In the returns from which the foregoing tables were prepared, all manufactories where power is used have been included irrespective of the number of hands employed. Of the works which do not use power, only such have been enumerated as are in a fairly large way of business; merely retail establishments have, therefore, been omitted. Clothing factories employing less than 10 hands, and boot factories of less than 6 hands, have not been taken into account. Some works where less than 6 hands are usually engaged, and where power is not used, have, however, been included; these are for the most part establishments of a special character, regarding which it is desirable to have statistics for future reference.

* This includes the amount of the postage contributions of the United Kingdom and the Australian Colonies to the cost of Ocean Mail Subsidy.
 † Of this amount the sum of £13,995 18s. 1d. was received on account of postage due to the Colony by the United Kingdom for the years 1875 and 1876.
 ‡ This number embraces all letters posted in the Colony for delivery within the Colony, and includes those letters hitherto classified as Town Letters.
 § The total collections for this year amounted to £24,000 more; this sum was transferred to Stamp Duties as approximate value for Postage Stamps used for Duty Stamps purposes during the year.
 ¶ This does not include outstanding liabilities, but is the total amount expended during the year, irrespective of date of claims.
 †† During the year 1885 the practice of weighing instead of counting the correspondence posted was introduced, as the limited time at the disposal of the sorting staff prevented the counting from being very carefully done, and it was thought that by weighing and allowing a certain number of letters, &c., to the lb., greater accuracy would be insured. The returns for 1885 and subsequent years may therefore be considered more reliable than those for previous years.

They are held annually, in November, and are intended to test the qualifications of boys and girls attending schools or being instructed privately. They are divided into Senior and Junior, and certificates of competency in the several subjects of examination are given to the successful candidates. These examinations are distinct from the examination for the Civil Service.

* NOTE.—The returns from which Tables 22 and 23 are compiled were obtained from clergymen and other church authorities. The figures for 1887 denote the average number of persons attending Divine Service on Sundays, those for 1886 denote the number usually attending principal service; for some denominations these figures are identical, but for most churches the former number considerably exceeded the attendance at the principal service, and for this reason the figures for 1886 cannot be used for purposes of comparison with those of the other years given in the Table 23.
