case she went to Cook's River.

2209. By Mr. Morris: Had you not on one occasion one of your policemen concealed in this loft over Mrs. Bentley's bedroom, and which of them? I have no recollection of it. I never ordered a man to conceal himself there, nor do I think any man ever was concealed there. If it was so it was during my absence from the house. No man ever received instructions from me to do so.

2210. By the Chairman: On the occasion of the 2nd of May, if you met Mrs. Bentley and went with her as her escort from the 'bus to the gate, you ought to have some more intimate knowledge of what took place, than from the report of a third person? I did not remain at the gate till Mrs. Bentley came back. I could not wait two hours till Mrs. Bentley returned, as it was unnecessary, especially as I had an officer lying close at hand.

2211. By Mr. Piddington: You think you walked with Mrs. Bentley? I think I was out at Newtown before Mrs. Bentley, and walked with her, when she got out of the 'bus, to Mr. Josephson's gate.

2212. And at the same time you had another man also watching Mrs. Bentley? Yes, that she knew nothing about.

2213. Had you not two men that she knew nothing about? Not that day.

2214. How do you reconcile that with this statement:—"I sent Sanderson out to Newtown with orders to conceal himself in the bush, near Josephson's gate, and closely watch Mrs. B. I then sent another officer part of the way out, and went and met her myself to act as escort from the 'bus to the gate'? The matter explains itself. I probably told this other officer to watch Mrs. Bentley through the town until she took the omnibus, which he did; and that would not appear there because it is not a matter he would note down in that book; and then when Mrs. Bentley got out of the 'bus I acted as her escort to the gate and returned to Sydney.

WEDNESDAY, 26 NOVEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER,
MR. HART,
MR. WILSON,

MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. DALGLEISH,
MR. W. FORSTER.

AUGUSTUS MORRIS, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Johnson, Solicitor for Petitioner, in attendance.

Mr. Charles Edward Harrison called in and further examined:—

Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
26 Nov., 1862.

2215. By the Chairman: In reference to this letter which you informed the Committee Mrs. Bentley gave into your hands, did you pre-arrange with her to write you this letter? Mrs. Bentley promised to write to me, as I was proceeding to Bathurst, giving me the particulars of the case known here in Sydney, as the Bentley case.

2216. Was her husband aware that she intended to write to you? I do not know.

2217. Do you think he was? I cannot say.

2218. You say Mrs. Bentley gave you this letter herself? She did.

2219. Well, on the 19th of June, you say, you called twice at the Bentleys' house—once in the morning when Mr. Bentley was away, and again in the evening when Mr. Bentley was at home—at which time was the letter given to you? In the evening, after Mr. Bentley had gone to bed. Mrs. Bentley came down stairs to the hall door, and there gave it to me.

2220. By Mr. Piddington: It was at that time the letter was handed to you? Yes, that evening, when Mr. Bentley had gone to bed.

2221. Did she state that she had written it herself? She said—"I wrote you the letter before the time" (I think those were the words she used) "as I might not have an opportunity of posting it to-morrow when I go out to give lessons."

2222.

2222. By the Chairman: At what time did Mr. Bentley go to bed? I do not know. I am Sub-Inspector not positive whether he had gone to bed, or only up-stairs.
2223. By Mr. Piddington: It was described as a letter written by herself, intended to be sent by post, but which she gave to you personally? Yes. She said she intended to have sent it by post the next day.
2224. Was the letter in an envelope? Yes, in a plain envelope, with no address upon it.
2225. Have you got the envelope? Yes; if it is not here, I have it.
2226. By the Chairman: You will observe that the letter states that, "As for Mrs. Bentley's annoyance, that, I believe, for the present, rests quietly"? Yes.
2227. So that a person unacquainted with the circumstances would presume that this letter was written by some other person? Yes.
2228. By Mr. Piddington: Neither the letter nor the envelope was addressed to you? No.
2229. By the Chairman: Still, the references in the letter are sufficient to shew that it was for you? Yes.
2230. By Mr. Piddington: In what way? I refer to the fact of my having to proceed into the country on account of the mail robberies, and after the parties who robbed the escort. I started away from Sydney with the intention of going up to Bathurst, but the order was countermanded.
2231. Can you point out, from the contents of the letter, any part of it which necessarily connects it with yourself? No; only this fact: that I started for the country for those purposes referred to in the letter.
2232. Does that necessarily identify the letter with you? No, there is nothing in it to that effect.
2233. By Mr. Johnson: At what time did you first call on Mrs. Bentley when you returned from Bathurst? I did not go to Bathurst, having returned shortly after starting. It was in the afternoon.
2234. At what time? I cannot recollect.
2235. Take your diary and see? At 4 o'clock it would appear.
2236. Did you call on Mrs. Bentley three times that day then? I do not recollect. I think only twice.
2237. Try to recollect? I cannot.
2238. Did you call at 7 o'clock? Yes.
2239. Was Mrs. Bentley occupied at that time, and did you state that you would come in again? Yes.
2240. Did you see Mrs. Bentley afterwards, that day? I cannot say.
2241. If you had would it appear in your diary? No, if I did not see her on calling I do not think I should have taken a note of such a trifling circumstance.
2242. Did you call at my house at 7 o'clock? I do not recollect; I might have done so.
2243. Did you request the servant that your name was not to be mentioned if Mrs. Bentley was engaged? I do not recollect such a request.
2244. Did Mrs. Bentley come down and say she was engaged? I do not recollect.
2245. Did you say that, under these circumstances, you would come back in the course of an hour? I might have done so.
2246. And did you come back after that time and see me? I saw you that evening. I saw Mrs. Bentley in the afternoon, but I do not recollect seeing you when I saw Mrs. Bentley.
2247. Will you swear that upon that evening I gave you the letters connected with Mr. Cape? Yes, if there is an entry to that effect. I do not know that you gave me all, but I know you gave me some letters.
2248. You can recollect so distinctly that you came twice, but you cannot recollect the fact that Mrs. Bentley came down to you and said she was engaged, and of your having to come a third time? No. I do not say that what you state is incorrect—it may be as you state; but I do not recollect the fact, whether it was so or not.
2249. Will you say you made these entries within two days of the time? I have already stated that the entries were made as regularly as I could possibly make them. I cannot say whether the entry was made that night or the following day.
2250. Are you quite sure you even called at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of that day? Yes; it there states that I did.
2251. By Mr. Wilson: Have you no recollection of the circumstance irrespective of the entry in the diary? I have a recollection of going there the first time after I returned, and also of going there in the afternoon and seeing Mrs. Bentley—it was in the latter part of the afternoon; but whether I called at 7 o'clock in the evening, and Mrs. Bentley being then engaged, I called again, I do not recollect.
2252. By the Chairman: I wish to call back your attention to the diary—you did not in your previous evidence appear to know very certainly when you purchased this diary? Oh, yes.
2253. Now, probably, your memory is refreshed—will you state the circumstances connected with the purchase of the book? I can state, as before, that having formed the intention of keeping a diary (not having kept one before), either at the end of last year or, it might have been, in the early part of the month of January, I asked Mr. Harris, who is employed with Messrs. Sands and Kenny, to get me one. I was speaking to him about a diary, and asked if he would recollect to bring one home with him, as I intended to have bought one, but had forgotten it during the day. He told me he would, and he did do so; and that is the diary he brought me—the only diary of the kind I ever kept.
2254. Did you pay him, or was it put down to your account? I think he paid for it, and I paid him.
2255. Then it would appear in his account with Sands and Kenny? Not if he paid cash for it.

C. E.
Harrison.
26 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector 2256. But if he had an account with Sands and Kenny it would appear there? Oh, yes.
C. E. 2257. Have you seen Mr. Harris since the occasion of your examination? Yes, several Harrison. times.
2258. Has he confirmed your impression? In the particulars; he recollects procuring the diary for me about the beginning of the year. I have not seen Mr. Harris to-day. Yesterday I saw him twice—the first time in Pitt-street, about 4 o'clock, and he informed me then that some party from the Committee had been down there to make inquiries about the purchase of the diary. I stated to him that I had said I purchased the diary, and he said he recollected the purchase; adding, that he did not see the object of sending a person down to inquire about the matter; and he thought he did not give them a satisfactory answer.
2259. By Mr. Piddington: He does recollect the circumstance? Yes.
2260. And he confirms the account you gave? Yes.
2261. By Mr. Hart: What was the amount you paid for it? 6s., I think.
2262. By the Chairman: Do you not recollect having stated, that when you got the diary you also got a volume of Bulwer's novels? Yes; but I am not certain whether I got it with the diary, or about the same time.
2263. As a matter of fact, did you not get that volume of Bulwer's novels more than two years ago? I think it was a volume of Bulwer's novels I got about the time that I obtained the diary; but, if not, it was a volume of some other work.
2264. Do you not think you bought the diary on the 20th February, when you paid a two years' account at Sands and Kenny's? I do not. I think I must have obtained it as I have stated.
2265. Did Mr. Harris tell you that he could not remember whether he brought you this diary or not? He did not tell me so; but there were those present when he brought me the diary. The party who keeps the house was aware of the fact that Mr. Harris brought me the diary.
2266. You will positively assert that this diary was commenced some time in the month of January, and kept regularly, and not written up some few months ago? Having never kept one before the time I obtained it, I got it for the purposes I have stated, and it is entered up as I have stated; and it was obtained from Mr. Harris as I have stated.
2267. By Mr. Dalgleish: Did you not state that you got another book at the same time? I believe I did; if not at the time I got another book about that time.
2268. You stated that you had other books? One, I think.
2269. You are quite sure of that? Yes; that I had, I think, it was Bulwer's novels.
2270. By the Chairman: In reference to an entry in this diary of the 13th February, and another on the 15th, these must convince you that you did not keep your diary regularly—I refer to the account of the cricket match? I have stated that in the early part I was not so particular as when the Bentley case became interesting. There may be some mistake before then, but afterwards I became more careful with regard to the entries. Ever since that time I have not made entries as the facts occurred, but have made memoranda, and entered them up afterwards.
2271. By Mr. Hart: Was the Bentley case, or the occurrences in connection with it coming under your notice, entered de die in diem? No; some were entered on the following day, and, in some instances, it was two days subsequently that an entry was made.
2272. Does it not occur to you that the chief value of a diary depends upon the entries being made at the time? I did not set any value upon the diary. I have not always an opportunity of making the entries at the time. The diary may be at my house, and I may be away for days together, never thinking of the diary.
2273. By Mr. Piddington: Do you take a rough note or memorandum of anything striking in the cases coming under your observation, previous to copying it into the diary? In matters relating to the Bentley case, when I have returned from his house late in the night, Mrs. Harrison has made a memorandum of the facts that occurred during the evening and day, so that there might be no mistake, and from these memoranda I have made entries in the diary the following day.
2274. You dictated to her what took place? I stated to her what took place in the evening, in the middle of the night.
2275. By the Chairman: It is true, I suppose, as stated in the diary, that Captain M'Lerie shewed you a letter from Mr. Fairfax, of the Herald, stating that he was satisfied with your report on the Bentley case? He read me a letter. The entry is true.
2276. I think you have before stated that Mrs. Harrison made none of the entries in this diary? None of them.
2277. But that she had opportunities at all times of seeing the diary? At any time.
2278. By Mr. Wilson: With regard to the statement that you made before Captain M'Lerie in reference to this case, are you aware whether that statement was shewn to any individuals not connected with the police? Do you mean the first particulars of the case, or which statement?
2279. The statement called the report? I am not aware of my own knowledge that the Inspector General shewed it to anyone.
2280. Are you aware whether he shewed it to anyone or not? I do not know only from what took place between him and myself with regard to the report being shewn to Mr. Hanson.
2281. Did he mention that it had been shewn to any other party besides Mr. Hanson? I have no recollection that he did.
2282. It is stated in your diary of June 23rd:—"On going to the office this morning, Captain M'Lerie informed me of his intention to submit my report to Messrs. Hanson and Fairfax for their opinion, and to make use of as they thought best, as Wrench was still importuning

"the Government to offer a reward." Do you recollect the circumstance of his mentioning Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison that he had shewn the report to Mr. Fairfax? I do not recollect that he told me he had done so, but I think he told me of his intention to do so.

2283. Are you quite clear as to the object that Captain M'Lerie stated he had in view in shewing this report to Mr. Hanson and Mr. Fairfax? I really cannot tell what his object was. 26 Nov., 1862.

2284. You see his object is there stated? For their opinion, and to make use of it as they might think best.

2285. Are you quite clear that that conversation took place, and that Captain M'Lerie made that statement to you? Yes.

2286. You state here under date the 26th of June:—"Captain M'Lerie shewed me a letter this morning he had received from Mr. Fairfax, the editor of the Herald, expressing his "satisfaction of the report I had made of the Bentley case, and that it was conclusive." Do you recollect the circumstance of seeing that letter from Mr. Fairfax to Captain M'Lerie? Yes, I recollect the circumstance. I do not know that I read the letter, but Captain M'Lerie read the letter in my presence, and it appeared to be to that effect.

2287. You state that he shewed you a letter from Mr. Fairfax? Yes.

2288. You have no doubt it was from Mr. Fairfax? I have no doubt of it; the Inspector General told me so.

2289. And consequently you infer that he had shewn the report to Mr. Fairfax as well as to Mr. Hanson? Yes.

2290. Did you understand that he shewed it to Mr. Fairfax, as a friend of Mr. Bentley, or as proprietor of the Sydney Morning Herald? I cannot say.

2291. You state that Mrs. Bentley informed you that she had been addressed by a party on the road, when coming from Newtown, at the time when she was watched by a detective—will you tell the Committee the name of that detective officer? Sanderson.

2292. Did he make a written report to you on the subject? He did not.

2293. Might there not have been a mistake on the part of Sanderson? I think not.

2294. Is it impossible that a mistake could have been made—supposing there was truth in the statement that you say was made to you by Bentley—might there not have been a confusion of dates between Mrs. Bentley and Sanderson? I think not, because I questioned Sanderson about it particularly. Mrs. Bentley only going to Newtown twice in a week, I questioned him directly after (one or two days after) it was said to have taken place.

2295. Where did Sanderson say he was? Close to the gate, in the bush.

2296. And from his position there had he an opportunity of seeing Mrs. Bentley from the time she left the gate till she got to the omnibus? I do not know. I do not know the exact spot where he located himself. He told me that he had watched Mrs. Bentley from the house, and along the road, but how far I cannot say.

2297. Did Sanderson himself address Mrs. Bentley on that occasion? He did not; he was not instructed to that effect.

2298. Does he know her well? Yes, from having been at the house.

2299. The detectives examined one of the Post Office letter-boxes to see what letters were posted there on a certain occasion? Yes.

2300. Who examined them? The detective Clark.

2301. Who authorized him to do so? I did. When the boy took the letters out of the pillar, he was informed by Clark that he had come to see whether there were any letters corresponding with the envelopes I had of the Bentleys, and also to compare handwriting.

2302. Have they authority to pay more attention to a detective than to other persons? I believe not; but I believe Mr. Hunt, of the Post Office, was aware of this fact; I sent down to him about it, and he took a great interest in the matter.

2303. But did he authorize the boy to allow the detectives to examine the letters? I do not know. There was no examination of letters. The detective had instructions to see whether there were any letters corresponding with the handwriting, when the boy took the letters out of the pillar.

2304. He must have looked at the letters in the box? Yes.

2305. By Mr. Piddington: Had he any directions to open the letters? No, only to see whether the writing on the outside corresponded with that of the anonymous letters.

2306. By Mr. Wilson: Did you get authority from Mr. Hunt to do this? No.

2307. You did it entirely on your own motion, no one instructing you or authorizing you to proceed in that way? No.

2308. You have stated that you had made arrangements to take steps with regard to any letters posted by Cutolo or Montagu—can you tell what steps you had made arrangements to take. You have said in a previous part of your examination that you had made arrangements to take steps if any letters were posted by Cutolo or Montagu—what steps had you made arrangements to take? I do not recollect.

2309. Supposing Mr. Clark had found letters which he supposed to have been posted by Cutolo or Montagu, addressed to these parties, what then would he have done—did he intend to take possession of them? No, he would not have dared to do so. He would have gone to the Post Office, and have seen Mr. Hunt or Major Christie about them. I do not know what steps would have been taken afterwards.

2310. Then you made no arrangements for the steps to be taken? I was constantly taking steps and making arrangements at the time, and I cannot recollect all that I took.

2311. You are aware that neither detectives nor other individuals have a right to examine matters connected with the Post Office? I am; and it is seldom that we can obtain assistance from the Post Office, even in criminal matters of magnitude.

2312. Do you recollect the date of the assault that was said to have been made upon Mrs. Bentley? It was on Friday, the 25th of April.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison. 2313. Do you recollect the date of a letter appearing in the newspaper stating it to have been made a month and eleven days afterwards? I do not recollect.
2314. You recollect that it was a considerable time after the assault, that the letter appeared? I do not know what letter you allude to.
- 26 Nov., 1862. 2315. The letter of Mrs. Bentley on the 4th of June—that was a month and eleven days after the assault—now I wish to know who was under the surveillance of the police in this matter between the 25th of April and the 4th of June, or whether any parties were under their surveillance? I do not think anyone was under their surveillance at that time; the previous surveillance upon certain parties I had discontinued.
2316. When? I cannot recollect the date. I discontinued watching them at the time my opinion changed as to who were the authors.
2317. Then the police were watching no one during this month and eleven days? They were engaged at Mr. Bentley's house. There was no one watched.
2318. Did any circumstance transpire during this month and eleven days—any letters received or written in connection with this case? I believe there were, but I cannot say how many.
2319. During that time you say it was your impression and conviction that the Bentleys' were the authors of the whole affair? Yes; but that impression grew stronger as that month passed away. It was not so strong at the beginning as at the end of the month. I had to satisfy myself whether I was mistaken or not, and as the time passed those impressions and convictions increased in strength.
2320. Does it not appear a very unsatisfactory circumstance that you did not place the Bentleys under surveillance when your suspicions were aroused, which you say was as early as the 25th of April, and when these circumstances were still transpiring? One thing is to be taken into consideration, that is, the number of men I had at my command to do this work, as well as the general work of the City with regard to criminal matters.
2321. By Mr. Johnson: You were then relieved from the employment of your men in watching other suspected parties? Yes.
2322. Why could you not have put these men who had been watching Cutolo and Montagu to watch the Bentleys? They were there day and night.
2323. By Mr. Cowper: And you were watching them yourself? Yes.
2324. By Mr. Johnson: Why did you not adopt the same course with regard to Cutolo and Montagu? Because I thought it best to adopt another course.
2325. But did it not occur to you, as a matter of common sense, that they might have posted their letters by their servants or agents? I do not know whether any other party might not have been at work.
2326. And the same with regard to Montagu and Cutolo? Yes.
2327. Then why not have adopted the same course with regard to the Bentleys? I thought the course I was pursuing the better one.
2328. What was that course—to obtain a confession from Mrs. Bentley? No; to trust to time, and the means I was using to unravel the mystery.
2329. You left it to time to unravel the mystery? Not exactly; but time was required for facts to develop themselves and plans to be worked out.
2330. By Mr. Wilson: Do you know how many detectives there were, on an average, engaged under you from the 25th of April to the 4th of June—there appears never to have been less than four and sometimes five? I had four or five at that time; but it was a small number for the work of the City, where there were scores of thieves to be watched.
2331. Can you say on what special duty they were employed at this time? Watching thieves was their general duty, and they had to be at the Police Office; there were many other matters to employ them upon, unconnected with the Bentley case.
2332. Would it not be more conducive to the efficiency of the public service if a complete diary were kept of the proceedings of the detective police? So there will be. I can say that the men receive instructions from me every morning when I am in town, and they report themselves to me during the day or night.
2333. You have not answered my question—I ask you if you do not think it would be more conducive to the efficiency of the public service if a more complete diary were kept of the duties they perform? I cannot say.
2334. The reports on that book appear to be stereotyped, one appears to copy the others entry in some cases, word for word;—did you ever offer to place detectives in any boarding-house in Sydney for watching parties living there as private individuals? Never, that I recollect. There was no object in doing so.
2335. Do you think you would be justified under any circumstances in doing so? Certainly not, and I would not do so unless I had an order from the Inspector General, and I never got an order to that effect. I do not see what object is to be gained.
2336. Did you ever state to any person that you would make the City too hot for them? I do not recollect any particular instance; but I do use those words sometimes to known thieves.
2337. Did you ever do so with regard to a man who was not a known thief? No, I certainly never did.
2338. Are the detectives in the habit of compounding felonies or hushing up cases? No.
2339. Did you know a man in Mr. Poehlman's employ, when he had premises as a café in George-street, who robbed him to a considerable amount? So Mr. Poehlman informed me.
2340. Has nothing been done with regard to that man? He went away to Queensland.
2341. Do you recollect what date it was? In June, I think. If my memory serves me, I think I was in town at the time. But Mr. Poehlman had an interview with the Inspector General with regard to one of his waiters, who he said had come to him without money, and who he said had been found to have an account at the bank, adding that he was satisfied that that he could not have got the money without robbing him, and that systematically. Sub-Inspector I think he was questioned by the Inspector General as to what proof he had of the robbery, and Mr. Poehlman came to me one morning and gave me the particulars of the case, of this man having systematically robbed him for a length of time, and that he had got this money in the bank. He said he had no proof of the man having done it. Mr. Poehlman was in difficulties at the time, and I believe compromised with his creditors. He said the way he had been robbed was the cause; and he asked what steps he should take. He could give no evidence of the man having robbed him, but could only adduce the fact of the man having the money. I told him he could do nothing unless he had proof of the man having robbed him. If I recollect rightly I advised him to tax the man with the robbery—to tell the man that he had robbed him, and said it was possible that if the man thought he had evidence against him to convict him, he would hand over the money. I also recollect remarking, "If he does do so, however, he is a bigger fool than I take him to be." Mr. Poehlman afterwards informed me that he had spoken to the man about the matter. He said, "I told him of his having robbed me, and that I had evidence to that effect, and I said I would not prosecute him if he would hand over the money to me. He said he had robbed me, and that the money was in a certain bank." Poehlman asked me to go down to the bank, saying, "If he sees you there it will confirm him in his intention of giving up the money, and I have no doubt I shall get it." The man did come to the bank, got the money, and handed it to Poehlman. There was no proof against him only his own confession.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
26 Nov., 1862.

2342. You are quite sure it was not you, but Poehlman, who made that arrangement? I am quite certain that I did not. The only conversation that took place with regard to the matter, was between the Inspector General and myself and Poehlman. I do not think I should know the man, or that I have ever spoken to him, unless it was at some time when I went into the café. Had there been any evidence against him I should not have given the advice I did; but as there was no evidence against him I thought it the best advice I could give.

2343. Do you know anything of the character of the man, irrespective of this case? I do not.

2344. Do you not know of his having been convicted of some crime previously? I was informed so. With regard to this robbery there was no evidence against him.

2345. My reason for asking the question is, that I heard that you arranged to compromise the matter? I did not exchange a word with the man.

2346. By Mr. Dalgleish: When were you informed that the man had been previously convicted? I think Mr. Poehlman told me the next morning. I think he said the man had been in Parramatta Gaol.

2347. Were you not waiting in the bank until this man came? No, I went up the street so that the man might see me, and thus be confirmed in his intention to hand over the money. I walked as far as the Union Bank, when the man came, obtained the money, and gave it up. These are the facts as near as I can recollect.

2348. By Mr. Wilson: I think you stated that there are no private individuals unconnected with the detective police who are in the habit of giving information to the detectives? No, there are not.

2349. I have no intention of making the name public, but is not that gentleman (name written and exhibited to witness) in the habit of giving information to the detectives? I have known him a long time, but I know that neither myself nor any other man in the detective police have received information from him. There are no parties in the detective police, or employed by them, whose names have not appeared on the return, or whose names do not appear in that book. They are the only officers employed, but I do get information from parties in the City, sometimes from notorious thieves. On some occasions I have paid for it. With regard to crimes about to be committed, I am obliged to do so, or I could not keep a check on the crime in the City.

2350. With regard to that gimlet by which the hole was bored in the roof of Mr. Bentley's house—do you remember it? Yes.

2351. I think you say it was taken out of a tool-chest belonging to Bentley? No, I said it was similar to those in Mr. Bentley's tool-chest.

2352. But there is a great similarity between gimlets, generally, is there not? Oh, certainly; I dare say I could get a thousand gimlets of the same description.

2353. By Mr. Dalgleish: Did you not say it was an old gimlet? No. I said an old knife was found there.

2354. By Mr. Forster: Supposing Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were the authors of this affair, what motive could they have had? As I have said before, I could assign no motive on their part, assuming them to be the authors; but that my belief was that the proceedings having commenced at a little, gone to more, and had gradually grown into importance.

2355. Has it occurred to you, in the course of your professional experience, that similar things have been done, or does this strike you as an extreme case? It strikes me as an extreme case. But I have known many cases of writing anonymous letters; and circumstances have come to my knowledge, shewing that with some persons there was a perfect furor for writing them.

2356. Did you ever consider the question whether they could be connected with this matter? They related to nothing of this kind; they were letters written anonymously for a piece of mischief or small scandal.

2357. You say these things go from little to more—could not those in whom you say there was a perfect furor for writing anonymous letters, have had something to do with this case? Oh, certainly not.

2358.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison,
26 Nov., 1862.
2358. Do you judge from circumstances? Yes. I have an intimate knowledge of the circumstances.
2359. You look upon this furor for writing anonymous letters as a kind of mania? Yes.
2360. And you think Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were both smitten with this mania? I do not know.
2361. Can you state what circumstance it was that first conveyed to your mind this impression, that the Bentleys were engaged in this matter? The circumstance of there being conflicting statements, and alleged facts contradicting themselves at the house.
2362. Do you mean both of them, or only one? Yes, both.
2363. Both made contradictory statements? The stated facts contradicted themselves, and involved matters extremely improbable; and my impression was strengthened by remarks purposely made by me, bringing forth a certain result, which, to some extent, I had anticipated.
2364. You state two grounds for your impression—the one, the contradictory statements—the other, the alleged occurrence of improbable things? The two combined satisfied myself on the matter.
2365. Did you find this propensity to make contradictory and improbable statements equally strong in both the Bentleys? I do not recollect any instance of receiving a contradictory statement from him, but from Mrs. Bentley I have received them.
2366. You have alluded to the case of Mrs. Bentley having been watched by a policeman at Mr. Josephson's—that is, I suppose, one of the circumstances to which you allude? Yes.
2367. Was that the first? No. The first was the fact of my advising to take a certain course the next time she had reason to believe she might meet anyone connected with this matter in disguise. I told her to take particular notice of some article of jewellery he wore.
2368. That was in consequence of your advice? Yes; I told her this, to take notice of a particular article of jewellery, if he wore any, observing that such persons might change their clothes, and she not be able to give a correct description of them, but that when parties, who had been in disguise, changed their clothes, they were not in the habit of changing their jewellery. I said by that means we might try to find out the parties, on the supposition that we had been unable to find anything against the parties previously suspected. When this assault took place I laid particular stress upon the man wearing a ring, and I made the remark that parties generally wear rings when they do not wear other articles of jewellery, and I told her therefore to take particular notice of the ring he wore. Mrs. Bentley was stopped at Newtown, and she says that when the man laid hold of her, she recollected what I had told her about the jewellery, and he, seeing her taking notice of it, said to her, "You can tell Harrison that I wear a gold ring with a cornelian heart."
2369. This statement of that occurrence was the first circumstance that made you suspect her? Yes. I could not suspect Cutolo, Montagu, or St. Just, as I could get no evidence against them.
2370. When your suspicions were thus awakened, did you mention them to anyone? To the Inspector General shortly afterwards, but not at this time, because I thought I might be mistaken, and wished to take steps to test the possibility of my being deceived.
2371. And the other circumstances confirmed your suspicion? They did.
2372. Your suspicion was more particularly against Mrs. Bentley? It was strong against both, as I did not think Mrs. Bentley could carry it out without his knowledge, or he without her knowledge.
2373. Your impression was that they were the writers of these letters? It was.
2374. Did you think they wrote them themselves? Well, I do not know whether at this time I had made up my mind, or whether I thought there might be a third party.
2375. On further examination what was your conclusion—that they were the writers? Yes, one or the other.
2376. That some were written by Mr. Bentley, and some by Mrs. Bentley? Yes, that was my impression, but I would not like to give an opinion now, as to whether they were written by one person or by more.
2377. What is your impression now—that Mr. or Mrs. Bentley wrote the letters? Yes.
2378. And had no accomplices? Yes, had no accomplices.
2379. Is your impression based upon circumstances, or a knowledge of their handwriting? On circumstances.
2380. Did you not think of corroborating your impression by an examination of their handwriting? I have examined it, but was not more satisfied than I had previously been with regard to Montagu's, which bore a strong resemblance to the writing of the anonymous letters.
2381. The handwriting of the anonymous letters bore a strong resemblance to Montagu's? Yes. There was a stronger resemblance in the handwriting of Montagu than I ever found in the handwriting of Mr. Bentley; but I have still a strong impression that Montagu had nothing to do with the matter.
2382. You think that two persons only were concerned in the writing? I think so.
2383. By the Chairman: Did it not strike your own mind that one of your own officers was in league with the Bentleys? It never crossed my mind; they are with me at all hours, and under all circumstances, and I do not think such a thing could be possible.
2384. You say that one time Montagu's writing appeared to you to resemble the handwriting of the anonymous letters? Yes.
2385. Did you think Mr. Bentley's resembled it? Yes, the E's in particular.
2386. And Mrs. Bentley's—is it like hers? I had not an opportunity of comparing it with hers, though I think I have compared, but I do not recollect under what circumstances.
2387. Have you not compared it recently—have you not had a letter from the Bentleys? Yes, but I have not had all the anonymous letters in my hands. 2388.

2388. Which handwriting do you think most resembles that of the anonymous letters—Sub-Inspector Montagu's, Mr. Bentley's, or Mrs. Bentley's? Mr. Bentley's.
2389. More so than Montagu's? The letter of Montagu's that I produced resembles it more than Bentley's handwriting. C. E.
Harrison.
2390. But you do not think there is any resemblance in Mrs. Bentley's handwriting, or do you think a lady could have written those letters? I cannot say. 26 Nov., 1862.
2391. Do you consider yourself a good judge of handwriting? No; I consider myself an ordinary judge.
2392. You say you produced a letter from Mrs. Bentley—is that in her handwriting—it is not signed by her? I cannot say she wrote it.
2393. Have you not seen her handwriting before? Yes, I have seen her handwriting before, but there are a number of these anonymous letters written in a different handwriting, and I would not be positive that the letter I received was written by her.
2394. You say she gave it to you? Yes. She gave it to me, stating that it would be better to do so, as she might not have an opportunity of posting it the next day.
2395. What was her object in giving it to you? To shew that she wished to keep her promise.
2396. Was that the only letter you received from her? Yes.
2397. Did it not strike you as an extraordinary letter? It did.
2398. Did her conduct to you, or your knowledge of her, lead you to expect such a letter? She said she would write a letter to me, and therefore I expected she would, though I did not expect one of that character exactly.
2399. Suppose you had seen that letter written by the wife of one man to another man, would you have thought well of her character? I cannot say that I should.
2400. Was there anything in her previous conduct which led you to expect that she would write you such a letter as that? I did not know anything as to what kind of letter she would write when she promised to write me one.
2401. You admit that the letter is one of an extraordinary character, and one that would not convey a good impression of the lady who would write it—was her previous conduct sufficient to justify an expectation that she would write it? I gave full particulars of that yesterday.
2402. You are a married man? I am.
2403. Did you communicate this letter to anyone else? Yes, to my wife at the time, and indeed all the particulars in connection with the Bentleys. I was only married at the end of last year.
2404. You say you are not in the habit of placing detectives in private boarding-houses or in domestic service? Not to my knowledge.
2405. Either with or without orders? Never.
2406. Have you heard a rumour that detectives were placed in clubs? I think I heard it from one of the Members of the House.
2407. Is there any truth in it? None. Nothing of the kind has taken place since I have been in the police. I cannot tell what object there could be in putting detectives there.
2408. You do not place detectives in the newspaper offices? No.
2409. What kind of connection have the newspapers with the detective police, that these communications can have taken place with regard to you and Mr. Hanson and Mr. Fairfax? No communications have taken place.
2410. Were not reports placed in their hands to do what they liked with them? Not by me.
2411. By Captain M'Lerie? Yes.
2412. What interest had Mr. Hanson and Mr. Fairfax in the case? Mr. Hanson took an interest in it.
2413. As a friend of Mr. Bentley? Yes.
2414. Did he shew himself a friend to Mr. Bentley in the matter? From the first, and after my suspicions were aroused against the Bentleys.
2415. Are you aware whether Mr. Hanson has been employed as a detective? I do not know.
2416. Do you think his object in taking this extraordinary interest in the matter was to get food for his paper or news? I cannot say.
2417. You have said that on some occasions you have thought it your duty to utter falsehoods in order to obtain certain information? I did on a certain occasion in connection with this case.
2418. Is that a common practice with the detective force or with yourself? It is not a common practice with either, I believe.
2419. To what extent do you carry it—not into private life? I would not call it falsehood.
2420. What you stated was not the truth? I was asked whether I made a certain statement to Miss Flower, and I stated what was not true in part.
2421. In other words it was a falsehood? It was.
2422. Although justifiable? I thought so. It is a matter that never occurs voluntarily with myself.
2423. What do you mean by voluntarily—not without sufficient reason? Only in extreme cases.
2424. Does it not occur in your private as well as public matters? I have no private matters.
2425. If you make statements that are untrue at one time, why not at another—what limit is there to that kind of thing? Well, I do not know how I can answer the question.
2426. Is it part of the police regulations to tell falsehoods at particular times? No.
- 2427,

- Sub-Inspector 2427. Is it left to the discretion of a detective? He has no instructions on the matter.
 C. F. 2428. Do you allow the same latitude to all officers under you? I do not know that we Harrison. have a case in point.
 26 Nov., 1862. 2429. What would be right in you on public grounds would be right for them? I have no doubt they have done the same thing on some occasions; every man in the police force, and others not in the police force, might have done the same thing.
 2430. You would not consider it your duty to avail yourself of that rule in giving evidence before this Committee? I would not. If I stated a falsehood, I stated my object in doing so.
 2431. You would not state a falsehood here? No. There can be no object to be gained.
 2432. Did you feel any regret after stating this untruth? To Miss Flower?
 2433. Yes? No, I cannot say that I did; I did not give it a second thought.
 2434. You took it as a matter of course—you did not feel uncomfortable? I cannot say that I did.
 2435. I should like to know how often, in round numbers, in the course of your duty you have been obliged to resort to this disagreeable practice? I cannot recollect, but I have no doubt it does at times occur.
 2436. If you found one of your subordinate officers telling a falsehood to yourself, I suppose you would not overlook it? No, I should report him to the Inspector General.
 2437. Would you not make some allowance in distinguishing whether it was for a public or a private object? No, I should report him to the Inspector General.
 2438. By Mr. Dalgleish: Have you never had to deal with foreign anonymous letters; Yes, in D'Apice's case.
 2439. Who were the forgers in that instance? Well D'Apice states that he suspected the party, and gave the name.
 2440. Were the police employed in the matter? No.
 2441. Not in the D'Apice's case? I lent assistance; but the matter was not put into the hands of the police. D'Apice was satisfied as to who was the party, and did not then proceed further as his wife was connected with the suspected person.
 2442. Was not Mr. Turville one of the parties who had reason to complain? Yes.
 2443. Was not his name forged? I informed the Inspector General of the conversation about the matter, and found that Mr. Turville was acquainted with the inmates. But I had no instructions from the Inspector General to proceed in the matter; and as D'Apice did not wish the matter to be gone into or made public, I did not take any steps in it.
 2444. Did you take any steps to convince yourself that the forger in the one case was not the forger in the other? The handwriting does not bear the slightest resemblance. The letters were in the same handwriting as the letter signed "Margaret Dodd" to the Herald; there was no disguise. I believe they are all in the same handwriting as the letters of Margaret Dodd.
 2445. If a person had a mania for writing anonymous letters, and forging names, would he not be likely to do it in one case as well as another? I do not know. There was an instance with regard to these parties. But D'Apice was so far satisfied that he did not wish to proceed further. There is no attempt to make it appear that it was Mr. Turville's handwriting.
 2446. It was a simple forgery? It merely purported to be from Mr. Turville, commencing by presenting Mr. Turville's compliments.
 2447. It was not signed by Mr. Turville? No.
 2448. Are there letters in this case which purport to be written by Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
 2449. Is it probable she would spell her own Christian name in different ways? I cannot say.
 2450. Do you think it at all probable? I cannot say.
 2451. If she signed her name, would she disguise it? If she had an object I cannot say to what extent she might disguise her handwriting or mis-spell her name.
 2452. By Mr. Johnson: Did you, when investigating this case, ascertain the fact that there was a discrepancy in the mode of spelling her Christian name? I cannot recollect whether that was one of the facts I noticed.
 2453. Can you recollect whether such a circumstance was discovered by yourself when investigating the matter? I cannot recollect.
 2454. By Mr. Dalgleish: Could there be any motive in mis-spelling her Christian name?
 I cannot tell whether such was the case; I have no recollection of it, nor can I give an opinion as to what her motive could be, or the motive of other parties, if she did not write it.
 2455. By the Chairman: You observe four dots on the letter of Mrs. Bentley—what did they stand for? Lily. When I received that letter I saw that some of the anonymous letters were marked in the same way, with dots.
 2456. By Mr. Dalgleish: How would you spell Lily? I would spell it L-i-l-y.
 2457. By Mr. Johnson: When do you say you first communicated to Captain M'Lerie your convictions of the Bentleys being the authors of these letters? I do not recollect the date.
 2458. Can you tell by looking at the diary? I do not know that there is an entry upon that point. (Looking at diary.) Yes, I told him who I thought the author was, on the 1st of May.
 2459. Was that the first time you stated a conviction or suspicion, with regard to the Bentleys being the authors, to Captain M'Lerie? I think not by this. I told him here that I believed Mr. Bentley to be the author.
 2460. Can you tell me when you first communicated your suspicions or convictions about the Bentleys to Captain M'Lerie? I cannot say.
 2461. Was it before the 25th of April, or before the assault? No, not before the assault; it must have been after that.

2462. The entry you speak of is on the 1st of May? Yes.
2463. Did you not communicate your convictions or suspicions to Captain M'Lerie before the 1st of May, as there were only six days between that and the date of the assault? Yes.
2464. Suspicions or convictions? I cannot say which. I have a distinct recollection of having a conversation with Captain M'Lerie about the Bentley case at the time that I suspected Mr. Bentley to be the author, but I do not think I gave him the names of the parties I suspected; but I recollect telling him it was neither Cutolo or Montagu. I afterwards told him that Mr. Bentley was the party I suspected, or was satisfied about, in fact.
2465. You mean that you told him so on the 1st of May? From my recollection I cannot say whether it was on the 1st of May, but it appears in the diary that it was on the 1st of May. It might have been weeks afterwards, as far as my memory serves me.
2466. With the assistance of the journal, you can say whether it was the 1st of May? Yes, I see it was the 1st of May.
2467. It could not have been some other day? No, I do not think it could.
2468. Is it possible? I do not think it is; the entry is to the effect that I told the Inspector General on the 1st of May.
2469. Having that before you, will you undertake to say you did make the communication on the 1st of May? I did.
2470. I want to know whether you will stake your veracity upon its having taken place on the 1st of May? I will, and upon every entry in that book, from first to last.
2471. You say then you had communicated to Captain M'Lerie your suspicions or convictions against the Bentleys prior to that time? I do not say so. I said prior to that time I had a conversation with him about the case, and that I distinctly recollected telling him that Cutolo and Montagu were not the parties, but that I believed I knew who the parties were; but when that conversation took place I did not speak of my suspicions about the Bentleys.
2472. Had you any conversation with Captain M'Lerie on the subject, before the 2nd of May, except the two you have now referred to? I cannot say; we often had conversations about the case.
2473. It is a limited period, from the time of the assault to the time when you made that entry on the 1st of May? I cannot recollect.
2474. Did you, before the 1st of May, communicate your suspicions or convictions against the Bentleys to Captain M'Lerie? I do not know.
2475. Can you not speak positively? No, I do not think I did.
2476. When did you state to him that those previously suspected were not the guilty parties? I cannot recollect the date.
2477. Was it on a Sunday? I cannot say; I had such a conversation with him, but I cannot say when.
2478. I want to fix the time of it? I cannot fix the time from memory. If it appears there (in the diary) I could fix the time by that, but from memory I cannot fix the time of particular occurrences of this kind.
2479. Can you fix it by events—was it after the day of the assault? No; I cannot recollect when the conversation took place, but the full particulars of the conversation I can recollect.
2480. Can you not fix it, I again ask you, by circumstances—as to whether it was before or after certain circumstances happened in connection with the Bentley case? No, the circumstances will not assist me in that matter.
2481. Is your memory so uncertain that you cannot say whether you had that conversation with Captain M'Lerie before or after the assault? I cannot say; my memory is a good one, but it is impossible to remember all these small facts, and fix their dates at sometime back.
2482. Do you not say yourself that the suspicions did not exist in your mind against the Bentleys until the time of the assault? That they did not exist in my mind with regard to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley being the authors of the letters up to the time of the assault, but that I had suspicions of some one in the house being in league or in connection with the affair—or in connection with the Bentleys' themselves, up to the time of the assault at Newtown.
2483. It seems extraordinary that you cannot tell the Committee whether you had this conversation with Captain M'Lerie upon the removal of your suspicions, from those previously suspected, until after the time of the assault or not? I cannot tell you more than I have; that I had a conversation with him to that effect, with regard to the removal of my suspicions from other parties, and with regard to my suspecting parties not before under suspicion, but upon that occasion the name of Mr. Bentley was not mentioned. But I cannot fix the date of that conversation.
2484. When you had come to the conclusion that neither Cutolo nor Montagu were the guilty parties, and had removed all surveillance from them, who did you believe to be the guilty parties? Mr. and Mrs. Bentley.
2485. These two circumstances were contemporaneous, were they not, according to your own statement? I cannot say from my recollection whether or not the surveillance upon Cutolo, Montagu, and St. Juste ceased before I suspected the Bentleys; the watching of them might have ceased before that time.
2486. But did it? I do not know; the returns will shew. I cannot recollect from memory whether such was the case or not.
2487. Can you recollect this as a fact, that when you gave up all efforts to detect Cutolo or Montagu, you had then formed an opinion as to who were the guilty parties? No, I cannot recollect the time.
2488. Whenever it was? I had given instructions to the men to watch Cutolo, Montagu, and Sub-Inspector and St. Juste, but I do not recollect when I countermanded the orders with regard to those parties, probably never countermanded the order that they should be under surveillance.

C. E.
Harrison.

2489. In your report you make this statement, after detailing Mrs. Bentley's account of the assault:—"I left the house, satisfied that Bentley and no other was the author of the anonymous letters, and the whole affair a fabrication." Now had you at that time come to that clear conviction? Yes, I was then satisfied.

2490. What do you mean by being satisfied? I was then satisfied, and afterwards took steps to put the matter in my mind beyond a doubt, wishing to make myself doubly assured.

2491. Then you say you made some indirect remarks as to the motives for the assault, in order that you might get a letter from Bentley (which you knew he would write next day) confirming the assault, and thus strengthening your suspicions—was that so? Yes, but I cannot recollect what the remarks were; but I probably thought that if his heart did not fail him, I should by this means obtain corroborative evidence, in a letter being written, stating what were the motives for the assault, as she stated that he seized her by the throat.

2492. I ask you, as to the fact, whether you made the remarks referred to? I made some remarks as to the motives for the assault.

2493. By Mr. Dalgleish: Did you say he seized her by the throat? In Mrs. Bentley's statement to me, she said the man seized her by the shoulder and pushed her violently, and when she put her hand upon her heart, thrust his hand inside her dress, and said, "Oh! You have got one too, have you?"

2494. You have just said he seized her by the throat? I should have said shoulder.

2495. By Mr. Johnson: Whatever remarks you made, were they made for the purpose of inviting a letter confirming the assault? I do not know what was my object in making the remarks; but the idea might have struck me afterwards that, from the conversation that took place, confirmatory evidence might arise. I may have made the remarks on purpose to obtain corroborative evidence, but this was the first thing that gave me a suspicion in the matter. I cannot say from memory whether I thought that corroborative evidence would result from these remarks, or that that was the object of them.

2496. Can you recollect the substance of your report to the Colonial Secretary? Yes, I remember the principal facts in it.

2497. You say—"I left the house satisfied that Bentley and no other was the author of the "anonymous letter, and the whole affair a fabrication. On the strength of this belief, I "again saw Bentley on the same evening, and made some indirect remarks as to the motives "of the assault. I did this for the purpose of confirming my suspicions, and, if correct, I "knew that Bentley would write a letter next day probably detailing the particulars of the "assault, for the purpose of confirming Mrs. Bentley's statement?" I could not know that it would be the case, but I believed that such would be the case.

2498. I want to know whether, according to your statement, you made these remarks under the conviction or with the intention of getting another false letter to confirm Mrs. Bentley's statements? I cannot recollect now what my intentions were. The diary shews the fact at the time pretty clearly; and I have stated how it was copied, and who by.

2499. By Mr. Dalgleish: Did you not say that you had not seen the report sent to the Colonial Secretary since you made it? I said I had not read it.

2500. Did you not say you had read it to Mr. Hanson, in order to explain something? Only some portions of it.

2501. By Mr. Johnson: Refresh your memory, by looking at the diary, with regard to that date? That being set down as my object in making the remarks, no doubt they were made for that purpose.

2502. Your memory is so constituted that, although refreshed by the entries and the report, you have no independent recollection whether the entries are true? I am certain they are true.

2503. I do not ask you whether they are true, but whether you have an independent recollection as to their being true or otherwise? That this conversation took place?

2504. Yes? Yes.

2505. And of the object? No, from recollection I cannot state the object; but it was no doubt such as is set down.

2506. You say:—"The following afternoon Bentley waited upon the Inspector General with an anonymous letter, confirmatory of the above."—Is that true? Yes, I believe so.

2507. That is confirmed by your journal also—is it not? Yes.

2508. Now, will you say positively it is not false? It is not false.

2509. Is it true? It is true.

2510. Is it true that the following morning you had a long conversation with Captain M'Levie about this case, and informed him that you had discovered the author; that the persons so long suspected were innocent, but that you were not in a position to give him the particulars at the present time? Yes.

2511. Now, tell me what you mean by that time—you were detailing the conversation as to the assault; the confirmatory letter, you say, was taken to Captain M'Levie the following afternoon, and you speak of the following morning as the time when you had this conversation with Captain M'Levie; putting the two dates together, tell me the date of the conversation? The date of the assault was Friday, the 25th. It would therefore appear to be on Sunday. I am frequently with the Inspector General on Sunday morning, and it seems probable that that was the time.

2512. But is this the true sequence of events:—The conversation concerning the assault with Bentley—the arrival of the expected letter—and your conversation with Captain M'Levie—is that the order of these events? I believe so.

2513. If upon your oath would you swear so? Yes, I would swear so. As I have stated before with regard to this matter, I have in the diary carried one day into the other, and an event may have occurred of which the date as entered is not correct. I do not know that it is so in any instance, but there is a possibility that such might be the case. But as regards the contents as they are there, I would swear that they are true. In the dates I have carried two days on to one page, and from one page to the other, and I cannot say but that there might be an error on that account.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
26 Nov., 1862.

2514. I want to know about the sequence of events—which is first, second, and third? It is as there set down.

2515. Now, had you seen what you call the confirmatory letter as to the assault when you had that interview with Captain M'Lerie? Yes, Mr. Bentley shewed me the letter.

2516. You say:—"The following afternoon Bentley waited upon the Inspector General with an anonymous letter, confirmatory of the above, and the following morning I had a long conversation with Captain M'Lerie"—so that there is only one letter to be talked about? Even with regard to that, I have a remark to make. I do not know whether I was with Captain M'Lerie when Bentley waited upon him, and I do not know that the letter which Bentley shewed him, confirmatory of the above, was the letter I afterwards saw. I was in the office with Captain M'Lerie and Bentley at the time, I believe, but I have no recollection of it. I was aware of the fact, either from being present, or from Bentley's own statement, that he had shewed the letter to Captain M'Lerie.

2517. Have you any recollection of seeing the letter? Yes; the letter confirmatory of the assault at Newtown. But whether that was the letter shewn to Captain M'Lerie or not I cannot say of my own knowledge, because I cannot say that I was present.

2518. But I asked you whether you had seen the letter when you had the conversation with Captain M'Lerie? Yes, I believe I had, but I cannot speak positively of it from memory.

2519. By the Chairman: Still you swear to the truth of your diary? Yes.

2520. By Mr. Johnson: I have shewn you that before (letter handed to witness)—tell me whether you believe that to be the letter we are now speaking of? Yes, I believe that to be the letter, and I believe so from the tenor of it.

2521. And from the handwriting? No, not from the handwriting, nor can I say that was the letter he shewed the Inspector General of Police.

2522. Where did you first see that letter? If that is the letter I do not know whether Bentley did not shew it me in the street. He either met me in the street and shewed it to me, or he shewed it to me at the house.

2523. Did he not meet you in the street in the after part of the day, about 5 o'clock, and say he was going to the office with the letter—did you observe Bentley accost Captain M'Lerie in the street, a short distance from the office, on the day you first saw that letter? I did, but I did not know it was the first day I saw that letter.

2524. But did you not state that you wished to overtake Captain M'Lerie, and after doing so, returned to get from Bentley that letter, and did he not then give it to you? I cannot recollect.

2525. Can you undertake to say that was not the case? I cannot say one way or the other. I have no recollection of being present with Bentley when a letter was shewn to the Inspector General. The Inspector General's memory may not fail him in the matter, but mine does. I am sure I was not present when Bentley shewed the letter to the Inspector General.

2526. At what time in the morning had you this remarkable conversation with Captain M'Lerie? I cannot recollect the date, or when the conversation took place. I have a recollection of a conversation of the kind taking place, but I cannot fix the date let alone the hour of the day.

2527. It might have been you say on a Sunday? Yes, on the Sunday morning perhaps. I frequently see the Inspector General on the Sunday morning and Sunday-evening.

2528. Have you stated as far as your memory serves you all that took place between you and Captain M'Lerie when you had the interview alluded to in your report as occurring on the following morning after the receipt of the letter? I cannot say. Will you allow me to read the conversation that took place. I cannot recollect either the words or the purport of it.

2529. You have no recollection of the conversation or the purport of it? No, I cannot give any further particulars.

2530. Did you at any time describe to Captain M'Lerie the account Mrs. Bentley had given you of the assault? Probably I did, but I have no recollection of doing so, and cannot say whether I did or did not.

2531. Or whether you said anything beyond what you set down in your report? I might have said much more.

2532. I ask you whether you recollect saying more? At the moment I do not.

2533. There is no entry in your journal to the effect of that conversation at all—is there? No, I do not see any.

2534. At what time did you make up the report for the Colonial Secretary? I cannot recollect the date.

2535. I think you will find it entered in your journal—the report was made up shortly before the 11th of June—was it not? (Diary handed to witness.) Yes.

2536. How came you to enter the circumstance of that interview with Captain M'Lerie in that report? Because, probably when I made that report the facts were fresher in my memory, but that is some months ago.

2537. You had your diary in your hand I think when you dictated your report to Mr. Ponder? I had.

2538. Then, in point of fact, when you made that report, did you recollect that that interview took place with Captain M'Lerie at the time or in the manner mentioned in it? Yes, or else it would not have been entered in that report.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison,
26 Nov., 1862.
2539. Well, did you have any other interview with Captain M'Levie on the subject before the 1st of May? Yes, I have a recollection of a conversation with the Inspector General prior to that time, but I cannot recollect the date. I have a recollection of a conversation having taken place.
2540. Had you three conversations with him then? With regard to this matter—many.
2541. Any between the 25th of April and the 2nd of May? I might have had more. I saw him daily, but how often the Bentley case was the subject of conversation I cannot say. I believe it was on the 1st of May that I stated to the Inspector General that I thought Bentley was the author of the anonymous letters; but prior to that, I recollect having a conversation with him with regard to the case, and that my suspicions were turned from the parties against whom they were at first directed.
2542. Is not that the conversation referred to in that report? I do not know that it is.
2543. Do you recollect more than these two conversations between the 25th of April and the 2nd of May? I cannot fix the dates. I can recollect twenty conversations or more taking place on or about the same time, when my opinion had changed with regard to the authors of the letters. Conversations frequently took place, but I cannot fix the dates.
2544. Can you say whether more than two conversations took place between these two dates? I cannot say.
2545. Did you ever represent that Mrs. Bentley told you that the man seized her by the throat? I might have said so.
2546. Do you recollect saying so? No, but I made the same error just now. I said the man seized her by the throat when I should have said he seized her by the shoulder. She might have said throat at one time and shoulder at another.
2547. Do you recollect any such discrepancy in her statement? No, I have no recollection; I believe shoulder was the word used.
2548. If so, how do you come to have entered in your journal the word throat? I do not know; I believe it was shoulder, but I am not positive now. I believe it was shoulder by what Mrs. Bentley stated, but the shoulder and throat are close together, and I thought it did not make much difference in the assault itself.
2549. Then how do you account for the use in your diary of the term throat, which you believe was not the term used by Mrs. Bentley—you have in your report, which you say was dictated from your diary, the word shoulder, which you say she may have used? In the journal I might have the word throat, but when dictating might have recollected what she said, and have put it shoulder in the report.
2550. Do you recollect that such was the fact when dictating the report? No, I only say probably it was so. I cannot recollect that I noticed that particular fact, or the difference of the two words. It might have been an error on the part of Mr. Ponder, in writing from my dictation, or I might have read shoulder instead of throat. It was, however, altered from the word in the journal, in what way I do not know, and I, not looking over the report afterwards, did not notice it.
2551. You might have read the right word and he have written the wrong one? I might afterwards have been under the impression that shoulder was the correct word, and he might have written the word throat, which I did not think it right to erase.
2552. And the same may be said with regard to the variance between the heart and anchor on the ring? She said it was a gold ring, with a cornelian device either of a heart or anchor; but a remarkable ring, with either the one or the other.
2553. You have been asked a great many times this question, and I do not see that you have answered it—what are the whole of your grounds for suspecting the Bentleys to be the authors of these anonymous letters? A number of great and small facts, conclusive to myself. I think I have stated minutely the whole grounds; indeed I have stated all I can state on that subject.
2554. And you have nothing now, upon reflection, to add to it? Nothing. There may be a number of trifling matters not mentioned in the journal, but which were not trifling at the time, and contributed to lead me to this opinion.
2555. And that are not in your memory? And that are not in my memory.
2556. You had come to this strong opinion as to the conviction in your mind before the time when you say Mrs. Bentley gave a false account of being spoken to by a man at Newtown? That I had a strong belief, and considered the matter satisfactory to my mind about the authors, and that belief was afterwards strengthened.
2557. Then all the steps you took after that strong impression had been made upon your mind, were with the view of obtaining more satisfactory evidence of it? Yes.
2558. Now would not the most satisfactory evidence have been the detecting either of the Bentleys in writing or posting any of these letters? Yes; and I believe I should have been able to do so in time.
2559. Would not that be the most satisfactory proof? Yes, and I should have obtained it.
2560. I ask whether, in your opinion, the most satisfactory evidence to be obtained in support of your suspicion or conviction against either of these parties would not have been detection in writing or posting these letters? It would, and so I expected at the time to be able to do. It was not a matter of a day, or a week, but of months, and no doubt it would have lasted longer until I had brought the evidence to a satisfactory point, had it not been precipitated by the contretemps with Mr. Merewether.
2561. Now you say you threw out these remarks on the evening of the assault, in the hope that they would lead to Bentley writing a confirmatory letter as to the assault? Yes.
2562. Now will you state why you did not take the obvious means of detecting him in writing or posting it? I cannot state that, because I do not know what my ideas were at the time—why I did not do so.

2563. By Mr. Dalgleish: You watched other people when you had any suspicion that they were writing these letters? I did suspect they would write them at the time I had them watched. Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
2564. By Mr. Johnson: When two or three of these letters had been received after your strong suspicions were formed, why did you not take means to detect Bentley or his wife in writing or posting them? I do not know whether I was informed at the time that other parties had received letters. 26 Nov., 1862.
2565. Look at that (letter handed to witness)—was not that letter received at the time you held these suspicions? Yes; this and some others. If this is really the letter giving particulars of the Newtown assault, it was received on the following day.
2566. That is the expected letter? That I believe to be the same letter. I do not know whether there were any other letters received just at that time.
2567. Did you not say that letter (letter handed to witness) was one of those received afterwards? Yes; but I do not recollect when it was received.
2568. Look at the postmarks? They are both the same date.
2569. These two letters both came through the post? Yes, and both bear the same date.
2570. Did you on the night of the concert (the 29th of April, I think,) make some remarks to Bentley with a view to drawing another confirmatory letter, which duly arrived? I cannot recollect; perhaps you will allow me to refer to the diary.
2571. That is in the sixth paragraph of your report—After speaking of the occurrences at the concert on the 29th of April, you say:—"I made some remarks to him that night, for the purpose of drawing another confirmatory letter, which duly arrived"? Yes, that is correct.
2572. Well, did you take any steps to detect Bentley or his wife in writing or posting such a letter? I have no recollection of having done so.
2573. Could it have happened and have escaped your memory? No. As I before stated, I sent Sanderson to watch Bentley. He did go to watch him, but whether he was watching him up to the date when this took place I cannot say; it might have taken place at this time; the entry in that book ought to shew it; but I cannot recollect what step I took. If I had had more assistance at my command I might have made a more satisfactory case of it.
2574. Is it a fact that you never had sufficient assistance to enable you to ascertain whether they wrote or posted these letters? I consider I had sufficient assistance in the first instance, when I had Cutolo, Montagu, and St. Juste under surveillance; but after I was satisfied that Bentley was the author, I thought I could employ the men otherwise more profitably than in watching Bentley. Indeed I let the men attend to other duties, and I did not then keep up such a surveillance as I might have done. If I had had more men to command I should probably have done both.
2575. In what way did you employ the men in regard to the Bentleys, after your suspicion, that they were the authors of these letters, arose? I did not employ them to that effect in any way.
2576. When did they commence to watch Bentley, or cease to watch him? I cannot say.
2577. Who did you say you employed for that purpose? Sanderson was one, and Clark was, I believe, another.
2578. In what way was he employed to watch Bentley? To see if he posted letters.
2579. Did he detect him posting letters? He did not. He informed me that on two occasions Bentley had given him the double in a cab—that he lost him immediately after he left the Club.
2580. Did you employ anyone to watch Mrs. Bentley, to see whether she wrote or posted any letters? No, I did not.
2581. Can you not say how soon after the occurrence of the assault it was that you employed Sanderson to watch Bentley? No, I cannot.
2582. Not within a week? No, I cannot recollect within a week.
2583. Not within a month? Oh, yes. All these particulars were pretty well within the space of a month—from the month of May to the month of June; some time within those periods, but I cannot tell you the date.
2584. Well, is that letter which you speak of as the confirmatory letter, as the events at the concert which you expected to arise, one of the letters referred to? It is one of the letters.
2585. Do you recollect it from the expression "that damned Boulanger's arm"? I believe that is the letter.
2586. Did you take no means to detect the writing or posting of that letter? I do not recollect whether that was the time when I had a party watching Mrs. Bentley in the matter. I had not Mrs. Bentley at all watched with regard to the posting of letters.
2587. Were you not made aware that another letter had been addressed, through the Post Office, to Mr. Plunkett? I was aware of that fact; but I do not know when I became aware of it. It might have been at the time when I had a detective watching Bentley.
2588. Did you take any means to detect the writing or posting of that letter to Mr. Plunkett? I do not know when Mr. Plunkett's letter was received. I believe it was dated the 30th of April, and there were five or six others received within two days previous. There were two on the 30th—two on the 28th of April.
2589. Here is one on May the 9th; that also came through the post? Yes, this is one that was brought to me.
2590. When did you receive that letter? I do not know. I think I received it on the Sunday morning. I do not know what date. That would be, if I recollect rightly, two days after the letter was posted.
2591. When you received that letter with a postmark of May the 9th, you say was on the following Sunday—that was May the 11th—did you examine it sufficiently to ascertain the fact that it had been lying two days for you at the Central Police Office? No; I did not know that fact until I was talking to Mr. Bentley during the night.
2592. After you had shewn it to him? I shewed it to him immediately on going to his house. 2593.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
26 Nov., 1862.
2593. Did he not discover that the postmark was two days anterior to the receipt of the letter? No, I think it was I who discovered that it bore a postmark of two days previous.
2594. Did not Bentley appear vexed and flurried, and ask you reproachfully why you had not till then brought the letter under his notice, although posted two days before? I do not know whether it was Bentley or myself who made the discovery.
2595. But did you discover the fact before you got to his house? No.
2596. You did not examine it with that degree of care as to observe the postmark? I might have done so, but I do not recollect.
2597. That is what I want to know—whether it is possible you overlooked it—were you not so careless as not to notice what the postmark was? I do not recollect whether I did or not look at the postmark. I know a conversation took place between Bentley and myself, with regard to the date of the postmark being two days previous, and, on afterwards making inquiries, found that it had been lying at the Central Police Office instead of being forwarded to me.
2598. Were you not careless about the postmark? Very likely, as I was not going to the house to act upon it, having a strong impression as to the motives why the letter was sent. My motive in going down to the house in the middle of the night was, that Bentley should not think I suspected him.
2599. Were you not, in fact, so careless with reference to that part of the proceeding as not to look at the date of the postmark? No.
2600. By the Chairman: Have you never yourself written any letter to deceive Mr. Bentley in this case? Never.
2601. Nor got it done? Never.
2602. By Mr. Johnson: Nor aware of its being done? No. I never wrote an anonymous letter in my life.
2603. By the Chairman: Not to yourself? No, not to myself; I have an abhorrence of them.
2604. And you assert you never did write one? I never did; I have a strong objection against writing anonymous letters.
2605. You never wrote one in any instance? In no instance.
2606. By Mr. Johnson: Did you also receive that (letter handed to witness) through the Post Office? Yes, I did. That was on the night of the concert, when Mr. Merewether refused to hand her to the platform; I shewed it to Mr. Aldis, Mr. Black, and others in the concert room. Mr. Bentley then made some remark as to Mr. Merewether's refusal to hand Mrs. Bentley up to the platform. That letter did not seem to cause him any anxiety; but on the following day I think he remarked that he would rather I did not say anything about shewing the letter. I recollect that was in the conversation I had with Bentley the following day.
2607. By the Chairman: You will not deny that you took samples of paper from the Bentleys' house? I never took samples of paper from their house. I have taken some anonymous letters as specimens of the handwriting, and he was then most anxious to get them back again, and got them back, and I afterwards got from him no specimens of the handwriting of the letters, but two or three of the envelopes.
2608. By Mr. Johnson: You say Bentley shewed great anxiety about getting back the letters? Yes.
2609. And you imputed his motive to be to destroy them? Yes.
2610. Was not your expectation in that respect fulfilled? No.
2611. By Mr. Dalgleish: Did you take any plain paper from the house? Never.
2612. No paper? No.
2613. Nor envelopes Mrs. Bentley had in use? Never.
2614. Did any of your men take any with your knowledge? No, not with my knowledge. You can compare the paper of the anonymous letter with reference to edges, and the marks upon them with samples of paper he had sent to Montagu and elsewhere; but I never brought paper from the house to compare with it.
2615. By Mr. Johnson: You mean that some of Bentley's friends had sent to Montagu, not that Bentley had sent himself? He said, I have sent some paper to Montagu, and one night Bentley made the discovery that the edges had the mark on he had made, and Mrs. Bentley said they were not the marks he made. He then said he might have been mistaken. Boulanger was present at the time.
2616. Was not that a proof that they wanted to get evidence of the parties? Boulanger said they were not the marks put on the paper, and Mrs. Bentley said the same.
2617. Did not that appear to be a bonâ fide investigation to ascertain the truth as to who sent the letters to them? I believed so at the time.
2618. Look at this letter (handed to witness) of May the 28th? This, I believe, was the day of the concert.
2619. That was the last concert? Yes.
2621. Now look at the one to Mr. Wrench? Yes; this is the other letter, which I believe I have seen before.
2621. Did you not see that, after the 25th April, when you say Bentley and none other wrote the letters—That is the eighth that has gone through the post without detection? Yes, all being posted on three different occasions.
2622. You seem to draw some inference from the fact of their being posted only on three occasions? There are six posted on three occasions.
2623. Some on the 28th of April, some on the 28th of May, one on the 9th of May, one on the 27th of May, and two on the 30th of April;—all these letters you have allowed to be written and posted without detection, after you believed Bentley was the writer, and Mrs. Bentley the the copyist, and you took no means to detect the writing of such letters beyond what you have told us? No. We had Bentley watched about this time. The officer employed in the matter will probably recollect the dates, and what steps they took.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

2624. You say, I think, you had suspicions on the 10th of April? I do not know.

2625. Had you, in fact, suspicions before the time of the assault? I had, that there was some one in the house connected with the matter; and I spoke about the servants, and he assured me they knew nothing about it.

26 Nov., 1862.

2626. You believed that to be correct? It is a fact that he told me.

2627. Do you not believe it to be the truth? Yes; I had suspicions of that kind, and mentioned them at the time. Boulanger was aware that I had a suspicion of the kind; but what the suspicions were I cannot tell. I do not think they were directed against Mr. and Mrs. Bentley until the date I have mentioned.

2628. You say in your report:—"On the 10th I withdrew the men from the house, of which fact Bentley was aware. I again had the house watched closely, back and front, so that it was impossible for anyone to gain admittance without being seen by the detectives; of this Bentley was not aware, as I had become suspicious of something wrong from the tenor of one of the letters, which shewed that the writer was aware of the steps taken by the police, although I had used extra precautions."—What is the letter referred to in that paragraph? Some letter which shewed me that they were aware of our movements, but I cannot tell you what letter it was, and I took extra precautions on that account. This is the reason why I suspected some one on the premises; but I did not then suspect Mr. and Mrs. Bentley.

2629. Is that the letter (handed to witness) you refer to as having caused the suspicions you mention in your report? I do not know.

2630. What do you mean by that paragraph in your report? I was suspicious that some one in the house, who was aware of our movements, was connected with the affair.

2631. Did that letter create such a suspicion—a letter bearing a postmark of the 24th of March? I do not know.

2632. What was the tenor of the letter which created that suspicion? Some remark made as to their knowing our movements, but I cannot tell you what it was.

2633. Was the letter of the same tenor as the one I have just put into your hands? I cannot give the slightest idea. It was from the tenor of some letter I received; but whether it was that one or not I cannot say.

2634. Did you entertain that suspicion, which you speak of in your report, after the 10th of April, before the accounts of the torn music? No, certainly not.

2635. You had not these suspicions then? No. I recollect making a remark in connection with the torn music. Boulanger and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were present when I got the letter, and Bentley was searching to find the letter there alluded to. I then made the observation to Bentley, "There must be a conspirator in this house." I made the remark in connection with the servant, and he then assured me positively that they knew nothing about it.

2636. Then, if I understand you rightly, that occurrence took place on the 1st of April? It took place in connection with the torn music.

2637. On the 2nd of April you entertained a suspicion of the servants, having used, as you say you did, the expression that there was a conspirator in the house? The suspicion made no impression on me, because I got shut of it at once when Bentley spoke in the confident manner he did of his servant, and of the possibility of some one getting in by the window. The momentary suspicion was then removed, and did not come back to me again; it might for an instant have flashed across my mind.

2638. How do you account for the singular fact that, whilst there is this entry in your report under date of the 10th of April, there is no entry of these suspicions in your journal on the 2nd, 10th, or 11th? I cannot assign any reason why the suspicion was not entered on the 2nd, but as regards the difference of the dates in the diary and report between the 10th and 11th, I have already told you. I did not make the extract myself. They both allude to the same circumstance, although they do not appear on the same date.

2639. Nor can you now tell me which is the letter referred to as the ground of your suspicion, stated in your report under date of the 10th of April? No.

2640. Can you say it is the letter I put into your hands of the 24th of March? No. It may be that letter; I cannot say it is not, but I should think it is a letter more recently received than that at the time the entry was made.

2641. You speak of having received tickets from Boulanger for the Philharmonic Concert at the time the letter was shewn to Mrs. Bentley—how many tickets did you get? Seven I think; and I returned him three or four I believe. Perhaps three.

2642. Did you not get some tickets from Mr. Aldis for the same concert? No; only from Boulanger.

2643. From no one but Boulanger? No, I think he sent them under cover to the office. And when I returned part of them I think he said you might as well have made use of them. On the occasion of the last concert I obtained tickets from Mr. Aldis.

2644. You said that before that concert you took steps to convict some one? During the time I had the matter in hand I was constantly taking steps to convict some one.

2645. After the date of the alleged assault you took no steps to convict anyone but Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? No; I did not take steps with regard to any others.

2646. You withdrew strict watch from Cutolo and Montagu? Yes; but I say again I do not know whether it was on the day after that the strict watch on Cutolo and Montagu ceased.

2647. Did you not give up all endeavours to convict anyone but the Bentleys from the time of the assault, the 25th of April? I wished to convict all concerned, and at this time I did not

Sub-Inspector not know but that some one else was not concerned. It was the authors of the letters
C. E. I wished to convict. I took no steps from that time with regard to Cutolo, Montagu, and Harrison. St. Juste.

2648. By Mr. Piddington: Had you any suspicions against anyone else than the Bentleys at that time? Some parties directed my attention to Mrs. Boulanger, and stated some small circumstances which it was thought would attach some suspicion to her; but I did not think it necessary to look after Mrs. Boulanger.

2649. You do not mean to say that Mr. Bentley ever expressed suspicions to Boulanger of his wife having been the author of these anonymous letters? No, he did not.

2650. By the Chairman: Was Mr. Bentley aware that you called his wife Lily—did you ever call her so in his presence? No, I do not recollect doing so.

2651. Is it likely? No, I think not.

2652. By Mr. Johnson: Did anyone ever hear you address her by that title? Not to my knowledge; but there may be a good deal heard in that house that I do not know any thing of.

2653. By the Chairman: Your familiarity with Mrs. Bentley, according to what you state in your diary, was very great—allow me to ask you, did you ever kiss her or did she ever kiss you? Yes, on several occasions.

FRIDAY, 28 NOVEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER,	MR. HART,
MR. WILSON,	MR. LEARY,
MR. MORRIS,	MR. PIDDINGTON,
MR. W. FORSTER,	MR. LUCAS,
MR. HOSKINS.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. R. Johnson appeared as Solicitor for the Petitioners.

Mr. C. E. Harrison called in and further examined:—

Sub-Inspector 2654. By the Chairman: Do you know this book? Yes.
C. E. 2655. What is it? It is the book in which the men make their entries of duties performed Harrison. on certain days which are set down.

2656. Do you know anything of any additions having been made to this book since the entries were made by the men? Only where I have marked off special duties that relate to the Bentley case.

2657. You have marked off the special duties yourself? Yes, I marked them off by writing against them the letter "B."

2658. Did you mark them off from your diary? No, from the men themselves. I had them in and got them to point out the special duties there set down, which related to the Bentley case.

2659. Will you look at this entry, dated 25th April—it purports to be signed by Clark, does it not? Yes.

2660. Is that written by Clark? I really cannot say; I expect so.

2661. Who has signed this name? Clark, I imagine.

2662. Is that Clark's signature? That I cannot tell you. I do not know that I know the man's signature.

2663. Would you expect that it should be like his other signatures? Yes, it ought to be.

2664. You think it ought to have a similarity to his other signatures? Certainly.

2665. Is that his signature on the 29th April? I believe so.

2666. Is there any similarity between those two signatures? Well, some of the letters appear different. The "r" appears different.

2667. Do you think that the writing in the body of the entry is the same in each instance? I think so.

2668. Do you observe any peculiarity in the spelling in this entry, which purports to be signed by Clark (entry of the 25th April) and the entry of the 29th April—I refer more particularly to the word "special"—That on the 25th of April is written "speacial," and that on the 29th is spelt correctly "special"—and throughout Clark's entries, with that exception (entry of the 25th) it is spelt in the same way as on the 29th of April. How do you account for it that in this entry which is different apparently from the entries signed and written by Clark, the spelling should be also different? I see that such is the case, but I really cannot give any explanation of it Mr. Chairman. I do not know Clark's signature. I have no doubt often seen it, but I do not know it so as to be able to say positively whether he signed one or other of those entries. But of this I can assure you, that I called the men in when I marked those "B's.," and got them to point me out in the book the special duties which related to the Bentley case; and I put the B's. to them.

2669. Is that the only thing you did to the entries? I —

2670. It is only the other day—you should remember? Only the other day! It is five months ago.

2671. Five months? It is a long time ago. I had forgotten the circumstance until the clerk in the office called my attention to the fact.

2672. It is five months since? It is perhaps not so much as that.

2673.

2673. Well, say four months. It is four months since you caused these "B.'s" to be placed here, relating to the Bentley case? Yes, I called the men in at the time—those in the office, and some of them afterwards, to get them to point out the special duties on which they had been engaged in the Bentley case.
2674. Are these B.'s your writing? They are.
2675. Are these additions to the entries yours:—"in the house of B."? That is mine.
2676. Is it five months since that was written? Yes.
2677. Does not the ink appear as though it had been recently written? I speak to a fact.
2678. And this also, "in the house of B.," is your writing? I do not think I have looked in the book since the entry.
2679. Were these B.'s all made at the same time? In the same afternoon.
2680. Is every entry relating to the Bentleys marked in this peculiar way? I do not know; there may be some afterwards; I cannot recollect. Probably they were engaged in the case after these were marked; probably the last "B." entry will shew when it was. It was only at the one time that this was done.
2681. Is that (entry of 15th May) one of your B. entries—"Special duty, watching Mr. B."—is that your writing? Yes.
2682. Is this (entry of 20th May) marked B, one of your writing? No.
2683. "Special duty from 12 to a quarter past 3 a.m., at B.'s house in Elizabeth-street."—20th May, 1862, William Clark and John Sanderson similarly employed. Were they employed in this way at that time do you know? I have every reason to believe so.
2684. Is this "B." (in entry of 28th May) one of yours? I do not think it —
2686. There is one particular entry here, on the 14th April, 1862:—"Special duty from 7 until 12 midnight"; and then here is another entry:—"In at B.'s house"; and then afterwards what appears to be another entry on another occasion:—"First time." Can you state whether those three entries were made at three different times? I can state positively that I never made an entry or put pen to that book except on the occasion I speak about. I do not say that I was not called out of the room; but they were all made on the same day.
2687. Would you have different ink? That might be possible if I made the first entry in my room and took the matter up afterwards in the office; I can speak positively that only on that day did I make an entry.
2688. Does this appear to be in different ink? "At" and "house" are darker than "B" and "first time."
2689. "First time" appears to be different from the other entry? No, I do not see that it appears to be different; it is of a lighter colour.
2690. Is not a lighter colour a difference? I do not know.
2691. You do not know whether a lighter colour is a difference or not. There is another entry here on the 5th June, which appears to have been altered afterwards—has that been so? I cannot say.
2692. Look at the entry—has that been a "9" altered to a "7"? So it appears.
2693. By Mr. Wilson: The last B that I see in this book, purporting to be in your handwriting, is on the 3rd May? Yes.
2694. And they appear to have gone back for several months. What I wish to ask you is this:—How did you get this information from the detectives as to the peculiar special duties they were performing on these particular days—had they any memoranda of their own, shewing what duties they were engaged on? Yes, detective Clark had, and Sanderson had. I believe the memoranda were contained in their pocket-books. They each keep a pocket-book, and I believe the dates and memoranda were given from them; I cannot say with regard to Camphin. I had them in to point out which of those special duties related to the Bentley case, and they told me from their memoranda, and in some instances perhaps from memory.
2695. Did they read the entries in the book before they told you the particular duties they performed on the specified days? Yes, they stood beside me and went through the entries.
2696. Sanderson and Clark kept a diary? I do not know whether they kept a diary; they kept a pocket-book to enter particulars. I cannot say whether they keep it when it is full, or whether they throw it aside.
2697. But they must keep it for a considerable time—for several months—when they could give you all the information you required concerning those entries? They must have had those particulars down, but whether they kept them in their pocket-book, or in any other way, I cannot tell. I know that they referred to memoranda in the matter.
2698. With regard to the special duties of detectives, is there any means in the office of tracing out the particular steps that have been taken by the detective police to elucidate any particular matter? No.
2699. None whatever? No.
2700. By the Chairman: Did you state whether these police were in possession of these memoranda? They were in possession of them at that time.
2701. Do you know whether detectives Clark and Sanderson, and others who quoted from memoranda, are in possession of those memoranda now? I cannot tell. Each of the men a pocket-book. They are supposed to take down the particulars and description of criminals—who come in here, and who they are likely to meet with in the street—from the Police Gazette. They take down such particulars as may be of use to them on such matters as they have inquired about; and they always give me a report of these particulars—not in writing—verbally.

2702. Do you consider that you have a right to review those books in which they keep these reports of crime? No; a man keeps his pocket-book and notes down particulars for his own information. I never make a point, nor have I done, of searching into their pocket-books. It is not a police diary; it is for their own information that they keep this—at least so I have always looked upon it.

2703. Do they never make use of these diaries to refresh their memories in prosecutions and otherwise, on official duties? No; I do not know that I have ever required it.

2704. You required it in this particular instance? Yes; but had they not been able to furnish me with the dates, or point out to me the special duties which related to the Bentley case at the time, I should not have marked it with a "B." Of course I should not have been in possession of the particulars. They will corroborate these facts.

2705. Were the whole of the detectives with you at the same time—were they all in the room with you when you were making these marks? No, probably not; probably they were not all there. There might have been two or three of them there, and then afterwards one by himself—I cannot say.

2706. Then you have made these entries at different times? No, it was at the same time—all the same day—that I made those entries. That was the only time I ever made an entry in the book. I have no recollection of even looking at the special duties which related to the case after that, and I had forgotten the circumstance until I was reminded of it by Mr. M'Martin.

2707. By Mr. Morris: Would you just cast your eye over that—(Entry in detective duty book.) It purports to be Clark's signature, but it is signed "Clark," not "William Clark." It is in the handwriting of the person who wrote the B.'s—is not that the case? It is possible that I wrote that; I would not be certain. If Clark was present, and I saw there was no signature to the entry, and Clark said, "It is mine," I may have put his name there.

2708. By the Chairman: But you would know your own writing? Yes; but this is not my — 2709. This is not yours? It is not my usual style of writing, and I do not recollect the fact; but it is very possible that I did put it there at the time.

2710. By Mr. Morris: It does not purport to be Clark's signature? No; until the Chairman called my attention to the manner in which Clark signed his name, I did not know how he was in the habit of signing it. The body of the entry is not mine, that is certain. Here is "William Clark" signed, and here is the signature "Clark." I do not see much difference.

2711. By the Chairman: You will find that Clark spells the word "special" properly in every instance, except in this, where the signature is incorrect? Yes.

2712. By Mr. Wilson: Just now you stated that the detectives could corroborate many of the statements which you had made. What particular statements did you allude to—what particular facts, or class of facts? With regard to the duties in which they had been employed—the parties they had watched—under what circumstances—the time they had been at the house, and such facts as they may be aware of in connection with the case. I do not know what has passed between them and Mr. Bentley, and what instructions they may have received from him; but as to the duties on which they were employed, they can, I have no doubt, corroborate what I have stated.

2713. By the Chairman: Here is an entry dated 27th April. If you will be kind enough to look at it, and explain how not only the figures, but also the time of day, is altered. It appears here to be "8 p.m." The original entry has been "a.m.," and the figure 8 has been altered. Will you explain how the alteration has taken place? I will if I can.

2714. If that erasure should be shewn to correspond with your diary, as altered, and not as in the original, would that be of any importance in this inquiry? I do not know.

2715. Is it not evident that that alteration has taken place? It appears that an alteration has taken place here—no doubt of it; but I cannot give any explanation of it.

2716. Do you think that alteration is in the handwriting of the person who wrote the body? That I do not know. That I cannot say. I do not know whether it is in the handwriting of the party who wrote the body or not.

2717. When I ask you, I do not request you to speak positively; I only ask you if you can form any opinion on the subject? I cannot with regard to those two letters. There has been an erasure there, and a "p" put in. I cannot say whether it is in the handwriting of Sanderson or not, or when the alteration was made. I do not recollect whether it was there when I put the "B" to it.

2718. By Mr. Johnson: I want to know, Mr. Harrison, when you went through this diary to make these explanatory emendations? With regard to the report?

2719. In this official book—the detective duty book? When I went through the diary?

2720. No, when did you go through this detective duty book and make these explanatory emendations? Some months ago—several months ago.

2721. Was it before or after you furnished the Colonial Secretary with your report? That I cannot recollect; but you will see the date of the last mark that I put there, and that will probably afford some information; although I do not know, it might have been after that again, because I might have been interrupted in the matter and not have taken it up again. It might have been even after that. The 2nd of May, that is my last.

2722. What do you mean was done on the 2nd of May. I see that this is under date 2nd of of May? Yes, that is the last mark I have made in the margin of the report, it appears— Sub-Inspector the 2nd May. C. E.

2723. Yes, that appears from the book itself; but I want to know when you made that mark? Well, I cannot say. It was some months ago when I made it. It appears that the last is made on the 2nd of May. Harrison.
28 Nov., 1862.

2724. The last what is made on the 2nd of May? This in the margin —

2725. Do you mean to say that the B.'s were made on the 2nd of May? No, certainly not; but that is the last mark I made in the book. It is some months ago since they were made; but I cannot tell you the date when I made the marks.

2726. All I can understand from your explanation is that they were not made before the date of the entries in the book? That could not be.

2727. Of course it could not, but that is all your explanation amounts to;—I want to know when, after those dates, these marks were made? After the 2nd of May, yes.

2728. But how long after? There are other entries relating to the Bentley case, not marked by me, whether they were made between that date and the 2nd of May—whether they were made between the 2nd of May and the date of some other entries, or whether I was interrupted in making them I cannot state; but it is some months ago since the entries were made.

2729. Is there no event in connection with this case by which you can fix these entries as occurring before or after it? No. Oh! there is this: Detective Clark has been absent from Sydney for some months, and he was present when they were made; and there is Mr. M'Martin, a clerk in the office, who recollects the entries being made. I do not know that he can give the exact date, but he can speak to about the time.

2730. How do you know that he recollects the entries being made? Because he called my attention to the fact. I had forgotten the circumstance of the entries being made until last Saturday afternoon, when I was asking some questions with regard to the duties the men had been employed on in this case, and making some remark as to whether they had made any entry in the duty book as to any of the facts in connection with their several duties. Mr. M'Martin said there were entries, and that I had marked some of them off. I went back to the book and recollected the circumstance of making the marks in the margin. It had escaped my memory at the time.

2731. What circumstance was it that induced you to call these men up and make these special emendations? Well, I do not know what the motive was, whether it was to see how many times they had been employed in the Bentley case, or what—I do not know.

2732. Cannot you tell;—was it nothing in reference to your diary or report, or any circumstance that made it necessary to call these men at any particular time to make these special additions to this official book? No. I cannot recollect at the moment what it was that induced me to do so; or whether I took the book to make any special remarks in it. I do not recollect it. I might have —

2733. I do not want speculation as to what might or might not have been. Here is an official book with additions to it, in evidently different handwriting, and you say you cannot tell how you came to have them made? I cannot tell with regard to the writing in the book. I can only speak with regard to what I wrote there myself, and I have told you about the time I wrote it and why I wrote it; but what my motive was at the time for marking off these special duties on which the men had been employed I cannot recollect.

2734. You have no recollection of any reason for adopting such an extraordinary course as making these alterations in an official record? I do not see any alterations. There are no alterations at all.

2735. You do not see any alterations? No. There is the marking off of such special duties as relate to the Bentley case.

2736. Tell me when the first of, what I call special emendations, appears there? On the 21st March—Friday.

2737. It could not be much earlier than that—you only took it in hand at that date? Somewhere thereabouts.

2738. Looking at the entry on the 29th March, signed "William Clark"—tell me if the words "watching house" are not an addition to the original entry? Yes—that is in my writing.

2739. That is in your writing? Yes. It is an addition, but it is not an alteration, because I asked Clark and entered it here: "Came on duty at 9 a.m.—special duty." I asked him what duty, and he said "inside the house" or "watching the house"—and I put down "watching house."

2740. You draw a distinction between altering an entry and adding to it? Yes. The man was present at the time this was done.

2741. I will modify my question. Do you mean to say that you cannot recollect what circumstance it was that induced you to go through this official book, and make additions to it which were not there at the time the entries were made? It was probably for my own information.

2742. Cannot you say? I cannot, from memory, say what my motive was.

2743. Or what the occasion was which led you to do it? Nor the occasion which led me to do it. Probably to facilitate reference to the duty book—to know which of the entries for special duty referred to the Bentley case, and which to matters relating to other cases.

2744. I want to know if you cannot state that so remarkable a thing as this was the cause of some particular event, or some idea that struck your own mind? I cannot state that it was.

2745. Did you ever do such a thing with respect to any other entries in this official book? I have no recollection of having done so. There may be marks made by me in other parts of the book, but I do not remember to have made them.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
28 Nov., 1862.
2746. Did you ever go through the book, with the detectives, in reference to any other matter than the Bentleys, in order to supplement the entries? I have never before had a case of the kind.
2747. I did not ask you that. Did you ever do it? Not to my knowledge. I may have gone through some other cases in which I which I have been employed.
2748. Can you refer to any other instance where the entries have been supplemented in the same way as they have been supplemented in the Bentley case? No, I cannot.
2749. I see that on the 2nd April, there is an addition—"watching M"—is that in your handwriting? All those. I have looked at them. They are all in my handwriting.
2750. This "watching M" is in your handwriting? Yes.
2751. There is a similar entry on the 3rd April. I observe that you never took the precaution of getting the officers themselves to initial these additions? I had no object in doing it.
2752. I am not asking whether you had any object or not. You did not? No, I never thought it was necessary.
2753. Is your memory clear that either Sanderson or Clark, or both of them, had pocket-books with them, containing memoranda of any description, when you made these additions? I believe that they both had memoranda with them. I believe they both had memoranda.
2754. That is not an answer to my question? Sanderson had.
2755. You are sure that Sanderson had a pocket-book or memoranda? Yes.
2756. Which? I cannot say.
2757. He had one or the other? Yes.
2758. Well, had Clark? I believe Clark had.
2759. You are not certain of that? I am not certain, but I believe he had.
2760. What do you believe he had, a pocket-book or a memorandum? I cannot say which. It might have been a memorandum in his pocket-book. Whether he took his pocket-book or some memoranda from his pocket I cannot tell.
2761. Or did he give you the information simply from memory? No, Clark and Sanderson, if I recollect right, had memoranda. Camphin, I think, took part of it from memory. I do not think he had any memoranda. Sanderson had.
2762. Were they all three together when these additions were made? I cannot say. I cannot recollect whether they were all in together, or whether two were in together first, and one afterwards.
2763. Or only one at a time? They were not in one at a time, because I called them in when they were in the office. How many of them were there I cannot say.
2764. It never occurred to you that there was only one? There might have been a time when there was only one in the room. Some of the others might have gone out and left one there. I will not say that they were all present during the whole time I made these entries.
2765. That is what I am asking. Were these entries made when only one man was present? They might have been; I have no recollection of the fact.
2766. Why did you not make some record in the book, of the fact of making these additions when they were made? For what purpose?
2767. I ask you that question? I do not know. I did not think it necessary.
2768. Have you any entry in your diary, of your having called these men to come and supplement their entries in this book, or to allow you to supplement them? Not that I am aware of.
2769. In point of official routine, is it open to you to take this official record and make additions to it—are you at liberty to do that as a matter of official regulation? I never received any instructions to the contrary.
2770. And you think it is within the scope of your duty to go to this official book and to supplement the entries, without any instruction from your superior officer? Providing that supplement gives some further information in reference to the duties of the men employed, and that it is correct—yes.
2771. You think it is within your own discretion to decide as to the propriety and correctness of doing it, and then to do it? I consider it in my own discretion.
2772. Then this book which appears in its present shape now, if produced at a future day, according to this system, may have many additional entries made in it? I did not know that it was to be produced at a future day; it is not kept for that purpose.
2773. What is it kept for? It is simply a book kept by the men themselves. I do not look in the book myself for a month together. It is kept to note down what business they have been employed in during the day, or whether they have been out of town or in town.
2774. By the Chairman: Is it an official book, or is it at their option to sign it? They are supposed to make an entry in it every day.
2775. What do these marginal notes—"cautioned not to do so again"—mean, if it is not an official book? It is an official book to that extent.
2776. And consequently it is liable to be produced when called for for any official purpose? Certainly.
2777. By Mr. Johnson: Look at this entry on the 15th April:—"In at B.'s house—2nd"—Is that in your handwriting? It is.
2778. Has not the figure 2 been altered from the figure 1? I cannot say. It looks as if it had been.
2779. It purports to be a record that the detective Camphin was in the Bentleys' house for the second time, but it appears to have been altered from the figure 1, which would have made it appear that he was in for the first time. Who made that alteration? I did. The entry is mine.
2780. Who made the alteration? I cannot say.

2781. You say that word 2nd, as it appears now, was an entry you made from the dictation of Camphin? Yes, unless somebody has altered it since, and that I do not think is very probable. Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
2782. I am not asking you about probabilities. Can you recollect yourself whether that alteration was made by you? The entry is mine. The alteration I believe to be mine too. I cannot say about anybody having altered it since. If the alteration — 28 Nov., 1862.
2783. I decline to take probabilities? I cannot from memory speak to the fact whether it was put down a 1 and altered to a 2; but the alteration, if made by me, was made at the time I made the entry.
2784. Will you undertake to say that the alteration was made by you? What?
2785. The figure 2 as it stands now? I believe it was made by me.
2786. Will you undertake to say that it was? No, I cannot. I believe that it was made by me, and that it was made at the time the entry was made. I cannot speak positively as to whether the alteration has been made since or not. I do not believe it has. I believe it was made by me at the time.
2787. Mine is a simple question—whether you will undertake to say that the alteration was made by you at all? I believe it was.
2788. Will you say it was? No, but I would not say that it was not.
2789. Cannot you tell? There is not sufficient character in the figure to say whether it was written at the time or since.
2790. By Mr. Hart: Is it your figure? I believe it was.
2791. By Mr. Johnson: Do you recollect making it? No, I do not recollect the circumstance. It might have been that I wrote "2", Camphin and Sanderson being present, and Camphin might have said that it was the first time in Bentley's house.
2792. You were asked before about this entry of the 27th April, in which the figure "8" is evidently an alteration, and the letter "p" also—can you give any information as to when those alterations were made, and by whom? I cannot.
2793. Can you say whether they existed in that state before you made the addition in the same entry—"in the house of B."? I cannot say.
2794. I see that a good many of these entries are of a general character; as for instance—"Came on duty at 8 p.m.—Special duty to 12 at midnight.—John Sanderson, Detective Constable." You add the words—"in the house of B." I see on the 29th April (one of the entries in which you have put B. in the margin) a similar general entry:—"Night duty at 12 o'clock, midnight. On special duty until 6 $\frac{3}{4}$  a.m." You do not put any explanation as to what the duty was. How does it occur that you do it in the one case and not in another? I cannot say. Whose signature is it?
2795. William Clark. I cannot say whether it is often or not; but I see that in several instances the same thing occurs. In some instances entries have no explanation, and in other instances they have. Can you state how that occurs? I cannot.
2796. Had you your own diary with you when you made those additions to the original entries in the detective duty book? I have no recollection of it.
2797. When you say that all those additions were made at the same time, do you mean to declare that they were all made in one day? I do.
2798. And you cannot give the Committee any further information as to what day that was? I cannot.
2799. You cannot say within a week? No.
2800. Or a month? No; I know it is a long time ago—months ago.
2801. You cannot say whether it is within a week or a month? No.
2802. Or whether it was before or after you furnished the Colonial Secretary with your report? No, I cannot.
2803. Or before or after Mr. Bentley's letter appeared in the papers—can you tell that? I cannot.
2804. Or its connection with any other event in the case? No, only simply what I have said—that Detective Clark, who has for some months been up the country, was present when the alteration was made. That may give you pretty near the time.
2805. You cannot recollect yourself what was the object or purpose of doing it—what impelled you to do it? Simply, I believe, for my own information as to what men had been employed in the Bentley case, and to mark down the dates when they had been employed. I do not recollect having any other motive at the time.
2806. But what was the object of obtaining that information at the time you did obtain it? There might have been no object in it. I cannot recollect having had any object at all. No doubt I had some reason for doing it, or I should not have done it.
2807. When did Clark leave to go up the country? I do not know. The records in the office will shew when he left. I cannot recollect myself.
2808. Were the entries made before he went up the country, or after he returned—these additions I mean? Before he went up the country this last time. He had been up the country before.
2809. Yes; you speak of his going up the country —? I mean this last time.
2810. You speak of his going up the country, as in some degree fixing the time when these additions were made? It was before he went up; he is not down now.
2811. It was before he went up the country upon an occasion on which he is still absent? Yes. You will find where his entries cease for his daily duties in that book; but there is a record in the office of the time he went away.
2812. By the Chairman: Did you not say to the Committee that Clark and Sanderson were both within call? No; Camphin and Sanderson are—not Clark. Clark and Cairns are both up the country, and have been for months.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
 28 Nov., 1862.
2813. How many months has Clark been up the country? I cannot say; but more than three months.
2814. By Mr Johnson: How long was it before Clark went up the country on the last occasion? That I cannot tell; I do not know.
2815. Does a detective have to make some entry every day when he is in town? Yes, he ought to do so; I believe he does.
2816. It does not appear to be so by this book? A man might be at Parramatta or Campbelltown, or somewhere there, and not be back on the same day again.
2817. Did he make an entry in the book when he went away? No, I do not think he would do that.
2818. I see an entry of Clark's here on the 19th July; Clark was there then apparently? Yes.
2819. And the nearest point you can state is when these entries were made? Yes, during the time Clark was in town. I cannot say how long before he went away.
2820. You cannot say at all how long it was before? No; but some of the men who were called in at the time may recollect; they may have some memoranda to that effect. I do not know.
2821. I wish you to tell me—referring to this book, your diary, and resorting to any other means you may have of refreshing your memory—the duties of yourself and any of the detectives in reference to the Bentley case, on the 21st April. I will assist you as much as I can. If I recollect rightly, it was Easter Monday. That is the week during which you say Mr. Bentley told you you need not go to Newtown? That was the week he told me I need not send an officer.
2822. They say it was the week on which they told you you need not go on the Tuesday? Yes.
2823. Now you understand the day. I want you to tell me particularly every duty performed by you or your detectives on that day—day or night? There is one entry made here by Clark of his having been employed in the City until 1 o'clock noon.
2824. I do not want to read that now. Look at that book, and look at your journal, and refresh your memory in every possible way, and tell us all the duties performed in reference to the Bentley case on that day? I cannot, either from my diary, or from the duty book, tell what steps were taken on that day with reference to the matter. I have no record of it.
2825. Can you tell from memory; that is one of the remarkable epochs? No. Here is a record that I went to Bentley's house, and that Mrs. Bentley gave me some information. I do not see anything there; I cannot recollect. Clark appears to have been the only man employed in the Bentley case that night. It was a very busy day; many of the men were down at Manly Beach, and engaged in other ways. Even, according to Clark's shewing, it does not appear that he had any duty on hand in connection with the Bentley case during the day, but only from half-past 6 in the evening until midnight, or 1 o'clock in the morning.
2826. Did not you tell Mr. Bentley, upon the occasion of the discussion as to the second entry into the house, that the house had been watched from dusk until daylight? I have no recollection of telling Mr. Bentley so.
2827. Can you undertake to say whether you did or not? I cannot. I have no recollection of saying so to Mr. Bentley, and the duty book does not shew that such was the case.
2828. Having all those means of information—your own diary, that book (the detective duty book), and your own memory—will you undertake to swear that you did not tell Mr. Bentley that the house had been watched from dusk to daylight? No, I would not say positively that I did not tell Mr. Bentley so; but I have no recollection of having told him so, nor do I think I did.
2829. But you would not say that you did not? I will not say positively that I did not, because I have no recollection upon the subject.
2830. Can you point to the first entry in the book when Mr. Bentley was watched by any detective? I see one on the 28th May, but I want to see if there are any earlier ones. Yes, here is one on the 15th May.
2831. Is that the first? I do not know. I do not see any before that in which Mr. Bentley's name is mentioned.
2832. How many entries are there of Mr. Bentley having been watched at all—just give me the dates, if you please? There is the 15th.
2833. I will trouble you just to state the entries;—on the 15th May what is the entry? "Came on duty at 9 a.m.—special duty—watching Mr. B. till 5 p.m.—night duty at 9 p.m., " and patrolled the City until 12 midnight, in company with Detective Camphin. John " Sanderson, detective constable."
2834. What is the next? I see they are marked with a "B," but I do not know whether they are all marked. Here is another entry—watching Mr. Bentley.
2835. What is the date of that? Thursday, 29th May:—"Came on duty at 9 a.m.—special duty—watching Mr. B. until 5 p.m."
2836. Is there one on the 28th? There is one on the 28th.
2837. By the Chairman: Are there not two on the 29th? There is only one marked.
2838. By Mr. Johnson: You told the Committee that one of these detectives, who was set to watch Mr. Bentley, informed you that he had given him what you call a "double," by getting into a cab? Yes.
2839. Who was it told you that? Sanderson.
2840. Did he tell you that at the time you were going through the detective police duty-book? He gave it me the same evening—the first time I saw him, when he reported himself.

2841. Is that circumstance recorded in that book, when he speaks of watching him "from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.,"—is it recorded that he did not watch during any part of that time? It is not.
2842. Do you recollect Mr. Bentley being watched;—do you know that you gave directions to watch Mr. Bentley on more than two occasions? I cannot say; I do not recollect.
2843. Was it on the first or the last of those occasions that Sanderson gave you the information about the cab? That I cannot recollect. The book shews twice. I cannot recollect how often they watched, or how long they watched, or whether Camphin himself watched them. Independently of other duty they may have watched without my knowledge. I cannot recollect giving the instructions with regard to Mr. Bentley.
2844. Then you are not aware that you ever gave instructions to watch Mr. Bentley? Yes, I gave instructions, but I cannot recollect the particulars of the instructions I gave. I recollect giving instructions—
2845. Once, or more than once? That I cannot say from memory.
2846. Or from anything else? No, I cannot recollect. I know that Sanderson reported to me with regard to Mr. Bentley giving him the double in a cab, but whether that was on one occasion or more, I cannot say.
2847. By the Chairman: Did you not state to the Committee that Mr. Bentley was in the habit of giving them the double, by jumping into a cab and driving off? Yes, I used those words.
2848. By Mr. Johnson: In the habit? Yes.
2849. By the Chairman: You said it was impossible to watch Mr. Bentley, because he was in the habit of jumping into a cab and driving off? I do not think I said it was impossible to watch Mr. Bentley. I received information from the party set to watch him that Mr. Bentley had done so.
2850. Do you recollect Friday, the 2nd of May, which you say was the time Sanderson told you no one had spoken to Mrs. Bentley, as you say she represented—do you recollect that day? I do not recollect the day. I recollect him telling me so. I recollect my questioning him after I received the statement from Mrs. Bentley. I questioned Sanderson particularly about it—whether such a thing could have happened, but what date it was I cannot tell.
2851. Was any other detective employed that day in reference to the Bentley case? I am not aware that there was. The man—I sent a man up.
2852. I think you have stated quite the contrary, if I recollect? On that day—I do not recollect.
2853. I want to know whether some other detective than Sanderson was not employed on the Bentley case on that one day? I cannot say from memory.
2854. Can you say by looking at your diary or this book? I have sent another officer part of the way out, and I have met her myself to act as an escort from the 'bus to the gate. I cannot tell you who the officer was I sent up.
2855. Was not Camphin employed that day in the Bentley case? I do not know.
2856. Do not you remember—Is not that a rather remarkable night in connection with the Bentley affair—Did not Camphin come down to you at the Victoria Theatre that night with Mr. Bentley? I do not know.
2857. Look at your diary? No, I do not see it.
2858. Can you say whether Camphin was employed on that day or not? I cannot.
2859. Do you not recollect the circumstance of Camphin coming with Mr. Bentley, and calling you out of the Victoria Theatre, and all three of you getting into a cab? Yes, I do recollect on one occasion Mr. Bentley coming down at night to the theatre, but I do not remember whether it was Camphin that was with him. They came down and called me out of the theatre. I do not recollect the date, nor do I know what it was for—whether it was the receipt of a letter, or what.
2860. Was it not about some information that Mr. Montagu had been seen posting a letter? I do not know. I cannot recollect whether it was that Mr. Montagu had been seen posting a letter; it was something about a letter. I cannot recollect the particulars, nor can I recollect the date when it occurred.
2861. Did not you on that same night tell Mr. Bentley that you must have some of the anonymous letters, to compare with the letters you would have examined at that post the next morning? Yes, I recollect telling Mr. Bentley so. I recollect Mr. Bentley giving me some envelopes, to compare the handwriting with the letters posted; but I do not know whether it was on that occasion.
2862. You remember going in a cab from the theatre—do you not? Yes, I recollect going in a cab from the theatre.
2863. Was not that in reference to some information to the effect that Montagu was supposed to have posted a letter—did not you drive to the supposed post? I have no recollection of it.
2864. And then going to Bentley's and saying you must have some of the anonymous letters, to compare in the morning with the letters taken out of that post? That is possible.
2865. Don't you recollect it? Not as occurring as you state. I recollect Mr. Bentley coming to the theatre, and me going away with him in a cab; but I do not think it is likely —
2866. I am not asking you what is or what is not likely? I do not think it is likely that we should go to the post in a cab. I recollect going to the Bentleys' house and obtaining some envelopes, to compare with some of the letters that were to be taken out of the pillar.
2867. You do not mean to say—to compare with letters that had been taken out, but that were to be taken out? Yes; but whether that was on the occasion of Mr. Bentley coming to the theatre in a cab I cannot say.
2868. You cannot say one way or the other, but you recollect the circumstance happening? I do.
- 2869.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
28 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
28 Nov., 1862.
2869. And the following day the letters from that particular post were examined, were they?
I cannot say.
2870. You have given a good deal of evidence about it—you were asked a great many questions about examining letters taken out of the post—was there more than one occasion?
No, that only occurred, to my knowledge, on one occasion; but I cannot say that that was the time when Mr. Bentley came and fetched me from the theatre in a cab.
2871. So you have said—I want to bring out some other circumstances? I got envelopes from Mr. Bentley, to compare with some letters to be taken out of one of the pillars on the following morning.
2872. And you compared them with the letters taken out of the pillar on the following morning? I do not know whether I got the envelopes the over night.
2873. What time in the morning were the letters taken out of the post? I do not know.
2874. Do not they take them out early? I believe, about 7 o'clock.
2875. Of course you would go to the first opening of the post, or your visit would be useless? I did not go at all.
2876. Who did go? Clark, I believe.
2877. Whoever it was, he would go to the first opening of the post, as a matter of course? Yes.
2878. Now, can you say whether you got the letters over night or in the morning when the opening took place—It is a very odd thing you should not remember: you would have to get them at 6 in the morning? I did not get them the same morning; I was not there. Whether I got them over night, or the middle of the day previous, or on the day before, I cannot ascertain.
2879. Have you any entry in your diary when you did get the letters, for the purpose of comparing with the letters to be taken from the post? I do not know whether there is such an entry in the diary.
2880. And do you really mean to say, Mr. Harrison, that you cannot recollect whether you got the anonymous letters, for the purpose of comparing with the letters to be got out of the Post Office on some particular morning, a night before, or a day before, or whether a day intervened? No, I will not be positive whether I did or not.
2881. By the Chairman: Have you made a single entry in your diary, from beginning to end, that would assist you in identifying the anonymous letters, or assist you from circumstances to form any conclusion on the Bentley case? No, I am not aware that I have.
2882. Then of what value is this diary in relation to the Bentley case? It is not with my consent that the diary is here at all; I never thought it would be here. I should never have used it if the Bentleys — 2883. That is not what I asked you? I cannot say that the diary is of any use in the matter.
2884. And yet you rely entirely on that diary as to the facts of the case, and entirely on that diary for the conclusion to which you have arrived? The conclusion to which I have arrived—yes. Whether those conclusions are satisfactory to others, I do not know. To my own mind they are satisfactory enough.
2885. By Mr. Hart: Have you taken any steps, by comparison of handwriting, to detect the author of these anonymous letters? Yes, I have compared the anonymous letters with numbers of different handwritings.
2886. Did you ask for the assistance of any persons who were skilled in handwritings, to enable you to come to a just conclusion? Yes, but they were not examined by any one, with the exception of the Inspector General, and Mr. Young, of the English and Scottish Bank.
2887. Those were the only persons—the Inspector General and Mr. Young? Those were the only persons that I am aware of. I do not know who the Inspector General may have got to examine them.
2888. I am only asking you what you know yourself? Those are the only persons I consulted in reference to the matter.
2889. Do you not think it would have been advisable to have consulted more persons than those you have mentioned? Yes, I think it would have been advisable.
2890. By Mr. Leary: You stated, Mr. Harrison, I believe, at a former meeting of the Committee, that you had frequently kissed Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
2891. Will you state the day that you kissed Mrs. Bentley on the first occasion? I cannot.
2892. Just think for a moment—I consider it a matter of great importance? It was after the Philharmonic concert.
2893. By Mr. Johnson: Which Philharmonic concert? The first one—the concert where the man was.
2894. How long was that after your first interview with Mrs. Bentley. I believe you stated it was in March? In March; the concert was on the 29th April.
2895. Then was it a few days after this concert, or the day after, that you kissed Mrs. Bentley? I cannot recollect.
2896. Cannot you recollect about the time—was it a week, or a fortnight, or a month? Oh! no, it was very soon after this concert.
2897. You have stated, I think, in your evidence, the day when you arrived at the conclusion that Mrs. Bentley was a guilty party in this transaction? Yes.
2898. Will you now state again the date? It was on the—it was at Newtown.
2899. Yes? —
2900. By Mr. Morris: The assault was on the 25th April; the particular circumstance, when Sanderson was lying in concealment, was on the 2nd May? It was the night of the assault that I came to the conclusion that Mrs. Bentley was a guilty party.

2901. By Mr. Leary: That was on the 25th of April? Yes.
2902. Can you remember whether it was before you came to that conclusion, or afterwards, that you kissed Mrs. Bentley? It was afterwards.
2903. Did you inform Captain M'Leerie that you had kissed her? No.
2904. Did it not appear an obvious duty, on your part, to tell your superior officer that Mrs. Bentley had allowed you to take this extraordinary liberty? I did not think it part of my duty at the time to do so.
2905. I ask you now, as a man of discrimination, as a man of the world—would not that fact of Mrs. Bentley allowing you to kiss her, or put your arm round her waist, be sufficient evidence to warrant you in informing Captain M'Leerie, or to take steps yourself to stay any further inquiry? I did not think that was sufficient. I do not think that would have been a sufficient explanation of the mystery going on with regard to the anonymous persecution.
2906. Was it not sufficient to shew that Mrs. Bentley's character was anything but proper? It might have shewn that, but I do not think it would have shewn who were the authors of the letters.
2907. Would it not create a strong impression in your mind against Mrs. Bentley? It did.
2908. And you say you never informed your superior officer of such an extraordinary proceeding? I did not. I wished to unravel the Bentley case, and then to lay the circumstances before him. I did not wish it to come to Mr. Bentley's ears or to Mrs. Bentley's ears, that I entertained any suspicion of them. I had a very difficult game to play, and that was my motive for keeping the matter secret. I could have had plenty of corroborative evidence on the matter, if that had been required.
2909. By Mr. Johnson: But you do not happen to have any? I have not, for the reasons I have stated. I did not inform the Inspector General, or any one, of the circumstances connected with this matter.
2910. By the Chairman: Did you inform Mrs. Harrison? I did.
2911. By Mr. Hart: Did you tell Mr. Curtis—as stated in the depositions of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley—that you did not believe the statements of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? Mr. Curtis, the undertaker?
2912. Did you tell Mr. Curtis that? No, I did not. I would make a remark about Curtis, in regard to this matter. Mr. Bentley told me that Aldis had been informed by Mr. Curtis that I had spread a report that the Bentleys were the authors of the letters. Mr. Aldis wished me to call upon Mr. Curtis. I called upon him (Curtis), and he said Aldis was an old fool—that he had never said anything of the sort. Curtis asked me about the Bentley case, and I told him, "time would shew," without throwing any suspicion on the Bentleys or anybody else.
2913. By Mr. Leary: You have had a very large experience as Inspector of Detectives? Yes.
2914. Will you state to the Committee, that if a married woman, and the mother of a family, holding a respectable position in society (as Mrs. Bentley was supposed to do), and on only a few weeks' acquaintance, would permit you to take these extraordinary liberties with her, you would believe her character or testimony of any value in a matter of this kind? I know the opinion I formed at the time.
2915. I want to know what that opinion was? That opinion was against both Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, because I believed Mr. Bentley to be cognisant of all the facts.
2916. By the Chairman: And that Mr. Bentley was willing that you should seduce his wife? I did not go to such an extent.
2917. How far did you go—you have gone as far as kissing—did you go any further? I have gone no further.
2918. You have not taken any liberty of any kind, except that? No.
2919. You have not tickled Mrs. Bentley? I had my arm round her waist; I do not know whether it tickled her or not. Mrs. Bentley can perhaps answer that question best.
2920. You have not, by any action of yours, taken any greater liberty with Mrs. Bentley than kissing her? I have already said so.
2921. Say it again? No.
2922. By Mr. Johnson: You say you do not go the length of saying that you thought Mr. Bentley desired that you should seduce his wife; but do you go the length of saying that he desired she should so act towards you as to appear to be so desirous? I do not know how I can well answer that question. The only answer I can give to that is, that I believe this was a course of conduct that Mr. Bentley had marked out for his wife and himself, in the matter, with regard to myself, and that of course Mr. Bentley was aware of the fact. To what extent Mr. Bentley wanted to let it go I cannot form an opinion.
2923. Do you mean a course of conduct by which she was to appear to you to be a woman ready to be seduced? I do not believe Mrs. Bentley would have committed adultery, or that that was the intention or idea on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley.
2924. By Mr. Leary: You do not believe she would commit adultery? I do not believe that was the intent.
2925. When she kissed you, did you believe that? No, I believed she was playing a part.
2926. I do not think he has stated before that Mrs. Bentley kissed him—did she? She did.
2927. By the Chairman: Do you wish the Committee to believe that you could sit together—you with your arm round her waist, and look into her eyes, and she looking into your eyes with her "dreamy eyes"—she kissing you and you kissing her—and yet that you wished to go no further—Is that seduction or not? I did not go further, nor did I wish to go further, or had any intention of doing so.
2928. Do you wish us to believe that you, a man, sitting with a lady—mutually kissing each other—with your arm round her waist—she calling you "dearest Charley," and you calling her "dearest Lily," and other endearments—do you wish us to believe

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

28 Nov., 1862.

- Sub-Inspector that under these circumstances there was on your part no intention or wish to go further?
C. E. I do not think the fact is correct.
Harrison. 2929. Are these facts not in your diary? The facts are, but not the bright picture you have drawn.
- 28 Nov., 1862. 2930. Are they pictures, in fact? I have already stated, and I cannot state more—that no further did take place—that I do not believe Mrs. Bentley had any intention for a moment to go further, nor Mr. Bentley either. I cannot state what the inference might be: I state facts.
2931. Do you state that the picture is brighter than the reality;—is it not a detail of facts as given by your diary and in your evidence—is it or is it not? That the picture you have drawn really took place?
2932. Yes? I cannot say that it did take place all at one particular time.
2933. Do you mean to say that you put your arm round her waist at one time, that you kissed her at another, and that at a third time you took other familiarities? I have said nothing about further familiarities.
2934. By Mr. Leary: Was it when you were kissing Mrs. Bentley or putting your arm round her waist—or subsequently to those events—that you arrived at the conclusion that Mrs. Bentley was playing a part in this matter? Prior to this.
2935. Do you mean on the occasion when you were kissing her? Before that. I had come to this conclusion before that.
2936. Before she kissed you? Yes, nights before.
2937. Will you tell the Committee why you came to that conclusion—that Mrs. Bentley kissed you for the particular object she had in view—will you explain why you thought so? My diary records the first suspicion I had. From Mrs. Bentley's manner—from what I noticed—I thought she was playing a part and had some object in it, from the way in which she conducted herself.
2938. Did you feel quite sure? I was not positive of it. I felt satisfied of it, and I wished to assure myself of the fact.
2939. Was it necessary, to assure yourself of the fact, that you should kiss Mrs. Bentley very frequently? Not to assure myself of that one fact; but I got mixed up in the matter, and could not get back from it. I was obliged to carry out the farce to the end—if I may so call it.
2940. By the Chairman: You got into the habit of kissing? I do not know that I can say that.
2941. I wanted to know whether you would say so? Oh!
2942. By Mr. Wilson: I think, in a previous part of your evidence, you have stated that after your suspicions were aroused as to the Bentleys being the guilty parties, you formed plans to detect them? Yes.
2944. Falling into their views or supposed views in this matter? Their supposed views.
2945. Allow me to put it to you in other words: Your plan was simply to seduce the affections of Mrs. Bentley, with the view of getting her to divulge to you all she knew of the matter? No, that was not my intention; I had no idea of seducing Mrs. Bentley.
2946. I said—seduce “the affections” of Mrs. Bentley? Oh! I had no idea, nor have I at the present moment any idea that Mrs. Bentley's affections were ever engaged.
2947. By Mr. Leary: What was your object? To take advantage of circumstances as they might occur.
2948. By Mr. Wilson: What I want to know is this—if you had the object of seducing the affections of Mrs. Bentley, with the view of getting her to divulge what she knew on the subject? I cannot say that that was one of my plans. I cannot recollect—circumstances came so thick, and of such a strange nature, that I cannot really say I had formed any definite plan with regard to any particular.
2949. On the 1st May I find this entry: “It is a dangerous game to carry on an intrigue with her, but I must do it, or seem to do so, and we shall see who wins the odd trick”—Will you explain to me what you mean by this “dangerous game”? I did consider it a dangerous game.
2950. What was it you considered a dangerous game? Not knowing, in regard to Mr. Bentley, what his object was in leaving his wife constantly with me, and throwing her into my way, and me being alone with her in the middle of the night—I did consider it a dangerous game, sitting with my arm round her waist—that for his own purpose he might turn the tables on myself.
2951. Did she ask you to put your arms round her waist? No.
2952. Then your putting your arm round her waist was not part of the Bentleys' plan; it must have been a part of your own? I cannot recollect how it came about.
2953. But still it was part of your intrigue that you were carrying on? Yes.
2954. Then the only object you could have had in this intrigue, as you express it, on the 1st May, according to your own shewing, must have been to gain the affections of Mrs. Bentley? Oh! no, certainly not.
2955. Now tell me what the intrigue consisted in? In reality it was not an intrigue.
2956. Well, what was it? Mrs. Bentley was—I did not believe but what Mrs. Bentley was playing a part, and that she had no intention of carrying on a serious intrigue—that it was done by Mr. and Mrs. Bentley for their own purposes to—me? The entries here are facts, but they do not tell what my thoughts were as to the Bentleys' intentions.
2957. That is not an answer to my question; take your book and read the entry, and tell me?

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

2958. What were your intentions? I cannot recollect.

2959. The answer I wish to get is, what was the meaning of your entering into this dangerous game, and carrying on an intrigue with the Bentleys—I want to know what you meant? I believed at the time that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley wished to turn me to their own use for some particular purpose, and that Mr. Bentley had adopted this plan of throwing Mrs. Bentley into my way. I wanted to know what was the object to be gained, and I fell into their views. With regard to any intention of winning Mrs. Bentley's affections, I had no idea on the subject, and had no intention of doing so.

28 Nov., 1862.

2960. You say you fell into their views—how do you know they were their views? I cannot say; I could only judge from what was occurring, but I formed that opinion at the time.

2961. Did Mrs. Bentley kiss you before you kissed her? That I cannot say—perhaps not; I do not think it likely.

2962. Was kissing a part of Mrs. Bentley's plan, apparently? I cannot say.

2963. Was it a part of your own plan? That I cannot say. I do not know what answer to make to such a question.

2964. You formed a plan, and you cannot tell the Committee what that plan was? No, I cannot.

2965. Did you report these transactions to your superior officer? I did not.

2966. Supposing you had distinct proof that your suspicions with regard to the Bentleys were true, do you think it was your duty, as an officer of the Government, to lend yourself to such things for any purpose whatever? The matter was put into my hands —

2967. I want an answer to my question, and I'll have it? I did not think it was my duty.

2968. You confess that you have done wrong in this matter? No, I do not think I have done wrong.

2969. Do you say you think you did not do wrong in the matter? I thought it part of my duty to do so. My own private opinion is that I did not do wrong in acting as I did act.

2970. Supposing your superior officer had asked you, at this time, what steps you were taking with a view of eliciting this matter—would you then have stated that the steps you were taking was carrying on an intrigue with Mrs. Bentley? Yes, I believe I would have told him.

2971. Would you have told your superior officer that you were kissing Mrs. Bentley? No, perhaps not.

2972. Then you do not think there is any wrong in doing an act, in your public capacity, that you would be ashamed to tell your superior officer? The act might be a wrong one, but still I might tell it; it would be for him to object to it.

2973. I think you stated to me, in answer to a previous question, that you would not have told him so? I might not have told him so; I cannot tell whether I would have told him, or whether I would not.

2974. Do you think there is any danger to the morals of the community, from Government officers thinking it their duty, in their public capacity, to take improper liberties with any females? Do I think there is any danger to public morality?

2975. Yes; is it conducive to public morality? No, I do not think it is.

2976. By Mr. Leary: Have you, in a verbal statement to Captain M'Lerie, given a general account of what you did in this matter of the Bentley investigation? Yes, a verbal account.

2977. Have you given an account on one occasion, or on frequent occasions, to Captain M'Lerie, of what you had done in the matter—you entered into particulars, I presume? No.

2978. Did you never enter into any particulars as to what time of the night you were at Bentley's, or what you observed? Yes, frequently.

2979. Up to the time of your last examination, did you inform Captain M'Lerie or Mr. Cowper of your having kissed Mrs. Bentley, or of having taken any liberties with her? Up to the time of my last examination?

2980. Yes, yesterday, or the examination when you stated that you had kissed Mrs. Bentley—prior to that time had you told either Captain M'Lerie or Mr. Cowper? No.

2981. In conversations you have had with Captain M'Lerie about the Bentleys, have you not entered into particulars about what the detectives had done under you? Yes.

2982. You have entered into particulars generally, concerning anything you thought of importance? But nothing in relation to Mrs. Bentley.

2983. And do you mean to say that you did not consider this an important matter? I did think it —

2984. That a married woman would allow such a thing? I did.

2985. But you did not think it of sufficient importance to tell your superior officer, and ask his judgment? I did not do so.

2986. By Mr. Hart: Is it not entered in your diary? It is.*

2987. Had not Captain M'Lerie an opportunity of looking into it? Yes.

2988. By Mr. Leary: Does not Captain M'Lerie receive periodical accounts from the inspectors of the ordinary police, shewing what they have done during the day? From day to day.

2989. Are you called upon to give an account of what has been done? Every morning I see him and give him an account.

2990. Of what you have done, and any important steps that have been taken? Yes, but not the particulars.

2991.

* NOTE (by Short-hand Writer):—On this question being read to witness, subsequently, he replied, "It is not."

- Sub-Inspector C. E. Harrison.
28 Nov., 1862.
2991. Did not you consider this a very important matter? Yes, and had it been in the ordinary course of duty —
2992. Is not this the fact,—that you were ashamed to tell Captain M'Lerie a matter of this kind? No, that was not my motive for keeping the facts from him. With regard to the matters that had led to the conclusion I had come to in connection with Mrs. Bentley, and that, although perfectly satisfactory to me, I did not know how they might be satisfactory to other parties; and I wished to have some satisfactory proof of the matter, other than those facts we are speaking of now, before I laid the matter before Captain M'Lerie.
2993. From your knowledge of Captain M'Lerie, as your superior officer, I ask you now, do you believe that if you had informed him that you had kissed Mrs. Bentley, and had taken other liberties with her, he would have approved of that course? I think he would have objected to it.
2994. And still you would continue a line of conduct you consider your superior officer would condemn? I did not think of the matter before.
2995. You never gave it a thought? No; it never suggested itself to me.
2996. Do you mean to say that never suggested itself to you, and caused you not to tell Captain M'Lerie this? That was not the reason why I did not tell him. I have assigned the reason why I did not tell him.
2997. By Mr. Wilson: Was it inherent shame? I had no shame in the matter.
2998. No shame? No, I considered the —
2999. By Mr. Leary: You stated that there was a particular plan you were attempting to try, and that that was the cause of your taking these liberties? Yes.
3000. You have stated that this kind of proceedings would not conduce to morality? Not as a general rule, certainly not.
3001. Do you think if you had had criminal intercourse with Mrs. Bentley, that would have been correct, if it had accorded with your plan, or had been of any service to you? That is a matter which concerns myself; I would not go so far.
3002. You would not go so far? No; nor do I think Mrs. Bentley entertained any idea of the kind. I feel assured she did not.
3003. By the Chairman: Captain M'Lerie demanded of you, at that date, how you knew that Mrs. Bentley was the author of those anonymous letters—read the entry yourself to the Committee? “Started the men off to the races at Randwick, and then had a long interview with Captain M'Lerie; he mentioned the Bentley case, and I told him who the author was. I know he will be secret; but another reason was because I believed Bentley to be playing some deep game, which I have not as yet fathomed. He may be laying a trap, baiting it with his wife, for the purpose of inveigling me, and using it against me the moment he finds I know the truth. It is a dangerous game to carry on an intrigue with her; but I must do it, or seem to do so, and we shall see who wins the odd trick.”
3004. You see at this time you had not made up your mind whether Bentley was playing a deep game with you or not, and yet you say you had kissed his wife prior to that? I do not. I cannot recollect when I kissed her.
3005. By Mr. Leary: You have several detectives under you, of whom, I presume, you have a high opinion? Yes.
3006. If you were to have sent any one of these detectives to have investigated this matter, instead of going yourself, and he had informed you that he had done exactly as you have stated you have done, what would have been your opinion of such a proceeding? I should have told him to desist from it.
3007. You would have condemned it in strong terms? I would have condemned the act, although I might not have condemned the object.
3008. By the Chairman: Will you be kind enough to fix the day, as near as you can, when you first did kiss Mrs. Bentley? Here is a date, the 1st April.
3009. Had you kissed Mrs. Bentley then, do you think? I cannot say.
3010. Look on to the next date, and see if there is any particular time when you must be able to fix the date when you have done so—you said it was immediately after the concert? It was soon after the concert.
3011. Was it the same night? No.
3012. Nor the night after the concert? Not for several nights. It was not the night of the concert. It was several nights afterwards, I believe, but I cannot fix the date.
3013. By Mr. Morris: Do you not think it was on the first occasion you sat with your arm round her waist, for some hours, on the sofa? That is probably the first occasion.
3014. That was on the 1st of April, was it not? No; it does not say anything about me having my arm round her waist on that occasion, but simply about our sitting on the sofa.
3015. On the 1st May you sat on the sofa with Mrs. Bentley until 2 o'clock in the morning—is it likely that you kissed Mrs. Bentley on that occasion? I cannot say; I might have done.
3016. Do you not remember the first occasion when you did kiss Mrs. Bentley? I do not.
3017. Was there anything that led to it? I cannot say.
3018. Do you mean to say that you will not say? I cannot recollect, Mr. Chairman.
3019. I only want to know whether you can or won't? I cannot recollect. It was one of those occasions probably; I cannot say which.
3020. Could you fix a time up to which you had not done so? —
3021. Could you say that up to that time, at any rate, you had done so? No, I will not say that up to Friday, the 2nd May, I had done so.
3022. On the 3rd May you say—“Will the end justify the means I am employing?” &c.—Was kissing one of the means you were employing? I do not know.

3023. Really it will turn out that you cannot say whether you kissed her at all—Did you kiss her when you stayed till 1 o'clock in the morning? I cannot say more than I have said already; I cannot fix the particular date when I first kissed her.
3024. Have you any particular reason for not wishing to fix it? I have no reason; had I not been compelled to answer the question I should not have answered it at all.
3025. But having answered it? I cannot say more than I have said in reference to the matter; I cannot fix the time.
3026. On the 10th May you have made this entry (before you went to Mrs. Bentley's at all)—“I went to Bentley's, determined to see to what length I could go with Mrs. Bentley”? Yes, I explained that yesterday fully.
3027. Just explain it again? Mr. Chairman, I believe you put a misconception upon the words here written.
3028. Read it, so that the Committee may put their construction on it? “I this evening (10th) went down to the Bentleys earlier than usual, determined to push matters with Mrs. Bentley, and satisfy myself to what extent I could go with her.”
3029. What does that mean? I have already explained that I thought perhaps Mrs. Bentley would acknowledge the fraud in this case. I had led the conversation on several occasions to it, and I intended to push the matter closer, to see whether there was any possibility of Mrs. Bentley acknowledging that herself or they were the parties.
3030. Did not you say, in answer to a question put a short time since by one of the Members of the Committee, that you were not endeavouring to gain Mrs. Bentley's affections, in order to obtain a confession from her? I was not endeavouring to gain her affections for that purpose; I was not endeavouring to gain her affections at all.
3031. What do you endeavour to do with a lady when you kiss her and put your arm round her waist—if you are not trying to gain her affections, what are you trying to gain? Under ordinary circumstances it might be so, but this was an extraordinary case.
3032. Was there anything to fix the circumstances as extraordinary in any other person's mind than your own? I —
3033. By Mr. Hart: Was the course you adopted towards Mrs. Bentley one which would, in your opinion, allow the events to work themselves out, so that you could then form a judgment yourself upon the case? It was.
3034. And if you had any object in the course you took, I presume that was the one? That was the object.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.
28 Nov., 1862.

Mr. John Sanderson called in and examined:—

3035. By the Chairman: What are you? I am a detective constable.
3036. How long have you been in the detective force? Since the 1st March last.
3037. Are you in the habit of making a record of the duties in which you are daily engaged? I put it in the book.
3038. In the duty book? In the book for special duty—apprehensions or whatever it may be.
3039. When you enter special duty, are you in the habit of stating what that duty is? Not on all occasions.
3040. On some occasions? Yes, on some occasions.
3041. Have you a good memory? Yes.
3042. Could your memory carry you back to events which have occurred on days long distant, on which you have been engaged on special duty? Yes.
3043. Have you any knowledge of any alterations made in this special duty book? Not that I am aware of.
3044. Were you ever called up by your superior officer, in order to give a detailed account of events in connection with any particular duties upon which you had been engaged, other than on the days on which the entries were made? No.
3045. Such a thing has never occurred? No; I gave it direct to Mr. Harrison.
3046. And you have never been present on such an occasion as that to which I have referred? No.
3047. Have any additions been made to the duty book? Not that I am aware of.
3048. Were you ever called up specially to give information which would afford data to make those alterations? No.
3049. If any such statement has been made, it must be a false statement? I am not aware that I have ever been called up; I used to go daily on certain occasions.
3050. If anything of this kind had occurred, you would be sure to remember it, seeing it is a matter out of the usual course of duty;—if you were called up to explain with regard to transactions long past—with regard to the Bentley case—you would remember it? I would.
3051. And such a thing has not occurred? No.
3052. By Mr. Wilson: Do you keep a diary or a journal of your transactions? No.
3053. You do not? Not unless I go out of town, and then I always make a memorandum, such as going to Paddington or Newtown. I note it down.
3054. Were you ever requested, by any of your superior officers, to give them information from your private notes, to make alterations or additions, or additions to the special duty book? If I was out on duty I used to make a note of it.
3055. You perhaps misunderstand me. You have no notes as to particular town duty at all—you keep no private notes? No.
3056. Consequently, if it has been stated here that you were requested to give certain information from your private notes, with the view of making additions to previous entries in the detective duty book, that statement is incorrect? Yes.

Mr. John
Sanderson.
28 Nov., 1862.

- Mr. John Sanderson.
28 Nov., 1862.
3057. If I were to ask you what duty you were on, on the 13th April, 1862, do you think you could give me an answer from memory? I believe I was watching Bentley's house, either from Castlereagh-street or Elizabeth-street, on that day.
3058. Have you anything to assist you in fixing your memory on that particular day—is there anything you can go by other than your memory? No.
3059. Do you remember the time? I think that was the first time I was engaged about the house.
3060. Would you be inside the house or outside the house? I believe I was outside the house on that occasion.
3061. Do you think you would be likely to remember if you were inside the house or outside? I would.
3062. Do you know if you were engaged, on the 12th April, in watching Bentley's house—can you state from memory? I will not positively state—I did not make any note of it; but I think it was the 12th and 13th too.
3063. Would you be liable to be confused if you were asked whether you were inside on the 12th and outside on the 13th, or outside on the 12th and inside on the 13th? I know I was outside on the 13th; I will not say positively about the 12th.
3064. Would you be in Elizabeth-street, do you think, if you were outside? It was either Elizabeth-street or Castlereagh-street. There were two engaged at that time; one was in Elizabeth-street, and the other in Castlereagh-street; we changed and changed about.
3065. You are sure you were never called up, to furnish information as to when you were inside and when you were outside? Yes.
3066. By Mr. Leary: You stated that each day when you were doing town duty you reported to Mr. Harrison what took place, and that then he entered in that book what you had stated? Yes, he used to do so. The duty I was on he used to enter in a small memorandum-book of his own. That is about the size of it (diary before the Committee), but I will not swear that that is the book.
3067. Had you anything to do with that book afterwards? Never.
3068. Used Mr. Harrison to enter from that book into the detective duty book? He used to have that book; I will not swear what he wrote in it.
3069. Did you ever enter anything in the duty book? Yes; I used to put—"on special duty."
3070. By Mr. Johnson: The question is, whether you wrote yourself in the official duty book? When I was engaged in the Bentley case I used to enter in the duty book.
3071. By Mr. Wilson: Was not that in the returns? No, in the book.
3072. Did you make all the entries in the book on that date, as far as you yourself were concerned, or did you just enter "special duty"? Special duty.
3073. By Mr. Johnson: We want to know whether the entry which bore your signature in the official book was written by you or not? It was written by myself.
3074. By the Chairman: But you say that Inspector Harrison took from you statements by word of mouth, and entered them in a book kept by himself—a private book? Yes.
3075. About the size of that book (diary)? About that size.
3076. And he entered these every day when you gave your report? Yes.
3077. You are sure he entered these every day when you gave in your report? He had the book before him, and used to write in it.
3078. He had the book before him, and made entries as you dictated? Yes.
3079. By Mr. Johnson: Were you ever called up on any occasion, either alone or jointly with Clark and Camphin, or either of them, to go through the entries about the Bentley case, and to tell Mr. Harrison what were the special duties you had performed? No; I was called on one occasion with Camphin, but not with Clark, to know if all those entries were correct.
3080. When was that? It was during the time the business was going on, in the month of May.
3081. In the month of May you were called up? Yes, with Camphin.
3082. But not with Clark? No.
3083. Was Clark present on the occasion? No.
3084. Where did it take place? In the detective office.
3085. What was done? Nothing was done; Mr. Harrison asked me if all those entries which appeared in the book as my special duties were correct as to the dates.
3086. Did he ask you what were the special duties you performed, and write down from your dictation what that duty was? The notes B were down previously. He asked me if they were correct, and if they were the dates when I was at Mr. Bentley's house.
3087. Did you, at the time he asked the questions, dictate to him what were the special duties you had performed, and did he write any addition to what you stated yourself? It was written down already. He asked me if all those which appeared in the book were correct, and I said they were.
3088. By the Chairman: Was any of the writing in any other handwriting? No.
3089. No additions were made to your original writing? No, except the "B's."
3090. Was anything added to the entries which were originally in your own handwriting, except the B's in the margin? Nothing but the B's, or "Mr. Bentley's house," it might be; or sometimes "outside," or "in Bentley's house." I was ordered not to tell any person where I was employed, and so I put "special duty," and nothing else.
3091. I want to know if Mr. Harrison asked you what the special duties were that you performed on those occasions, and then wrote down from your dictation the exact special duty you had to perform? I do not think he wrote it down at the time he asked me.
3092. Was it written down before? It was written down before.

3094. I want to know when the additional entries were made in any of your handwriting? 28 Nov., 1862.
Regularly every day he used to call me into his room and ask me where I was employed, and mark the B.
3095. Then all those B's were not made on one occasion? No.
3096. But day by day, as the occurrences took place? Yes.
3097. You were asked while the matter was fresh in your memory? I stated that it was correct as it stood in the book.
3098. By the Chairman: When you appeared before Mr. Harrison in the morning, he asked you whether the statement you had entered in the book was correct, and put the B to it—that is your meaning? Yes.
3099. You are sure there is no other meaning? I am sure there is no other meaning.
3100. And that you were never requested to give a long detailed account of what had occurred for months previous? Yes.
3101. There is no misunderstanding in reference to this matter? No, there is no misunderstanding. I recollect the day I commenced.
3102. By Mr. Johnson: Then if it has been stated that all those "B's" written there were made on one day, and that all the additions to the entries against which the B's are placed were made on that day, is it the truth or not? They were not all made on one day.
3103. They were made on as many days as there are entries? Yes; I used to go in every day. If he had gone home that night, I used to go in first thing in the morning, and tell him if anything had happened. He used to have a small book, about that size (the diary), and dot it down. When I came from Newtown I used to tell him if anything had happened.
3104. By Mr. Hart: Did Mr. Harrison take the book at any time, and commencing from the 21st March, go through the whole of the entries, and make any additions or alterations relative to the special duty you had been upon on any one occasion? From the commencement to the finishing?
3105. Yes? Not that I am aware of.
3106. By the Chairman: You must have been aware of it if it had occurred? If it had been done in my presence I should be aware of it.
3107. By Mr. Johnson: Did you on any occasion give him any particulars in reference to the Bentley case running over a great number of days? No, except as I say, he looked over the book and saw the different B's; but it was at the same time.
3108. That B was written on the day you made the original entry? He used to call me in every day. He had a small book, and when I came from Newtown I used to report myself, and he would ask me what had occurred—if anyone had stopped Mrs. Bentley on the road.
3109. And you did not keep notes of what occurred, except you were on duty out of town, such as at Newtown? No.
3110. What did you keep? I kept the dates.
3111. In what? In a pocket-book.
3112. Have you got it with you? Yes. (Pocket-book produced.)
3113. By the Chairman: Is that the book in which you used to insert remarks relative to your duty? Yes; sometimes I would make memorandums.
3114. Is it anything of a private nature? Some of it is, sir.
3115. By Mr. Johnson: It is so far a public thing that it is the foundation from which you occasionally give your reports? I do not make all reports from this book. Private affairs we put in — 3116. I am only asking you about those entries you make when on duty as a detective out of town, such as at Newtown? Yes.
3117. Do you put down the nature of the special duty you perform in Sydney? No.
3118. You have no memoranda at all of those? No.
3119. Did you keep any paper or memorandum of any description, except that little book? I have a paper at home. Every time I was employed in the Bentley case I used to mark the dates.
3120. Nothing further? No, nothing further. The first day I went to Newtown was on the 11th April.
3121. Was that a Tuesday or a Friday? The next day was on the 13th April.
3122. By Mr. Morris: Was that at Newtown? Yes.
3123. By Mr. Johnson: Are you sure that is right—the 13th April? Oh! the 15th.
3124. And on the 19th? No, sir, the 29th April, and the week following I asked Inspector Harrison whether I should go.
3125. By Mr. Morris: For what purpose? To watch Mrs. Bentley.
3126. Did Mrs. Bentley go, on the 29th April, to Newtown? Yes.
3127. Can you remember if that was the day on which a concert was held in the evening? I will not positively say. I do not know. I did not make a memorandum.
3128. But were you not employed in York-street? I was only at a concert on one occasion.
3129. The 29th? And then I did not go with Mrs. Bentley, but I went in at the back, in Clarence-street.
3130. By Mr. Hart: Have you any entry in your book, of being present at the concert? No; I went down Clarence-street, to be present if required.
3131. Are you positive that you were at Newtown on the 29th? I am.
3132. By Mr. Johnson: Will you proceed, and state when else you went to Newtown? On the 2nd May, on the 6th May, on the 9th May, on the 13th May, on the 16th May, on the 23rd May, on the 30th May, and on the 3rd June.

- Mr. John Sanderson.
28 Nov., 1862.
3133. Is that all? Those are all the dates on which I was at Newtown.
3134. Have you any entries in that book about the Bentley case, excepting what you have stated? No.
3135. Those are the total instances? Yes, excepting the date I went to the post office, but that was the day when I went to watch a letter.
3136. What was the date? The 21st March.
3137. Where did you go? On Friday, 21st—H B letter.
3138. That was to watch the post? Yes, on Friday, Saturday, and Tuesday. On Tuesday it was fetched.
3139. Have you any other entries on the Bentley case? No, I did not make any other entries.
3140. The entries you have not here are on a sheet of paper? Yes, which I have at home.
3141. That contains merely the dates of the days you were on duty in the Bentley case, without any further particulars? Yes.
3142. By the Chairman: Were the entries made on that sheet of paper at one time, or day after day, as the circumstances occurred? Yes, day after day.
3143. By Mr. Johnson: I want to ask you a question about the 2nd May. Are you aware of any one else going to Newtown on that day with Mrs. Bentley? Mr. Harrison went on one day, but I cannot tell what day it was. He told me he was going to Newtown, but he did not tell me he was coming out; but he did come out, and he asked me if I saw any person speak to Mrs. Bentley on that day.
3144. By Mr. Morris: When did he ask you that? On the same day. I said, yes, I saw yourself.
3145. How long after was it? It was in the after part of the day, between 3 and 4 o'clock.
3146. By Mr. Johnson: You are quite sure of that? Yes.
3147. By the Chairman: You said you saw himself? Yes, it was the only day I did see him out at Newtown. I told him when I came back.
3148. How was Mr. Harrison dressed on that occasion? I will not swear positively.
3149. Was he disguised? No, he was dressed as he is in his usual routine duty—as he goes into the street. He had on a plain dress.
3150. Is that all Mr. Harrison asked you about the occurrence of the 2nd May? Yes.
3151. At any time? Yes.
3152. All he ever asked you about it was whether you had seen anybody, and you told him that you had seen him speak to Mrs. Bentley? Yes—if it was the 2nd May.
3153. Did he ever on any other day ask you if you had seen anybody? Yes; and I said “no” on one occasion. He said, the day after—“Are you sure no one spoke to Mrs. Bentley and stopped her?” and I said—“Yes, I am sure.” He said—“Did Mrs. Bentley stop at any place?” I said “Yes.” I said—“I told you on the first occasion that she stopped to button her glove, but I am certain that no one stopped her on that occasion.”
3154. But I want to learn in reference to the occasion. I put it as the 2nd May, but you seem to identify it with the occasion when Mr. Harrison went to Newtown? He went on one occasion, but I do not know the date.
3155. But upon that occasion he asked you, about 3 or 4 o'clock on that day, whether you had seen anybody speak to Mrs. Bentley? Yes, the day he was out himself.
3156. It was not the next day, but that day? Yes; I desired to see him when I came home, and tell him.
3157. Did Mr. Harrison go out with Mrs. Bentley to Newtown on any other occasion than that? Not to my knowledge.
3158. By Mr. Morris: Who on that occasion escorted Mrs. Bentley from Mr. Josephson's gate to the omnibus—on that occasion when you were concealed in the bush? No one escorted her from the gate to the 'bus. Mr. Harrison escorted her on one occasion, but there was no other person.
3159. But who escorted her from the gate to the 'bus? No one.
3160. By the Chairman: You never saw Mr. Harrison with Mrs. Bentley except on one occasion? No.
3161. By Mr. Morris: Did you shew yourself to Mrs. Bentley on this occasion? No; I lay in the scrub. Sometimes I used to go in a red shirt, with a bundle under my arm, and lay in the scrub.
3162. By Mr. Johnson: I want you to be quite certain whether it was on the day that Mr. Harrison escorted her from the 'bus to the gate, that he asked you whether anyone had accosted Mrs. Bentley? I do not think it was on that day; I think it was on some other day.
3163. When he did not go? When he did not go.
3164. Are you sure? I am not exactly sure, but I think it was on another occasion.
3165. Was it the same day he asked you the question the first time—the day you were watching? No, it was the following day. He asked me if anyone stopped Mrs. Bentley before she left Josephson's gate. I think on that occasion I did not see him at the office when I arrived back.
3166. By the Chairman: On what occasion was it that you stated that you had seen Mr. Harrison speaking to Mrs. Bentley, in answer to a question put to you by Mr. Harrison? I do not know what date it was, but he accompanied her from the 'bus. He walked on the right hand side of her. She walked on the left. He went up to Josephson's gate, and he asked me, when I came back, if I saw anyone speak to Mrs. Bentley, and I said—“I saw yourself.” He said—“Did you see me?”
3167. Was Mr. Harrison walking with Mrs. Bentley in a familiar manner? No.

3168. There was no familiarity? No, they walked just the same as any respectable persons would walk along the street. Mr. John Sanderson.
3169. It was on that occasion that Mr. Harrison asked you if you had seen anyone accost Mrs. Bentley? Yes, he asked me if I had seen anyone speak to Mrs. Bentley on that day. 28 Nov., 1862.
3170. And you are sure that is the only day Mr. Harrison was at Newtown when Mrs. Bentley was there? I am sure as far as this—on the days I went there.
3171. I only ask you about those days? I am sure of it.
3172. Was any other person employed to watch Mrs. Bentley at Newtown beside yourself? Yes.
3173. Who? Camphin; but he never used to leave the neighbourhood where the 'bus stopped.
3174. Were you both employed at the same day at times? He went on two or three occasions—I will not say which. It was after the time Mr. Harrison asked me if anyone had stopped Mrs. Bentley previous to her leaving Mr. Josephson's gate. Camphin was ordered to stop near the 'bus. He was told to see if she went towards Cook's River. Camphin never went towards Mr. Josephson's premises; I always took that part.
3175. So that you were the only persons who watched Mrs. Bentley near Mr. Josephson's premises? Yes.
3176. By Mr. Morris: Were you or any other of the detectives ever placed in such a position in Mr. Bentley's house that you could overhear the conversation that went on between Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? Well, we might have been, if we had listened; but I never listened for myself. They might have heard some words.
3177. Where were you—in the loft? I never was in the loft, except I put my head through on one occasion.
3178. Are you aware whether any of the detectives ever were concealed in the loft? Not to my knowledge.
3179. Or in Mr. and Mrs. Bentley's bed-room, or the nursery, without their knowledge? I never was.
3180. Do you know if any of the detectives were? No, I do not know.
3181. By the Chairman: Have you heard if anyone was? No. I was up-stairs on one occasion. I was ordered to examine the loft and see if anyone was in the bed-rooms, and I said there was no one.
3182. Did you examine the loft? There was no person there, and the trap-door was correct, and I immediately returned.
3183. Were you stationed in any one particular part of the house when you were inside Bentley's house? Yes.
3184. What part? In the back room, near the fire-place, in the corner.
3185. What do you call the back room? There are two rooms on the ground floor—the dining-room in front, and the other.
3186. By Mr. Morris: Opens into the back verandah? Yes.
3187. By the Chairman: Do you recollect the occasion of the music being torn in Bentley's house? Yes; but I was not there.
3188. Did you hear of the door being forced? I was told that it was.
3189. Did you ever look? It was always fast when I went. I was not there on that occasion. Camphin was there on that occasion, and Mr. Bentley made some remark to him about the door.
3190. With regard to these B.'s—have you had any conversation with Mr. Harrison respecting these B.'s lately? No.
3191. They have not been mentioned at all? No.
3192. Have you had any conversation respecting these entries with anyone within these last few weeks? No, I have not.
3193. And you are perfectly convinced now, on reflection, that these B.'s in the margin, such as this (B. indicated), were placed there at the time you gave in your account of what had occurred the day previous? Yes.
3194. That is exactly how it was placed—Mr. Harrison put the "B." there? Yes, and he used to write down in a small book.
3195. And this he did day after day when you made your report? Yes, he would call for this book.
3196. Who would he call? The clerks, sometimes.
3197. And when you had described the work, he placed this B. there, if it was connected with the Bentley case? Yes.
3198. By Mr. Morris: And he continued to do so until the end of the Bentley case? Yes.
3199. By Mr. Johnson: Day by day? Yes.
3200. By the Chairman: To the end of the case? Yes.
3201. Did he never omit to put it there? No, he called for the book regularly.
3202. Do you see this entry:—"Inside B.'s house"—on the 13th April? I do.
3203. Who was it that wrote that? Mr. Harrison I believe.
3204. When did he write it? I do not know.
3205. You have no knowledge whatever of its being written? No; that is Clark's duty.
3206. On the same day here is your own. Is this your entry:—"Came on duty at half-past 6—special duty until 12 midnight—inside B.'s house"—is that your entry? That is Mr. Harrison's. That is the first time I was employed in the house.
3207. Did Mr. Harrison make this entry—"inside B.'s house" on the next morning when you gave your report? He did.
3208. You said before that he only put the B.'s to it? No, I said that on one or two occasions he put "inside" the house or "outside" as the case might be.
3209. Now, on the 14th April, this is your entry again? Yes.

- Mr. John Sanderson. 3210. And here there is written—"Outside B.'s house"—do you see this entry? Yes.
3211. Do you see that the word "outside" has been altered apparently? Yes; I have not altered it.
- 28 Nov., 1862, 3212. Does it look as if it had been altered? It has been either blotted or altered.
3213. Does it not look as if it had been altered from "inside" to "outside"? It might have been altered. I know that I was outside on that occasion. I was ordered to go inside, but afterwards Camphin was ordered to go instead of me. I believe he took a basket of dirty clothes, covered over with a cloth, to look like a basket of clean linen; I recollect it well.
3214. When you gave your report on the Tuesday (I presume it would be Tuesday) did Mr. Harrison make this addition? He did.
3215. Did he make it an addition to "inside" or "outside"? I told him outside because I was to go outside and Camphin was to take the inside. He took a basket of dirty things, and covered it over with a clean cloth. I recollect perfectly well that occasion.
3216. Was that the occasion when Mr. Harrison went in? I do not know about Mr. Harrison; I know that Camphin was there because he took the basket from my house.
3217. Mr. Harrison put "outside"? I told him "outside."
3218. You are perfectly sure that those alterations and amendments were made on the morning of the following day when the occurrences happened? Yes.
3219. By Mr. Johnson: You say he used to enter in a book of his own the special duty you performed—did he? He asked what duty I was on; what he wrote in his book I cannot say.
3220. You used to give him the information day by day, and he used to make entries in his book? Yes.
3221. Did you see the inside of the book at all? I have seen the inside, but I never look over him.
3222. Can you tell whether it was a book like that (diary before Committee)? It was.
3223. And he made entries in it at the time? Yes.
3224. Was he accustomed to use blotting paper? I believe he did use blotting paper.
3225. Do you recollect whether he did or not? I have seen blotting paper alongside him, but whether he put it in his book or not I do not know. When I had told him I used to leave the room.
3226. Was the book as clean looking as this is? I would not say for the cleanness of it; it was a book about that size.
3227. Did it look as clean as this towards the latter part of it when you saw it? I would not say anything about the cleanness of it.
3228. By the Chairman: Had it a canvas cover on it? On the first occasion, when I saw the book, I believe it had no cover on it.
3229. By Mr. Morris: During the last few days have you made any report to Mr. Harrison which he has entered in the book you saw? No, I have not.
3230. Has he made no entries in any diary or book? Not from me.
3231. By Mr. Wilson: Have you been on any special duty lately? Not in connection with the Bentley case.
3232. Or on any other special duty? No, I have never given any information since I finished.
3233. By Mr. Hart: Have you given any information with respect to any special duty, during the last fortnight, entered in this diary, connected with other matters? I have not.
3234. By Mr. Johnson: Or the last month? No.
3235. When did you last, as far as you can recollect, give him any information which was entered in that book? About the 3rd June I believe it was. At any rate it was the beginning of June. That was the last time I was employed in anything connected with it.
3236. By Mr. Morris: That is the last time he has entered any information you have given him at all in the diary? That is about the time. I know it was the beginning of June.
3237. Have you any recollection what was the information you gave him at that time? No.
3238. Was it about the Bentley case? I know it was the beginning of June that I was employed. I went to Newtown in the beginning of June, and when I came back he used to ask me generally what had occurred, and I used to tell him.
3239. What was the last day you were at Newtown? The 3rd June.
3240. Did he enter in a book anything that you told him about going to Newtown on that occasion? I would not positively say.
3241. Did he ever have the book in his hand as usual, for the purpose of entering what you told him? Yes; on some occasions I used to make mention where people passed Mrs. Bentley, and describe who they were. He used to say, "Did they speak to her?" And I said "No."
3242. By Mr. Morris: Did he enter that? I do not know.
3243. By Mr. Johnson: Did he write in the book at the time you gave him the information he asked for? Yes, he wrote something in the book.
3244. Was it not apparently the particulars you were giving to him? Most likely it was.
3245. It appeared to you to be so? Yes.
3246. And you think that occurred on the 3rd June last? The last time I went to Newtown on that duty.
3247. Where used he to keep this book? That I do not know. I never used to see it in the office after he used to leave. I never saw it in the office, excepting he was there.
3248. Did he write on a desk—did he take it out of a desk, or from his pocket? I could not say. He used generally to have it on the table.
3249. By the Chairman: Do you know if he had a desk there? There is a safe there. There is a desk with a small lock and key, but I cannot say whether he kept that book there or not.

3250. By Mr. Johnson : Did you often see that book? Almost every day, when I was employed on special duty. Mr. John Sanderson, 3251. How is it you have made no reports to Mr. Harrison since the 3rd June? I have never had any occasion to make reports. I never saw anything transacted during the time. 28 Nov., 1862.
3252. By the Chairman : In any special case—not the Bentley case only? Anything that happens in felony cases we speak of by word of mouth, unless it is an apprehension.
3253. By Mr. Johnson : You say that the first time you saw the book it had no canvas cover? It had no canvas cover.
3254. Did you see it on more than one occasion without a canvas cover? I think I did. When first employed in the case I saw it three or four times without a cover.
3255. Can you remember the colour of the outside? I know that it was of a dark colour; I think it was a dark brown.
3256. By the Chairman : Was there any printing on the cover, do you know? I did not see the printing.
3257. By Mr. Morris : Did you ever see it with a cover? Yes.
3258. By Mr. Johnson : You did not sufficiently see the book to be able to identify it? I cannot say that is the book. It was about that size, and had printing on the heading of each leaf.
3259. But did you see it enough to see whether it had clean pages like this? No.
3260. By the Chairman : Or if there were any blots on it? I am not aware that there were any blots on it.
3261. Have you seen much of Mr. Harrison's writing? Yes.
3262. Was it clean and neat writing? Yes; I have seen him check the clerks not to spot on the paper. He is always very particular in writing letters and keeping everything clean.
3263. By Mr. Morris : When was the first occasion that your attention was directed to the fact that the Bentleys themselves might have been the originators of these anonymous letters? There were never any proper facts put before me, except I thought it was very odd occasionally. On the Easter week—on the Easter Monday—we were on duty down at Manly Beach, and in the evening, when I came home, I said to Mr. Harrison, "To-morrow is Tuesday; will I proceed to Newtown?" He said, "No, you are not to go to-morrow." I says, "Why?" He says, "Mrs. Bentley has told me it is Easter week, and she is not going to Newtown this week." I says, "Are you sure?" and he said, "Yes." He said I need not go. I made mention of it next morning, and during that week he told me Mrs. Bentley had made a report that she had been assaulted; on the next occasion I thought there was something very peculiar.
3264. When were you informed by Mr. Harrison? I never was informed that they were themselves the authors of the letters. Everything was kept very close and dark. I was only just asked the question, "What did I see?"—"Did I see any person?" Everything was kept very close and secret. I thought there was something very peculiar about it.
3265. By the Chairman : Are you in the habit of questioning the orders of your superior officer? No; he gives me the orders.
3266. Are you in the habit of asking why you receive certain orders? No, I receive the order and do it.
3267. Is it not extraordinary that you should require a satisfactory reason why you were not to go to Newtown on that occasion? I asked, and he said that Mrs. Bentley was not going.
3268. Was not the first reason sufficient without having it repeated? I asked him because I thought he might have made a mistake, or forgot the day. That was my object; I had not the least idea of what was occurring.
3269. By Mr. Johnson : Will you state when you first went on duty in the Bentley case? On the 21st March, at the Post Office.
3270. When did you first go to Mr. Bentley's house to watch it, either inside or outside? It was in April, I think. It was about the second week in April. I will not say positively the date. It was about the second week in April.
3271. What duty did you perform? I was on one occasion outside in the street.
3272. Which street? I was in Elizabeth-street the first night, and the second night I was in Castlereagh-street. Clark was in one street and me in the other, to see if anybody went into Bentley's house, or were knocking about in the neighbourhood.
3273. How late in the night did you remain? Till betwixt 12 and 1 o'clock. Sometimes we would stop half an hour longer. 12 o'clock used to be the orders.
3274. Where used you to be, in Castlereagh-street? We used to try and conceal ourselves in the best way we could in some dark place.
3275. Where did you get a view of the house? From the back. There is a spare piece of ground next to the Misses Flower's.
3276. There is a large willow tree there? Yes.
3277. It droops down close to the wall? Yes, there is a tree there. Sometimes we used to go up the spare piece of ground to take notice if anyone was lurking about.
3278. By the Chairman : Did you get into the willow tree? No, I was once on the walls.
3279. By Mr. Johnson : Did you ever get into Mrs. Marshall's yard? Never.
3280. Or Miss Flower's? Never. I was on the wall once betwixt the two buildings.
3281. You were a good deal in the Bentleys' house itself—were you not? Yes, for several nights, and for several nights I was in Bentley's yard. I used to sit on the steps.
3282. Were you ever there when Mr. Harrison was there of a night? Yes, on several occasions.
3283. How late have you known Mr. Harrison to be there? Close upon 12 o'clock.

- Mr. John Sanderson.
28 Nov., 1862.
3284. Used he to go away at 12 o'clock? I believe he was never there after I was. I generally used to go between 12 and 1 o'clock.
3285. And then he used to go away? He may have been there; I cannot say.
3286. As far as you know he used to go away when you did—about 12 o'clock? The biggest part of the time I believe he did.
3287. By the Chairman: Did you ever know him to be there later? I do not think I ever did myself.
3288. By Mr. Johnson: Do you recollect ever leaving him there; of course you cannot tell, if you left him, how long he remained. Did he not always go away when you went away? No; sometimes I used to go before him and sometimes after him.
3289. How often did you go before him? I cannot say; I would not like to say.
3290. By the Chairman: Could you say two or three times? I think I only recollect leaving him there once—only on one occasion.
3291. By Mr. Johnson: What time did you leave on that occasion? I think it was 12 o'clock, or a quarter-past 12.
3292. I suppose you look to your time to go like other people? I used to obey orders.
3293. Your time to go was 12 o'clock or a little after? Sometimes I was ordered to stop afterwards, on different occasions, until another party came to relieve me. I used to open the door and let him in quietly, and go out myself. Sometimes it used to be about 1 o'clock.
3294. Did you ever receive any orders to watch the house from dusk till day-light? No, I did not.
3295. Did you hear of any such orders being given? There was another man who used to relieve me between 12 and 1.
3296. Inside or outside? Inside; what time he left I cannot say.
3297. By the Chairman: Who was the man that used to relieve you? Clark.
3298. Were you ever both there together? Yes; but not after half-past 12. I never took the morning duty.
3299. Did you ever take any day duty in reference to the Bentley case? Never. I have been at the Post Office, and down at a place in Woolloomooloo, and in Phillip-street; I was employed two days in each case.
3300. Were you ever employed to watch Mr. Bentley? Yes.
3301. When was that—in the day-time or during the night? In the day-time.
3302. Then you did not understand my question. How often were you employed to watch Mr. Bentley? Two or three days.
3303. Two or three following days? Yes. I think I was employed two days at one time, and one day afterwards.
3304. During what period of those days were you ordered to watch him? From the time he went out, at 10 o'clock, until he went home, about 5 in the evening.
3305. Those were the orders, to watch him from 10 till 5? I was told to be sure about the time Mr. Bentley left his house.
3306. And to see what he did until his return? To see if there were any letters posted.
3307. Did you carry out those orders? I did.
3308. Did he post any letters during that time? I never saw him post any letters.
3309. Could he have posted any without you seeing him whilst you were on those duties. You were employed certain days to see if he posted any letters from the time he left home until he returned? Yes.
3310. During the time you executed that duty, could he have posted any letters without your seeing him during the time you were watching him? Not during the time I saw him.
3311. Did anything happen to give him an opportunity? Not whilst I saw him—not from the time I "picked him up," until the time of leaving him.
3312. Were you on his track from the time of his leaving home until the time of his return? On two occasions I was. On one occasion I did not see him until he was leaving the Club.
3313. Did he ever baffle you by getting into a cab? He did.
3314. When was that? I do not recollect the circumstances; it was on one occasion in Bridge-street.
3315. Did it occur on more than one occasion? No, only on one occasion.
3316. Did you ascertain the number of the cab, or take any means to ascertain it? I could not get a chance; the cab was at too great a distance; I never went so near. Had I been aware that he was taking a cab, I should most likely have seen the number.
3317. Can you fix the date when he took the cab? No.
3318. Would not your diary assist you? I did not put that down.
3319. Did he take it from a stand? Yes, from the stand in Bridge-street, near Pitt-street. I think it was the first cab on the stand, facing Pitt-street. He went up Bridge-street, and turned up by Government House.
3320. I should have thought, as a detective officer, you would have walked up and asked the next cabman what cab that gentleman had gone into; you did not take that precaution? No; I did not want any cabman to know that I was looking after Mr. Bentley.
3321. What time of the day was it? I believe it was close upon 1 o'clock in the day-time; I think it was 1 o'clock.
3322. Did you come upon his track again that day? Not until towards the evening.
3323. Where did you find him then? Leaving the Club.
3324. You do not know how he came back? No.
3325. He might have been back in ten minutes? Yes.
3326. Can you state what period it was you watched him these three days? I think it was about the finishing of the duties I was engaged in in the case.
3327. You think it was towards the end of it? Yes.

3328. Had you any instructions to watch Mrs. Bentley? Only to Newtown.
3329. Were you instructed to watch her on other occasions, to see if she posted letters? Never.
3330. Or the servants? Never.
3331. Do you think, as a detective officer, you would have had much difficulty in finding out if Mrs. Bentley had posted eight letters during a period of nearly a month? They might have been posted.
3332. If you had been told to watch Mrs. Bentley, do you think she could have managed to elude your vigilance eight times? She would not. If I saw her leaving the house, and watched her home, she could not; but she might afterwards.
3333. How? After she had gone home she might have gone out again.
3334. She might have done things without you seeing her when you were not looking at her; but could you not have such a system of being relieved that it would be impossible for Mr. or Mrs. Bentley to post letters without being detected? There might be. If I saw Mr. Bentley, I could watch him so that he could not post a letter without my seeing him at any of the pillars or post-offices.
3335. Is not your system perfect enough to see whether I or my wife post any letters from now to this time next month; don't you think you could find it out? If we kept you in view.
3336. Could you not manage to do it? One man could not.
3337. But could not a series of men do it? Yes; but they might be posted by servants or anyone else in the house.
3338. But then they would have to employ servants, and servants would know it? ———
3339. By Mr. Morris: You remember the 2nd May, when you were employed at Newtown to lie in concealment, and that also on that same day you were employed in watching Bentley's house till past midnight? Yes.
3340. You remember that day well? Yes.
3341. Can you remember whether Mr. Harrison left the Bentleys' house in the evening previous to your going on duty or not—it was a remarkable day that? I cannot say.
3342. By Mr. Johnson: Were you watching in the house at that time? Yes.
3343. By Mr. Morris: In the house? Yes, on the 2nd May.
3344. Did you let Mr. Harrison out of the house any time from 11 o'clock until 12 o'clock? He used to let himself out.
3345. Did he let himself out on that evening? I cannot say.
3346. By Mr. Johnson: Do you recollect his being there that night? I believe he was there.
3347. By the Chairman: Do you not know whether you left him there? No, sometimes he used to up-stairs and sometimes in the front room.
3348. You would know whether Mr. and Mrs. Bentley went to bed? I used to be down below. I knew when they used to go up-stairs, but whether they went to bed or not I do not know. Mr. Harrison used to go up-stairs, and they used to be talking.
3349. By Mr. Johnson: Do you know whether Boulanger was there on that night? He was there on several occasions, but I do not recollect whether he was there or not on that night.
3350. Did you see Mr. Harrison at the office that afternoon? I did.
3351. You never went up into the loft yourself? Only on one occasion, to see if there was anybody there.
3352. I understood you to say that you only put your head in? I only put my head in and part of my body, and put the candle in and looked round.
3353. What do you call the trap-door? The one in the ceiling looking into the roof.
3354. The skylight? The skylight with the cover on it.
3355. By the Chairman: The trap-door into the roof? Yes.
3356. By Mr. Johnson: That was the trap-door through which you put your head? Yes, there was another in the roof. I saw by holding up a candle that the covering was not off, and I retired back.
3357. By what means was the trap-door covered or fastened? I did not look at the fastening.
3358. Was there a door or anything but a loose piece of board at that time? It was like a shell to fit over the door.
3359. There were no hinges to it? I did not see any.
3360. Was it open when you went? It was on.
3361. Then you had to open it? No, that is the one in the roof.
3362. I do not mean that? That below was open.
3363. Do you know what means there were of closing that hole? No, it was open.
3364. By the Chairman: There was not a door over it at all? There was not a door over it at all.
3365. By Mr. Johnson: Did you ever happen to overhear any conversation between Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? No.
3366. By accident? No, I never wished to do so.
3367. Did they appear to speak in a tone of voice difficult to hear? They always seemed to speak in a very free manner—just the same as people would speak in company.
3368. I suppose you saw a good deal of them during the time you were in the house;—did you see them at meals together at all? No, there was a door betwixt us, the same as that (committee room) door might be there.
3369. Had you any opportunity of observing how they behaved to one another? They seemed to be on very good terms. I could not say. I did not discern anything wrong.
3370. They appeared to be very affectionate to one another and to their children? I found them so.

Mr. John Sanderson.

 28 Nov., 1862.

Mr. John
Sanderson.
28 Nov., 1862.

3371. Did you see anything in Mrs. Bentley's conduct other than you would expect from a most respectable lady? No; I always thought she was a very nice lady.

3372. By the Chairman: Did you ever see anything in the conduct of Mr. Bentley other than that of a very respectable gentleman? I did not.

3373. By Mr. Johnson: How did the servants behave towards their master and mistress? They seemed to be very good servants from what I could see. I never made any freedom with them. If they asked anything that did not relate to my duty I used to speak to them.

3374. Did you observe any unusual freedom between the Bentleys and their servants beyond what usually takes place between masters and servants? I did not.

3375. By the Chairman: There did not seem to be any secret understanding between them and the other servants, in any way whatever? No, not during my presence.

3376. By Mr. Johnson: Mr. Harrison never communicated to you his suspicions that the Bentleys were the authors of these anonymous letters—did he? No.

3377. Supposing you had entertained a strong suspicion that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were jointly concerned in posting these letters, what steps would you have taken? I had no idea that they were. I only obeyed orders.

3378. No, of course you were only in a subordinate position; but supposing you had come to the conclusion that they were the authors of the concern, what steps would you have taken in order to make that apparent to the world, or to detect them—supposing you were in Mr. Harrison's position? Well, I do not know exactly what steps I would have taken. I should have had to put my wits to work. I have no doubt I should have tried, but I cannot say what steps I should have taken.

3379. Would you not have taken every means in your power to watch both Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Bentley, as to the posting of letters, and would you not also have watched the servants? I should say it would have been a very good plan, but I cannot say whether that is the plan I should have adopted.

3380. I am not asking you to censure your superior officer; but does not that occur to you as being the most obvious step to be taken? I might have done it.

3381. Do you not think it the most obvious step of all to take—what other step so likely to lead to conviction could you have taken? I think that would have been the most likeliest way to find out who posted the letters.

3382. Could you not have so managed, while you and other detectives were relieving each other inside the house—would you have had any difficulty in finding out when Mrs. Bentley was writing letters? No, she might have been in her private room unbeknown to us.

3383. But could not you, with all your contrivances, manage to get a peep at what she was doing? No, I do not think so; in fact, the idea did not strike me, and I would not; I had more respect for Mr. and Mrs. Bentley. I never have looked into the room where they were sitting; I would scorn the action.

3384. But supposing you had come to the conclusion that they were the most accomplished impostors that ever existed? I might have taken extraordinary precautions.

3385. And that they were the authors of this so-called mystery—the concoctors of the letters—would you not have been able to take means, while you and the persons under your control were in the house, of seeing whether she did write letters? We could not see, rightly, in her own house.

3386. You think that is impossible? Yes.

3387. But you do not think it impossible that you could have detected either the one or the other in posting them? They might have been detected in posting them; but to write them they might have gone into the bed-room, or their private room, and shut the door, and we dare not go into their private room to see what they were doing. They could do that unbeknown to us; and even, in posting, any person that was inclined to get a letter posted would get it posted unbeknown to us; he would not post it himself.

3388. There is danger in employing an accomplice—is there not? There is a danger, but they are to be employed.

3389. By Mr. Lucas: Did you know a person of the name of Gibson? A man that was on Cockatoo Island.

3390. Did you know a Mr. Gibson? Yes.

3391. Is he in any way connected with the Police? No, I do not know that he is.

3392. Do you know that any person of that name was temporarily employed by Captain M'Lerie? No, I do not.

3393. Was there a person of the name of Gibson on Cockatoo Island? Yes. I was in the uniform Police, but not in the detective force, at that time.

TUESDAY, 2 DECEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

Mr. COWPER,		Mr. LUCAS,
Mr. LEARY,		Mr. MORRIS,
	Mr. WILSON.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Robert Johnson appeared as the Solicitor for the Petitioner.

Mr. William Camphin called in and examined:—

3394. By the Chairman: What are you? A constable in the detective police.
 3395. How long have you been engaged in the detective police? Since 1st March.
 3396. This year? Yes.
 3397. Were you previously in the police? In the uniform police.
 3398. How long were you in the uniform police? I joined the 13th May, 1858.
 3399. Have you any knowledge of a book termed the detective duty book? Yes.
 3400. For what purpose is it kept? For the purpose of entering the duty we have been upon during the day.
 3401. Every day? Yes; we make a sort of memorandum.
 3402. Do you make a report every day to the inspector of the detective police? No, not without something particular occurs. If we apprehend a person of course we report it to him, or to the clerk in the office.
 3403. Who gives you your duty—who tells you what duty you are to go on during the day? If there is anything particular to go on—if we are sent on anything particular—Inspector Harrison.
 3404. If not? If not, then of course we take our regular routine of duty.
 3405. You have a regular routine of duty? We go out for the purpose of catching thieves.
 3406. Do you go anywhere you like, anyhow you like, or do you get instructions? You generally go where you please, anywhere you think anything is to be done—that is about the streets.
 3407. Do you agree among yourselves what portion of you will go to one part of the town, and what portion will go to another? No; I might wish to go to a particular place, and I go there if I have got anything to do.
 3408. Do you go singly, or in pairs? Generally in pairs.
 3409. How do you know that all the force do not go to the same part of the City? Because if they were there I would see them there.
 3410. You are in the habit of seeing Inspector Harrison every day? Yes.
 3411. Do you give him any report of your proceedings? If anything is done; of course if I do not report anything to him he will know there is no apprehensions made.
 3412. Do you know of any alterations having been made in this detective duty book? No.
 3413. Do you know of any additions having been made to the entries in this detective duty book—Do you make the entries in your own handwriting? Yes, my own entries.
 3414. The entries which you sign are entered in your own handwriting? Yes.
 3415. Do you know anything of any addition being made to these entries by other persons? Yes.
 3416. What are they? "B." I believe it was during the time I was in Bentley's house attached to my duty.
 3417. When were all these "B's." placed there? I do not remember the date.
 3418. How were they placed there? Mr. Harrison placed them there.
 3419. At what time? I do not know the date.
 3420. By Mr. Morris: Two months ago? I think it is more than that—I think so.
 3421. By the Chairman: Were they put there at once? All that I saw were put there at once.
 3422. Tell the Committee what happened on that occasion and why it happened? Why it happened?
 3423. Is it usual that these entries should be made, or that you should be questioned with regard to your duty for months back at one particular time? On this occasion —
 3424. Answer that—Is it usual that you should be brought up and questioned with regard to your duty for months back? For particular duty.
 3425. That is usual? I do not say it is usual.
 3426. I asked you if it was done on other occasions? Not that I am aware.
 3427. Have you ever known it to be done previously? Not that I am aware.
 3428. Have you ever known it to be done since? I cannot say; I do not remember.
 3429. How is it you remember that particular instance and cannot remember any other instance? Because on that particular occasion I was called in by Mr. Harrison, and he pointed out where I was in Mr. Bentley's house. He said, "Is that correct," I said, "Yes," and he marked it.
 3430. Did your entries state that you were in Bentley's house? I am not aware; it was "special duty"; I think it was marked "from 7 to 10."
 3431. What was there in existence to enable you to state that you were at Mr. Bentley's at that particular time; had you any memorandum of your own? No.
 3432. Had you anything excepting your memory to guide you? No.
 3433. Was there anything in the entries themselves to fix the times when you were at Bentley's? The dates.

Mr. W.
Camphin.
2 Dec., 1862.

3434.

- Mr. W. Camphin.
 2 Dec., 1862.
3434. Can you remember the dates? Those particular dates I can.
 3435. Give us the dates upon which you were employed upon the Bentley business? I can only give the dates I was in the house, for a particular reason.
 3436. For what particular reason—were you in the house? - No, I say the reason I remember the date —
 3437. Is what? Because it was the last week in Lent, the three first days of the last week.
 3438. Do you remember any other days except those three days? I remember those are the days I was in the house.
 3439. Are those the only days that are marked? Marked with what?
 3440. B.? I do not know.
 3441. Were you asked with regard to any other days? I am not aware.
 3442. By Mr. Morris: Were you employed in the Bentley case any other days than those three? I was.
 3443. By the Chairman: You have not any memory of any other days but these? I was employed after these three days.
 3444. When did you know you were to appear before this Committee to give evidence? On Saturday I had the summons.
 3445. Had you any conversation with regard to coming before this Committee? Not particularly.
 3446. I ask you if you had any conversation at all with any person with regard to coming here? It has been spoken about.
 3447. In what way? I told Sanderson I was summoned—I believe I told him; as a general conversation it was spoken of.
 3448. What was the general conversation? I do not know.
 3449. Who was it with—who were present? I cannot say.
 3450. Remember you are here for the purpose of telling us all—who were there — ?
 3451. By Mr. Morris: Who besides Sanderson? I do not know that there was anybody.
 3452. By the Chairman: Cannot you say? There might have been, or there might not.
 3453. Who might have been? For instance, as I was walking along I saw him; I do not know whether I told him or — 3454. Have you seen Mr. Harrison this morning? Yes, I have seen him.
 3455. Why did you not tell us that before? I have spoken to him.
 3456. Why did you not say so when I asked you the question before—what did you say to Harrison, and what did he say to you? I might have made some general remarks.
 3457. Did he put you in remembrance that B. was put before the days when you were at Bentley's? No.
 3458. Did he tell you anything with regard to the duty book? He asked me if I remembered about the B., and I said I did.
 3459. Did he say anything else about B.? Not that I remember.
 3460. Tell us how he asked you if you remembered about B.? I cannot tell you the exact words.
 3461. Was it not something particular that you should be asked that question, and do you say you cannot remember how you were asked? I was asked the same as anyone else would ask.
 3462. Tell us how you were asked? I was asked "Do you remember about the B.'s being made?"
 3463. Were those the words used? I cannot say whether they were the exact words; I tell you the substance of it.
 3464. By Mr. Morris: What did you reply—do you remember? I remember when I was called in the B.'s being made.
 3465. Cannot you remember the date now? I cannot.
 3466. By Mr. Wilson: Can you tell the month when they were made? I cannot.
 3467. Can you tell within three months when they were made? I believe it was in May; I will not be certain.
 3468. By Mr. Morris: Did you compare your recollection with Sanderson as to why these "B.'s" were entered? I am not aware.
 3469. Have you ever heard Sanderson speak of it? Yes, I have.
 3470. Did his recollection and yours agree? I cannot remember.
 3471. Have you not some impression? I could not say whether they agreed or not.
 3472. By the Chairman: Have you heard that the police were to be on their trial before this Committee? I was not aware that I was to be tried.
 3473. Have you heard the remark made, that they were to be on their trial? I have heard they were to be examined.
 3474. Have you had any conversations about the examination? Conversations?
 3475. About the examination;—if you do not understand the question say so; do not repeat the question after me? I do not understand it properly.
 3476. Have you had any conversations about the examinations that are to take place before this Committee? I have had conversations —
 3477. With whom? I cannot remember.
 3478. By Mr. Wilson: You cannot remember any more than that you had conversations with respect to this Committee and the examinations taking place? I am not aware that I have spoken of the Committee.
 3479. Or of the examinations? That was to take place?
 3480. Or that had taken place? I have spoken to people about it.
 3481. Will you have the kindness to mention who you spoke to on the subject? Yes.
 (The witness paused.)

3482. Is your memory as bad in criminal cases you are engaged on as in this? I take particular notice in such cases.

3483. I should imagine it must be very different in criminal cases from what it is here; for if you have as bad a memory in criminal cases I cannot see what is the use of you?

3484. By the Chairman: I shall not ask any further questions; he seems to me determined not to answer any questions; it is perfect contempt? I will answer any question that I can conscientiously.

3485. I desire you will withdraw?

The witness withdrew.

The Committee Room was cleared.

The Committee deliberated.

The witness was again called in, and the examination was resumed.

3486. I am instructed by the Committee to inform you, that if you do not proceed to give your evidence in a more straightforward and direct manner, they will at once dispense with your attendance. You will therefore see the propriety of giving straightforward and definite answers? Where it is possible I am willing to give a definite answer.

3487. Will you be kind enough to tell us with whom you had these conversations relative to appearing before this Committee to give evidence? Do I understand you relative to myself or to anyone else?

3488. Relative to you or any other person—anything with reference to coming before this Committee, either with regard to you and Sanderson, or with regard to you and Harrison, or with regard to you and any other member of the force whatever, with regard to coming here and giving evidence before the Committee? I certainly cannot answer that question; if you will ask me any particular question, I will answer it.

3489. You say you have had conversations with persons regarding coming here—who were they? One is Mrs. Bentley's servant.

3490. When was that? During the last fortnight.

3491. Which servant? Maria.

3492. What was the conversation? I will give it you in substance, as near as I can; I cannot relate every word. I think it was Sunday fortnight I received a message that some one wanted me on Hyde Park. I went and saw Maria there, and she asked me if I had been at one of the concerts at the Philharmonic Hall. Of course I said I had, and she asked me some questions about whether I had seen a priest there speak to Mrs. Bentley, or speak within hearing of her; I do not know the exact words, but that is the substance of it, and I said I had not. I think she then told me that the priest had spoken to her, or within hearing of her.

3493. By Mr. Johnson: You think she said so? She made a remark about it, but I think these are the words that Mrs. Bentley had told her she said this priest had remarked—this was the night of the failure of the concert—the priest had made some remark about improper conduct, and he could give an opinion, but he dared not, on account of the cloth he wore. That was the substance of the remark. She made other remarks about what Mrs. Bentley had said to her about this priest.

3494. There was no doubt then it was a priest? I do not know; I did not see him.

3495. By Mr. Cowper: No doubt the girl said it was a priest? No doubt.

3496. What took place with the priest took place in the Philharmonic Hall that night? The night of the failure.

3497. By Mr. Johnson: That is the last concert, you mean? The concert—the failure.

3498. Do you mean the failure of the police to find the man, or the failure of Mrs. Bentley to play? It was when Mrs. Bentley did not play; when I understood she ought to have performed and did not do so.

3499. You did not answer the other part of Mr. Cowper's question.

3500. By Mr. Cowper: Whether the conversation took place in the Hall? In the Hall, or in the precincts of the Hall at any rate, when they were about to leave.

3501. By the Chairman: You are merely relating the conversation that took place between you and this girl; was that the whole of the conversation? No, we had much more—a great deal more.

3502. Will you go on with it? It will take me some time to remember it, it was so voluminous.

3503. Give us the entire length of it? She also said that Mrs. Bentley had told her that she saw a priest when she went out to Newtown very often, and she said he seemed to make it a point to meet her, as they seemed always to meet. She said she went out one day with Mrs. Bentley to see the priest—she wished to see him, but he did not come that day. She also said that Mrs. Bentley had mentioned something to her about the Exeter affair.

3504. Did she say what she had said to her? Yes, she said a person named Mr. Ryan, or Mr. Ryall, was the author of the alleged persecution in Exeter; that Mrs. Bentley said she knew him; and she said that when she was in the habit of going to school every day, a policeman followed her for the purpose of her pointing out the man; when she met him she was to drop her handkerchief as a signal. She said she often met him, but did not point him out, and she said it was very wrong of her, if she knew the parties, not to make it known, as some innocent people might be blamed.

3505. By Mr. Cowper: That is, the servant said so to her mistress? Yes; she also said that Mrs. Bentley had told her that she had met the priest one day, and he had told her that during the celebration of midnight mass, at St. Mary's, he had looked for her, expecting to see her there, but he did not see her there. The servant said that Mrs. Bentley had told her that she went into a shop in Market-street, to buy some wool with him one day, and she offered to work him a pair of slippers, but he told her he could not wear them, so she told him she would make him a pair of braces to wear.

- Mr. W. Camphin.
2 Dec., 1862.
3506. By the Chairman: Go on? I cannot remember any other particulars. That is about the substance of the conversation.
3507. Can you remember whether you suggested these things to the servant? No, I did not.
3508. Did this servant just stand and give you the narrative of these circumstances—did she stand up and tell you without your asking her questions? It came voluntarily from her.
3509. Did it come, not only voluntary, but without any questions on your part—had you any conversation in the matter at all? When she made a remark I might say yes, or something of that sort.
3510. By Mr. Cowper: You say she sent you a message to meet her? Yes.
3511. How did you get that message? Her aunt came on the first occasion.
3512. Maria's aunt? Yes, she told me she was her aunt; she said a person wished to see me on the Racecourse. I asked who it was, and she said Mrs. Bentley's servant. I said, "Which servant?" and she said, "Maria." I said, "What does she want with me?"—and that I would go and see her. I went over.
3513. By the Chairman: The time and place were arranged previously with the aunt? No, I went at once. She was waiting there, and then afterwards I received a note from her.
3514. By Mr. Morris: Have you got the note? I have not about me.
3515. Can you get it? I think I have it in my office. I left it there.
3516. By Mr. Cowper: You understood she sought this interview with the purpose of making some communication to you? Yes.
3517. That was your understanding? That was my understanding. Before I asked her any questions I said, "Are you sent by Mr. or Mrs. Bentley to speak to me?" She said, "No; merely from a desire to see justice done."
3518. What did you understand her to mean by desiring "to see justice done"? She said somebody might be accused wrongfully about the alleged persecution, and that she wished to state what she knew. She said there was no malice about what she was going to say, but that she spoke merely from a desire to see justice done to both parties.
3519. By the Chairman: Did you ask her if there was any malice? She told me voluntarily; she spoke it herself; I did not ask her.
3520. By Mr. Cowper: What did she mean by justice to be done between the parties—did she mean to say this priest was the party? She seemed to think this priest was alleged to be connected in some way with Mrs. Bentley, and she had made inquiries and found it not to be true, therefore it caused her to entertain doubts about what Mrs. Bentley had told her.
3521. Did she name this priest? No; she said she asked Mrs. Bentley to describe him, so as to have an opportunity of finding out who he was. She said Mrs. Bentley gave her a vague description. She said she described several priests at St. Mary's, and to see if Mrs. Bentley could recognize one amongst them, and she could not.
3522. Write a note for that letter, sent to you by the servant, to be sent up here? I do not know whether they can find it.
3523. Do you know where it is? The last time I saw it it was on the table.
3524. Mr. Harrison must know where it is? Yes.
3525. By Mr. Wilson: Are you a married man? No.
3526. By Mr. Morris: Are you a Protestant? No; a Roman Catholic.
3527. By the Chairman: Do you know if the letter is in Mr. Harrison's pocket? No, I do not.
3528. Did you give it to Mr. Harrison? I did; but I think I have had it since.
3529. Were you not told in your summons to bring all papers and documents with you? I do not know.
3530. You got a summons? Yes; but I do not think it mentions anything of that kind.
3531. Have you it with you?
- Mr. Harrison having been called in, was directed to fetch the letter sent by Anna Maria Bradshaw to Camphin.*
3532. When did you receive this letter, before or after you saw this Maria's aunt? After.
3533. It was after the conversation you have described? Yes.
3534. Have you not detailed two conversations? I have mixed it up I expect. I had a conversation.
3535. By Mr. Cowper: You had two conversations? Two or three.
3536. You have been mixing them all up together? Yes.
3537. When did the second conversation take place, and when the third? Before we parted on the Sunday night—the first interview —
3538. By Mr. Johnson: The first interview was last Sunday week? Either last Sunday week or fortnight—I think fortnight—it was agreed to meet on the Friday night following.
3539. Did that interview take place? Not on the Friday previously to Friday I received this note I speak of, changing the appointment to Wednesday.
3540. By the Chairman: Did you meet her then? I did.
3541. What took place then. What was the first thing that took place? —
3542. By Mr. Cowper: Did she allude to the priest in the first conversation? Yes, and in the second also. She said that Mrs. Bentley had told her that she had met this priest at the Government ball.
3543. By the Chairman: On the second time was this? I will not be certain whether she made this remark on the second or the first time.
3544. Be kind enough to tell us what took place the first? I cannot distinctly remember.

3545. By Mr. Johnson : Will you state, as nearly as you can recollect, what you say took place at the first interview between you and Maria, confining yourself as far as you are able, to what took place then? I cannot state the conversation that took place exactly on the first interview. I can state a portion of it—the commencement about the priest's speaking to her at the Philharmonic Concert, that was at the first conversation, and about the priest seeing her in the omnibus going out to Newtown, that was in the first conversation.

Mr. W.
Camphin.

2 Dec., 1862.

3546. By the Chairman : It was at the first conversation that Mrs. Bentley stated that she had seen the priest going out to Newtown? That Mrs. Bentley stated to her.

3547. Was it on that occasion she stated she had gone with Mrs. Bentley to meet the priest? I think so. She said she did not go to meet the priest, but she wished to see him —

3548. She did not go with Mrs. Bentley? I understood so.

3549. By Mr. Johnson : For the purpose of seeing him, if he was to be seen? I am not aware whether there was any arrangement between Mrs. Bentley and her.

3550. What I understand you to say is, that the girl went with Mrs. Bentley, and that her object was to see if she could see the priest? Yes, the girl's object.

3551. That was at the first interview? Yes.

3552. By the Chairman : What else took place at the first interview? I think she said on the first interview I had with her, she said Mrs. Bentley had told her she had met him at Government House, at the Government Ball, and that she had shaken hands with him.

3553. Anything farther do you remember taking place at the first interview? I cannot say, not to be sure.

3554. Did the conversation about the Exeter affair occur at the first conversation? It did at the first conversation.

3555. Was that the time she stated she had told Mrs. Bentley it was very wrong for her not to recognize the party—not to drop her handkerchief when she met the person? I think it was.

3556. Did the conversation about the midnight mass take place at that time? Yes, I believe that was at the first conversation also.

3557. When did the conversation about the slippers take place? That was either the second or the third.

3558. Is there anything further that you recollect taking place at the first conversation? I cannot recollect.

3559. By Mr. Johnson : How long after that was it that you actually met—the second interview—when was it after the first? On Wednesday evening following.

3560. By Mr. Morris : What conversation had you, and what were your objects in meeting, when you made your appointment with Maria—what were your objects—what were the alleged objects? She did not allege any object. My object, of course, was, if she had anything further to say, to give her an opportunity of doing so.

3561. By Mr. Johnson : Why did she not tell you then? She might not remember all then; she might refresh her memory.

3562. By the Chairman : Did a conversation to that effect take place between you and her? No; I merely supposed that.

3563. Was there not an understanding, that if she remembered anything else —? It was not expressed.

3564. How did you understand you were to meet on Friday night? We appointed to meet.

3565. For what purpose? I said before, that if she remembered anything further, to give her an opportunity of telling me.

3566. Was that understood? I understood so.

3567. Did you give her to understand that that was your object? No.

3568. Were you making love to her? No.

3569. Was she making love to you? No.

3570. If there was nothing of that kind there must have been something else—what was the object you had in view when you agreed to meet her? That was the object.

3571. What was the mutual object? I expect that was her object.

3572. There was nothing to lead you to know that? Nothing further than that we had been conversing about the subject.

3573. How did you make this appointment—how was it understood—what were the words? I believe the words used were, as near as I can remember, I told her that I would see her again sometime.

3574. By Mr. Morris : So that you made the appointment? I think I asked her what night she was coming out again, and said I would see her again.

3575. By the Chairman : You suggested Friday night? No.

3576. She suggested Friday night? Yes.

3577. Did she state any reason why she could meet you on Friday night? No, I do not think so.

3578. By Mr. Johnson : Did you ask her at the first interview if she had any more information to give you respecting Mrs. Bentley? No, I did not.

3579. Did she intimate that she had any further information to give you? She made a remark that she had had so many conversations with her, or that she had made so many remarks that she did not remember all.

3580. What did you say to that? I allowed her to speak. I did not make answer to many things.

3581. Had you any particular engagement that prevented your conversing any longer with her on the first occasion? No.

3582. Do you know whether she had? I am not aware.

3583. At what time of the day or night did this take place? It was about 10 minutes to 7 when I first met her.

3584.

- Mr. W. Camphin.
2 Dec., 1862.
3684. How long did you have conversation together? I saw her when she was coming out of Church; that would be about 8 o'clock; it was then the conversation took place.
3585. Did any conversation take place before she went into Church? I told her I would see her when she came out of Church if she wished to speak to me.
3586. Were those the first words that passed between you? No, the first words were, she asked me—she said she wished to ask me a question, “Was I not at the concert?” I then asked her if she had been sent by Mr. or Mrs. Bentley to ask me questions, for if she had I would not answer her—I would see her when she came out of Church.
3587. How did you know she was going to Church? Because I asked her.
3588. Did you ask her or did she tell you she was going to Church? I said, “Are you going to Church?” I will see you when you come out.
3589. By Mr. Johnson: Was it to St. Mary's or to St. James'? To St. Mary's—I cannot remember every word; we had plenty of conversation afterwards.
3590. By the Chairman: When you met this girl by appointment, did you think for a single moment that she appointed to meet you to tell you she was going to Church? Certainly not—I say she asked me if I was at the concert.
3591. Do you think she met you to ask you that one question; is it likely that when you went you would simply ask her if she was going to Church. What induced you to think she was going to Church after having made an appointment to meet you? She sent for me—
3592. Do you think she sent for you in order to tell you that she was going to Church? Certainly not.
3593. What induced you to think she was going to Church when she had appointed to meet you? She was near the Church.
3594. She came to meet you for a definite purpose? She sent her aunt to me, and as I walked along the walk towards St. Mary's, at the entrance from the Racecourse, she was walking up and down there.
3595. Did you go to Church yourself? I did not.
3596. Where did you appoint to meet her? Outside.
3597. Do you not think it was a matter of some importance when you were giving an account before of this interview, to tell us that this conversation was interrupted by her going to Church? I do not know.
3598. If you were giving evidence in a Court upon a criminal case, would you give it in the same way? I would not be asked in the same way, but the questions would be more direct.
3599. Perhaps you, as a policeman, would not be asked such questions, but if a criminal were asked to account for where he had been at a certain time, would not he be? He might be. (Mr. Harrison produced a letter.)
3600. Is that the letter you have referred to (Handing witness the letter)? Yes, that is the letter.
3601. When did you see her on the second occasion? On the Wednesday evening mentioned there.
3602. How did you receive that letter? I believe—
3603. Do not you know how you received it? Her aunt brought it.
3604. When did she bring it? I believe it was on Wednesday afternoon—either morning or afternoon.
3605. Who is her aunt? I do not know.
3606. Had you no conversation with her aunt? No further than I have stated.
3607. What have you stated? That when she came to me she said a person wanted to see me on the Racecourse. I asked her who wanted me; she said, “Mrs. Bentley's servant;” I asked her which, and she said, “Maria.”
3608. That was the first time; the second I am asking you about? She handed me the letter, and I said, “Thank you”; I did not say anything further.
3609. What took place on that occasion when you met Maria—on the second occasion;—where did you meet in the first place? At the top of King-street, opposite Hyde Park Barracks.
3610. What took place? The conversation was about the Bentley case.
3611. What part of it? I think it was the occasion when she spoke of Mrs. Bentley saying the priest went in with her, into the shop in Market-street, to buy wool; I think, but I am not certain.
3612. Do you remember anything that you are certain of, that occurred at that interview? I think she said that the priest—that Mrs. Bentley had told the girl that the priest had frequently seen her out with the children.
3613. By Mr. Cowper: Seen herself? Seen the girl out with the children, and had been so close that he could describe the colour of one of the boys' eyes to Mrs. Bentley; and she made a remark to Mrs. Bentley that he must have been invisible, that she had not seen him, and that if he had got so close to her she must have seen him.
3614. By the Chairman: Anything else? I think it was at the second conversation she said either Mr. or Mrs. Bentley had asked her what she thought of the Jesuits? She said she thought they were a good body of men, but that of course some among them—the same as in every body of men—were not what they ought to be. She said that either Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, whoever it was that was talking to her, said that the Jesuits did not care what means they employed to any object they had in view. I cannot remember—
3615. By Mr. Morris: On this second occasion, or upon any previous occasion, did Maria Bradshaw express any opinion of her own with regard to the connection of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley with this case, as to whether she believed that they themselves were the concoctors? She did not go so far as that; she said—
3616. How far did she go? She said that in consequence of the remarks Mrs. Bentley had made about a priest, she began to entertain grave doubts about Mrs. Bentley.
- 3617.

3617. By Mr. Wilson: Are you aware whether this girl is a Protestant or a Roman Catholic? A Roman Catholic.
3618. She will then naturally be rather jealous of anything said about a priest? It would not induce her to make — 3619. I ask you if she will not naturally be jealous of anything said to the injury of a priest? Not if she is an honest-minded person.
3620. I want you to give me a distinct answer to my question—do you think it would cause her to be jealous of any remarks made derogatory to a priest? It is possible it might.
3621. By Mr. Morris: What else did she say that led you to think she suspected the Bentleys' innocence? I cannot remember anything more at present.
3622. Did you tell Maria Bradshaw that the Jesuits were suspected, and that the priests were suspected? I did not.
3623. You made no remark of the sort to lead her to suppose that was the case? She told me.
3624. Did you —? I did not.
3625. By Mr. Lucas: What did she tell you? She told me, from the time she saw the letter that appeared in the paper—I think it was the Empire—about the Exeter affair, it caused her to inquire into these things.
3626. From the time she saw the letter that appeared in the Empire she was induced to look into these things? Yes.
3627. What then? In consequence of what Mrs. Bentley had said about this priest, and seeing a priest was connected with the Exeter affair, caused her to make inquiries whether it was true what Mrs. Bentley had stated about this priest.
3628. Anything more? I do not remember—no doubt there might be more, but I cannot distinctly remember at present; it will come to my memory shortly.
3629. By the Chairman: When did the third interview take place? I saw her on Sunday night last.
3630. By Mr. Morris: By appointment? Yes.
3631. By the Chairman: When was that appointment made? Let me see; I met her in the street on Friday morning, I think it was.
3632. Was that the interview —? I said to her then, "I will see you on Sunday night."
3633. Was that all you said when you met her in the street on Friday? Yes. No; I said I was going up to the Committee on Tuesday.
3634. You said that on Friday? No, it was Saturday; I had not received the summons on Friday.
3635. Was it on Friday or Saturday you saw her? I am not certain whether it was on Sunday evening I told her I was going before the Committee.
3636. Can you tell whether it was Friday or Saturday? I believe it was Friday—I could not be certain.
3637. I thought you told us you had a good memory? No, I do not think I said so.
3638. Did you not, in the early part of your examination, say that you remembered every occasion when you were at Bentleys'? I gave a reason for my memory, on account of its being the last three days in Lent.
3639. By Mr. Wilson: With regard to your memory, do you mean to say that you have not a good memory? I have no reason to complain of my memory.
3640. Have you a good or a bad memory? I think it is as good as the generality of people's.
3641. By the Chairman: Are you aware that there are B.'s before your entries in these daily duty books on other than the three days? I am not aware.
3642. Do you know anything of such entries, if they are there? They may be there; I have not examined it since.
3643. I do not ask you whether they may be there—have you any knowledge of such entries, if they are there? No.
3644. You have given no information of such a nature as to cause them to be placed there? At the time I was called in I might have done, not since.
3645. You would then have to trust to memory? At the time.
3646. At the time you gave them you would have to trust to memory? Yes.
3647. Would there then be any similar-circumstance to the last three days in Lent that would enable you to fix the date? I am not aware; of course my memory would be fresher than now.
3648. Would it be fresher than it would be now with regard to what occurred last Friday or Saturday? I do not understand you properly.
3649. Would what occurred last Friday or Saturday be more fresh in your memory than what occurred some months ago? Yes.
3650. Cannot you remember whether it was last Friday or Saturday you met the girl? I think it was Friday. I will call some circumstances to mind that will settle it. I believe it was Friday; I cannot be certain.
3651. You still cannot be certain? Yes.
3652. By Mr. Johnson: Was it an accidental meeting? I apprehended a man in King-street — Yes, it was accidental. I believe now it was Saturday. I will tell you the reason. I apprehended a man in King-street, and when I was taking him to the office I saw her. He was brought up on Monday morning—he was remanded on Monday.
3653. By the Chairman: So it was Saturday? Yes.
3654. And you could have told her that you were going to appear before the Committee? I had not received the summons till Saturday night.
3655. Had you not seen Constable Sanderson? Yes, I must have seen him.
3656. Had you not seen Inspector Harrison? Not previously to —

Mr. W.
Camplin.

2 Dec., 1862.

- Mr. W. Camphin.
2 Dec., 1862.
3657. Had not they told you you would be summoned before the Committee? I understood I was to appear, but I had not received any summons.
3658. Did you tell her on that occasion that you were going to appear before the Committee? I think I told her then I was going to appear on Tuesday.
3659. And in consequence you would like to have some conversation with her on Sunday? I did not say so. I simply said "I will see you on Sunday night."
3660. Did you tell her you wanted to converse with her before appearing before the Committee? No.
3661. By Mr. Morris: What was your object in making another appointment with her after having had two long interviews? For the purpose —
3662. By Mr. Wilson: Were you trying to get the affections of this girl? No.
3663. You have never been making love to her? No.
3664. Have you ever made any appointment with her at any other times besides those you have narrated to the Committee now? No.
3665. You have been a good deal in Bentley's house with her? On three occasions.
3666. Had you a good deal of intercourse with her at those times? No, no farther than I was compelled —
3667. Whether you were compelled or not—had you any intercourse with her, whether compulsory or not? What sort of intercourse?
3668. Had you any communication with her? I have spoken to her in a friendly way; I have bid her "good night" when she has gone to bed.
3669. Have you said "good evening" to her when you have met her? No, I have met her on many occasions, and have never spoken to her.
3670. The only conversation you had with her, when you were in Bentley's house, was bidding her "good night" when she was going to bed? I may have spoken to her.
3671. Will you state to the Committee if you have had much conversation with her? Not much.
3672. By the Chairman: What occurred on the third interview with her on the Sunday night? I made a mistake; it was Sunday morning, after she came out of Church.
3673. What occurred—where did you see her? When she came out of Church, at St. Mary's.
3674. Where did you meet her? Outside, near the lamp.
3675. Outside St. Mary's? Yes.
3676. By Mr. Cowper: At what hour of the day? About 9 in the morning.
3677. By the Chairman: What occurred? She said that Mrs. Bentley—she had been told that Mrs. Bentley had been crying the Sunday previous on the verandah—a week last Sunday; she did not see this herself, but she had been told, I think, by her fellow servant. I think that is the person she said she was told by—I am not certain—and she said she had been told Mr. Bentley did not wish to bring them up without he was pressed to do so, and that Mr. Boulanger had been there.
3678. By Mr. Wilson: When? The same day.
3679. By the Chairman: The same day—that was Sunday? A week last Sunday.
3680. Did she say who told her that Mr. Bentley did not wish to bring them up if he could help it? No, I do not think she did.
3681. We ought to have that conversation right off—You went on duty for the express purpose of hearing what she said? No, I was not on duty.
3682. Did not this communication come to you at the Police Office? No, I met her.
3683. The first communication? Yes.
3684. Were you not on duty when you went to see who was the person that wanted you? On the first occasion.
3685. Did not every other occasion arise from that? Yes.
3686. By Mr. Cowper: At all times you surely must be considered on duty in that sense? Yes.
3687. By Mr. Lucas: If you were not on duty, what were you doing with this girl? I went to Church myself.
3688. By the Chairman: You were there by appointment? I had appointed to meet her, but I could have gone without —
3689. By Mr. Cowper: Go on, and tell what the conversation was? She remarked that she herself thought it strange that Ada—I think she called Mrs. Bentley's girl—should be put to sleep in the room where the holes had been bored; she said she had slept there one night by herself—the child had. I think that is all the conversation that took place.
3690. How long were you with her? From the time we walked from St. Mary's round the Domain—she went home, and I left her.
3691. Were you talking all the way? Yes.
3692. Were these three sentences all that were said—that Mrs. Bentley had been crying; that Mr. Bentley did not wish the servants to be brought up; and that she thought it strange the little girl should be put to sleep in the room with the holes in the ceiling? That is all I can remember in connection with the Bentley case.
3693. Was there any other conversation carried on? There might have been some private conversation that does not interfere with the Committee.
3694. You do not know whether it interferes with the Committee or not—did you not meet this girl officially, to see her in relation to this Bentley case? Yes.
3695. What took place at this interview—let us judge whether it relates to the matter: Do you consider that you have a right to judge what you shall tell the Committee, and what you shall keep from them? Most decidedly not; anything I remember I will state.
3696. State what took place with this girl during the whole of this interview on Saturday—tell us everything that occurred, or say you will not? I will if I can.

3697. Can you? I cannot remember anything more.
3698. By Mr. Cowper: Did you talk about the weather? I cannot say; I have said all that I remember; it takes some time to speak all that.
3699. By Mr. Lucas: How long were you in her company? I must have been a quarter of an hour.
3700. By Mr. Morris: Upon this last occasion did she express any opinion with regard to Mrs. Bentley being herself, or Mr. and Mrs. Bentley being themselves, the concoctors of this so-called mystery? She seemed to say it was very strange; she did not actually say they were.
3701. She led you to suppose ——? I inferred from her manner that she thought so.
3702. Mr. Inspector Harrison was acquainted, no doubt, with these interviews that you had with this girl? Yes, he knew.
3703. He knew, and you arranged before ——? I do not know that he knew before—he knew after.
3704. By the Chairman: He knew before the interview took place? I am not aware that he knew of all before they took place; in fact he did not know of the first till after.
3705. What time after? I think the following day.
3706. By Mr. Morris: Did he assist you with any suggestion as to what kind of questions you should put? I am not aware that I put any questions to the girl.

Mr. W.
Camphin.

2 Dec., 1862.

Anna Maria Bradshaw called in and examined:—

3707. By the Chairman: You are servant to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
3708. How long have you been in their service? About twelve months last April—the middle of April.
3709. By Mr. Cowper: How old are you? Twenty-six, nearly.
3710. By the Chairman: Have they been kind employers to you? Yes, very.
3711. Do you know any person of the name of Camphin? Yes, I do.
3712. Have you written a letter to him? Written a letter to him? Yes.
3713. What was the purport of that letter? I do not recollect it now.
3714. Was it making an appointment with him? Yes, it was.
3715. Is that the letter (handing witness the letter sent to Camphin)? Yes.
3716. Is that your own writing? It is not; it was dictated by me.
3717. Who wrote it? My aunt.
3718. Who is your aunt? Mrs. Hynes.
3719. Can you read that letter? Yes, I think I can. I do not think I can manage to get my nerves up, but it is sufficient to know that I know the writing.
3720. If you know the writing, can you read it? (The witness read portions of the letter.) My sight is not very good. I cannot see so clearly without a glass. I generally use a glass for reading. I can tell you the purport of the note.
3721. Did you ask your aunt to write that letter? I did.
3722. For what purpose? The reason—I suppose I may as well give you an explanation of the reason I first had for doing so; it will be clear then. My first reason was because that I had been informed by Mrs. Bentley that she had been accustomed to meet a priest once or twice every week. I had spoken to her on the matter before. I said it was very suspicious about this priest, whether he might be a priest or not; and I told her on one occasion that I had made it my business to know whether he was a priest or not, and had inquired. I had asked several whether it was the case, and found out it was not. Then I determined to ask a person that I knew was at the concert, whether he had seen a person in the garb of a priest, or one who might be taken as such, near or within hearing of Mrs. Bentley, on the night of the concert.
3723. Had Mrs. Bentley told you she had seen a priest at the concert? Yes, Mrs. Bentley told me so.
3724. Did she state where she had seen the priest? He sat near her, she said, or behind her, and as she was coming out he was within hearing of her.
3725. Which concert was that? The concert at the Philharmonic Hall. I cannot tell the date, for I did not take notice as to dates.
3726. Do you remember anything particular about the night? Yes, it was the night the President, or the Vice-President, refused to lead Mrs. Bentley on the platform; that was the night.
3727. Mrs. Bentley told you that a priest was sitting near her or at the back of her? She told me a few days after the concert. She appeared to know the priest; that was my reason for inquiring. I thought perhaps she might have been wrong in thinking him to be a priest; that he might have wished to impose himself upon her as one. So I made inquiries, because Mrs. Bentley told me after last Christmas—I had been to midnight mass with the other servant—she told me the next day after going to Newtown, that he said he had looked all round thinking to see her at the midnight mass, so that I knew it must have been one of the three that were there. Both Mary and I described, as nearly as we could, for she told me it was not either of the first two, and Mrs. Bentley supposed the third one was the person whom she saw.
3728. Who did you make these inquiries of? I made inquiries of one person that I knew to be at the mass, and the other person to be a friend of hers as near as I could know; and I found it was not a priest at all that was the third assistant. I got to know his name; he was sub-deacon; but Mrs. Bentley said she knew he was a priest in reality, for she saw him speaking speaking to the Archbishop, and also to Dean Sumner, and several other things which made her know that he was a priest; and that he also used to go with her to Newtown once a week, or sometimes twice a week.

3729. By Mr. Morris: Did she describe the priest to you? She did not. Both Mary and I here described different priests, and asked her if she thought it was such a person, and from her account it seemed she thought he was a person of about middle height, rather stout, had rather a careless walk, and hair a little curly, which was dark brown, rather affable looking; that was the description. Mary and I were anxious to know whether it was a priest or not, for we had no idea or thought of this till the matter of Exeter came out, and then seeing whoever it was that practised the deceit, it was a falsehood, and that made me make the inquiry.

3730. By the Chairman: This was all since this letter about Exeter was published? All since that; nothing at all before that; but Mrs. Bentley's statement was before that—entirely before that—but my inquiry has been since.

3731. Of whom did you inquire about this? The name I do not know. It was a person I saw on the Racecourse; without their knowing me or I them, and I asked her what person had this friend of hers seen at midnight mass; could she make inquiry of the person and get to know the name of the person who assisted at midnight mass? She said she had heard his name, but would inquire more particularly. I said, "I have a reason particular to know." She did so in the course of a few days, and told me he was not a priest but sub-deacon.

3732. Do you know who this person was you spoke to on the Racecourse? No; it is a young girl who is there—I do not know her name; I could get her address.

3733. From whom did you get the information relating to Mrs. Bentley being at the concert? I got that from Mr. Camphin, for I asked him; he was a long time before he would make any explanation, wishing my reasons why I wished to know; and I told him if he had been a priest he deserved punishment, and if he was not a priest, but one who assumed the garb, he equally deserved to be punished.

3734. By Mr. Wilson: Where had you this conversation with Camphin? In the street.

3735. By the Chairman: In what part of the City? I cannot exactly say; it was in the City—some part about.

3736. Do you remember where? I cannot say what part; the words were pronounced in the City or about.

3737. Do you remember when this conversation took place—how long ago? Not many weeks; but I cannot exactly say the day of the month.

3738. Was it before you wrote that letter? Yes, that is as near as I can remember. I am not certain whether anything occurred before it, but I do not think there was.

3739. Had you seen Camphin before that letter was written? Yes, I had, and had made the inquiry. Oh! Now I recollect, it was on Sunday evening I made inquiry concerning —

3740. It was before you wrote the letter? Yes.

3741. Had you a long conversation with Camphin? No, I do not think it was very long.

3742. Was it principally about Mrs. Bentley? Yes; I think that constituted the conversation.

3743. I suppose you made acquaintance with Mr. Camphin when he was in the house? No, Camphin and I were perfect strangers to each other—in fact I think I saw him only twice while he was in the house.

3744. When was the first time you met him after he had been in the house? That was the first time after he had been in the house; only once I remember seeing him at the door as I opened it—he came with a note—that was the only time I ever met him.

3745. Was anyone with him when you met him in the street on the first occasion? Not anyone; we were alone. It was on the Racecourse—not very private.

3746. Do you know what time in the day it was? It was about half-past 6 in the evening, or between that and Church time.

3747. Was it on Sunday? It was on Sunday.

3748. Had you any conversation with him after that—did you go to Church that night? Yes.

3749. Did you see him after Church? Yes; it was after Church. I merely made the inquiry, and he had not promised to give the answer till afterwards—he did not tell me he would answer the question. I asked him whether there was such a person at the concert.

3750. Did he say there was? He did not tell me. He told me afterwards there was no such person there.

3751. When you told him —? I told him the several conversations with Mrs. Bentley that had taken place; not the entire conversations, but part of them.

3752. Did you make an appointment to meet him again that night? After that?

3753. Yes? No, I did not.

3754. Before you parted that night, after Church time, did you make an appointment to see Camphin upon some other occasion? Yes, I did.

3755. When did you make an appointment to meet him? I think the next time I saw him was Wednesday night.

3756. The first time you met Camphin did you meet him accidentally? No, I did not.

3757. In consequence of what did you meet Mr. Camphin? I told my aunt to go to the office and ask for him, and to tell him a person wanted to see him; she did so, and he came to me.

3758. When did you meet him afterwards? After Wednesday?

3759. After? I saw him on the Friday night.

3760. You are sure it was Friday night? Yes.

3761. What did you speak about then? I should think it was something on the same, because I did not of course give the whole night. I had other business—the whole night was not to be taken up with him, or upon that.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.

2 Dec., 1862.

3762. Did you meet him by appointment? Yes; I said I would.
3763. Do not you remember what occurred—how long were you with him, or in his company? I cannot exactly say.
3764. Were you a quarter of an hour? Yes, I dare say I was an hour.
3765. Did you meet him again in the street? In the street after that?
3766. Yes —? Yes, I was out on the Thursday, I think. I do not know what day it was—I remember it was Thursday, the day of the week, at least I think it was Thursday; I met him accidentally as he was waiting for the omnibus, going, I think, up to Paddington.
3767. Was anyone with him? No, there was not; he was alone.
3768. Had you a long conversation? No, we had not; he was going by the omnibus, and I was going on business.
3769. Did he make an appointment when he would meet you again? I do not recollect now how that was.
3770. On Friday you had an hour's conversation? Yes, I dare say we had.
3771. What was the conversation principally? It was not all upon that; perhaps we went farther, a little distance, and the conversation perhaps turned upon indifferent subjects—upon Home and the country; it did not take up the whole of our time.
3772. Did he mention to you that he was going to appear before the Committee? He did, upon some time; but cannot say upon what time.
3773. Is the Thursday you are alluding to, the last Thursday? No, it was not the last Thursday; I think it was a week last Thursday, but I am not quite certain. I only remember the day of the week—its being on the Thursday.
3774. Did you see him last Saturday? No, I did not.
3775. On Saturday? Yes, I did; I saw him on Saturday.
3776. Where was he then? Crossing the Racecourse, and I was crossing it too.
3777. Was there anyone with him? No.
3778. Were you long with him? No; it was just merely — 3779. Walking? No, I merely spoke, as anyone might do; there was not any conversation at that time.
3780. Did he at that time make any appointment to meet you at any other time? Yes, he asked me when I would be at liberty. I said I would be able of course to see him on Sunday as I came out of Church.
3781. At what time? After the 8 o'clock service—about half-past 9 or a quarter past 9.
3782. What was the conversation when you met him on that occasion? The conversation I cannot say, for it was a very short time, very short, as I was obliged to go home.
3783. Was it anything concerning Mrs. Bentley? I do not remember what it was. I know it was very short, and of very little moment.
3784. By Mr. Morris: Did he not tell you what he wished from you, having made an appointment with you? On Sunday morning?
3785. Yes? I do not remember his having done so.
3786. Did he not tell you why he had made an appointment? No, I do not remember his alluding to the reason. I know the first time he was quite, of course not only indifferent, but was he willing to answer me a single question upon the matter—wishing to know my motives, what they could be. Of course I said my motives were motives of justice, whoever were innocent could not come to any harm; and if the truth were made known, it would be the better for them; if guilty, no matter to me who they were, they deserved to be punished.
3787. By the Chairman: Did you make any communication to him on Sunday about the Bentley case? On Sunday?
3788. By Mr. Johnson: That is the day before yesterday? Yes, I believe I did.
3789. By the Chairman: Do you remember what it was? I can remember a few words; they were but few words that were spoken. I can remember telling him that the other servant told me that Mr. Boulanger had called on Mr. Bentley the other evening; she did not think Mrs. Bentley had seen him, but Mr. Bentley had gone out with him; but Mrs. Bentley, she had heard her crying. That was all I stated. I do not remember anything farther.
3790. By Mr. Morris: Have you made another appointment to meet Mr. Camphin? Yes, I did.
3791. Where are you to meet Mr. Camphin? I am to see him to-night.
3792. By the Chairman: Did Mr. Camphin shew any unwillingness to converse with you on the Bentley matter after this conversation you had with him, when you informed him that you merely wished to see justice done to all? No, I do not think he did; as far as I can judge he did not appear to.
3793. Was he rather anxious that you should speak about the Bentley case? He did not appear so.
3794. Did he ask you questions with regard to Mrs. Bentley? He might have done so; it is just natural to suppose he did.
3795. Did you volunteer this information—did you say, "Mr. Camphin, Mrs. Bentley was crying on one occasion; Mr. Boulanger called on Mr. Bentley,"—did you tell him that Mrs. Bentley had done so-and-so, or said so-and-so, or did he ask you questions, to elicit this information? No, I believe it was mostly voluntarily. I selected him as I considered he was a conscientious person who would speak the truth. I was not biassed by any person, whether relative or religious.
3796. By Mr. Wilson: Were you aware that he was a Catholic? Yes, and for that reason I did not expect he could be mistaken with regard to what a priest should be like.
3797. By Mr. Morris: Have you had any conversation with any priest upon the Bentley subject? I have had a conversation with him.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.

2 Dec., 1862

3798. And related all these circumstances to him? No, I have not, for no priest would take any public matters of that sort into consideration.

3799. Have you related at all any of the circumstances that you are acquainted with, in regard to the Bentley case, to any priest? I have inquired of a priest if there was such a person at St. Mary's, or did he know of anyone going with a lady or Mrs. Bentley to Newtown; the priest told me no, he knew nothing of such a person; he knew no such lady.

3800. By the Chairman: Did you have any conversation with Camphin about Mrs. Bentley asking you what the Jesuits were, and about their being very bad people? Yes, I did; I related everything I thought of, or knew, as far as the time allowed.

3801. Everything you knew you told Camphin? Everything. Of course a great deal I heard from Mrs. Bentley, which I thought a matter of indifference, which Mrs. Bentley herself will remember.

3802. By Mr. Morris: Did you intend to give Mr. Camphin the impression that you thought Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were themselves the concoctors? No, I did not say any such thing. I said it was a very curious thing that such things could have occurred, and of course I did not know who could have been the persons, but if Mr. or Mrs. Bentley had anything to do with it, they would see whether Mrs. Bentley knew anything of it. She told me she knew the person at Exeter, and I told her that very likely the person that made the mischief at Exeter would do it here, and no matter what the consequences might be to anyone she ought to tell. She never gave me an opportunity of telling her the measures I would have taken.

3803. Has Mrs. Bentley conversed with you upon this case since this Committee has been appointed? No, she has not. I do not think she has spoken to me at all since then, but I asked her on one occasion about it—I think upon two occasions—whether such a thing was to be or not; she said no, there was to be a reward offered—I believe that was it—that it was all over about it; but that a reward was to be offered by the Government for the apprehension of the guilty parties.

3804. By Mr. Johnson: How long ago? On the Prince of Wales' birthday I think was the day I asked her; I am not certain but I think that was the day.

3805. By the Chairman: Did you tell Camphin that it was a very curious thing that Mrs. Bentley should put little Ada to sleep in the room where there were holes in the ceiling? Yes, I did.

3806. Why was it a curious thing? I think if these people are so very revengeful they ought to come in now and take their revenge, when they could get it so easily, as there is no one to watch them.

3807. Did you tell Camphin that? I do not know that I said what I tell you, but ——— 3808. Did you say the substance? I dare say I said quite as much, but not so plainly as I tell it to you.

3809. By Mr. Cowper: You have made an affidavit in this case? Not in this case—not to the things that have been said now.

3810. By the Chairman: You know what you did swear? Yes, I remember everything I acceded to.

3811. Is the whole of that true? The whole I was asked and made answer to as far as I knew, from beginning to end; what Mr. Johnson read as far as I know I believe to be correct; I know nothing to be false in the matter.

3812. By Mr. Johnson: Did I not, on several evenings, read the whole of the document to you and your fellow servant? Yes, I believe you did.

3813. Did I not ask you particularly if you had anything to remark as to anything—if there were any inaccuracies as to your knowledge or belief to point them out? Yes.

3814. And to suggest if you had anything to add to it of any description, and you did make some suggestion—did you not? I did not like to say anything that did not come under my own notice.

3815. You paid particular attention while I read it; it occupied a long time, two or three evenings, when I read it to you? Yes, three evenings.

3816. By the Chairman: Did I understand you to say that there were certain things altered in the statement? There were certain words that Mr. Johnson altered.

3817. By Mr. Johnson: They were altered to accord with your understanding and belief? Yes.

3818. By the Chairman: Was it before or after you made this sworn deposition that Mrs. Bentley spoke about meeting with the priest on the road to Newtown? No, afterwards. I was always led to believe there was a person here—a priest here; when I say always, from the first time Mrs. Bentley spoke to me—a priest who knew Mrs. Bentley—who was acquainted with her at Home in London or Exeter, because the first conversation Mrs. Bentley said she had with the priest was, he addressed her, she said, as "Miss," going out in the omnibus to Newtown, and she told him she was married and had two children; the second time he saw her, addressing her as Mrs. Bentley, without telling his name or having any introduction to Mrs. Bentley, which led me to believe, and herself too, as I thought, that he knew her. She said she did not know the reason why he knew her, only upon one occasion, going out to Newtown, he had mentioned a circumstance which she knew had occurred at Home to her. It was, she was teaching or something in a school—on some charitable visit to a school—and on that day some accident had occurred to some of the inmates of the school, and that he, accompanied by another gentleman, went into the room and asked which was Miss Monk, and they pointed to her, and she had overheard it; and when he mentioned it to her again, she recollected his being there—the circumstance.

3819. By Mr. Johnson: Will you answer this question—the statements you have spoken of as having been made by Mrs. Bentley about meeting a priest in this country, were they made to you before you swore that affidavit? They were; but of course it was all quiet till the letter in the newspaper about Exeter; then all came to my mind at once, either that such a thing could never have occurred, or that it was the same person.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.

3819. Why did not you tell me about these conversations between you and Mrs. Bentley about the priest? Because I did not think there was any necessity.

2 Dec., 1862.

3820. Did I not ask you particularly to tell me everything of every description, whether you thought it material or immaterial, upon the subject—did I not particularly ask you that? I am not sure of that.

3821. Do not you recollect something of the kind? I do not remember exactly the words you said; it might have been done, but I did not commit it to memory.

3822. Do you recollect my saying, before I commenced reading the document, that I desired you to pay particular attention to it, to see whether there was anything in it that did not accord with your own impression or belief, or anything that you thought important, omitted? Something to that purport I can recollect; but Mr. and Mrs. Bentley told me when I came in to speak to you—I was nervous at the time—I was not to tell you anything but what I was asked, only to answer the questions put to me, and nothing more.

3823. Had you any nervousness in communicating with me? I was always nervous in appearing before anyone.

3824. You are nervous now—are you not? I am.

3825. You were not more nervous then, or so nervous, as you are now? I was more nervous on taking the oath than I am now.

3826. I mean when I read the document? No, I was not over nervous.

3827. By Mr. Morris: Why were you more nervous in taking the oath than you are now—ought you to be more particular in speaking the truth on oath than under any other circumstances—ought you not always to speak the truth? Yes, of course; but it is natural to me to be nervous. When I see before what is coming I endeavour to nerve myself. In the cause of truth and justice I am never afraid to overcome my nerves, as far as I possibly can.

3828. By Mr. Johnson: How many interviews do you say you had with Camphin? Those you have mentioned—those you have asked me about.

3829. How many? I cannot say.

3830. Did you have one last Sunday week or fortnight? No. Last Sunday week—No. Neither Sunday week nor Sunday fortnight had we any.

3831. When was the first? Sunday week or Sunday fortnight; I am not sure as to the day. I know I was not out last Sunday. No, I think the first was three weeks last Sunday.

3832. By the Chairman: Were you not at mass on Sunday? Yes, I was every Sunday since I have been with Mrs. Bentley, but I never saw him at all on the Sunday morning but once.

3833. By Mr. Johnson: Sunday night I understood was the first? Yes.

3834. I want to begin with that, if you can fix that date—there was no particular festival at that time? It was Sunday.

3835. Is there anything by which you can fix the date of that first interview? Nothing at all, unless I go back and look at the date of Sunday three weeks.

3836. Are you sure it was last Sunday three weeks—the 9th? I am not very sure, but I feel confident it was.

3837. It was the Sunday before the Wednesday when you met according to appointment? Yes.

3838. That was the day before the Prince of Wales' birthday? I do not know.

3839. Did your aunt speak to you about your having that interview with Camphin? I merely asked her if she would go; I did not like to do it, but I felt it was a conscientious thing. I was not an individual concerned in the matter, but as the matter would be made public I thought it ought to be made clear whoever the person was. I meant to put Mrs. Bentley under the impression that I wished to make the inquiry, but Mrs. Bentley never gave me the opportunity. I wished to speak upon the matter to Mrs. Bentley, but the matter was always dropped at once by her.

3840. As to whether a priest was concerned? As to the Committee I wished to keep nothing secret, for nothing was I afraid of.

3841. Had you heard of this Committee at the time you had this first interview with Camphin? The Committee?

3842. Of the Committee being appointed? I do not recollect from what source, except the newspaper could have made known it, for no one could have given me the information.

3843. Am I right in supposing your principal object in wishing to see Camphin, was to find out whether a priest was mixed up in the affair, or a person disguising himself as a priest? Yes.

3844. That was your entire object? That was the question I asked of Mr. Camphin.

3845. Was that your object in seeking the interview? My object in seeking it was for the truth to be known—let him be priest or not, let him be found out. If he was a person who came from home, and went disguised as a priest—

3846. Was it, or was it not, principally to clear the priests of this City from such an imputation? To clear them from it; I do not know that it was, for I was not afraid that any priest in the City— I knew very well that it was not a priest at all, before I made the inquiry; but I wanted to know if there was such a person dressed as a priest. I was quite confident that he was not a priest.

3847. You did not believe that one of your clergy would be guilty of such conduct? Of course I know every person is liable to fall.

3848. How do you know he was not a priest? I made inquiry. Mrs. Bentley told me where this priest was, and I inquired from these people, who knew nothing of my reason for inquiring.

3849.

- Anna Maria Bradshaw.
2 Dec., 1862.
3849. Were you satisfied it was not a priest before you sought this interview with Camphin? I was quite satisfied.
3850. What was your object then in seeking this interview? Because I wished the truth to be made known, that things might be stated that it was a priest. I spoke to Mrs. Bentley, saying it might be a person disguised as a priest; but she said, no such thing, it was a priest—she knew it to be a priest.
3851. You say you were satisfied it was not a priest before you saw Camphin? Yes.
3852. I cannot understand your object in wishing to see Camphin, if you were satisfied? I wished to state what I knew, that the matter might be clear.
3853. Before you saw Camphin, had you any interview with anybody else upon the subject? No; the matter I did not state clearly to anyone else.
3854. Clearly? For there was no reason for doing so; there was no one to whom I could communicate. I always wished to go to the source.
3855. How was Camphin the source? I knew of course that he could tell me whether there was such a person, knowing that he was in the concert-room.
3856. Did Camphin tell you he was at the concert? I knew from the other girl, and from Mrs. Bentley.
3857. That Camphin was at the concert? Inside the concert-room, or standing just outside the door.
3858. Did you know there were two doors? I was never there.
3859. Why did you select Camphin as the person to give you the information you sought? I think I made that answer. I understood him to be a Catholic, and he could not be deceived as to what a priest might be like—the garb of one; Mrs. Bentley might be deceived.
3860. You say you were quite satisfied it was not a priest before you saw Camphin? Yes.
3861. What was the object in seeing Camphin to ascertain from him whether it was a priest or not, if you were satisfied—can you answer that? I cannot answer you any further than I have. I have answered you as clearly as I possibly can, and I cannot go any farther into the matter.
3862. Had you any other conversation with any other person upon the subject before you saw Camphin? I daresay I had.
3863. Do you recollect that you had? I have spoken to the servant who lives with me upon the matter; she was aware what I was going to do.
3864. Anybody else? I related a few things to my aunt (not many); she was aware also what I was going to do. I do not think there is anyone else.
3865. Are you sure there was nobody else? Yes, I am sure there was nobody else—at least, I think so.
3866. Am I not right to suppose you were jealous for the honour of your priest — ? I am always jealous for the honour of the cause of God; it does not matter to me whether it is one of the priesthood or anyone else, so long as it is the cause of God!
3867. Is it not the fact that you are very zealous for the honour of the priesthood of your Church—it is nothing to be ashamed of — ? Not at all, of course. Not as regards them individually, but as far as regards truth and justice I would at all times be zealous. It does not matter to me whether the person be Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, or was it the Pope himself (and you are aware how we venerate him), were he the guilty one I should speak equally the truth.
3868. By the Chairman: When did this conversation take place with Mrs. Bentley? I think the last was on the Prince of Wales' birthday—that occurred between Mrs. Bentley and I. With regard to the priest, the conversation, she said, between her and the priest was the last time she went to Newtown; the date I do not know.
3869. By Mr. Johnson: Have you had no conversation with any priest upon the subject? Any priest?—The priest I am accustomed to speak to, knew nothing of Mrs. Bentley or of the matters that were going on.
3870. Give me a direct answer—have you had no conversation with any priest on the subject of the Bentley case? No, I have not had a conversation with any priest on the subject.
3871. By the Chairman: Have you told any priest anything about the Bentley case? No. I have mentioned, as it would be natural for me, and have perhaps asked for advice as to what was to be done in a conscientious matter, and the advice I asked was not given. Of course I was told my duty was to do nothing contrary to conscience.
3872. What did you ask? I am not sure—anything I have asked I will not disclose; anything I relate to the priest, that regards spiritual matters, I will not disclose.
3873. I am not now asking anything that has passed under the seal of confession? It would be no use, for it would not be obtained.
3874. By the Chairman: You said you asked advice? I did.
3875. Was that under confession? No.
3876. Have you any objection to state what it was you said? I do not remember. I remember the answer, but not the exact words; the answer was that I was to be conscientious and to serve God, but he gave me no answer about the matter; he said he knew nothing about the matter. It was likely I should like to know whether I ought to make such a thing public or to let it be quiet, or let it be found as things might be. I thought I might obtain a reply, but I did not obtain a reply. The reply was that he knew nothing of the matter; that all I was to do was to do my duty. He did not say what I was to do, or what I was not to do. I was dismissed with that, so that I knew he never had anything to do with public matters.
3877. Did you act upon that? I acted according to conscience.
3878. Was that when you asked Camphin to meet you, in order that you might speak to him about Mrs. Bentley and the priest? Yes, it was—I took it upon myself; as I got no advice upon the matter I consulted my own conscience.
- 3879.

3879. Do you know anything that, in your opinion, would tend to shew that Mr. or Mrs. Bentley had anything to do with this letter-writing? I do not know anything particularly, but there is one circumstance that I can remember, and that of course I do not like to affirm on oath —

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.
2 Dec., 1862.

3880. You are not on oath? I thought I was, and that everything was put down.

3881. By Mr. Morris: What is this one circumstance? That Mrs. Bentley said to me, that of course the person who wrote the anonymous letters wrote them in the German language—not in the German language, but in the German style. On a former occasion I know, as Mrs. Bentley can assert, she said she understood the style herself of writing German. That is all from Mrs. Bentley's lips; it was merely a casual conversation. On one occasion, speaking upon some science, Mrs. Bentley had said that people could tell the characters or dispositions of people by certain things, for instance, by their handwriting—that Mrs. Bentley had written to a person, being a German, a gentleman who professed to do this, from where she lived, or from near London, and that she wrote as a German lady, I understood her, for to tell her disposition, and the answer she got, she said, was pretty near correct, as far as her disposition went, but that he had told her she was not a German, but he told her her character.

3882. By the Chairman: Had that anything to do with the Bentley letter-writing case? I do not know; that is what Mrs. Bentley told me; and when you asked me the question I gave you the answer—that is all I know about the matter of letter-writing. That is all I heard from Mrs. Bentley herself. Anything with regard to the present matter I cannot say.

3883. By Mr. Wilson: Am I correct in supposing that it was owing to your seeing some allusion made to priests and Jesuits in the letter that appeared in the Empire newspaper, that you took a fresh interest in the case? Not altogether a fresh interest in the case; for I was not interested, as I said before, but believing that Mrs. Bentley was innocent, and Mr. Bentley a most persecuted person, as it may happen, yet is the case, and believing that if matters were cleared up, it would appear better than before—but Mrs. Bentley related the circumstance, perhaps not the whole, but mostly the whole relating to the Exeter matter, before it appeared in the newspaper, and then seeing it as it was in the newspaper, made me doubt the fact of the priest, for I had received from Mrs. Bentley a statement of the Exeter matter.

3884. What was there in the letter that caused you to doubt the statement regarding the priest? The style of the letters being written—the very style of the writing; I knew it must be from no religious motive any person could write —

3885. We all know that religion had nothing to do with the writing, but what portion of the letter was it that caused you to disbelieve Mrs. Bentley's story about the priest? I cannot tell you. I have not the paper here.

3886. Was it before you thought the letter could not have been written with a religious object? It appeared from the letter very different from what it appeared before.

3887. You cannot explain the reason of your coming to this conclusion—the particular portion of the letter? I cannot tell who was the author of putting it into my head. I cannot say what was the cause, but it came into my mind because Mrs. Bentley told me about the Exeter matter.

3888. You say it was on account of what was stated in the letter in the newspaper? Yes.

3889. Do you not know what portion of the letter it was, or what particular circumstance connected with that letter? I am not as conversant with the papers as the gentlemen here, for I never use a paper without having a reason, and I cannot point out the particular part.

3890. Supposing the term Jesuit or priest had never been used in the letter, do you think you would have taken the same interest in the matter afterwards, as you appear to have done? I cannot say what I would have done, or what happened after I had read the letter.

3891. Do you state that it was not in consequence of the statement made in the letter, relative to Jesuits or priests, that you asked an interview with Camphin? Because it appeared to me that the truth ought to be known. It mattered not to me; it was not the cause of priests or Jesuits individually that I cared about, but supposing they were, as I was led to believe, plotters in certain things, I think if that was the case they could be found out. I know that people generally take very wrong views of these things, but perhaps now —

3892. By Mr. Johnson: Of what? Things regarding Catholics—that they are capable of concocting —

3893. By Mr. Wilson: Who do you mean by "people"? I believe it is the opinion of a great many. Of course Catholics, as a body, can do a great many mischievous things; but I think whatever they do is with a good intention.

3894. Do you think they cannot do anything that is bad? Not with a good conscientious motive, I think; they never can conceal the truth when it is necessary for — 3895. By Mr. Leary: Your meaning is, that the Protestant community is prejudiced against Catholics generally? Some of them are.

3896. Many of them are? Yes; it is blindness.

3897. I think you stated that the reason of a doubt having arisen in your mind, after reading the letter in the Empire respecting Mrs. Bentley's statement, was, that there was a variance between the purport of that letter and what Mrs. Bentley had stated to you previously? There was an entire contradiction.

3898. Can you state in what particular points the contradiction consists? It would take a long time to explain matters so clearly. When Mrs. Bentley related it to me it was clear as the noonday sun—to the world it might be a mystery.

3899. Can you explain to the Committee what was the main difference between the narrative of Mrs. Bentley to you and what you read in the paper? Yes, I can.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.

2 Dec., 1862.

3900. Do not be at all nervous? I am not so nervous now as I was, because I do not mind it. I know Mrs. Bentley—of course I need not go into great detail—with regard to her former life, that she was inclined to be a Catholic; at one time she told me that—another time perhaps she told me she was a Catholic.

3901. By Mr. Johnson: “Perhaps”? That is really, if not the exact words it will convey the same meaning.

3902. By Mr. Morris: That she was almost a Catholic? That she was a Catholic in reality for four years.

3903. Why do you use the expression “perhaps”—I do not understand you? I do not recollect having used it.

3904. By Mr. Leary: When you say she was four years a Catholic, how long ago was this four years? A few months after I went to Bentley’s.

3905. Did she say at that time —? After first playing at the Philharmonic.

3906. Did she say at that time, after the Philharmonic Concert, that she was a Catholic, and had been for four years? After the first concert, not after the last; the one about twelve months ago—a few months after I went there. Mary was present when Mrs. Bentley said it. She had some reason I daresay for saying that she was a Catholic, or when she was a Catholic, or something of the sort. I was leaving the room when she said so. I said, as near as I can remember, to Mary, “I believe Mrs. Bentley’s saying that she is a Catholic, it is nonsense; she is making fun of us.” Mrs. Bentley said, “Indeed I am not; I am not a Catholic, but I was a Catholic till I was seventeen years of age—for four years—till I was “seventeen.”

3907. What led to this conversation? Some indifferent matter; something speaking of and laughing; Mrs. Bentley just saying what she knew.

3908. What struck you, on reading the letter in the Empire newspaper, as varying from Mrs. Bentley’s statement to you? Of course I do not know if Mrs. Bentley had the mere motive of telling a simple falsehood; as I said, I did not think a simple falsehood—it might be harm, but it was not a very bad thing. She told me that she remembered Mr. Bentley when she was eight years old, and I thought it was very strange it was in the letter about Exeter, that she said Mr. Bentley had not known her till she was about fourteen. She said she could remember sitting on Mr. Bentley’s knee, on some excursion—some place she was travelling to; that she was engaged to Mr. Bentley when she was fifteen. She told me also that she was in Court when she was fourteen years of age—that she had taken an oath concerning an anonymous letter that had been written; she told Mary also. Mrs. Bentley said, “Your oath will not be taken upon the Bible, as you are a Catholic.” I do not remember the occasion on which she said it, or the reason.

3909. By the Chairman: You say Mrs. Bentley said that to you? Yes, on some former occasion.

3910. What led you to the conversation? I cannot remember. I fancy it was something regarding if we were required to take an oath; she said it was likely our oath would not be valid, or it might not perhaps be taken with the Bible.

3911. By Mr. Leary: Did not this letter appear before you made your depositions? No, it appeared after, as near as I can remember.

3912. It appeared after you had made your deposition? Yes.

3913. By the Chairman: You altered your deposition in some cases when it was read over to you? There were a few words that might alter the sense a little, but I thought —

3914. Can you explain to the Committee why you did not insist that something should have been said in the deposition with regard to the priest that you have stated to the Committee Mrs. Bentley said she was in the habit of meeting? Because I was told by Mr. and Mrs. Bentley to make no statement but what I was asked for. Then I had no doubt about the matter at all. I felt that, when I affirmed upon oath, I had confidence that all that was stated was correct, and that as far as I knew I took my oath that it was true.

3915. Do you say that Mr. Bentley said that you were to say nothing but what you were asked? Mr. and Mrs. Bentley said that I was to make no statement of my own; I was merely to say what I was asked—to answer the questions.

3916. By Mr. Johnson: Was it not that you were not to go into rambling statements about matters foreign to the subject? Only with regard to myself. I made some little alteration with regard to — 3917. By Mr. Leary: Was it not merely an intimation that you were to be careful what you said? Yes.

3918. By Mr. Johnson: Did I not make a preliminary statement to you, that I wished to hear everything you had to say—that you were to conceal nothing—to omit nothing. Did I not say something of that kind? Yes, you might.

3919. By Mr. Leary: Never mind what might be—what did you yourself understand? I understood, that as far as what was read to me in the papers, if there was anything there I thought or knew was not correct to state so.

3920. By Mr. Johnson: Do you not remember my saying that I would not depute Mrs. Bentley to read the deposition to you, but that I came myself at great trouble to do so, as I should not be satisfied unless I heard the statement from your own mouth? I do not know; I was not in the room the whole time; there was a time when something escaped me, when I was not there—I think it was the beginning of the reading.

3921. By Mr. Leary: Were you aware that Mr. Johnson was acting as the professional friend of Mr. Bentley? Of course.

3922. By the Chairman: Were you aware that what you were stating would have to be sworn to? Yes, I was.

3924. Under those circumstances do you say that you have no remembrance of Mr. Johnson telling you that you were to be very careful in making every suggestion that occurred to you, as to the truth or falsehood of what was being read? Yes, I understood that anything that was stated that had come under my notice that was not true, I was to state; of course I was aware there was nothing that was not true.
3925. Were you not aware of what Mrs. Bentley had told you about this priest going to Newtown with her? Yes, but she said that he had business there at Newtown, and always saw her.
3926. Then what you state now is, that the priest did not go to Newtown with Mrs. Bentley? He always made it a point to go in the omnibus with Mrs. Bentley.
3927. Did Mrs. Bentley say he always made it a point to go in the omnibus with Mrs. Bentley? I cannot say those were the words, but she left me under the impression that he always did so.
3928. Did Mrs. Bentley make a confidante of you—did she tell you her secrets? The other as well as I.
3929. Did she make confidantes of you both? No, I do not think she did; she never told us under secrecy; nothing she told us not to speak of at all.
3930. Are the Committee to understand that you know nothing about any priest going to Newtown with Mrs. Bentley for any purpose, but that at the same time Mrs. Bentley told you that she met a priest on her way to Newtown? I believe I stated before.
3931. State again? Mrs. Bentley left me under the impression that the priest made it a point to see her always; he might have had business there, but sometimes she said she believed he had no business at Newtown at all.
3932. Did Mrs. Bentley tell you that she believed this priest had no business at Newtown at all? She did; she told the other girl and I, upon several occasions, that she believed he had no business there, but afterwards she said she would feel very dull without his company.
3933. Did she say anything else about this priest? A great many things.
3934. Tell us all you heard about him? She told us that one night the priest was at a concert—or at the Bachelor's Ball I think it was—and she told me on some following occasion—I do not know whether it was the following day—she had seen the priest I think standing at the door, and that he had smiled at her; and that Mr. Bentley had pointed him out to her, and said, "That looks very like a detective."
3935. That was the priest at the Bachelor's Ball? Not at the ball, but at the door; he stood outside the door.
3936. What else did Mrs. Bentley tell you about this priest? She told me that he could tell her about her brothers at Home, and about her nephews—where they were, and how they were going on.
3937. Did she tell you anything else about him? I do not recollect every conversation that occurred. Generally a day or two afterwards they would come to my mind—about St. Mary's—the priest asking her when she was going to St. Mary's—and did she go to Church.
3938. Have you had any other object in meeting Mr. Camphin at any time than that of speaking of Mrs. Bentley and her affairs? That was the only object I had.
3939. Have you had conversations of any other character? Nothing else—very indifferent subjects—perhaps whether he had read such an author, or something.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.
2 Dec., 1862.

Mary Ryan called in and examined:—

3940. By the Chairman: Are you a servant of Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
3941. How long have you been in that service? I will be two years the 3rd of February.
3942. During the whole of that period have you experienced any unkindness or ill-treatment? Never.
3943. Have you any reason to believe that Mrs. Bentley would tell a falsehood, or make a false statement of any kind? I cannot say. I cannot know Mrs. Bentley's mind; of course I cannot say whether she would say the truth or lies.
3944. Have you had any occasion during that time to think that Mrs. Bentley did tell lies? Well, some things we have heard; the other girl and I —
3945. With this exception of this Bentley case, as it is called? Mrs. Bentley's case.
3946. Have you any reason to suppose that Mrs. Bentley is a person who is not truthful in her general life? Well, I do not know.
3947. Have you known her tell lies to yourself? There have been some cases — 3948. About what? Some things have been said to the other girl and I.
3949. About what? About a person going out to Newtown.
3950. You have been with Mrs. Bentley nearly two years? Yes.
3951. During that two years, from what you know of Mrs. Bentley, have you reason to believe that Mrs. Bentley respects the truth, or does she absolutely tell falsehoods? I do not know.
3952. As far as you know? As far as I know—in some cases; I cannot say exact what Mrs. Bentley —
3953. As far as you know? As far as I know; of course Mrs. Bentley tells the truth in some things.
3954. In everything? There have been some things that —
3955. By Mr. Leary: Remove from your mind the whole of the matters about the Bentley affair—about the letter; remove from your mind all the conversations about the letter, and say then whether Mrs. Bentley's general character is a truthful one? Yes, in some things—in some things, as far as I know—there have been some things —

Mary Ryan.
2 Dec., 1862.

- Mary Ryan. 3956. Has Mrs. Bentley always appeared to be a truthful woman, excepting in this matter reflecting upon herself about the Exeter case? Yes.
- 2 Dec., 1862. 3957. In all other matters? Yes.
3958. By the Chairman: Have you heard anything relating to some letters—about something that transpired at Exeter? Yes, I have heard in relation to it.
3959. What did you hear in relation to it? Mrs. Bentley told us—the other girl and I—that when she was a child, going home from school, a gentleman used to speak to her, and at first he never spoke anything to her on religion at all, but that he always was very kind to her, and always she liked him; and that he—she had no reason—at least — 3960. Go on; do not be at all afraid? Well I cannot; unless the questions are proposed to me I cannot answer.
3961. Cannot you tell us what Mrs. Bentley used to tell you about this case at Exeter? At first she told us he never spoke about religion at first, but if her parents were unkind to her there would be a person waiting for her to take her away if she felt uncomfortable at home.
3962. Did she say anything else? Yes; she said she saw the person after.
3963. Did she say anything else—did she say where she saw him? Yes, passing I think it was Liverpool, or some place—I forget the exact place. I know it was passing some place she seen him.
3964. Did she ever see him in Sydney? No, she never said she had seen him in Sydney.
3965. Did she ever tell you of any conversation she had had with any priest in Sydney? Yes.
3966. What priest? I do not know the name of the priest.
3967. What did she tell you about that priest? She said the priest used to meet her going out to Newtown.
3968. How did he meet her—in what way? He first met her in an omnibus; he used to talk to her.
3969. What did he say—did she tell you? Well she used to tell us that sometimes she used to meet him twice a week, and more times once a week; some weeks not at all.
3970. Did this priest meet her by appointment—do you know? Make appointments?
3971. Did she say he met her on purpose? She said he knew the times she used to go out to Newtown, and that he used to meet her.
3972. Did he expect to meet her? Yes; she used to say she wondered would she see that priest again going out.
3973. When did these conversations occur? When she was going out to Newtown in the morning, and in the afternoon when she came back.
3974. When did she tell you—at what time? I do not know the time.
3975. Cannot you remember any particular time? I think it was about the time that Mrs. Bentley was going to play at the concert.
3976. By Mr. Johnson: Not the first concert? No, the last one.
3977. By the Chairman: What did the priest say? The priest was after her in the concert-room coming out.
3978. That was after the concert? Yes.
3979. Was it the same night she told you? Not the same night; it was afterwards.
3980. Do you remember what night it was? I do not remember.
3981. Was it night at all? I do not remember whether it was night or day she told us.
3982. Does Mrs. Bentley often talk to you about these matters? Yes, but not lately.
3983. Was she in the habit of talking about it at the time of that concert? Yes, but not lately.
3984. Did she frequently? Yes.
3985. Have these conversations taken place more than once? Yes.
3986. What did she say about this priest? She said this priest knew her brother at Home, and knew her brother's children.
3987. Anything else—do you know Mr. Camphin? Yes.
3988. Do you know Mr. Sanderson? Yes.
3989. Do you know Mr. Clark? Yes.
3990. What are they? Detectives.
3991. Have you seen anything of any of those three lately? No, I have not seen them lately.
3992. How long ago is it since you saw any of them? Mr. Camphin I have not seen him to speak to since he fetched a letter to our house to Mr. Bentley. I might have seen Mr. Sanderson in the street pass me, but not to speak to him; and Mr. Clark I did. He came to our house once for something he left; when he came to our house I have not seen him since.
3993. Have you seen Mr. Harrison? I think I seen him once or twice pass me in the street.
3994. He has not had any conversation with you? No.
3995. Have you heard of any other person seeing Mr. Camphin lately? Yes.
3996. Who has seen him? The other girl has seen him.
3997. No one else? I do not know anyone else.
3998. Do you know a person of the name of Mrs. Hynes? Yes.
3999. What is she? The other girl's aunt.
4000. What else is she? I do not know; she keeps a boarding-house.
4001. Has she had any conversation with you about this matter? No, she has had no conversation.
4002. Has she never spoken to you about this matter at all? Sometimes there has been words said.
4003. What has she said? Of course it was a mysterious thing, and — 4004. And what? And that it was a pity the people were not found out that did it.

4005. Did she say anything about the priest? The priest—anything about the priest? Mary Ryan.
4006. Yes? She said nothing about the priest. 2 Dec., 1862.
4007. Mrs. Hynes never mentioned the priest? No, she never mentioned it.
4008. Did she mention Camphin? No; Mrs. Hynes did not mention Mr. Camphin to me.
4009. Did you hear his name mentioned at all? Yes, I have heard his name mentioned.
4010. Who by? His name mentioned by the other girl.
4011. What did she tell you about it? She told me she had seen Mr. Camphin.
4012. Did she tell you what she had told Mr. Camphin? Yes.
4013. What did she tell you? She told me she had seen him the night of the concert; she asked him if there was a priest in the room came out after Mrs. Bentley, and he said no.
4014. By Mr. Johnson: State all you have heard Mrs. Bentley say has taken place between her and this priest, or supposed priest? I do not think I could remember everything I have heard, for I have a bad memory.
4015. By the Chairman: Tell us as much as you can remember that Mrs. Bentley has said has taken place between her and this priest, or supposed priest? She said, after Christmas—after midnight mass—this priest met her, and looked round to see if she was there.
4016. Was it not that the priest told her that at the midnight mass he had looked round to see if Mrs. Bentley was present at that mass? Yes.
4017. And that Mrs. Bentley told you that? Yes.
4018. That the priest had told Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
4019. That he had looked round for her? Yes.
4020. When did Mrs. Bentley tell you this? I do not know.
4021. Was any more than you present? I do not remember whether the other girl was present.
4022. Have you had more conversations with Mrs. Bentley about the priest? Yes, we have.
4023. Was it you or Mrs. Bentley who began the conversation? I do not know.
4024. Did Mrs. Bentley ever tell you about being intimately connected with a priest? Yes; she said that at Home she was very intimately connected with a priest.
4025. In what way? When she was going to school at a convent.
4026. She went to school at a convent? Yes.
4027. Where? In England.
4028. In what part? I do not remember what part.
4029. Did she mention anything about this convent? To us?
4030. Yes? She did; she said she was going there three years to school.
4031. Did she say whether she was a Catholic at that time? She told me she was a Catholic for four years when she was going there.
4032. Did she say she was a Catholic going to this Catholic school? She said at first when she went they told her papa they would not interfere with her religion.
4033. Did they interfere with her religion? After she said she was a Catholic, she made of course her first communion, and she used to go to confession once a week.
4034. Mrs. Bentley told you this herself? Yes.
4035. When did she tell you this? I do not know the time it was she told me.
4036. Did she tell you anything else about the priest—did she say anything about the Jesuits? Yes; she said she knew the head of the Jesuits.
4037. Did she say anything more about the Jesuits than that? She said some of them was very good, and more of them of course that they would like to do anything to get money for their society; not that they would do it for themselves, but do it to get money for their society.
4038. By Mr. Johnson: Will you state everything, as far as you can remember, that Mrs. Bentley told you had occurred between her and this priest that used to meet her when she went to Newtown? Yes.
4039. You have told us that she said he used to go in the omnibus with her, and that she wondered whether he would be there again; that she saw him at the concert, and that she saw him upon the occasion when he said he had looked round at the midnight mass to see whether she was present—now did she tell you that he had met her at any other time or under any other circumstances, or that anything else had occurred between them? She said she recommended him books to read.
4040. Anything else—can you remember any other remarks? I do not.
4041. Did she say that he ever gave her any books? No, she never said that he gave her any.
4042. Or that she gave him? No, she never said that she gave him any books.
4043. Anything else? Yes; she said he wanted her to take a piece of music from him one day.
4044. Anything else? Well, I do not remember anything else.
4045. Try and think—did she tell you that she had offered him a piece of music? No, she did not say that.
4046. Or anything else? No, I do not remember.
4047. Or that she offered to do anything for him? Yes, I think she did; to make him a pair of braces.
4048. Tell us what she said about that? She said she was coming home up Market-street, and went into a shop there to buy some wool for making a pair of slippers, and this priest went with her; she said if she made him a pair would he not wear them, and he said they would be too grand, or something like that, for him.
4049. By the Chairman: What else occurred—what did he say about the braces? She said she would make him a pair of braces.
4050. Do you know if there is a shop of that kind in Market-street? Yes.

- Mary Ryan. 4051. Where is it? Down below Castlereagh-street a little, I think.
 4052. Who keeps it? I do not know who keeps it.
 2 Dec., 1862. 4053. By Mr. Morris: What do you mean by below Castlereagh-street—do you mean nearer Pitt-street, between Castlereagh and Pitt Streets? Yes.
 4054. By the Chairman: Do you remember anything else that Mrs. Bentley told you about this priest—was he good-looking? Yes, good-looking—young.
 4055. Black hair? She did not say he had black hair.
 4056. Was it curly hair—had he fine teeth—did she describe his nose or eyes? No, she did not describe them.
 4057. Did she say anything about his hair? I do not remember.
 4058. By Mr. Johnson: About his height? Not his height either.
 4059. Have you told all that you recollect you have heard Mrs. Bentley say about him? Yes; she said she met him another time, just after he came back from Brisbane.
 4060. Did she say what took place then? No, she did not say it.
 4061. Did you understand from Mrs. Bentley that these meetings were by appointment with herself, or that he took advantage of her going regularly to Newtown to meet her? Sometimes Mrs. Bentley said to us that he would go in the omnibus that Mrs. Bentley was going in, and sometimes he would look in to see if she was there, and if she was not he would not go.
 4062. Did she represent these meetings as taking place with her own concurrence, or as taking place by his taking advantage of her going to Newtown twice a week? At one time she said she did not want him out there with her, but that he said he did not care about any one; he would go.
 4063. The priest said that to her? Yes, he did not mind what people said.
 4064. Was it at the time he offered her music, she said she did not want him with her? I do not know what time that was; it was about the first time she said she did not want him there, but he would go.
 4065. When your deposition was read to you, how was it you said nothing about the priest? I believed from Mrs. Bentley that it was true.
 4066. There was nothing in this deposition that mentioned this priest? No.
 4067. Why did you not tell Mr. Johnson what Mrs. Bentley had said about the priest? I believed Mrs. Bentley—that it was all true.
 4068. Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were not present when Mr. Johnson read the deposition to you? Mrs. Bentley was.
 4069. Were you afraid to contradict anything that was wrong when Mrs. Bentley was there? No, I was not afraid; as far as I knew, what was read was quite true.
 4070. Was there anything about the priest? No, nothing; only something about the Jesuits, that some one had said.
 4071. Was there something about the Jesuits? Yes.
 4072. By Mr. Johnson: Did not I see you at one time when Mrs. Bentley was not present—did I not speak to you in her absence at one time—did I not ask her to leave the room on one occasion? I do not remember that.

WEDNESDAY, 3 DECEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. MORRIS,		MR. COWPER,
MR. HART,		MR. W. FORSTER,
	MR. WILSON.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Johnson appeared for the Petitioner.

Mr. William Camphin called in and further examined:—

- Mr. William Camphin. 4073. By the Chairman: About these entries in this detective duty book: tell the Committee all you know about how these Bs, and any additions that may appear supplementing your own entries, came there, as far you know? I was called into Mr. Harrison's office one day by 3 Dec., 1862. Mr. Harrison, and he referred me to some entries of mine connected with the Bentley case, and asked me was that correct, and marked a B down there.
 4074. Did he mark anything else but the B? Well, I could not say.
 4075. How many entries did he allude to? What I was connected with in the house.
 4076. How many? The three days I was there.
 4077. Only three days? I am not aware of any more—there might be.
 4078. Did he ask questions relating to any other days excepting these three days? I am not aware that he did.
 4079. Can you say whether he did or not? Not for a certainty, I could not.
 4080. Can you not fix in your own mind, as to whether you know any more than three of the entries you have made yourself in this duty book were altered or marked off, with your own knowledge and consent—Did you indicate to Mr. Harrison where you were and how you were employed? I do not remember any others.
 4081. Then I presume you are in a position to say there were no others? I believe not, but I would not say for a certainty. I cannot remember if there were.
 4082. During the time you were employed in this case, did you make any report to Mr. Harrison

Harrison of the progress that had been made, or of what you had done? Anything that took place I reported to him. Mr. William Camplin.

4083. On what occasion—how and when? One night that I was in Mr. Bentley's house, I reported to him about seeing the small gate at the top of the stairs leading from the yard into the verandah—I told him that I saw that open, and that I spoke to Mr. Bentley about it. 3 Dec., 1862.

4084. By Mr. Morris: Did he make a note of that? I am not aware.

4085. By the Chairman: Let us put the case in this way;—that you were at Mr. Bentley's to-night, or last night, would you on the following morning see Mr. Harrison at the police office, and make a report to him of what had transpired? Well, if nothing occurred, of course I would say all was right.

4086. Were you in the habit of making a report to Mr. Harrison on the following morning? I would say all was right if nothing had occurred.

4087. Where did you say this? On one occasion I remember he said—"What time did you leave Mr. Bentley's house?" and I told him about half-past 12. That is the only remark of the kind that was made at the time.

4088. Where were you when that remark was made? In the office.

4089. What part of it? I cannot tell what part.

4090. There are a good many parts in the office? No, only two rooms.

4091. Was it in Mr. Harrison's room, or Mr. M'Lerie's room, or where? Captain M'Lerie has not got a room in the detective office. There are only two rooms—a front room and a back room.

4092. Is one of them Mr. Harrison's room? Yes.

4093. Do you go into that room to make reports to Mr. Harrison? It depends upon where I meet him.

4094. Do you go into that room to make reports to Mr. Harrison? Sometimes.

4095. Is it any part of your duty to go into that room to make reports? If Mr. Harrison is there, I go into the room and speak to him there.

4096. Is it any part of your duty to go into that room to make reports? If Mr. Harrison is there, of course it is our duty to go to him and report to him, there or elsewhere that we may see him.

4097. Is there any definite rule about making reports to your superior officer? ———

4098. By Mr. Cowper: Are you required to report daily, or at any particular time, or under any particular circumstances? Any particular circumstance that occurs, of course, or anything that we see, that we think it necessary to bring under his notice

4099. By the Chairman: Is it any part of your duty, to report to your superior officer the occurrences of the day? The occurrences, most decidedly.

4100. Either the occurrences or the want of occurrences—either what has occurred, or, if there is a day on which nothing particular has happened, do you make a report to that effect? Of course we would say all right, when we came in. If all is right, of course nothing has occurred.

4101. Who do you say all right too—the door post? Mr. Harrison, or the clerk, if Mr. Harrison is not there.

4102. Then it is part of your duty to make a report every day? Yes, we report ourselves; we report all occurrences. I do not understand your question properly.

4103. When you do not understand the question, you were told yesterday to state so—Is it your duty to go into Mr. Harrison's room to make these reports? If he be there.

4104. When you make these reports, does Mr. Harrison enter them in any book? Not that I am aware of—not without it is something very particular.

4105. If it is something very particular, does he enter it into a book? For instance, in a case like this, if I reported a circumstance to him he might enter it.

4106. Enter it in what? Anything he chooses. I cannot tell what books he keeps.

4107. I do not ask you what books he keeps. Just answer this question—Did Mr. Harrison enter these particular circumstances in a book, or in any paper of any kind whatever? I am not aware.

4108. Did you ever see him write, when you were making reports? I have seen him writing.

4109. Did you not say, yesterday, you had seen him make entries in a book? I have seen him writing in a book.

4110. Did you not describe what kind of book it was? I said he wrote in a book.

4111. What kind of book? The book was open—I could not say what kind of book it was.

4112. What size was it—was it this size (shewing Mr. Harrison's diary)? It is possible.

4113. Is it probable? It was a book laid open; I saw him writing, but I could not say what it was.

4114. This is a diary which purports to be Mr. Harrison's diary—that is the detective duty book—was it a book like either of these? It might have been something similar to that (the diary).

4115. When you saw the book open before him, was it a book of that size? Something similar.

4116. You are quite sure of that? I believe so—I am not quite sure; I believe it was a similar book to that.

4117. Are you a good judge of size? If I took particular notice, of course I could give some account of the size of it; but not thinking I would ever be asked questions about it, I took no particular notice.

4118. Have you a note-book of your own? Yes. (Produced.)

4119. Was it a book of that size that Mr. Harrison wrote in? No; that is a peculiar sort of book.

4120. What is the peculiarity of it? It is a peculiar shape—it is a pocket-book.

4121.

- Mr. William
Camplin.
- 3 Dec., 1862.
4121. About three inches by five, is it? About five or six inches.
4122. By how much in width? About three inches or three and a half.
4123. Can you describe the size of this other book, said to be the diary of Mr. Harrison? That is about nine inches by seven inches, I should say.
4124. And the other book—what do you think the size of that is? I should say that is about fifteen inches long by twelve broad, or something of that sort.
4125. What was the size of the book that you saw Mr. Harrison write in? I did not take particular notice, but it was not as large as that (the detective duty book).
4126. But you think it was the size of the medium sized one? About that; I could not say positively, because I did not pay particular attention at the time. Of course if I had known I would have been asked about it, I would have taken notice, and would have been able to answer about it.
4127. When you made reports to Mr. Harrison, did he write at all times? I did not say he wrote, at the time I made the reports to him, at all times.
4128. Did he ever write, when you made reports, at the time you were making them, as if committing your report to writing? I am not quite clear—
4129. By Mr. Morris: Did Mr. Harrison write with a pen or a pencil on these occasions? With a pen, when I saw him writing.
4130. By the Chairman: Then you have seen him writing? Yes; but I do not know what about.
4131. Have you seen him writing when you have been making your report? I cannot say at the time I have been making my report.
4132. Will you look at this entry of the 14th April, in the detective duty book—is that your signature? Yes.
4133. Is this the B you alluded to? Yes.
4134. Did you see that B written? I saw that.
4135. When you saw that written, did you see anything else written? I am not certain.
4136. Are you certain whether anything else was written or not? I am not.
4137. If it had been written, could you have seen it? I may have seen it, or I may not.
4138. If it was written at the same time you gave the information that caused that B to be placed in the margin, would you not have noticed anything further that might have been written there? I might have noticed the B particularly, and something else might have been written and I might not have noticed it.
4139. There were the entries for three successive days against which these B's were placed on that occasion? Yes.
4140. When he had put down the first B, did Mr. Harrison turn over the leaf and go to another leaf? When he had finished one he turned over to another.
4141. You saw him finish one before he went over to the other? I saw him turn the leaf over and go to the next one.
4142. Then, if he had written anything on that leaf at that time, you would have seen it? I do not know that he did; he may have written something else without my noticing it. I might have been looking round and he might have added it.
4143. Is that your signature? Yes. (Referring to entry of 15th April.)
4144. Was anything else added there on that occasion except this B? I am not certain. There was something written—"Inside B's house," I think; but I noticed particularly the B; I paid particular attention to it.
4145. What makes you think he would write, "Inside B's house"? Because I was inside Mr. Bentley's house.
4146. When I removed the blotting-paper from the former entry I was questioning you on, did you not see the words "Inside B's house"? I did not.
4147. On the 16th April—you see that—is that your writing? That is my writing.
4148. Was anything added to that, on the occasion we have been speaking of, excepting the B? The B was written then; whether anything more was written at the time I do not know.
4149. Is it likely these three B's could be entered, while you were standing looking on, from information you gave yourself, and at the same time you would not know whether anything further was written or not? I did not pay particular attention, only to the B's.
4150. You write well yourself? Pretty well.
4151. When any one was writing in your sight, you would know, from the very action of his hand, whether anything more than one B was written? If I paid attention I would.
4152. Did you or did you not pay attention? I paid attention to the B.
4153. Nothing else—were these written all on one day? All that I noticed.
4154. Who was with you in Mr. Harrison's room at the time? Sanderson.
4155. By Mr. Morris: Was the clerk there? No, not the time I went into the office.
4156. By the Chairman: There was no further entry that you gave any information of except these three? Not that I am aware of.
4157. Then, if the B's were added to other entries when you were present, they must have been added without your knowledge? I do not remember any others. He made B's in connection with Sanderson's entries at the same time.
4158. Were you engaged at Mr. Bentley's on any other occasions? Yes.
4159. What occasions? I was engaged going to Newtown and at the Philharmonic concert.
4160. Have you any memoranda of these occasions? No.
4161. Did you shew any memoranda to Mr. Harrison, when you told him where you were and how you were employed—had you any memoranda to refresh your memory, at the time you furnished Mr. Harrison with the particulars of where you were and how you were employed? No, I had no memoranda.

4162. By Mr. Morris: Can you remember the day of the month, or the month, when you were called up to assist Mr. Harrison in making out the times that you were employed in the Bentley case? I could not say for a certainty; I think it was in the early part of May; I am not certain; I could not say.

Mr. William
Camplin.

8 Dec., 1862.

4163. If it has been said that these B's were entered in the book from day to day as the duty was put down there, would that be true—if it has been stated before this Committee that the B's were entered in the margin of the detective duty book from day to day, and not at one time, would that be true? I do not know; I cannot answer for others.

4164. Would it be true as regards yourself and Sanderson? No; mine were put down all at one time.

4165. I asked as regards yourself and Sanderson? I do not know; Sanderson may have been called in twice.

4166. Did you not say, just now, that when the B's were placed opposite your duty, they were also placed opposite Sanderson's duty, and that Sanderson was present? Sanderson was present, but Sanderson may have been called in more than once; I only speak of a particular day.

4167. How many B's did you see put opposite Sanderson's duty? I do not know; I only paid attention to my own.

4168. By the Chairman: Did you see any? I saw some.

4169. Put down to Sanderson's duty? Yes.

4170. On the same day as your own? Yes.

4171. This is your signature to an entry of the 14th of April? Yes.

4172. Which part of this writing is yours—Read as far as it is yours? (Witness reads)—"Came on duty at 9 a.m., patrolled the city till 1 p.m. Special duty from 7 to midnight."

4173. Will you look at this addition to that entry—Does anything strike you with regard to that addition—does it appear to have been written at two distinct times? I cannot say that.

4174. Does the ink appear to be different? It appears as if there has been a blot here.

4175. Does there appear to be any difference in the ink? There is no difference in the ink. The B is thicker. That appears to have been written with a quill pen, and that may have been written with another pen, or else the back of the same pen.

4176. One appears to have been written with a quill pen, and the other with a steel pen? No, I do not say that; it may have been the back of the same pen.

4177. Is there any difference in the colour between the words "in at B's house," and the "first time"? That appears to be thicker.

4178. Is there any difference in the colour? No, they are both black.

4179. Is there any difference in the shade of colour? This does appear thicker than that—thicker writing.

4180. Is there any difference in the shade of colour? Well, there is no difference in the colour; it is the style of writing.

4181. This (turning to another entry) is the 15th April—how much of this entry is yours? All except "in at B's house the 2nd time."

4182. Has that "2" been altered? It appears like it.

4183. Is this "st" above the "2"? It may have been meant for "st."

4184. What do you take it for? I should take it to be "st."

4185. Can you account for this apparent addition, in the one instance, of the words "the first time," in a thicker ink, as you say, and this alteration, in the second instance, of the "1" into "2"? I cannot account for it.

4186. You were not called in upon a second occasion to make the alteration? I was not called upon more than one occasion.

4187. And not asked any question that caused the alteration to be made? Not that I remember.

4188. Does it not strike you as peculiar, that these alterations should exist first on one page, and then as corroborative evidence on the other? No.

4189. Have you known the books altered before? When a mistake has been made it has been altered.

4190. Can you point out any such alteration? No, because I do not keep the books.

4191. On the occasion when you were inside Mr. Bentley's house, did you ever leave Mr. Harrison behind you when you came away? No, he always went before me. I was there on three occasions, and I remained until about half-past 12.

4192. By Mr. Hart: Have you any entry in your own note-book, of your being at Mr. Bentley's house on the 14th, 15th, and 16th of April? No, only in the detective book.

4193. You stated just now that you keep a note-book? Yes, this one.

4194. For what object do you keep that? In case I apprehend a person, for instance, I put it down. When I was engaged in Mr. Bentley's house I had no idea I would be called upon hereafter, or else I would have made notes.

4195. Was it not a part of your duty to enter everything, in your note-book, in which you were concerned? No, I told Mr. Harrison if anything occurred.

4196. How long have you had that note-book—it seems comparatively new? Since about the 1st of March.

4197. You stated, yesterday, you were acquainted with or on terms of intimacy with Mr. Bentley's servant girls? I am acquainted with them.

4198. Did you meet either of them last night? Yes.

4199. Where? Coming out from St. Mary's Seminary.

4200. Did you meet her according to appointment? Yes, a previous appointment.

4201. Was there service there? No, I believe it was a singing class.

- Mr. William
Campbin.
- 3 Dec., 1862.
4202. What was her name? Maria Bradshaw.
4203. For what purpose did you meet her? For the purpose of giving her an opportunity of giving me any information connected with the Bentley case.
4204. Of comparing notes? No, we did not compare any notes.
4205. Were you not present here yesterday when she was examined? I was.
4206. Did it not strike you as being highly improper, knowing this inquiry was going on, to meet a witness whose evidence had been partly given, and who you knew was to be examined again? No, it was not improper; I did not consider it so.
4207. Did you tell Inspector Harrison you were going to meet her? No.
4208. Did you report to him this morning that you had met her? —
4209. Why do you hesitate in your answer? I am not certain.
4210. You do not remember what happened only this morning? No, I am not certain whether I told him or not.
4211. Now tell the Committee, explicitly and without reserve, whether you did tell him or not? I am not certain; I think I did tell him; it was my intention to tell him.
4212. Do you not recollect occurrences that took place this morning, or is your memory so bad that you cannot recollect? I believe I told him; I do not recollect for a certainty. I had a conversation with Inspector Harrison this morning, but I do not know whether I told him that.
4213. Where did you meet Inspector Harrison, and what passed between you and him? At the detective office. I spoke to him yesterday afternoon, previous to my seeing her.
4214. By Mr. Johnson: You said you did not tell him you were going to meet her? No.
4215. By Mr. Hart: Will you answer the question I have just put to you—you have answered one part of it, by saying you met him at the detective office—now I want you to tell us what took place between you and him? I told him I had given evidence, and that the girls had been examined yesterday, and I told him also that the Committee seemed to be displeased with the manner in which I gave my evidence, because I could not answer the questions that were asked me direct.
4216. Well, go on? I told him the substance of what I said.
4217. Proceed? Well, that is all. Of course he told me, what questions I could answer to answer them directly without any reserve.
4218. Did you or did you not tell him that you met this girl, Maria Bradshaw, last night, and what passed between you? I believe I told him during the conversation; I could not be certain.
4219. Did he ask you if you had met either of these girls? No, he did not.
4220. Still you say you believe you told him? Yes.
4221. If you believe you told him, will you state the circumstances that induce you to that belief? Because it is a circumstance that I think I would tell him. I know it was my intention to tell him, but whether it slipped my memory or not I am not certain.
4222. Are you not wilfully keeping back from the Committee what passed between you and Mr. Harrison at that interview this morning—Do you not recollect well and faithfully, but you will not inform the Committee? No, I will inform you of anything that takes place.
4223. You state you believe you told Mr. Harrison that you met this girl last night? Yes.
4224. Tell the Committee why you think so? Because I know it was my intention to do so. When I met the girl last night it was my intention to tell Mr. Harrison, this morning, that I had been speaking to her, and I had a conversation with Mr. Harrison this morning, and I believe I told him. If I did not do so I will do it.
4225. Did you lay out for yourself any course to pursue when you met this girl, with the view of eliciting any facts connected with the case? No.
4226. What passed between you and Maria Bradshaw last night—what did you say to her? I stood against the stump at the Colonial Architect's, and I saw her coming up. I said—"Is that you, Mary?" "Yes," she said. I asked her how she felt—whether she felt nervous or not? She said no, but she was nervous before the Committee; and she asked me the names of the Members of the Committee. I told her Mr. Dalgleish, Mr. Morris, Mr. Wilson. She said—"Did they ask you the same as they asked me?" I said, "Yes." "So," I said, "you spoke the truth, and nothing but the truth, and you never need be afraid of telling the truth, because it will carry you through anywhere."
4227. Then she asked you if the Committee had asked you the same as they had asked her; and you said, yes? Yes.
4228. And you told her to say the same as you said? No, I did not.
4229. Did you not speak the truth? Yes.
4230. And you told her to speak the truth? Yes.
4231. Was not that telling her to say the same as you? I said she had spoken the truth, and by speaking the truth it would carry her through anywhere—that she need not be afraid of any one; and I bid her good night.
4232. Are you in the position of adviser to this girl? Not that I am aware of.
4233. Do you take it upon yourself, as a member of the detective police, to tell persons what evidence they are to give before Committees of this House? I advised her to tell the truth.
4234. Do you ever tell falsehoods in the course of your duty? If I went to apprehend a man, I might say I did not want him, if I thought that by doing so I could get information where he was. The ends of justice might be defeated if I did not.
4235. Nevertheless you advise persons always to speak the truth? Yes.
4236. But you do not follow that rule yourself? Yes, I do.
4237. You have stated just now that you do not? I say I would tell what you might call a "trade lie"—the same as persons in business do, when they recommend an article as first rate when they know it is not so.

4238. Privately you speak the truth, but in your public capacity you feel it your duty to tell falsehoods? A small lie to attain a good object—for the purpose of apprehending a criminal. Mr. William Camphin.
4239. In fact, you think the end justifies the means? Well, in a slight degree. 3 Dec., 1862.
4240. Why do you qualify it? Because I consider that if I could go and apprehend a notorious thief, by representing to a person, who could tell me where he was, that I did not want him, and thereby ascertain his whereabouts, I think I would be justified in saying so.
4241. How long have you been in the Colony? Since 1857.
4242. Have you ever been in trouble since then? What sort of trouble?
4243. In gaol? No.
4244. You have not? I have not.
4245. You say that positively? Yes. In gaol as a prisoner, do you mean?
4246. Yes? No.
4247. You have heard it stated in the House of Assembly—have you not read the report where it was stated that you have been? No; no one would dare to say so.
4248. In the debate on the vote for the detective police? No. If any one would tell me I have been in any sort of trouble, I say it is false.
4249. I am glad to hear you have not been, but it has been so stated? It is a falsehood, whoever said so. It is an unmanly thing to stab a man's character behind his back. Let those who say so come forward and state it openly. I can produce testimonials from Home, and this Colony also. There is a character I have got (throwing a paper on the table).
4250. Put it up again, and keep a respectful demeanour towards me. In your evidence, yesterday, you stated that one of these girls had told you that a Roman Catholic priest had occasionally seen Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
4251. Did she state the name of that priest? No.
4252. Did you ask her? I asked if she knew him, and she said she had made inquiries to ascertain if she could find out, and she could not.
4253. Have you ever been secreted in Mr. Bentley's house, by order of Mr. Harrison? I have been in Mr. Bentley's house on duty. Of course I have not been secreted unknown to Mr. Bentley.
4254. During the time you were there, did anything occur which would lead you to suppose that persons could or had obtained access to the house, unknown to the Bentleys? No.
4255. You say your attention was drawn to the gate at the top of the landing being open one night? Yes.
4256. Was it broken open or had it been opened after you had seen it fastened? I did not see it fastened.
4257. Then what induced you to report that it was open? Because I saw it open. I asked Mr. Bentley if it had been fastened.
4258. During what time were you in Mr. Bentley's house? Three nights.
4259. At what period of the night? One afternoon I went in about half-past 4, another night about 6 I think, and another between 4 and 6.
4260. Until when did you remain? Until about half-past 12 each night, or it might be twenty minutes past 12.
4261. Before you took up your position, did you see the doors and gates properly closed and fastened? No, I did not look at anything—only watched the door in the room.
4262. You were in a back room, and you saw the door closed? Yes, the door leading off the verandah was closed.
4263. What was your object in placing yourself there? To see if anyone came into the room. I was placed in the room, I understood, to see if anyone came there or attempted to get in.
4264. Would not anyone coming into the house, naturally get into the passage or up-stairs instead of coming into that room? I do not know. I was placed in that room to see if anyone came to that part. I acted according to the instructions I received.
4265. And you had no instructions to watch outside the premises? No.
4266. By the Chairman: Can you explain to the Committee upon what duty you were employed on the 27th of May? I can tell you if you allow me to refer to the duty book.
4267. Can you tell without? No.
4268. Look at the detective duty book then? (Witness referred to the book.) That was one of the nights of the concert.
4269. From 7 o'clock till 12 you were on special duty? Yes.
4270. Did the concert last till 12? No; only I received orders to be early at the concert, and I put it down from the time of my coming on duty in the evening to going off again.
4271. By Mr. Morris: Did you inform the Committee, yesterday, that you had an appointment with Anna Maria Bradshaw? I was not asked, or I would have said so.
4272. By the Chairman: Can you tell the Committee where you were on the 2nd of May, by looking at this book? Yes, that was at the Philharmonic concert too, I believe.
4273. Can you tell the Committee where you were on the 13th of May, by referring to the detective duty book? On special duty to Newtown.
4274. Are there any other entries in this book, in the same way, in reference to the Bentley case? Yes, there are others about Newtown.
4275. Can you explain to the Committee why they are not marked with a B, the same as others are? No, without it was that I entered the duty after the B's were marked.
4276. Then you think the B's were marked before this date? I cannot say for a certainty. Of course I do not know.
4277. With this to assist your memory—can you remember whether the B's were marked before or after this date? No.

Mr. William
Camphin.

3 Dec., 1862.

4278. By Mr. Morris: Do you not think you ought to have informed the Committee, yesterday, that you had made an appointment last night with Anna Maria Bradshaw, without being asked the question? I would have done it if I had thought of it; I did not think of it at the time; I did not wish to keep it a secret.

4279. By Mr. Johnson: When did you make the appointment? On the Sunday morning previous.

4280. By the Chairman: Did I not ask you distinctly what was the last appointment you made with Maria Bradshaw? No, the last time I saw her.

4281. I asked you the last appointment you made with her, and you said it was made on Saturday, to meet on Sunday—that you were with a prisoner, and that you met Maria Bradshaw—and I asked you if you had any further appointment with her, and you said no? I am not aware that I did.

4282. You do not remember that? No; if I had been asked I would have spoken of it.

4283. By Mr. Johnson: Do you know when these alterations were made in this book—just look at this entry of the 2nd of May—you say you were at the concert that night? Yes.

4284. What makes you say you were at the concert that night? Because I see here that I was “on special duty from 7 to 12, by order of H ——” that means Mr. Harrison.

4285. How does that indicate that you were at the concert? I believe so.

4286. Is it true or not that you were at the concert on the 2nd of May? I was at the concert; I would not swear to the date.

4287. Can you take that book and tell the Committee positively what duty you performed on that day? According to this entry, I was on special duty from 7 to 12.

4288. Can you tell what that special duty was? I believe it was at the concert.

4289. Why do you believe it was at the concert? Because it is entered special duty there, and the concert took place between those hours.

4290. How does it indicate that the concert took place on the 2nd of May? Because the concert took place, and I do not remember being employed on special duty at any other place between those hours.

4291. Did you not tell Mr. Hart, just now, that you had been engaged between 6 and 12 on one day, between 4 and 12 on another day, and between 4 or 6 and 12 on another? That was in the house; I was certain of it, because it is marked “inside the house.”

4292. Not marked by you? No.

4293. We want to know how it is that somebody else’s memorandum indicates where you were, and not your own? Of course if I had been aware that it would be asked about afterwards, I would have entered it more fully.

4294. I want to see how you can tell me what these things mean—you say you went through the book with Mr. Harrison? With respect to the times I was in the house.

4295. Was your memory then clear as to the particular duty you performed, in reference to the Bentley case, on the various days on which B’s are entered? Yes, I was clear so far.

4296. Is your memory clear now? Not so clear as it was then; the thing was fresh in my mind then.

4297. What duty were you doing on the 23rd of May—can you tell that without looking at the book? No, it is impossible for a man to remember so long what duty he was doing, without referring.

4298. Can you remember where you were on the 23rd May? No, not without referring to the book.

4299. Do you make daily entries now in a book like this? No, we have got no book to enter them in—the book is here.

4300. Have you no substitute? No, I have not entered any since the book came here.

4301. Do you now keep a diary yourself, from which you can refresh your memory a few months hence, as to what you are doing day by day? No.

4302. Look at this 2nd of May again—you see there is no B put against your entry of the 2nd of May? No, I see not.

4303. How does that happen? I do not know.

4304. Were you doing duty in the Bentley case at all that day? I believe so, in consequence of seeing this entry—“Special duty from 7 till 12”—the concert took place between those hours.

4305. What day of the week did the concert take place? Either a Monday or a Tuesday—the first concert.

4306. Can you not see that is neither Monday nor Tuesday? No, I have not looked.

4307. Are you sure the concert took place on Monday or Tuesday? I would not be certain—I believe it did; I cannot say after such a length of time positively.

4308. Why do you say that entry which is nothing but “special duty”—which has no B against it—had anything to do with the Bentley case? I believe it had, in consequence of seeing “special duty from 7 to 12.”

4309. By the Chairman: Are there not other entries in that book where special duty is named, before the Bentley case was in hand at all? Yes, there is special duty marked in the book.

4310. And between particular hours and on particular occasions? I do not know whether the hours are stated or not.

4311. Would such an entry as that belong to the Bentley case, before the Bentley case was ever in the hands of the police? No. The person entering it would have an idea what duty it was.

4312. By Mr. Morris: Were you employed about the concert-room, in the Bentley case, at the concert that occurred about the 2nd of May? Yes, I was—I was at two concerts.

4313. Then, I apprehend, the entry in the book will indicate special duty on the night of the concert? That is what I believe it to be.

4314. By Mr. Johnson: Would there not be a B. put against it in that case? I do not know. Mr. William Camphin.
4315. Tell me what this entry means—look at this entry of the 29th April—your own entry—and tell me what that means? (Witness reads):—“ Came on duty at 9 a.m.; attended the Water Police Office till 11 a.m.; returned to office at 1 p.m.; resumed duty at 7 p.m.; “ patrolled till 12 midnight.” 3 Dec., 1862.
4316. Does that mean that you were in the streets of the city, patrolling—looking after thieves? Yes.
4317. It does not mean that you were at the concert? No.
4318. Are you sure of that? Yes.
4319. Look at the 27th of May, and tell me what you say you were doing that day and night? (Witness reads):—“ Came on duty at 9 a.m.; patrolled the city till 12:30; remained in the office till 1:30; resumed duty at 7 p.m.; patrolled the north end of the city, in company with detective Elliott, till 12 midnight.” *
4320. Were you at the concert that night? I do not know; I might have been.
4321. What do you call patrolling the north end of the city? Patrolling the streets.
4322. Does it mean going to the concert? No. It is possible I might have been there, and not entered it.
4323. And it is possible that you were also patrolling the north end of the city with detective Elliott till midnight? Not if I was at the concert.
4324. If this entry is true, you were not at the concert? Yes.
4325. You either were not at the concert, or that, that is not a true entry? Yes.
4326. By Mr. Wilson: You have already stated that all the entries there are true entries? I believe them to be true.
4327. By Mr. Johnson: Is there any doubt about the truth of your entries? Sometimes we might be two or three days in arrears of our duty—that is, that we would not enter it for two or three days; for instance, I might be engaged somewhere that would prevent me from entering it, and then when I did enter it, I might possibly make a mistake.
4328. Why—did you not go every day to the detective office, to make these entries? I might go there, but not make an entry.
4329. Why not? I might neglect it.
4330. Must that not occur with all the other constables also; because if not, they would get into another day before you made your entry, and then you would have no room to enter it at all?
4331. By Mr. Wilson: Suppose you are detained, and cannot make your entry, on a particular morning, of your duty on the previous day, is it the custom to leave a space for you in the centre of the page? They would leave a space in the page.
4332. Answer my question. I do not want to be fencing with you in this way. Is it customary for them to leave a space in the centre of the page? It is customary to leave 4333. Give me an answer, yes or no. Is it customary for the other detective constables, when you have not made your entry, to leave a space for you, in the centre of the page, to make your entry? It is customary to leave a space somewhere on the sheet.
4334. Answer my question if you please. Is it customary for the other detectives to leave a space for you to make your entry, in the centre of the page? Not on the centre of the page, but wherever it may occur. Will you allow me to explain?—For instance, if there are five of us, and we all wish to enter a day’s duty, four men might enter their duty down here, but they would not leave a space for me in the centre.
4335. I ask whether it is customary for the other detectives to leave a space in the centre, for you to make your entry afterwards? It is, not customary.
4336. Did you ever know them do so? Yes, I have done it myself.
4337. For what reason? For instance, if I was out patrolling with a mate, I would wish him to enter his duty next to mine, and therefore I would mark a space off, and the next man would begin there.
4338. What would be the object in having his entry next to yours? Merely because he is a mate, and goes out in company with me.
4339. How do you know the requisite number of lines? I guess it.
4340. And consequently he is obliged to make his entry according to the space you have given him? He would write it accordingly; we generally give plenty of space.
4341. How are you to know what is plenty of space—are the entries all of the same length? No, but I have a good idea of what space a man can put his duty in.
4342. How do you know what space it would take another man to put his duty in? If he is a mate of mine, and has been employed on the same duty, I can tell pretty well.
4343. You say it is not customary to leave a space in the middle of a page? Not customary.
4344. Then we may take it for granted that, whenever there is an entry of yours in the centre of a page, you have made that entry at the proper time? No, I will not say that; space has often been left for me.
4345. I am asking, when an entry of yours occurs in the centre of a page, are we to take it for granted that you have made that entry in the regular way, and at the proper time? No, because spaces have often been left for me.
4346. By Mr. Johnson: Then the Committee are not to understand that you can say that any of these entries were made on the day on which they bear date? I could not say positively; I believe it is the case.
- 4347.

* Note:—On subsequent inspection, it appeared that this entry was read by mistake, being dated 28th May. Camphin’s entry of 27th May states that he was “on special duty from 7 p.m. to 12 p.m.”

- Mr. William
Camphin.
- 3 Dec., 1862.
4347. There is no regular system by which you can say what entry was made on the day on which it bears date? No further than that book.
4348. Is there anything in this book to shew when you made the entries? The date at the head of the page.
4349. Does the date shew that the entries were made on that day? No, because I may have been in arrears in the entries of two or three days' duty.
4350. I ask you, is there anything on the face of this book that enables you to say, on looking at it, when you made the entries? Generally they are entered on the days; but, as I said before, oftentimes two or three days might get into arrears.
4351. Do you mean that the entries oftentimes get in arrears, or that you have oftentimes said so? No, it often happens.
4352. What means have you yourself, on looking at this book, of answering the question, as to what date a particular entry was made on? Only from the dates there.
4353. You say these dates will not assist you, because you might have been oftentimes three or four days in arrears? Well, of course, you may naturally suppose a man would recollect for that length of time what duty he had been on.
4354. I am asking you how you could point out to the Committee, with respect to any one entry, on what date it was made? I could not speak positively; there might be mistakes in the entry.
4355. I am not asking as to mistakes in the entry. Can you state with certainty the date when any one of your entries in this book was made? Not for some time back I cannot, only by referring to the dates. Of course, if you look at recent dates, I might be able to remember the duty I was on.
4356. The ascertainment of the fact depends upon your memory, which is daily getting worse and worse—is not that so? I do not know that it is getting worse and worse.
4357. Did you not tell me just now, that the circumstance of your having omitted to make your entry for three or four days might account for the entry not being correct? Yes, that is possible.
4358. Then these entries may have been delayed so long that your memory has failed you on the subject? They are never delayed more than three or four days. It is possible I have made a mistake.
4359. Was not that the reason you gave yourself, for some apparent inconsistency? I cannot account for it any other way.
4360. By Mr. Wilson: Can you recollect any particular occasion when your entries were delayed three or four days? I cannot recollect such an occasion, only I know such a thing has occurred.
4361. Can you remember, on these particular occasions, the reason of the delay in making the entries? Yes, I remember. I have been employed elsewhere, and I may have delayed making the entries.
4362. Where do you mean by elsewhere—at Burrangong? No, about the city; I may have been busy; sometimes I have been out night and day.
4363. Have three or four days at any time elapsed that you have not been in the office? Yes.
4364. Has that circumstance happened often? No, not often.
4365. How often do you suppose? I have been at Newcastle twice for three or four days.
4366. I am not alluding to when you have been out of town or in other parts of the Colony, but at the time you were employed in Sydney—have three or four days ever elapsed without your being in Sydney? Not while I have been in Sydney.
4367. And while you have been in the office, had you not time to make the short entry in the detective duty book? Yes.
4368. Why did you not do it? I must have neglected it.
4369. Is there no supervision—who superintends you? The clerk in the office keeps a book of his own.
4370. Is there any person who takes any superintendence of you, to see that you do your duty in making these entries? Yes.
4371. Who is it? Mr. Harrison.
4372. Does Mr. Harrison see that these entries are made? I do not know whether he looks at the book or not.
4373. You do not know whether he ever gets any information from you, or examines the book in your presence? I give him information as to what I have been doing.
4374. Does he examine the book in your presence? I have seen him look at the book often.
4375. Is he in the habit of looking regularly at the book in your presence? No.
4376. How often does he do so? I cannot tell.
4377. Does he do it three times a week? He may do; I do not notice what books he looks at.
4378. How long have you been in the detective service? Since the 1st of March.
4379. Are you not aware how the business is conducted in the detective office? I cannot give details of how the business is conducted.
4380. Are you aware how the business is conducted in the detective office? I cannot say.
4381. You do not know? I cannot explain —
4382. I want an answer to a simple fact? I do not know.
4383. By Mr. Morris: Has Mr. Harrison ever censured you for neglect of duty, in not entering the particulars of your daily duty in the detective duty book? No.
4384. Never censured you once? No, not that I am aware of.
4385. Not that you are aware of? No.
4386. By Mr. Johnson: May he have censured you, and may you have forgotten it? No; I think I would remember a thing of that sort.
- 4387.

4387. Have you ever been examined in a court of justice? Yes.
4388. Often? Yes.
4389. By Mr. Wilson: Do you think that you are bound to give evidence in a more truthful manner when you are on your oath than when you are not? No.
4390. Would you prevaricate as much when on oath as when you are not? I would be asked questions there that I could give direct answers to; I cannot give direct answers to what I do not know for a certainty.
4391. By the Chairman: Will you say whether you would or would not remember the circumstance, if you had been severely censured by your superior officer since the 1st of March? I would remember it.
4392. Then if you do not remember such a circumstance, the Committee may take it for granted that you have not been censured? I have not, that I am aware of.
4393. We want to know whether you have or have not, as a matter of fact? No, I have not been censured.
4394. By Mr. Johnson: Look at the entry of the 27th May, and tell me what duty you were doing then? (The witness read the entry as follows):—"Came on duty at 9 a.m., patrolled the city till 1 p.m. Special duty from 7 p.m. till 12 p.m."
4395. What was the special duty then? I cannot remember for a certainty.
4396. When did you first go on duty in the Bentley case? When I went to Mr. Bentley's house.
4397. That was on the 14th April—I suppose I must tell you instead of you telling me—I asked when you first went on duty in the Bentley case? When I first went to Mr. Bentley's house, on the first day of the last week in Lent.
4398. Just look at your entry of the 14th April—that was the first time? Yes, I believe that was the first time.
4399. When was the addition to your entry, "in at B.'s house first time" added to it? I do not know the day.
4400. How long after you made your own entry? As I said before, I think it was some time in May.
4401. May consists of thirty-one days—can you say whether it was the beginning, middle, or end of May? I believe it was the beginning; I did not pay particular attention to the time. Of course if I had had any idea that I would have been required to give evidence about it, I would have taken notice of it.
4402. You have told us that often enough already? I cannot say; I do not know.
4403. Are you sure it was in the month of May at all? I am not certain.
4404. Are you sure it was not before the month of May? No.
4405. Might it have been after the month of May? It is possible it might.
4406. Is the whole of that addition to the entry in Mr. Harrison's handwriting? I believe it is.
4407. By Mr. Hart: Will you look in your note-book and see if you have any entry there of the 14th April? (The witness referred to his note-book.) No.
4408. Have you any objection to allow me to look? None whatever. (Note-book handed to Mr. Hart.)
4409. I see these entries are not made consecutively? No.
4410. There is an entry dated September 5, 1862, following one dated March 12? —
4411. By Mr. Johnson: Have you any entries in that note-book of your own, of any duty you performed in the Bentley case? No.
4412. Or in any other book, or any written memoranda of any kind? No.
4413. Or anything whatever to refresh your memory except this detective duty book? No.
4414. Will you state whether that word "house," in that addition to the entry, is not your own handwriting? No, it is not.
4415. Whose writing is it? I believe it is Mr. Harrison's.
4416. In whose handwriting are the two following words, "first time"? I believe Mr. Harrison's.
4417. The words "first time," as well as the word "house"? I believe so. I never make an "h" that way.
4418. What was the next duty you performed? I went to Mr. Bentley's house the following day.
4419. What was the next duty? I went to his house again the following day.
4420. What was the next duty you performed in connection with the Bentley case? I think the next duty was the concert.
4421. Will this book tell you—(Witness referred to the book)—There is one entry you are passing over? I believe that was one; I believe that was the night of the concert.
4422. What date is that? The 2nd of May.
4423. Was that the first concert you were at? Yes.
4424. What was the next duty you had? The next time was to Newtown.
4425. Next to the 2nd of May? After the 2nd of May.
4426. What is the date? "Special duty from 12 to 3, Tuesday, 6th May."
4427. You were at Newtown—does it say so? It does not say so, but I believe I was there that day.
4428. What was the next? Friday, 9th May, I went to Newtown.
4429. The next? Tuesday, 13th May, special duty to Newtown. I went to Newtown only three times.
4430. What else had you? I went to another concert.
4431. When was that? I believe it was Tuesday, 27th May.
4432. Were these all the occasions you were employed on the Bentley case? That is all that I was specially employed.

Mr. William
Camplin.

3 Dec., 1862.

- Mr. William
Camplin.
3 Dec., 1862.
4433. I ask, have you now specified all the occasions on which you did duty on the Bentley case? No; there was one occasion when I went to Mr. Bentley with a note, and another occasion when I went to Mr. Bentley's house, inquiring for Mr. Harrison.
4434. When were they? I do not remember the dates; I remember the circumstance.
4435. Who was the note from? Mr. Harrison.
4436. Now, have you told us everything you did, special or common, in any way, in the Bentley case? Yes, I believe that is all I had to do with it—all that I remember.
4437. You do not consider these interviews with that girl —? Of course they are known already. If you wish me to state them —
4438. I want you to answer my questions? Of course I have been concerned as far as meeting this girl.
4439. Anything else. I do not limit my question. I am asking you everything? No, I never remember being concerned in any other way with it.
4440. With any other persons, or in any other manner? No.
4441. During those days on which you were employed on the Bentley case, did anything special come under your observation, during the whole time? Yes.
4442. What? The night that I was in Mr. Bentley's house—one of the three nights—I think the second night—I walked to the window and I saw the wicket gate, at the top of the stairs, leading from the yard on to the verandah, open. I spoke to Mr. Bentley, and asked him if it had been left open.
4443. What did he say? I think he said he did not know, and he went and spoke to Mrs. Bentley; at least he went up-stairs —
4444. Did he tell you if he had spoken to her? Let me see; wait a moment. When he came down the reply he made to me, I believe was, that Mrs. Bentley said it was closed.
4445. Is that a belief or a certainty? That was the substance of what he said.
4446. Are you sure it was the substance? I am sure it was the substance.
4447. What was the next special circumstance? I was at the concert —
4448. The first concert? At the first concert, I think, I did not take any particular notice of anything.
4449. Then it was the second concert? Yes.
4450. What took place at the second concert? I believe it was the second; I would not be certain.
4451. What was the circumstance? Mr. Boulanger came to me and spoke to me. He said—"Take notice of that man," pointing to a man that stood near the platform; he said I was to watch him, and of course I did so.
4452. Were you in the concert-room on that occasion? I was.
4453. Cannot you remember whether it was the first or second concert? I rather think it was the second.
4454. Was it the occasion when Mrs. Bentley did not play when she was expected to play? Yes, that was the occasion.
4455. Mr. Boulanger told you to take notice of a man he pointed out standing near the orchestra? Yes.
4456. Was there any other special circumstance? I watched the man as he told me, and of course I saw him walking up and down there; he walked sometimes down the passage.
4457. Do you know who that man was? I have seen him since.
4458. Do you know now who he is? I do not know his name. I saw him one day, as I stood at the corner of Pitt-street—Tierney's corner. I saw him pass by with an old gentleman, and I spoke to a person and asked if he knew him, and I think it was Captain Mallam, he said his name was. I saw him afterwards at the Club House in Bent-street, near the old Brigade Office.
4459. Have you now related all the special circumstances that occurred during your employment on the Bentley case? No. One night I was in King-street, and I observed a man standing against the post; I thought it looked suspicious, and that he might have posted letters, and I went and reported it to Mr. Harrison.
4460. Was anything else done that night? Yes. Detective Clark was told to be at the Post Office the following morning, to see if any letter had been posted; but previous to that I went up to Mr. Bentley's house, to ask for Mr. Harrison.
4461. That is the occasion that you have before spoken of, as having gone to Mr. Bentley's to inquire for Mr. Harrison? Yes.
4462. By Mr. Hart: You say this letter-receiver was in King-street? Yes.
4463. By Mr. Johnson: When did that occurrence take place? I do not know.
4464. Have you no means of reference? I did not make a note of it, because I never heard anything more of it.
4465. Can you mention any other circumstances that occurred while you were employed on this duty? The day I took the note to Mr. Bentley's house, I met the girl Mary at the door.
4466. Mary Ryan? I do not know her other name. I asked her if she would give that to Mr. Bentley. She said, "I saw you at the office one day, passing." "How is it you did not speak?" said I. "I was afraid you would put me in gaol," she said. I said, "You need not fear, if you have done nothing wrong"; and then she made some remark like this,—"I can bore holes better than Maria"; she was speaking in a laughing manner, and might have said it in a joke.
4467. That was when you gave the letter at the door? Yes.
4468. Can you remember the day? No.
4469. Can you fix it within any limits? No, I can merely remember the circumstance.
4470. Have you anything more to report? I remember, at the concert on the last occasion, I took notice to Mr. Montagu and another man laughing and clapping at the concert.
- 4471.

4471. Did you report that circumstance to anyone? Yes, I believe I told Mr. Bentley when Mr. Harrison was present. Mr. William
Camplin.
4472. I want you to tell the Committee all that came under your observation—have you finished now, or have you got any more to tell? That is all I remember. 3 Dec., 1862.
4473. How were you engaged on the 21st of April? Will you allow me to refer to the detective duty book? (Witness referred to the book.)
4474. Had you nothing to do with the Bentley case that day or night? No, not that I am aware of.
4475. Did you see the tool chest at Mr. Bentley's house, in that room where you were? I never remarked one.
4476. How many interviews do you say you have had with Anna Maria Bradshaw about this case? Let me see. I think five. I wish to correct myself in one particular—or at least to state further, not correct myself—I saw her on the Friday also, the first week; I saw her on the Wednesday and on the Friday also.
4477. By Mr. Morris: You mean on the Friday after you received the letter appointing a meeting on the Wednesday previous? Yes.
4478. By Mr. Johnson: You first saw her on the Sunday when you say her aunt came and fetched you? Yes.
4479. What Sunday was that? The Sunday previous to receiving that letter.
4480. That would be the 9th of November, I think—When did you next see her? On the Wednesday.
4481. When did you next see her? On the Friday.
4482. Of the same week? Yes.
4483. After that? Then I was to see her —
4484. When did you see her? I saw her in George-street, when I was just going to get into an omnibus, but not to have any conversation with her.
4485. When did you next see her after the Friday? I saw her in George-street, let me see what day it was. I think it was the week before last, one day that I was going up to the Barracks; I was just going into an omnibus.
4486. You had no conversation with her whatever on that occasion? I think I bid her good morning.
4487. Anything more than good morning? No, I told her I was going in the omnibus to Paddington.
4488. Was any appointment made then? No, I do not remember. There was an appointment made that I did not keep, but whether it was made on the Friday evening I cannot say.
4489. On this occasion when you say you only saw her, you cannot tell whether you made an appointment? I do not believe I did.
4490. What day was this? I think it was on a Tuesday or a Wednesday.
4491. By Mr. Wilson: Could you not see it in the detective duty book? I do not think so.
4492. By Mr. Johnson: When did you next see her after the time you were going to Paddington? On the Racecourse, on the Saturday morning—last Saturday.
4493. That would be the 29th? Yes.
4494. Did you not see her to speak to her on the subject of this case, between Friday the 14th and Saturday the 29th November? No. I had an appointment to see her, but I did not see her.
4495. By the Chairman: When did you make the appointment to see her? I believe it was on the last occasion, on the Friday, that I was speaking to her.
4496. By Mr. Johnson: Friday, the 14th, that would be? Yes, the Friday after I received the letter.
4497. By the Chairman: When did you appoint to meet her then? I think the appointment was for the Sunday or the Tuesday—I do not know which—in the following week.
4498. Then you did not see her? No.
4499. By Mr. Johnson: That appointment lapsed? Yes.
4500. When do you say you saw her after that, after failing to keep the appointment—when did you next see her? I think the next occasion I saw her was in George-street.
4501. Did you make any appointment then? No, the appointment was made.
4502. After the appointment which you did not keep had passed, when did you next see her? On the Racecourse, last Saturday.
4503. Then you did not see her on the Friday? Not after the Friday I speak of.
4504. Not on the Friday immediately preceding last Saturday? No.
4505. By Mr. Hart: Did you meet accidentally, or was it an appointment on Saturday? There was no appointment; she was on Hyde Park, near the cab-stand, crossing over the Park from Elizabeth-street.
4506. By Mr. Johnson: Did you make an appointment then? Yes.
4507. When for? The Sunday morning following—that was last Sunday.
4508. You saw her on that occasion? I did.
4509. When did you next see her? Last night.
4510. The 2nd December—When did you make the appointment to meet her last night? On the Sunday morning.
4511. Did you make any appointment last night? No.
4512. Have you any appointment now to meet her again? No.
4513. Have you told all that took place last night between you and her? Yes.
4514. Your conversation last night, then, was principally composed of statements as to what took place before this Committee during the day? And how she felt—how her health was; I asked how she was—she is naturally nervous—how her nerves were; and she said she was nervous before the Committee.

- Mr. William
Camphin.
3 Dec., 1862.
4515. Your conversation was confined almost, according to your statement, to what took place before the Committee? Yes.
4516. She asked you what you had been asked? She said—"I suppose you were asked the same as I was asked?"
4517. She asked if you had given the same answers? No.
4518. Did she ask if you agreed with what she said? That was all the words she made use of.
4519. By Mr. Morris: Will you be kind enough to look at this entry, and say who scratched that out? I scratched that out. That was originally "a female."
4520. By the Chairman: When did you cross it out? On the Monday morning.
4521. That entry relates to the first meeting you had with Maria Bradshaw? Yes.
4522. By Mr. Wilson: And Maria Bradshaw is the "female" alluded to there? Yes.
4523. By Mr. Johnson: The words "a female," now erased, refer to her? Yes.
4524. These conversations with Maria Bradshaw were almost entirely confined to the subject of what she told you Mrs. Bentley had said about being followed by a priest? That was the principal thing.
4525. What else? We were speaking about where I came from, and where she came from, and matters of private business, but principally about the priest in connection with the Bentley case.
4526. What else beside the priest in connection with the Bentley case? She said Mrs. Bentley had told her that the author of the alleged persecution in Exeter was a man named Ryan or Ryall; that the way that that took place—I cannot exactly relate the words, but I will relate the substance—she said that Mrs. Bentley had told her that when Mrs. Bentley was young she was preparing for confirmation with her sister, and that when she was about to be confirmed, the minister raised some objection to confirming her in consequence of her not having been baptized, and it caused some unpleasantness to arise in the family, and caused her to be uneasy at home; and she said she then became acquainted with this Mr. Ryan or Ryall, and that he was the only person who expressed any sympathy for her; and she said he proposed that if she was troubled at home she should go into a convent.
4527. I want to know whether there was any conversation as to Mrs. Bentley's statements, except in reference to this priest that she talked about following Mrs. Bentley? Yes; she said Mrs. Bentley had said something to her at one time about writing to a German gentleman, and that she represented herself as a German lady, and that she received an answer from him.
4528. That was some man who undertook to delineate people's characters from their handwriting? Yes.
4529. Have you told us all that took place at every one of these interviews? What I can remember; I may not have related all.
4530. Do you now remember anything more than you told us yesterday? ———
4531. By Mr. Morris: When did you shew the letter you received from Maria Bradshaw to Mr. Harrison? I believe it was the same evening.
4532. That you received it? Yes.
4533. And you communicated to him that you had made an appointment with Maria Bradshaw? Yes, I told him I was to see her.
4534. By Mr. Johnson: On the subject of the Bentley case? Yes.
4535. You told this girl you were going to be examined here? Yes. I remember something more. She made a remark to me that she heard Mr. Johnson say to either Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, that this affair would cost about £400, and, as his character was at stake, he would bear the expense.
4536. She said I made that remark? Yes, I believe it was you she said made that remark; it was between you and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley.
4537. Are you sure she mentioned that sum? Yes.
4538. Anything else? And she said you made some remark about a Mrs. Lindsay having seen a man leaving the house about 2 o'clock in the morning; and that you said—"Oh! she says 5 now"—something to that effect.
4539. By Mr. Hart: Five men? No; 5 o'clock in the morning.
4540. By Mr. Johnson: Did she say she overheard that conversation, or that the subject was mentioned when she was present? She said she heard it; she did not say it was mentioned when she was present.
4541. Well, have you told the whole story now that she told you? She said that Mr. Boulanger was there a week ago last Sunday, and Mrs. Bentley was crying in the verandah.
4542. That you told us yesterday? Yes.
4543. I want to know whether the Committee have got everything? That is all I can remember. Something else might come to my mind shortly.
4544. Were you at both concerts—were you inside the concert room? Some parts of it; I was outside occasionally.
4545. By the Chairman: That is to say, you were not fixed in that particular spot? Not all the time; I came out sometimes.
4546. When you went inside was any other detective at the door? Mr. Harrison was there sometimes; he was absent a great part of the time from the door I was at.
4547. Were you both absent together from the door you were at? Yes.
4548. So that anyone could have gone out without your knowing it? Yes.
4549. You say Mr. Harrison was not constantly at the door? No; he was away several times.
4550. Did he come to visit you at the door you were at? Yes.
4551. Did he stop long? Sometimes he might stop five or ten minutes or a quarter of an hour.

4552. So that anyone could have gone out from the door where he was stationed without his knowing it? He went from one door to another; he did not appear to be stationed at any particular door. Mr. William Camplin.

4553. By Mr. Johnson: How often did you see Mr. Harrison writing in any book at all when you were making reports to him? I cannot say I exactly saw him writing in a book while I was making a report, but afterwards; I have seen him writing in a book in his room, it might be on three occasions; I could not say to a certainty. 3 Dec., 1862.

4554. You do not absolutely recollect ever seeing him write at all when you were making a report? Not at the time I was making the report; I do not recollect him entering it at the time, except making the B.'s there.

4555. You can only speak to three times seeing him writing in a book at all? I have seen him writing in a book; I could not say what book it was.

4556. How often have you seen him writing in a book? It might have been three times.

4557. Can you speak to more than three times, in any book whatever? I could not say, because I did not take particular notice of what he was doing.

4558. Did you pay no attention to the book at all? No, I did not.

4559. Did you see how it was covered? No.

4560. Or what was the colour of the cover? No.

4561. By Mr. Wilson: Was it ruled? I could not say that even.

4562. By Mr. Johnson: Did you ever see him put the book away? I cannot say that I have.

4563. Where is that detective duty book kept? It is kept in the office.

4564. Is it kept in a particular room? Yes, in the front room.

4565. By the Chairman: Is that known as Mr. Harrison's room? No, Mr. Harrison's room is at the back.

4566. By Mr. Johnson: Were you, Sanderson, and Clark, all called in together, to go over that detective duty book and see what entries related to the Bentley case? I never was in with Clark.

4567. Were you in with Sanderson? Yes.

4568. Were all the B.'s made at that time? I do not know; the B.'s connected with my duty were made at that time.

4569. Were the additions to your entries made at that time? I cannot say; I did not notice them.

4570. By the Chairman: Did you see the B.'s made? I did.

4571. By Mr. Wilson: Did you hear Sanderson at that meeting asked any questions as regards his duty? Yes.

4572. And were the B.'s marked against his entries? Yes.

4573. You are sure of that? Yes.

4574. By Mr. Johnson: What did you say was your motive for meeting Maria Bradshaw last night? Because it had been a previous appointment.

4575. What for? If she had anything to say to me, to give her an opportunity of saying it.

4576. Had you not an opportunity on Sunday;—did you make another appointment? No.

4577. Why not? Because I did not think fit.

4578. You did not think it necessary on Tuesday? Well, I did not do it. No doubt I could see her if I wanted, by going to Church.

4579. You go to the same Church? I do; I go to St. Mary's.

4580. At your conversation last night, did Maria ask you if Mary had been examined? No.

4581. Did you tell her whether she had or not? No, I do not believe Mary's name was ever mentioned.

4582. Are you sure of that? Yes.

4583. And you have told us all that took place? Yes, all that I remember. She may have said something more to me that I cannot remember. I think I have related all as near as I can.

4584. You do not think it inconsistent with propriety, to make false statements when you have a particular end in view—to state things as true which are not true, in order to carry out your objects? I think it is wrong.

4585. Why do you do it? When do I do it?

4586. Did you not tell Mr. Hart that you might tell a small lie to effect a good object? In the case of apprehending a thief I say —

4587. You do not consider it inconsistent with propriety to tell lies of that sort? To a certain extent.

4588. Who is the judge how far you are to go? I would not do it to injure a person, but for the good of society, to enable me to get information of a notorious thief, I might do it, in the way I have mentioned before.

4589. Provided it were for the good of society, you would not mind even though it injured an individual? If I thought it injured anyone I don't know that I would do it.

4590. What do you mean by saying you don't know? I would not injure any person knowingly.

4591. Then, if the good of society would be promoted, you think it justifiable to state as facts what are not facts? In that particular instance, if I thought I could go and apprehend a robber by saying to a person that I did not want him, or was not looking for him, and he would tell me where he was —

4592. In that case you think the end would justify the means? Yes.

4593. And, of course, you have to exercise your own judgment how far you may resort to that kind of statement, according as you yourself think the end will justify it or not? Yes, I should exercise my judgment that far.

4594. During the time you were in Mr. Bentley's house, had you much opportunity of seeing Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? I saw Mr. Bentley pretty often; I did not see Mrs. Bentley so often; I heard her up-stairs. 4595.

- Mr. William
Camplin.
3 Dec., 1862.
4595. Was she much engaged with her children? I do not know what she was engaged with.
4596. What book is it you say the clerk keeps at the detective office? A book that he enters the duty in, for his own information and the information of the office. That (referring to the book on the table) is for the men themselves; no one else interferes with it.
4597. Does it contain entries of the duties performed, or said to be performed by the various detective officers? Yes—what they are supposed to look after.
4598. Is it a record of the duty assigned to them, or of the duty which has been performed by them? Of the duty they are expected to go after, or that they are supposed to be looking after.
4599. Do you know from what materials the clerk makes these entries? He knows pretty well what we are going after, and enters it accordingly.
4600. How does he know it? If a report of a robbery comes in, he might say, you had better look after this, you and so-and-so.
4601. Who is the party you speak of? Mr. M'Martin.
4602. Does not Mr. Harrison set your duty for you? He tells us what to go after.
4603. How does Mr. M'Martin know that? Because he knows all the reports that come in.
4604. How does Mr. M'Martin become acquainted with the matters he enters in that book? From the reports of robberies that come in.
4605. Does he learn from Mr. Harrison who is to do the duty? If Mr. Harrison is not there when the report of any robbery comes in, if I am in the office, I might say I will take this in hand.
4606. Have you, in fact, ever seen that book yourself, to read the entries? I have seen it.
4607. Do you know whether there are any entries in it about the Bentley case? I do not know.
4608. By Mr. Wilson: What is the book called? The detective duty book; I believe that is written on the back of it.
4609. Is it the same as this one? About the same size.
4610. You have stated to the Committee that, under certain circumstances, you consider it is justifiable in you to tell lies for the good of society —? To a certain extent.
4611. I say to a certain extent. Do you think you would be justified in trying to win the affections of any girl for the good of society? No, I would not attempt it; I would not wish to gain the affections of anyone without I wished to return them.
4612. Do you think you would be justified in attempting to seduce a girl for the good of society? Decidedly not.
4613. Then you think any detective who attempted to do such a thing very culpable indeed? Yes, most decidedly.
4614. Are there any police regulations which allow you to tell lies for the good of society? Not that I am aware of.
4615. These things are left entirely to your own discretion—how far you are to go with these lies? I don't know that we are supposed to tell them at all.
4616. Are there any regulations about them, about what may be called police lies? No, not that I am aware of.
4617. By Mr. Morris: If you were convinced in your own mind that a certain party was writing anonymous letters, do you think that you, by any ingenuity, could discover, after the time, that you knew this person was the writer of the letters, if he wrote and posted letters to any extent? I scarcely understand the question.
4618. You knowing that a party was in the habit of writing anonymous letters—being convinced in your own mind that this person did write anonymous letters—do you think you could discover whether he posted these letters, if he continued to write them, you knowing that he wrote them? If he posted them himself, it is possible that you might not.
4619. Even if you had at your disposal the whole strength of the detective force? It is possible he might evade it.
4620. Do you think it possible he could elude you, you knowing he was the writer of the letters? Yes, I do. You do not know how many agents he might have employed.
4621. Would you try to detect him, or any person connected with him? Yes, if I knew the person to be the writer of the anonymous letters, and knew that he posted them, or had an idea that he posted them, I would try and discover when he did so.
4622. In fact, that would be the main object you would have before you—to detect him in posting them? Yes, I would employ all means I could to detect him.
4623. In posting them? In every way.
4624. By Mr. Wilson: Do you ever employ persons not connected with the police force to assist you? Yes.
4625. What sort of persons? Any sort of persons I think can give information.
4626. How do you pay these persons? Sometimes I might "shout" for them, give them a shilling, and so on.
4627. Is that with the view of giving you particular information, or getting them to perform certain services? With the view of getting information from them.
4628. Do you ever employ persons to do certain duties in the way of detection? No.
4629. Do you never go further than getting information? No.
4630. Are you aware whether it is the custom of any members of the force to do so? No.
4631. Were you connected with the case with Mr. Harrison in the Domain, when he apprehended a person for trying to extort money? I was.
4632. Was there not some person then employed? Yes, two young men.
4633. Who employed these two young men? I think Sanderson got one and Mr. Harrison the other.

4634. Do you not consider, that employing persons out of the detective force to perform services — ? It was merely done gratuitously by them. Mr. William Camphin.
4635. I asked you the question simply—do you not consider that it is improper to employ persons unconnected with the detective force to perform services in the detection of offenders? 3 Dec., 1862.
I understood you to mean paid persons.
4636. I do not wish to know anything about the payment at all? There were two employed on that occasion.
4637. How do you know they were not paid for their services? I know from the character of one of them that he was not; of course what is done behind my back I do not know. If such a thing did occur I did not know of it.
4638. What did you know of the other? I am not acquainted with him, only by seeing him riding about on horseback; he is a collector for some one.
4639. What is the position of the other party? He is also a collector, and foreman of a store.
4640. It is merely from their position in society that you say they were not paid? I believe they were not paid.
4641. You have no certain knowledge of the fact? No.
4642. Still you admit their being employed, to your knowledge, in duties belonging to the detective police? They were employed; they volunteered their services.
4643. How do you know they volunteered their services? Because I was present when one did so.
4644. Which one? The one Sanderson engaged.
4645. Did he make overtures to Sanderson? The way it occurred was this: I think Sanderson told him we were going in the Domain, and this young chap—he is a man who often speaks to us, and he seemed anxious to go, and of course he was allowed to go.
4646. Had he ever been in company with the detectives before? Yes.
4647. On similar duty? No; he has accompanied us when on duty.
4648. By the Chairman: What do you mean by a collector? He collects accounts.
4649. Was either of these the man that has run away from Mr. Tooth's employment? No.
4650. What do you know of his character? I am acquainted with him, and never heard anything against his character.
4651. By Mr. Wilson: Would there be anything against a man's character in taking payment for services performed? No. To shew that he went voluntarily, I mentioned that he is a man in a good situation; he merely went perhaps from curiosity or the novelty of the thing. I went dressed as one woman, and he went dressed as another woman.
4652. When I commenced my examination on this point, it was not so much with a view to cases of this kind as to the employment of thieves and men of bad character to perform services in connection with the detective police, and you state that they never perform services? Yes, we often get them to give information.
4653. You never engage them with the view of detecting crime? If they can assist me they may, but I never engage them.
4654. Did you ever hear of the case of a person named Cockerell, where a blackguard named Grant was employed by the police? Yes, I have heard of it.
4655. Have you heard of any similar cases? I have heard reports of men of very bad character being employed.
4656. By Mr. Hart: Are women employed also? Not that I am aware of. Of course if a woman can give information well and good.
4657. It was principally with respect to your detective duty that you placed yourself in communication with Maria Bradshaw, and not from any private friendship that may exist between you and her? No, I had no other motive than that.
4658. By Mr. Wilson: Do you ever change your place of abode with a view of more efficiently carrying out your duties? Not without I go out of town.
4659. Do you never go into any of the boarding-houses? No.
4660. You are not aware of any of the other detectives doing so? No, not in my time.
4661. By Mr. Hart: Is this entry of yours made on the 9th of November, 1862:—"Came on duty at 6:30, and patrolled the Racecourse with — till 10 p.m."—correct? I was not on the Racecourse all the time.
4662. Then the entry is not correct? So far as that goes it is not; we walked on the Racecourse and round Woolloomooloo.
4663. Is that the only duty you were engaged on that day? That is all.
4664. By the Chairman: When did you meet this girl, Maria Bradshaw,—did you meet her at 7? About 7; I met her coming out of Church.
4665. By Mr. Johnson: You recollect being at the first concert? Yes.
4666. Did not Mr. Boulanger, after coming out of the concert-room, tell you that a man was dogging his heels ever since he left the concert-room? No.
4667. Did not Mr. Bentley tell you—did he not find you and tell you, and point out the man that Mr. Boulanger referred to? Mr. Boulanger pointed out a man.
4668. What did he say about that man? He said keep an eye on that man; he thought there was something suspicious about the man.
4669. Did you follow Mr. Bentley and Mr. Boulanger at a distance? Yes, I believe I followed them home.
4670. Were you called in that night at Mr. Bentley's to follow Mr. Boulanger home, or to accompany him? I was called in to follow him one night after coming from one of the concerts; I believe that was the night.
4671. Were you not asked on that occasion whether you had seen people at the concert making signs? Yes.

- Mr. William
Camphin.
3 Dec., 1863.
4672. Who were the people? There was Mr. Montagu and another jew, named Simmons, I think; when Mr. Boulanger was playing, each would look at the other and nod their heads, and laugh, and Montagu would clap and applaud him.
4673. By the Chairman: I would like to be very clear about the way that your duty is set out—Is Mr. Harrison in the habit of apportioning the duty to the detective officers in the morning, before they go out? If there is anything particular to go after he would say, go after that — 4674. Never mind the anything particular—just answer my question? If there is anything particular to go after — 4675. I intend to ask this question till you answer it, if it is all day—Is Mr. Harrison in the habit of apportioning the duty to the detective officers, in the morning, before they go out? I say in answer to the question, he does not send us out on duty every morning — (Question read by the shorthand-writer, by the direction of the Chairman.) No, he does not; oftener not. Perhaps you will allow me to explain. When we go in in the morning, if there is any particular case to go after, for instance, if a robbery occurs the night previous, some of us will be told off to go and look after it particularly; and if the others have nothing particular to do, of course they take it as a matter of course that they go out into the streets to see if they can catch anything—general duty—for the purpose of catching thieves, or anything that may come under their notice.
4676. Is Mr. Harrison in the habit of putting down on slips of paper the particulars of the duty that you have to perform? He may do it to the clerk.
4677. That is not the question? Well, I do not know.
4678. Is Mr. Harrison in the habit of writing down the particulars of the duty you have to perform, on a slip of paper? If he wants any particular man—if there is any particular duty for him to go after—he will leave his orders there, and if you do not see the paper, or whatever orders he may leave, the clerk tells you.
4679. I have asked about the habit? Yes, he does make a practice of it in that way.
4680. Does he make a practice of sending the men on their different duties? Not without it is particular duty.
4681. Because Mr. Harrison has stated that he is in the habit of sending the men to their duties for the day, and that he is in the habit of writing down the particulars of what duty they are to perform for the day, on slips of paper. Have you received such slips of paper? I cannot say I have received them into my hand from him; but they have been left there with the clerk.
4682. I ask if you have received them? I have received slips that came from him; he might not be in the office to hand me orders.
4683. By Mr. Forster: You seem to have rather a bad memory? The fact of the matter is I was not aware — 4684. I do not ask you what you are aware—I want to know whether you have a bad memory or not, naturally? I cannot say I have.
4685. You have confessed, in the course of this examination, to not recollecting things that have occurred very lately? I could not remember them distinctly.
4686. Do you consider that you have a good memory generally? As good as the generality of people.
4687. Do you recollect who is your superior officer immediately over you? Mr. Harrison.
4688. You have admitted, in your examination, that you occasionally deviate from the truth, for the public benefit, in the performance of your duty? Yes, I have done so in the way I have stated.
4689. Has that been the case frequently? No.
4690. When you have done so have you done it by the orders of your superior officer, or on your own suggestion? I have acted on my own judgment and discretion.
4691. Is it part of the duty of a detective officer to deviate from the truth on his own judgment? No, it is not his duty to do so.
4692. Did you ever gather from any regulations or orders from your superior officers, that it was ever your duty to deviate from the truth? No, I never did so from any orders I received, only using my own discretion.
4693. How long have you been a detective? Since the 1st of March.
4694. How did you ascertain, in the first instance, what your duties as a detective were? I had been in the uniform police before that, and understood a little of the duties.
4695. Did nobody ever give you instructions? There is a book of regulations.
4696. Did you gather your duty entirely from the regulations? No, from experience.
4697. Then you ascertained from experience, and not from regulations, that it was your duty to deviate sometimes from the truth? I did not say it was my duty; I have done it occasionally, in such a case as I have named, because I considered that I should be doing good.
4698. It was your duty to do good? Yes.
4699. Then it was your duty to deviate from the truth in particular cases? It is not considered to be my duty to tell a lie.
4700. You considered it your duty? I considered it would be judicious.
4701. Did you not consider it to be your duty, when you deviated from the truth, in this way? I did not consider it to be my duty.
4702. Why did you do it? Because I considered it the best.
4703. Is it not your duty to do the best? Yes.
4704. Then it was your duty? It is not a duty laid down for me by the regulations.
4705. How did you ascertain whether it is right or proper? I did not say it was so.
4706. How did you ascertain that it was your duty? I did not say it was my duty.

4707. You said you did consider it right? It is merely a matter of opinion; another person might be of a different opinion. Mr. William Camplin.
4708. Was it your opinion that it was right? I think it is in a small way—to a certain extent. 3 Dec., 1863.
4709. Have you ever heard anything from Mr. Harrison, or your other superior officers, to induce you to believe that they agree with you in this opinion? No, such a subject never came under consideration between us.
4710. Would you always tell the truth to your superior officers? Yes.
4711. And in giving evidence before this Committee—? I would speak the truth.
4712. You would not deviate from it in the least particular? I would speak the truth as far as I know it.
4713. What are the particular cases in which you would think it right to deviate from the truth? If I could go and apprehend a bushranger—for instance, if I went, to you and asked you was such a man in such a place; knowing I was a policeman you would say, “Do you want him?” and I would say, “Oh! no, I do not want him,” in order to get you to tell me where he was.
4714. To do a great right you would do a little wrong? I would not do a person an injury by it.
4715. You would not carry this practice into private life? No.
4716. After these cases of deviation from the truth, have you ever felt uncomfortable at all—did you ever think about it afterwards? Sometimes.
4717. Do you think it is impossible to carry on the detective service without these deviations from the truth? I do not.
4718. You think it possible? I think it could be carried on.
4719. Is it necessary for a policeman generally to deviate in this way from the truth? He can do without doing it.
4720. Do you not think it would be better if he always did without doing it? In the case I mentioned the person he wanted might get away if he did not do it.
4721. Did you make any entries into that book? Yes.
4722. Are you sure you did not carry that principle out in making entries in that book? Not that I am aware of; I may have made mistakes, but not wilful mistakes.
4723. Were you ever placed on watch over Mrs. Bentley or Mr. Bentley in the house? I have been in Mr. Bentley's house, but not to watch over them.
4724. What was your opinion—did you agree with Mr. Harrison that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley had anything to do with writing these letters? I did not form any opinion.
4725. Did you ever know that was Mr. Harrison's opinion? Not until recently.
4726. When he expressed his opinion to that effect did you agree with it? I do agree with it.
4727. I thought you said you did not form any opinion? Not when I was in the house.
4728. When Mr. Harrison altered his opinion you altered yours? When I heard the circumstances about the affair in Exeter, and what appeared in the paper, of course it caused doubts to arise in my mind.
4729. After that you came to the conclusion that you agreed with Mr. Harrison that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley knew something about these letters? I believe they know something about them.
4730. Did it ever occur to you what motive they had? I could not charge them with a motive.
4731. I suppose, as a general rule, you agree with your superior officer? Oh! no.
4732. When you came to this conclusion did you alter your mode of watching at all? I always acted according to orders; I did not change only when I was ordered.
4733. Were you told to watch Mr. and Mrs. Bentley after this suspicion had occurred? I was sent to Newtown, after I had been watching in the house, to watch Mrs. Bentley, and of course I did as I was ordered.
4734. By Mr. Hart: Was it according to orders that you made assignations with Maria Bradshaw? It was at her own request I went to see her.
4735. Was it according to orders? Not on the first occasion. Of course my superiors were acquainted with the fact.
4736. By Mr. Wilson: Was your second interview with her according to the orders of your superior officers? It was with the knowledge of my superior officers.
4737. And with their sanction? They acquiesced of course.
4738. By Mr. Forster: When you were told to communicate with this girl were you desired to get all the information you could from her? Anything she chose to say to me.
4739. May you go to any lengths—use any sort of inducements—in regard to young women, that you think will draw information out of them? I never received any particular orders about seeing any young woman.
4740. Are you a married man? No.
4741. Any information that you would get from young women in that way would you make use of it for the public service? I would make use of no improper conduct.
4742. I am not speaking of improper conduct. It is quite possible a young woman might tell you things that she might not communicate to another? It is possible.
4743. In that case would you hold it to be your duty to communicate with your superior officers? Yes, in connection with a case like this.
4744. Supposing a girl told you things in strict confidence—supposing Maria Bradshaw told you confidentially matters relating to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, would you communicate them to your superior officers? Yes.
4745. Even though the girl told them under the seal of secrecy? She did not do so.

- Mr. William
Camphin.
3 Dec., 1862.
4746. Supposing the girl told you things she would not have told to anyone else? All connected with the case I would have told.
4747. Would you use any inducement—I do not say improper inducement? I would use no improper inducement.
4748. Whatever the girl told you, in relation to a case of that kind, you would communicate to your superior officers? Yes, I would consider it my duty to do so.
4749. Have you done so in this case—was there anything told you that you thought proper to communicate? I do not understand you.
4750. Did you find anything out? Only what I have stated.
4751. When she told you these things did she understand that you were going to tell them again? Yes, she came to me for the purpose of communicating these things.
4752. Did you bring her to Mr. Harrison? No, I did not.
4753. But you repeated what she had said? Yes.
4754. Mr. Harrison did not examine her? No.
4755. Did the girl make any statement to you of any familiarities having existed between Mrs. Bentley and anyone? No.
4756. She had no reason to believe that anything of the sort existed? No, she never mentioned any such thing.
4757. Did the girl tell you anything which corroborated your suspicion of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley having been concerned in writing these letters? Nothing further than what I have stated.
4758. Did she state to you that it was her belief? She did not state directly it was her belief, but she said she thought it was very strange. She began to entertain doubts of Mrs. Bentley, in consequence of the statements Mrs. Bentley had made to her, and then seeing the letter in the Empire paper with respect to the Exeter affair.
4759. The Empire letter had great effect with her? Yes, it caused suspicions.
4760. Had this letter in the Empire any effect with you? It caused me to entertain doubts.
4761. Was this letter in the Empire the first circumstance that induced you to entertain doubts? I do not know.
4762. Are you sure you did not suggest doubts to the girl? No, I did not.
4763. Did Mr. Harrison suggest doubts to you, or did they arise in your own mind? They first arose in my own mind.
4764. Did Mr. Hanson, the editor of the Empire, ever suggest anything to you? I never spoke to him.
4765. Were you never at the Empire office to give information there? No.
4766. Had you at any time any suspicion of Signor Cutolo or Mr. Montagu for writing the letters? I had suspicions so far as this, that I heard the detective police were watching them; I had no reason further than what I heard.
4767. You did not maintain any opinion of your own in their case? No, I had no grounds for suspecting them; I did not know anything of the circumstances at that time, no further than that there was something about anonymous letters.
4768. By Mr. Morris: Did Maria Bradshaw complain to you that Clark attempted to kiss her? No, she said she objected to Clark coming any more.
4769. Because —? I think she said he said he was a single man; she did not assign any cause; she said she objected to Clark being sent any more.
4770. Were you not a single man as well as Clark—would not that objection apply to you as well as Clark? No.
4771. That objection did not apply to you? No.
4772. Why not? Perhaps my appearance was better.
4773. You did not attempt to kiss her? No, I never made any freedom with either of them; in fact I spoke to them very little.
4774. By Mr. Wilson: She objected to Clark calling at Bentley's house because he was a single man? No, she said she objected to Clark being sent there.
4775. Because he was a single man? No, not because he was a single man, but it was a vague remark that he said he was a single man.
4776. She had no objection to patrol Hyde Park and Woolloomooloo with you, though you were a single man? No.
4777. By Mr. Morris: During these long walks have you ever had your arm round her waist? No.
4778. Never? No.
4779. By Mr. Forster: I think you said you did not consider it your duty to take any freedom with her? No, she never even put her arm inside mine, but always walked at a little distance; she is a very prudent modest girl I think from what I have seen of her.
4780. By the Chairman: She did not whisper these communications to you? No.

---

Mr. Charles Edward Harrison called in and further examined:—

4781. By the Chairman: Are the Committee to understand that you have never kept any other book or diary than the diary which you have produced before the Committee? Never at any time, not for years.
4782. Have you been in the habit of making entries in that diary daily, and day after day, from the reports of the detective officers employed in the Bentley case? I do not well understand you. (Question read.) Perhaps not from their reports more than from the instructions I have given them to do certain things—more with regard to their duty in the house house and with regard to their duty out of the house. I may have entered that they were Sub-Inspector on such a duty at such a time, but not from what they have told me; I may have seen them there. As regards myself I made the entries as I became interested in this case; before I C. E. Harrison.

3 Dec., 1862.

4783. With regard to the detective officers, when they give you their reports, the mornings after they had been on duty, in your own office, have you had a book before you? Yes, I may have had. I kept my diary during that time, sometimes in the office, and sometimes at my own house. I may have kept my diary at my house for weeks together, or I may have kept it at the office for weeks together.

4784. I ask if you were in the habit of making entries at the time the detective officers made their reports to you on the mornings after they had been on duty? Not generally, because I have not had the diary at the office for some months now.

4785. Was there any other book in your possession, in any way similar to it, in which you made entries, when the detectives were giving you the particulars of their duty? Never.

4786. Were the different detectives, who have been employed on the Bentley case, present at the same time when you made these B.'s and the other additions to their entries in the detective duty book? Yes, as I have stated, one or two or more at the time, I called them. I have no recollection of making any entries except on that one occasion. I called them in and they were present, perhaps not altogether, but it was on the same day. I cannot recollect whether all, who were employed in the Bentley case, were in the room at the same moment.

4787. I ask you distinctly whether the different detectives, who have been employed in the Bentley case, were present at the same time when you made the alteration in the margin of the book, and made the additions to their entries? I believe so, but I cannot say; I would not be positive whether at the time I made the B. to a particular duty performed by a particular man, whether at that time that man was near me, because if they were on the duty in pairs I may have taken what the other man said in regard to his companion's duty. I had them there and questioned them about this, and they shewed me the particular duties they had done, but whether one man shewed me the duty that had been done by another man, who was with him at the time, I cannot say. I made the entries all at the same time. I have no recollection of making any entries, except at this particular time.

4788. I understand you are quite certain that you did not enter these B.'s on the morning that the report of what had taken place was made to you? I have no recollection of making any entry in that book, except on this particular occasion.

4789. If you had made these entries day by day — ? I should have recollected it.

4790. By Mr. Morris: Was this book (Mr. Harrison's diary) in this cover from the time you got it? No.

4791. How long ago is it since you put this cover on it? Mrs. Harrison put that cover on some months ago.

4792. How many months ago? Four or five months ago.

4793. Before the Bentley case? Since the Bentley case. I had another cover on it, and then I took the cover off and kept it without one till it began getting marked with finger-marks and ink-spots. That was the reason why I had another cover put on it.

4794. Have you had any conversation with Sanderson, with regard to the evidence he has given before this Committee? I had some few words with him about it when I saw him at the office that afternoon—some casual remark.

4795. Was it on the subject of your diary? No, I do not think the diary was mentioned. It was with regard to the entries in this book (the detective duty book); Sanderson made some remark, that he did not recollect my making all these B.'s at one time. I told him he had made a mistake if he did not, for I had no recollection of their being made at any other time. Mr. M'Martin, the clerk in the office, recollects the circumstance particularly. I had forgotten that circumstance till he called my attention to the fact last Saturday.

4796. By the Chairman: Did you have any conversation with Camphin, before he came to this Committee, with regard to the Bentley case? No, not particularly. Remarks may have been made in connection with the Bentley case and other police matters; but I have had no special conversation with any of the detectives about it; in fact I have rather avoided talking with them on the subject. I do not know that I ever asked whether they had formed an opinion upon it.

4797. Did you ask Camphin about the entries in this book, if he remembered anything about them? Yes, and he told me he could not recollect; he recollected being called in, but he could not recollect what it was for—whether I made any B.'s, or what it was.

4798. Was that before or after you had the conversation with Sanderson? This was on the same day; I referred to the book—to one of the entries in the book—to see the B.'s that were made.

4799. Before Sanderson was examined? Yes.

4800. Did you have any conversation with Sanderson on the subject? I simply asked whether he recollected being called in, but I do not think I asked whether they recollected my putting particular marks.

4801. Which of the two men has the best memory, according to your knowledge of them? I consider them both very good men.

4802. Which of them has the best memory? I cannot say. I know they are both very good men—very steady men—and I place every confidence in them.

4803. By Mr. Hart: Which is the most accurate in his statement of facts? I always looked upon Sanderson as being the most matter-of-fact man.

4804. By the Chairman: Do you know that Sanderson, without looking at any book, can state particularly the dates when he was engaged on the Bentley case, and whether he was inside or outside the house? I think Sanderson could.

4805.

- Sub-Inspector 4805. If Camphin could remember nothing about the matter, which would you consider had the best memory? Well, Sanderson. I know, with regard to Sanderson, that if I put him in the witness-box to give evidence in a case, he will not only repeat the name of every street he has been in, but mention every house in it, and every window he looks in at, and even every book in the window, if it is a stationer's shop—he is too minute in his particulars. I do not know if that is any proof of memory.
- C. E. Harrison.
Dec., 1862.
4806. If he has stated that these B.'s were made in the margin on the succeeding morning of the very day he was on duty, he is not very likely to be mistaken? He was wrong if he did say so.
4807. Would he be likely to be mistaken? I can only state for a fact, as positive, that the B.'s were made at one time, and, as I said before, I have no recollection of making another entry in the book.
4808. If he says he was never called up in company with other detectives to furnish you with this information——? He is wrong again.
4809. So that if this man, with a good memory——? I cannot help it Mr. Chairman; I have given you my opinion about his memory. This is the only time I have any recollection of making it, and I am satisfied I am correct. I will not say I have not called a man in on some other occasion.
4810. Are you in the habit of apportioning the men's duties before they go out in the morning? Yes.
4811. Just describe how you do it? There is the report of crimes and offences committed—some duties the men have had assigned to them some days previously, and when I tell the men off I ask—what duty have you on? Such and such an inquiry, or the execution of such a warrant, the man will say; very well, you proceed about that. To another—what is your duty? So-and-so; you proceed about that. To another—have you anything in hand? Nothing; then take the City for it.
4812. Do you tell them what part of the City to go to? No; they have the whole fling of the City, from end to end.
4813. Do you give them instructions every morning? No, because sometimes I am employed and do not see them. They do not wait at the office to receive instructions from me; they take them from the clerk in the office——
4814. Does the clerk give them instructions if you are not there? I cannot say. I sometimes give the men instructions the clerk knows nothing about.
4815. Are you in the habit of giving them a written slip of paper, containing the duties they are to perform during the day? I am not.
4816. Are you aware that you have stated you are? No, I never stated so.
4817. I find this in the report of your evidence on a former occasion:—"I am in the habit, "at the office, of giving the men their duties to perform for the day, and likewise in the "habit of putting down on slips the particulars of the duties"? No, that is not what I meant, that I am in the habit of putting down on slips the duties performed by the men during the day; I have no object in it; I never do so, unless with regard to some particular information they bring me in; but with regard to particular cases, I may then put it down on a slip, but as far as for keeping slips or making memoranda, when the men come in, of what they have done, I have not done it.
4818. By Mr. Morris: I think the slips there referred to, refer to duty to be performed? Duty to be performed?—I very often give it on slips, or leave it in the office for the men if I am not there, but I do not make a habit of entering it on slips or in a book. I have very little time for putting down all these matters, when I am sometimes left with only two or three men to do the whole detective work of this City, and only one clerk.
4819. By the Chairman: Does the clerk keep a book? He keeps twenty or five and twenty books, I dare say.
4820. Does he keep a particular book for duty? He does keep a particular book for duty.
4821. Similar to which? Simply a book in which the men's names are entered, as they work in pairs, with their hours of duty—that is to say, such and such men from 9 in the morning till 1, from 3 till 5, and from 9 in the evening till 1 or 2 the following morning; then the next two from 9 in the morning till 1, then off till 7, and then coming on at 7 and remaining till 1 or 2 in the morning.
4822. Is the duty on which they are employed, or are to be employed, written in that book? No.
4823. Then it is only a time-book? Only a time-book.
4824. Then there are no particulars with regard to duty entered in that book? I do not think it; I will not positively say it is not so, because it is a book I have not looked at for a long time. The clerk may put down such and such a man employed on special duty, or making inquiry about so-and-so. I would leave a memorandum in the office to that effect if it was a particular duty.
4825. By Mr. Morris: Did Camphin inform you last night that he had an appointment with Maria Bradshaw? I do not think he did.
4826. When did he tell you about the meeting he had, or was to have had, with her last night? I really cannot say whether he told me at all.
4827. Did he not tell you this morning that he had a meeting with Maria Bradshaw last night? He cannot have given me any particulars about it.
4828. By the Chairman: Did he have an interview with you this morning? He simply walked down the street with me, going to the Police Office, and we were talking about police matters. What conversation there was, was something very trifling in connection with this case.

4829. You would not be likely to forget if it was mentioned? Yes, the Bentley case was mentioned, and he made some remarks to the effect that his evidence had not given satisfaction, and that he got a real jacketing from yourself. That was the effect of what he said, but he did not give any particulars.

Sub-Inspector
C. E.
Harrison.

3 Dec., 1862.

4830. By Mr. Hart: Had he mentioned the name of Maria Bradshaw you would be likely to recollect it? I think he did mention her name, but I cannot say whether it was yesterday afternoon, when he was speaking about the girl, or whether it was this morning, when we were going up to the office. I was not paying any attention to the particulars.

4831. By Mr. Morris: Did you think it quite right to conceal from the Committee that you were still carrying on investigations in the Bentley case, through your detectives, with Maria Bradshaw? I was not carrying on investigations. Camphin told me he had received a message from one of Mrs. Bentley's servants, on one particular occasion. I told him that it would be better not to have anything at all to do with it; that I looked at it with a great deal of suspicion, and did not know what motive there might be in one of Mrs. Bentley's servants coming up to seek an interview with him. I did not know but what he might have been on terms of intimacy with the girl, as he was a single man and she a single girl; but I told him to be cautious, and not to ask the girl any questions.

4832. Nevertheless he told you of all she told him? He told me the girl had given him certain particulars about some statements of Mrs. Bentley's, about the police being disguised at the concert, and he was going to see the girl again.

4833. Did he tell you anything about priests? Yes, he said something about Mrs. Bentley meeting a priest in an omnibus, and his being at one of the last concerts.

4834. Would you not expect him to tell you everything that this girl told him bearing on the Bentley case? Yes, if I had asked him, but I might not have asked him. I do not know whether at the time I was in a position to listen to him; I might have been too busy at the time, and the matter went out of my head.

4835. You look at the entries in this (detective duty) book from time to time? No, I have not opened the book for a long time.

4836. Then it is needless for me to draw your attention to the cases in which Camphin states that he was engaged on special duty in connection with the Bentley case? I know nothing about it.

4837. Have you perfect control over these men, or is there any one behind the scenes that directs them? No one; I am there all day, and often the best part of the night, and I give them their instructions.

4838. By the Chairman: Do you enter their reports down? I do not.

4839. In any book? I do not. They report to the Inspector General sometimes; and the Inspector General, in my absence, perhaps sends out a particular man to a particular duty, but I am always made aware of the fact.

4840. Do you allow the officers who make these entries to make erasures at their own option? If a man told me he had made a mistake I would allow him to correct it.

4841. If it was not a mistake would you allow the alteration? No, because if it was not a mistake, and I was aware some alteration had been made, it must have been done for some object; but it would not strike me, seeing the erasure there (referring to a particular entry), that it was a matter of consequence; in fact I might pass over the entry and never take notice of it.

4842. What erasure is that? (Witness read an entry of 9th November.) If I had been looking over the book and had come to that, I should have sent for Camphin, and inquired into the particulars.

4843. By Mr. Morris: How do you know whether your detectives perform the duty assigned to them or not? By the work they bring in.

4844. How do they bring it in? The arrests they make. For one inquiry there are 500 criminal matters.

4845. With regard to this entry of the 14th April, are these words, "first time," in your handwriting? Yes.

4846. Is "in at B.'s house" your handwriting? Yes.

4847. Has it been written with the same pen? I told you the other day it has not the appearance of being written with the same pen. That looks as if written with a quill pen, and that with a steel pen; I may have put down one pen and taken another. It does not appear to be written at the same time, but it is.

4848. The ink appears to be different—does it not? No, I think the ink is the same. I may have blotted that with paper as I turned over the leaf.

4849. Will you look at this entry of the 15th April—Is that your handwriting, "in at B.'s house the 2nd time"? It is.

4850. Has that "2" been altered from a "1"? Yes.

4851. Has that been the "1st," with an "st." above the "1"? Yes.

4852. Does the word "time" appear to have been added? It appears to have been altered from a "1" to a "2," but with that exception it appears to have been all written at the same time; without that exception, or with it, I know it was all written at the same time.

Miss Mary Ryan called in and further examined :—

- Miss Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.
4853. By the Chairman: Do you remember the occasion of Mrs. Bentley being attacked at Newtown the first time? Yes.
4854. Do you recollect Mrs. Bentley fainting on the evening after that occurrence, when Mr. Harrison was present? Yes.
4855. Were you in the room at the time she was in a state of insensibility? Yes.
4856. Were you assisting in recovering Mrs. Bentley? No.
4857. Did you see any undue familiarity at that time towards Mrs. Bentley by Mr. Harrison? No; he was very kind to her, and stopped in the room until she recovered and was able to go up-stairs.
4858. Was Mr. Bentley ill at that time? He was not very well at that time.
4859. You were present during the whole of this time Mrs. Bentley was fainting? I was not in the room all the time. I was in and out.
4860. You were in and out? Yes.
4861. Getting remedies I presume? Yes, whatever was required I was getting it. I was up and down stairs; I was not in the room all the time. I assisted her up to bed.
4862. Do you think Mrs. Bentley was shamming a faint at that time? No, I do not think that.
4863. Have you seen Mrs. Bentley faint before? Yes, several times.
4864. You have seen her faint before? Yes.
4865. Previously? Yes.
4866. When there were any visitors present or when she was alone or with Mr. Bentley? When she used to faint sometimes she used to faint off without any of us being present. She would sometimes go off while sitting on a chair eating her dinner.
4867. So you had not the faintest idea that Mrs. Bentley was shamming a faint at that time? No.
4868. You say that Mr. Harrison's attention at that time was nothing more than what would be expected from a gentleman under the circumstances? Nothing. He was very kind to her when she was fainting.
4869. You have been present at the faints Mrs. Bentley is subject to—has she a twitching of the fingers? Yes, very much. She almost puts her nails through her hands sometimes. We used to try to put a pocket-handkerchief between her fingers and her hand in case she might hurt herself.
4870. If Mr. Harrison has said that Mrs. Bentley was shamming a faint, and that Mrs. Bentley was, whilst in that state, communicating to him by signals by pressing her fingers or hands, while he held her hands, he was mistaken? That he was mistaken?
4871. Yes, in thinking that Mrs. Bentley was shamming a faint, and making signals to him by pressing his hand? Oh! no, I do not think that at all.
4872. That is to say, you do not think Mrs. Bentley was shamming? I did not think she was shamming them.
4873. If Mr. Harrison has said that this was the case—that Mrs. Bentley was shamming—do you think he was telling the truth? Well, you know, I am not a doctor—I could not say; but as Mrs. Bentley appeared to me she seemed very ill indeed, and very much in pain. She seemed as if she was in most awful agony.
4874. Did you sit up late at night when the detective officers were in the house? Yes, until 11 o'clock some nights.
4875. Do you know if Mr. Harrison was in the habit of sitting up late with Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
4876. When Mrs. Bentley alone was up in the house? Yes, he used to sit in the drawing-room with Mrs. Bentley.
4877. Were you in and out at those times? Yes, with whatever was required.
4878. Did you ever see Mr. Harrison with his arm round Mrs. Bentley's waist? No, never.
4879. Were they in the habit of sitting on the same sofa? Yes, sometimes. Mrs. Bentley was very ill and very weak.
4880. And Mr. Harrison used to sit on the same sofa? Yes, I have seen him sit on the same sofa—perhaps to see to the fire or something, or I might be asked for something.
4881. Was Mr. Bentley there at the time? No; sometimes Mr. Bentley was there when they have been sitting on the sofa together, as near as I can remember. They might not be sitting on the sofa then. Mr. Harrison might be sitting on a chair, and Mrs. Bentley on the sofa.
4882. But you used to be in and out at all times? Yes.
4883. And you never saw any familiarity on the part of Mr. Harrison? Never.

4884.

4884. Could you believe that Mr. Harrison would be allowed to sit with his arm round Mrs. Bentley's waist? No.

4885. Or that he would be allowed to kiss Mrs. Bentley? Oh no! I could not believe such a thing of Mrs. Bentley.

4886. Do you know if Mr. Harrison was ever there until 2 o'clock in the morning with Mrs. Bentley? I do not know. I used to go to bed, and Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Harrison used to be in the room. I do not know; but he used to stop there late at the time the detectives were in.

4887. Had the detectives the run of the house at that time? Yes, they had.

4888. That is to say, they were allowed to go out and come in as they thought proper? I did not know at the time that they were allowed to go in and out, but one time, when the girl came down to get some bread and butter for the children, she heard a noise, and called me up, and one of the detectives was sitting on the sofa; we were alarmed, and thought it might be somebody else. He said something, that we need not be frightened. The next morning Mr. and Mrs. Bentley said they thought we knew that they were allowed to come in and go out when they liked.

4889. Did any of the detectives at any time take any liberties with you? Oh no! They did not take any liberties with me.

4890. Did one of the detectives attempt to kiss you? No, they did not attempt to kiss me.

4891. Did you hear of their attempting to kiss anyone? The other girl told me he did try.

4892. Do you know his name? I think it was Mr. Clark.

4893. Who was the other girl he tried to kiss? Maria Bradshaw. He may have only been trying the girl.

4894. She complained of the attempt? Yes, to Mrs. Bentley.

4895. Do you know whether you were ever suspected by the detectives to have any part in this matter? Whether we were?

4896. Yes? Well, yes, we found it out after. We did not know at the time that we were suspected at all; but the other girl heard it from somebody. We never knew that we were suspected when they were in the house. The other girl heard it outside, and told me.

4897. Do you remember the occasion of being knocked up sometime early in the morning, in order that the house might be searched? I was in bed when I heard the rattling of the bell. I was awake by the noise.

4898. But you did not get up? No, I went to sleep again.

4899. Did you ever see Mr. or Mrs. Bentley carry bricks from the garden into the house? No.

4900. Do you believe that they could have carried bricks from the garden to the loft without being seen? No, I do not believe it. Well, you know, I could not say that exactly, because, of course, I have been in and out and about. I have not been always down stairs for a continual thing; I have been in and out, and about, and that.

4901. Do you think that could have been done without either you or the other servant knowing it? Do I think it could have been done?

4902. Yes? I do not know. The other girl has been about just the same as I have been.

4903. There has generally been one of you in the house? There has been always one of us in the house, unless I was out, and something very particular was required, and the other girl was out too.

4904. Was it you that saw some person following you one night when you went for medicine? No, it was the other girl.

4905. Did you ever see anyone of suspicious character hanging about the house, or in the neighbourhood of the house? No, I have not.

4906. Where were the detectives placed when they were in the house? They used to be up in Mr. Bentley's study.

4906. Where is the study? The back parlour.

4908. On the ground floor? Yes. The first time I saw one in was when I was going through the passage; at least I was going in, and the other girl said there was a man in the room, and that he would be in for some time to watch. The two were down stairs sometimes, and sometimes there was one up and one down, and sometimes one outside the door. There was one in the kitchen, and one outside the door sometimes.

4909. Were they placed on the roof of the house sometimes? They were not placed there to watch, but they have been there to see. They have never been up-stairs sitting in the roof watching; at least I do not know that they have.

4910. Did you ever see an aboriginal native about the house? No, never.

4911. You are not aware of one having been there with Mr. Harrison at any time? No, the only one I have seen with Mr. Harrison is Mr. Clark, the day they went up-stairs to examine.

4912. Did you ever hear of an aboriginal native? I think Mrs. Bentley said that they were to bring a tracker—a native tracker—to see.

4913. But you never heard that such a person was brought? No, I did not hear that he was ever there, as near as I can remember. I do not remember it.

4914. Did you know that the detectives were in the habit of letting themselves in and out of the house at their own pleasure? I heard afterwards that they were allowed to take the key, and come in and go out when they liked.

4915. So that they might be in the house at any time without the knowledge of the inmates? Yes.

4916. Had you the slightest suspicion at any time that Mr. or Mrs. Bentley was the author of the anonymous letters, or in any way concerned with the persecution to which they have been subjected? No Sir, never.

Miss
Mary Ryan.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

4917. Do you remember the occasion of the verandah door being broken open? Yes, it was at the first time they attempted to come in. The other girl told me, and of course I have been very timid and that; but they kept the things dark, and did not tell us; but the other girl told me that some one was trying to come in, and that they had sent for a detective, and that he was in the room.

4918. The other girl seems to be better informed than you? Yes, she was more courageous than I. I am very timid.

4919. On the occasion of that door being broken open, do you remember whether there was any detective policemen about the premises? When it was opened?

4920. Yes? As near as I can remember I do not think anyone was in the house until they were sent for.

4921. Were you called up on that occasion of the door being broken open? Yes, Mrs. Bentley called me by name, and asked me if I had thrown some music about (that was the first time), and I said I had not. The other girl was called up too, and made some remark.

4922. You were both called up and asked if you had had anything to do with the tearing of this music? I was called. I do not know whether the other girl was or not. I told her. Whether I sent her up to see I do not know.

4923. Were you asked any questions about the door, as to whether the door had been left open? Yes, Mr. Bentley asked me about the front door, to be always careful to shut it.

4924. Did you ever find that door open, when it could not be accounted for by any member of the family? No, I do not think it, as near as I can remember. It wanted a strong push to shut it. If you did not give it a good push you might think you had closed it, and it might not be, and some one might open it. As near as I can remember I found it open once, but as near as I can remember I do not know that I ever found it wide open. It was easy to be left open if you did not give a good push. You might think it would be closed, and it would not.

4925. Is there any other way into the house beside by the front door? There is a cellar with a grating over it.

4926. But is there any other door to obtain entrance to the house beside the front door? Only the back door.

4927. Is there any communication to the back door, from the street or back lane? There is a back door between our yard and Miss Johnson's, and then another back door between the other house and ours again.

4928. So that you could get from Miss Johnson's to your place? Yes.

4929. And into the back door and house in that way? Yes.

4930. Did you, at any time, find anyone in the house on any pretext, as, for instance, to sell articles, without you having been called up to give them admittance? No, never.

4931. You never knew anyone get admission to the house without you having been summoned, or the other girl having been summoned to admit them? Never, unless Mr. Bentley might. If we were about and busy, and Mr. Bentley was convenient, he might open the door.

4932. Or Mrs. Bentley? I do not think Mrs. Bentley was in the habit of going to the door at all; but if we were not convenient, Mr. Bentley, if he was there, would open the door.

4933. What was the first time you heard about the priest? Well, as near as I can remember, it was before the concert—it was sometime about then that I heard it. Mrs. Bentley said there used to be a priest go up in the omnibus to Newtown with her, and that at first he called her "Miss," and then when he went again he called her Mrs. Bentley.

4934. Who told you of this first? Mrs. Bentley.

4935. You did not hear it from any other person in the first instance? No.

4936. It was not your fellow-servant that spoke to you about it? Oh! no.

4937. And what was the next time you heard about the priest? The next time again I think it was just in the same way; he met Mrs. Bentley in the omnibus again.

4938. Was that the first or the second concert that you alluded to when you spoke of the concert? The last.

4939. The concert where Mrs. Bentley did not play? Yes.

4940. Was it long before that concert that you heard this conversation? I cannot say; I have got such a bad memory. I never thought of that—that I should have to retail such a thing over again.

4941. Do you think it was a month before? I cannot say how long it was.

4942. You have not any idea? I have no idea of it at all.

4943. Are you sure that it was not a month after? A month after the concert?

4944. Yes? Mrs. Bentley told me the priest knew she was going to play, and that if he could he would be there to hear her.

4945. You are sure that Mrs. Bentley spoke to you about the priest before the concert? Oh! yes.

4946. What did she say to you? She said that the priest would try to be there and hear her play; that he was very fond of good music; and that there was a piece of music he was very fond of, but that it would not do to play along with this piece that she was going to play, as the piece she was going to play was not a very lively piece.

4947. Where were you? I really forget whether it was in Mrs. Bentley's bed-room or in the dining-room. I cannot say.

4948. How long a time did it take to tell you? Sometimes Mrs. Bentley, when she would be having her dinner, or dressing to go out, or when she had come home in the afternoon, would talk to me. I might be with Mrs. Bentley and draw the conversation first, or Mrs. Bentley might speak to me.

4949. Were you not fond of talking about priests? Yes; I used to talk to Mrs. Bentley the same as she would talk to me.
4950. You liked to get into conversation with her—she was a kind mistress? Yes; I thought there was no one like her. I never have found anyone so nice in her manner to live with as she has been.
4951. And you used to endeavour to draw the conversation about priests? Mrs. Bentley herself liked to talk about the priest to me and the other girl, and sometimes I would speak. I was not very clever at speaking much I know myself, but the other girl —
4952. She was very clever at speaking? Yes, she could understand what she said better than I could.
4953. Had she used to tell her about the priests? Yes; she could explain better than I could.
4954. And she took a great deal of pleasure in it? I do not know.
4955. Did she appear to do so? Sometimes she might like talking about them.
4956. Did the other servant ever ask Mrs. Bentley to go to St. Mary's? I do not know. I used to say myself that she ought to go to confession. I used to say that to Mrs. Bentley sometimes.
4957. And what did Mrs. Bentley say? I dare say the other girl too might say something about the same to her.
4958. And it was when you were talking in this way that Mrs. Bentley said she had been to confession? Yes; when we commenced at first to talk about it, she said she had been, and that if she had a priest she would like to go to, she should not mind going.
4959. That if there was a confessor there that she could take pleasure in confessing to, she might not mind going? She would not mind if she had one that she could depend upon.
4960. Did you ever recommend one? I used to say that such a one was a nice one to go to confession to, and that the Bishop was a nice one to go to confession to.
4961. And did the other girl ever recommend one? She used to say the person she used to go to confession to was a nice one.
4962. What was the description of this priest—was he a young one? Yes, he was rather young.
4963. Had he brown hair? Sandy hair.
4964. Was it curly? I think it was rather curly.
4965. What height was he? I do not know.
4966. Did you ever see him? Yes.
4967. Was he as tall as Mr. Johnson? I cannot say exactly what size he was.
4968. Do you think he is as tall as that gentleman at the foot of the table (Mr. Piddington)? He was of the middling size.
4969. With brownish red curly hair? Yes.
4970. And the girl Anna Maria Bradshaw used to recommend this particular person? Yes; that she found him very nice to go to as a director.
4971. And when Mrs. Bentley used to speak to you about going to confession, she used to do it in a jocular way? She seemed very serious when she used to talk to me about going to confession.
4972. It was a serious subject? Yes.
4973. And you used to introduce it seriously? Yes.
4974. Did Mrs. Bentley never laugh while you were talking about it? Yes, and we too, of course.
4975. Is it a mark of seriousness to laugh? Sometimes you may talk seriously, and laugh over it too.
4976. Would you not have thought it was a liberty to talk to Mrs. Bentley seriously about going to a priest or going to confession? Well, that would depend upon the way she was speaking to us—how we spoke to her.
4977. So that if Mrs. Bentley had wanted a bit of fun or pastime to while the time away while you were dressing her hair, or otherwise waiting on her, she might enter into a jocular conversation with you? I do not know; of course at the time Mrs. Bentley used to be very serious in talking to us.
4978. Did you ever know Mrs. Bentley to go to a Roman Catholic Church? She told me she had been once to St. Mary's, with Mr. Bentley, to see it, and she said she should not mind going up there to see it again, or going to mass, but that would be too remarkable—as things were, it would not do to go up there.
4979. You never heard her say that she had been there by herself? No; I used to see plenty of Protestants. Many go to St. Mary's for nothing but just to hear.
4980. You remember the Exeter letter that appeared in the newspaper? Yes, I read it.
4981. How did that letter come under your notice? Well, I think I saw it on the paper in the dining-room, when I was taking away the tea things. I lifted it up and read a few words, and Maria, the other girl, told me that Mr. Bentley said something about it. I could not get the paper to read it all, and I borrowed the paper from the girl next door, and read it in that.
4982. When you read that letter —? I thought it was very different from what Mrs. Bentley spoke to me about it.
4983. It made a very serious impression upon your mind? Yes, I thought it was not at all likely, what Mrs. Bentley said to the other girl and me.
4984. You thought it unbecoming in Mrs. Bentley to speak about the priesthood in that way? No; I thought when Mrs. Bentley spoke to us about this Exeter affair, that what she told us was different—that what appeared in the paper was not at all like what Mrs. Bentley had said to us.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

4985. Do you know whether that Exeter letter was true? What Mrs. Bentley said to us, and that was not true.

4986. Did you ever ask Mrs. Bentley? No, I never asked her; I said the night that gentleman came round.

4987. Which is the gentleman that came round? I think that (Mr. Morris) is the gentleman that came round—

4988. By Mr. Morris: When I came round? Yes, the evening you came to Mrs. Bentley's there was something said about putting a head on the block and chopping it off. I heard the words about the chopping off of the head, and I said to Mrs. Bentley, "If I was you, and them to be like that, I would hate the Catholics."

4989. Did Mrs. Bentley ever make the slightest difference in her behaviour towards you since that time? She has been very careful; she has never spoken to us as she used to do in regard to any conversation. I asked her one morning when we were to be examined, and what we were to do with the children. She said it would only take about five minutes, and that we would not have to go together. Mrs. Bentley said nothing more to me.

4990. Don't you think it would have been wrong if Mrs. Bentley had told you how you were to be examined, and that so-and-so would be expected of you? Yes, it would have looked as if she was putting us up to something.

4991. Don't you think that under the circumstances it was quite right to keep everything dark from you, so that you could come here and speak the truth without any prompting? We knew we had to come, and that we should have to be examined, and it was all about the same thing. If we had known that we were to come here, and—

4992. Is it not far better that you should come just unprepared, and state what you know without any preparation? It is all the same thing—we have only to say the truth.

4993. Since the time when you were up here before—on the same day that Maria Bradshaw was here—have you seen any of the detective officers at or near Mr. Bentley's? No, I have not.

4994. Have you seen them anywhere else? No, I have not.

4995. Has your fellow-servant told you that she has seen any of them? She said that she had seen one.

4996. Did she say what passed between them? No, she did not tell me.

4997. He is known to be a young man, that detective officer? Yes.

4998. Would you understand that he has any other object in view than obtaining information about the Bentleys when he comes there? I do not know. I do not know the young man's mind.

4999. What do you think—do you think he had any intention to make the acquaintance of your fellow-servant? I do not think he has.

5000. That he "keeps company" with her? No, I do not think that at all; I do not think he does.

5001. You think he has no other object in coming than to spy on Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? He does not come to the house.

5002. Then he has no other motive in meeting your fellow-servant than spying on the Bentley family? I cannot say what his motive is—I cannot tell his mind.

5003. If you do not think he is keeping company with your fellow-servant, and if he is in the habit of making appointments with her and meeting her, what do you think, under those circumstances, any person would want? I do not know what he would want; I cannot think what the young man's mind might be.

5004. But if a young man visited you—met you on the Racecourse, and walked over that course with you; if he met you at Church, and so on, would you think that he had any serious intentions towards you, and desired to become better acquainted with you? I should think he had some intentions in meeting me, certainly; but I could not think what his motive might be for doing it.

5005. But if his motive was not to make your better acquaintance—to become better acquainted with your mind, perhaps with a view to ulterior steps—do you think he could have any other motive than that of spying on the Bentley family? Well—

5006. If he asked you about the family? I heard the other girl say that he never asked her anything at all.

5007. Did you ever meet this young man at mass, or after mass? I have been once at mass at 11 o'clock, when I remember seeing this young man come out, but I never spoke to him.

5008. Did he ever advise you what to do? I made a mistake as to the first day. I did see him at Mr. Harrison's office, and I was speaking to him then, but I never had any conversation with him, as—5009. Do you remember the part of the deposition Mr. Johnson read over to you, that concerned yourself? That concerned me?

5010. Yes? It is some time ago. Unless the thing is asked me I do not think I can remember every word that Mr. Johnson read to me concerning myself.

5011. You heard it at that particular time? Yes, and would no doubt remember it if I heard the words said.

5012. But you are quite sure that everything you heard read at that time, and which you afterwards swore to, was perfectly true? Yes, as far as I knew. There was only one thing that was altered, and that was about the other girl and me; those words were altered.

5013. Did you ever see any gentleman of any kind, or of any rank in life, either detectives, or officers, or any other person, take any undue familiarity with Mrs. Bentley since you have been in the house? Never.

5014. Did you ever see anyone approach Mrs. Bentley with anything but respect? No.

5015. Have you ever seen Mrs. Bentley drink brandy and water? Yes, I have given her brandy and water myself. When she was in these swoons we used to try to force it down her.

her. Mrs. Bentley has never been in the habit of taking it except she has been in a faint. When she was in great agony we used to give it her to try and banish the pain, and that; but we would only give her what was necessary for her to take.

Miss
Mary Ryan.

5016. Have you been in the habit of seeing females smoke much? No; I do not know that I have seen females smoke.

5 Dec., 1862.

5017. Have you ever seen Mrs. Bentley smoke? No, I never have.

5018. Have you ever heard that Mrs. Bentley smokes? Never.

5019. By Mr. Morris: For the toothache? Oh! yes. Mrs. Bentley said she did smoke, once, a box of cigars for something that was the matter with her. I have heard that; but not that she has smoked out here.

5020. By the Chairman: Mrs. Bentley herself has told you that she smoked? Yes.

5021. Did you ever see Mrs. Bentley drink much brandy and water? I never saw her drink it unless she was very bad from some inward pain.

5022. Have you seen other people drink brandy and water at different times? Yes; I have seen a great many people drink brandy and water.

5023. Did they seem to enjoy it? Yes.

5024. They did not require to have it forced down their throats? No.

5025. Did Mrs. Bentley drink brandy and water in that same way which you have seen other people drink it? No.

5026. She took it as a medicine? She took it as a medicine.

5027. You say you have heard the other girl ask Mrs. Bentley why she did not go to Church? Why she did not go to Church?

5028. Yes—you said you had heard her ask her to go to confession? Yes.

5029. They have to go to Church then—have they not? Yes.

5030. Have you ever asked her? Yes; I have asked her several times to go to confession, and she said she would not mind if she had one that she would like to go to.

5031. I think you said that this priest that Maria Bradshaw recommended Mrs. Bentley to go to was one with reddish brown curly hair? Yes; she said he would be a very good one to go to confession to.

5032. But that is the description? Yes.

5033. Reddish brown curly hair? Yes.

5034. Rather tall? No, of the middling size.

5035. Young? Yes, rather young.

5036. And fresh coloured? Well, he looks pale; he is not very fresh looking.

5037. And the priest that Mrs. Bentley said she had met—what kind of a priest was that? I cannot tell you.

5038. What kind of a priest did she say he was? A young priest, rather good looking, tall; but his hair was not that colour I know. I made the remark, from what she said, that his hair was something the colour of Mrs. Bentley's own hair.

5039. What colour is that? Well it is rather dark.

5040. Your hair is dark? Yes, rather dark.

5041. Is your hair the same colour as Mrs. Bentley's? Yes, about the same.

5042. That is black? My hair is not black.

5043. Then it is a very good imitation—it was very near black hair that Mrs. Bentley said? Yes.

5044. Don't you remember what colour she said? No; she did not tell me the colour. She would not tell me what he was like, exactly.

5045. I thought you said she had? I told her about the hair, and she said "yes." She would not tell me what he was exactly like. I was making the remark myself.

5046. Did your fellow-servant get up on that night when the detectives came in the morning and roused Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, and a search was made all over the house? No.

5047. Did they go into your room? No, I had my door locked.

5048. You and your fellow-servant slept in the same room? No.

5049. Were the detectives in her room? I cannot say.

5050. Have you heard of them being in her room at any time? They have gone into, and looked at it sometimes perhaps.

5051. Have you heard that they have been there? I cannot say. They might have gone in sometimes without us knowing, and they might have looked into the room before we went to bed.

5052. Have they gone up with you and your fellow-servant, on going to bed, to make sure that there was no one there? No.

5053. Your rooms were not examined before you went into them for the night? Mr. Bentley might have examined them before we went to bed.

5054. Have you heard that the detectives have been in your fellow-servant's room before, or when she retired, or have you heard that they have searched her room? Mr. Bentley was the only one in the habit of examining about the place to see that it was right before we would go to bed.

5055. Do you sleep up-stairs or down-stairs? I sleep down-stairs.

5056. Does your fellow-servant sleep down-stairs? No, she sleeps in the room next to Mr. Bentley's. I slept in the drawing-room.

5057. Did she sleep in the nursery? Yes.

5058. Did she sleep in the room where the holes were bored through the roof? Yes.

5059. Did you hear anything about it? I think it was Sunday morning that I heard it.

5060. Did you not tell one of the detectives that your fellow-servant could bore holes better than they? I said, you have not found us out; long as you have been watching us you have never caught us making holes in the ceiling.

5061.

- Miss Mary Ryan. 5061. What did he say to that? I do not know. I said, you see we are cleverer than ye. You have never caught us making the holes yet.
5062. Did you ever hear your fellow-servant express an opinion as to how that hole was bored in the roof? No; I used to say that if I was her I would be afraid to sleep there, and to have a hole made in the room I slept in.
5063. Were you ever in the garret? Yes, I have been up there for wood—sometime before that.
5064. For wood? Yes, for some little bits of wood. It was before ever there was any talk about anything like this.
5065. When were you there for wood—before Mr. Harrison was in the house? Long before I heard anything about this.
5066. Was your fellow-servant in the habit of going there? No, not in the habit.
5067. Were you in the habit of going to the window? Once, after I had got the wood, and after the holes were made I went up there to see.
5068. Was there not a nice view from that window? I did not stop there long. I just looked—you could look out into the street.
5069. The air there is nice and fresh? Yes.
5070. Were there many cobwebs? I did not look.
5071. But would you not have to wipe away all the cobwebs before you could see through? Oh, no; I just lifted up the glass and looked out.
5072. You just lifted up the window and looked out? Yes.
5073. So that if there had been any cobwebs there you would have knocked them off when you lifted the window up? No.
5074. You would have made footsteps in the dust—would you not? Yes, I might; but that was a long time ago.
5075. You would have disturbed the dust? Yes; if there was anyone —
5076. Had you to stoop to pick the wood up? Yes.
5077. Do you wear crinoline? Yes.
5078. Then, if you stooped to pick up the wood, —? I did not take my crinoline up there. I could not get up with it.
5079. If you stooped to pick the wood up, would not your clothes, rubbing on the joists, disturb the dust, as a matter of fact? I was very careful. I held my clothes up tight. I did not let them go down in the dust like that.
5080. By Mr. Morris: Was there any dust? I did not notice.
5081. You did not see any dust? There may have been some, but I did not notice it.
5082. If you had picked the wood up from the floor, the place where it had lain would certainly shew a mark. There would be a place left bare of dust? It was only little chips. I was short of wood. I do not know what made me go up for it. I went and took up a few little bits and brought them down.
5083. And you say your fellow-servant has been up there too? Yes, but I think it was after the holes were bored that she went up to see, and I did too.
5084. How long was it after the holes were bored that you went up? I cannot say.
5085. Was it the same day? No, I do not think so; but I have such a bad memory I cannot tell you.
5086. Do you remember Mr. Bentley going up? Yes.
5087. What was the first time you have ever known him to go up there? I think it was after the holes were made that he went up.
5088. What kind of matches do you use in your house? We use the German matches.
5089. What do you call the German matches? Those coloured matches.
5090. Wax matches? No, wood matches.
5091. Did you ever see any wax matches there? Yes, the white wax matches. I have bought some myself.
5092. Have you had any in the house during the last twelve months? Yes.
5093. Had you any in the house at the time this examination was taking place? I do not know. I do not remember.
5094. But you were in the habit of using wood matches? Yes, we have been in the habit of using that kind of matches.
5095. Did you hear any of the detective officers making any observation about finding wax matches in the roof? No, I do not remember them making any observation to me.
5096. Did any of the detectives smoke? I do not know.
5097. Did you ever see them smoke—did Clark smoke—did you ever see him light his pipe? He might smoke when we were in bed.
5098. Did you ever see Sanderson light his pipe? No.
5099. You do not remember any of them smoking? Yes, that young man got matches to — 5000. Camphin? Yes, he got matches to light his pipe from the other young man.
5101. They smoked? He smoked; I cannot answer for the rest.
5102. Did I understand you to say that your fellow-servant, Maria Bradshaw, has not informed you that since she was examined she had had an interview with Camphin, the detective? No, she said she had seen him that night.
5103. Did Maria Bradshaw tell you that she had overheard a conversation passing between Mr. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? Did she tell me?
5104. Yes? No, she has not told me that she has heard any conversation. If she were passing in and out she might hear voices, but not the conversation.
5105. Did she never tell you that she had been listening at the door, and had heard some conversation with regard to the expense this matter would be to the Bentleys? No, she never never told me that. We knew the expense, because Mrs. Bentley had told us about what the expense would be. When they knew, they told us themselves what the expense of their lawyer's bills would be.

Miss
Mary Ryan.

5106. By the Chairman: What did they say it would be? I think £250 Mrs. Bentley said, as near as I can remember, and that she had thought it would be about £150, as near as I can remember.

5 Dec., 1862.

5107. By Mr. Morris: Who informed you first that Mr. Harrison was said to be on very familiar terms with Mrs. Bentley? I never knew it until I have been asked these questions.

5108. Did you never hear it before from anyone? No, I never heard it before.

5109. Not from your fellow-servant? No. I think it was yesterday morning she said something to me that there had been some very nasty suspicions about. I think it was yesterday morning she said that.

5110. Did she tell you how she learned it? She did not tell me any more about it, as near as I can remember.

5111. Who has called to your recollection when you read the letter with regard to the Exeter business, that Mrs. Bentley gave a different account of it to you and to your fellow-servant? I could see it myself from what I read in the paper and from what Mrs. Bentley told me. I could see it myself that it was very different; and of course the other girl and myself said it between us that it was different from what she said to us.

5112. I suppose you compared together your different recollections? Yes; I said of course what she said, and she said the same to me—that it was very different.

5113. Did Mrs. Bentley ever tell you that her sister had been educated in a convent? Yes, she did—her sister that is dead.

5114. By Mr. Lucas: Her sister and herself? Yes.

5115. By Mr. Morris: That they were both educated at a convent? Yes.

5116. On what terms did you observe Mr. and Mrs. Bentley to be the one with the other? As far as I could see I thought I never did see anyone like Mr. and Mrs. Bentley in every way. We have always found them upright and honest.

5117. How did they behave the one to the other? They always behaved very kindly to each other. I never saw anyone behave more kindly.

5118. You never saw them quarrel? No.

5119. You never knew them to quarrel? No; I never knew them to quarrel.

5120. Mrs. Bentley never made any remark to you that her husband did not treat her kindly? No, she never did; only once, one morning—I think it was about the time of the concert—Mrs. Bentley said she was writing, and Mr. Bentley said something to her that made her cry; and she said a little thing like that would hurt her feelings more than anything. I forget now what it was—it was, she said, something very simple or silly; but she said it hurt her feelings, and she cried.

5121. By Mr. W. Forster: You have been in Mrs. Bentley's service ever since this matter began about the anonymous letters? Yes.

5122. Did you ever get any anonymous letters yourself? I took in two myself. I said to Mrs. Bentley ———

5123. Oh! those were letters for Mrs. Bentley? Yes; I thought I knew the writing.

5124. Have you seen all those anonymous letters—did you look through them? No.

5125. Then how did you know that these looked like the others? The first one I took in Mrs. Bentley told me was an anonymous letter.

5126. Did you take them at the door? Yes.

5127. From the postman? Yes; two of them.

5128. Did you know the writing? Yes; Mrs. Bentley told me.

5129. You did not see the letter? I did not see what was in the letter.

5130. Did you notice whether there was a postmark on the letter? I think I did. As near as I can remember I think I saw the postmark.

5131. You have no doubt that they came by post? No; the postman gave me the letters at the door.

5132. It was the same postman that you have been in the habit of receiving other letters from? Yes; I think he has been the same one that has delivered them.

5133. Did you ever notice a different person delivering letters? Yes; when the postman has been sick then there was another.

5134. He was a postman? Yes; he seemed like a postman.

5135. What I meant to ask at first was—did you yourself get any anonymous letters addressed to you? No, never.

5136. Do you think Mrs. Bentley seemed really afraid and agitated and annoyed while these letters were being received? Yes, she used to be frightened. She used to seem to go off with a fright sometimes. She had these swoons.

5137. Several times? Yes.

5138. Do you think the swoons were caused by the receipt of these letters, and the agitation wrought in her mind about the whole affair? It seemed to me as if it did.

5139. Did you feel afraid of any danger? Yes, I felt frightened myself. I used to be afraid to go about the house at all. I would not go outside in the yard without the other girl.

5140. You felt glad to have the protection of the police? Yes, I felt very glad.

5141. You had full confidence in the police there? Yes; only there was one I said I should not like to be in the house with.

5142. Did you ever see any strange men come about the house at the time? No, I have never seen anyone.

5143. You never introduced anyone? No, I do not remember seeing anyone coming in or out, excepting the detectives, unless some one came to the door for something.

5144.

- Miss Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.
5144. You did not notice any strange men going about the house at unusual hours? No.
5145. What time did you go to bed and get up—generally speaking? I think about 11 o'clock.
5146. You used to go to bed? Yes.
5147. And when did you get up? The other girl used to get up before me sometimes. Sometimes it was 7 and sometimes half-past 6.
5148. After you went to bed at night did you always remain in your room and not come out? Yes.
5149. Did the other girl sleep with you? No.
5150. You had a room to yourself? Yes.
5151. Did you ever wake in the night and hear disturbances—did you ever hear people going about in an unusual way? Only on the night that the men were in when I was awake by the rattling of the bell, and heard footsteps.
5152. That you have described yourself, already? Yes, I went to sleep again. I always sleep very sound.
5153. Did you ever find the house door open at unusual hours? At unusual hours?
5154. Yes, as if people had come in? No, I have not.
5155. And you have no reason to believe that people came in at unusual hours for any purpose into the house? I have never heard anyone in. I have never seen anyone in.
5156. Were Mr. and Mrs. Bentley in the habit of seeing a great many different people—strangers—as visitors? Not a great many strangers. I do not think there used to be a great many strangers come to see them at all, only those who used to come and take lessons.
5157. They would come in the day-time? Yes, in the day-time.
5158. Young ladies taking lessons? Yes.
5159. Mr. Harrison was a frequent visitor there, was he not, after this matter began? Yes.
5160. Was he an acquaintance of hers before, do you know? He was afterwards.
5161. He was treated like one on intimate terms? Yes.
5162. Mr. and Mrs. Bentley thought highly of Mr. Harrison? Yes, they seemed to do so.
5163. You have said that Mr. Bentley was in the habit of going to bed and leaving Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Harrison together? Yes.
5164. Was it in the drawing-room that they sat? Yes.
5165. Mr. Bentley used to go to bed? Yes; when his health was better he used to stop up very late.
5166. How late had he used to stop up? I do not know what time it was.
5167. He used to sit up until late at night? Yes.
5168. And then he went to bed? Then he went to bed.
5169. And he left Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Harrison together in the drawing-room? Yes.
5170. How far was his room from the drawing-room? It was over the drawing-room.
5171. Exactly over the drawing-room? Yes.
5172. Are you sure that Mr. Bentley went to bed on those occasions, or generally? When his health got bad he went to bed earlier.
5173. Do you state that he did go to bed when he left Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley together? He went to his room.
5174. You do not know whether he went to bed or not? No.
5175. He went up to bed and he did not come down again? No.
5176. Did he go to bed before you? Generally he did.
5177. You went to bed afterwards, and you have no reason to believe that he left his room after that? No.
5178. Can you give the Committee any idea of how long Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Harrison used to sit together? I do not know; I used to go to sleep directly.
5179. Did you often leave them sitting alone when you went to bed yourself? I do not know how often.
5180. You left them sitting alone, and you went to bed? Yes.
5181. Was everybody in bed when you went to bed? The other girl used to go to her room too.
5182. Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Harrison were sitting alone in this way after everybody was gone to bed, frequently? They used to be in the room. Sometimes Mr. Harrison used to go early, and sometimes he used to stop late; sometimes I would hear the door shut.
5183. When you went to bed was the door locked? The drawing-room door?
5184. No, the house door? The house door was shut as usual.
5185. Was the house entirely shut up? Yes, unless the detectives were down-stairs, and then they saw to shut the back door or the front door as they went out.
5186. In what way was the door fastened—with bolts or with a chain, or in what way? It was fastened not so securely as afterwards.
5187. At the time Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley used to sit up alone in this way, had everyone gone to bed? Yes.
5188. Do you know whether the house door was secured in the way you say it was secured latterly? I do not think it was. I think Mr. Bentley got the place made more secure when the detectives left off coming. For some time—I cannot say whether they came after it or not, but I know Mr. Bentley got the place better secured when they left off coming.
5189. By Mr. Johnson: Was it after they left that he got it secured? Yes.
5190. By Mr. W. Forster: At the time Mr. Harrison used to sit up with Mrs. Bentley the door was secured in the common way? Yes.
5191. It was locked and bolted? Yes.
5192. Did anyone take the key away? The key used to be in the door when the detectives were in; Mr. Bentley told us not to take the key out.

5193. I want you particularly to tell me—at the time Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley were sitting alone in this way, used the door to be locked and the key taken out? I do not know whether the key was in or not.

Miss
Mary Ryan.

5 Dec., 1862.

5194. When Mr. Harrison went away, after you had gone to bed, could he get out of the house without making a noise? I do not think he could get out without making some noise.

5195. Do you think he remained until the morning? Oh! no, I do not.

5196. He must have gone out before the morning? I do not think he ever did remain in the house until the morning.

5197. Then when Mrs. Bentley went to bed, and he went away, must he not have made a noise in leaving the house? I think Mrs. Bentley used to go down-stairs and fasten the door.

5198. At the time Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley used to sit up alone—when Mr. Harrison went away before morning—would he not make a noise in getting out? Yes, if he went out at the front door and shut it himself.

5199. Then Mrs. Bentley must have gone to shut the door? Yes.

5200. He could not have gone out otherwise? He might have gone out and shut the door himself.

5201. Would not that make a good deal of noise? Yes, it would make a noise.

5202. Do you think you would hear it at any time? I might be asleep at the time.

5203. Do you think it likely that Mr. Harrison would have gone away under these circumstances repeatedly, after you and others had gone to bed, without your hearing the noise occasionally? I could not answer for me; I do not know about the other girl; I always go to sleep directly I go to bed.

5204. You are a very sound sleeper? Yes.

5205. Did you ever hear the other girl or anybody else say that they had heard Mr. Harrison go away when he was let out by Mrs. Bentley? I do not recollect.

5206. You do not recollect any occasion when you heard him go away? No.

5207. And you have no idea when he went away? I cannot say.

5208. Have you any idea whether, after they were left alone, Mr. Bentley used to walk about the house and watch them in any way? I never thought that Mr. Bentley, after he was once gone to bed of a night, came back again.

5209. I think you stated that you sometimes went into the room when they were together? Yes.

5210. How were they sitting? Mr. Harrison on the sofa, and Mrs. Bentley close to him.

5211. Not very close? No.

5212. Did they betray any sort of agitation or surprise at your going into the room? No.

5213. Or confusion? No, I never saw any confusion or agitation.

5214. Did you go in suddenly? Yes.

5215. And softly? Yes.

5216. So that they would not have heard you coming in? I went in as usual.

5217. You have no reason to suppose that they altered their position, or concealed the manner in which they were talking to each other? No, I have no reason at all to think so.

5218. Nothing awakened your suspicions of any improper familiarity, or unusual familiarity, between Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley? No, never.

5219. You never thought of such a thing? No.

5220. Did you ever think of such a thing until it was put into your head here by the questions that have been asked you? It would be the last thing I should have thought of.

5221. By Mr. Johnson: Did you know Mr. Harrison's Christian name? I do not know it.

5222. Did you ever hear his Christian name mentioned in the house? I might. I think I have seen his pocket-handkerchief with his name on it. He left a pocket-handkerchief some time ago, and I think it had his name on, but I really forget it.

5223. What does Mrs. Bentley call her husband? Charley.

5224. By Mr. W. Forster: Does she call him "Charley" always? Yes.

5225. And what did she call Mr. Harrison? Mr. Harrison.

5226. Did she always say "Mr." Harrison? Yes, I think so.

5227. Did you ever hear her say "Harrison"? No.

5228. Did you ever hear her address Mr. Harrison by any other name than "Mr. Harrison"? I have not.

5229. She called him "Mr. Harrison" on all occasions? After Mr. Harrison set down in the paper that they did it themselves —

5230. That they did what themselves? When it was put in the paper that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley were the guilty parties, I think she said "Harrison."

5231. By Mr. Johnson: She dropped the "Mr." then? Yes.

5232. By Mr. W. Forster: That is, in speaking of him? Yes.

5233. She called him "Harrison" when speaking of him? Yes.

5234. Did you ever hear her, when speaking to him, say "Harrison"? No.

5235. Did you ever hear Mrs. Bentley address anyone familiarly, other than her husband? I have not. I have heard her say, "How do you do, Mr. so-and-so?"

5236. So far as you know, was her conduct quite proper in every respect? In every respect it was while I lived with Mrs. Bentley.

5237. By the Chairman: That was two years? Not quite.

5238. By Mr. W. Forster: You have said that they were very kind to you? Oh! yes, nobody could be kinder.

5239. They always treated you kindly? Yes, always.

5240. Mrs. Bentley used to talk somewhat confidentially to you—did she not? She used to talk freely.

- Miss Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.
5241. You said she used to talk to you sometimes about the priests? Yes.
5242. Did you ever try to convert Mrs. Bentley? I used to say she would make a good Catholic, and that she would make a good nun.
5243. You thought she would make a good nun? Yes, she was so mild in her way.
5244. You thought she would make as good a Catholic as yourself? I am not a good Catholic.
5245. I suppose, as a believer in the Catholic faith, you would make a Catholic of her if you could? Yes.
5246. In order to save her? Yes.
5247. By Mr. Hart: Were you told by anyone to do so? No, I was never told by anyone to do so.
5248. By Mr. W. Forster: You were not told by any priest? No.
5249. Did any clergyman ever question you about your conduct in Mr. Bentley's house? Never.
5250. Or ask you any questions about Mrs. Bentley? Never.
5251. By Mr. Morris: Have you never consulted a priest with regard to this matter at all? No.
5252. You are aware that your fellow-servant has done so? I cannot say.
5253. Did she not tell you that she had consulted a priest? She has consulted a priest, but not as regards that. She would not tell me all she had consulted him about.
5254. Not at confession? I do not know.
5255. By Mr. W. Forster: Was Mrs. Bentley fond of her children? Always.
5256. She always shewed towards them the feelings of a good mother? Always.
5257. And was Mr. Bentley fond of the children too? Yes.
5258. On any occasion, when Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley were sitting together at night, did you ever, on coming into the room, observe Mrs. Bentley in tears? In tears?
5259. Yes? No, I have not.
5260. You never saw her in tears? No, not when Mr. Harrison has been there.
5261. I need scarcely ask you whether you saw her with her head on Mr. Harrison's shoulder? I never have.
5262. I think you have admitted that there were some circumstances connected with the conversation between you and Mrs. Bentley in regard to priests, that you did not state in your deposition? Yes, I never stated anything of that.
5263. Why did you conceal that? I used to say to Mrs. Bentley—"What a good thing it is, as the Jesuits suspect you, that nobody has seen you with the priests! I am sure, with a thing like that, they would be glad to see you going with a priest, and that"; and she said "yes." I never stated that.
5264. You did not think it was your duty to tell that? Of course I let that go, and what Mrs. Bentley said to me.
5265. Did anyone advise or request you to conceal this? No.
5266. You did it of your own motive? Yes.
5267. And on your own judgment? Yes.
5268. Mrs. Bentley did not tell you? No.
5269. Nor Mr. Bentley? No.
5270. Nor any clergyman? No.
5271. Did you not feel, on that occasion, that you had not stated everything in reference to the matter? I stated what I knew, in the deposition, and I was told that anything that was wrong in that I was to correct it.
5272. Was not the examination you were subjected to on that occasion a very full one—were you not asked to state everything? In the depositions?
5273. Were you not asked to state everything connected with the case? What was done concerning me I had to answer that.
5274. Did not Mr. Johnson give you a full opportunity of stating everything? Yes, and he told me —
5275. To state everything? He said, if there was anything in that deposition not correct I was to tell him.
5276. And you admit that there were some things that you did not tell? There?
5277. Yes? There was nothing there I was to tell in the deposition.
5278. At the time you made the deposition, there had been some conversation between you and Mrs. Bentley, which you did not state in that deposition? I did not think anything about that; I thought no more of it.
5279. Do you mean to say that you did not think it was your duty to tell that? I thought it was true.
5280. You thought what was true? That the priest went with Mrs. Bentley like that. There was nothing about it in the deposition.
5281. Why did you not tell this when you were giving your deposition? It was not concerning that.
5282. Why did you not tell Mr. Johnson? It was nothing about that.
5283. You did not think it had anything to do with the case? No.
5284. You had no motive for concealing it? No; I did not think it necessary any more than what was down there. I had to say that, and no more.
5285. Are you sure you told all that you believed to be necessary for the sake of justice? Yes, all I was asked. I was to answer that, and if there was anything incorrect, Mr. Johnson said I was to make the remark—that if anything he was reading to me was wrong I was to correct it. And of course what Mr. Johnson did read to me was true as far as I know.
5286. But Mr. Johnson or Mr. Bentley did not tell you what you were to say? No, only Mr.

Mr. Johnson said that if there was anything wrong I was to correct it; and Mr. Bentley said I was only to say the truth—what I knew.

Miss
Mary Ryan.

5287. If explanations had been asked you about these conversations concerning the priest, you would not have hesitated to have given the information? Of course if there had been anything about it I would have told it. 5 Dec. 1862.

5288. But you did not think of telling it? I did not think it necessary to do it.

5289. By Mr. Johnson: Did I not tell you not only to correct anything that was wrong, but also to add anything that you thought material? About that concern—that deposition—anything I was to say I was to say it to you.

5290. You knew, at the time this deposition was read to you, that Mr. Harrison had charged the Bentleys with being the authors of these anonymous letters? Yes.

5291. And that he denied the truth of her being met and assaulted at Newtown? Yes, I read it in the paper.

5292. You knew of that? Yes.

5293. Well, will you explain to the Committee why you omitted to tell me that Mrs. Bentley had stated that she was met by a priest when she went out to Newtown? I did not believe that it had anything to do with that deposition at all.

5294. But you knew it was a matter very material to the inquiry, in regard to the truth of her assertions that she was met by a man out at Newtown? Who assaulted her?

5295. Yes? I know that.

5296. And whether she was watched by the detective police? I said how unfortunate it was for the detective not to be there; and she said that if he had been there the man would not have struck her.

5297. Did it not occur to you that it was a singular thing that this priest was never seen by the detectives? Yes.

5298. Did you mention that to me? No.

5299. Did it not strike you as being a circumstance material to the case? I thought it was singular. Some of them would be glad to get the chance.

5300. By the Chairman: Did you think the Catholics were suspected for it at that time? Yes, at that time. I think Mrs. Bentley said herself that the Jesuits were suspected, but that she knew they had nothing to do with it.

5301. But she told you that a priest met her very often? Yes.

5302. Why did you not tell this to Mr. Johnson? I do not know. I thought I only had to say what was in that deposition; I would never have thought of it.

5303. It did not occur to you? It did not occur to my mind.

5304. You did not conceal it purposely? No.

5305. You never thought of it? No.

5306. During the time Mr. Johnson was asking you questions, did it ever come into your head that Mrs. Bentley had told you she met a priest frequently? I do not know. I was only paying attention to what Mr. Johnson was saying to me, and the questions I would be asked.

5307. Did Mrs. Bentley describe the priest to you at all? Yes, I used to say—from the kind he seemed like—that I thought I had seen some one like him.

5308. Can you tell us what he was like? She said he was a young priest, and rather good looking.

5309. That might be a matter of opinion? Yes.

5310. Was he well dressed? Yes.

5311. Tall? Rather tall.

5312. Thin? Not very thin.

5313. Was he a stout man? Stoutish.

5314. Did she say he was a stout man? Not a very stout man. I suppose he was about the ordinary size.

5315. Did she describe him? She never described him exactly.

5316. Did she describe the colour of his hair? She did not say it to me.

5317. Just answer my question, if you please? No, she did not describe it; but I said to her—"Is not the hair of this man—the one I knew, and used to think was something like the one that used to meet Mrs. Bentley at Newtown—is not his hair something like the colour of yours and mine"?—and she said "yes."

5318. Did she say anything about the colour of his eyes? I cannot say.

5319. By Mr. Piddington: Did Mrs. Bentley say anything about the colour of his eyes? No.

5320. By Mr. W. Forster: She described him to you in a particular way? I just made the remark, and said he was something like.

5321. You say that the description suggested a certain priest to you? I used to say —

5322. You thought there was one whom you knew that the description answered? Yes.

5323. Have you any objection to say who it was? I do not know him, except by sight. I thought the description might answer for that one.

5324. You know a good-looking young priest that answers the description? I have not seen him for some time.

5325. He has never been your spiritual adviser, or anything of that kind? No.

5326. You have only known him distantly? No.

5327. Have you ever heard him preach, or seen him at church? I think, some time ago, the one I thought like him I saw at church, assisting at mass—the one I was alluding to as likely to be the one that went with her.

5328. Did Mrs. Bentley seem to agree with you that you had hit upon the right person? She used to say he was something like that.

5329.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

5329. What did you think of this story of Mrs. Bentley meeting a priest—what did you think was the object? I thought it very strange that she should go out so constantly with a priest. I said to her—"He must have known you or have known your people, or he must be some relation, to take such an interest in you."
5330. Did she tell her husband? I do not know.
5331. Do you know whether Mr. Bentley was aware of this circumstance? I said once—"What would Mr. Bentley say if he knew?" and she said he would not like it.
5332. Would you infer that she did not tell him? It seemed to me so.
5333. Your impression is now, that Mrs. Bentley did not tell her husband? Mr. Bentley went sometimes to Newtown, and I said, "I suppose that priest was not there?" and she said of course she would not see him, like.
5334. Did she say, of course she would not see him? Yes—of course she would not pretend, like, to know him.
5335. Did she tell you that she would pretend not to know him? Yes.
5336. Be particular. This is an important part. Did Mrs. Bentley say "pretend"? Yes—that she would not pretend to know him.
5337. By Mr. Piddington: Do you mean to say that Mrs. Bentley told you that? Yes.
5338. By Mr. W. Forster: Do you say that Mrs. Bentley said to you, that if she met this priest when she was walking with Mr. Bentley, she would pretend not to know him? Yes; that is not the exact words, but they were something like it.
5339. It implied that? Yes, that she would not see him, like. She said she did see this priest once when she was with Mr. Bentley, and that Mr. Bentley said he had a good mind to take off his hat. He stared, or something of that kind.
5340. You say that Mrs. Bentley made use of some expressions to you, implying that if she met the priest when she was walking with Mr. Bentley, she would not recognize him? Yes.
5341. Did she say that to you several times? No, because Mr. Bentley used not to go with her very often.
5342. Did she, in conversation with you, make that remark more than once? She would not like —
5343. I am not asking you whether she would like or not. I am asking you whether she made that remark to you more than once? I do not think she did.
5344. But you know that she made it once? Yes.
5345. You are not sure that she made it twice? I do not remember.
5346. Was Mrs. Bentley in earnest, or was she joking? I do not know.
5347. Was she serious when she said it? She seemed to be serious.
5348. Now with regard to meeting the priest. Did Mrs. Bentley tell you that she had met the priest once when she was in company with Mr. Bentley? Yes, she said she saw him.
5349. That she saw him? Yes, and that the priest looked at her very hard, and that Mr. Bentley said he would take off his hat.
5350. What did she do then or say? I do not know.
5351. Did she tell Mr. Bentley to take his hat off? No, she did not.
5352. Did she tell you that she had told her husband anything about this priest? No, she did not.
5353. Are you sure she told you that she did not tell her husband? I used to say, "What would Mr. Bentley say, if he knew that there was a priest going out so frequently with her?"
5354. "With you"? Yes, to Newtown.
5355. Did she tell you why the priest went to Newtown with her? She told me she supposed that he wanted to convert her.
5356. How long did the priest stop with her? He stopped some time with her.
5357. How long in the course of the day? She used to say that he used to go out in the omnibus. She had to stop at Mr. Josephson's, and that the priest would meet her coming back again.
5358. Mrs. Bentley told you this? Yes, and that he used to hand her in and out.
5359. Are you sure that she did not know his name? She never told me what his name was.
5360. How did Mrs. Bentley know that he was a priest at all? By his dress, I suppose.
5361. Did she describe him as wearing a priest's dress? Yes; the other girl made the remark, and she said she knew what a priest was like.
5362. Are you sure he was not a person in disguise? I think he might have been.
5363. He might have pretended to be a priest? Yes.
5364. But you are sure of this, that Mrs. Bentley took him for a priest? Yes, because she said to us that she knew what a priest was like.
5365. Are you certain that she never told Mr. Bentley about meeting this priest? I do not know.
5366. She did not—to your knowledge? I do not know; I cannot say.
5367. But her conversation with you led you to believe that she did not tell Mr. Bentley? Yes.
5368. Did she talk to the other servant too in the same way about this priest? Yes.
5369. Did she talk to anybody else about it? I do not know.
5370. Did she tell Mr. Harrison about it? I do not know.
5371. Or any of the detectives? I cannot say.
5372. Then it was merely in confidence to you and this other girl that these remarks were made? I do not know whether it was in confidence or not.
5373. You said that Mrs. Bentley talked to you in a kind and confidential way? I could not say whether this was said in confidence, or only just for the sake of talking.
5374. Did anyone else ever talk to you about this priest? No.

5375. You know a detective named Camphin? Yes.
5376. Did he ever ask you about this priest? No.
5377. Did he ever tell you to say or not to say anything? No, I never had any conversation with the man at all.
5378. Now I want you to give me some information about Mrs. Bentley coming home after the assault—you say she fainted? She did not faint off exactly.
5379. I want to know when you first saw her after the assault—did you see her coming in at the door? Yes.
5380. She went into the parlour? Yes.
5381. And you asked her if she was going to faint? Yes.
5382. What made you do that? She turned so pale, and looked agitated like.
5383. You said she told you the story, and she did faint? No, I do not think she fainted then.
5384. She did not faint on that occasion? No, she had her dinner.
5385. Then nothing happened at that time? No, nothing.
5386. But two days afterwards—when was it that she fainted, and on what occasion? Mrs. Bentley?
5387. Yes, you say she fainted on some occasion, on account of the assault? She very often fainted.
5388. I do not want to know whether she fainted often. You opened the door? Yes.
5389. And she told you of the assault? Yes.
5390. Did she shew you the wound? Not then.
5391. She told you the story? Yes.
5392. Did she faint then? No.
5393. You thought she looked pale, and that she was going to faint? Yes.
5394. But she did not faint? No.
5395. How soon was it after that, that the first fainting fit occurred? I do not know.
5396. Was it that evening? I do not remember.
5397. Did not she faint soon after that? Really I do not remember; I cannot remember when she fainted.
5398. Well, what occasion was it when Mr. Harrison was very kind to Mrs. Bentley when she fainted? That was, I think—I do not know whether it was before or on the night of the concert that he was there.
5399. Oh! then the time that he was very kind to her was not the time of the assault? No.
5400. Did not you notice whether she fainted at all after the assault on account of it, or from anything connected with it? I do not remember when she fainted after that.
5401. You do not remember it? No.
5402. You stated that after the assault she shewed you the wound on her breast? It was the same evening, when they were going up to bed, that Mr. Bentley called me up and said, "See, the wretch has hurt Mrs. Bentley more than I thought, and will you make a poultice?"
5403. You saw the wound? I did not see the wound—I saw the blood.
5404. You are satisfied that there was a wound? Yes.
5405. There was a good deal of blood? Yes, the rags were stained with blood.
5406. Did Mrs. Bentley wear a very tight dress? I think she wore a jacket at that time.
5407. Was it very tight round her body? It was not tight, I think.
5408. I think you have stated that a medical man attended Mrs. Bentley on that occasion? No, there was no medical man came to see her on that occasion.
5409. You saw the wound once or twice—did you not? Yes; I took up the poultice myself, and put it to the breast of Mrs. Bentley.
5410. You are satisfied that it was a severe cut? I did not see the cut; I put up the poultice to it.
5411. Oh! you did not see the cut at all? No; I put the poultice up to the breast, and saw the blood on the rag.
5412. But you did not see any cut? No.
5413. By Mr. Fiddington: How did you account for not seeing the cut? I was rather frightened. Mrs. Bentley kept her hand under her breast, and I put the poultice up to it.
5414. By Mr. W. Forster: And you applied the poultice? Yes.
5415. You put it to the wound? Yes.
5416. Was there anything under the poultice? Nothing.
5417. And you say you did not see the wound? I did not see where the wound was.
5418. Did you see the blood? Yes, I saw the blood on the rag.
5419. Did you put the poultice over the rag? No.
5420. Was there a rag under the poultice? I think there was a rag—I think she had a rag to it herself, and that she took the rag from the breast, and I put the poultice to it.
5421. Did you put the poultice to the bare skin? Yes.
5422. And you say you did not look at the wound? I did not see the wound.
5423. Did you shut your eyes when you applied the poultice? No, but I did not see the wound at all; it must have been a small one.
5424. What did you do? I put the poultice to the breast, just; I was in a hurry to put it up to the breast when she said it was sore.
5425. Did you put the poultice to a place where there was no wound at all? No, I did not see the wound; I put the poultice to where the breast was sore.
5426. Did you see the sore? I did not see the sore; I do not remember seeing the sore; I just put the poultice up to the breast.
5427. By Mr. Hart: What part of the breast? I think it was under the nipple part. I just put it up to the breast; she was in pain, and that.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

- Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.
5428. And were there no rags on the skin? Mrs. Bentley had a rag to the place.
5429. By Mr. W. Forster: What did she take the rag off? Off the sore.
5430. She took the rag off the sore? Yes.
5431. Was there anything on the sore after the rag was taken off? Nothing.
5432. How is it that you did not see it? I could not see it—I did not see it.
5433. By the Chairman: Would you have had to stoop to see it? I think I should.
5434. By Mr. W. Forster: What was it, then, when the rag was taken off the sore, that prevented you from seeing it? I suppose the blood was on the rag, and I could not see it.
5435. The blood? The blood that was coming from her breast—Mrs. Bentley had a rag to it.
5436. But you say that she took the rag off? Yes, she took the rag off.
5437. And you say you did not see the sore? No.
5438. Where was Mrs. Bentley? Standing.
5439. Is Mrs. Bentley taller than you? Yes.
5440. You were looking up to her? Yes, I was putting the poultice to the breast.
5441. Your eyes were not on the breast? Yes; but I was in a hurry, and did it as fast as I could.
5442. You saw a quantity of blood? The blood was on the rag.
5443. Was there any blood beside what was on the rag? I do not know; I did not look into that then. In the next morning there was blood on the rag.
5444. You took the poultice away the next morning? Yes.
5445. And there was blood on the poultice? There was blood on the poultice then.
5446. By Mr. Wilson: I think you stated that you did not look for the sore? No.
5447. By Mr. W. Forster: Did you several times apply a poultice? I think that was the only time I did, as near as I can remember; but I think Mrs. Bentley had rags to it herself.
5448. Did you ever assist to dress it afterwards? I do not remember. I asked her how the breast was; I do not remember after that.
5449. You do not remember doing anything to it after that? No.
5450. You only applied one poultice? No.
5451. You never put another on? I do not remember that I did.
5452. When you took it off, the next morning, what did Mrs. Bentley do? I took it away out of the room.
5453. You did not see it taken off? No; I asked Mrs. Bentley how the breast was.
5454. You do not know how it was dressed the next morning? No.
5455. Did you take any more rags covered with blood, afterwards, from the room? I think it was once or twice.
5456. Are you able to state whether Mrs. Bentley still continued to dress the wound for some days? I think for a couple of days she complained of it, as near as I can remember.
5457. Did she appear to be in great pain? Whatever pain she was in she would not like to shew it, because she said Mr. Bentley was so delicate and that it would worry him; she tried to conceal her feelings.
5458. But Mr. Bentley knew there was a wound? Yes.
5459. But Mrs. Bentley did not tell him of the pain she felt? No, she did not tell him.
5460. Did the other girl see the wound? I do not know.
5461. Did the other girl ever dress the wound or prepare a poultice? I do not know.
5462. You have been in the habit of preparing poultices? Yes, I am the chief one that has to prepare things of that kind.
5463. You say that on a certain occasion when Mrs. Bentley fainted, that Mr. Harrison was very kind to her? Yes.
5464. Was there anyone else present at this time when you say Mr. Harrison was very kind to her? The other girl came into the room. One night they told us to go out.
5465. What did her fainting consist in? She was working with her hands, and her heart was beating so. She was kicking her feet on the ground with pain. She was in dreadful agony. I think Mrs. Bentley might have shed tears then when Mr. Harrison was there.
5466. I want you to remember all you can about this fainting, and when you say Mr. Harrison was kind to her. When she first began to faint, where was she? She was downstairs in the dining-room.
5467. Was she standing or sitting? I do not know where she was at that time; she was on the sofa when I went into the room.
5468. You went into the room and found her fainting? Yes, she was on the sofa.
5469. And Mr. Harrison was there? Yes.
5470. And this other girl was there? Yes, she was in the room too.
5471. Why did you go into the room? I dare say Mr. Bentley called me in to get something.
5472. You do not recollect? No.
5473. And you found Mrs. Bentley lying on the sofa, fainting? I do not know whether it was the other girl or I that was called to bring some pillows to put to her back on the sofa. The other girl and I were in the room, and whatever we were called upon to get we had to get.
5474. You went in and assisted Mrs. Bentley when she was fainting? Yes.
5475. You do not know whether Mr. Bentley called you or not? No.
5476. Was she lying on the sofa? Yes, or sitting propped up.
5477. She was kicking, you say, with her feet? Not at that time.
5478. When you first went into the room was she lying on the sofa, insensible? No.
5479. Were her eyes shut or open? They were shut, I think.
5480. Did she look pale? Yes.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

5481. Was it then that you felt her heart beating? She was up-stairs at that time.
5482. You say she was on a sofa? She was off in a faint.
5483. Did she notice you? No.
5484. Did she speak at all? She did not speak to me.
5485. You say that she was kicking with her feet? That was not the time—that was up-stairs.
5486. What was done with her in this fainting fit—what did you apply? That was the time the other girl was sent out for something, and I was told to bring some brandy and water, I think it was, or sal volatile.
5487. Brandy and water—who told you to bring that? I do not know whether it was Mr. Bentley or Mr. Harrison.
5488. They were both there? Yes; they told me to take the light away.
5489. What was Mr. Harrison doing? He had hold of her hand, and was trying to put a handkerchief between her fingers; she used to clasp her hands so tight that her finger nails would run into her hands.
5490. I think you said that she became insensible and could not move? She used to work when she was insensible.
5491. Had Mr. Harrison hold of one or two of her hands? I do not know whether he had one or two.
5492. They were standing close too? Yes.
5493. What was done with her head? Her head was on the pillow.
5494. How long did she remain in that state? I do not know; sometimes she was an hour.
5495. I do not mean how long she used to be—but how long she was in that state on this particular time I am talking of? I do not know the exact time.
5496. But were you going in and out all the time? Yes, I was going in and out.
5497. You say she remained a long time on the sofa? Yes.
5498. And then she was taken to bed? Yes.
5499. Who took her to bed? I do not know whether it was I or the other girl—I cannot say; but I know that Mr. Harrison helped her up one time to bed. I do not think that that was the time; I think it was when she fainted in the drawing-room.
5500. Was there a time when Mr. Harrison took her up to bed? Yes, there was a time; and the other girl and I—5501. Where was Mr. Bentley at that time? I think he went with us.
5502. He went with you? Yes, as near as I can remember; Mrs. Bentley was so bad.
5503. Then Mr. Harrison carried her up, did he? He lifted her; he put his hand under her arm.
5504. Did he help to put her on the bed? He just threw her in, like, on the bed.
5505. And did he then go away? He went away, and left the other girl and me with her.
5506. By Mr. Morris: Did he go away immediately? Yes.
5507. By Mr. W. Forster: He went immediately? Yes.
5508. Was that the only occasion on which you saw Mr. Harrison carry her up? Yes.
5509. You say he was very kind to her? Yes.
5510. Did you say that Mr. Bentley assisted to carry her up? Mr. Bentley came up after; he might have brought the light up.
5511. It was in the night? Yes.
5512. And Mr. Harrison carried her up? Yes.
5513. By your assistance? Yes; I thought that was the night Dr. Brereton came to see Mrs. Bentley. Mr. Bentley might have brought up the light after the other girl and I; he was in the habit of bringing up the light after us when Mrs. Bentley was so ill.
5514. I am talking of the time Mr. Harrison was carrying her up? That was the time, as near as I can remember.
5515. You say that he left her on the bed, and went away immediately? Yes; I think he came back to the doctor, as near as I can remember.
5516. To the doctor—did the doctor come? The doctor came one night.
5517. But this night that Mr. Harrison carried her up, did the doctor come? I think that was the night.
5518. Did Mr. Harrison come into the room again? Not after that.
5519. Did you observe whether he bathed her head at all on that occasion? That time I think he put eau-de-Cologne on her head; but it might not be that time.
5520. I wish you to remember the time. You said that Mr. Harrison came up and put her on the bed and left? He did not do anything to her there. It was in the drawing-room—
5521. That he was bathing her head with eau-de-Cologne? He might have done so on that occasion.
5522. Did you see him on some occasion bathe her head with eau-de-Cologne? Yes.
5523. Who was present? Mr. Bentley and the other girl.
5524. Did she put her head on Mr. Harrison's shoulder? I do not think she did.
5525. Did you ever see Mrs. Bentley put her head on Mr. Harrison's shoulder? If she was in a faint, and Mr. Harrison might be trying to keep her hand open, her head might fall on his shoulder. I cannot say.
5526. Do you remember a time when she ever consciously put her head on Mr. Harrison's shoulder? Never, consciously.
5527. You are sure of that? Yes, I am quite sure of it.
5528. And all the time Mr. Harrison was attending to her, Mr. Bentley was present, or moving about somewhere near? He was walking about the room.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

5529. Did Mr. Harrison come to inquire after her the next day at all? I think he did come to see how Mrs. Bentley was in the afternoon.
5530. Did she thank him in your presence for his kindness? That time he just inquired, and I said she was better, or something of that kind. I went up and asked her how she was, and I think Mrs. Bentley told me to say she was better, thank you.
5531. She did not see him? She was too ill, I think, as near as I can remember.
5532. You have stated that she was in great agony on one or two occasions? Yes.
5533. How'did she shew this agony? It was her heart.
5534. Did you put your hand to her heart? I heard them say her heart was beating violently.
5535. That she had a pain in the heart? Yes.
5536. She complained of pain in the heart, in your presence? Yes; her feet were knocking against the boards.
5537. Are you sure that these fainting fits were not pretended at all? As far as I know, I am certain they were not pretended.
5538. Have you seen other people faint? Yes.
5539. Then you know what fainting is? Yes.
5540. Did you ever faint yourself? No, I do not remember that I ever did.
5541. But you know what it is? Yes.
5542. You are sure that Mrs. Bentley was fainting on these occasions? Yes.
5543. Do you feel certain that she was in pain? Yes.
5544. Do you know what epileptic fits are? No, I do not know.
5545. Do you know what convulsions are—what hysterics are? Yes, I know what hysterics are.
5546. Was Mrs. Bentley in hysterics? I do not know; there may be screaming hysterics.
5547. Was it usual for her to scream? It was something like hysterics.
5548. By Mr. Wilson: Do you know if people always scream in hysterics? I have only seen one person in hysterics, and that one screamed.
5549. Can you draw a distinction in all cases between fainting and hysterics? I think fainting is insensible, and hysterics move about.
5550. You are not aware that in hysterics people move about also? In hysterics they do not know what they are doing always.
5551. You have only seen a person in hysterics once? No.
5552. You say Mrs. Bentley was in the habit of working her hands violently while she was in these fainting fits? Yes, and she used to complain of hurting herself when she got better.
5553. And you used to attempt to open her hands, to prevent her from hurting herself? Yes, and put something between her teeth.
5554. By Mr. W. Forster: You recollect, of course, the time the assault was committed on Mrs. Bentley—the time she spoke of it? Yes, it was about Easter, or Easter week, I think.
5555. How soon after that did you see Mrs. Bentley in a fainting fit? How soon after?
5556. Yes, that day or the day after, or the day after that again? I do not remember.
5557. Do you recollect two days after whether Mrs. Bentley fainted at all? Two days after—5558. By Mr. Morris: Two days after the assault? She might faint in the night. She used to faint so often that really I cannot remember.
5559. By Mr. W. Forster: The day of the assault she did not faint, I think you say? Not that day.
5560. Did she faint that night? No, I do not remember that she did.
5561. Did she faint the next day? Well, I do not remember.
5562. You do not recollect? I know she used to faint very often, but I cannot remember the days or the times.
5563. Do you remember whether she fainted two days after? Two days after the assault?
5564. Do you remember whether she fainted while her wound was being dressed? While her wound was being dressed?
5565. Yes? No.
5566. Did she faint while there was a dressing on the wound? No, not while I was dressing the wound.
5567. She was for some days with the wound being dressed—she had a sore breast? Yes.
5568. And while she had a sore breast, all that time do you recollect whether she fainted? I think she did; as near as I can remember, I think she did faint.
5569. Soon after? It must have been soon after, but really I cannot remember.
5570. Do you remember Mr. Harrison calling at all, while she fainted after the wound was dressed? Well, I know he used to call sometimes to see her.
5571. And do you remember whether he called after and saw her? I do not; I cannot say really what time—how soon it was after that that he came.
5572. You say he called once and did not see her? Yes.
5573. Did he see her at all soon after the wound? Yes, he must have seen her, because in the evening Mr. Bentley went to see Mr. Harrison.
5574. Then he saw her several times after—soon? Yes.
5575. Do you remember, on any of those occasions when Mr. Harrison came soon after the wound was dressed, whether Mrs. Bentley fainted at all? Whether she fainted?
5576. Yes, whether she fainted soon after, when Mr. Harrison was there? Yes, I think she did when he was there soon after.
5577. When he was there soon after the wound? No, she was going to bed when the wound was dressed.
5578. I do not mean on the same day; I am not talking of the exact time; for two or three days after the assault occurred, she had the sore dressed? Yes. 5579.

5579. Well, during those two or three days, while she had the sore dressed, do you remember Mr. Harrison calling and seeing Mrs. Bentley? Yes.

5580. Do you remember it? He used to come in the evening.

5581. During the time she had a sore breast? Yes.

5582. He came then? Yes.

5583. Do you remember whether she fainted at all in his presence while she had a sore breast? I cannot say whether it was then that Mrs. Bentley fainted, or whether it was before or afterwards that he assisted her up to bed.

5584. I am not talking of that time; while she had a sore breast, do you know whether she fainted in Mr. Harrison's presence or not? I do not remember it.

5585. You do not recollect it? No.

5586. Can you tell how many times she fainted when Mr. Harrison was present? I cannot say; but when she has been very bad indeed I think Mr. Harrison has been there; when she has been very bad—that was twice.

5587. By the Chairman: Can you tell the Committee why you did not tell Mr. Johnson that Mrs. Bentley had told you that she had seen a priest at the concert? Why she did not tell Mr. Johnson?

5588. No, why you did not tell Mr. Johnson that Mrs. Bentley had told you that she had seen a priest at the concert? Of course I would not think of saying such a thing, because when Mrs. Bentley told me the priest went to the concert I thought there would be nothing more pass about it, and never such a thing came into my mind as to tell Mr. Johnson.

5589. But did you not say, on your last examination before the Committee, that when Mrs. Bentley came from the concert at which she did not play, she told you that she had seen a priest at the concert? Yes, but I do not know what time it was she told me, whether it was the next day or not. She did not tell me the same evening. Whether it was the next day or the day after that she told me, I do not know; but she did tell me that he was there, and that he came out after her in the concert-room.

5590. Did that priest say anything about it being a shame Mrs. Bentley did not play? Mrs. Bentley told me he said he was very sorry, when he saw her again, that she did not play, but that it was quite right of her to do what she had done—not to play.

5591. Did he not make use of any expression in the room—that if it had not been for his cloth he would have made a complaint? Yes.

5592. What did he say? That only for his gown —

5593. Can you tell exactly what Mrs. Bentley said about that priest—about his “soiling his gown,” and what a shame it was she did not play at that time? I do not remember.

5594. This is a very important matter; you have remembered it once—just try and remember it again? I do not remember what Mrs. Bentley said to me.

5595. You remembered it the other day, didn't you? I did not tell you then any conversation that had happened about it.

5596. Did any conversation happen about it? I do not remember what Mrs. Bentley said to me.

5597. Do you remember if she said anything about his soiling his cloth? That only for his gown —

5598. By Mr. Hart: He did not make use of the word “cloth,” but “gown”? Gown—something like that; I forget the exact words—his cloth, or something —

5599. By the Chairman: You do not know whether it was “cloth” or “gown”? Really I do not; it was something like it.

5600. Was it a threat that he made use of? Yes, it was a threat. He said he would do something, only for his cloth.

5601. What was it that he was going to do—something to Mrs. Bentley? Oh! no, he was not going to do anything to Mrs. Bentley.

5602. He was going to do something to Mr. Merewether then? I do not know.

5603. Did he say that if it had not been for his gown, he would have let Mr. Merewether see whether he should insult a lady or not—was that the purport of it? I suppose it was something of that kind.

5604. By Mr. Piddington: Was the name of Mr. Merewether mentioned in connection with the matter? I think it was.

5605. In connection with what the priest said? Yes, I think it was mentioned.

5606. By the Chairman: Did Mrs. Bentley say that the priest said he would do something to Mr. Merewether, if it were not for his gown? I think so, as near as I can remember, but I do not know whether it was that time or not. She said the priest “would give him a good talking,” or something of that sort—that he would see Mr. Merewether.

5607. That he would see Mrs. Merewether? No, that he would see Mr. Merewether—that he knew Mr. Merewether.

5608. By Mr. Hart: Did he say he would give him a good hiding? I forget the expression; there were some words said.

5609. By the Chairman: Did he say that he would give him a good talking to? Yes.

5610. You are sure it was not a beating? No, I do not think it was a beating.

5611. Are you very clear about this conversation? Am I very clear?

5612. Do you remember it particularly? I remember that.

5613. If you remember it, tell us what was said? About the conversation about Mr. Merewether?

5614. By Mr. Piddington: Yes, and the priest? That is all I can remember.

5615. By the Chairman: Tell us what you do remember? That the priest would give Mr. Merewether “a good talking,” and that he would see —

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

Miss
Mary Ryan,
5 Dec., 1862.

5616. Just begin at the beginning, with what Mrs. Bentley said, as far as you can remember? I have told you how much I remember.
5617. How much is it? What I have told you.
5618. Well, begin again? That Mr. Merewether —
5619. Tell us what Mrs. Bentley said about the priest, and what the priest said about his gown, or in connection with his gown? Mrs. Bentley said the priest was behind her in the concert-room, and that when she was going out he came out after her, and she just heard the words—that only for his “cloth” or “gown” (I do not know which it is) what he would do; and she told me that he said to herself that he would give Mr. Merewether a good talking.
5620. By Mr. Piddington: That was after the concert? When she was going to Newtown.
5621. By the Chairman: Did she describe this priest—was it the same one that went before? Yes, the same one that went with her always.
5622. Now, seeing that this priest had used threats about this concert, why did you not tell Mr. Johnson of the matter when he was taking your deposition? I did not think there was any necessity for it.
5623. Is there anything else you know, concerning this matter, that you did not think it necessary to tell Mr. Johnson on that occasion? No.
5624. By Mr. Piddington: Are there any other interviews that Mrs. Bentley has told you of with other people? No, I do not think that there are any other interviews that she has told me of.
5625. By the Chairman: Who was the first person that talked to you about this priest? Mrs. Bentley.
5626. And who was the first person who talked to you about what the priest had stated at the concert? Mrs. Bentley.
5627. Are you sure that it was not your fellow-servant? No.
5628. Was she with you at the time Mrs. Bentley said this? I do not remember whether she was or not.
5629. Where were you when Mrs. Bentley told you? I do not know.
5630. Were you in the kitchen? I do not know.
5631. Were you in the parlour? I do not remember.
5632. Try to remember—were you in the bed-room? I cannot tell; I do not know.
5633. Just try to know? I do not remember what part of the house I was in when Mrs. Bentley told me. It is very likely it might be in the bed-room, while Mrs. Bentley was getting ready to go out.
5634. Did you or the other servant assist Mrs. Bentley in preparing to go out, as a rule? I used to get Mrs. Bentley's things, and so on, when she was going to Newtown.
5635. Used Mrs. Bentley to carry on a conversation with you, or your fellow-servant, at that time? Sometimes we were both in the room together.
5636. Did she speak once to you about this priest, and then turn to your fellow-servant and address herself to her, at the time this conversation was going on? She would address herself sometimes to Maria and sometimes to me.
5637. At the time she was telling you about this priest? Yes, if she was in the room.
5638. By Mr. Piddington: Was she in the room? I do not know whether she was in the room.
5639. You do not know anything further about it? I do not remember anything further.
5640. By the Chairman: Did Maria Bradshaw tell you of any conversation she had with Camphin about this priest? Yes; she told me that she asked him if there was a priest at the concert, that came out after Mrs. Bentley, and that he said no—he said there was no priest.
5641. Did he say how wicked it was for Mrs. Bentley to say so? No, I do not remember Maria saying that to me.
5642. What did she say? She did not tell me anything he said about that.
5643. Did she not tell you anything whatever about it? Yes, she said it was all a falsehood, and that there was no priest at all.
5644. And that Camphin told her that it was false? Yes.
5645. And did he not say that it was very wrong for Mrs. Bentley to say so? I do not know—I cannot say.
5646. Did you think it very wrong for Mrs. Bentley to say that there was a priest when there was not? I did think it wrong to say that there was a priest when there was not.
5647. By Mr. Johnson: Did Maria Bradshaw tell you how often she had had interviews with Camphin? Yes.
5648. Did Maria tell you how often she had had interviews with Camphin? Yes, she told me that the first time she saw him was on a Sunday evening; then, I think, she saw him on Tuesday night; then, again, on the Wednesday night. I do not know how many times, but she has told me every time she has seen him.
5649. Did she tell you, before she saw him, that she was going to see him? Yes.
5650. And after she has seen him, she has told you that she has seen him? Yes; and he was very cross with her at first, because he thought she might have come for Mrs. Bentley, like.
5651. Was not the first time you heard of her coming to meet Camphin after this Committee was appointed? Yes, I think it was.
5652. You heard nothing about meeting him before that? No, I did not hear her say she would go and meet him until then.
5653. Did you know of her meeting him last Sunday morning? Yes, I knew then that she had seen him.

5654. Do you know if she made any appointment to see him after that? After Sunday morning?—yes, I think on Tuesday night.

5655. On Tuesday night? Yes.

5656. Do you know if she has any appointment to see him now? No, I do not know that she has.

5657. By Mr. Wilson: Is Maria a sweetheart of Camphin's? Not that I know of.

5658. By Mr. Johnson: Do you remember the circumstance of Maria and Clark being left in the house together? Yes.

5659. That was the night of the concert, was it not? Yes, she would not be in the house alone with Clark; she said she would sooner be alone—by herself.

5660. Did she not say she would rather have Camphin there? She did not mention Camphin particularly. She said she would rather have one of the others, and that she would then feel safe. She did not say one particularly, but that she would not like to be in the house with Clark alone.

5661. Are you sure that she did not mention Camphin's name? I am sure she did not want him.

5662. Are you quite sure that she did not mention his name? I am sure she did not; she might have mentioned it to say that his conduct was different to the others, but not that she would have him in the house.

5663. Did he not at that time converse a good deal on religious topics? At what time?

5664. At the time she did not want Clark to be there? Conversation on books?

5665. Did he not converse a good deal on religious subjects? No, I do not think he did, because he was not very long in the house. He was only there two or three nights, and I do not think they had much conversation at all.

5666. Are you in a position to say whether this was the case or not—do you remember him telling her that he had been brought up strictly as a Roman Catholic? I do not remember him saying that he was brought up strictly. I knew that he was a Catholic at the time, because when he was there he would not eat meat on the fast days.

5667. Do you remember any conversation about some particular book that she was reading? Yes, I remember her saying she thought it was a dodge to come down and see what she was doing, or what we might be doing, as we were suspected, and she was reading a book she said.

5668. When she went out to meet Camphin, at these times, you always knew that she was going? Yes.

5669. Do you remember last Friday week? Yes.

5670. Do you remember what time she came home that night? What time—Friday week?

5671. Yes? I think it was some time after 10 when she came home.

5672. It was very late, was it not? Well, it was. That Friday night I think she was down at her aunt's, and another young woman.

5673. Was it so or not—you are quite sure you are speaking of Friday week? Yes; she told me she had gone over to her aunt's—that she was not very well.

5674. What was the night she told you she was not very well? I think that was the night. I do not know whether that was the night. It was some Friday night.

5675. That she assigned being unwell as a reason for being out late? She was sick this Friday night, and rather late; and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley said they thought Maria must have been taken ill. I said, "It is rather late now—it is after 10 o'clock." They thought I had better go down to her aunt's and see. When Maria came home she told me that she had not been very well, and that she had stopped at her aunt's.

5676. I want you to fix what night that was, particularly? I think that was Friday night week or the Friday before; I cannot say exactly; but I know that on the night she had to meet Camphin she was not long in his company, because she told me that he just came round from St. Mary's, round Castlereagh-street, I think; that he went round Pitt-street, and then went on, and she went into her aunt's.

5677. Did she tell you on any night that she walked round the Racecourse and round Woolloomooloo? Yes.

5678. What night was that—was not that the night? I do not know; I do not keep such things in my head; I just hear them, and do not think that they will be asked me again.

5679. Cannot you tell whether or not she gave as an excuse for being out late, that she was ill and went to her aunt's, or whether the night she was out late was not the night she was on the Racecourse? Yes, I could depend on what she said.

5680. Well, what night was that? I do not know what night it was, but it was not the night she was out late. She told me the distance he walked with her, and that was not the night.

5681. What did she tell you about that? That he went round by St. Mary's and Castlereagh-street.

5682. Did she tell you about walking about the Racecourse and Woolloomooloo until a late hour? She told me about walking about Woolloomooloo—not the Racecourse, that I remember. She might have gone on the Racecourse and not walked about there till late.

5683. What time did she get home that night? At the usual time—a few minutes after 10 o'clock; I cannot say the exact time.

5684. Is 10 o'clock the usual time for coming home from church? 10 o'clock?

5685. Yes—what time is the church over? The church was 10 o'clock that Friday night.

5686. What is the time for going home when you go to church on a Friday night? That depends. It may be after 10 that you can stop in church. At 10 o'clock the bell rings.

5687. By Mr. Hart: What time is the service over? There is no service on Friday night.

5688. But when there is, what time is it over? The service on Thursday or Friday night is over about 8 o'clock. On Friday night generally people are in the church until 10 o'clock, or it may be later.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

5689. That is if they have to go to confession? Yes, it may be afterwards; they would stop longer than 10; it may be till half-past 10.

5690. Do you and Maria ever sleep together? No, we never sleep together. I slept with her the other night, as she was not very well. I think that was the first time since I have been in the house.

5691. Tell me that night you did sleep together? That was on Tuesday night, or Monday night.

5692. In this week? Yes, in this week. I think it was Tuesday night.

5693. After she had been examined here, was it not? I think it was on Tuesday night.

5694. Did you tell your mistress that you were going to sleep with her? No. It was Tuesday night, I think, that Maria was down-stairs and not very well.

5695. By Mr. Piddington: That was the night before last? Yes, I think so.

5696. By Mr. Johnson: Don't you know? It was Wednesday night.

5697. You did not tell your mistress that you were going to sleep together? No, it was my own wish. She did not want me, particularly, but she said she was very ill; that she was in pain, and would like me to go and sleep with her.

5698. And you did sleep together? Yes, I took my bed up, and slept in the room with her.

5699. What part of the bed did you take up? All my bed, and brought down my clothes in the morning.

5700. Did you not arrange your own bed in the morning, as though you had slept in it below? No, I took the clothes and threw them carelessly down, and left the mattress above.

5701. Were not the bed-clothes just turned down, as though you had got out of bed, and was not your rosary left in them? Yes, my rosary was there, but I brought the clothes down in my arms and laid them on the bed, and left the mattress up-stairs.

5702. Did you inform your mistress that you had slept with Maria? No, not until Mrs. Bentley said—"Where is your mattress gone?" I said I slept up-stairs last night with Maria, who was very ill.

5703. It was the circumstance of seeing your bed without the mattress, that led your mistress to make the inquiry? I do not know that any inquiry was made about it. It was the first time it was done. The girl did not want me to go up at all at first, but she was very ill.

5704. Did you have any conversation that night when you slept together? We had no conversation.

5705. None whatever? Not about any matters concerning anyone but ourselves.

5706. She had no conversation with you about the evidence she gave before this Committee? No, she said she felt very bad and thought she would die soon. She said she felt as if the power was leaving her side. She was in great pain. There was no conversation about this, as far as I can remember.

5707. You say that the reason you went to sleep with her was that she was very ill? Yes, she felt very ill and was crying; she said her side was so bad. I said I would go and sleep with her.

5708. What time did she go out the next morning? About the usual time, I think.

5709. Was it 7 o'clock? No, it was not at 7; I think it was after 7 o'clock.

5710. Did she go to a doctor? Yes, she went to the doctor, I think.

5711. When? I do not know whether that was the morning when she came back from the walk.

5712. That was yesterday? Yesterday?

5713. Yes, did she go to a doctor? Yesterday morning or the morning before, but I really do not take these things in my head; it is no use to ask me; I did not think these questions would be asked me.

5714. Did she not go out as usual, yesterday morning, with the children? Yes, she went out as usual with the children.

5715. Did she go to the doctor then? I do not know whether it was yesterday morning I got some medicine made up for her. I think it must be yesterday morning she went to the doctor. I did not think of taking such things into my head.

5716. Now about this priest—how long do you say it was before the last concert (at which Mrs. Bentley did not play), that you heard her say anything about the priest? It was some time before that.

5717. How long was it before that? I do not know. I know it was some time before that, because Mrs. Bentley used to speak to us about it.

5718. Was it before the day you came home and saw her agitated in consequence of the assault? It was some time before that, because I made the remark—"What a pity it was the priest was not with you!"

5719. How long was it before that? I do not know. She said—"Indeed it was," or something like that.

5720. How long do you think it was between the day she was assaulted and the day of the concert when you say she told you she saw the priest? How long?

5721. Yes; what interval of time was there between the days? I really do not remember what time it was—not a bit.

5722. Do you remember what day of the week it was that the assault took place? I think it was on ———

5723. Was it not on a Friday? I do not know whether it was a Tuesday or a Friday.

5724. It was in the Easter week? It was Easter week, but I do not know on what day.

5725. She did not go to Newtown on Easter Tuesday? Not on Easter week—she went on the week following.

5726. Are you sure that she did not go on Easter week at all? No, because the holidays were ——— 5727. Do not give me an answer because of some reason you have—I want you to speak from your memory. In point of fact, we know that she did go on the Tuesday in Easter week? She did?

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

5728. Yes? She did not go the week of the holidays, because she was at home.

5729. Easter Tuesday you know is a common holiday? There was a week—I supposed it was the Easter week—when she did not go; but I know she went the week following.

5730. By Mr. Piddington: Do you take the holidays to extend throughout the week? No—Mrs. Bentley's holidays; one day she had to go on the holidays, and then she stopped at home a week and did not go to Newtown at all.

5731. Not during the whole of the Easter week? Not to Newtown.

5732. By Mr. Johnson: You do not consider the whole of Easter week a holiday, do you? Yes.

5733. You state, in your deposition, that on Mrs. Bentley returning home you opened the door for her, and that she looked excessively pale, and so on? Yes.

5734. Can you remember what day in the week that was? I cannot remember which day it was; it must be either the one or the other; I do not remember the exact date when it was.

5735. Do you recollect what day of the week the first time was when she fainted when Mr. Harrison was there? The day of the week?

5736. Yes? No, I do not remember that.

5737. Or the second time? No, I do not remember. I think each time was in the night, but I do not remember which day of the week it was.

5738. Can you remember if she ever fainted in Mr. Harrison's presence on a Sunday night? Yes, I think Mrs. Bentley did.

5739. Why do you think it was on a Sunday night? Well, I think—I fancy from the—as near as I can remember, by Mr. Harrison stopping one Sunday evening.

5740. By Mr. Piddington: Do you recollect Mr. Harrison stopping one Sunday evening? I do not know whether it was the other girl or I, but I know we had to get something for Mrs. Bentley.

5741. By Mr. Johnson: You and Maria were present on both the occasions? Yes, we were present; sometimes me and sometimes Maria; we were not always there together.

5742. You were running out to do what you could, I suppose? Yes.

5743. Were you not one or other absent usually on Sunday evening? Oh! yes.

5744. What was your reason for supposing that it was Sunday evening when Mrs. Bentley fainted in Mr. Harrison's presence? I think one of us was out; I do not know whether it was I or the other girl—and I suppose when we were talking we said how bad Mrs. Bentley had been.

5745. But you said you were both present, going in and out? Mrs. Bentley used not to go to bed at 10 o'clock. It was very late sometimes when Mrs. Bentley might go off.

5746. But I want to know what is your reason for supposing that it was a Sunday—have you any reason? Yes; I think one of us had to go out for something.

5747. Which of you? I do not know which of us had to go out.

5748. Where had you to go to? Whether it was to the doctor—no, not the doctor—to the chemist's, for eau-de-Cologne, or sal volatile, or something, I do not know.

5749. Can you remember the fact of Mrs. Bentley coming home—of your being called up at night—and of Mr. Bentley saying that the wretch had hurt Mrs. Bentley more than he thought? Yes.

5750. That was the same night she came home and told you she had been assaulted? It was not on Sunday night.

5751. That was the same night she told you? Yes.

5752. Did she faint on the same night? I do not remember her fainting then.

5753. Well, the next night? It is such a time ago that I do not remember.

5754. Were you not the next morning called up to put this poultice on? Yes.

5755. On Saturday morning—the day following? Yes.

5756. You saw that rag taken away again that you put on? Yes.

5757. When was that taken away? It must have been Sunday morning.

5758. Assuming that the assault was on the Friday, the rag must have been taken away on the Sunday? Yes.

5759. And when you took off the poultice on Sunday morning, that was stained with blood, was it not? Yes.

5760. Did you put another one on? I did not take the poultice off the breast; Mrs. Bentley took it off herself.

5761. Were other rags put on? Mrs. Bentley did that herself; I do not remember putting more than one poultice on Mrs. Bentley's breast, and that was in the night.

5762. Cannot you remember, while this poulticing was in operation—during the time she was suffering from her breast—whether she fainted? No, I do not remember it then.

5763. Can you remember sufficiently well to say that she did not faint during that time? She did not seem to faint when I was in the room with her, because she was standing up.

5764. You do not understand me. We understand, from what you have said, that this poulticing must have gone on for two or three days. She came in during the day; at night you heard of her breast being hurt, and the rag was taken off and a poultice put on; you saw the poultice the next day, and she put other rags on? She was in the room when I took the rags away.

5765. The next day or the day following—now, in all that time, have you any recollection of her fainting? I do not remember; I cannot bring it to my memory.

5766. In point of fact, you do not remember her fainting within two or three days of the assault? I do not remember it.

- Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.
5767. Do you remember Mrs. Bentley going to the concert shortly after the time of the assault? Yes.
5768. Did she faint, to your recollection, between the day of the assault and the day of her going to that concert? Between the day of the assault and the day of her going to the concert?
5769. Yes; what we call the first concert? The first concert?
5770. We have only spoken of two? But that was the first one of all?
5771. I do not know about the first one of all—you remember her going to a concert shortly after the day of the assault? Yes; I went to the concert Mrs. Bentley went to play at; that is all the concerts I have been at.
5772. I am not asking you what concert you went to—do you not remember Mrs. Bentley going to a concert on Tuesday night, shortly after the assault? I remember her going to some concert with, I think, Mr. Hanson. I think Mr. Hanson came round. I cannot say whether Mrs. Bentley went with Mr. Hanson. I know she went with strange people.
5773. I want to know if you recollect the fact of her going to a concert a few days after the day of the assault? Yes; I think, to let the people see that she was not afraid to go there.
5774. That was very soon after the day of the assault, was it not? I do not know; I do not remember what time it was really; I do not keep those things in my head.
5775. But do you recollect whether she fainted between the day of the assault and the day of going to that concert? I do not remember it.
5776. If it occurred you do not remember it? No, I do not remember it.
5777. Are you quite sure that Mrs. Bentley told you she ever went to a convent? Am I quite sure?
5778. Yes; was it her sister that she said went to school to a convent? Herself and her sister?
5779. Did she say herself? Mrs. Bentley said she had been.
5780. To school at a convent? Yes, for three years.
5781. Herself and her sister? Yes, both of them.
5782. Are you sure she said her sister that is dead? Yes, she said her sister Emily and her went to school to a convent.
5783. Are you aware that she has a sister married to a Mr. Bentley? Yes.
5784. How did you become aware of that? She told me she had.
5785. She is a Mrs. Thomas Bentley, I believe? Yes.
5786. Did she tell you that that sister went to a convent? She did not tell me that one went to a convent, but that her sister that is dead and herself went, and she said they used to sleep together.
5787. Mr. Bentley suffered greatly from ill health, did he not? He did.
5788. And had to retire to bed early on that account? Yes.
5789. I suppose you were not in the habit of going to his bed-room? Not when Mr. Bentley was there. Sometimes I have gone in when he has been in bed, with perhaps water to leave in the room.
5790. Have you the least idea that after he seemed to go to bed he was about the house watching Mr. Harrison? No; when he went to bed he bid them "good night," and I had not the least idea that he would come down again.
5791. And when Mr. Harrison was sitting with Mrs. Bentley, was there the usual access to the drawing-room—you had not to knock to get in? No; except one time, when they would be all together in the room.
5792. But when Mrs. Bentley and Mr. Harrison only were in the room, used you not to go in as a matter of course? Yes, I used to open the door and go in.
5793. Without making any signal? I never made any signal.
5794. Do you believe Mrs. Bentley ever allowed Mr. Harrison to kiss her? No, I would not believe such a thing of Mrs. Bentley.
5795. About those bricks to which reference has been made: do you think that Mr. or Mrs. Bentley could have carried up a lot of bricks from the garden to the loft, without somebody observing them? Of course we were not always down-stairs.
5796. Would you believe they could have done it? Oh! if such a thing was to be done, it might be done without our knowing it. I was not always in the house.
5797. But one or other of you was generally there, were you not? Yes; but the other girl would be about the same as me.
5798. It would be rather a troublesome operation, would it not, to carry bricks through the yard into the house, and get them into that loft? It would be rather difficult to do.
5799. How old is their eldest child? Her eldest child?
5800. Yes? I do not know; I think she is nearly four years.
5801. She is a very intelligent child? Yes.
5802. An observant child? Yes.
5803. Do you think it could have been done without that child seeing it? I do not know.
5804. You had been up in this loft a long time before—at least, a considerable time before you heard of these detectives being in the house? Oh! yes.
5805. Had you much difficulty in getting up? No, I had not much difficulty in getting up there.
5806. And you walked about there, picking up small pieces of wood? Yes.
5807. You must have disturbed the dust to some extent, I suppose? I dare say I did disturb it a little.
5808. And you opened that window? Yes, it was opened; I just lifted it up and came back again.

5809. Do you remember the ceiling having fallen down in Mrs. Bentley's bed-room? I do remember it.
5810. About what time was that? I should think now it is a year or two. It is a good deal more than twelve months, I know; it was when the other girl was there; I do not know what time it was, but it was a very long time ago.
5811. You remember its being repaired? Yes.
5812. Were not the workmen in the loft who repaired the ceiling? Yes, they went up to look out too. I think it was a lot of wet that came in, and Mr. Bentley sent the men up to see. I remember them saying that the window was not fastened down, and that that was the reason the rain came in.
5813. By the Chairman: Was that ceiling repaired before anything was known about this Bentley mystery? I think so.
5814. By Mr. Wilson: How did you get up into the loft? I got up by the steps.
5815. Was there a ladder always standing there? Not always. Mr. Bentley had one made to put there.
5816. When you went up to that loft and saw it for the first time, did it appear to you as if it had been a long time since anyone had been there before? It was very dusty looking, and very wild looking. No one would think of going into such a place.
5817. Is it such a place that boxes could be placed in it? Oh! yes; you can stand in it.
5818. Are you aware whether it has ever been used for the purpose of putting things in which were not required? There could be things put in there that were not required, but I do not know that there has been anything put there.
5819. Nothing has been put there since you have known it? Not by us.
5820. It is sufficiently easy of access to enable people to take up boxes, or anything they might wish to put out of the way? Anything small. You could not take anything very large through the hole; anything small you could put up there.
5821. What was the difference you observed between the account in the paper about the Exeter case affair and the account Mrs. Bentley had given you? Mrs. Bentley told me, I think, after that night when we were talking together. At first when I said—"Were you not afraid when the man took you into this place?" she said—"No, I was not afraid—I was very fond of the man—he was so kind to me I told him everything; I told him what was my mind. He was fond of me, and used to tell me that when I wanted to leave my parents at any time I had only to trust myself to him." She said he told her that if ever she wanted to go away, she would have a lady to wait for her, and put her into a convent; that he was very fond of her. And she said there was an old priest she used to go to confession to. She asked him how this Mr. (I forget his name) was; and he said—"I dare say he is doing all right." What I saw on the paper is very different from that.
5822. Did she say she knew his name? Which—this man's name?
5823. Yes? I think it was Love, or something of that kind.
5824. Did she mention his name? Did she say she knew his name? I think she did.
5825. You think so? Yes.
5826. And what do you think it was? The name, I think, has been in the paper. She mentioned the name, I know.
5827. By the Chairman: It is "O" something? I forget it now.
5828. Was there an "O" to it? Yes, I think there was.
5829. Did you ever hear Mrs. Bentley say it was "O" something? I think Mrs. Bentley did say it was "O" somebody, as near as I can remember.
5830. Was it O'Keith? No.
5831. Was it O'Reilly? No.
5832. By Mr. Johnson: Was it the same name you saw mentioned in the paper? Yes, I think it was the same name.
5833. Have you told all of what you considered the differences between her statement and the statement in the paper? Yes; she said that the detectives were after her, and that the sign given to her was to drop her pocket-handkerchief whenever she saw them. She said she would not do it. She said she was very fond of this man, and would not do it. That was the sign. The detectives were watching her to drop this pocket-handkerchief that they might know, but she said she would not do it.
5834. Is that all the difference you can point out? I do not remember anything else.
5835. Did Mrs. Bentley tell you what her age was at that time? Mrs. Bentley's age?
5836. Yes? Well, I do not remember what age she was.
5837. You remember these holes being discovered in the ceiling of Mrs. Bentley's bed-room, and the ceiling in the nursery being down? Yes.
5838. Do you remember what day in the week they were discovered? It was on a Sunday morning, I think.
5839. Do you remember Mr. Harrison coming to the house that Sunday? Yes, he came to the house that Sunday.
5840. Did he dine there? Yes, I think he did.
5841. Do you know whether he went up into the loft that day? I know that he went up-stairs, but I do not know whether he went into the loft.
5842. What time did he go up-stairs? I do not know whether it was before dinner or after dinner, or in the evening, but he did go up. I cannot say what time it was, but I know that he did go up there.
5843. Did he come to the house at all before half-past 1 on that day? No, I think he came to dine.
5844. Did not he arrive about dinner time? Yes.

Miss
Mary Ryan.

- Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.
5845. Did not they have dinner before he went into the loft? I do not know. I know that he went up into the loft, but I do not know whether it was before or after dinner.
5846. Do you know a tool-chest that Mr. Bentley had? Yes.
5847. Where was that kept? It was kept in the study—in Mr. Bentley's back parlour.
5848. Was it always open to anybody's inspection? Yes, we went there when we wanted anything.
5849. Do you remember how many gimlets used to be there? No, I do not remember.
5850. Did you ever miss any gimlet out of it? No.
5851. By Mr. Hart: Did Mr. and Mrs. Bentley ever ask you to post any letters for them? Mrs. Bentley did sometimes. I have posted letters for friends of theirs.
5852. Have there been any in Mrs. Bentley's own handwriting? Yes, when she was sending to her friends—and in his.
5853. Did you ever post any of these anonymous letters? No, not that I know of.
5854. Did you take any notice of the superscription on the envelope? Yes.
5855. By Mr. Johnson: What kind of writing was it on the letters she gave you to post? Just as she always wrote.
5856. Did you ever post any letters given to you by Mrs. Bentley, which were in a handwriting resembling those you took from the postman? No, I never did. When Mrs. Bentley sent me to post a letter, the writing on it was the same she always writes, and had no resemblance whatever to the writing on the anonymous letters.
5857. By Mr. Hart: Did you become on terms of intimacy with any of the detectives at Mr. Bentley's? Only just while they were coming to the house they would speak to us friendly. I never had any private conversation with them.
5858. Did they ever speak to you confidentially? No, they never spoke to us confidentially while they were in the house.
5859. Did they ever tell you any stories or tales of the doings of the detective police? No, they never told us about them. They were very quiet while they were in the house with us, and they never said anything to us at all about it.
5860. Did they ever tell you that they used to disguise themselves so that no one could know them? They said they could take disguises of any kind, and go into any place.
5861. Who said that? I forget who said it, but they said they could go in disguise.
5862. Which did you talk to most—Clark or Camphin? The man down in the kitchen I used to talk to. Mr. Camphin was up-stairs—the two down in the kitchen.
5863. Sanderson and Clark? Yes, Sanderson and Clark. I really forget which said it. They said they could take any disguise.
5864. Did either of them tell you he went disguised as a clergyman? Yes; there was one at the concert. I do not know that they told me, but there was one to go there in the disguise of a minister.
5865. One of them told you? I do not know which, but it was one of them. One of them was to go disguised as a minister.
5866. Who did you hear that from? I do not know which of them told me, but I have been told there was one there on the night Mrs. Bentley was to play, in the disguise of a Church of England minister.
5867. But are you certain that you heard it from one of them? Well, I cannot say where I heard it, but I did hear it when they were in the house.
5868. Did they tell you they had been at a concert, disguised as a clergyman? They did not tell me that they were ever there disguised like that. It was this night—that was the only time they went there disguised as a clergyman.
5869. Did any one of them tell you that he had been to Newtown disguised as a clergyman? No, they never told me that.
5870. When Mrs. Bentley spoke of having interviews with the supposed Roman Catholic clergyman, on her way to Newtown, did she say that those interviews occurred in the omnibus, or on a particular part of the way? In the omnibus; and when they would get out of the omnibus she said he used to come down as far as King-street, and hand her out.
5871. So that the interviews always took place in the omnibus? Yes. She said he used to walk up Market-street with her.
5872. Did she ever say that he gave her any pamphlets or religious works, for the purpose of working her conversion? No, she never said that. The only thing she said was, that when she was reading the "Wandering Jew" he told her that he had read that himself—that this priest had read the "Wandering Jew" himself, and that then afterwards he gave Mrs. Bentley the names of some books to get from the library to read.
5873. From what library? From the School of Arts.
5874. Did she say that he gave her a list of those books in writing or verbally? She did not say that he gave them to her in writing; but he told her the name of the books, and when she sent me one time she said it was the priest recommended her these books.
5875. Were you in the habit of getting books from the School of Arts, for Mrs. Bentley? Yes.
5876. Do you recollect the name of the works? Really I do not remember what they were.
5877. Was it a novel or a religious book? It was a novel.
5878. They were novels? Yes. She said at one time that she was reading one, that he recommended it to her because there was something in it about a good priest.
5879. Did it occur to you that that was a novel mode of working her conversion? No, the priest would not recommend her —
5880. Do you recollect what Mrs. Bentley said? She said as her mind was, it was no sin for her to read those kind of books—that they were better perhaps than some other books which they might read.
5881. Was the other girl on terms of greater intimacy with either of the detectives than you were? Not when they were in the house, any more than I have been.

5882. You have not made assignations with any of them? No.
5883. You have not gone walking about Hyde Park with them? No.
5884. Have you stated to the Committee the reason why either you or Maria Bradshaw did not wish Clark to be in the house? Yes, I have been asked that question I think.
5885. Did he take any liberties, or attempt to take any liberties? With the other girl I think he did.
5886. By the Chairman: He did not with you? No, he did not with me; he did not take any liberties with me.
5887. By Mr. Johnson: You say that Mrs. Bentley was reading the "Wandering Jew"? Yes.
5888. Did not Mr. Harrison lend it to her? Yes.
5889. Do you know when he lent it to her? No. I heard the other girl make the remark that it was the "Wandering Jew," and that Mr. Harrison lent it to her. She said afterwards that she told this priest that she was reading the "Wandering Jew."
5890. Can you remember the time she got the "Wandering Jew" from Mr. Harrison? It was after Mr. Harrison commenced coming about the place that he lent it to her.
5891. By Mr. Leary: How is it that, although you repeatedly talked to Mrs. Bentley about the appearance of this priest, and the colour of his hair, you did not mention it to anybody? I did not think of mentioning it to anybody.
5892. Do not you usually consult with clergymen of your Church on all matters of great importance? No, I never have—never.
5893. You never have? No.
5894. Did ever you mention to anybody this circumstance about the priest? Oh! yes, the other girl and I have often done so.
5895. Who did you mention it to? I mentioned it to a young woman that came to the house, working—giving a description of such a priest, what he was like, and that.
5896. Did it not occur to you as a very unlikely thing that it was a priest? We did not believe it was.
5897. You did not believe it was a priest? No.
5898. When Mrs. Bentley told you it was a priest, did you believe it was a priest of the Roman Catholic Church? Yes, I believed it then.
5899. Did it not occur to you, with your knowledge of priests, as an extraordinary thing that a priest should go and speak to Mrs. Bentley, without an introduction? Yes, I used to say it was very strange, and that he must have known her friends at Home, and Mrs. Bentley said—"He knew my brother at Home."
5900. And do you mean to say that you never told any individual except some girl who came to the house? Yes.
5901. Then it did not appear to you such an extraordinary thing? Yes, it did—to think that a priest would take the trouble to go out so often.
5902. Did it not appear to you an extraordinary thing for a priest to have conversation with Mrs. Bentley about receiving a present of braces or a pair of slippers? Yes; but from the way the conversation was it did not appear strange.
5903. You say that Mrs. Bentley was never introduced to this clergyman? Yes.
5904. Did the meeting of this priest with Mrs. Bentley, without introduction, strike you as a very extraordinary thing? Yes; when I used to make the remark, she used to say she wondered if when she was going to a party at Government House she saw the priest. I thought the priest must have known her friends at Home.
5905. Did you recognize any person as the priest, from the description given by Mrs. Bentley? Some time ago I told Mrs. Bentley I thought I saw a clergyman like him.
5906. You thought it was the same clergyman? Yes, by the description she had given to me.
5907. Did you mention his name to Mrs. Bentley? I said I did not know his name; I said I wished I could find out that priest's name, and see who he is.
5908. If you heard anything said against any member of the Roman Catholic Church, would you not think it your duty to go and mention it to some clergyman? Anything that was not right, of course I would.
5909. And did not anything in the conduct of this clergyman appear irregular and improper? Mrs. Bentley said there was nothing, but that he was very kind to her.
5910. What was your own impression? I believed that he had pity on her, knowing what a deal she had suffered. I thought he must have known Mrs. Bentley's friends at Home, and did a debt of kindness to talk to her.
5911. Would it not appear strange that they used to meet so frequently, going to and from Newtown? Yes, but afterwards—
5912. You would think it a strange thing if a clergyman were to meet you frequently at night? Oh! they would not go to meet me.
5913. It might occur. If it did occur that you met a clergyman frequently, what would be your feelings? Unless he spoke to me on very particular things.
5914. Well, if he did speak to you? I would have thought it a very strange thing.
5915. By Mr. Johnson: You did not mention the circumstance to any clergyman of your own persuasion? Never.
5916. You have a particular clergyman? No, no one in particular.
5917. Have you not a spiritual director? Yes, but they are all the same to me.
5918. By Mr. Hart: Have you, in point of fact, one? No, I never have a particular one. When I go to confession I would just as soon go to one as to another.
5919. Have you one you call your spiritual director? I have not one in particular; I would just go to one as soon as the other.
5920. Have you ever gone to more than one clergyman within the last twelve months? Oh! yes, I have gone to several within the last twelve months.

Miss
Mary Ryan.
5 Dec., 1862.

Anna Maria Bradshaw called in and further examined:—

- Anna Maria Bradshaw.
5 Dec., 1862.
5921. By Mr. Johnson: You remember the day when Mrs. Bentley came home after the concert? Yes, sir, I do; but I do not recollect the day of the month.
5922. Do you remember its being in Easter week? It was about that time.
5923. Just let me call your attention to this statement in your deposition:—"On Friday in last Easter week, when I brought Mr. Bentley's children home from our afternoon's walk, Mary Ryan told me that Mrs. Bentley had been assaulted and hurt by a man, and very much frightened; and on the following day (Saturday) I saw Mrs. Bentley's breast, and the rag which had been put upon it, which was stained with fresh blood. I inquired at night, or on Sunday morning, and, as far as I can remember, the bleeding had then ceased"—you remember the circumstance mentioned in that? Yes, I remember it all.
5924. And you remember the Sunday that followed that event? Yes.
5925. Did Mrs. Bentley faint on that Sunday night? I cannot recollect now whether she did or not.
5926. Do you remember her going to the concert on the following Tuesday? Do I remember Mrs. Bentley going to a concert?
5927. Yes? I can remember her going, but I cannot say the time that she went. I can remember Mrs. Bentley going—the fact of her going.
5928. Do you remember whether it was shortly after the day of the assault? Well, I think it was very soon after—yes, I think it was the following Tuesday, or the following week.
5929. You remember something to the effect that she would go, to shew them that she was not afraid to go? Yes, I remember that Mrs. Bentley said so.
5930. Can you remember whether between those two events—the day of the assault and the concert—she fainted? The faints were frequent then, and I cannot say at what time—they appeared to occur almost daily—I cannot say as to any particular occasion.
5931. You remember, on the Saturday night or on the Sunday morning, learning that the bleeding had ceased? Yes, I think it was either Saturday night or Sunday morning that I made the inquiry.
5932. And can you remember whether she fainted that night, supposing it was the Sunday morning you inquired? I do not recollect that circumstance.
5933. Do you remember her fainting when Mr. Harrison was present at any time? Oh! yes.
5934. How often? I do not know how often; it might have been three or four times.
5935. Do you remember it more than twice? I could not say that I do; it might be more—it might be three or four times.
5936. Can you say whether she fainted violently in Mr. Harrison's presence on Sunday night? She was ill; I cannot say whether it was a swoon, or a faint, or what it was, but I remember her being very ill.
5937. On that Sunday night? On one occasion when Mr. Harrison was there.
5938. But was it on that Sunday night? I cannot say; I do not remember.
5939. Were you usually out on a Sunday night? I was generally out one Sunday night and the other girl the next.
5940. Oh! you went out on alternate Sundays—one servant was out one Sunday and the other the next? Yes.
5941. What time used you to go home? 10 o'clock was the usual hour.
5942. Do you remember Mr. Harrison being there on that Sunday at all? At the time Mr. Harrison was there, he was daily there, I think, until he was called away by the Government. He was there very often in the middle of the day, and then came in the evening until the hour of 12—he was there till about 12 o'clock at night.
5943. Do you remember whether he was there on that Sunday night? There is no particular day that I can remember his being there.
5944. Was that paragraph which I read to you (185) correct? As far as I know, it is.
5945. By Mr. W. Forster: Do you recollect after the assault took place, and how soon after, that Mrs. Bentley fainted in the house when Mr. Harrison was present? I do not recollect that.
5946. Do you remember Mrs. Bentley fainting at all in Mr. Harrison's presence, after this matter of the assault—at any time? I cannot remember the times now at all as to the fainting, but I remember the circumstance of Mrs. Bentley fainting.
5947. When Mr. Harrison was present? Yes.
5948. Do you remember any particular time—have you any idea when it was—before or after the assault? I do not recollect—I cannot remember whether it was before or after.
5949. You remember the circumstances—where was Mrs. Bentley when she fainted? I remember the last time of her fainting when Mr. Harrison was present; she was in the drawing-room, on the sofa.
5950. When did you go into the room? I think Mary Ryan and I were both called in.
5951. You were called in? Yes, I think so.
5952. Was Mr. Bentley there? Yes.
5953. And Mr. Harrison? And Mr. Harrison.
5954. What was Mr. Bentley doing when you went into the room? That I do not recollect.
5955. What was Mr. Harrison doing? Attending to Mrs. Bentley.
5956. In what way was he attending upon her—was he holding her head up? That I cannot say; I cannot remember.
5957. Was Mrs. Bentley lying quite insensible? She was lying in what I would consider to be a swoon.
5958. Was anyone supporting her head at all? I am not quite sure at that time. Mr. Harrison has on some occasions, I think, and perhaps Mr. Bentley, and the other servant at other times.
5959. But you do not remember on this occasion? No.

5960. Do you remember who carried her up to bed? She was never carried up to bed, that I remember. Anna Maria Bradshaw:
5961. Are you sure of that? She was not that I remember.
5962. You never remember her being carried up? No; she was assisted up by Mr. Harrison and Mr. Bentley, and I think the other servant, and I followed and saw her laid upon the bed. 5 Dec., 1862.
5963. Did Mr. Harrison, on these occasions, or on any one occasion, when he assisted her to bed—did he put her on the bed? I cannot be certain; but being the strongest, it is very likely that he gave the most assistance. I think she leaned entirely upon him.
5964. On these occasions, did Mr. Harrison go away immediately after she was put to bed, or did he wait upon her afterwards? He went away immediately.
5965. Did you ever know him to wait upon her? No.
5966. Who waited upon her—you and the other girl? Yes.
5967. She was left in your hands? Yes, and Mr. Bentley's.
5968. Do you recollect any occasion when Mr. Harrison was employed bathing her head? I think so. I know that when Mr. Boulanger was there he often did that, and I think Mr. Harrison did it also.
5969. What did he bathe her head with? Eau-de-Cologne and water.
5970. And was Mr. Bentley present? Mr. Bentley was present on all occasions.
5971. Are you sure that there was no occasion, when Mr. Bentley left Mr. Harrison, to bathe Mrs. Bentley's head? I do not know, because Mr. Bentley always retired early in the evening when Mr. Harrison was there.
5972. I am speaking of this occasion—Do you remember any occasion when Mrs. Bentley fainted, and was left alone with Mr. Harrison to bathe her head? Without Mr. Bentley being in the room?
5973. Yes? I do not recollect.
5974. Do you think you were present at all or nearly all these cases of fainting? I cannot recollect, but I think so.
5975. Do you remember occasions when Mrs. Bentley was very violent during these fits? When Mr. Harrison was present, do you mean?
5976. Yes? On one occasion I mentioned before, she was most violent I think, and I think it was after the concert.
5977. Mr. Harrison was present? Yes.
5978. Did he hold her hands then? I think he did; he generally took the most part in it.
5979. And he assisted her up-stairs on that occasion, did he? It is more than likely he did, because on those occasions she has been raised to a sitting posture or lowered down as one might think it would ease her.
5980. Did he on that occasion bathe her head? He has bathed her head I know, but I cannot say on what occasions.
5981. And you remember on none of those occasions that he was left alone with her, bathing her head? I cannot say, because we were sent away. Mr. Bentley sent us away almost as soon as we came into the room on that occasion.
5982. What were you sent away for? Because our presence was not necessary.
5983. Did not Mrs. Bentley require to be held? Yes, by them, not by us.
5984. They were holding her? I do not know what she was doing.
5985. If she was violent, how was she restrained? It was generally the case, when she was in these convulsions, that she grasped her hands. On those occasions I think Mr. Bentley held one and Mr. Harrison the other.
5986. Did you ever hold her hands? I have.
5987. Did she grasp your hand violently? Yes, but not so as to injure it in any way.
5988. You have felt her pressing and squeezing your hand? Yes.
5989. And do you not think she would have pressed and squeezed any hand at that time? Yes.
5990. You looked upon it as convulsions? Yes, a violent one generally came on after fainting.
5991. These paroxysms came on generally after fainting? Yes, after fainting.
5992. Did you ever know her to have these paroxysms or fainting fits before the anonymous letters came up? We were not aware of the anonymous letters until they were made public.
5993. Has Mrs. Bentley been subject to these fits ever since you have known her? No; the first time she ever had, in my presence, one of these fits, was on the day Mrs. Hanson called about the anonymous letters.
5994. Was that the first time you recollect? That is the first time, as near as I can remember.
5995. You have no recollection of these fits occurring before the matter of the anonymous letters was mentioned? Mr. Bentley was not at home—he stopped at the Club for nearly a week.
5996. Are you sure that these fainting fits were not a sham? I would not swear to anything, because I am not a doctor, but I believe that they were real fits.
5997. Have you ever seen fits in other people? I have never seen anyone have fits so violent.
5998. You have seen other people faint and go into fits? I have seen convulsions.
5999. This was not the first time? No.
6000. Did you ever go into fits yourself? Never.
6001. You never fainted in your life? No.
6002. Did you ever notice, during your intercourse with Mrs. Bentley, any improper familiarity on her part with Mr. Harrison? No, not with any person.
6003. Did the idea enter your head that she was improperly familiar with Mr. Harrison, until it was mentioned in the course of this examination? Never. 6004.

- Anna Maria Bradshaw. 6004. You did not think of it? No.
6005. It was never suggested in any way? No.
- 5 Dec., 1862. 6006. Were you aware that Mrs. Bentley used to sit up with Mr. Harrison late at night after Mr. Bentley went to bed? Yes.
6007. Did that often happen? It happened every night, I think, while he remained there. I cannot say it did, but I believe so.
6008. Did everybody go to bed—used you to go to bed? Yes.
6009. And the other girl? Yes.
6010. And Mr. Bentley? Yes.
6011. And Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley were left alone? Yes.
6012. That was a common occurrence? Yes.
6013. What time had he used to go away? About 12 o'clock.
6014. How do you know that? I did not always go to bed.
6015. Did you ever, after you had gone to bed, hear Mr. Harrison go away—did you hear the opening and shutting of the door, or anything of that sort? I do not remember. I know we never went to bed very early.
6016. Was 12 o'clock the usual time for going to bed? Sometimes we went before, and sometimes afterwards. We generally read down-stairs. Sometimes we might have had occasion to come down.
6017. Your usual time of going to bed was 12 o'clock? At that time we did not go to bed much before.
6018. And on many occasions Mr. Harrison was sitting up with Mrs. Bentley after you had gone to bed? I cannot say, but Mr. Harrison's hour for going away appeared to be about 12, or a little after.
6019. Did he ever remain sitting up with Mrs. Bentley after you and everyone else had gone to bed? That I could not be certain of.
6020. Did you ever go into the room suddenly while Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley were sitting together in this way? I do not recollect having done so; I might have done, if there was any necessity for doing so.
6021. You do not recollect having done so? I do not recollect.
6022. Are you aware whether Mrs. Bentley used to let Mr. Harrison out when he went home? Mrs. Bentley always went down whenever we saw him go out.
6023. She used to shut the door after him? Whenever we saw him go.
6024. When Mr. Harrison and Mrs. Bentley were left together in this way, did you ever know Mr. Bentley to come down from his room, or to be watching about the house at all? I never noticed anything that happened like that; I never thought there was any reason to do so.
6025. He used when he went to bed not to come down again? I do not remember Mr. Bentley ever coming down again.
6026. Did you ever hear Mrs. Bentley address Mr. Harrison by any other name than "Mr. Harrison"? No.

6039. By Mr. W. Forster: Have you been accustomed to observe happy couples in the course of your life? I do not know that I have.
6040. I suppose you could tell whether they were a happy couple? Well, I think, being so long in the house, I could not be deceived.
6041. You think you are a pretty good judge? I cannot say that I am the best of judges; I have not had much experience.
6042. By Mr. Johnson: It would be difficult to conceal unhappiness of that kind? Yes.
6043. Mrs. Bentley was very fond of her children, and very attentive to them? Yes.

6071. She described him so narrowly that you thought you would have known him if you had seen him? If I saw anyone like him I used to ask her if it was the same.
6072. You set to work to search, did you? At that time I had no intention in the matter.
6073. You did not know any priest that would correspond with the description? No.
6074. Are you sure it was not a detective in disguise? I cannot say.

6092. And she said she had seen him that day? That afternoon.
6093. When was the last time of her meeting this priest? The last time was at Newtown.

6097. She said he was like a brother to her? Yes; and that she leaned upon his arm on some occasions. The second or third time she saw him was in Hunter-street, and she said he was with her when Mr. Wrench passed.
6098. She did not point him out to Mr. Wrench? She said he spoke to her about him—that he asked what that fellow wanted, or something of that kind, and that he would horse-whip him if he molested or insulted her.
6099. This is what she told you—that she met Mr. Wrench when she was walking with the priest in Hunter-street—Did Mr. Wrench speak to her? He spoke to Mrs. Bentley.
6100. When the priest was with her? I think it was after he had left. He saw him talking to her, and asked if he had insulted her, because if he had, he would horse-whip him.
6101. Did Mrs. Bentley describe his conduct as conveying an insult? No.
6102. Did Mr. Bentley ever ask you a question about a priest, or about the Jesuits? Yes, he asked me my opinion about the Jesuits.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.
5 Dec., 1862.

- Anna Maria Bradshaw. 6103. What is your opinion? My opinion I am always willing to give.
 5 Dec., 1862. 6104. Well, what is your opinion? My opinion is, that as a body—I have very great respect for them as a body—I considered that they were the best that could be found amongst the priests, because I thought more perfection was required in them than in the others; also, more learning—more talent.
 6105. Are you acquainted with many Jesuits in this Colony? I am not acquainted with any at all.
 6106. From what source do you derive your knowledge of the Jesuits? From my religion itself.
 6107. From reading a great deal? Yes.
 6108. Might you not be a good Catholic without believing in the Jesuits? I must believe in all the Church believes.
 6109. But that is not part of your belief? It is not an article of faith, certainly.
 6110. Where do you obtain your knowledge about them—from books? Principally from books.
 6111. From having read about them—not from prejudice, of course? I am not prejudiced.
 6112. What books have you read? I cannot give any particular name; I forget.
 6113. You are a great reader—you have read a good deal? I have read a good deal.
 6114. I suppose you read more novels than anything else? I do not read any novels at all.
 6115. By the Chairman: Have not you read the “Wandering Jew”? I never have; Mrs. Bentley has.
 6116. Was Mr. Harrison present when you were asked about the Jesuits? No; I think he was with Mrs. Bentley in the drawing-room; and he gave me his opinion of the Jesuits.
 6117. Well, what was his opinion? His opinion was the reverse of mine? As a body he did not like them, but there were a few individuals whom he thought very good; my opinion was that as a body I liked them, but that a few individuals might not be good.
 6118. When did you see Camphin the last time? I saw him on the night after I was here—on the Tuesday.
 6119. Did you tell him what had occurred when you were here? No.
 6120. Did you ask him what he had said when he was here? No, I did not.
 6121. If he has said you did ask him, would he be telling the truth? I do not know; I cannot remember having said so. I did not expect him —
 6122. By Mr. Morris: You did not expect him? No.
 6123. Did you not go to meet him? No, my intention was to go to St. Mary’s schoolroom. When I came out, the hour was about twenty minutes to 10 o’clock; it was moonlight, and I came up and saw him on the road.
 6124. By the Chairman: What part of the road? At one of the posts—one of those short posts; he was leaning on one of the posts.
 6125. On what road? Just as you come out of St. Mary’s schoolroom.
 6126. Is the post in the street or in the paddock? It is between St. Mary’s Church and the Domain; it stands on the waste ground near to the seminary.
 6127. By Mr. Johnson: Near to the new foundation? Yes, near that.
 6128. By the Chairman: He was standing there? Yes.
 6129. Did he speak to you? Yes, he spoke to me first, or I should have gone on straight.
 6130. Did he say anything particular to you? No, he did not; I do not recollect his saying anything particular. We only walked from that place. I merely said I did not expect that he would have been there that night, and he said “yes.”
 6131. Do you know any particular reason why your fellow-servant slept with you the other night? Yes, I do; I know the reason.
 6132. Was it in connection with what you had said before the Committee? No.
 6133. Had you any conversation about what you did say before the Committee? Yes, so far as we both could say what we said, we said it to each other.
 6134. As far as you could remember? Yes, as far as we could remember.
 6135. As far as you could remember what you had said before the Committee, you re-said it to each other? Yes.

TUESDAY, 9 DECEMBER, 1862.

Present:—

MR. COWPER,	MR. LUCAS,
MR. W. FORSTER,	MR. MORRIS,
MR. HART,	MR. PIDDINGTON,

MR. WILSON.

DANIEL CAMERON DALGLEISH, ESQ., IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Robert Johnson appeared as Solicitor for the Petitioner.

Anna Maria Bradshaw called in and examined:—

- Anna Maria Bradshaw. 6136. By the Chairman: In giving your answers to questions put to you, it would be as well if you would give them as direct as possible; for I find, in answering questions on your previous examination, you have gone very much into other matters respecting which you have not been asked at all, and that very few questions indeed have been answered direct? I have answered as straight as I could.
 9 Dec., 1862.

6137.

6137. Where the question will admit of it, say "yes" or "no"? I will do so, there is nothing I am afraid to speak. I will not say "yes" or "no" to anything I am not sure of.
6138. Do you remember any interference with you at any time when you were sent with any message from Mrs. Bentley? Not any.
6139. Did you fetch some eau-de-Cologne from a chemist's shop in Hunter-street? If that is what you allude to, I do remember.
6140. Were you interfered with by anyone then? Yes.
6141. Then you do not mean, "Not any"? I did, but I did not understand the question. If you will put the questions so that I can understand them, I will try to answer them.
6142. If you do not understand the questions, and will say so, I will try and put them so that you may;—I ask you if you had any interference with you when you were sent on a message? I did not understand the question, but I answered it as near as I could.
6143. Will you answer the question? If it is in the cause of truth and justice, I need not be afraid.
6144. Will you answer the question now? I will answer it as near as my memory will allow me. I did.
6145. When? One night when I went out, when Mr. Boulanger was at Mrs. Bentley's house.
6146. What was the interference—in what did it consist? An Italian, I think, spoke to me about the corner of Castlereagh-street, and asked me where I was going, as near as I can remember; and at first I declined to answer any questions, and that afterwards I did say that I was going —; he asked me was I going for a doctor, as he supposed I was, on account of the hurry I was in. I said I was going to a doctor, or at least I was going for eau-de-Cologne for a person who was fainting.
6147. Did it not strike you as strange that a person should ask you at night if you were going for a doctor? It did not strike me at the time; but I mentioned the circumstance when I returned home.
6148. Have you known any Italians? Not any.
6149. What made you think he was an Italian? By his accent.
6150. Have you heard Italians speak? I have heard Mr. and Mrs. Bentley speaking, and I have heard foreigners speaking French and different languages. I generally know the accent, at least I fancy I do.
6151. By Mr. Piddington: Do you know whether Mr. and Mrs. Bentley speak Italian? Yes, I do.
6152. Have you ever heard a person speak Spanish? No, I do not think I have, that I know of.
6153. Do you think you could tell the difference between Spanish and Italian? I think the difference is that I have heard Italian, and I have not heard the other, to my knowledge.
6154. Have you heard any natives of Italy speak Italian? Not that I could say were natives of Italy at all.
6155. Who have you heard speak Italian besides Mr. and Mrs. Bentley? I do not remember.
6156. How did you know that Mr. and Mrs. Bentley spoke Italian when you heard them? Because Mrs. Bentley told me herself.
6157. Is that all you know about Italian? That is the principal thing.
6158. By the Chairman: The question you were asked was, is that all you know of Italian? I have answered the question.
6159. Do you understand that question? Not very well, that is all—the principal thing I have heard. I have seen Italian in books, from the way it was expressed.
6160. You knew it was Italian when you saw it in a book? The English was there to explain it.
6161. Was it a dictionary you saw it in? I dare say I might have seen it in a dictionary.
6162. Is that all the knowledge you have of Italian? Yes, I think it is, as near as I can remember.
6163. What did this Italian say to you? He asked me where I was going, as near as I can remember; was I going for a doctor; was there sickness in the house—I think that was it. I said I was not going to a doctor exactly, but to a druggist, for eau-de-Cologne for a person who had fainted.
6164. Did he say anything? I think he looked at his watch, and said the hour was late for a druggist to be open, and that the nearest to that was Wright's, in Hunter-street. Of course I was in Hunter-street at the time, and he walked down by my side until he came to the shop, and I rang the bell. When I rang the bell, or before—I do not know whether it was before or after—he said, "If I had known, I could have given you some, if you had come down to my house." I rang the bell, but I could not get any, for the girl who opened the door said she could not give me any. I think they were in bed, but she could not give me any. I went home then, and was afterwards sent to Mr. Jenkins.
6165. Have you seen that Italian since? No, and I would not know him if I saw him.
6166. How was he dressed? I think he had a black coat. I do not know the name of the hat, a peculiar shape of hat, I do not know whether they call it a California.
6167. Can you describe it? I think it was grey or drab, a stiff looking hat.
6168. A felt hat? I think it was something the shape felt hats are worn.
6169. Was there any peculiarity about him? I think he had a black beard, or moustache, or both.
6170. Was it moonlight? I do not recollect its being moonlight; I am not sure.
6171. Did you pass any gas-lamp while he was in your company? I do not remember; I did not look at him but at the time he stooped and looked in my face.
6172. Do you think he was disguised? I do not know; it was night. I did not think about his being disguised, nor about his motive in asking the question.

Bradshaw.

9 Dec., 1862.

6173. By Mr. Johnson: Do you remember Mr. Bentley being laid up with any illness during the time a detective was in the house, suffering from diarrhœa or other illness? I remember Mr. Bentley being ill; I cannot exactly remember the time. I think he had broken a blood-vessel, and I went for the doctor.

6174. Did anyone speak to you then? Yes, in Macquarie-street; the hour was late. I described him when I went home, and they thought they knew who it was—that it was a person from the Club; I think it was Mrs. Bentley who said that.

6175. By the Chairman: What did this person say to you? He stooped down very quickly, and caught hold of me by the hand. I do not recollect exactly what was said, but I think it was, "Will you come with me?" he said; and I told him not to detain me, for I was in a hurry—there was a person ill, and I had been to the doctor's.

6176. Do you remember the time when Mr. Bentley gave up fastening the street-door himself—when the detective officers left—what was it owing to? Gave up fastening the door?

6177. Yes—when he used to retire early? I do not know, I am sure; I could not say what it was owing to.

6178. Do you know whether Mr. Bentley was in the habit of carrying a revolver about the house with him? Not about the house—I am not aware of that; but I know that a few evenings, when the detectives did not come, when it got dusk I think he sat in his study with one; I do not know about his carrying it about the house with him.

6179. About Harrison being there late—Have you known Harrison to be in the house when the detective officers were gone? That I am not sure of; he was there, I know, when they were not there, but I do not know whether they were gone, because they did not leave when we have gone to bed; sometimes not till after. (The Shorthand Writer, by direction of the Chairman, read the preceding question.) I am not sure—I could not be certain.

6180. Have you known him to be there when the detective officers were gone at night? I could not be certain, for I never took note of anything that happened at that time at all, unless it occurred to my memory at the time.

6181. Were you ever present when the door was fastened at night, when Mrs. Bentley was there to let the detectives out? I do not rightly understand.

6182. Were you present when the door was fastened for the night—when the detective officers were leaving? I could not say; that was not my place to fasten the doors, or to know anything about them.

6183. Did you see Mrs. Bentley's breast on the occasion of her having been attacked at Newtown? Yes, I had a glance at it once; I am not sure whether oftener; but I remember once looking and inquiring.

6184. You had a glance at it once? Yes; I might have oftener, but I do not remember.

6185. What kind of glance—how long did you see it? Perhaps for a second or two seconds—not more.

6186. What do you mean by a glance—do you mean that you saw it in passing, or did you stand and look at it? I looked at it.

6187. What did you see? All I could notice was some blood on a rag when it was removed from the breast.

6188. Was the rag on the breast when you were there? No, I think Mrs. Bentley had removed it.

6189. I ask you what you saw on the breast? I thought the breast looked red.

6190. Was there blood on the breast? There might have been some, but I did not see it.

6191. Did you see a scratch? No.

6192. Did you see the rag come off the breast—did you see it taken off the breast? I think, as near as I can remember, I saw Mrs. Bentley remove it for the purpose of my seeing it.

6193. Did you see the rag after it was removed? I think I saw it brought away.

6194. Would you know the difference between blood and red ink? I would not—I might, if I looked.

6195. Did you ever see a stain with red ink on linen? I might—I do not know.

6196. Did you ever see many stains of blood on linen? Not to take notice of.

6197. Have you ever cut your finger? Yes.

6198. Have you ever bound a rag round it? Yes, I have.

6199. Did you ever see the rag after it had come off your finger? Yes.

6200. Did you see the blood on it? Yes.

6201. Was the rag stiff where the blood was? Of course, if the blood had dried it was stiff.

6202. Have you seen a rag, when blood has dried upon it, stiff? Yes.

6203. Was it stiff when the blood was dry? Yes.

6204. Have you seen a piece of rag with a red ink stain upon it? I might have, but I do not recollect.

6205. Would you know whether or not a rag would be stiff when the red ink was dry upon it? I would not know.

6206. In your affidavit you said there was blood on the rag—did you not? No.

6207. If you thought it was red ink, would you say it was blood? I had no such thought.

6208. By Mr. Piddington: Do you mean to say that when the bloody rag was removed, and you saw the breast exposed, that you saw no blood or wound upon it? Perhaps I might; more acute observers might.

6209. I am not asking what others might, but whether you did or did not? No.

6210. You did not see any mark or scratch of any kind? No, I did not.

6211. This is your affidavit, is it not:—"I saw Mrs. Bentley's breast, and the rag which had been put upon it, which was stained with fresh blood"? Yes. Mr. Bentley wrote that for me, and asked me if that was the case; I said, "Yes." Mr. Bentley wrote that himself, and then read it afterwards, and asked me if it was correct.

6212. Did you tell Mr. Bentley anything at all about it? I said I thought it was.

6213. Did you swear it was correct? Yes.
6214. Did you make any alterations in this, when Mr. Johnson read over this deposition to you? There was something I was not quite sure of swearing to, and when Mr. Johnson read it to me there was some alteration about a wound that I saw—no wound upon the breast; that was the alteration I think.
6215. You are perfectly sure about the other parts of the deposition? I said as far as I knew they were.
6216. Do you know why it was Mr. Bentley wrote this for you? The reason, of course, I believed he wrote this for was, to shield Mrs. Bentley from any imputation that might be put upon her.
6217. Can you write yourself? Yes.
6218. Then Mr. Bentley did not ask you to write it in your own hand? No, my name was all he required.
6219. If anything had been untrue —? If I had thought anything had been untrue, I would have mentioned it, especially anything that Mr. Johnson put to myself.
6220. Did not Mr. Johnson put to yourself all that relates to yourself in this deposition? There is nothing in that deposition that I stated I believe to be untrue.
6221. By Mr. Johnson: Did not Mr. Bentley, before he wrote anything as to your statement or your fellow-servant's, tell you that a deposition was about to be made by himself, by his wife, and by you and Mary? Yes; I do not know whether it was before it, but I believe it was.
6222. Did he not tell you that he wished to take down from your own mouths about the various circumstances you were acquainted with? Yes.
6223. Did he not take it from your own dictation? He had it already written, and read it over and corrected what was wrong.
6224. Did he not, before writing, speak to you in the bed-room and ask what you recollected about the circumstance? He might.
6225. Do you not remember the circumstance? I do not; I say he might.
6226. When he had written your statement, did he not call you up to read what he had written and ask you whether it was correct? Yes; I said it was, as near as I could recollect at that time.
6227. When I came to read over the affidavit, either your memory failed you as to some portion of the statement or you thought it was not precisely accurate? Yes, I considered of course if I were required to take an oath I should be more minute about it.
6228. You had a correction made by me, so as to make it as it stood exactly in accordance with your own knowledge and recollection? Yes.
6229. Where no such alteration was made none was required, was not that so? I dare say it was—anything I thought of I mentioned to you.
6230. Did I not read the whole of the deposition in your presence, with perhaps a trifling exception? With a trifling exception, at the beginning and so on, when I was obliged to leave the room.
6231. The main body I read in your presence? Yes.
6232. Did you not pay particular attention to it? I endeavoured to do so.
6233. I read it slowly and deliberately, did not I? Yes.
6234. Were not all the statements in that deposition, as far as they were within your own knowledge, absolutely true? As far as they were in my own knowledge I believe them to be true.
6235. Was anything I read in that deposition untrue, to your belief? Not at the time you read it.
6236. Is there anything in it that you are now, from subsequent knowledge, prepared to point out as untrue? Nothing that I could say was not true.
6237. Did not this document receive your most calm consideration, as I read it, and did you not adopt the whole of it, as far as you knew, as a true statement? I did.
6238. Did I not particularly tell you; if anything struck you in the affidavit as to the statement of yourself or fellow-servant, as to your knowledge—or as to the statement of Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, as to your belief—to tell me? The exact words I could not say.
6239. Did not I in substance tell you that? I think you did.
6240. And the affidavit, as it was sworn by you, was exactly as you wished to state? Yes, as I thought at the time.
6241. You made several alterations in it? Yes; as to the wound, and to alter the time when I went to Mr. Bentley's. I was not sure whether it was the beginning of April or the middle.
6242. For instance, to speak of a trifling thing you have sworn, as follows:—"I entered into the service of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, at their house in Elizabeth-street, Sydney, at the beginning of April, 1861, as nurse"—was not that the paragraph as I read it to you—did it not state that you entered their service the beginning of April, and were you not so particular that you would have the words "the beginning of" altered to "on or about the month"? Yes.
6243. Did it not occur in one or two other instances that it was altered to meet the exact state of your recollection? It occurred in one other instance; I am not sure of any more.
6244. By the Chairman: Do you remember being knocked up, in the month of May, very early in the morning? Knocked up?
6245. On the occasion of holes being made in the ceiling? No, I was not knocked up.
6246. Were you awakened that night? Not at all.
6247. You were not disturbed in your sleep? Not that I remember.
6248. Do you remember what occurred the next day at all? Yes.
6249. Can you give the Committee your remembrance of what occurred the next day? I think that was Saturday night. I think the next day was Easter Sunday; and I remember going into Mr. Bentley's bed-room.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.

6250. Were you called in? I do not think I was; I went in—I think I went in.

6251. What happened? I think Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, or both of them, told me about the holes that were made in the ceiling in their bed-room, or the hole—I think it was but one, I am not sure—I do not know exactly what they said about the matter, only I think they told me the substance of it. I am not sure about Mr. Harrison's coming. I think they told me what occurred; and then when I went into my own room, the two children, or one, the little girl, pointed out the hole in the ceiling in my room.

6252. Did the little girl point it out, or did you see it yourself? The little girl pointed it out, I believe.

6253. You say—"On entering the nursery, I observed a hole in the ceiling of that room, and called Mrs. Bentley in to look at it, who came accordingly"? The little girl pointed it out to me, as near as I can remember, first before I observed it myself.

6254. Do you remember the next day when the native tracker called? I did not see him.

6255. Did you ever see an aboriginal native about the house? No, never.

6256. Were you ever up in this loft? Yes, the other girl and I went up once.

6257. On what occasion? We went up after the holes.

6258. On what occasion? We went up after the holes were made, to look at them, to see if we could see the light through.

6259. Did you see bricks lying about there? I took no notice of anything lying about.

6260. Did you see any bricks? I am not sure.

6261. Had you heard anything about them? Lately?

6262. Had you at that time heard anything about bricks being displaced? No.

6263. By Mr. Morris: From whom have you heard lately about the bricks? I do not remember now.

6264. From Camphin? No.

6265. From Mr. Harrison? No; I think it was Mrs. Bentley told me.

6266. Have you not heard from Mr. Harrison? No, I never heard from him.

6267. By the Chairman: Did you not hear from Camphin? I do not remember; it was Mrs. Bentley, I think, told me about what you said about the bricks.

6268. What did she say I said about the bricks? I think, as near as I can remember, that you understood what the bricks ought to be. I am not sure those are the words—I do not recollect exactly—I understood you had examined the bricks, and the place they came from.

6269. You do not think you saw them when you were up on that occasion? I may have seen a brick or half a brick—I could not say for certain.

6270. You would not know if the same bricks are there now that were there then? No, I took no notice.

6271. What did you take notice of when you were there? I did not take notice of anything; only I went over to see if I could see down into my room from the loft.

6272. Could you? No, I could not; I was looking for the hole and I could not find it. I remarked to the other girl, if anyone was ever in the loft they could see into the room; I thought they might, and we went up to see if they could see into our room through the hole; it seemed so visible underneath in the ceiling, from the bottom, and I thought we might see it from the top by putting the eye to it, but I could not find out the hole at all.

6273. Have you ever seen the hole from the top? Not from the top.

6274. You were never up previously? I do not remember ever having been up.

6275. Does the other servant sleep with you? No.

6276. Do you know any reason why she slept with you lately? Yes, I know the reason why she slept once lately.

6277. What was the reason? I was ill; I did not ask her to, but she said she would do so.

6278. Were you taken suddenly ill? No, not suddenly; I had felt ill all the evening, and I felt worse as it came later in the night.

6279. You were out that evening, were you not? Not that evening—I was on Wednesday; Mary was out that evening.

6280. Who were you with on Wednesday evening when you were out? I was not out on Wednesday evening.

6281. On what evening were you out? On Tuesday evening.

6282. You have already stated, I think, that you told Mary Ryan all you knew about this matter of the Bentleys, and all you had said, and that she told you all you knew and all you had said? Yes, I think so.

6283. And that you strengthened one another's recollection with regard to what had occurred? I do not know; perhaps it might have been curiosity—perhaps it might have been—

6284. Do you know what it was—what was the something it might have been? I am sure I do not remember.

6285. By Mr. Piddington: When you say it might have been curiosity, do you allude to the motives that led to the conversation between you and your fellow-servant? I do not know; I am sure I do not understand.

6286. By the Chairman: Did you not know that your fellow-servant was to appear before the Committee again? Do you mean now?

6287. No, before you slept together? I believe I did, if she knew it; I know however she knew it, for I knew she has told me.

6288. Did you recall what had been said, in order that she might know what to say? No.

6289. Did you tell her anything with regard to the priest? When?

6290. On that occasion? How?

6291. In any way, or any how? She told me what was said here.
6292. I ask you if you said anything about it? I do not remember; I said everything I could remember at the time, and she to me.
6293. I want you to answer my question, if you said anything to her about the priest? I dare say I did, but I do not remember what it was—not about the priest, because I knew there was no priest at all whatever.
6294. Did you say it was not a priest? I do not know what I said—I said all I thought at the time, but I did not take a deposition of it.
6295. By Mr. Morris: During the time the detectives were in the house, Mrs. Bentley, according to her account to you, was in the habit of seeing the priest on the way to Newtown? Yes.
6296. Were you not aware that Mrs. Bentley was always accompanied by a detective? Yes, I believe so.
6297. How was it that you, who are a curious person, as I can easily perceive, and much interested in the question, never asked one of the detectives whether a priest accompanied her or not? I did on one occasion ask Mr. Sanderson did he see anyone accompanying Mrs. Bentley, and he did not answer me.
6298. How is it if you heard so often about this priest, and were so deeply interested in priests, as you admit yourself to be, that you did not ask one of these detectives, particularly Camphin, who is a Roman Catholic, about this priest who was said to be so often attending Mrs. Bentley—that is a plainer way of putting it? The plainest way is the best way; it never occurred to me.
6299. By Mr. Hart: Till after the concert? Not when he was there. You wish to ask the question plain, and I wish to answer it as plain—will you ask it again?
6300. By Mr. Morris: I will ask you how it was that it never occurred to you to ask the detective about this priest that Mrs. Bentley told you was so often in her company when she went to Newtown? It did occur to me when Mr. Sanderson was there—Sanderson I think his name was; but I did not think at the time it was anything but a priest.
6301. Did you ask Sanderson whether he ever saw a priest? I did not say a priest, but I asked if he saw Mrs. Bentley in company with anyone else. He said, “I suppose it is a friend.” He did not say whether it was so, or whether it was not.
6302. That was all the inquiry you made at that time? Yes.
6303. You made no other inquiries till you saw the letter about the Exeter business, in which the priests appeared to be implicated? I think that was all.
6304. By the Chairman: Did you ever express a partiality for the company of one detective officer over that of another? Yes, I did.
6305. Who was it? It was for either of the two, Mr. Camphin or Mr. Sanderson.
6306. Did you or did you not express a partiality for Camphin? No, I did not; of the two I preferred the other.
6307. By Mr. Hart: Do you mean that you preferred him to be in the house, or that you preferred him as a companion? I did not prefer anyone as a companion.
6308. Did you mean as a companion in the house? I would rather have him, or Mr. Sanderson than the other man, Clark.
6309. Why? Because his manner was rough—I did not like it.
6310. By the Chairman: Had you not many conversations with Camphin when he was in the house? No.
6311. Not about books? I do not remember having had a conversation about books; if you tell me the books you allude to I will tell you.
6312. Did Mr. Camphin recommend a particular book for your study? He did not.
6313. Did you for his? There was a book—it was not one of mine, it was one I had from the library—which was in the kitchen when he came down once, and Mary gave it to him.
6314. By Mr. Morris: What was the name of it? Catholic Biography. I dare say I could get the book from the convent.
6315. By the Chairman: Were you educated at a convent? Not entirely.
6316. Were you at all, and in what country? In Liverpool.
6317. By Mr. Hart: Was it in a convent, or in a school attached to a convent? In a school attached to it—not in a convent.
6318. By the Chairman: In your conversations with Camphin on the last occasion, did you mention to him particularly what you had stated to this Committee about the priest? No, I do not recollect having said anything to him, because the time was very short. It was as I came from the post at the corner, after I left St. Mary's, on Tuesday night; it was twenty minutes to 10 at the time, because I asked him the time.
6319. It was twenty minutes to 10 when you left St. Mary's? When I went to him; he walked from there to Elizabeth-street.
6320. At what time did you get to Mr. Bentley's that night? I went then round to my aunt's.
6321. Were you ill at the time you were with Mr. Camphin? No, not particularly ill.
6322. When were you taken ill? I was not exactly well for a week or more.
6323. Were you more particularly ill that night than at any other time? Not so ill as the night after—Wednesday night; that was the night the bed was brought into my room.
6324. By Mr. Johnson: What day of the week was it that you had that long walk with Camphin—that you walked on the Racecourse, and then walked to Woolloomooloo? I think Friday night.
6325. Were you not out later than usual that night? When I left —
6326. By the Chairman: When you came home was it not later than usual? It was—but not with him. I was at St. Mary's, and then in his company; I said I was going to my aunt's, aunt's, and he accompanied me round, I think, to the Victoria Club, and I asked him the time, and he said then it was ten minutes to 10; then I went in to my aunt's, and my aunt and another person came home with me.

6327. By Mr. Johnson: Was that the night you went to Woolloomooloo? I think not; I am not sure.

6328. Was not that the Friday night? Yes, I think it was that night. I do not know whether my aunt came with me that night, at least I am not sure whether anyone was in company with me or came round with me that night.

6329. Did you not represent that you were ill that night, and that that was the reason of your being out so late? Yes, because when I was at my aunt's I was not well, and I remained out later; I supposed they would not be very particular, as I was ill.

6330. You did represent that, as being the reason of being so late, to your mistress? She did not ask me about it; that was the reason I remained a little longer.

6331. Did you not so represent to your mistress? Mrs. Bentley never made the remark.

6332. Did you not make that remark to her? I do not think so; Mrs. Bentley has spoken to me very little lately at all.

6333. Did you tell her you had been out with Mr. Camphin walking to Woolloomooloo? No.

6334. Did you ever let her know you were in the habit of meeting Camphin five or six times? I told Mrs. Bentley something I wished to enter into conversation with her, and she rose and left the room.

6335. Did you ever tell her you were in communication with Camphin? She never gave me an opportunity.

6336. Did you ever tell her you were in communication with Camphin? Never.

6337. Did you ever listen to and overhear what Mrs. Bentley said to me? Yes, I was going up-stairs on one occasion—not what Mrs. Bentley said to anyone—but I was going up with something on a tray, and I heard Mr. and Mrs. Bentley speaking to each other—all I heard was something in the Empire, about the Exeter matter—something that was said.

6338. Do you remember what you heard them say, when they did not know you were listening? I do not remember.

6339. Did you ever listen, for the purpose of overhearing what Mrs. Bentley said to anybody or what anybody ever said to her? I dare say I did.

6340. Have you any doubt that you did? I heard Mr. Bentley whispering, and I was anxious to hear what it was about.

6341. Could you tell us any of this whispering? I could not hear what he said.

6342. How many times have you listened, do you suppose? I have not listened often, because I thought it did not signify to me what they said.

6343. You were curious to hear what they said when you thought they did not hear it? Not very curious; I did not feel much curiosity, for it did not signify to me.

6344. By Mr. Piddington: How often did your curiosity lead you to listen? I dare say perhaps three or four times.

6345. You are positive you have not listened six times? I would not be certain as to the number, for I never made any note of it.

6346. By Mr. Morris: Did you ever hear anything when you were listening, that helped to clear up any doubts in your mind with regard to Mr. or Mrs. Bentley, or to confirm any suspicions of yours? I do not recollect; I might, but I do not recollect what they were.

6347. By Mr. Johnson: Do you mean to say you might have overheard statements between Mr. and Mrs. Bentley that they were not aware that you heard, and which might have confirmed your suspicions against them? No, they did not confirm my suspicions.

6348. By Mr. Morris: Did what you heard have an opposite effect, and make you rather doubt your suspicions? I always told the other servant what I thought; I might have said the matter was more curious than ever, or that it was more mysterious than ever. It was something about the Empire newspaper I heard. As I was going up-stairs I heard Mr. Bentley, one night, reading the Empire—the newspaper—I knew it was the newspaper, from the words he said. I was not many moments, but I heard Mr. Bentley say about Mr. Cowper's statement in the House, that it rested entirely upon Mrs. Bentley, I think, and not upon Mr. Bentley—the fact of his not knowing it before he was engaged to her.

6349. By Mr. Johnson: You admit to listening upon several occasions—did you adopt that course upon one occasion when I was talking to Mr. Bentley? No.

6350. Are you sure of that? Yes.

6351. How did you hear me state that Mrs. Lindsay now stated that it was 4 or 5 in the morning? I did not say so.

6352. Did you not state in evidence that you did? No.

6353. Did Camphin tell you so? No, Mary told me that; I did not hear it from you.

6354. How did Mary hear that—did she overhear it? I do not know how she heard it.

6355. What did Mary tell you about it? Mrs. Bentley told Mary something once which she would not tell me; she told me it was something she was not to tell, but lately she has told me what it was:—It was the fact of Mrs. Lindsay saying that she saw some one come out of the house at 2 in the morning; and as near as I can remember, afterwards I heard from her that Mrs. Lindsay had contradicted the statement about 2 in the morning, and said it was somewhere about 4 or 5; I know 5 was mentioned in it.

6356. Did you tell Camphin that? Yes.

6357. You say you do not know how Mary became acquainted with that? I do not.

6358. Did not she tell you? She might at the time, but I thought it nothing important to take notice of.

6359. By Mr. Morris: Did not Mary tell you that she sometimes listened, and overheard certain certain things? Not certain things. She told me to listen; I said I would do so, and I dare say she did. I said it was of little importance, as the truth was sure to come out; it was only to clear them in our minds.

Anna Maria
Bradshaw.

9 Dec., 1862.

6360. By Mr. Johnson: She suggested to you to listen? On several occasions.

6361. And you listened accordingly—is that so? Yes, I think that is true.

6362. You have no doubt she listened herself? Yes, she did.

6363. Did she tell you so? Yes, she did.

6364. What did she tell you she heard on these occasions when she listened? I do not remember.

6365. Was it anything of importance? Really when we came to speak of it afterwards, thinking it very strange that Mr. Bentley should whisper, we could not make anything out of it. We said we could not understand how it could be; it was very strange Mrs. Bentley should keep so close.

6366. Was it not very recently you referred to Mrs. and Mr. Bentley whispering? The first time I was not listening; Mrs. Bentley's door was open, and my door —

6367. I want to know when was this? The day before the Members sat in the House.

6368. You mean before this Committee sat? Not this Committee, but the public one, that was in the papers.

6369. You mean when the motion was made in the House for this Committee? Yes, that was the one.

6370. Did you ever hear I had made a statement, about what the expenses would be, to Mr. Bentley? Mrs. Bentley told me herself.

6371. You are sure you did not overhear Mr. Bentley saying something about that. No, Mrs. Bentley told me.

6372. Was this before or after you swore this deposition? It was after the letter was put in about the deposition at Exeter; I think it was, as near as I can remember.

6373. Was it before that? I think it must have been before. I have never spoken to Mrs. Bentley on the matter. Once I told her I was very angry with her, for having told an untruth about the Exeter matter; she said she knew she had done wrong. I said if she would state who the person was at Exeter, it might be the same person here.

6374. You have had a different feeling in the matter since the letter about the Exeter affair appeared? Because —

6375. You have—that is enough? Yes.

6376. You said about seeing Mrs. Bentley's breast, that it looked red, what did you mean by that? It looked inflamed.

6377. I suppose you could not very well judge, without examining it by touch, whether any injury had taken place to a particular part of her bosom? I could if I had looked closely at it.

6378. Did you look closely at it? No, I did not.

6379. But it looked inflamed, as though it had been wounded? Yes, it looked red.

6380. Have you any doubt that what was upon the rag that came from her breast was blood? No.

6381. You have been examined before, as to what you say Mrs. Bentley told you about the priest first meeting her? Yes, part of it, of course; a great deal of it has not yet been made known.

6382. Why did you not tell the whole of it? Because I did not remember.

6383. Did you tell all you remembered? No.

6384. Why did you not tell all you remembered? I might have told all I remembered that day.

6385. Did you tell all you remembered that day? I felt I could not remember anything more on that day, but I knew there were other conversations with Mrs. Bentley I could not then bring to my mind.

6386. Did you say that she told you other things about the priest, that you could not then bring to your mind? I believe I told the gentlemen so.

6387. That was true, was it? Yes.

6388. By Mr. Morris: When was the last time you saw Mr. Boulanger—how long ago? I met him one day; at least I did not meet him, but he stopped me in George-street, when Mrs. Bentley was out at Newtown, on Friday; I had been buying boots for the little girl. He asked me how Mrs. Bentley was, and I told him.

6389. Have you not seen him lately? No.

6390. By Mr. Cowper: You did not see him on the Sunday night? No, the other girl.

6391. By Mr. Johnson: Did you not object to Clark being in the house, because he attempted to kiss you? Yes, for that and other reasons. I know his manner was rough.

6392. Which detective did remain in the house on the night of the concert—the last concert? A stranger; I never saw him before or since.

6393. Have you had a conversation with your mistress, since you were here last, about leaving her? Yes; not a conversation, but I told her.

6394. Did you not say this to your mistress—"I hear that Mary is going to leave, and I think it better to go also, but the Committee have not finished with me"? Yes.

6395. Did not Mrs. Bentley say to this—"You had better wait until they have finished—Mr. Bentley —"? No, if —

6396. Wait till I have read the whole—"Mr. Bentley has made me promise not to speak to you on the subject, as I cannot speak to you calmly"—Did she say that? She said Mr. Bentley had made her promise not to speak to me, as I would have to repeat it.

6397. Do you say she did not use the words or the substance of the words I have repeated? I think so.

6398. Are you sure? I feel quite certain in my own mind that was not it; I would not swear.

6399.

Anna Maria Bradshaw. 6399. Did you make a reply to the following effect—"I did not wish to speak, but whatever I have done I have done for a good end, and it is one comfort for you to feel that those who suffer most in this world will have the best reward in the next"? Yes, I said that was a comfort for all.

9 Dec., 1862.

6400. Did you, after returning from the first day's examination here, have a conversation with the little child, Edith—did she ask you if you had been enjoying yourself, or something to that effect? Yes, I think she did.

6401. Did you say something to this effect—"No, I have not, but if I had to have my head cut off I would; I may end it yet in Darlington Gaol"? No, I did not say that; but I said something to Mrs. Bentley, I do not remember what it was. I said, "I suppose the gallows will be the next," but at any rate I was willing to meet it—something like that.

6402. By Mr. Piddington: I think you said you had a conversation with Mrs. Bentley, with regard to the Exeter case? Yes.

6403. Did you state, in the course of that conversation, that you were very angry with Mrs. Bentley? Yes.

6404. Mention on what grounds you stated to Mrs. Bentley that you were angry with her? Because she concealed the matter at Home, knowing —

6405. What do you mean by concealing it? Because she told me who the person was.

6406. Who what person was—just explain yourself—what person do you allude to? I said to Mrs. Bentley at the time, why not tell who the person is who had done it at Exeter; the same person may be here at present doing it now—"Why do you not state it; it is very wrong for you not to do so, it brings in a great many that are innocent—in that case it might bring in only one?" She said she knew she had acted wrong.

6407. In what way? In not giving right information at the time she was asked for it—however, she did not know the name.

6408. I think you say you were angry with Mrs. Bentley. I want to know distinctly what caused that anger—what did Mrs. Bentley do or want to do that occasioned you to feel angry with her? She said before, that she knew the person who wrote the letters to her.

6409. What letters? At Exeter, but that she concealed it because she liked him.

6410. Concealed the name of the writer? Yes, because she liked him.

6411. Was that the cause of your being angry with her? Yes, that was the cause of my being angry with her, for I said she should now state that she might be excusable—that she should now state who it was, and not mind what the consequence was to him, and that very likely, I said; it did not matter what the consequence was to him—I said did I know who it was, were it my own brother, I should tell.

6412. Did Mrs. Bentley lead you to suppose, at the time this conversation took place, that she knew the writer of the letters that had been sent to her in Sydney? No, she did not—I said to her, when I was speaking to her, that there was a difference certainly in it, but that the one appeared to have a religious motive for it, but the other appeared to have a professional motive—professional jealousy—I felt convinced that even the first was not a religious motive, from the words expressed—the manner of expressing it; she said "Just so," it looked like it.

6413. In what way can you connect any proceedings that took place in Exeter with any proceedings that took place in Sydney, seeing that there is a long distance between the two places, and a long space of time between the two occurrences? I said to Mrs. Bentley what I thought of it—of course I said it to her —

6414. How do you connect the two matters in your own mind—have you any clue? Yes, I said I thought at the time the person who wrote the letters at Home, or at least the person who wrote the letters here, was the person who had liked Mrs. Bentley before. She said, yes, it looked very like it; but if so, it was unknown to her.

6415. Is that the only foundation you have for connecting in your own mind the two occurrences, or have you any other clue besides that supposition? I feel puzzled for the minute.

6416. What I want to know, as far as you can answer the question, is whether you have anything further to say with reference to the supposition that arose in your own mind, with respect to the connection of these two occurrences together—whether you can point to any person or to any clue whatever? Mrs. Bentley said, some time ago, that she knew it would never be found out.

6417. What would never be found out—the Exeter case or this? This matter.

6418. Did you say anything upon that? I do not know; I do not remember what I said. She said she felt convinced, but would not like to say it to Mr. Bentley, because it would worry him.

6419. Felt convinced of what? Of its not being found out; but she said she would not say so to Mr. Bentley, because it would worry him too much.

6420. By the Chairman: What was the name of the person? She said at first she understood the name to be Ryan, afterwards she said it was Horean.

6421. Did Mrs. Bentley tell you this before the Exeter letter was written or published? Yes, she did; she did not say the name was Horean, she said she thought it was Ryan.

6422. Prior to your making this deposition, had Mrs. Bentley told you about this man Ryan or Horean, or whatever his name was? She did not give his name.

6423. Had she told you about this before? Yes; but it was in so confused a manner—at one conversation it would be like that, but the next would be different from it. She never gave his name till after that deposition was made, until the time that she told me that there was to be a Committee upon it, and that Mr. Johnson was to take up the matter on his own account.

6424. She told you this? Yes, Mrs. Bentley told me that.

6425. Previous to that, you had never heard this name mentioned by Mrs. Bentley? Not the name.
