INTRODUCTION

This paper provides an analysis of the results of the 2011 New South Wales election. It provides summaries of the elections for both chambers, analysis of Legislative Assembly results both before and after the distribution of preferences, as well as a summary of the Legislative Council election.

Format for Legislative Assembly Results

For each Legislative Assembly electorate, full details of primary and two-candidate preferred votes and percentages are provided. The format and calculations used in the electorate results are as follows.

First Count: The votes shown for each candidate are the total primary votes received. Percentage votes are calculated as a percentage of the formal vote for each electorate. Swing is calculated by subtracting the percentage vote received by a party at the previous election from the percentage received at the current election. Where the parties contesting the district differ from the previous election, 'ghost' candidates (indicated by "...") have been included representing candidates not contesting the current election. As a result, all primary swings add to zero, subject to rounding errors.

Final Count: Represents the two-candidate preferred count after the distribution of preferences in an electorate. All votes that did not indicate a preference between the two final candidates are included in the total of votes shown as 'Exhausted'. Two-candidate preferred percentages are calculated by dividing the two-candidate preferred vote for each candidate by the total of votes remaining in the count, that is the formal vote minus the exhausted vote. Two-candidate preferred swings are shown compared to the final two candidates from the previous election. Where the party composition of the final two candidates differs from the previous election (e.g. Newcastle), ghost candidates appear and more than two swing figures are shown.

Two-Party Preferred: Represents a separate distribution of preferences conducted in the 26 districts that did not finish as a two-party contest between the Labor Party and the Liberal-National Party Coalition.

Two-Candidate versus Two-Party Preferred results

Two-candidate Preferred Count: To win an electorate, a candidate must receive more than 50% of the vote remaining after the distribution of preferences. The distribution is performed by successively excluding candidates with the lowest primary vote and distributing each candidate's ballot papers according to the next preferences for a candidates remaining in the count. At the end of the count, the vote for the two final candidates is referred to as the 'two-candidate preferred vote'.

Two-Party Preferred Count: Most Australian elections finish as a contest between candidates representing the Labor Party and the Liberal-National Party Coalition. The final distribution of preferences between Labor and Coalition candidates is referred to as the 'two-party preferred count'.

At the 2011 election, there were 66 electorates where the final contest was a two-party preferred count between Labor and Coalition candidates. There were 27 electorates that did not finish as two-party contests. Thirteen finished as Coalition-Green contests, 12 as Coalition-Independent contests, one as a Labor-Green contest and one as a Labor-Independent contest. In all 27 electorates the Electoral Commission undertook counts to provide both a two-candidate and a two-party preferred count.

Changes in Counting Procedures

Since 1988 the NSW Electoral Commission has undertaken full a distribution of preferences in every electorate. This count has been undertaken for information purposes even if not been required to determine the winning candidate. Since 1999 the Commission has also undertaken alternative two-party preferred counts where required. Since 1995 the Commission has also undertaken indicative preference counts by polling place on election night to clarify results as soon as possible.

At the 2011 election the Commission changed its procedures to rationalise the number of preference counts. At the request of political parties, the Commission conducted verification counts on election night indicative preference counts, and also completed indicative preference counts on all declaration votes. As a result, the Commission has been able to produce accurate two-candidate preferred statistics by polling place.

As a consequence, the Commission has chosen to only conduct formal distributions of preferences to the point required to determine the winning candidate. Undertaking preference distributions for information purposes is no longer necessary as the data is available by accumulating the accurate polling place results.

Minor discrepancies from the total of polling place preference results can arise in electorates where a formal distribution of preferences is undertaken. In all cases this publication uses the full distribution of preferences undertaken for the formal declaration of the poll instead of the total of polling place indicative preference counts.

Australian Labor Party and Country Labor

Labor candidates nominated as Country Labor are indicated by the party code CLR. While separate totals for Labor and Country Labor are shown in the state totals, the two parties have been treated as the same party in comparing results in individual electorates.

By-elections.

Five by-elections were conducted between 2007 and 2011. Two electorates changed party, the Liberal Party gaining the electorates of Penrith and Ryde from Labor. The results of by-elections can be found on page 42. Most tables in this publication compare seats won at the 2011 election with the 2007 election. Footnotes have been used to draw attention to the electorates that changed party at by-elections.

An updated summary table of by-elections and average swings since 1965 has also been provided on page 58.

Unregistered parties

Tables in this publication include reference to candidates of four parties contesting the 2011 election without being officially registered with the NSW Electoral Commission. These parties were Australia First, the Communist League, Democratic Labor Party and the Socialist Equality Party. All appeared on the ballot paper as either Independents or with no party affiliation. Two Independent groups in the Legislative Council, identified in this publication by their lead candidates, appeared with no affiliation on the Legislative Council ballot paper.

Disclaimer

All results are based on details made available by the NSW State Electoral Office. However, responsibility for all calculations, errors and omissions is taken by the author. Note that due to rounding errors, some tables do not add to exactly 100%.

Acknowledgements

I would like to express my thanks to the staff of the NSW Electoral Commission for their assistance in providing election results in electronic format and for other assistance concerning preference counts and Legislative Council results.

STATISTICAL HIGHLIGHTS

- The Labor Party polled 25.6% of the first preference vote, the party's lowest vote since 23.3% in 1904, the election where Labor emerged from third party status to become the official opposition. Labor won 20 seats, its worst return since winning 19 of the then 125 Legislative Assembly seats in 1898.
- The Liberal Party recorded 38.6% of the first preference vote, second only to 39.6% recorded in 1965. The Liberal Party won 51 of the 93 Legislative Assembly seats, better than the party's previous best result, 39 of the 109 seats in 1988.
- The National Party polled 12.6% and won 18 seats, figures bettered only in the post-war period by 13.7% and 20 seats at the 1988 election in a larger 109 seat Legislative Assembly.
- The Greens polled 10.3% and the party won its first seat in the Legislative Assembly. The Green first preference vote was higher than Labor's in Balmain, the first time the party has ever out-polled Labor in a Labor-held single-member electorate at a state or commonwealth election.
- After the distribution of preferences, the state-wide two-party preferred percentages were Coalition 64.2%, Labor 35.8%, a swing of 16.5% since the 2007 election. Both the Coalition's two-party preferred vote and the swing appear to be post-war records for any Australian election, commonwealth or state. (See two-party preferred summaries, page 31.)
- The Coalition won 69 seats, equal to the record number of seats won by Labor in 1981. As the size of the Assembly has since been reduced from 99 to 93 seats, the Coalition's 74.2% of seats in 2011 was greater than Labor's 69.7% in 1981.
- The Coalition majority of 45 seats is a record for the Legislative Assembly, larger than the 42 seat majority of the Stevens Coalition government in 1932.
- The Coalition's first preference vote was the highest since the Coalition polled 51.8% under Bertram Stevens in winning the 1932 election.
- The Labor Party won no seats classified as Country. The Liberal Party won 40 of the 57 seats in greater Sydney. (See regional summaries, page 38.)
- More than a third of electorates changed party status at the 2011 election, 33 electorates changing party, 35 if the Liberal victories in the Penrith and Ryde by-elections are included. Labor had won 52 seats at the 2007 election, went into the 2011 election with 50 seats and lost 30. The loss of seats was second only to Labor's reduction from 55 to 24 seats at the election following the dismissal of the Lang government in 1932.
- Almost half of the MLAs elected in 2011 were new members. There were 46 new members, including John Robertson (Blacktown) and Robyn Parker (Maitland) who transferred at the election from the Legislative Council. This is a post-Federation record number of new members, the previous highest being 42 in 1901, in a larger Assembly of 125 seats when 18 vacancies were caused by state MPs transferring to the new commonwealth parliament. The three other largest figures for new members were 33 in 1932, 32 on the adoption of proportional representation in 1920, and 38 when the Assembly was increased in size by ten seats at the 1988 election.
- 21 members were defeated. The largest number of defeated members on record was 39 in 1904 when the Assembly was reduced in size from 125 to 90 seats. Other large numbers of defeated MPs took place at changes of government, 30 in 1932, 23 in 1941 and 20 in 1988.
- 25 Legislative Assembly members retired, 18 Labor, five Liberal and two National. The previous largest number retiring was 25 in 1901, an election that followed the election of 18 MLAs to the new Commonwealth Parliament. Between 1904 and 1995 the maximum number of MPs retiring at an election was 14. At the four fixed term member parliaments since 1995, the number of members retiring has been 21 in 1999, 19 in 2003, 17 in 2007 and 25 in 2011.

- Of Labor's 50 sitting MLAs, only 14 were returned, 18 were defeated and 18 retired. Six retiring members were replaced by new Labor members, another 12 retiring from seats Labor lost at the election.
- More than half of the Coalition members were new to the Legislative Assembly. Of the 69 members, 28 were re-elected, 2 were re-elected after by-election victories, while 39 were new members. Seven succeeded retiring Coalition members, 12 won seats with a retiring Labor MLA, 20 defeated a sitting MLA, 17 defeating a Labor member, three defeating sitting Independents.
- 51 electorates were decided on first preferences, 32 being won by the Liberal Party, 17 National with one Labor seat (Liverpool) and one Independent seat (Northern Tablelands).
- 42 electorates were decided on preferences. In 13 the winning candidate had a majority of the formal vote after preferences, while ballot papers with exhausted preferences resulted in 29 members being elected with a minority of the formal vote. The Liberal Party won 19 seats on preferences (13 minority winners), with the respective numbers for other parties being Labor 19 (13), National one (one) and Independents three (two).
- Balmain was the only electorate where the leading candidate on first preference votes was defeated. Green candidate Jamie Parker finished 205 votes ahead of Labor MP Verity Firth during the distribution of preferences, Parker than easily passing the Liberal candidate on Labor preferences.
- There would need to be a uniform swing of 12.9% at the next election for the Labor Party to win the 23 seats needed to deprive the Coalition of its majority. Assuming the Independent and Green members retain their seats, the swing required for 27 seats and a Labor majority is 18.6%, though a minority Labor government could be formed on a smaller swing.
- A redistribution of electoral boundaries is required before the 2015 election. This is likely to change the margin in most seats.
- In the Legislative Council, the Coalition won 11 of the 21 vacancies, the first time a single group has won a majority of the seats facing election since 1981. (See Legislative Council summary page 44.)
- 97.76% of all Legislative Council ballot papers counted according to an 'above the line' vote, only 2.24% 'below the line'. Only 15.59% of formal ballot papers used the 'above the line' preference option introduced at the 2003 election.
- As in 2003 and 2007, more than 80% of ballot papers exhausted their preferences during the distribution of Legislative Council preferences. The final four vacancies were filled by candidates with less than a quota of votes.
- By far the highest rate of 'below the line' voting occurred for the two Independent groups, with 20.40% of Pauline Hanson's vote being counted from below the line votes for her, and a similar 14.60% for John Hatton. Of all first preference votes 'below the line', Hanson received 21.9%.

Three electorates have had their categorisation modified from the 2007 election. Based on by-election results, both Penrith and Ryde are categorised as Very Safe Liberal while Port Macquarie becomes Marginal Independent.

Both Penrith and Ryde would have been classified as Safe Labor based on 2007 results. Using this alternate classification, the table below re-calculates the Safe Labor, Safe Liberal and Total Labor and Liberal entries from the previous table

Comment: Counts 12-18 distributed the preferences of the leading candidates on the Coalition, Labor and Green tickets, electing 10 Coalition, five Labor and two Green MLCs. Four vacancies remained to be filled, the count continuing by the successive exclusion of the lowest polling candidates in the count and the distribution of each candidate's preferences.

By the end of Count 296 only 16 candidates remained in the count, one from each group on the ballot paper. These candidates were the 11th Coalition candidate, 6th Labor candidate, 3rd Green candidate and the lead candidate for the other 13 groups on the ballot paper. The total votes for each candidate at the end of Count 296 includes a total of above the line ballot papers for each group.

In the above table, the column headed 'Change to Count 296' shows the change in vote tally for the remaining candidate in each group compared to the initial tally of first preference votes for each group, taking account of the quotas set aside for elected candidates. This column represents the leakage of below the line votes from the total first preference votes for each group.

The table lists parties in descending order of votes at the end of Count 296. The table shows the total of votes for each candidate as well as the fraction of a quota those votes represent.

Counts 297 to 307 excluded 11 candidates beginning with Ray Brown of Building Australia and finishing with Gordon Moyes of Family First. How the preferences on ballot papers distributed in these counts flowed is shown in the column headed 'Counts 297-307'. A total of 373,743 ballot papers were distributed in this period, 82.66% of ballot papers exhausting preferences before reaching one of the five candidates remaining in the count at the end of Count 307.

Of the ballot papers distributed between Counts 297 and 307, 6.20% flowed to the final Green candidate Jeremy Buckingham, 4.06% to the remaining Coalition candidate Sarah Johnston, while Independent Pauline Hanson attracted only 1.11% of preferences.

Hanson was in 20th place until the final distribution at Count 307 when she was passed by Buckingham and Johnston. At the end of Count 306 Hanson had led Buckingham by 190 votes and Johnston by 1283 votes. The exclusion of final Family First candidate Gordon Moyes saw 64,738 votes distributed. Of these 52,101 (80.48%) exhausted, 3158 (4.88%) flowed to Johnston, 3196 (4.94%) flowed to Buckingham but only 569 (0.88%) to Hanson.

This was just enough preference to change the order of the three remaining candidates. After leading throughout the count, Count 307 left Hanson 2437 votes behind Buckingham and 1306 behind Johnston. Hanson was now in 22nd place and excluded at Count 308. With only four candidates remaining and four vacancies to fill, the remaining candidates were declared elected without Hanson's preferences being distributed.

The current Legislative Council group voting option has now been used for three elections. At all three elections it has seen a massive exhaustion of preferences during the final stages of the count, 82.66% in 2011, 83.44% in 2007 and 84.76% in 2003.

In 2003 and 2007 the high rate of exhausted preferences meant that preferences played no part in determining the final result. At both elections it was possible to determine the order of election for candidates from the first preference votes.

In 2011 the race for the final seats was determined by preferences. There were just enough preferences to change the order of final candidates, Jeremy Buckingham and Sarah Johnston passing Pauline Hanson on preferences, but not until the very last distribution of preferences.

As in 2003 the final four candidates were declared elected with less than a quota of votes. Three candidates were elected in this way in 2007. In 2003 the Shooters Party won the final seat with 0.4955 quotas, leading Pauline Hanson by 0.0581 quotas. In 2011 Hanson polled more votes with 0.5561 quotas before falling short of the final seat by 0.0071 quotas.

Hanson lodged a case before the Court of Disputed Returns challenging the result, but the case was dismissed after documents claiming impropriety by the Electoral Commission were found to have been concocted.

Update to Record of NSW By-elections 1965-2011

(The following notes update the publication New South Wales By-elections 1965-2005, NSW Parliamentary Library Research Service Background Paper No 3/05 by Antony Green. A first update to the 2005 publication was published by the Library in 2008.)

Total number of by-elections and average number per year, 1941-2011

Period	Govt	Total	In seats held by			By-elections per year in
			Govt	Oppn	Other	All Seats	Govt Seats
1941-1965	ALP	51	25	20	6	2.1	1.1
1965-1976	LCP	20	13	6	1	1.8	1.2
1976-1988	ALP	28	17	11	..	2.3	1.4
1988-1995	LNP	20	10	9	1	2.9	1.4
1995-2011	ALP	21	9	9	3	1.8	0.4
Totals		140	74	55	11	2.1	1.1

Of the 89 by-elections held since 1965, there have been 15 that produced a change in holding party. These seats can be categorised as -

- Three seats gained by the government of the day, Bathurst (1967), Earlwood (1978) and Clarence (1996). All three gains occurred in the first term of a newly elected government.
- Seven seats gained by Oppositions from the Government, Georges River (1970), Coogee (1974), Bass Hill (1986), Northern Tablelands (1987), The Entrance (1992), Ryde (2008) and Penrith (2010). The last six of these defeats took place in the final term of a government.
- Two seats swapped between the Coalition parties: Oxley (1965) and Murray (1980)
- One seat lost by the Opposition to an Independent, Pittwater (2005).
- One seat gained by the Opposition from an Independent, Tamworth (2001)
- One Government gain from an Independent, Murray (1973).

There have also been three cases of Independents being succeeded by another Independent: North Shore (1988), Dubbo (2004) and Port Macquarie (2008).

By-election Swing Tables

The table on the next page summarises average by-election swings since 1965, grouping by-elections together by party in office. All two-candidate preferred swings are expressed as swings to or from the government, a positive value indicating a swing to the government, a negative value a swing against the government.

The table includes only 36 of the 89 by-elections held since 1965. It excludes by-elections that did not finish as two-party preferred contests or where two-party preferred counts cannot be estimated.

While an average swing has been calculated, in reality there is no such thing as an 'average' by-election swing. Of the 36 by-election results included in the table, the change in first preference vote has ranged from +17.1% to -29.9%, and the range of two-party preferred swings from +14.0% to -25.7%. The most discernible trend is that a government tends to receive its most favourable by-election results in its first term and its worst results in its last term.

Average Change in Vote where 2-Candidate Preferred can be calculated 1965-2011

Years	Government	No. of By-elecs	% Primary Swing			% 2CP Swing

This table includes only contests where a 2-candidate preferred count is available or can be easily calculated, producing a different first preference vote swing from the table below. '*' in the table below indicates seats included in the calculations for the 1995-2011 line of the above table.
